

1 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

A. The Need for Reform.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 1

[§ 1] The Need for Reform.

"The rules of evidence have been developed in myriads of cases, wherein the later judges have felt themselves bound by the doctrine of stare decisis to adhere to the pronouncements of their predecessors but bound also to avoid the absurdities which the simple application of these pronouncements would produce. In attempting to escape this dilemma they have engrafted qualifications, refinements and exceptions upon the earlier rules, so that the law of evidence has grown irregularly and in haphazard fashion, one rule seeming to have no relation in reason to another. ... To put it in another way, the law of evidence is now where the law of forms of action and common law pleading was in the early part of the nineteenth century." (Foreword to Model Code of Evidence, p. 5.) Similar criticisms have been expressed by many writers. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) p. xv and §8c; 59 Cal. L. Rev. 1356; 59 Harv. L. Rev. 481; 25 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 629 [comprehensive symposium on many aspects of law of evidence, both California and federal]; 40 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1; 1960 A.S. 554; on reform of federal law, see 76 Harv. L. Rev. 275; infra, §5; for defects in former California law, see infra, §11.)

Prior to the adoption of the Evidence Code (infra, §13), California opinions showed an awareness of the need for modernization of evidentiary rules. As the court observed in People v. Collup (1946) 27 C.2d 829, 167 P.2d 714: "The modern tendency is to relax the rigid rules of evidence--to escape from a slavish adherence to them with the accompanying hardship, injustice and prevention of a full disclosure of all pertinent circumstances to the trier of fact." (27 C.2d 838.) (See California Bank v. Diamond (1956) 144 C.A.2d 387, 391, 301 P.2d 60 ["Practicability and common sense should govern in applying the rules of evidence"]; Los Angeles v. Faus (1957) 48 C.2d 672, 679, 312 P.2d 680 ["The former rule was contrary to logic, unrealistic, and followed in only a few other states. ... [I]t becomes our duty not to follow decisions that we are convinced are erroneous and obsolete"]; People v. Spriggs (1964) 60 C.2d 868, 871, 874, 36 C.R. 841, 389 P.2d 377, infra, §14.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

2 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

B. Uniform Acts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 2

[§ 2] Uniform Acts.

Distinct from the Model Code of Evidence and the Uniform Rules of Evidence (infra, §§3, 4) are a number of specific Uniform Acts adopted in many jurisdictions. These are contained in volumes 8A, 11, 11A, 12, and 14 of Uniform Laws Annotated (Master Ed.), and are listed here with an identifying note as to those adopted in California:

- (1) Absence as Evidence of Death and Absentees' Property Act (8A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 1).
- (2) Act To Secure the Attendance of Witnesses From Without a State in Criminal Proceedings (11 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 1; adopted in California as P.C. 1334 et seq., 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §9).
- (3) Audio-Visual Deposition Act (12 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 51).
- (4) Photographic Copies of Business and Public Records as Evidence Act (14 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 189; adopted in California as Ev.C. 1550, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §§45, 46).
- (5) Rendition of Prisoners as Witnesses Act (11A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 457).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Photographic Copies of Business and Public Records as Evidence Act: See 14 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 269.

(5) Rendition of Prisoners as Witnesses Act: See 11 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 233.

3 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

C. Model Code of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 3

[§ 3] Model Code of Evidence.

The American Law Institute, believing that a restatement of the existing law of evidence would perpetuate much bad law and retard reform, proposed a drastic revision in its Model Code of Evidence, promulgated in 1942. The method of Wigmore's Code (a comprehensive and concise summary of the rules) was not followed; the drafters felt that this would give the Model Code too much rigidity. Instead, general rules were drawn to cover the major topics of the subject, leaving a large measure of discretion to the trial judge in admission and exclusion of evidence. (See Foreword to Model Code, p. 12; for other discussions of its objects, method, and provisions, see 1942 A.S. 880; 1949 A.S. 975.)

The Code received much scholarly praise, and was at first cited as persuasive authority on new points and in the reexamination of outmoded rules. But the reaction in many professional areas was unsympathetic. (See Wigmore, 28 A.B.A. Journal 23 [changes too radical, coverage not adequate, impractical, etc.]; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 3 [discussing strong opposition of California State Bar Committee to extraordinary powers given trial judge and loose rules of admissibility]; 1949 A.S. 975.)

As a result of these criticisms and the failure of any state to adopt the Code, the American Law Institute abandoned efforts to promote it, and the reform movement was concentrated on the Code's successor--the Uniform Rules (infra, §4).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

4 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

D. Uniform Rules of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 4

[§ 4] Uniform Rules of Evidence.

In 1949, the American Law Institute referred the Model Code of Evidence (supra, §3) to the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws for study and redrafting. The new Uniform Rules of Evidence were approved by the Conference in 1953, and revised in 1974 to conform as far as practicable to the Federal Rules of Evidence. (See Prefatory Note to Original 1974 Rules of Evidence, 13A (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 5.)

Although the Model Code of Evidence was used as the basis of the 1953 Rules, and the broad aims of both were the same, the Conference sought to eliminate some of the more radical provisions, and to give the revision a more practical slant. Speaking of the Model Code, the Commissioners said: "[I]f its departures from traditional and generally prevailing common law and statutory rules of evidence are too far-reaching and drastic for present day acceptance, they should be modified in such respects as will express a common ground of acceptability in the jurisdictions and by the tribunals which the rules are expected to serve. So with the objects of acceptability and uniformity in mind, this effort is devoted to the policy of retaining such parts of the Model Code as appear to meet the requirements of such objectives, and to reject, revise or modify the rest." (Prefatory Note to Uniform Rules of Evidence (1953), National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, p. 161.)

The 1953 Rules generally followed the Model Code outline, and both it and the 1974 version continued the policy of stating broad rather than detailed rules. But the controversial Model Code provisions on the trial judge's powers were omitted, and in several other instances the Model Code view was modified or rejected. (For further discussion and comparisons of the Model Code and the first version of the Uniform Rules, see 1953 A.S. 787; and see 1955 A.S. 615 [noting New Jersey committee's recommendation of adoption of main body of rules]; 1960 A.S. 554 ["For the better part of a decade hope for evidence reform has been focused on the Uniform Rules of Evidence"]; 1964 A.S. 355; for comparison of the 1953 Rules and California law, see 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1.)

The following excerpt from the Commissioners' preface to the 1974 Rules explains the new approach of conformity with the Federal Rules of Evidence:

"We believe uniformity in the Law of Evidence is desirable. To conform state and federal practice is to require a lawyer to learn one set of rules instead of two. The lawyer will better serve the public in whichever of these forums he may be litigating. Uniformity also discourages forum shopping. It is difficult for a litigant to understand that his cause may be won or lost depending on the court or the state in which the action may be tried. Finally, it seems, that to get genuine reform in the Law of Evidence it is necessary that attention be focused on special areas and special problems. We have seen that the case by case approach produces confusion."

"The Uniform Rules of Evidence (1974) reflect as closely as possible P.L. 93-595. The section numbers conform to their federal counterparts, and the division of subjects into 11 articles is likewise the same. These mechanical aids are most important as they make readily accessible the thorough and careful notes of the Federal Rules Committee as well as the congressional reports. Future annotations will also be easily located. The rules are thus arranged to facilitate use by courts and litigating lawyers." (Prefatory Note to Original 1974 Rules of Evidence, 13A (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 5.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

A revised version of the Uniform Rules of Evidence was adopted in 1999. (See Prefatory Note, 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 2.) Citations to the Uniform Rules in this Supplement are to the revised version.

The Prefatory Note to Original 1974 Rules of Evidence is now found at 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 213.

5 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

E. Federal Rules of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 5

[§ 5] Federal Rules of Evidence.

The first statutory rules of evidence for federal courts were enacted on January 2, 1975, and are entitled "Rules of Evidence for United States Courts and Magistrates." There are 63 Rules in 11 Articles, commencing with Rule 101 and ending with Rule 1103, which states: "These rules may be known and cited as the 'Federal Rules of Evidence.'" They are mainly a codification of established evidence law in American jurisdictions, with relatively few innovations. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §6.3 et seq.; 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d (Preface); 29 and 29A Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence; Olson & Graham, Handbook of Federal Evidence 4th; Wright & Graham, Federal Practice and Procedure: Federal Rules of Evidence (Vols. 21-23); 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. [symposium on California Evidence Code, with contrasts to federal rules where they differ from California statutes]; 25 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 909 [Do the Federal Rules of Evidence Matter?]; 28 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1251 [criticism of federal rules].)

The scope and applicability of the rules to courts and proceedings are covered by Rules 101 and 1101. Rule 102 (Purpose and Construction) states: "These rules shall be construed to secure fairness in administration, elimination of unjustifiable expense and delay, and promotion of growth and development of the law of evidence to the end that the truth may be ascertained and proceedings justly determined." (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §3.)

In this work, the Rules are fully covered at all appropriate places, with references to Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, for explanation and critical comment on each rule, and to the applicable sections in volumes 29 and 29A of Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 88 Cal. L. Rev. 2437 [describing adoption of Federal Rules as triumph of Thayer approach of increasing discretion of trial judge].

6 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

F. Revision of Wigmore on Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 6

[§ 6] Revision of Wigmore on Evidence.

From 1961 through 1988, the Third Edition of Wigmore on Evidence was revised and replaced by a Fourth Edition. The revision was carried out by three authors: James Chadbourn (volumes 2 through 7, and 9; see 87 Harv. L. Rev 1590 [review of revision of volume 3 on testimonial evidence]); John McNaughton (volume 8); and Peter Tillers (volume 1). Volume 10 contains the tables of statutes and cases, and volume 11 contains an index and table of authors cited.

Although some sections were transferred and new ones added, the basic outline of the Third Edition was unchanged, and the numbering is still from §1 to §2597. Each revisor preserved most of Wigmore's language and citations of authority, either in the text or footnotes. (See, e.g., 3 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.), p. v.) However, in addition to covering new developments in the law of evidence, the revisors indicated the points on which Wigmore's views have been challenged or rejected. (See, e.g., 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.), p. xi.)

The first volume of The New Wigmore: A Treatise on Evidence, which will eventually replace Wigmore 4th, was issued in 1995.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

The following volumes of The New Wigmore: A Treatise on Evidence are now available: Selected Rules of Limited Admissibility (one volume, issued in 1995 and revised in 2002); Evidentiary Privileges (two volumes, issued in 2002).

7 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

G. Proposition 8.

1. Constitutional Provisions and New Statutes.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 7

[§ 7] Constitutional Provisions and New Statutes.

(1) Adoption of Proposition 8. At the June 1982 primary election, an initiative measure amending the California Constitution and several statutes was adopted, effective June 9, 1982 (the day after the election). Section 1 of the proposition states: "This amendment shall be known as 'The Victims' Bill of Rights.' "

Proposition 8 added Cal. Const., Art. I, §28, containing the major constitutional changes in subdivisions (a) to (g). It also added a number of statutes mainly dealing with criminal law. (For the coverage of constitutional and statutory changes in criminal law and procedure, see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Crimes, §102 et seq.) The changes in the law of evidence are outlined in the next two sections (infra, §§8, 9).

(2) Constitutional Challenges. The validity of the new measure was attacked in Brosnahan v. Brown (1982) 32 C.3d 236, 186 C.R. 30, 651 P.2d 274, and all constitutional challenges directed at the manner of its adoption were rejected. And In re Lance W. (1985) 37 C.3d 873, 210 C.R. 631, 694 P.2d 744, held that the Right to Truth-in-Evidence provision (Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d)) abrogated the California vicarious exclusionary rule (the right of a defendant to assert the right of another person to be free from unreasonable search and seizure), in the light of the contrary view of the United States Supreme Court. (37 C.3d 885.) (For an analysis of the Supreme Court's interpretation of Proposition 8, see 60 So. Cal. L. Rev. 540.)

(3) Not Retroactive. In People v. Smith (1983) 34 C.3d 251, 258, 193 C.R. 692, 667 P.2d 149, the court, noting the importance and urgency of the question of retroactivity, held Proposition 8 applicable "only to prosecutions for crimes committed on or after its effective date" of June 9, 1982. Subsequently, the court held in People v. Weaver (1985) 39 C.3d 654, 217 C.R. 245, 703 P.2d 1139, that the applicability of the proposition in a probation revocation hearing must be determined by the date of the crime that led to the revocation of probation, not by the date of the crime that led to the original grant of probation. (39 C.3d 659, disapproving People v. Huff (1983) 148 C.A.3d 801, 196 C.R. 290.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

8 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

G. Proposition 8.

2. Truth in Evidence.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 8

[§ 8] In General.

(1) Constitutional Provision. Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d) reads as follows:

"Right to Truth-in-Evidence. Except as provided by statute hereafter enacted by a two-thirds vote of the membership in each house of the Legislature, relevant evidence shall not be excluded in any criminal proceeding, including pretrial and post conviction motions and hearings, or in any trial or hearing of a juvenile for a criminal offense, whether heard in juvenile or adult court. Nothing in this section shall affect any existing statutory rule of evidence relating to privilege or hearsay, or Evidence Code, sections 352, 782, or 1103. Nothing in this section shall affect any existing statutory or constitutional right of the press." (On requirement of two-thirds vote of Legislature to change rule, see People v. Scott (1987) 194 C.A.3d 550, 554, 239 C.R. 588.)

(2) Purpose and Effect of Provision. The chief purpose of the new provision was to eliminate independent state grounds for exclusion of illegally obtained evidence, leaving the federal Constitution as interpreted by controlling federal decisions as the sole basis for exclusion. (See In re Lance W. (1985) 37 C.3d 873, 888, 210 C.R. 631, 694 P.2d 744.) However, the constitutional directive had the effect of nullifying other statutory and decisional rules restricting the admission of relevant evidence as well. (See infra, §9; People v. Harris (1989) 47 C.3d 1047, 1082, 255 C.R. 352, 767 P.2d 619 [rejecting argument that sole purpose of Proposition 8 was to conform California search and seizure law to federal exclusionary rule]; for a discussion suggesting changes in the process by which voters enact measures limiting the California judiciary's ability to examine the state Constitution independently, see 21 Hastings Const. L. Q. 95.)

(3) Statutes and Rules Retained. The qualifying language of the last two sentences of Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d) retains a number of important rules of evidence and constitutional rights, which are fully considered in subsequent chapters of this work:

(a) Privilege. (On statutory rules, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §59 et seq.; on constitutional privilege against self-incrimination, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §355 et seq.; People v. Weaver (1985) 39 C.3d 654, 217 C.R. 245, 703 P.2d 1139, §381.)

(b) Hearsay. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §1.)

(c) Procedure for attacking credibility of sex victim's conduct to prove consent (Ev.C. 782). (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §62.)

(d) Restrictions on admissibility of sex victim's conduct to prove consent (Ev.C. 1103). (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §63.)

(e) Discretionary exclusion of relevant evidence for policy reasons (Ev.C. 352). (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §17 et seq.)

(f) Constitutional and statutory rights of the press. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §333 et seq.; 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §231.)

There are certain other obvious limitations on the scope of the rule. Evidence may still be excluded as irrelevant, because the rule applies only to relevant evidence. And due process may require the exclusion of some highly objectionable matter, e.g., evidence obtained by brutality (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §413 et seq.), coerced confessions (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §64 et seq.), and impeachment by proof of prior felonies not involving moral turpitude (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §307).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Purpose and Effect of Provision. See People v. Barrett (2003) 109 C.A.4th 437, 450, 135 C.R.2d 103 [in vehicular manslaughter prosecution, records of defendant's prior participation in county drunk driving program were properly admitted, even assuming prosecutor was required to, and did not, comply with federal regulations in obtaining records, as exclusion under these circumstances was not required by federal Constitution].(3) Statutes and Rules Retained.

(f) Constitutional and statutory rights of the press.

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §§311, 313.

9 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

G. Proposition 8.

2. Truth in Evidence.

b. Particular Evidentiary Rules Affected.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 9

[§ 9] Particular Evidentiary Rules Affected.

In the years since Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d) was enacted, the courts have considered its effect on evidentiary rules in a number of areas:

(1) Character Evidence Generally. (See People v. Perkins (1984) 159 C.A.3d 646, 650, 205 C.R. 625 [general exclusion of character evidence (Ev.C. 1101) remains valid]; People v. Scott (1987) 194 C.A.3d 550, 551, 239 C.R. 588 [same]; People v. Taylor (1986) 180 C.A.3d 622, 631, 225 C.R. 733 [evidence of defendant's good character for truth was admissible even though prosecution offered no evidence of his bad character to attack his credibility; Proposition 8 had effect of repealing Ev.C. 790 (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §362) in criminal cases]; People v. Harris (1989) 47 C.3d 1047, 1081, 255 C.R. 352, 767 P.2d 619 [agreeing with conclusion of Taylor court that Ev.C. 790 was repealed in criminal cases; trial judge properly admitted evidence of prosecution witness' past reliability as police informant]; People v. Adams (1988) 198 C.A.3d 10, 17, 18, 243 C.R. 580 [in rape trial, trial judge erred in excluding, under Ev.C. 787 (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §287), evidence of victim's false accusations of others; Ev.C. 787 was abrogated by Proposition 8]; People v. Lankford (1989) 210 C.A.3d 227, 231, 258 C.R. 322 [agreeing with Adams court that Ev.C. 787 was no longer valid; after defendant introduced evidence of his good character, prosecution could rebut with evidence of specific instances of his misconduct].)

(2) Prior Offense for Impeachment or as Element of Current Offense. (See People v. Castro (1985) 38 C.3d 301, 306, 211 C.R. 719, 696 P.2d 111, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §18 [impeachment of witness by prior felony conviction]; People v. Valentine (1986) 42 C.3d 170, 181, 182, 228 C.R. 25, 720 P.2d 913, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §16 [in prosecution for possession of concealable weapon by ex-felon, nature of prior offense should have been excluded even though fact of prior offense was element of current offense, where defendant offered to stipulate to ex-felon status]; People v. Wheeler (1992) 4 C.4th 284, 292, 14 C.R.2d 418, 841 P.2d 938, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §286 [impeachment of witness by prior conduct amounting to misdemeanor]; People v. Lee (1994) 28 C.A.4th 1724, 1740, 34 C.R.2d 723, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §295 [under Wheeler, and subject to some limitations, conduct evincing moral turpitude may be used for impeachment purposes even if it was subject of juvenile adjudication]; People v. Lepolo (1997) 55 C.A.4th 85, 89, 63 C.R.2d 735, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §314 [in determining whether misconduct that did not result in conviction evinced moral turpitude so as to qualify for impeachment use, trial judge need not determine what label it would have been given if it had been charged as crime; citing Wheeler]; see also 24 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 621 [The Impact of Proposition 8 on Prior Misconduct Impeachment Evidence in California Criminal Cases].)

(3) Prosecution's Failure To Preserve Evidence. (See People v. Tierce (1985) 165 C.A.3d 256, 265, 211 C.R. 325 [trial judge properly admitted police officer's testimony as to statements made to him by defendant at time of arrest, even though officer failed to preserve his field notes regarding statements]; People v. Johnson (1989) 47 C.3d 1194, 1233, 255 C.R. 569, 767 P.2d 1047, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §126 [Proposition 8 had effect of replacing California standard as to prosecution's duty with federal standard]; People v. Valencia (1990) 218 C.A.3d 808, 819, 267 C.R. 257, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §131 [prosecution failed to prevent deportation of witness; Proposition 8 had effect of replacing former California rule, which did not require defendant to show that witness' testimony would have been favorable, with federal rule].)

(4) Confessions and Admissions by Defendant. (See People v. May (1988) 44 C.3d 309, 315, 243 C.R. 369, 748 P.2d 307, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §319 [admissibility, for impeachment, of statements obtained in violation of Miranda]; People v. Markham (1989) 49 C.3d 63, 71, 260 C.R. 273, 775 P.2d 1042, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §86 [standard of proof as to voluntariness of confession]; People v. Hall (1988) 199 C.A.3d 914, 920, 245 C.R. 458, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §391 [admissibility of neutral information, elicited from arrestee for proper jail administration but without required Miranda warnings]; People v. Warner (1988) 203 C.A.3d 1122, 1126, 1127, 1129, 250 C.R. 462, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §77 [admissibility of confession obtained at renewed interrogation after fresh Miranda warnings]; People v. Gastile (1988) 205 C.A.3d 1376, 1384, 253 C.R. 283 [presumption that noncoerced, Mirandized confession is tainted by prior non-coerced, non-Mirandized confession]; People v. Cox (1990) 221 C.A.3d 980, 987, 270 C.R. 730, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §53 [admissibility of confession of mentally deficient defendant].)

(5) Confessions and Admissions by Codefendant. (See People v. Boyd (1990) 222 C.A.3d 541, 562, 271 C.R. 738, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §59 [admissibility of codefendant's statement incriminating accused, where codefendant testifies at trial]; People v. Walkkein (1993) 14 C.A.4th 1401, 1407, 18 C.R.2d 383 [admissibility of codefendant's statement incriminating accused in trial to court].)

(6) Miscellaneous Issues. Because of the broad scope of the truth in evidence provision ("relevant evidence shall not be excluded"), the courts have been called on to consider its effect on a wide range of other issues. (See People v. Mickle (1991) 54 C.3d 140, 168, 284 C.R. 511, 814 P.2d 290, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §286 [admissibility of evidence that prosecution witness threatened witnesses in proceedings against him]; People v. Gibson (1987) 195 C.A.3d 841, 852, 854, 241 C.R. 126, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §461 [admissibility of defendant's bank records]; People v. Wood (1989) 207 C.A.3d Supp. 11, 16, 255 C.R. 537, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §231 [decimal point to which blood-alcohol test results must be carried in drunk driving prosecution]; People v. Trotman (1989) 214 C.A.3d 430, 438, 262 C.R. 640, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §425 [nonconsensual taking of blood sample from driver prior to arrest]; People v. Sullivan (1991) 234 C.A.3d 56, 57, 58, 285 C.R. 553, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §86 [speed trap evidence]; People v. Culton (1992) 11 C.A.4th 363, 373, 14 C.R.2d 189 [concurring opinion suggests that corpus delicti rule has been abrogated]; People v. Plyler (1993) 18 C.A.4th 535, 544, 22 C.R.2d 772, 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §336 [recording of phone call obtained in violation of pretrial detainee's privacy rights]; People v. Ortiz (1995) 38 C.A.4th 377, 387, 44 C.R.2d 914, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §210 [in murder case, victim's statements indicating fear of defendant].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2a) (New) Prior Offense To Bolster Witness' Credibility. In People v. Stern (2003) 111 C.A.4th 283, 3 C.R.3d 479, defendant was charged with attempted murder, making a criminal threat, and dissuading a witness by threat or violence. During the trial, evidence of a prior stabbing incident involving defendant was admitted in order to corroborate the testimony of one of the victims of the current offenses. That victim had testified that after the attempt on his life, defendant called him, told him not to testify, threatened to slit the victim's mother's throat, and mentioned the earlier stabbing which, he claimed falsely, involved someone else's throat being cut. Another witness was allowed to testify directly concerning the stabbing incident. Defendant was acquitted on the attempted murder counts but was convicted of the threat and witness dissuasion charges. Held, affirmed; admission of evidence concerning the stabbing was proper.

(a) The general prohibition against the use of character evidence to prove the defendant's conduct on a specific occasion (Ev.C. 1101) does not apply under these circumstances. The stabbing evidence was admitted to bolster the victim's credibility, and Ev.C. 1101(c) expressly states that the admissibility of character evidence relating to credibility is to be determined under Ev.C. 786 et seq., not Ev.C. 1101. (111 C.A.4th 296.)

(b) Ev.C. 786, 787 (character traits and specific instances of conduct to attack or support credibility of witness) are likewise inapplicable, as they were abrogated by Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d), insofar as they would otherwise apply in a criminal case. (111 C.A.4th 297, citing People v. Harris (1989) 47 C.3d 1047, 255 C.R. 352, 767 P.2d 619, text, p. 15.)

(c) The only real issue therefore is whether the evidence was sufficiently relevant within the meaning of Ev.C. 352 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §17). Defendant's telephone call to the victim was made in part to prevent the victim from testifying, and that very conduct was the basis for one of the charged offenses. The accuracy of the victim's recitation of defendant's words was an important issue, and the fact that defendant was in fact involved in a stabbing around the time of the telephone call lent credence to the victim's testimony concerning the threats. The trial judge did not abuse his discretion in reaching this conclusion. (111 C.A.4th 298, 299.) Further, although evidence of an uncharged incident is usually sought to be admitted for impeachment purposes, there is nothing in Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d), "to prevent the use of relevant testimony to prove a crime victim, or any other witness for that matter, is telling the truth." (111 C.A.4th 300.) (4) Confessions and Admissions by Defendant. See People v. Alvarez (2002) 27 C.4th 1161, 1180, 119 C.R.2d 903, 46 P.3d 372, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, Supp., §46 [Proposition 8 abrogated corpus delicti rule insofar as it would preclude admission of defendant's out-of-court statement absent independent evidence of crime, but independent-proof portion of rule remains valid, and instruction to that effect is required]; Rayyis v. Superior Court (2005) 133 C.A.4th 138, 148, 35 C.R.3d 12 [effect of Proposition 8 on corpus delicti rule in preliminary hearings was same as its effect on trials, as stated in Alvarez, supra]; People v. Herrera (2006) 136 C.A.4th 1191, 1201, 39 C.R.3d 578 [trial judge did not err in granting defendant's motion under P.C. 995 to dismiss charge of conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamine on ground that corpus delicti rule was not satisfied; rule applies to probable cause determination at preliminary hearing].

(6) Miscellaneous Issues. See People v. Williams (2002) 28 C.4th 408, 415, 121 C.R.2d 854, 49 P.3d 203 [where preliminary alcohol screening breath test was not administered in compliance with applicable regulations, Proposition 8 precludes court from excluding results for purpose of deterring police misconduct]; People v. Collins (2004) 115 C.A.4th 137, 156, 8 C.R.3d 731 [even if prison officials violated Department of Corrections regulations in connection with body cavity search of prison inmate that resulted in recovery of heroin balloons, suppression of balloons was not required; Proposition 8 eliminated judicially created remedies for violations of administrative provisions except where federal Constitution requires exclusion of evidence obtained as result of violations].

10 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

I. MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE

H. Conflict of Laws.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 10

[§ 10] Conflict of Laws.

(1) General Principle: Law of Forum. Rules of evidence are generally regarded as procedural and therefore governed by the law of the forum. This principle covers such matters as burden of proof, presumptions and inferences, competency and credibility of witnesses, and admissibility and sufficiency of evidence. (See Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39 C.2d 12, 19, 244 P.2d 395 [negligence of automobile driver in Iowa accident; sufficiency of evidence to support verdict determined by California law]; Hamlet v. Hook (1951) 106 C.A.2d 791, 794, 236 P.2d 196 [presumption of negligence in Kansas accident held a Kansas statutory rule of evidence, not enforced in California]; Sadberry v. Griffiths (1961) 191 C.A.2d 610, 613, 12 C.R. 773 [presumption of ownership arising from registration of automobile under Texas law; effect of presumption determined by California law]; Rest.2d, Conflict of Laws §§133 et seq., 137, 138; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §5; 16 Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Conflict of Laws §§168, 169; 58 Harv. L. Rev. 153; 59 Harv. L. Rev. 505.)

As to privileges, the theory is more questionable, because they are based on policy rather than the necessity for or probative value of evidence (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §98).

(2) Distinctions. Substantive matters sometimes appear in procedural form (see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §97 et seq.), and may be governed by foreign law. The parole evidence rule, regarded as substantive in nature (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §62), is the most important example. (See Hutchinson v. Hutchinson (1941) 48 C.A.2d 12, 19, 119 P.2d 214; Crumley v. Walter M. Ballard Corp. (1950) 100 C.A.2d 698, 702, 224 P.2d 455; Rest.2d, Conflict of Laws §140; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §5, p. 337.) And on the burden of proof and sufficiency of evidence, the Conflict of Laws Restatement states that, if the primary purpose of the law of a nonforum state on these subjects is to affect the decision of the issue, rather than to regulate the trial, the law of that state must be applied. (Rest.2d, Conflict of Laws §133 et seq.) (See also 16 Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Conflict of Laws §172.)

There are differing views as to whether the statute of frauds, or a particular provision thereof, is substantive or procedural. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §5, p. 340; 50 Harv. L. Rev. 1162; 67 Harv. L. Rev. 179; 43 Cal. L. Rev. 295.) The modern approach to conflict of law problems is to avoid rigid characterization and to weigh the interests involved. (See 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §55.) This approach was taken in California in a decision upholding an oral contract made in Nevada and enforceable there, although within the California statute of frauds. (Bernkrant v. Fowler (1961) 55 C.2d 588, 594, 595, 12 C.R. 266, 360 P.2d 906, 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §55; see 49 Cal. L. Rev. 962; 53 Cal. L. Rev. 64; 16 Hastings L. J. 644.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Distinctions. Bernkrant v. Fowler:

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §83.

11 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

II. CALIFORNIA EVIDENCE CODE

A. Background.

1. Defects in California Statutory System.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 11

[§ 11] Defects in California Statutory System.

The outmoded analysis, classification, and terminology of former California statutes, and the inadequacy of their case law supplementation, were well described by the Law Revision Commission in its "Recommendation Proposing an Evidence Code" (January 1965):

"Although Part IV of the Code of Civil Procedure purports to be a comprehensive and systematic statement of the law of evidence, in fact it falls far short of that. Its draftsmanship does not meet the standards of the modern California codes. There are duplicating and inconsistent provisions. There are long and complex sections that are difficult to read and more difficult to understand. Important areas of the law of evidence are not mentioned at all in the code, and many that are mentioned are treated in the most cursory fashion. Many sections are based on an erroneous analysis of the common law of evidence upon which the code is based. Others preserve common law rules that experience has shown do more to inhibit than to enhance the search for truth at a trial. Necessarily, therefore, the courts have had to develop many, if not most, of the rules of evidence with but partial guidance from the statutes." (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 30.)

Then, after examining the statutory coverage in such important areas as hearsay and privilege, the Commission concluded:

"These and similar deficiencies call for a thorough revision and recodification of the California law of evidence. It is true that the courts have filled in many of the gaps contained in the present code. They have also been able to remedy some of the anomalies and inconsistencies in the code by construction of the language used or by actual disregard of the statutory language. But there is a limit on the extent to which the courts can remedy the deficiencies in a statutory scheme. Reform of the California law of evidence can be achieved only by legislation thoroughly overhauling and recodifying the law." (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 31.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

12 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

II. CALIFORNIA EVIDENCE CODE

A. Background.

2. The Law Revision Commission's Studies and Conclusions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 12

[§ 12] The Law Revision Commission's Studies and Conclusions.

(1) Study of Uniform Rules. The project began with a directive by the 1956 Legislature to conduct a study of the Uniform Rules of Evidence to determine whether they might be the basis for a revision of the California law. The Law Revision Commission's consultants, Professors Chadbourn and Degnan, prepared elaborate studies and tentative recommendations, which were published and critically examined by committees of the bar and the judiciary. (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 29.)

(2) Rejection of Uniform Rules. The Commission found many of the Uniform Rules superior to present California law, and drew liberally upon them for new doctrines and restatement of established principles. But the original thought that the Rules might be adopted as a whole was abandoned for the following reasons set forth in the Commission Recommendation:

"First, in certain important respects, the Uniform Rules would change the law of California to an extent that the Commission considers undesirable. For example, the Uniform Rules would admit any hearsay statement of a person who is present at the hearing and subject to cross-examination. In addition, they do not provide a married person with a privilege to refuse to testify against his spouse. In both respects--and in a number of other respects as well--the Commission has disagreed with the conclusions reached by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. Sometimes the disagreement has been upon matters of principle; in others, it has been upon matters of detail. In total, the disagreements have been substantial and numerous enough to persuade the Law Revision Commission that the Uniform Rules of Evidence should not be adopted in their present form."

"Second, the existing California statutes contain many provisions that have served the State well and that should be continued but are not found in the Uniform Rules of Evidence. If the Uniform Rules of Evidence were approved in their present form, segregated from the remainder of the statutory law of evidence, California's statutory law of evidence would be seriously complicated. Yet, the contrasting formats of the Uniform Rules of Evidence and the California evidence statutes make it impossible to integrate these two bodies of evidence law into a single statute while preserving the Uniform Rules in the form in which they were approved by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws."

"Third, the draftsmanship of the Uniform Rules is in some respects defective by California standards. The Uniform Rules contain several rules of extreme length that are reminiscent of several of the cumbersome sections in the 1872 codification. For example, the hearsay rule and all of its exceptions are stated in one rule that has 31 subdivisions. Moreover, different language is sometimes used in the Uniform Rules to express the same idea. For example, various communication privileges (attorney-client, physician-patient, and husband-wife) are expressed in a variety of ways even though all are intended to provide protection for confidential communications made in the course of the specified relationships."

"Fourth, the need for nationwide uniformity in the law of evidence is not of sufficient importance that it should outweigh these other considerations. The law of evidence--unlike the law relating to commercial transactions, for example--affects only procedures in this State and has no substantive significance insofar as the law of other states is concerned. Thus, although the adoption of the Uniform Rules elsewhere indicates that they are deserving of weighty consideration, such adoption is not in and of itself a reason to adopt the rules in California." (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 33.)

(3) Decision To Draft a New Code. The Commission concluded that a comprehensive new statute, embodying the best features of the Uniform Rules and existing California law, together with innovations found in neither, would best accomplish its objectives. It was further decided that the changes should not be made by amendment of Part IV of the Code of Civil Procedure, which contains sections on other aspects of civil and criminal procedure. Further, it was highly desirable that the rules of evidence be available in a separate volume--"in effect, an official handbook of the law of evidence--a kind of evidence bible for busy trial judges and lawyers." (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 34; see also Ev.C. 1 [short title: "Evidence Code"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

13 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

II. CALIFORNIA EVIDENCE CODE

B. Nature, Scope, and Organization.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 13

[§ 13] Nature, Scope, and Organization.

(1) Mainly Restatement. The Evidence Code was adopted by the 1965 Legislature, with an effective date of January 1, 1967. (Ev.C. 12.) Although it is far more detailed than either the Uniform Rules of Evidence or the preexisting Part IV of the California Code of Civil Procedure, it is mainly an improved statement of prior statutory and case law. "[I]ts principal effect will be to substitute a clear, authoritative, systematic, and internally consistent statement of the existing law for a mass of conflicting and inaccurate statutes and the myriad decisions attempting to make sense out of and to fill in the gaps in the existing statutory scheme." (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 34; see 18 Hastings L. J. 89.)

(2) Courts and Proceedings Covered. "Except as otherwise provided by statute, this code applies in every action before the Supreme Court or a court of appeal, superior court, or municipal court, including proceedings in such actions conducted by a referee, court commissioner, or similar officer, but does not apply in grand jury proceedings." (Ev.C. 300.) (See Jauregi v. Superior Court (1999) 72 C.A.4th 931, 939, 940, 85 C.R.2d 553 [hearsay is not admissible, over proper objection, to prove standing in forfeiture proceeding under Health & Saf.C. 11488.4(g); Ev.C. 300 makes Evidence Code applicable in every action before superior court except where otherwise provided by statute, and no statute provides applicable exemption].)

Because "action" is defined to include civil and criminal actions and proceedings (Ev.C. 105), the Code covers civil and criminal evidence. (See People v. Holmes (1993) 12 C.A.4th 1094, 1097, 16 C.R.2d 52, citing the text [Evidence Code governs criminal proceedings unless overridden by constitutional concerns of specific Penal Code provisions].) But it does not apply to administrative proceedings unless the controlling statutes or agency rules contain an election to be governed by it. (Law Rev. Com. Comment on Ev.C. 300; see infra, §55.)

The proviso, "Except as otherwise provided by statute," recognizes the effect of special statutes relaxing the strict rules of evidence in certain informal judicial proceedings, e.g., those in the small claims court (infra, §49), the family conciliation court (infra, §48), the juvenile court (infra, §36 et seq.), or a criminal court considering probation (infra, §25). (Law Rev. Com. Comment on Ev.C. 300.)

(3) Subjects Not Covered. The Code restates what are generally called the "common law rules of trial evidence." It does not cover the following:

(a) Exclusionary rules based on constitutional principles and developed and expounded by the courts: e.g., involuntary confessions and admissions (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §§52 et seq., 136); evidence obtained by brutality (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §413 et seq.); evidence obtained by unreasonable search and seizure (see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §1 et seq.); evidence obtained from an accused without an advisement of the rights of counsel and silence (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §76); evidence obtained in violation of the privilege against self-incrimination (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §355).

(b) The parol evidence rule, a substantive law doctrine (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §59).

(c) Discovery, governed by a separate statute (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §1 et seq.).

(4) Divisions of Code. The Code contains 11 divisions, some subdivided into chapters and articles. The divisions have the following titles:

1. Preliminary Provisions and Construction. (See infra, §16.)

2. Words and Phrases Defined. (See infra, §17.)

3. General Provisions. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §43 et seq.)

4. Judicial Notice. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Judicial Notice, §1 et seq.)

5. Burden of Proof; Burden of Producing Evidence; Presumptions and Inferences. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §1 et seq.)

6. Witnesses. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §1 et seq.)

7. Opinion Testimony and Scientific Evidence. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §1 et seq.; 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §1 et seq.)

8. Privileges. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §59 et seq.)

9. Evidence Affected or Excluded by Extrinsic Policies. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §§38 et seq., 67 et seq., 132 et seq.)

10. Hearsay Evidence. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §1 et seq.)

11. Writings. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §1 et seq.)

(5) Trial Attorney's Evidence Code Notebook. This C.E.B. looseleaf work, now in its Third Edition (1982) and regularly supplemented, follows the organization of the Code, contains Law Revision Commission and Legislative Commission Comments, cites illustrative cases, and makes appropriate reference to other C.E.B. practice books.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Courts and Proceedings Covered. Ev.C. 300 was amended in 2002 to delete the reference to municipal courts.

14 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

II. CALIFORNIA EVIDENCE CODE C. Future Developments by Judicial Decisions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 14

[§ 14] Future Developments by Judicial Decisions.

In People v. Spriggs (1964) 60 C.2d 868, 36 C.R. 841, 389 P.2d 377, the court made it clear that improvement of the law of evidence is not solely a legislative responsibility:

"In 1872 the California Legislature codified many of the common law rules of evidence. ... The Legislature, however, did not freeze the law of evidence to the rules set forth in the Code of Civil Procedure or other statutes. ... Numerous questions arise on which the Legislature has been silent or inexplicit. The courts must answer these questions and develop judicially the law of evidence ... in the light of common law principles and the basic objectives of the statutes. ... Thus, we have continued to supplement the common law of evidence as it was codified in 1872, restricting the admissibility of certain evidence ... , and expanding the scope of admissible evidence." (60 C.2d 871.)

The opinion adds this significant quotation from an earlier decision: "[T]he purpose of all rules of evidence is to aid in arriving at the truth, [and] if it shall appear that any rule tends rather to hinder than to facilitate this result ... it should be abrogated without hesitation." (60 C.2d 874.)

The Law Revision Commission, although attempting to frame a comprehensive set of rules, nevertheless accepted the approach of the Spriggs case: "The code will not, however, stifle all court development of the law of evidence. In some instances--the Privileges division, for example--the code to a considerable extent precludes further development of the law except by legislation. But, in other instances, the Evidence Code is deliberately framed to permit the courts to work out particular problems or to extend declared principles into new areas of the law. As a general rule, the code permits the courts to work toward greater admissibility of evidence but does not permit the courts to develop additional exclusionary rules." (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 34; see also People v. Holmes (1993) 12 C.A.4th 1094, 1097, 16 C.R.2d 52, citing the text [Evidence Code is supplemented by judicial decisions that answer questions on which Legislature has been silent or inexplicit].)

More specifically, as will be seen:

(1) The courts may add to the lists of matters judicially noticed (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Judicial Notice, §6) and may create nonstatutory presumptions (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §103).

(2) The courts may create new hearsay exceptions (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §2).

(3) The courts cannot create new rules of privilege (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §§62, 64).

(4) The courts cannot create new exclusionary rules of evidence (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence,

§5). However, determinations that certain types of evidence are irrelevant create rules of exclusion (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §6); relevant evidence may be excluded for reasons of extrinsic policy (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §8 et seq.); and the application of constitutional principles has resulted in additional judicially created rules of exclusion. (See 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §1 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

15 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

II. CALIFORNIA EVIDENCE CODE

D. Change by Ordinance Invalid.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 15

[§ 15] Change by Ordinance Invalid.

In Fisher v. Berkeley (1984) 37 C.3d 644, 209 C.R. 682, 693 P.2d 261, the court, upholding the constitutionality of defendant city's rent control ordinance, held invalid a provision establishing a presumption.

Retaliatory eviction for assertion or exercise of tenant rights is an established defense in an action instituted by a landlord, as well as a basis for a damage suit by the tenant (see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §693), and the ordinance at issue in Fisher contained this implementing provision: In an action by the landlord to recover possession, or an affirmative action by the tenant for damages, "evidence of the assertion or exercise by the tenant of rights under this Ordinance within six months prior to the alleged act of retaliation shall create a presumption that the landlord's act was retaliatory." (37 C.3d 693.) And "[p]resumption means that the Court must find the existence of the fact presumed unless and until its nonexistence is proven by a preponderance of the evidence." (37 C.3d 694.) Held, the presumption was one affecting the burden of proof, and invalid under the governing provisions of the Evidence Code.

(a) The presumption is one affecting the burden of proof under Ev.C. 605 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §56), for defendant claimed that it was intended to further the city's policy against retaliatory evictions and to promote the policy of encouraging tenants to exercise their rights under the ordinance. (37 C.3d 696, 697.)

(b) Ev.C. 500 states that the burden of proof is on the party asserting a fact essential to the party's claim or defense (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §3); and under the ordinance, proof of retaliation is essential to the tenant's defense or claim for damages. Hence, the presumption, relieving the tenant of that burden, is invalid unless the exception in Ev.C. 500 ("Except as otherwise provided by law"; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §6) applies. (37 C.3d 687.) "Law" includes constitutional provisions, statutes, and case law (Ev.C. 160), and, in some cases not relevant to the evidentiary rule here involved, the term "statute" has been held to include local ordinances. However, long before enactment of the Evidence Code, the courts were agreed that municipal governments have no authority to change the common law of evidence. (37 C.3d 697, 698.)

"Given this background, we cannot believe that the Legislature, when it enacted Evidence Code sections 500 and 160 in 1965, ever intended municipal ordinances to come within the exception clause of Evidence Code 500. Whether the Evidence Code directly or by implication preempts a local ordinance that purports to create a presumption shifting the burden of producing evidence is a separate issue, on which we reserve decision. (See Evid. Code, §550, subd. (b).) For now, we conclude that the Legislature deliberately excluded ordinances from those sources of law that may change the traditional allocation of the burden of proof, and that the presumption in section 14 shifting the burden of proof, on its face, directly conflicts with the Evidence Code. (§500.) To that extent, the ordinance is invalid." (37 C.3d 698.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §712.

16 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

II. CALIFORNIA EVIDENCE CODE

E. Construction.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 16

[§ 16] Construction.

(1) Comments by Law Revision Commission and Legislative Committees. In its 1965 recommendations (supra, §12), the Law Revision Commission included valuable Comments on each section, explaining its purpose, its relation to other sections, and some of the problems of application. The Comments are published at 7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 38 et seq., as well as in the Evidence Code volumes of West's Annotated California Codes. The importance of the Comments is underscored by the statutory declaration that they reflect the legislative intent in adopting the law. (See 7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, pp. 1007, 1008; Kaplan v. Superior Court (1971) 6 C.3d 150, 158, footnote 4, 98 C.R. 649, 491 P.2d 1 ["These comments are declarative of the intent not only of the draftsmen of the code but also of the legislators who subsequently enacted it"]; People v. Williams (1976) 16 C.3d 663, 667, 128 C.R. 888, 547 P.2d 1000 [comments declare legislative intent]; Arellano v. Moreno (1973) 33 C.A.3d 877, 884, 109 C.R. 421 ["it can readily be inferred that with respect to unchanged sections of the Evidence Code the commission's comments state the intent of the Legislature regarding those sections"].)

One distinction should be noted, however. In some cases, the Senate and Assembly Judiciary Committees revised the Commission Comments or added new ones of their own. These new or revised comments are included in the West's Annotated California Codes, where they are designated "Comment--Senate Committee on Judiciary" or "Comment--Assembly Committee on Judiciary."

(2) Rules of Construction. Division 1 contains a number of familiar rules found in all of California's modern codes: (a) Constitutional severability. (Ev.C. 3.) (b) Liberal construction to effectuate objects and promote justice. (Ev.C. 2.) (c) Preliminary provisions of Division 1 govern construction. (Ev.C. 4.) (d) Division, chapter, article, and section headings do not affect meaning. (Ev.C. 5.) (e) Statutory reference includes amendments. (Ev.C. 6.) (f) Definitions of "Division," "Chapter," "Article," "Section," "Subdivision," and "Paragraph." (Ev.C. 7.) (g) Present tense includes past and future, future tense includes present. (Ev.C. 8.) (h) Masculine gender includes feminine and neuter. (Ev.C. 9.) (i) Singular number includes plural, plural includes singular. (Ev.C. 10.) (j) "Shall" is mandatory and "may" is permissive. (Ev.C. 11.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

17 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

II. CALIFORNIA EVIDENCE CODE F. General Definitions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 17

[§ 17] General Definitions.

"Unless the provision or context otherwise requires, these definitions govern the construction of this code." (Ev.C. 100.)

The Code lists definitions of general application in Division 2, and puts definitions with special significance to a particular division or article in that division or article. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment on Division 2.) However, some of the definitions in Division 2 are more useful in the discussion of the major subjects or topics to which they relate, and are accordingly stated in later sections or chapters of this work. These are Ev.C. 110, burden of producing evidence; Ev.C. 115, burden of proof; Ev.C. 125, conduct; Ev.C. 135, declarant; Ev.C. 140, evidence; Ev.C. 190, proof; Ev.C. 210, relevant evidence; Ev.C. 225, statement; Ev.C. 240, unavailable witness; Ev.C. 250, writing.

The remaining general definitions in Division 2 are as follows:

- (1) Action. This includes "a civil action and a criminal action." (Ev.C. 105.)
- (2) Civil Action. This includes "civil proceedings." (Ev.C. 120.)
- (3) Criminal Action. This includes "criminal proceedings." (Ev.C. 130.)
- (4) The Hearing. This is a broader term than "trial"; it means "the hearing at which a question under this code arises," and includes preliminary hearings and post-trial proceedings. (Ev.C. 145 and Law Rev. Com. Comment.)
- (5) Law. This includes "constitutional, statutory, and decisional law." (Ev.C. 160.)
- (6) Oath. This includes affirmation or declaration under penalty of perjury. (Ev.C. 165.)
- (7) Perceive. This means "to acquire knowledge through one's senses." (Ev.C. 170.)
- (8) Person. The term is broadly defined to include "a natural person, firm, association, organization, partnership, business trust, corporation, limited liability company, or public entity." (Ev.C. 175.)
- (9) Personal Property. This includes "money, goods, chattels, things in action, and evidences of debt." (Ev.C. 180.)
- (10) Property. This includes both real and personal property. (Ev.C. 185.)
- (11) Public Employee. This means "an officer, agent or employee of a public entity." (Ev.C. 195.)

(12) Public Entity. This includes every form of public authority: "a nation, state, county, city and county, city, district, public authority, public agency, or any other political subdivision or public corporation, whether foreign or domestic." (Ev.C. 200.)

(13) Real Property. This includes "lands, tenements, and hereditaments." (Ev.C. 205.)

(14) State. This has two distinct meanings: (a) Ordinarily, "the State of California." (b) If applied to the different parts of the United States, "it includes any state, district, commonwealth, territory, or insular possession of the United States." (Ev.C. 220.)

(15) Statute. This includes "a treaty and a constitutional provision." (Ev.C. 230.)

(16) Trier of Fact. This includes "(a) the jury and (b) the court when the court is trying an issue of fact other than one relating to the admissibility of evidence." (Ev.C. 235.) But this definition is not exclusive: A referee, court commissioner, or similar officer may be a trier of fact. (Law Rev. Com. Comment on Ev.C. 235.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(8a) (New) Dependent Person. A dependent person is a person who has a physical or mental impairment that substantially restricts his or her ability to carry out normal activities or to protect his or her rights. It includes, but is not limited to, persons who have physical or developmental disabilities or whose physical or mental abilities have significantly diminished because of age. It also includes persons admitted as inpatients to a 24-hour health facility. (Ev.C. 177, added in 2004.)

18 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

III. MEANING OF EVIDENCE AND PROOF

A. Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 18

[§ 18] Evidence.

(1) Former Law. Former C.C.P. 1823 defined "judicial evidence" as "the means, sanctioned by law, of ascertaining in a judicial proceeding the truth respecting a question of fact." Former C.C.P. 1827 described evidence as of four kinds: matters judicially noticed, testimony, writings, and material objects presented to the senses. And former C.C.P. 1957 added a fifth kind, presumptions. (See People v. Leonard (1962) 207 C.A.2d 409, 414, 24 C.R. 597, citing the text ["evidence is that probative material, legally received, by which the tribunal may be lawfully persuaded of the truth or falsity of a fact in issue"]; In re Eugene M. (1976) 55 C.A.3d 650, 658, 127 P.2d 851 ["Evidence is matter that makes clear the truth of fact (Blackstone), persuades a court of the existence of fact (Bentham), or produces a just conviction of truth (Livingston)"].)

(2) Evidence Code. Ev.C. 140 reads as follows: " 'Evidence' means testimony, writings, material objects, or other things presented to the senses that are offered to prove the existence or nonexistence of a fact." This section is both broader and more restrictive than the superseded statutes: (a) It abandons the "sanctioned by law" limitation, and covers inadmissible matters offered, for these have full evidentiary effect in the absence of a proper objection. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment on Ev.C. 140, citing the text; 1 McCormick 5th, §54.) (b) Judicial notice, which is more accurately a substitute for evidence and conclusive on the issue (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §3), is not included in the listing of matters covered. (c) Presumptions are not within the definition, and are also expressly excluded by Ev.C. 600 (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §52).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Evidence Code. See 1 McCormick 6th, §54.

19 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

III. MEANING OF EVIDENCE AND PROOF
B. Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 19

[§ 19] Proof.

Under former C.C.P. 1824, "proof" was "the effect of evidence, the establishment of a fact by evidence." Ev.C. 190 states: " 'Proof' is the establishment by evidence of a requisite degree of belief concerning a fact in the mind of the trier of fact or the court." (See Law Rev. Com. Comment on Ev.C. 190, pointing out that even when the jury is the trier of fact, the court still has to determine preliminary questions of fact on the basis of proof; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §48.) (See also 2 McCormick 5th, §336; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §2; on the various standards of proof, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §34 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §336.

20 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 20

[§ 20] In General.

"The rules of evidence in civil actions are applicable also to criminal actions, except as otherwise provided in this code." (P.C. 1102; see People v. Jackson (1946) 74 C.A.2d 22, 25, 167 P.2d 776; People v. Hewlett (1951) 108 C.A.2d 358, 374, 239 P.2d 150; Conservatorship of Jones (1986) 188 C.A.3d 306, 309, 310, 232 C.R. 600, quoting the text.) And the Evidence Code provides that it shall govern proceedings in "actions" (Ev.C. 12(a)), which include criminal as well as civil actions (Ev.C. 105). Thus, there is no separate law of evidence for criminal trials, and the phrase "criminal evidence," sometimes used by text writers, merely refers to the particular rules of evidence that are designed mainly or exclusively for issues or situations arising in criminal proceedings.

"Criminal evidence," in the above sense, is as fully covered as "civil evidence" in this work, as follows:

(1) Major areas of application of rules to criminal cases are separately treated; e.g., burden of proof, degree of proof, and presumptions in criminal prosecutions (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §20 et seq.); admissibility of character evidence (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §50 et seq.) and evidence of other offenses (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §74 et seq.); involuntary confessions and admissions (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §§64 et seq., 136 et seq.); real or demonstrative evidence (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §3 et seq.); corroboration requirements (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §96 et seq.) and sufficiency of circumstantial evidence (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §142 et seq.); the self-incrimination privilege (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §355 et seq.); discovery of identity of informer (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §306 et seq.). Criminal discovery is fully explored in another work (see 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §27 et seq.), as is illegally obtained evidence (see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §1 et seq.).

(2) In treating topics in which the evidentiary rules are the same, illustrative civil and criminal cases are often separately discussed.

Certain criminal proceedings that are not criminal trials are also briefly examined. (See infra, §21 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.304 et seq.

21 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

B. Preliminary Examination.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 21

[§ 21] In General.

Where a felony prosecution is by information in the superior court, a preliminary examination must be held before a magistrate to determine whether a public offense has been committed and whether there is probable cause to hold the accused. (P.C. 858 et seq.; see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §117 et seq.) Two general principles apply in such a hearing:

(1) The degree or quantum of proof required is less than that necessary for conviction at the trial; i.e., only a reasonable probability of guilt need be shown, and "slight evidence" is sufficient. (See People v. McRae (1947) 31 C.2d 184, 187, 187 P.2d 741; Kind v. Superior Court (1956) 143 C.A.2d 100, 102, 299 P.2d 414; People v. Jablon (1957) 153 C.A.2d 456, 458, 314 P.2d 824; People v. Superior Court (Shamis) (1997) 58 C.A.4th 833, 842, 68 C.R.2d 388; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §§147, 232.)

(2) The rules of admissibility of evidence are the same as those governing a trial; hence, the showing must consist of "legal" or competent evidence: "The constitutional guarantee of due process of law requires adherence to the adopted and recognized rules of evidence. There cannot be one rule of evidence for the trial of cases and another rule of evidence for preliminary examinations. The rule for the admission or rejection of evidence is the same for both proceedings." (People v. Schuber (1945) 71 C.A.2d 773, 775, 163 P.2d 498 [information dismissed]; see also People v. Davidson (1964) 227 C.A.2d 331, 335, 38 C.R. 660 [same].) This principle, however, is subject to a major exception: Proposition 115 provides for the admission of certain kinds of hearsay that would not be admissible at trial. (See infra, §24; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §142.) (See also P.C. 872.5 [notwithstanding Ev.C. 1520 et seq. (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §31), in preliminary examination, contents of writing may be proved by otherwise admissible original, or otherwise admissible secondary evidence].)

People v. McRae, supra, makes this distinction: A defendant can be held to answer on evidence consisting solely of the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. The testimony of an accomplice must be viewed with distrust (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §108), and without the corroboration required by P.C. 1111 it is insufficient to establish guilt (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §96); but a committing magistrate may believe it and conclude that there is probable cause to hold the defendant for trial. "[B]y prohibiting a conviction based solely upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, section 1111 precludes a result that might otherwise follow from such testimony. It is explicit and complete in defining the result that it precludes. In restricting its prohibition to a conviction, section 1111 is in harmony with the principle that less evidence is required to support a determination of probable cause for a commitment than a determination of guilt for a conviction." (31 C.2d 187.) (See dissent, arguing that policy, if not literal terms, of P.C. 1111 makes such testimony incompetent.)

A dictum in People v. Davidson, supra, 227 C.A.2d 337, takes the same position as the McRae case (without citing it) on the requirement of corroborating witnesses for proof of perjury (former P.C. 1103a, now P.C. 118(b), 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §107); i.e., the requirement applies to the trial, not to the preliminary examination.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.229 et seq.

22 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

B. Preliminary Examination.

2. Defendant's Right To Cross-Examine.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 22

[§ 22] Defendant's Right To Cross-Examine.

The right to cross-examine for the purpose of overcoming the prosecution's case or establishing an affirmative defense is an element of due process of law. "It is as critical as the right to cross-examine witnesses at one's trial." (Gallaher v. Superior Court (1980) 103 C.A.3d 666, 671, 162 C.R. 389, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §237.) (See also Foster v. Superior Court (1980) 107 C.A.3d 218, 224, 225, 165 C.R. 701 [improper refusal to allow cross-examination to probe for possible bias]; P.C. 865 ["The witnesses must be examined in the presence of the defendant, and may be cross-examined in his behalf"]; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §142.) (On defendant's right of confrontation--to see as well as hear witnesses against him--see Herbert v. Superior Court (1981) 117 C.A.3d 661, 666, 172 C.R. 850, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §16; on defendant's discovery rights, see Holman v. Superior Court (1981) 29 C.3d 480, 485, 486, 174 C.R. 506, 629 P.2d 14 ["a reasonable, limited discovery directed to the restricted purpose of the preliminary examination should be available, in the discretion of the magistrate, prior to that examination"; citing 15 Santa Clara Lawyer 665]; People v. Buckley (1986) 185 C.A.3d 512, 523, 228 C.R. 329 [at the preliminary examination, "the defendant may not seek cross-examination or presentation of a witness for the sole and primary goal of obtaining discovery"]; on restrictions imposed on examination of witnesses by Proposition 115, see infra, §24.)

In People v. Davis (1984) 161 C.A.3d 796, 207 C.R. 846, the court upheld the right of a defendant to personally cross-examine the prosecution's witness. The charge was bribery, and defendant's counsel did not cross-examine the sole prosecution witness but reserved the right to recall him. Thereafter, counsel did recall the witness, and informed the magistrate that defendant, an experienced trial lawyer with special expertise that counsel did not have, had prepared for this cross-examination and requested that he be allowed to conduct it. The magistrate denied the request, stating that he found counsel to be competent. The witness was not cross-examined, and defendant was held to answer, but the trial judge granted a P.C. 995 motion to dismiss the information. Held, affirmed.

(a) A defendant represented by counsel does not have an absolute right to participate in the presentation of the defense case, but the court or magistrate has discretion to allow the defendant to do so if the orderly and expeditious conduct of business will not be hindered. (161 C.A.3d 801, 802.)

(b) Denial of the request was an abuse of discretion. Defendant was not the usual layperson without knowledge of legal procedure, but an experienced attorney capable of conducting an effective cross-examination and prepared to do so. And counsel had informed the magistrate that he was not prepared to cross-examine, and that unless defendant could do so, the key prosecution witness would not be cross-examined at all. The magistrate's position--that counsel was able to represent defendant and nothing else need be considered--ignored the important special facts of the case. (161 C.A.3d 805.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.231

23 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

B. Preliminary Examination.

3. Special Procedures for Child, Developmentally Disabled, and Other Witnesses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 23

[§ 23] Special Procedures for Child, Developmentally Disabled, and Other Witnesses.

The Legislature has established special preliminary examination procedures for certain categories of witnesses:

(1) Witness 10 Years of Age or Younger. The preliminary examination may be postponed by 1 court day "in order to accommodate the special physical, mental, or emotional needs of a child witness who is 10 years of age or younger." (P.C. 861.5.) The magistrate must admonish both the prosecution and defense against coaching the child witness prior to the witness' next appearance in the preliminary examination. (P.C. 861.5.) (On use of one-way or two-way closed-circuit television for taking testimony of minor witnesses, see P.C. 1347, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §217 et seq.)

(2) Sexual Offense Victim 15 Years of Age or Younger or Mentally Retarded. Where a defendant has been charged with specified sex crimes against a victim who is 15 years of age or younger or is developmentally disabled due to mental retardation, the prosecution may apply for an order that the victim's testimony at the preliminary hearing be videotaped as well as stenographically recorded. (P.C. 1346(a), (b).) On timely receipt of the application, the magistrate must make the order, and the videotape must be transmitted to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending. (P.C. 1346(c).) "If at the time of trial the court finds that further testimony would cause the victim emotional trauma so that the victim is medically unavailable or otherwise unavailable within the meaning of Section 240 of the Evidence Code, the court may admit the videotape of the victim's testimony at the preliminary hearing as former testimony under Section 1291 of the Evidence Code." (P.C. 1346(d).) (See 14 Pacific L. J. 591; 13 Pepperdine L. Rev. 175.)

(3) Spousal Rape or Domestic Violence Victim. In a prosecution for spousal rape or domestic violence, the prosecution may apply for an order that the victim's testimony at the preliminary hearing be videotaped as well as stenographically recorded. (P.C. 1346.1(a), (b).) On timely receipt of the application, the magistrate must make the order and the videotape must be transmitted to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending. (P.C. 1346.1(c).) If the victim's prior testimony at the preliminary hearing is admissible at trial, the videotape recording may be introduced as evidence. (P.C. 1346.1(d).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Witness 10 Years of Age or Younger. P.C. 861.5 was amended in 2004 and 2005 to include dependent persons as defined in P.C. 288(f)(3). (See 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Sex Offenses and Crimes Against Decency, §41.)

24 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

B. Preliminary Examination.

4. Effect of Proposition 115.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 24

[§ 24] Effect of Proposition 115.

The Crime Victims Justice Reform Act (Proposition 115) was enacted by the voters in 1990. It made numerous changes in criminal procedure, all of which are discussed in detail in another work. (See 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Crimes, §106.) The evidentiary aspects of the preliminary examination were affected as follows:

(1) Limitation on Scope of Examination. The scope of the examination is limited to establishing whether probable cause exists to believe that the defendant has committed a felony. "The examination shall not be used for purposes of discovery." (P.C. 866(b).) The prosecuting attorney may request that the magistrate require an offer of proof as to the testimony expected from any witnesses the defendant proposes to produce. The magistrate may not permit the testimony unless the offer of proof indicates that the testimony is "reasonably likely to establish an affirmative defense, negate an element of a crime charged, or impeach the testimony of a prosecution witness or the statement of a declarant testified to by a prosecution witness." (P.C. 866(a).)

(2) Hearsay. "In order to protect victims and witnesses in criminal cases, hearsay evidence shall be admissible at preliminary hearings, as prescribed by the Legislature or by the people through the initiative process." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §30(b).) The constitutional provision is implemented by P.C. 872(b), stating that "the finding of probable cause may be based in whole or in part upon the sworn testimony of a law enforcement officer relating the statements of declarants made out of court offered for the truth of the matter asserted." The officer giving hearsay testimony of this type must have specified experience or training. (See Nienhouse v. Superior Court (1996) 42 C.A.4th 83, 92, 49 C.R.2d 573 [P.C. 872(b) does not benefit only prosecution; it allows defense to introduce hearsay in its favor from law enforcement officer, either on cross-examination of prosecution witness or from its own witness]; People v. Daily (1996) 49 C.A.4th 543, 551, 56 C.R.2d 787 [statute does not require child hearsay declarant to be competent to testify in order for properly qualified officer to relate child's out-of-court statements at preliminary examination]; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §142; 30 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1053 [criticizing holding in Nienhouse].)

In Whitman v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C.3d 1063, 2 C.R.2d 160, 820 P.2d 262, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §143, the court held that P.C. 872(b) does not permit an officer with no personal knowledge about the case to simply read from the investigating officer's report. "The testifying officer ... must have sufficient knowledge of the crime or the circumstances under which the out-of-court statement was made so as to meaningfully assist the magistrate in assessing the reliability of the statement." (54 C.3d 1072, 1073.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Hearsay. P.C. 872(b), as amended in 2005, additionally allows the finding of probable cause to be based on the sworn testimony of an honorably retired law enforcement officer. However, the honorably retired officer may only relate statements of declarants that were made out of court and offered for the truth of the matter asserted if those statements were made at a time when the officer was active.

In People v. Miranda (2000) 23 C.4th 340, 96 C.R.2d 758, 1 P.3d 73, a murder prosecution involving multiple defendants, the magistrate at the preliminary examination denied the prosecutor's motion to admit the confession of a nontestifying codefendant against defendant and an accomplice. After the case was dismissed as to defendant and the accomplice, the prosecution moved to reinstate the complaint against defendant. The trial judge denied the motion, but the Court of Appeal reversed. Held, judgment of the Court of Appeal affirmed; the confession should have been admitted. Whitman v. Superior Court (1991) 54 C.3d 1063, 2 C.R.2d 160, 820 P.2d 262, text, p. 34, concluded that at a preliminary hearing conducted under Proposition 115, testimony by a qualified law enforcement officer relating single-level hearsay is, as to the defendant, admissible as against hearsay, Confrontation Clause, and due process objections. "We see no good reason for applying a different rule to a qualified officer's testimony relating out-of-court hearsay statements by nontestifying accomplices, despite defendant's claim of the general unreliability of such statements. Judges and magistrates are presumably well equipped to consider and weigh the possible unreliability of an accomplice's statement in determining whether to hold the defendant for trial. ... Care and caution regarding accomplice statements are especially appropriate if the accused lacks opportunity to cross-examine the accomplice regarding his or her incriminatory statements. But we find no reasonable basis for recognizing an exception to Whitman in cases involving an accomplice's confession or other incriminating statement." (23 C.4th 350, 351.)

See Correa v. Superior Court (2002) 27 C.4th 444, 463, 117 C.R.2d 27, 40 P.3d 739, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, Supp., §125 [at preliminary hearing in assault case, admission of investigating officers' testimony as to out-of-court statements by victim and witness was not error, even though statements, made in Spanish, were translated to officers by lay interpreters; translation did not add extra layer of hearsay].

25 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

C. Grand Jury Proceeding.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 25

[§ 25] Grand Jury Proceeding.

(1) Nature of Proceeding. The grand jury is not a judicial body and it does not concern itself exclusively with crime. (On the nature, formation, powers, and duties of a grand jury, see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Criminal Procedure, §31 et seq.) Its proceedings are therefore quite different from those in a criminal trial or a preliminary examination. Thus, it normally functions in secret session, with unauthorized persons excluded. (See 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §156 et seq.) The interrogation is conducted by the district attorney and jurors (see P.C. 935; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §161); the defendant is not entitled to present evidence (P.C. 939.7; see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §161); and the witnesses may be admonished not to disclose the questions or their answers (People v. Mersino (1965) 237 C.A.2d 265, 269, 46 C.R. 821). Although refusal of a witness to testify is a contempt, the process must issue from the court and the court must make the adjudication. (See 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §161.)

(2) Applicability of Rules Governing Witnesses and Evidence. Despite the nonjudicial nature of the grand jury proceeding, it is subject to some of the basic rules governing witnesses and evidence:

(a) Witnesses have the usual privileges, including the privilege against self-incrimination. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §371; 52 Cal. L. Rev. 125.)

(b) Only legally competent evidence can be received. (P.C. 939.6; see Mott v. Superior Court (1964) 226 C.A.2d 617, 618, 38 C.R. 247; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §162.) (On applicability of rule excluding illegally obtained evidence, see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §18.) Because the defendant has no opportunity to object, there can be no waiver of the incompetency. (See Mott v. Superior Court, supra; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §163.)

The test of sufficiency of the evidence to support an indictment on a motion to set it aside is the same as that applied to an information based on a commitment after a preliminary examination (supra, §21 et seq.): It need not be enough to establish guilt. (See 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §232.)

P.C. 939.6(b) codifies the basic rule of admissibility and an established distinction: "[T]he grand jury shall not receive any evidence except that which would be admissible over objection at the trial of a criminal action, but the fact that evidence that would have been excluded at trial was received by the grand jury does not render the indictment void where sufficient competent evidence to support the indictment was received by the grand jury." (See 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §§162, 163.)

P.C. 939.6(c) states an exception similar to the one provided by P.C. 872(b) for preliminary hearings (supra, §24): Notwithstanding the hearsay rule, "as to the evidence relating to the foundation for admissibility into evidence of documents, exhibits, records, and other items of physical evidence, the evidence to support the indictment may be based in whole or in part upon the sworn testimony of a law enforcement officer relating the statement of a declarant made out of court and offered for the truth of the matter asserted."

(3) Evidence Favorable to Defendant. Although the defendant has no right to present evidence, when the grand jury has reason to believe that evidence is available to explain away the charge, it must order that evidence to be produced. (P.C. 939.7; see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §164.) In Johnson v. Superior Court (1975) 15 C.3d 248, 255, 124 C.R. 32, 539 P.2d 792, the court held that a district attorney who is aware of such evidence must inform the grand jury of its nature and existence. (See also People v. Snow (1977) 72 C.A.3d 950, 958, 140 C.R. 427 [Johnson rule is satisfied by bringing evidence to attention of grand jury (here by informing foreman who in turn communicated information to members); prosecutor is not required to produce evidence or seek out witnesses].)

The Johnson holding was codified in 1997 with the enactment of P.C. 939.71, requiring the prosecutor, on becoming aware of any exculpatory evidence, to inform the grand jury of it, and to further inform the jurors of their duties under P.C. 939.7, supra. A failure to comply with P.C. 939.71 resulting in substantial prejudice constitutes grounds for dismissal of that portion of the indictment relating to the evidence in question.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Grand Jury k.36 et seq.

26 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

D. Degree and Penalty Hearings.

1. Determination of Degree of Crime.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 26

[§ 26] Determination of Degree of Crime.

Where a crime is divided into degrees, the judgment must fix the degree in order that a proper sentence may be imposed. Sometimes the defendant enters a guilty plea specifying the degree, or enters a guilty plea leaving determination of the degree to the judge. But where the degree is contested, it must be determined on the basis of competent evidence, whether by the jury in its verdict or, where jury trial is waived, by the judge. A judge determining this issue may not rely on incompetent evidence or information received out of court. (See People v. Verdier (1950) 96 C.A.2d 29, 31, 214 P.2d 433; 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Judgment, §§56, 57, 150.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

27 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

D. Degree and Penalty Hearings.

2. Murder Penalty Hearing.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 27

[§ 27] Murder Penalty Hearing.

(1) In General. Under P.C. 190.1 and 190.3, after a conviction for first degree murder with a charged special circumstance found to be true, or a conviction for other specified offenses for which the death penalty may be imposed, a separate proceeding is held to determine whether the penalty should be death or life imprisonment without possibility of parole. (See 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §§434, 463.) P.C. 190.3 allows inquiry into "any matter relevant to aggravation, mitigation, and sentence." The statute lists a number of factors that the trier of fact must take into account, without specifying which factors are aggravating and which mitigating, and this list has been held to limit the parties to introducing evidence relevant to the specific factors. (See People v. Thompson (1988) 45 C.3d 86, 123, 246 C.R. 245, 753 P.2d 37.) In light of P.C. 190.3(k), allowing the jury to consider "[a]ny other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime," this limitation has little effect on the defendant. (See People v. Boyd (1985) 38 C.3d 762, 775, 215 C.R. 1, 700 P.2d 782 [prosecution's evidence in aggravation must be relevant to specific factor, but defendant may offer any extenuating evidence, including evidence of character and background].)

Among the listed factors are the circumstances of the present crime, the presence or absence of criminal activity by the defendant involving the use of, or threat to use, force or violence, and the presence or absence of any prior felony conviction. Evidence of nonviolent criminal activity, other than a felony conviction, or of any criminal activity of which the defendant was acquitted, is inadmissible. (P.C. 190.3.)

The prosecution may not introduce evidence of uncharged criminal activity as an aggravating factor, even though that activity involved violence, unless a "rational trier of fact could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt." (People v. Boyd, supra, 38 C.3d 778; but see People v. Hawkins (1995) 10 C.4th 920, 963, 42 C.R.2d 636, 897 P.2d 574 [small errors in reasonable doubt instruction did not mislead jury]; People v. Avena (1996) 13 C.4th 394, 433, 53 C.R.2d 301, 916 P.2d 1000 [failure to give instruction was harmless].)

(2) Competent Evidence Requirement. Cases arising under a similar provision in former P.C. 190.1 held that, although the provision broadened the scope of the relevancy rule by allowing proof of collateral matters that would be inadmissible on the issue of guilt, it did not affect the fundamental requirement that only legally competent evidence be received. (See People v. Purvis (1961) 56 C.2d 93, 97, 13 C.R. 801, 362 P.2d 713; People v. Hamilton (1963) 60 C.2d 105, 128, 32 C.R. 4, 383 P.2d 412; 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §467.) However, the trial judge has no discretion under Ev.C. 352 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §17) to exclude unduly prejudicial evidence where that evidence is specifically made admissible under P.C. 190.3(b) (violent criminal activity). (See People v. Karis (1988) 46 C.3d 612, 641, 250 C.R. 659, 758 P.2d 1189; People v. Davenport (1995) 11 C.4th 1171, 1205, 47 C.R.2d 800, 906 P.2d 1068 [no discretion to exclude crime scene and autopsy photographs as unduly inflammatory or lacking in probative value[.])

In People v. Harris (1984) 36 C.3d 36, 69, 70, 201 C.R. 782, 679 P.2d 433, defendant's proffered hearsay evidence was held admissible under: (1) The holding of Green v. Georgia (1979) 442 U.S. 95, 99 S.Ct. 2150, 60 L.Ed.2d 738, that in the punishment phase of a capital case, highly relevant and reliable evidence proffered by the defendant must be admitted even if it is inadmissible hearsay under the state law; and (2) the "mental state" exception to the hearsay rule (Ev.C. 1250, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §198). (See also People v. Smithey (1999) 20 C.4th 936, 996, 86 C.R.2d 243, 978 P.2d 1171 [hearsay statements of defendant's former parole officer were not "highly probative of the defendant's innocence" within meaning of Green but simply corroborative of other evidence, and thus their exclusion did not violate his constitutional rights].)

(3) Illustrations. Evidentiary issues concerning the statutory aggravating and mitigating factors arise in every death penalty case, and these are fully discussed in another work. (See 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §470 et seq.) The following cases are illustrative:

People v. Stanley (1995) 10 C.4th 764, 838, 839, 42 C.R.2d 543, 897 P.2d 481 [trial judge properly admitted defendant's statements on videotapes to show information on which psychiatrist based his opinion, but not for truth of facts asserted, because tapes had no indicia of reliability; citing Green].

People v. Avena, supra, 13 C.4th 428, 429 [admission of unadjudicated murder as aggravating evidence did not violate defendant's self-incrimination privilege and right to due process, even though it forced him to choose between testifying and denying the murder (causing him to lose privilege in future trial) and remaining silent (leaving evidence of his guilt un rebutted)].

People v. Carpenter (1997) 15 C.4th 312, 417, 63 C.R.2d 1, 935 P.2d 708 [except for other crimes, trial judge should not instruct at all on burden of proving mitigating and aggravating circumstances, because sentencing function is moral and normative, not factual].

People v. Holt (1997) 15 C.4th 619, 684, 63 C.R.2d 782, 937 P.2d 213 [judge has no duty to instruct on standard for resolution of factual disputes at penalty phase].

People v. Ramos (1997) 15 C.4th 1133, 1172, 1174, 64 C.R.2d 892, 938 P.2d 950 [after defense witness testified as to defendant's renewed involvement with religion while incarcerated, prosecution was properly allowed to impeach her testimony with evidence of defendant's weapons possession in prison; this evidence was also admissible under P.C. 190.3(b) as showing activities involving use of, or threat to use, violence].

People v. Quartermain (1997) 16 C.4th 600, 632, 66 C.R.2d 609, 941 P.2d 788 [exclusion of evidence regarding prison conditions defendant would experience if sentenced to life was proper, notwithstanding that jury had received evidence about comfortable conditions in federal prison where defendant had been incarcerated].

People v. Hart (1999) 20 C.4th 546, 652, 653, 85 C.R.2d 132, 976 P.2d 683 [after defendant presented evidence in mitigation indicating that he was loving and devoted husband, trial judge did not abuse discretion in allowing prosecution to introduce testimony that defendant had made improper advances to another woman].

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Competent Evidence Requirement. See People v. Kraft (2000) 23 C.4th 978, 1073, 1074, 99 C.R.2d 1, 5 P.3d 68 [letters written by defendant while in jail were properly excluded as self-serving hearsay, where they possessed no probative value apart from truth or sincerity of their contents, and there was evidence that defendant wrote them in order to assemble persuasive case in mitigation; distinguishing People v. Harris (1984) 36 C.3d 36, 201 C.R. 782, 679 P.2d 433, text, p. 37]. (3) Illustrations. The following cases are illustrative:

People v. Weaver (2001) 26 C.4th 876, 980, 981, 111 C.R.2d 2, 29 P.3d 103 [trial judge properly instructed jurors that they could consider defendant's videotaped responses to Vietnam Era Stress Inventory not for truth, but as demonstrating basis for medical experts' opinions; following People v. Stanley (1995) 10 C.4th 764, 42 C.R.2d 543, 897 P.2d 481, text, p. 38].

People v. Elliot (2005) 37 C.4th 453, 481, 482, 35 C.R.3d 759, 122 P.3d 968 [trial judge did not err in instructing jurors that defendant's statements to expert defense witness could be considered only to show information on which witness relied and not for truth; statements were made in preparation for trial and were not sort of highly relevant and reliable hearsay that cannot constitutionally be excluded from penalty hearing]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.986.6(3)

28 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

E. Probation Hearing.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 28

[§ 28] Probation Hearing.

The judge determines an application for probation largely on consideration of the probation officer's report. (See P.C. 1203; 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §§529.) This will usually include hearsay, and properly so: "A probation officer could not make an investigation and report ... if restricted to the rules of evidence. Much of the prior record and history of a defendant, as well as the circumstances surrounding the crime, are hearsay and can be investigated and reported upon only by the use of hearsay information." (People v. Valdivia (1960) 182 C.A.2d 145, 148, 5 C.R. 832; see People v. Barajas (1972) 26 C.A.3d 932, 939, 103 C.R. 405.) (On use of statements in probation report to determine nature of prior crime, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §12.)

However, the defendant is entitled to present evidence on his or her own behalf or in rebuttal of the report, and it is improper for the judge to receive new information not incorporated in the report and therefore not available for refutation. (People v. Valdivia, supra, 182 C.A.2d 149.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.982.6(3)

29 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

F. Hearings on Revocation of Probation or Parole.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 29

[§ 29] In General.

(1) Criminal Prosecution Distinguished. The minimum due process requirements for parole revocation proceedings established in Morrissey v. Brewer (1972) 408 U.S. 471, 92 S.Ct. 2593, 33 L.Ed.2d 484, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §646, and held applicable to probation revocation proceedings in People v. Vickers (1972) 8 C.3d 451, 105 C.R. 305, 503 P.2d 1313, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §581, do not change these proceedings into criminal prosecutions. "We emphasize there is no thought to equate this second stage of parole revocation to a criminal prosecution in any sense; it is a narrow inquiry; the process should be flexible enough to consider evidence including letters, affidavits, and other material that would not be admissible in an adversary criminal trial." (Morrissey v. Brewer, supra, 92 S.Ct. 2604, 33 L.Ed.2d 498.) (See People v. Maki (1985) 39 C.3d 707, 715, 217 C.R. 676, 704 P.2d 743, infra, §32; 11 A.L.R.4th 999 [admissibility of hearsay evidence in probation revocation hearings].) (On admissibility of illegally obtained evidence, see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §§20, 21.)

(2) Relaxed Standards of Proof. "The correct standard of proof to be used by the trial court in assessing whether there exists 'reason to believe' the probationer has violated his probation or committed a new offense has been variously stated [e.g., "clear and satisfactory"; "clear and convincing"; "preponderance of the evidence"]. Yet the authorities are unanimous in concluding that the standard of proof used in a criminal trial, namely, the 'beyond a reasonable doubt' standard ... is inapplicable to the probation revocation hearing." (In re Coughlin (1976) 16 C.3d 52, 56, 127 C.R. 337, 545 P.2d 249; see People v. Rodriguez (1990) 51 C.3d 437, 441, 443, 272 C.R. 613, 795 P.2d 783, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §586 [correct standard in probation revocation proceeding is preponderance of the evidence].)

(3) Identity of Informant. A defendant in a probation revocation proceeding is entitled to disclosure of the identity of an informant who is a material witness. (Goodlow v. Superior Court (1980) 101 C.A.3d 969, 972, 975, 162 C.R. 121.)

(4) Corroboration of Accomplice Testimony. P.C. 1111, requiring corroboration of accomplice testimony (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §96), does not apply in probation revocation proceedings. Corroboration is less essential when, as in probation revocation proceedings, the trier of fact is a judge rather than a jury. Further, the statute is only applicable where the result of the proceeding would be a criminal conviction, and it cannot be said that a probation revocation proceeding results in a conviction, because the probationer has already been convicted and placed on probation. (People v. McGavock (1999) 69 C.A.4th 332, 336, 337, 81 C.R.2d 600.)

(5) Defendant's Testimony Not Admissible in Later Trial. Under a judicially created "privilege," the defendant's testimony at a probation revocation hearing cannot be used against the defendant in a subsequent trial on the related charge except under limited circumstances for impeachment or rebuttal. (People v. Weaver (1985) 39 C.3d 654, 659, 217 C.R. 245, 703 P.2d 1139, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §381.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.982.9(5); Pardon and Parole k.90

30 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

F. Hearings on Revocation of Probation or Parole.

2. Offenses Committed During Probation or Parole.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 30

[§ 30] Offenses Committed During Probation or Parole.

Probation may be revoked on the basis of offenses committed during the period of probation, even though the evidence of guilt is insufficient for conviction. (In re Coughlin (1976) 16 C.3d 52, 56, 127 C.R. 337, 545 P.2d 249.) Probation revocation is also proper even though the charge was dismissed due to an illegal search and seizure. (People v. Nixon (1982) 131 C.A.3d 687, 691, 183 C.R. 878; see 77 A.L.R.3d 636 [admissibility of illegally seized evidence in probation revocation hearing].)

The court or Board of Prison Terms may consider evidence of subsequent offenses despite the fact that the probationer or parolee was tried and acquitted of the charge. (In re Coughlin, supra, 16 C.3d 56 [probation revocation hearing]; In re Dunham (1976) 16 C.3d 63, 69, 127 C.R. 343, 545 P.2d 255 [parole revocation hearing].) And this evidence may concern a federal offense, over which the state has no jurisdiction. (People v. Beaudrie (1983) 147 C.A.3d 686, 691, 195 C.R. 289.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

31 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

F. Hearings on Revocation of Probation or Parole.

3. Use of Prior Testimony.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 31

[§ 31] Use of Prior Testimony.

In People v. Winson (1981) 29 C.3d 711, 175 C.R. 621, 631 P.2d 55, defendant was identified at his preliminary examination by the victim of an assault as the perpetrator of the crime. Thereafter, the victim left the state, and the charges against defendant were dropped when the trial court ruled that the prosecution could not use the transcript of the victim's prior testimony at the forthcoming criminal trial because it had failed to exercise due diligence in attempting to locate and maintain contact with the victim. However, the transcript was received at the hearing on revocation of defendant's probation without any further showing. Held, it was improperly admitted.

(a) In People v. Cambitsis (1980) 101 C.A.3d 141, 161 C.R. 441, the Court of Appeal characterized the opportunity to cross-examine an adverse witness as the "main and essential" purpose of the right of confrontation, while describing as "secondary and dispensable" the opportunity for the tribunal to observe the witness' demeanor. But the United States Supreme Court, in Ohio v. Roberts (1980) 448 U.S. 56, 100 S.Ct. 2531, 2537, 65 L.Ed.2d 597, 606, 3 Cal. Evidence(4th), Presentation at Trial, §21, indicated that both interests were not lightly to be disposed of in the criminal fact-finding process and should be accorded "equal value" under minimum due process requirements in such proceedings. (29 C.3d 717.) Hence, "[a] preliminary hearing transcript of a witness' testimony in a defendant's related criminal case is not a proper substitute for the live testimony of the witness at defendant's probation revocation hearing in the absence of the declarant's unavailability or other good cause." (29 C.3d 713.)

(b) The issue of whether former testimony may be utilized in lieu of a witness' personal appearance is best resolved on a case-by-case basis. Here, the following circumstances make admission of the preliminary examination testimony of the victim improper: The victim was the sole percipient witness, a finding of no legal unavailability had been made in the underlying proceedings and no additional evidence was introduced on the issue at the probation revocation hearing, and the court made no specific finding of good cause for denying the right to confrontation and cross-examination. (29 C.3d 719.) (See People v. Arreola (1994) 7 C.4th 1144, 1160, 1161, 31 C.R.2d 631, 875 P.2d 736 [at probation revocation hearing, admission of testimony of sole prosecution witness at preliminary hearing was error because prosecution failed to offer any justification for not securing witness' presence; however, error was harmless in light of substantial evidence of defendant's probation violation].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Ohio v. Roberts (1980) 448 U.S. 56, 100 S.Ct. 2531, 65 L.Ed.2d 597, text, p. 41, was overruled in Crawford v. Washington (2004) 541 U.S. 36, 124 S.Ct. 1354, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, Supp., §21.

See People v. O'Connell (2003) 107 C.A.4th 1062, 1066, 1067, 132 C.R.2d 665 [at probation hearing, trial judge, in terminating defendant's participation in drug counseling program and placing him on probation, did not err in relying on written progress report indicating that defendant had failed to attend any counseling sessions; unlike former testimony in People v. Winson (1981) 29 C.3d 711, 175 C.R. 621, 631 P.2d 55, text, p. 41, progress report was prepared contemporaneously to, and specifically for, hearing where defendant's lack of compliance was at issue].

32 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IV. EVIDENCE IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

F. Hearings on Revocation of Probation or Parole.

4. Use of Reliable Hearsay.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 32

[§ 32] Use of Reliable Hearsay.

In People v. Maki (1985) 39 C.3d 707, 217 C.R. 676, 704 P.2d 743, defendant's probation was revoked on a finding that he had traveled to Chicago without permission from his probation officer. The evidence at the hearing consisted of (a) a car rental invoice signed by defendant, which recited the rental of a Hertz car at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, and (b) a hotel receipt in payment for services at Hyatt Regency O'Hare in Chicago. Held, the evidence was not admissible under the hearsay exception for adoptive admissions (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §103), or for a nonhearsay purpose (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §31 et seq.), but it was nevertheless sufficient to support the order revoking probation.

The court relied on People v. Winson (1981) 29 C.3d 711, 175 C.R. 621, 631 P.2d 55, supra, §31, and federal cases, upholding the use of otherwise inadmissible hearsay when accompanied by reasonable indicia of reliability. "The significant factor is the uncontroverted presence of defendant's signature on the invoice." (39 C.3d 716.) If the invoice were simply printed and filled out by an unidentified hand, it would have been insufficient, even when accompanied by the hotel receipt. "However, the identification of defendant's signature on the printed invoice and the fact that it is an invoice of the type relied upon by parties for billing and payment of money, leads us to find it sufficient here." (39 C.3d 717.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Johnson (2004) 121 C.A.4th 1409, 1413, 18 C.R.3d 230 [in probation revocation hearing, use of laboratory report analyzing rock cocaine that defendant was caught selling was not subject to requirements of Crawford v. Washington (2004) 541 U.S. 36, 124 S.Ct. 1354, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, Supp., §21; report was routine documentary evidence, not testimonial hearsay to which Crawford applies]; In re Miller (2006) 145 C.A.4th 1228, 1236, 52 C.R.3d 256 [in revoking defendant's parole based on evidence of forced oral copulation and sexual battery, Board of Parole Hearings erred in relying on unsworn hearsay (statements of victim as related in testimony by two police officers), without determining unavailability of declarant or reliability of evidence, and without weighing factors favoring admission of evidence against defendant's right of confrontation to determine whether good cause existed]; People v. Shepherd (2007) 151 C.A.4th 1193, 1198, 60 C.R.3d 616 [in revoking defendant's probation for alcohol consumption, trial judge erred in permitting defendant's probation officer to testify concerning out-of-court statements by administrator of defendant's alcohol treatment program; good cause standard of People v. Winson (1981) 29 C.3d 711, 175 C.R. 621, 631 P.2d 55, text, p. 42, was applicable, and in light of lack of evidence of administrator's unavailability, standard was not met].

33 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

V. EVIDENCE IN NONJURY TRIAL

A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 33

[§ 33] In General.

Most of the exclusionary rules of evidence were developed for jury trials, and reversible error in admission of improper evidence is based on its probable prejudicial effect on the jury. (See generally 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §408 et seq.; 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §1 et seq.) Whether the rules, or the effect of their violation, are or should be different in nonjury trials has been the subject of some discussion in legal literature. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4d.1; 1 McCormick 5th, §60 [describing the view of the common law that it was "inexpedient" to apply these restrictions to judges]; 79 Harv. L. Rev. 407 [analysis of problem and discussion of divergent theories].)

Two contrasting views have found support in state and federal decisions:

(1) That it may be presumed on appeal that the judge disregarded inadmissible evidence in reaching his or her decision; hence, that reversal will not be ordered if there is other competent evidence to support it. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §60; 79 Harv. L. Rev. 407, 409.)

(2) That the rules apply to nonjury trials in the same way that they do in jury trials, i.e., that admissibility and reversible error are determined in the same manner. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §60; 79 Harv. L. Rev. 414.)

Under one variation of the first position, the judge would be required to indicate that the improper evidence was disregarded. (See 79 Harv. L. Rev. 411.) Under another variation, the appellate court would presume that the judge carefully appraised all of the admitted evidence, whether proper or improper, and gave it its appropriate probative value. This approach essentially exempts the judge from the ordinary rules of evidence. (See 79 Harv. L. Rev. 412.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §60.(1) Presumption that judge disregarded inadmissible evidence: See 1 McCormick 6th, §60.

(2) Rules apply in same way to jury and nonjury trials: See 1 McCormick 6th, §60.

34 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

V. EVIDENCE IN NONJURY TRIAL

B. Civil Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 34

[§ 34] Civil Cases.

In civil cases, a number of California decisions follow the presumption that the trial judge considered and relied only on competent evidence in making findings and rendering a judgment. The effect is to require a strong showing that the error did influence the result in order to obtain a reversal despite other sufficient evidence. (See Keating v. Basich Bros. Const. Co. (1944) 66 C.A.2d 258, 263, 151 P.2d 892; Nason v. Leth-Nissen (1947) 82 C.A.2d 70, 74, 185 P.2d 880; Bixby v. Bixby (1953) 120 C.A.2d 495, 499, 261 P.2d 286; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §414; but see Wilson v. Manduca (1965) 233 C.A.2d 184, 189, 190, 43 C.R. 435, 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §442, taking the opposite view.)

There is one situation in which reliance on competent evidence is not an issue: In determining whether the adoption of an adult or married minor child is in the public interest or in the best interests of the parties seeking it, the trial judge may consider oral or written evidence regardless of whether it conforms to the Evidence Code. (Family C. 9328; see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §400J.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §155. West's Key Number Digest, Trial k.376 et seq.

35 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

V. EVIDENCE IN NONJURY TRIAL

C. Criminal Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 35

[§ 35] Criminal Cases.

In criminal cases, particularly where constitutional rights are allegedly violated, the United States Supreme Court appears to treat jury and nonjury trials alike in holding the error reversible despite adequate competent evidence of guilt. (See Fahy v. Connecticut (1963) 375 U.S. 85, 84 S.Ct. 229, 11 L.Ed.2d 171, 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §9.) In one important area, however, both the federal and California courts make a distinction in how judges and jurors are likely to react to prejudicial material. Bruton v. United States (1968) 391 U.S. 123, 88 S.Ct. 1620, 20 L.Ed.2d 476, requires the exclusion of a defendant's extrajudicial statement incriminating a codefendant where the two defendants are tried jointly before a jury. But federal case law does not apply the same rule where the trial is to the court, and the passage of Proposition 8 (supra, §§7, 8) made the federal approach applicable in California. (People v. Walkkein (1993) 14 C.A.4th 1401, 1408, 1409, 18 C.R.2d 383.) "[E]xclusion of a codefendant's incriminating statements should not be required in court trials, for the United States Supreme Court has made clear that the Sixth Amendment right is not violated by the admission of a codefendant's statements where 'there does not exist the overwhelming probability' that the fact finder will be unable to disregard the statements in determining the accused's guilt or innocence." (14 C.A.4th 1409, quoting Richardson v. Marsh (1987) 481 U.S. 200, 107 S.Ct. 1702, 95 L.Ed.2d 176, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §60.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.255 et seq.

36 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

A. In General.

1. Nature of Juvenile Court Proceedings.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 36

[§ 36] Nature of Juvenile Court Proceedings.

The procedure in the juvenile court, including the applicable rules of evidence, is fully covered in 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §449 et seq. (See also C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice, Vol. 1 [Delinquent Minors], Vol. 2 [Dependent Minors and Status Offenders]; Seiser & Kumli, California Juvenile Courts Practice and Procedure (one-volume softcover publication, replaced annually).) In this and subsequent sections, the major topics will be treated with brief statements of the law as set forth in statutes, cases, and Rules of Court, and cross-references to the more detailed material in the Summary.

(1) Informality and Control by Court. "The judge of the juvenile court shall control all proceedings during the hearings with a view to the expeditious and effective ascertainment of the jurisdictional facts and the ascertainment of all information relative to the present condition and future welfare of the person upon whose behalf the petition is brought. Except where there is a contested issue of fact or law, the proceedings shall be conducted in an informal nonadversary atmosphere with a view to obtaining the maximum cooperation of the minor upon whose behalf the petition is brought and all persons interested in his welfare with such provisions as the court may make for the disposition and care of such minor." (Welf.C. 680; see also nearly identical Welf.C. 350(a)(1); C.R.C., Rule 1412(a); 2 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice §7.1 et seq.; Seiser & Kumli, California Juvenile Courts Practice and Procedure (1999 ed.), §1.31; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §547.) Contested hearings are conducted as adversary proceedings. (C.R.C., Rule 1412(b).)

(2) Recording of Proceedings. An official court reporter is required in a judge's hearing, and the judge may direct that a reporter be present at a referee's hearing. (Welf.C. 347, 677; C.R.C., Rule 1411(a), (b).) And the reporter must prepare a transcript if directed by the judge or requested by the minor, the minor's parent, guardian, or adult relative, or the attorneys for those persons. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §550.)

(3) Separate Private Session. "All juvenile court proceedings shall be heard at a special or separate session of the court, and no other matter shall be heard at that session. No person on trial, awaiting trial, or accused of a crime, other than a parent, de facto parent, guardian, or relative of the child, shall be permitted to be present at the hearing, except while testifying as a witness." (C.R.C., Rule 1410(a); see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §544.)

(4) Testimony in Chambers or by Closed-Circuit Television. In a dependency proceeding, the testimony of the minor may, under certain circumstances, be taken in chambers and outside the presence of the minor's parents or guardian. (See Welf.C. 350(b); In re Mary S. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 414, 422, 230 C.R. 726.) And the judge in a dependency proceeding has the inherent power to order the use of one-way closed-circuit television to take the minor's testimony outside the parents' presence, in order to ensure truthfulness. (In re Amber S. (1993) 15 C.A.4th 1260, 1262, 19 C.R.2d 404.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §440 et seq.(1) Informality and Control by Court. C.R.C., Rule 1412(a) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.534(a) in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1412(b) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.534(b) in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§589, 813.

(2) Recording of Proceedings. C.R.C., Rule 1411(a), (b) were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.532(a), (b), respectively, in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§591, 814.

(3) Separate Private Session. C.R.C., Rule 1410(a) was amended in 2004 to change the first "shall be heard" to "must be heard," the second "shall be heard" to "may be heard," and "shall be permitted to" to "may."

C.R.C., Rule 1410(a) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.530(a) in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §586 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Infants k.171 et seq.

37 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

A. In General.

2. Types of Hearings.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 37

[§ 37] Types of Hearings.

(1) Divided Hearing on Grounds and Disposition. The Juvenile Court Law establishes a two-stage hearing procedure: (a) the jurisdiction hearing on the grounds of the petition, i.e., whether the minor comes within Welf.C. 300, 601 or 602; (b) the disposition hearing, on the disposition to be made if the finding on the grounds is against the minor. (Welf.C. 701 et seq.; see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §§679 et seq., 775 et seq.; infra, §45 et seq.)

(2) Detention Hearing. A minor taken into custody must be brought before a judge or referee for a "detention hearing." (Welf.C. 632 et seq.; C.R.C., Rule 1471; see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §§667 et seq., 736 et seq.; infra, §43.)

(3) Fitness Hearing. A minor charged under Welf.C. 602 (crime) may, on motion of the petitioner, be given a hearing on the question whether the minor will be "a fit and proper subject to be dealt with under the juvenile court law." (Welf.C. 707; C.R.C., Rule 1480(a); 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §754 et seq.; infra, §44.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Divided Hearing on Grounds and Disposition.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§609 et seq., 855 et seq.

(2) Detention Hearing. C.R.C., Rule 1471 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.752 in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§598 et seq., 819 et seq.

(3) Fitness Hearing. C.R.C., Rule 1480(a) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.766 in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §835 et seq.

38 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

A. In General.

3. Rules of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 38

[§ 38] Rules of Evidence.

(1) Evidence Code Governs. "The admission and exclusion of evidence shall be pursuant to the rules of evidence established by the Evidence Code and by judicial decision." (Welf.C. 701.) (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §555 et seq.)

(2) Particular Rules. A number of decisions have dealt with the applicability in the juvenile court of general rules governing evidence and witnesses. (See In re Edward D. (1976) 61 C.A.3d 10, 15, 132 C.R. 100 [Ev.C. 1012, psychotherapist privilege]; In re Mitchell P. (1978) 22 C.3d 946, 949, 151 C.R. 330, 587 P.2d 1144 [rule requiring corroboration of testimony of accomplice inapplicable]; In re Joaquin S. (1979) 88 C.A.3d 80, 83, 151 C.R. 508 [polygraph test inadmissible]; In re Tracy J. (1979) 94 C.A.3d 472, 477, 156 C.R. 512 [right to disclosure of identity of informer]; In re Juma P. (1988) 204 C.A.3d 1228, 1236, 251 C.R. 739 [involuntary confession]; In re Elizabeth T. (1992) 9 C.A.4th 636, 641, 12 C.R.2d 10, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §261 [hearsay exception for child's former testimony at preliminary examination]; Cynthia D. v. Superior Court (1993) 5 C.4th 242, 256, 19 C.R.2d 698, 851 P.2d 1307, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §718A [provisions allowing termination of parental rights on lesser standard of proof than clear and convincing evidence are constitutional]; In re Jose M. (1994) 21 C.A.4th 1470, 1479, 27 C.R.2d 55, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §602 [rule limiting admissibility of codefendant's out-of-court statements is inapplicable where judge is trier of fact and codefendant testifies]; In re Cindy L. (1997) 17 C.4th 15, 31, 69 C.R.2d 803, 947 P.2d 1340, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §172 [approving court-created "child dependency hearsay exception"]; 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1493 [Cynthia D.]; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §555 et seq.; on exclusion of illegally obtained evidence, see infra, §39.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Evidence Code Governs.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§617 et seq., 872.

(2) Particular Rules. See In re Kentron D. (2002) 101 C.A.4th 1381, 1392, 1393, 125 C.R.2d 260, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, Supp., §586 [revocation of minor's probation on sole basis of written report containing probation officers' hearsay allegations was improper, where some officers were not shown to be unavailable, and others were present in court]; In re Eddie M. (2003) 31 C.4th 480, 502, 3 C.R.3d 119, 73 P.3d 1115 [where juvenile probation violation "not amounting to a crime" is alleged, preponderance of evidence standard can be constitutionally applied].

Cynthia D.:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §691.

Jose M.:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §786.

Applicability of rules:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§617 et seq., 872. West's Key Number Digest, Infants k.171 et seq., 207

39 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

A. In General.

4. Minor's Constitutional Rights.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 39

[§ 39] Minor's Constitutional Rights.

The constitutional guaranty of due process entitles juveniles in delinquency cases to many of the same fundamental rights as those enjoyed by defendants in criminal cases. (See In re Gault (1967) 387 U.S. 1, 87 S.Ct. 1428, 18 L.Ed.2d 527, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §580.) Gault and subsequent decisions dealt with a number of the more important of these rights in the area of evidence and witnesses:

(1) Miranda rule. (See In re Albert R. (1980) 112 C.A.3d 783, 787, 789, 169 C.R. 553; see also Fare v. Michael C. (1979) 442 U.S. 707, 99 S.Ct. 2560, 2571, 61 L.Ed.2d 197, 212 [Miranda rule is inapplicable to request for probation officer]; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §§594, 606.)

(2) Involuntary confession or admission. (See In re Peter G. (1980) 110 C.A.3d 576, 582, 168 C.R. 3; In re Aven S. (1991) 1 C.A.4th 69, 75, 1 C.R.2d 655 [voluntariness of minor's confession is evaluated in same manner as that of adult criminal; i.e., prosecution need only prove voluntariness by preponderance of the evidence]; In re Shawn D. (1993) 20 C.A.4th 200, 212, 24 C.R.2d 395; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §595.)

(3) Self-incrimination privilege. (See In re Gault, supra, 87 S.Ct. 1458, 18 L.Ed.2d 561; People v. Macias (1997) 16 C.4th 739, 742, 66 C.R.2d 659, 941 P.2d 838, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §370 [statements made during fitness evaluation may not be used as substantive evidence of guilt at subsequent criminal trial but may be used for impeachment].)

(4) Right of confrontation and cross-examination. (See In re Gault, supra, 87 S.Ct. 1459, 18 L.Ed.2d 562; on parents' right of confrontation, see In re Kerry O. (1989) 210 C.A.3d 326, 333, 334, 258 C.R. 448 [in dependency proceeding, waiver of this right need not be express and personal].)

(5) Illegally obtained evidence. The exclusionary rule (see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §2) applies in juvenile court proceedings involving criminal charges. (See In re Scott K. (1979) 24 C.3d 395, 402, 155 C.R. 671, 595 P.2d 105; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §559.)

The Aranda-Bruton rule, requiring the editing of a defendant's out-of-court statement implicating a codefendant, was formerly held applicable to juvenile court proceedings. (See In re D.L. (1975) 46 C.A.3d 65, 70, 120 C.R. 276.) But People v. Walkkein (1993) 14 C.A.4th 1401, 1409, 18 C.R.2d 383, determined that Proposition 8 (supra, §§7, 8) abrogated that aspect of the California version of the rule that required such editing in trials to the court. Under Walkkein, then, the rule has no application in a juvenile jurisdictional hearing tried to the court. (In re Jose M. (1994) 21

C.A.4th 1470, 1480, 27 C.R.2d 55.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

In re Gault:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §783.

(1) Miranda rule.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§792, 802.

(2) Involuntary confession or admission.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §793.

(5) Illegally obtained evidence.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§617, 875.

40 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

A. In General.

5. Statutory Listing of Rights.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 40

[§ 40] Statutory Listing of Rights.

Constitutional rights of the minor (see supra, §39) are in some instances restated and implemented by statutes and rules, and some additional rights are given express recognition. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §579.) Those dealing with evidence and witnesses include the following:

(1) Right to subpoena witnesses. (Welf.C. 341, 664; C.R.C., Rule 1408(d).)

(2) Right of confrontation and cross-examination. (Welf.C. 311(b), 630(b); and see, e.g., C.R.C., Rules 1412(j) [required advice as to this right], 1444(c) [detention hearing].)

(3) Privilege against self-incrimination. (Welf.C. 630(b), 702.5; and see, e.g., C.R.C., Rules 1412(j) [required advice as to this right], 1444(c) [detention hearing].)

(4) Adjudication only on competent evidence. (Welf.C. 355, 701; and see, e.g., C.R.C., Rules 1450 [jurisdiction hearing in dependency case], 1488 [jurisdiction hearing in delinquency case].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§567, 782.

(1) Right to subpoena witnesses. C.R.C., Rule 1408(d) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.526(d) in 2006.

(2) Right of confrontation and cross-examination. C.R.C., Rule 1444(c) was relettered C.R.C., Rule 1444(d) in 2002. C.R.C., Rule 1444(d) became C.R.C., Rule 5.674(d) in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1412(j) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.534(j) in 2006. C.R.C., Rule 5.534(j) was relettered C.R.C., Rule 5.534(k) in 2007.

(3) Privilege against self-incrimination. C.R.C., Rule 1444(c) was relettered C.R.C., Rule 1444(d) in 2002. C.R.C., Rule 1444(d) became C.R.C., Rule 5.674(d) in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1412(j) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.534(j) in 2006. C.R.C., Rule 5.534(j) was relettered C.R.C., Rule 5.534(k) in 2007.

(4) Adjudication only on competent evidence. C.R.C., Rule 1450 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.684 in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1488 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.780 in 2006.

41 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

A. In General.

6. Discovery.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 41

[§ 41] Discovery.

The statutes do not mention discovery, but a limited discovery procedure was approved in Joe Z. v. Superior Court (1970) 3 C.3d 797, 801, 91 C.R. 594, 478 P.2d 26, and is now comprehensively covered by C.R.C., Rule 1420.

The Rule declares the general purpose of encouraging disclosure (Rule 1420(a)), and states the affirmative duty of the petitioner to disclose (Rule 1420(c)), and the duty of a parent or guardian to disclose (Rule 1420(e)). Provision is also made for a motion to compel disclosure (Rule 1420(f)), for sanctions on failure to comply (Rule 1420(j)), and for protective orders (Rule 1420(g)). (See Navajo Express v. Superior Court (1986) 186 C.A.3d 981, 985, 231 C.R. 165 [discovery in personal injury suit of plaintiff's juvenile records]; In re Jeanette H. (1990) 225 C.A.3d 25, 37, 275 C.R. 9, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §147 [court's authority to order exchange of witness lists at trial readiness conference in dependency proceeding, under its inherent power to manage its calendar]; Robert S. v. Superior Court (1992) 9 C.A.4th 1417, 1422, 12 C.R.2d 489 [court's discretionary authority to order reciprocal discovery, even though Rule 1420 does not provide for it]; Clinton K. v. Superior Court (1995) 37 C.A.4th 1244, 1249, 44 C.R.2d 140 [prior to fitness hearing, juvenile court has inherent power to order disclosure of items listed in P.C. 1054.3 (5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §74) without any additional showing of necessity, but should not exercise this authority unless discovery appears reasonably necessary and will not unduly delay or prolong proceeding]; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §562 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.R.C., Rule 1420 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.546 in 2006. C.R.C., Rule 1420(a), (c), (e), (f), (g), (j) became C.R.C., Rule 5.546(a), (c), (e), (f), (g), (j), respectively.

See In re Thomas F. (2003) 113 C.A.4th 1249, 1254, 7 C.R.3d 19 [in jurisdictional hearing of wardship proceeding, minor's due process rights were violated when trial judge refused to allow minor to call four witnesses due to defense counsel's failure to disclose her intent to call them; reciprocal discovery provisions of P.C. 1054 et seq. (5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §30 et seq.) do not automatically apply to juvenile court proceedings, and judge had not ordered reciprocal discovery consistent with those sections].

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§612, 860 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Infants k.201

42 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

A. In General.

7. Immunity of Witnesses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 42

[§ 42] Immunity of Witnesses.

The Juvenile Court Law does not cover the subject of granting immunity to witnesses claiming the privilege against self-incrimination, but C.R.C., Rule 1421 fills the statutory gap. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §568 et seq.)

(1) If it appears that the testimony may tend to incriminate, the judge must advise the witness of the privilege; and if the witness claims the privilege, the judge may grant the appropriate immunity. (C.R.C., Rule 1421(a), (b).)

(2) In a Welf.C. 602 proceeding (based on a charge of crime), if the prosecuting attorney makes a request for an order that the witness answer a question or produce evidence, the judge must proceed under P.C. 1324. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §489.) "The prosecuting attorney may request an order granting the witness use or transactional immunity." (C.R.C., Rule 1421(c).)

(3) In a Welf.C. 300 (dependency) or 601 (delinquency) proceeding, the witness is given only use immunity. (C.R.C., Rule 1421(d).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
C.R.C., Rule 1421 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.548 in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§621, 879 et seq.

(1) Advice as to privilege: C.R.C., Rule 1421(a), (b) were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.548(a), (b), respectively, in 2006.

(2) Request for order: C.R.C., Rule 1421(c) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.548(c) in 2006.

(3) Use immunity: C.R.C., Rule 1421(d) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.548(d) in 2006.

43 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

B. Detention Hearing.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 43

[§ 43] Detention Hearing.

(1) Delinquency or Crime. Detention hearing procedures for minors believed to be delinquent or guilty of a criminal violation are specified in Welf.C. 635 and 636 and C.R.C., Rule 1471 et seq. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §740 et seq.; 1 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice, Chap. 4.) (On the burden and standard of proof, see 1 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice §4.25 et seq.; on presenting testimony, see 1 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice §4.33; on prima facie showing as prerequisite for detention, see C.R.C., Rule 1474; 1 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice §4.37.)

In making the findings for an order of detention, the court may rely solely on written police reports, probation reports, or other documents. (C.R.C., Rule 1473(c).) The minor, the minor's parent or guardian, and their attorneys are entitled to inspect and receive copies of the reports or documents (C.R.C., Rule 1473(a)), and the judge must give the advice of rights required by C.R.C., Rule 1412, which includes the right to confront and cross-examine persons who prepared reports and documents and witnesses called to testify (C.R.C., Rule 1472(a)).

(2) Dependency. Detention hearing procedures for dependency cases are specified in Welf.C. 315 et seq. and C.R.C., Rule 1444 et seq. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §670 et seq.; 2 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice §17.9 et seq.) (On examination by court and presentation of evidence, see Welf.C. 319; C.R.C., Rule 1444(b); on sufficiency of documentary evidence, see C.R.C., Rule 1445(b); on cross-examination of preparer of document, see C.R.C., Rule 1444(c)(1); on cross-examination of person examined by judge, see C.R.C., Rule 1444(c)(2).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Delinquency or Crime. C.R.C., Rule 1412 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.534 in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1471 et seq. were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.752 et seq. in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1472(a) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.754(a) in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1473(a) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.756(a) in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1473(c) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.756(c) in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1474 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.758 in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §819 et seq.(2) Dependency. C.R.C., Rule 1444(b) and (c) were relettered C.R.C., Rule 1444(c) and (d), respectively, in 2002.

C.R.C., Rule 1444 et seq. were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.674 et seq. in 2006. C.R.C., Rule 1444(c), (d) became C.R.C., Rule 5.674(c), (d), respectively.

C.R.C., Rule 1445(b) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.676(b) in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §598 et seq.

See C.E.B., 1 Juvenile Dependency Practice 2d, §2.31 et seq.

44 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

C. Fitness Hearing.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 44

[§ 44] Fitness Hearing.

Five factors must be evaluated in determining whether a minor who is the subject of a petition under Welf.C. 602 (supra, §37) is a fit and proper subject for treatment under the juvenile law. (See Welf.C. 707; C.R.C., Rule 1480 et seq.; People v. Superior Court (Steven S.) (1981) 119 C.A.3d 162, 178, 173 C.R. 788 [sufficiency of evidence relating to the five factors]; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §754 et seq.; 2 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice, Chap. 5; 37 A.L.R.5th 703 [applicability of rules of evidence in hearing on transfer of minor to adult criminal court].) (On admissibility of probation officer's report and any other relevant evidence, see C.R.C., Rule 1482(c); on minor's right to testify, see Sheila O. v. Superior Court (1981) 125 C.A.3d 812, 816, 817, 178 C.R. 418; on use of minor's statements in fitness evaluation to impeach minor in subsequent criminal trial, see People v. Macias (1997) 16 C.4th 739, 756, 66 C.R.2d 659, 941 P.2d 838, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §368; on discovery in fitness proceedings, see supra, §41.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
C.R.C., Rule 1480 et seq. were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.766 et seq. in 2006.

C.R.C., Rule 1482(c), on admissibility of the probation officer's report and other relevant evidence, was relettered C.R.C., Rule 1482(b) in 2000. C.R.C., Rule 1482(b) became C.R.C., Rule 5.770(b) in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §835 et seq.

45 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

D. Jurisdiction Hearing.

1. Delinquency or Crime.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 45

[§ 45] Delinquency or Crime.

The jurisdiction hearing on the grounds of the petition filed under Welf.C. 601 (delinquency) or 602 (crime) is covered in Welf.C. 700 et seq. and C.R.C., Rule 1485 et seq. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §§555, 781 et seq.; 1 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice, Chap. 7.) (On constitutional rights of minor, see supra, §39; on statutory rights of minor, see supra, §40.) The following important rules govern a contested hearing:

(1) Burden of Proof in Welf.C. 602 Proceeding. "Proof beyond a reasonable doubt supported by evidence, legally admissible in the trial of criminal cases, must be adduced to support a finding that the minor is a person described by Section 602." (Welf.C. 701, stating holding of In re Winship (1970) 397 U.S. 358, 90 S.Ct. 1068, 25 L.Ed.2d 368, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §574; see also C.R.C., Rule 1488(e).)

(2) Burden of Proof in Welf.C. 601 Proceeding. "[A] preponderance of evidence, legally admissible in the trial of civil cases must be adduced to support a finding that the minor is a person described by Section ... 601." (Welf.C. 701; see also C.R.C., Rule 1488(e).)

(3) Admissibility of Evidence. "In a section 601 matter, the admission and exclusion of evidence shall be in accordance with the Evidence Code as it applies in civil cases. In a section 602 matter, the admission and exclusion of evidence shall be in accordance with the Evidence Code as it applies in criminal cases." (C.R.C., Rule 1488(b); see also Welf.C. 701.)

(4) Implied Objections by Unrepresented Minor. "If the child is not represented by counsel, objections that could have been made to the evidence shall be deemed made." (C.R.C., Rule 1488(d).)

(5) Premature Reading of Probation Report. "Except as otherwise provided by law, the court shall not read or consider any portion of a probation report relating to the contested petition prior to or during a contested jurisdiction hearing." (C.R.C., Rule 1488(c); see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §787.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
C.R.C., Rule 1485 et seq. were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.774 et seq. in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §855 et seq.

(1) Burden of Proof in Welf.C. 602 Proceeding. C.R.C., Rule 1488(e) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.780(e) in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §878.

(2) Burden of Proof in Welf.C. 601 Proceeding. C.R.C., Rule 1488(e) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.780(e) in 2006.

(3) Admissibility of Evidence. C.R.C., Rule 1488(b) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.780(b) in 2006.

(4) Implied Objections by Unrepresented Minor. C.R.C., Rule 1488(d) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.780(d) in 2006.

(5) Premature Reading of Probation Report. C.R.C., Rule 1488(c) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.780(c) in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §871. West's Key Number Digest, Infants k.196

46 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

D. Jurisdiction Hearing.

2. Dependency.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 46

[§ 46] Dependency.

The procedure for a jurisdiction hearing in Welf.C. 300 proceedings (dependency) is set forth in Welf.C. 345 et seq. and C.R.C., Rule 1449 et seq. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §679 et seq.; 2 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice, Chap. 18.) The following important rules deal with evidence and witnesses:

(1) Preponderance Standard Applicable. Proof by a preponderance of the evidence is sufficient. (C.R.C., Rule 1450(f); see In re Cheryl H. (1984) 153 C.A.3d 1098, 1112, 200 C.R. 789, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §37; In re Jennifer V. (1988) 197 C.A.3d 1206, 1210, 243 C.R. 441 [following Cheryl H. and observing that it is only in dispositional phase that clear and convincing standard may come into play].)

(2) Evidence Code Governs. Except as provided in Welf.C. 355.1 and C.R.C., Rule 1450(c)-(e), the admission and exclusion of evidence is governed by the Evidence Code as it applies to civil cases. (C.R.C., Rule 1450(b).) Welf.C. 355.1 creates presumptions from circumstantial evidence of the minor's condition, or the parent's or guardian's criminal history, which affect the burden of producing evidence. (See In re Cindy L. (1997) 17 C.4th 15, 31, 69 C.R.2d 803, 947 P.2d 1340, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §172 [approving court-created "child dependency hearsay exception"]; In re Kathleen W. (1987) 190 C.A.3d 68, 73, 235 C.R. 205 [denial of minor's request for hearing to establish foundational facts for admission of polygraph examination taken by agreement pursuant to Ev.C. 351.1 (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §95) constituted reversible error]; In re Amber B. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 682, 687, 236 C.R. 623, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §108 [applicability of Kelly-Frye test for admissibility of scientific evidence (observation of child's behavior in playing with anatomically correct dolls)]; In re Mark C. (1992) 7 C.A.4th 433, 441, 443, 8 C.R.2d 856 [admissibility of character evidence showing father's lack of propensity to molest children]; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §661.)

(3) Social Study Admissible and Sufficient To Support Finding. A social study, with hearsay evidence contained in it, is admissible and is sufficient to support a finding that the child is described by Welf.C. 300. The social study must be provided to all parties and their counsel within a reasonable time before the hearing, and the report's preparer must be made available for cross-examination at the request of any party. (C.R.C., Rule 1450(c).) If a party objects to particular hearsay in the report and provides the petitioner with reasonable time to meet the objection, the evidence, with certain exceptions, may not be found to support a jurisdictional finding in and of itself. (C.R.C., Rule 1450(d).) (See In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 C.3d 368, 381, 272 C.R. 787, 795 P.2d 1244, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §689 [social studies containing hearsay and even multiple hearsay are competent evidence on which to base finding of jurisdiction under Welf.C. 300]; In re Donald R. (1987) 195 C.A.3d 703, 710, 240 C.R. 821; In re Kailee B. (1993) 18 C.A.4th 719, 726, 22 C.R.2d 485 [minor's hearsay statements contained in social study report were admissible notwithstanding that minor was incompetent to testify].)

(4) Objections Deemed Made. "Objections that could have been made to evidence introduced shall be deemed to have been made by any parent or guardian who is present at the hearing and unrepresented by counsel, unless the court finds that the parent or guardian has made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the right to counsel. Objections that could have been made to evidence introduced shall be deemed to have been made by any unrepresented child." (Welf.C. 355(a).)

(5) Spousal Privileges Inapplicable. "The privilege not to testify or to be called as a witness against a spouse, and the confidential marital communication privilege, shall not apply to dependency proceedings." (C.R.C., Rule 1450(e).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
C.R.C., Rule 1449 et seq. were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.682 et seq. in 2006.

See C.E.B., 1 Juvenile Dependency Practice 2d, §4.1 et seq.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §608 et seq.(1) Preponderance Standard Applicable. C.R.C., Rule 1450(f) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.684(f) in 2006.

(2) Evidence Code Governs. C.R.C., Rule 1450(b) and C.R.C., Rule 1450(c)-(e) were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.684(b) and C.R.C., Rule 5.684(c)-(e) in 2006.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §616.

(3) Social Study Admissible and Sufficient To Support Finding. C.R.C., Rule 1450(c) and (d) were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.684(c) and (d) in 2006.

Hearsay statements contained in a social study of a minor who is the subject of a Welf.C. 300 hearing and who is deemed to be incompetent as a witness because of an inability at the time of the testimony to understand the obligation to tell the truth or to distinguish between truth and falsehood are admissible under Welf.C. 355(c)(1)(B), even if the statements do not meet the requirements of the judicially created child dependency hearsay exception (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §172). However, because of due process concerns, statements of this type may not be relied on exclusively, unless the court finds that the time, content, and circumstances of the statements provide sufficient indicia of reliability. (In re Lucero L. (2000) 22 Cal.4th 1227, 1242, 1247, 96 Cal.2d 56, 998 P.2d 1019.)

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §618.(5) Spousal Privileges Inapplicable. C.R.C., Rule 1450(e) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.684(e) in 2006.

47 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VI. EVIDENCE IN JUVENILE COURT

E. Disposition Hearing.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 47

[§ 47] Disposition Hearing.

(1) Delinquency or Crime. The disposition hearing is governed by Welf.C. 702 or Welf.C. 706, and C.R.C., Rule 1492 et seq. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §§576 et seq., 790 et seq.; 1 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice, Chap. 9.)

"The court shall receive in evidence and consider the social study and any relevant evidence offered by the petitioner, the child, or the parent or guardian. The court may require production of other relevant evidence on its own motion. In the order of disposition the court shall state the social study has been read and considered by the court." (C.R.C., Rule 1492(b); see also Welf.C. 706 [additionally specifying that relevant evidence includes any written or oral statement offered by victim or victim's relatives, and that in order of disposition court must state that both social study and "any statement" were considered].)

The requirement that the court receive the social study and other relevant evidence does not mandate that the court grant the minor's request to cross-examine the probation officer who prepared the social study. The provisions of Ev.C. 352, allowing the court to limit relevant evidence if it is cumulative, time consuming, or likely to confuse (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §17), are necessarily implied in Welf.C. 706. (In re Romeo C. (1995) 33 C.A.4th 1838, 1843, 1844, 40 C.R.2d 85; see 17 J. Juvenile Law 202 [Romeo].)

(2) Dependency. The disposition hearing is governed by Welf.C. 358 and C.R.C., Rule 1455 et seq. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §692 et seq.; 2 C.E.B., Juvenile Court Practice, Chap. 20.) The court must receive the social study, any study or evaluation prepared by a child advocate appointed by the court, and any other relevant and material evidence that is offered. Any judgment and order of disposition must specifically state that the social study and the child advocate evaluation, if any, were read and considered. (Welf.C. 358(b); see also C.R.C., Rule 1455(b); In re Basilio T. (1992) 4 C.A.4th 155, 167, 5 C.R.2d 450; In re Keyonie R. (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1569, 1571, 1572, 50 C.R.2d 221 [holding of In re Malinda S. (1990) 51 C.3d 368, 381, 272 C.R. 787, 795 P.2d 1244, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §689, allowing admission of hearsay contained in social service reports, is not limited to jurisdiction hearings but applies to 12-month and selection and implementation hearings as well].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Delinquency or Crime. C.R.C., Rule 1492 was amended in 2002 to change "shall receive" to "must receive" and "shall state" to "must state".

C.R.C., Rule 1492 et seq. were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.785 et seq. in 2006. C.R.C., Rule 1492(b) became C.R.C., Rule 5.785(b).

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §884 et seq.

(2) Dependency. C.R.C., Rule 1455 et seq. were renumbered C.R.C., Rule 5.690 et seq. in 2006. C.R.C., Rule 1455(b) became C.R.C., Rule 5.690(b).

See C.E.B., 1 Juvenile Dependency Practice 2d, §5.1 et seq.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §624 et seq.

Malinda case:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §618. West's Key Number Digest, Infants k.222

48 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VII. EVIDENCE IN OTHER SPECIAL COURTS

A. Family Conciliation Court.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 48

[§ 48] Family Conciliation Court.

The Family Conciliation Court Law seeks "to provide means for the reconciliation of spouses and the amicable settlement of domestic and family controversies." (Family C. 1801.) In counties in which the superior court elects to utilize this procedure, a superior court judge sits as the "family conciliation court." (Family C. 1810, 1811.) The hearing is an informal conference designed to effect a settlement of differences (Family C. 1838), not to determine issues triable in the divorce action; hence, the rules of trial procedure and evidence would appear to have little, if any, application. (See generally Sawdey v. Superior Court (1961) 195 C.A.2d 729, 732, 16 C.R. 156 [court commissioner had power to require wife to meet with him in private, without her counsel present]; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4d.2; 11 Summary (9th), Husband and Wife, §§116 et seq., 123.)

All communications, verbal or written, from a party to the judge, commissioner, or counselor conducting the hearing are deemed to be official information within the meaning of Ev.C. 1040 (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §246). (Family C. 1818.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §90 et seq.

49 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VII. EVIDENCE IN OTHER SPECIAL COURTS

B. Small Claims Court.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 49

[§ 49] Small Claims Court.

The Small Claims Act dispenses with formal pleadings (C.C.P. 116.310), prohibits representation by attorneys or agents (C.C.P. 116.530(a)), and provides for an "informal" hearing to "dispense justice promptly, fairly, and inexpensively" (C.C.P. 116.510). (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4d.2; 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Courts, §273 et seq.)

The rules of evidence are not observed, and ordinary trial procedure is equally inappropriate. "At the hearings the presentation of evidence may be sharply curtailed, and the proceedings often terminated in a short space of time. The awards--although made in accordance with substantive law--are often based on the application of common sense; and the spirit of compromise and conciliation attends the proceedings." (Sanderson v. Niemann (1941) 17 C.2d 563, 573, 110 P.2d 1025; see Houghtaling v. Superior Court (1993) 17 C.A.4th 1128, 1138, 1139, 21 C.R.2d 855, 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Courts, §306 [relevant hearsay evidence may be received in small claims action, subject to law of privilege and court's power to weigh prejudice against probative value]; 1 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §1.14.)

Although the plaintiff and defendant may offer evidence by witnesses, the judge may also consult witnesses informally and otherwise investigate the controversy. (C.C.P. 116.520.) Certain types of parties need not appear personally and may submit declarations to serve as evidence supporting their claims. (C.C.P. 116.540.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

50 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VIII. EVIDENCE IN ARBITRATION PROCEEDINGS

A. Contractual Arbitration.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 50

[§ 50] Contractual Arbitration.

At a hearing pursuant to an arbitration agreement, the parties are entitled to be heard, to present evidence, and to cross-examine witnesses, "but rules of evidence and rules of judicial procedure need not be observed." (C.C.P. 1282.2(d).) (See generally 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4e; 4 Am.Jur.2d (1995 ed.), Alternative Dispute Resolution §187 et seq.; 5 San Diego L. Rev. 1, 22; 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §484 et seq.) The parties may obtain subpenas for witnesses and documents, and the neutral arbitrator may also issue them on his or her own determination. (C.C.P. 1282.6(a).)

With the exception that depositions for discovery may not be taken unless leave to do so is granted by the arbitrator, parties to an arbitration agreement have the same rights to take depositions and obtain discovery as parties to a civil action, whenever (1) the arbitration involves death or injury from a wrongful act or negligence, or (2) the arbitration agreement so provides. (C.C.P. 1283.05(a)-(e), 1283.1; see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §29 et seq.) And, on application by a party, the neutral arbitrator may require a deposition to be taken for use as evidence but not for discovery, whenever the witness cannot be compelled to attend or the interests of justice so require. (C.C.P. 1283.)

With specified exceptions (e.g., matters arising out of collective bargaining agreements or actions involving personal injury or death), where the controversy exceeds $ 50,000, either party may require the other to provide a list of the witnesses it intends to call and a list of the documents it intends to introduce, provided the demanding party provides lists of its own at the time of the demand. (C.C.P. 1282.2(a)(2)(A).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 4 Am.Jur.2d (2007 ed.), Alternative Dispute Resolution §161 et seq.; 76 Am.Jur. Trials 1 [evidentiary practice and procedure in arbitration hearings].

Discovery: C.C.P. 1283.05(b) gives arbitrators the power "to enforce the rights, remedies, procedures, duties, liabilities, and obligations of discovery by the imposition of the same terms, conditions, consequences, liabilities, sanctions, and penalties as can be or may be imposed in like circumstances in a civil action," but it does not require them to do so. (Alexander v. Blue Cross of Calif. (2001) 88 C.A.4th 1082, 1088, 106 C.R.2d 431 [arbitrator did not exceed powers in refusing to deem admitted requests for admissions to which defendant failed to respond].) West's Key Number Digest, Arbitration k.35 et seq.

51 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

VIII. EVIDENCE IN ARBITRATION PROCEEDINGS

B. Judicial Arbitration.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 51

[§ 51] Judicial Arbitration.

The rules of evidence for civil actions apply in hearings under the mandatory judicial arbitration statute (C.C.P. 1141.10 et seq.). (C.R.C., Rule 1613(b); see 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §553.)

There are, however, special provisions requiring admission of the following materials: (1) "written reports of any expert witness, medical records and bills (including physiotherapy, nursing, and prescription bills), documentary evidence of loss of income, property damage repair bills or estimates, police reports concerning an accident which gave rise to the case, other bills and invoices, purchase orders, checks, written contracts, and similar documents prepared and maintained in the ordinary course of business" (see C.E.B., Judicial Arbitration §§2.35, 3.31; 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §554); (2) written statements of other witnesses in the form of affidavits or declarations under penalty of perjury (see C.E.B., Judicial Arbitration §§2.38, 3.33; 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §555); (3) depositions not otherwise admissible under C.C.P. 2025(u) (see C.E.B., Judicial Arbitration §§2.40, 3.38; 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §556). (C.R.C., Rule 1613(b).)

C.C.P. 2002 et seq., governing the parties' discovery rights and obligations in civil actions, apply to judicial arbitration hearings. (C.R.C., Rule 1612; see C.E.B., Judicial Arbitration §§2.46, 3.35; 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §548.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
C.R.C., Rule 1613(b) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 3.823(b) in 2006.

Written reports of expert witness: See C.E.B., Effective Use of ADR, §11.30.

Written statements of other witnesses: See C.E.B., Effective Use of ADR, §11.32.

Depositions not otherwise admissible: C.C.P. 2025(u), on the admissibility of depositions, was repealed and replaced by C.C.P. 2025.620 in 2004 without substantive change. (See C.E.B., Effective Use of ADR, §§11.34, 11.35.)

Applicability of discovery statutes: C.R.C., Rule 1612 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 3.822 in 2006. (See C.E.B., Effective Use of ADR, §11.5.)

52 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

A. Scope of Treatment.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 52

[§ 52] Scope of Treatment.

(1) In General. The extent to which the common law or "technical" rules of evidence apply in proceedings before administrative bodies or officers is impossible to state definitively. Administrative agencies are numerous and varied in their functions and operations; statutory and case law coverage of the subject is inadequate; and administrative procedure is in a transitional stage of experimentation and development. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4a; 4 Jones 6th, Chap. 30; Prefatory Note, Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981), 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 1; 15 Hastings L. J. 369; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §345 et seq.) However, an attempt will be made in this and succeeding sections to outline the principal evidence problems that arise and to cite authorities that develop the topics in more detail.

(2) Determinations and Decisions Reached Outside Formal Hearing Process. In 1995, the Legislature amended the Administrative Procedure Act by adding Govt.C. 11400 et seq., effective July 1, 1997. The new provisions established procedures for informal hearings, emergency decisions, declaratory decisions, and alternative dispute resolution that may be used in addition to the Act's existing formal hearing procedures. (See 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §30.) Insofar as the new provisions relate to discovery and the admissibility and introduction of evidence, they are noted in the present work. (See infra, §53 et seq.)

(3) Matters Outside Scope. The following related matters are not within the scope of a work on California Evidence:

(a) Procedural due process rights under the Constitutions and statutes. (See 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §518 et seq.)

(b) Administrative procedure apart from evidence problems. (See 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §§1, 28 et seq.)

(c) Judicial review of administrative decisions. (See 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §§30, 257 et seq.; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §103 et seq.; C.E.B., California Administrative Mandamus 2d (1988).)

(d) Proceedings of administrative agencies acting in a quasi-legislative capacity. (See Southern Calif. Jockey Club v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1950) 36 C.2d 167, 170, 223 P.2d 1; 55 Harv. L. Rev. 402 [distinguishing rules for determining "legislative facts" and "adjudicative facts"]; 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §129 et seq.)

(e) Federal administrative agencies and their evidence problems. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4c; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §327 et seq.; 2 Federal Procedure, L.Ed., Administrative Procedure, §2:161 et seq.; 6 A.L.R. Fed. 76 [hearsay].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §344.(3) Matters Outside Scope.

(a) Procedural due process rights:

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §657 et seq.

(d) Proceedings of administrative agencies:

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §166 et seq.

(e) Federal administrative agencies: See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §327 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.458 et seq.

53 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

B. California Administrative Agencies.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 53

[§ 53] California Administrative Agencies.

A rough classification of California administrative agencies, for purposes of determining applicable rules of evidence, is as follows:

(1) Constitutional State Agencies With Judicial Powers. The California Constitution either creates, or authorizes the Legislature to create, a number of state agencies. Two examples are the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board and the Public Utilities Commission, which were created pursuant to constitutional enabling provisions that in some respects make them the equivalent of courts. Statutes comprehensively implement the enabling provisions, and each commission has power to make regulations on matters of procedure, including evidence. (See generally 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §§3, 20, 343; 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §§889 et seq., 909 et seq.; on workers' compensation, see also C.E.B., Workers' Compensation Practice 3d, Chaps. 8, 9.)

(2) The State Bar of California. This unique agency, operating through a Board of Governors, Committee of Bar Examiners, and State Bar Court, regulates admission to the Bar and the conduct of attorneys. (See B. & P.C. 6000 et seq.; Brotsky v. State Bar (1962) 57 C.2d 287, 300, 19 C.R. 153, 368 P.2d 697; Noland v. State Bar (1965) 63 C.2d 298, 303, 46 C.R. 305, 405 P.2d 129; In re Morse (1995) 11 C.4th 184, 205, 44 C.R.2d 620, 900 P.2d 1170, 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §579 [describing Supreme Court's role in reviewing discipline recommended by Review Department of State Bar Court]; 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §§358 et seq., 374 et seq., 625 et seq.)

(3) Other State Agencies: Administrative Procedure Act. Most other state agencies were created by the Legislature or, in a few cases, by the voters through the initiative process (e.g., the Fair Political Practices Commission; see 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §204). Formerly, Govt.C. 11501 specified which agencies were covered by the Administrative Procedure Act. However, a new version of Govt.C. 11501 became effective on July 1, 1997, and it provides that the applicability of the Act's formal hearing provisions (Govt.C. 11500 et seq.) to each agency is to be determined by the statutes relating to that agency. Also, on the same date, a new Chapter 4.5, Govt.C. 11400 et seq. (the "administrative adjudication provisions" of the Act), became effective (see supra, §52), and these sections apply to all agencies of the state, except as otherwise expressly provided by statute (see, e.g., Pub.Util.C. 1701 [Govt.C. 11400 et seq. are inapplicable in Public Utilities Commission hearings]). (Govt.C. 11410.20.) (For a discussion of the Act, see C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice, Appendix; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §28 et seq.)

(4) Local Agencies. These are too numerous to recite, but include county boards of supervisors, city councils, civil service commissions, and retirement boards. Generally, local agencies are not covered by the Act's hearing procedures, but a specific statute may make them applicable or the agency may elect to adopt them. (Govt.C. 11410.30, 11410.40; see C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice, §1.29; on procedural due process requirements, which are applicable to all agencies, see 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §518 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Constitutional State Agencies With Judicial Powers.

Cross-References: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §§2, 13, 345; 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §§1084 et seq., 1106 et seq.(3) Other State Agencies: Administrative Procedure Act.

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §274.

(4) Local Agencies.

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §657 et seq.

54 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

C. Basic Principles.

1. Right To Present Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 54

[§ 54] Right To Present Evidence.

(1) In General. The right to notice and hearing, a basic element of administrative due process (see 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §518), includes the right to present evidence and argument. This right is recognized in all of the administrative procedure acts. (See Govt.C. 11509, 11513; Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981), §4-211, 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 85; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §§294, 302.)

(2) Provisions of Administrative Procedure Act. An agency conducting an adjudicative proceeding must "give the person to which the agency action is directed notice and an opportunity to be heard, including the opportunity to present and rebut evidence." (Govt.C. 11425.10(a).)

Each party has the right "to call and examine witnesses; to introduce exhibits; to cross-examine opposing witnesses on any matter relevant to the issues even though that matter was not covered in the direct examination; to impeach any witness regardless of which party first called him or her to testify; and to rebut the evidence against him or her." (Govt.C. 11513(b); see Mathew Zaheri Corp. v. New Motor Vehicle Bd. (1997) 55 C.A.4th 1305, 1313, 64 C.R.2d 705, 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, Supp., §58 [in New Motor Vehicle Board proceedings, ex parte communication between franchisor's counsel and judge concerning threats by dealer did not violate Govt.C. 11513; reliance on secretly received evidence, with no opportunity for rebuttal, would constitute violation, but there was no indication that this information influenced judge's findings]; on right of confrontation and right to cross-examine, see Jennings v. Jones (1985) 165 C.A.3d 1083, 1090, 212 C.R. 134 [pretermination hearing on welfare benefits].)

(3) Discretion To Exclude. "The presiding officer has discretion to exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will necessitate undue consumption of time." (Govt.C. 11513(f); see Fairfield v. Superior Court (1975) 14 C.3d 768, 782, 122 C.R. 543, 537 P.2d 375 [in dispute over denial of use permit, proof that councilmen made prehearing statements opposing application would not disqualify them and would thus be excludable on relevancy grounds].) However, the unreasonable curtailment of necessary relevant evidence on a party's claim or defense is a denial of a fair hearing which calls for annulment of the agency determination. (See King v. Board of Med. Examiners (1944) 65 C.A.2d 644, 649, 650, 151 P.2d 282; Evans v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1945) 71 C.A.2d 244, 248, 162 P.2d 488; Kaiser Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1952) 109 C.A.2d 54, 57, 240 P.2d 57.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §§298, 305.

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §657.

(3) Discretion To Exclude. See Sinaiko v. Superior Court (2004) 122 C.A.4th 1133, 1142, 19 C.R.3d 371 [in proceeding to revoke physician's license, Medical Board of California denied physician right to fair hearing, where it disqualified his experts on ground that they did not review individual cases in sufficient detail and offer opinions specific to allegations; board's objections went to weight, not admissibility, of testimony].

55 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

C. Basic Principles.

2. Technical Rules of Admissibility Not Applicable.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 55

[§ 55] Technical Rules of Admissibility Not Applicable.

(1) In General. Although it is difficult to generalize in a field so uncertain (see supra, §52), two basic principles have found recognition in the case law and statutes governing most types of administrative agencies. The first is that the admission of evidence is not controlled by normal trial rules. For example, in a proceeding held under the optional informal hearing provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act, "[t]he presiding officer may limit the use of witnesses, testimony, evidence, and argument, and may limit or eliminate the use of pleadings, intervention, discovery, prehearing conferences, and rebuttal." (Govt.C. 11445.40(b).) And Govt.C. 11513(c), relating to formal hearings, states: "The hearing need not be conducted according to technical rules relating to evidence and witnesses. Any relevant evidence shall be admitted if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of the existence of any common law or statutory rule which might make improper the admission of the evidence over objection in civil actions." Similarly, Lab.C. 5708 declares that the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board or workers' compensation judge "shall not be bound by the common law or statutory rules of evidence and procedure, but may make inquiry in the manner, through oral testimony and records, which is best calculated to ascertain the substantial rights of the parties and carry out justly the spirit and provisions of this division." (See also Pub.Util.C. 1701 [Public Utilities Commission: in conduct of hearings "the technical rules of evidence need not be applied"]; Govt.C. 65010(a) [formal rules of evidence and procedure do not apply in zoning proceedings].)

Illustrations are numerous. (See Lake v. Reed (1997) 16 C.4th 448, 461, 65 C.R.2d 860, 940 P.2d 311 [unsworn police report was admissible in driver's license suspension hearing, as it was type of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely]; Anderson v. Board of Dental Examiners (1915) 27 C.A. 336, 339, 149 P. 1006 [to require proceedings according to technical legal rules "would have the effect of seriously impairing the successful performance of the duties for which that body was created"]; Tobinski v. Board of Med. Examiners (1942) 49 C.A.2d 591, 594, 121 P.2d 861 [hospital records may not have been properly authenticated, but strict rules not controlling]; Stuck v. Board of Med. Examiners (1949) 94 C.A.2d 751, 760, 211 P.2d 389; Mast v. State Bd. of Optometry (1956) 139 C.A.2d 78, 85, 293 P.2d 148 [affidavit]; Floresta v. City Council of San Leandro (1961) 190 C.A.2d 599, 608, 12 C.R. 182, citing the text; Cow Hollow Imp. Club v. Board of Permit App. (1966) 245 C.A.2d 160, 172, 53 C.R. 610, citing the text [opinions of interested parties held admissible in proceeding before Board of Permit Appeals reviewing decision of Zoning Administrator]; McCoy v. Board of Retirement (1986) 183 C.A.3d 1044, 1055, 228 C.R. 567 [proceeding before retirement board to obtain service-connected disability retirement allowance; stipulations between plaintiff and county, from plaintiff's earlier workers' compensation proceeding, admitted as aid in interpreting medical reports]; see also 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4c; Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981) §4-212, 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 86; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §345; for an analysis of federal and California cases, see 12 Pacific L. J.

1177 et seq.)

(2) Distinction: Evidence Must Be Relevant and Reliable. Although evidence in an administrative proceeding is not subject to the restrictive rules normally applied in trials, it will not be admitted unless it is both "relevant and reliable"; hence, evidence of a polygraph (lie detector) test, rejected in civil proceedings because its scientific basis has not yet been accepted (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §87 et seq.), is likewise inadmissible in administrative proceedings. (Aengst v. Board of Med. Quality Assur. (1980) 110 C.A.3d 275, 283, 167 C.R. 796.) (See also Redner v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1971) 5 C.3d 83, 95, 95 C.R. 447, 485 P.2d 799, 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §398 [film of applicant obtained by fraud and deceit could not be relied on by Appeals Board; such procedure violated command of Lab.C. 5708 to use methods "best calculated to ascertain the substantial rights of the parties and carry out justly the spirit and provisions" of workers' compensation laws]; Seering v. Department of Social Services (1987) 194 C.A.3d 298, 310, 239 C.R. 422 [administrative proceeding to revoke day care license; testimony based on "child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome" was inadmissible under Frye-Kelly standard (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42 et seq.) in absence of showing that scientific community accepted reliability of syndrome].)

The State Bar is unique in this respect as in others (see supra, §53). The normal rules of evidence are generally applicable to State Bar Court proceedings, but "no error in admitting or excluding evidence shall invalidate a finding of fact, decision or determination, unless the error complained of resulted in a denial of a fair hearing." (Rules of Procedure of the State Bar, Rule 214.) (See Werner v. State Bar (1944) 24 C.2d 611, 615, 150 P.2d 892 [dictum that rules of evidence need not be applied if unnecessary to ensure a fair hearing]; Younger v. State Bar (1974) 12 C.3d 274, 285, 113 C.R. 829, 522 P.2d 5 [although former Rules of Procedure of the State Bar, Rule 29, providing that only legal evidence should be received in formal proceedings, seemingly made the hearsay rule applicable, this question is uncertain in view of Werner dictum]; Conway v. State Bar (1989) 47 C.3d 1107, 1118, 255 C.R. 390, 767 P.2d 657, 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §369 [involuntary inactive enrollment proceeding under B. & P.C. 6007(c); statute requires that decision be based on "all the available evidence," thereby authorizing use of "reliable" hearsay]; 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §§624, 658.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §344.(2) Distinction: Evidence Must Be Relevant and Reliable.

See Ashford v. Culver City Unified School Dist. (2005) 130 C.A.4th 344, 350, 29 C.R.3d 728 [school district board erred in terminating district plumber based on unauthenticated videotapes purportedly showing that plumber, on days he had claimed as sick days, was engaged in activities inconsistent with his claims of sickness; absent authentication, no responsible person would have relied solely on videotapes to determine that on specific dates at issue plumber was engaged in activities depicted on tapes].

Redner v. Work. Comp. App. Bd.:

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §401.West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.461

56 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

C. Basic Principles.

3. Substantial Evidence Required.

a. General Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 56

[§ 56] General Rule.

The second basic principle is that evidence that may have come in under the relaxation of the common law rules will not necessarily be sufficient to support the agency determination on a judicial review. In other words, less emphasis is placed on admissibility of evidence than on its weight or probative force; and a court, reviewing the agency decision on certiorari or mandamus (8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §257), will sustain it only if there is substantial evidence to support it. (See C.C.P. 1094.5, 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §275; Pacific Freight Lines v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1945) 26 C.2d 234, 239, 157 P.2d 634 [verdict of coroner's jury, mere opinion without foundation in facts and contrary to uncontradicted testimony, not substantial evidence]; Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1934) 140 C.A. 482, 486, 35 P.2d 366 [award annulled on ground that subject called for expert evidence and none produced]; Brant v. Retirement Bd. of San Francisco (1943) 57 C.A.2d 721, 733, 135 P.2d 396; Simmons Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1945) 70 C.A.2d 664, 669, 161 P.2d 702 [award based on referee's view of machine, contrary to expert evidence that safety device not necessary]; Guarantee Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1948) 88 C.A.2d 410, 413, 199 P.2d 12 [award contrary to expert evidence, annulled]; Manning v. Watson (1952) 108 C.A.2d 705, 711, 239 P.2d 688, infra, §65; Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981) §5-116(c)(7), 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 127 [reversal is authorized if decision is "not supported by evidence that is substantial when viewed in light of the whole record"]; 12 Pacific L. J. 41 [proposal for uniform substantial evidence rule]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §537 et seq.; on review of determinations of California Public Utilities Commission, see 13 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 313.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §506 et seq.

57 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

C. Basic Principles.

3. Substantial Evidence Required.

b. Weight and Sufficiency.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 57

[§ 57] Weight and Sufficiency.

If substantial evidence is found in the record, its weight and sufficiency are regarded as matters of administrative discretion, and the decision will usually be upheld. (See Williamson v. Railroad Com. (1924) 193 C. 22, 35, 222 P. 803; Union Oil Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1931) 211 C. 398, 401, 295 P. 513 [findings based on probable inferences from circumstantial evidence, as distinguished from mere conjecture]; Nielsen v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1934) 220 C. 118, 122, 29 P.2d 852; Southern Calif. Jockey Club v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1950) 36 C.2d 167, 176, 223 P.2d 1 [notwithstanding admission of some irrelevant or incompetent evidence]; Winning v. Board of Dental Examiners (1931) 114 C.A. 658, 667, 300 P.2d 866 [contradictions in testimony, asserted improbability and other matters involving credibility of witnesses are for agency to resolve]; Camp v. Brock (1946) 75 C.A.2d 169, 172, 170 P.2d 702; Mast v. State Bd. of Optometry (1956) 139 C.A.2d 78, 86, 293 P.2d 148; Floresta v. City Council of San Leandro (1961) 190 C.A.2d 599, 608, 12 C.R. 182, citing the text; Security Environmental Systems v. South Coast Air Quality Management Dist. (1991) 229 C.A.3d 110, 132, 280 C.R. 108 [reasonable doubts must be resolved in favor of administrative decision].)

However, though an administrative agency is empowered to resolve conflicts in the evidence and make its own credibility determination, it must accept as true the intended meaning of uncontradicted and unimpeached evidence. (Martori Bros. Distributors v. Agricultural Lab. Rel. Bd. (1981) 29 C.3d 721, 727, 728, 175 C.R. 626, 631 P.2d 60.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.462

58 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

C. Basic Principles.

3. Substantial Evidence Required.

c. Legally Admissible Evidence: Residuum Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 58

[§ 58] Legally Admissible Evidence: Residuum Rule.

Must this "substantial evidence" (supra, §56) consist of competent, i.e., legally admissible evidence? The so-called residuum rule, announced in a leading New York case, requires a residuum of legally admissible evidence; and this view has considerable support in California decisions. (See In re Richardson (1930) 209 C. 492, 499, 288 P. 669 [State Bar disciplinary proceeding; "only legal evidence, as that term is understood among lawyers," will be considered on review]; Walker v. San Gabriel (1942) 20 C.2d 879, 881, 129 P.2d 349; Bley v. Board of Dental Examiners (1927) 87 C.A. 193, 195, 261 P. 1036 [inadmissible evidence "is to be disregarded in determining whether there is sufficient evidence to support the order"]; Masters v. Board of Dental Examiners (1936) 15 C.A.2d 506, 510, 59 P.2d 827; see also 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4b, p. 119; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §539.)

The residuum rule has been condemned by authoritative writers as an undesirable restriction on administrative powers, which virtually destroys the basic principle of freedom from technical rules of admissibility. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4b, p. 120.) And the Model State Administrative Procedure Act, which formerly authorized reversal if the decision was "unsupported by competent, material and substantial evidence," now provides that reversal is authorized only if the decision "is not supported by evidence that is substantial when viewed in light of the whole record before the court." (Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981) §5-116(c)(7), 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 127.) Under California's Administrative Procedure Act, hearsay evidence may constitute the sole support for a finding, but only if "it would be admissible over objection in civil actions." (Govt.C. 11513(d), added in 1992; infra, §66.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §508.

59 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

C. Basic Principles.

4. Illegally Obtained Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 59

[§ 59] Illegally Obtained Evidence.

(1) Exclusion Not Generally Required. The exclusionary rule has been held inapplicable in various disciplinary proceedings. (See Emslie v. State Bar (1974) 11 C.3d 210, 229, 113 C.R. 175, 520 P.2d 991 [attorney]; Governing Bd. of the Mountain View School Dist. of Los Angeles v. Metcalf (1974) 36 C.A.3d 546, 551, 111 C.R. 724 [teacher]; Pating v. Board of Med. Quality Assur. (1982) 130 C.A.3d 608, 624, 625, 182 C.R. 20 [doctor]; Gordon J. v. Santa Ana Unified School Dist. (1984) 162 C.A.3d 530, 542, 208 C.R. 657 [student]; 37 Hastings L. J. 1133 [exclusionary rule in public school administrative disciplinary proceedings]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §349; 20 A.L.R.4th 546 [attorney and physician disciplinary proceedings]; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §15.)

However, these decisions were based on a balancing of the costs and benefits of applying the exclusionary rule and they did not preclude its application in all administrative proceedings. (See, e.g., Emslie v. State Bar, supra, 11 C.3d 229 ["While we hold that the exclusionary rules are not part of administrative due process in State Bar disciplinary proceedings we do not intimate that circumstances could not be presented under which the constitutional demands of due process could not countenance use of evidence obtained by unlawful means in a proceeding conducted by such governmental agency or administrative arm of this court"]; on weight of authority in other jurisdictions favoring application of the exclusionary rule, see 1 LaFave 3d, §1.7(e).)

(2) Distinction: Close Nexus Between Unconstitutional Search and Agency Initiating Administrative Proceeding. In Dyson v. State Personnel Bd. (1989) 213 C.A.3d 711, 262 C.R. 112, plaintiff challenged his dismissal as a youth counselor at a Department of Youth Authority facility. The dismissal was based on the introduction at the administrative hearing of nine T-shirts and two intercoms belonging to the department that had been seized from plaintiff's home by the facility's security chief at the suggestion and with the cooperation of plaintiff's estranged wife. Prior to the administrative hearing, a criminal proceeding initiated against plaintiff on the department's complaint was dismissed after the evidence was excluded on the grounds that the search had violated plaintiff's constitutional rights. Held, the evidence should have been excluded from the administrative proceeding.

The court distinguished Emslie and Metcalf. Those cases involved searches by authorities having no relationship to the agency initiating the administrative proceeding, and suppression would have no deterrent effect. But in this case, "the unconstitutional search could not have a tighter nexus with the agency that seeks to profit from it," and the "policy that led to the exclusion of evidence in the related criminal proceeding fits foursquare with exclusion in the administrative proceedings." (213 C.A.3d 721.) (See also Finkelstein v. State Personnel Bd. (1990) 218 C.A.3d 264, 271, 267 C.R. 133 [distinguishing Dyson; search of plaintiff's briefcase by his supervisor uncovered evidence leading to disciplinary proceeding; because purpose of search was not to find evidence of criminal activity but to find confidential records requiring special storage, application of exclusionary rule would have no deterrent effect[.]

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Exclusion Not Generally Required. See Park v. Valverde (2007) 152 C.A.4th 877, 887, 61 C.R.3d 895 [even though all evidence obtained in connection with traffic stop was suppressed in criminal proceeding because stop was based on outdated police information indicating vehicle was stolen, suppression in administrative suspension proceeding arising from same incident was not required; relying on Emslie v. State Bar (1974) 11 C.3d 210, 113 C.R. 175, 520 P.2d 991, text, p. 64]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §348.

60 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

D. Policy Reasons for Relaxing Common Law Rules.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 60

[§ 60] Policy Reasons for Relaxing Common Law Rules.

A clearer understanding of the meaning and practical application of the foregoing principles (supra, §55 et seq.) will be gained from a recital of the chief reasons given for allowing departures from the ordinary rules of evidence:

(1) Many of the rules are designed for the jury system, to protect untrained jurors from being misled. This danger does not exist where the administrative agency is composed of trained specialists or uses expert examiners or hearing officers. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4b, p. 116; 55 Harv. L. Rev. 371, 416.)

(2) Judicial proceedings are usually adversary proceedings, in which the parties are represented by counsel capable of preparing and introducing evidence pursuant to the technical rules and of objecting to inadmissible evidence. This is not necessarily true or desirable in administrative hearings. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4b, p. 116; 55 Harv. L. Rev. 379, 383, 396.)

(3) In judicial proceedings, a judge with legal training passes on questions of admissibility; in administrative proceedings, the agency members or hearing officers may lack this training. (See 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §4b, p. 116; 4 Jones 6th, §30:3; 55 Harv. L. Rev. 396.)

(4) Administrative proceedings are often small matters, nonadversary in character; informality of procedure in such cases results in a desirable saving of time and expense. (See 55 Harv. L. Rev. 386.)

(5) The public policy basis of some statutes creating administrative agencies calls for procedure different from that governing court trials. (See 55 Harv. L. Rev. 365, 393.)

(6) The common law rules of evidence are in many respects outmoded and in need of reform; administrative agencies should by experimentation and example further the cause of evidentiary reform. (See 4 Jones 6th, §30:1; 55 Harv. L. Rev. 369.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

61 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

1. Burden of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 61

[§ 61] Burden of Proof.

The commonly declared rule that the burden is on the party having "the affirmative of the issue" applies in administrative proceedings. (See La Prade v. Department of Water & Power (1945) 27 C.2d 47, 51, 162 P.2d 13 [proceeding to discharge municipal employee; "The burden does not rest upon him to refute the charges made"]; Loew's v. California Emp. Stabilization Com. (1946) 76 C.A.2d 231, 238, 172 P.2d 938 [claim of unemployment benefits; burden on claimant to prove availability for work]; Mueller v. MacBan (1976) 62 C.A.3d 258, 271, 132 C.R. 222 [proceeding before Savings and Loan Commissioner on application for permission to institute stockholder's derivative suit; burden on stockholder to establish specified conditions for suit]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §360 et seq.; on workers' compensation proceeding, see Lab.C. 5705; McAllister v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 69 C.2d 408, 417, 71 C.R. 697, 445 P.2d 313, 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §222 [applicants must establish only that industrial causation of injury is reasonably probable]; C.E.B., Workers Compensation Practice 3d, §§8.45, 8.46; on Evidence Code's definition of burden of proof in judicial proceedings, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §6.)

As applied to licensing agencies, this means:

(1) The burden is on license applicants to establish their statutory qualifications. (Spears v. State Bar (1930) 211 C. 183, 188, 294 P. 697; Southern Calif. Jockey Club v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1950) 36 C.2d 167, 177, 223 P.2d 1.)

(2) In a disciplinary proceeding, the burden is on the agency to prove the grounds for suspension or revocation of a license, or for discharge of an employee. (Walker v. San Gabriel (1942) 20 C.2d 879, 880, 129 P.2d 349; La Prade v. Department of Water & Power, supra; Parker v. Fountain Valley (1981) 127 C.A.3d 99, 113, 179 C.R. 351 [termination of police officer for using excessive force in making arrest]; Webster v. Trustees of Calif. State University (1993) 19 C.A.4th 1456, 1463, 1464, 24 C.R.2d 150 [in proceeding to terminate professor who was over 70 for substandard job performance, it was error, although harmless, to place burden of proof on professor].)

(3) The burden of "going forward" or producing evidence may shift on an "affirmative defense" or on an issue peculiarly within the knowledge of the licensee. (Anderson v. Board of Dental Examiners (1915) 27 C.A. 336, 338, 149 P. 1006 [charge of having knowingly employed M, unlicensed person; burden on accused to show that M was licensed]; Whetstone v. Board of Dental Examiners (1927) 87 C.A. 156, 164, 261 P. 1077 [same]; see also Lab.C. 5705 [specifying affirmative defenses on which employer, in workers' compensation proceeding, has burden of proof].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §354 et seq.

McAllister v. Work. Comp. App. Bd.:

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §231.West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.460

62 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

2. Presumptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 62

[§ 62] Presumptions.

In Bell v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 11 C.A.4th 304, 13 C.R.2d 830, intoxilyzer tests, administered approximately one-half hour after plaintiff had been arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol, indicated plaintiff's blood-alcohol concentration exceeded 0.08%. At an administrative hearing, defendant Department of Motor Vehicles upheld the suspension of plaintiff's driving privilege. Plaintiff sought review by mandamus, and the trial judge directed defendant to set aside the suspension order on the ground there was insufficient evidence of plaintiff's blood-alcohol concentration at the time he was driving. Held, reversed. Veh.C. 23152(b), which creates a rebuttable presumption that a driver had an excessive blood-alcohol concentration when driving if the driver has an excessive blood-alcohol concentration when a chemical test is performed within 3 hours of driving, applies in an administrative suspension hearing. Although the statute states that the presumption arises "in any prosecution under this subdivision," the Legislature did not intend to impose different or more onerous proof requirements for establishing a driver's blood-alcohol concentration in administrative hearings. (11 C.A.4th 312.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.460

63 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

3. Quantum of Proof in Disciplinary Proceedings.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 63

[§ 63] Quantum of Proof in Disciplinary Proceedings.

(1) Criminal Law Requirements Not Applicable. Even though some administrative disciplinary proceedings may have penal consequences, the following strict requirements of quantum of proof peculiar to criminal actions do not apply:

(a) The requirement of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. (Webster v. Board of Dental Examiners (1941) 17 C.2d 534, 537, 110 P.2d 992; Daggett v. State Bd. of Funeral Directors & Embalmers (1941) 44 C.A.2d 742, 747, 112 P.2d 856; see 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §363.)

(b) The requirement of corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice. (Suckow v. Alderson (1920) 182 C. 247, 251, 187 P. 965; Murphy v. Board of Med. Examiners (1946) 75 C.A.2d 161, 168, 170 P.2d 510.)

(c) The requirement of corroboration to prove perjury. (Fischer v. State Bar (1936) 6 C.2d 671, 672, 58 P.2d 1277, 59 P.2d 805.)

(d) The requirement that the corpus delicti be established by independent evidence: Extrajudicial admissions of the petitioner may alone be sufficient to support disciplinary action. (Hansen v. Civil Service Bd. of Alameda (1957) 147 C.A.2d 732, 738, 305 P.2d 1012; Shakin v. Board of Med. Examiners (1967) 254 C.A.2d 102, 110, 62 C.R. 274.)

(2) Revocation or Suspension of Professional License. In a proceeding for revocation or suspension of a professional license, the proper standard should be "clear and convincing proof to a reasonable certainty and not a mere preponderance of the evidence." (Ettinger v. Board of Med. Quality Assur. (1982) 135 C.A.3d 853, 856, 185 C.R. 601; see Silva v. Superior Court (1993) 14 C.A.4th 562, 569, 17 C.R.2d 577 [following Ettinger; at hearing on Medical Board of California's application for interim order suspending physician's license under Govt.C. 11529, clear and convincing standard applies]; 74 A.L.R.4th 969 [necessity of expert testimony in proceeding to revoke license of physician, surgeon, or dentist]; on meaning of "clear and convincing evidence," see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §38.) However, under legislation enacted in 1985, only a preponderance of the evidence is required in proceedings to revoke or suspend the license of a community care facility (Health & Saf.C. 1551(b)), a residential care facility for the elderly (Health & Saf.C. 1569.51(b)), or a child day care facility (Health & Saf.C. 1596.887(b)).

(3) Revocation or Suspension of Nonprofessional Business License. In San Benito Foods v. Veneman (1996) 50 C.A.4th 1889, 58 C.R.2d 571, a food processor's state-issued license was suspended in an administrative proceeding in which the hearing officer applied the preponderance of the evidence standard. The processor petitioned for mandamus relief, and the trial judge denied the petition. Held, although the trial judge utilized the wrong standard of review in the writ proceeding, the hearing officer properly applied the preponderance of the evidence standard in the administrative proceeding. Under Ev.C. 115 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §35), the preponderance of the evidence standard applies "[e]xcept as otherwise provided by law." The food processing laws contain no indication of a legislative intent to require a higher standard of proof. Furthermore, a food processor's license is less like a doctor's or psychologist's license than it is like a license to operate a substance abuse treatment facility, a child day care facility, or a health care facility, and the statutes pertaining to the latter facilities (see supra) all explicitly impose a preponderance of the evidence standard. "Unlike the many time-consuming requirements which must be satisfied in order for an individual to obtain a professional license, the requirements for obtaining a food processor's license do not require the applicant to satisfy burdensome requirements but merely require the applicant to show good character and a sound financial position. Consequently, there is no rational basis for treating a food processor's license in the same manner as a professional's license." (50 C.A.4th 1894.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Criminal Law Requirements Not Applicable.

(a) Proof beyond reasonable doubt: See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §357.(3) Revocation or Suspension of Nonprofessional Business License. See Mann v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1999) 76 C.A.4th 312, 318, 90 C.R.2d 277 [preponderance standard applies to revocation of vehicle salesperson's license].

64 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

4. Relevancy.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 64

[§ 64] Relevancy.

(1) In General. Despite the relaxation of the so-called technical rules (supra, §55), the basic requirement of relevancy remains. (See, on meaning and test of relevancy, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §§4, 26 et seq.; for illustrations of circumstantial evidence held admissible and sufficient, see Western Grain & Sugar Products Co. v. Pillsbury (1916) 173 C. 135, 139, 159 P. 423 [finding of compensable death of missing person]; Union Oil Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1931) 211 C. 398, 401, 295 P. 513 [probable inferences from circumstantial evidence, to establish jurisdiction; i.e., death on land rather than in navigable waters]; and see also 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §350.) However, some of the common law rules of circumstantial evidence are "technical" in nature and should not be strictly applied in administrative proceedings. Thus, the Administrative Procedure Act states that relevant evidence is admissible "if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of the existence of any common law or statutory rule which might make improper the admission of the evidence over objection in civil actions." (Govt.C. 11513; see also Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981) §4-212(a), 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 86.)

(2) Evidence of Other Proceedings. Licensing and disciplinary agencies have been frequently presented with the question of admissibility of evidence of other proceedings involving the accused:

(a) It has been held that, in determining the nature or degree of discipline, prior criminal or disciplinary proceedings may be considered. (Herron v. State Bar (1944) 24 C.2d 53, 65, 147 P.2d 543; McGregor v. State Bar (1944) 24 C.2d 283, 288, 148 P.2d 865; Lewis v. State Bar (1973) 9 C.3d 704, 715, 108 C.R. 821, 511 P.2d 1173; 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §§609, 659.)

(b) In conformity with the general evidentiary rule, a prior criminal conviction has been regarded as hearsay on the issue of commission of acts of misconduct, and consequently insufficient by itself to sustain a disciplinary order. (Manning v. Watson (1952) 108 C.A.2d 705, 711, 239 P.2d 688, infra, §65.) It should be noted, however, that the Evidence Code created a hearsay exception making a felony conviction admissible in judicial proceedings (Ev.C. 1300; see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §271), and the rule in administrative proceedings may therefore be open to reexamination. (But see Los Angeles v. Civil Service Com. (1995) 39 C.A.4th 620, 629, 46 C.R.2d 256 [despite changes in Ev.C. 1300 making hearsay exception applicable where judgment of felony conviction is based on plea of nolo contendere, use of nolo contendere pleas as evidence in administrative proceedings remains barred].)

(c) Because of the fundamentally different objects of criminal and administrative proceedings, the favorable result of a prior criminal proceeding based on the same acts is not admissible. (Bold v. Board of Med. Examiners (1933) 135

C.A. 29, 35, 26 P.2d 707; Stuck v. Board of Med. Examiners (1949) 94 C.A.2d 751, 757, 211 P.2d 389.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Jaramillo v. State Bd. for Geologists & Geophysicists (2006) 136 C.A.4th 880, 893, 39 C.R.3d 170 [in administrative proceeding in which business owner was charged with practicing geophysics without license, business owner, by failing to object, waived issue of whether geologist's testimony was relevant]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §344.(3) (New) Exclusion for Policy Reasons. As in civil and criminal actions generally, evidence that is relevant may nevertheless be excluded in an administrative proceeding on policy grounds. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §132.) For example, Govt.C. 11440.45, added in 2002, makes inadmissible, as an admission of liability in a civil action, any portion of "statements, writings, or benevolent gestures expressing sympathy or a general sense of benevolence relating to the pain, suffering, or death of a person involved in an accident and made to that person or to the family of that person." The statute is modeled on Ev.C. 1160 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, Supp., §96) and, like that statute, specifies that an actual statement of fault that accompanies the statement of sympathy is not inadmissible.

65 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

5. Hearsay.

a. Competent Hearsay Within an Exception.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 65

[§ 65] Competent Hearsay Within an Exception.

There is no reason for administrative bodies to be more restrictive than courts; consequently, evidence competent in judicial proceedings, including hearsay within an exception, is generally held competent in administrative proceedings. (See Werner v. State Bar (1944) 24 C.2d 611, 615, 150 P.2d 892 [transcript of former criminal trial, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §255]; Lake v. Reed (1997) 16 C.4th 448, 467, 65 C.R.2d 860, 940 P.2d 311 [in driver's license suspension hearing, unsworn laboratory report, although hearsay, was admissible under public employees record exception]; Fox v. San Francisco Unified School Dist. (1952) 111 C.A.2d 885, 891, 245 P.2d 603 [personnel reports admissible as business records, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §228]; Arenstein v. State Bd. of Pharmacy (1968) 265 C.A.2d 179, 190, 71 C.R. 357 [plea of guilty in prior criminal trial (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §99) is admissible in later administrative disciplinary proceeding as an admission of element of offense warranting discipline]; Borror v. Department of Inv. (1971) 15 C.A.3d 531, 546, 92 C.R. 525 [admissions by real estate saleswoman not within hearsay rule and properly considered by administrative agency in disciplinary proceeding]; Szmciarz v. State Personnel Bd. (1978) 79 C.A.3d 904, 913, 145 C.R. 396 [admission]; Douglass v. Board of Med. Quality Assur. (1983) 141 C.A.3d 645, 659, 660, 190 C.R. 506 [admissions and vicarious admissions]; on admissibility of affidavits, see infra, §69.)

The Evidence Code expanded the number of hearsay exceptions, e.g., making admissible, in civil actions, a felony conviction (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §§271, 272) and a dying declaration (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §187). These new rules call for a reexamination of Manning v. Watson (1952) 108 C.A.2d 705, 711, 239 P.2d 688, holding that a prior federal court conviction of a broker was insufficient to sustain a disciplinary order; and Thrasher v. Board of Med. Examiners (1919) 44 C.A. 26, 29, 185 P. 1006, holding a dying declaration inadmissible in administrative proceedings.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(New) Statutory exceptions created for particular administrative proceedings: In some cases, statutory hearsay exceptions have been created for application in particular types of administrative proceedings. Thus, for example, out-of-court statements by minors under 12 years of age are admissible in certain administrative hearings under specific exceptions enacted in 2002. (See Health & Saf.C. 1551.2 [community care facilities]; Health & Saf.C. 1568.0652 [residential care facilities]; Health & Saf.C. 1569.512 [residential care for elderly]; Health & Saf.C. 1596.8872 [child day care facilities].) Similarly, prior testimony is admissible in administrative proceedings involving contractors, without proof of witness unavailability. (B. & P.C. 7013.5, added in 2003.)

66 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

5. Hearsay.

b. Incompetent Hearsay: Administrative Procedure Act.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 66

[§ 66] Incompetent Hearsay: Administrative Procedure Act.

Govt.C. 11513(d) states that "[h]earsay evidence may be used for the purpose of supplementing or explaining other evidence but over timely objection shall not be sufficient in itself to support a finding unless it would be admissible over objection in civil actions. An objection is timely if made before submission of the case or on reconsideration." Thus:

(1) The hearing officer need not rule on admissibility and should not exclude incompetent hearsay. (See Marlo v. State Bd. of Med. Examiners of the Dept. of Professional Standards (1952) 112 C.A.2d 276, 282, 246 P.2d 69 [hospital reports]; Mast v. State Bd. of Optometry (1956) 139 C.A.2d 78, 85, 293 P.2d 148 [affidavit]; 15 Hastings L. J. 369; 8 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 579; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §348; 36 A.L.R.3d 12 [hearsay evidence in proceedings before state administrative agencies]; 30 A.L.R.4th 936 [student disciplinary proceedings]; on the relationship of Govt.C. 11513 and Govt.C. 11514, giving a party, upon proper request, the opportunity to cross-examine an affiant, see Monaghan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1995) 35 C.A.4th 1621, 42 C.R.2d 167, infra, §69.)

(2) On judicial review, it may be used to supplement, explain, or corroborate direct evidence. (Cooper v. State Bd. of Public Health (1951) 102 C.A.2d 926, 932, 229 P.2d 27; Dyer v. Watson (1953) 121 C.A.2d 84, 92, 262 P.2d 873; Swegle v. State Bd. of Equalization (1954) 125 C.A.2d 432, 437, 270 P.2d 518; Mast v. State Bd. of Optometry, supra; Moyer v. State Bd. of Equalization (1956) 140 C.A.2d 651, 656, 295 P.2d 583; Robertson v. Zolin (1996) 44 C.A.4th 147, 151, 51 C.R.2d 420 [in mandamus proceeding challenging suspension of driver's license, evidence presented by driver (handwritten notation on results of second of three breath tests), even if insufficient by itself to sustain trial judge's ruling overturning suspension, was properly used to supplement and explain department's own evidence about manner of testing and results obtained].)

(3) It will not, by itself, sustain a finding or decision. (Daniels v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1983) 33 C.3d 532, 538, 189 C.R. 512, 658 P.2d 1313; Walker v. San Gabriel (1942) 20 C.2d 879, 881, 129 P.2d 349; Kinney v. Sacramento City Employees' Retirement System (1947) 77 C.A.2d 779, 782, 176 P.2d 775; Desert Turf Club v. Board of Supervisors of Riverside County (1956) 141 C.A.2d 446, 455, 296 P.2d 882; Armistead v. Los Angeles (1957) 152 C.A.2d 319, 322, 324, 313 P.2d 127; Harris v. Alcoholic Bev. Control App. Bd. (1963) 212 C.A.2d 106, 122, 28 C.R. 74, citing the text; Sunseri v. Board of Med. Examiners (1964) 224 C.A.2d 309, 317, 36 C.R. 553, citing the text; Layton v. Merit System Com. (1976) 60 C.A.3d 58, 67, 131 C.R. 318; Carl S. v. Commission for Teacher Preparation & Licensing (1981) 126 C.A.3d 365, 369, 371, 178 C.R. 753; Gregory v. State Bd. of Control (1999) 73 C.A.4th 584, 597, 598, 86 C.R.2d 575 [hearsay police department crime reports did not constitute substantial evidence supporting Board of Control's denial of claim for victim restitution, where reports were supplemented only by detective's opinion, which was conclusory and not supported by any facts[.]

In the Daniels case, supra, the court held that an accident report made by a driver pursuant to Veh.C. 16000 (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §273) is not sufficient without additional evidence to support the suspension of the driver's license in a formal Department of Motor Vehicles hearing. The court distinguished Burkhart v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 124 C.A.3d 99, 104, 112, 177 C.R. 175, suggesting that a police officer's sworn report might qualify as a business record or official record (Ev.C. 1271, 1280). The driver's accident (SR 1) report does not reflect the trustworthiness necessary to permit its use as the sole basis for a license suspension. Hence, when the licensee requests a hearing, the SR 1 report is insufficient to establish a prima facie showing of the facts supporting suspension. (33 C.3d 541.) (See also Carlton v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1988) 203 C.A.3d 1428, 1432, 1434, 250 C.R. 809 [suspension of driver's license based on computerized transcription of police report of officer's opinion as to person "most responsible" for accident is improper; following Daniels].)

The former version of Govt.C. 11513(d) did not mention the requirement of a timely objection. Under that version, an objection was not needed, and lack of an objection could not turn hearsay evidence into competent evidence that would independently support a finding. (McNary v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1996) 45 C.A.4th 688, 696, 53 C.R.2d 55.) The Law Revision Commission Comment explains that the language regarding "timely" objection, added in 1995, was "intended to avoid or eliminate routine objections to administrative hearsay. If a proposed finding is supported only by hearsay evidence, a single objection at the conclusion of testimony, or on petition for reconsideration by the agency, is sufficient and timely."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) No need to rule on admissibility: See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §347.(2) Supplementation, explanation, or corroboration of direct evidence: See Komizu v. Gourley (2002) 103 C.A.4th 1001, 1007, 127 C.R.2d 229 [in writ proceeding challenging suspension of driver's license, even if report of blood-alcohol test did not satisfy Ev.C. 1280(b) (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §246) because it was typed 6 days after test was conducted, trial judge could properly consider it in conjunction with officer's observations that driver acknowledged he had been drinking, smelled of alcohol, and had bloodshot or watery eyes]; Berg v. Davi (2005) 130 C.A.4th 223, 230, 29 C.R.3d 803 [in upholding Department of Real Estate's rejection of application for real estate salesperson's license on ground applicant had previously been disbarred, administrative law judge did not err in admitting hearsay facts contained in opinions of State Bar Court and Review Department, as they explained other properly admitted evidence, namely, actual disbarment]; Hildebrand v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2007) 152 C.A.4th 1562, 1572, 62 C.R.3d 234 [in administrative suspension proceeding, statements by fire captain indicating that driver had admitted he had been driving, which statements were incorporated in police officer's written report, were admissible as party admissions, and captain's other observations could be admitted under Govt.C. 11513(d) to clarify meaning of those statements].

67 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

5. Hearsay.

c. Incompetent Hearsay: Workers' Compensation Proceeding.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 67

[§ 67] Incompetent Hearsay: Workers' Compensation Proceeding.

The Workers' Compensation Act provides that the Appeals Board and its referees are not bound by "the common law or statutory rules of evidence" (Lab.C. 5709), and express provision is made for admission of various kinds of reports and other hearsay (Lab.C. 5703). It is clear, therefore, that hearsay evidence incompetent in judicial proceedings may be considered in a proceeding before the Appeals Board or referee, and may support an award or order. (State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1924) 195 C. 174, 177, 231 P. 996; McAllister v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 69 C.2d 408, 413, footnote 2, 71 C.R. 697, 445 P.2d 313.)

However, on review the hearsay evidence may be held to be of such an unsubstantial character, particularly when contrary to relevant expert testimony, that the award will be annulled. (See Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1941) 47 C.A.2d 494, 499, 118 P.2d 334; Skip Fordyce v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1983) 149 C.A.3d 915, 926, 927, 197 C.R. 626; 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §448.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §445.

68 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

6. Complainant's Sexual Conduct.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 68

[§ 68] Complainant's Sexual Conduct.

In a proceeding under Govt.C. 12940(h) or (i) (see 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §760 et seq.), or Govt.C. 19572 or 19702 (see 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §747), in which conduct constituting sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery is alleged, evidence of specific instances of a complainant's sexual conduct with individuals other than the alleged perpetrator is not discoverable unless it is to be offered at a hearing to attack the credibility of the complainant. If offered, it is not admissible unless an offer of proof is made establishing that the evidence is relevant and reliable, and that its probative value is not substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will create substantial danger of undue prejudice or confuse the issue. (Govt.C. 11440.40; see 27 Pacific L. J. 967.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-References: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §§925 et seq., 897.

69 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

7. Affidavits and Reports.

a. Administrative Procedure Act.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 69

[§ 69] Administrative Procedure Act.

(1) In General. Govt.C. 11514 provides that affidavits may be used in lieu of oral testimony, with the same effect, but that prior notice must be given the opposing party, so that he or she may, on request, have the opportunity to cross-examine the affiant. The procedure is as follows: At least 10 days before the hearing a party may mail a copy of the affidavit, with notice of the right of cross-examination, to the opposing party; if the latter does not request cross-examination within 7 days, the right is waived and the affidavit has the same effect as if the affiant testified orally; if, however, opportunity to cross-examine is not afforded after request, the affidavit is admissible but has only the effect of hearsay evidence (see Govt.C. 11513(d), supra, §66). (See 15 Hastings L. J. 258; 21 So. Cal. L. Rev. 22; on effect of party's failure to mail copy of affidavit to opposing party, see McNary v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1996) 45 C.A.4th 688, 696, 53 C.R.2d 55 [in license suspension proceeding, driver's failure to comply with requirement that department receive copy of affidavit and notice of intent to admit it 10 days before hearing resulted in department's inability to request cross-examination of affiant, and, therefore, affidavit was inadmissible]; on other statutes authorizing admission of affidavits, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §297; on sufficiency of arresting officer's sworn statement to support driver's license suspension, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §427.)

The theory underlying Govt.C. 11514 has a more general application: A party is entitled to know what evidence has been produced against him or her, in order to test or rebut it, and an agency cannot base its decision on reports or information not properly subject to official notice (infra, §72) and not introduced in evidence. (See Brennan v. State Bd. of Med. Examiners (1950) 101 C.A.2d 193, 196, 225 P.2d 11 ["Unstated and unsworn opinions of the board members ... could not be considered for any purpose"].)

(2) Sufficiency of Steps Taken To Secure Affiant's Attendance. In Monaghan v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1995) 35 C.A.4th 1621, 42 C.R.2d 167, plaintiff's driver's license was suspended after he was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol. A test of plaintiff's blood sample showed a blood-alcohol content of 0.23%. Plaintiff requested an administrative hearing and sent a letter to the Department of Motor Vehicles demanding that it provide him with copies of all documents, affidavits, or otherwise competent hearsay statements it intended to use at the hearing, along with the name and address of the individual who conducted the blood test. The letter also mentioned plaintiff's general right of cross-examination and objected to use of the affidavits and statements. At the hearing, the department produced no witnesses and relied solely on documentary evidence, including the arresting officer's sworn statement and the blood test results. The suspension was upheld. Plaintiff petitioned for writ relief, which the trial judge granted, finding that plaintiff's letter was sufficient to compel the department to produce the blood analyst. Held, reversed.

(a) Plaintiff did not properly invoke the subpoena procedures requiring the department to produce the analyst. Even if his letter could be construed as a request for the issuance of subpoenas, he took no further steps to secure the analyst's attendance after learning at the hearing that the analyst would not appear. Govt.C. 11514 does not create an independent mechanism by which a plaintiff can compel production of a witness; it simply sets forth the evidentiary consequences of failing to satisfy the licensee's request for an opportunity to cross-examine the author of affidavits on which the department relies. (35 C.A.4th 1627.)

(b) Moreover, even if plaintiff properly invoked the subpoena procedures, the department's failure to comply would not necessarily result in rendering the laboratory report insufficient by itself to establish plaintiff's blood-alcohol content. Under Govt.C. 11514(a), the result of a failure to satisfy a request for production of an affiant is that the affidavit is given only the same effect as other hearsay evidence; and under Govt.C. 11513(c) (now Govt.C. 11513(d)), hearsay evidence "may be used for the purpose of supplementing or explaining other evidence but shall not be sufficient in itself to support a finding unless it would be admissible over objection in civil actions." Thus, notwithstanding the department's failure to comply, the evidentiary weight of the laboratory report in question would depend on the report's admissibility, over objection, in civil actions. (35 C.A.4th 1628.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

70 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

7. Affidavits and Reports.

b. Local Agencies.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 70

[§ 70] Local Agencies.

The principle that a party must be afforded the opportunity to test the evidence produced against him or her (supra, §69) has been repeatedly stated in cases dealing with local agencies. Thus, in La Prade v. Department of Water & Power (1945) 27 C.2d 47, 162 P.2d 13, the Los Angeles Board of Civil Service Commissioners relied merely on an investigator's report on file, and produced no witnesses or evidence to support its order discharging a municipal employee. In annulling the order the court said: "Nothing may be treated as evidence which has not been introduced as such, inasmuch as a hearing requires that the party be apprised of the evidence against him in order that he may refute, test, and explain it." (27 C.2d 51, 52.)

Similarly, in English v. Long Beach (1950) 35 C.2d 155, 217 P.2d 22, where an order dismissing an employee was set aside for lack of a fair hearing, the court said: "There is considerable difference, however, between the alleged improper admission of evidence, such as hearsay, for example, and the consideration of and reliance upon information received without the knowledge of the parties and at a time and place other than that appointed for the hearing. In the former class of cases, the parties are informed of the evidence to be used against them, they may object to it, explain it, or test it and introduce countervailing evidence. None of those safeguards are available, however, when the board secretly obtains information and bases its determination thereon." (35 C.2d 159.) (See also Kinney v. Sacramento City Employees' Retirement System (1947) 77 C.A.2d 779, 782, 176 P.2d 775 [retirement board improperly received report of doctor on medical history of applicant for pension, based on letters of other physicians, without personal examination of applicant]; Rogers v. Retirement Bd. (1952) 109 C.A.2d 751, 757, 241 P.2d 611 [retirement board improperly considered letter of doctor who never appeared before board and whose opinion that decedent's heart condition had nothing to do with employment was only evidence to that effect]; 18 A.L.R.2d 552 [administrative decision based on evidence secured outside hearing and without presence of party or counsel]; infra, §83.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

71 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

7. Affidavits and Reports.

c. Workers' Compensation Proceeding.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 71

[§ 71] Workers' Compensation Proceeding.

The Workers' Compensation Act makes admissible reports of doctors and hospital records, reports of investigators, books of employers, official governmental publications, and "[e]xcerpts from expert testimony received by the appeals board upon similar issues of scientific fact in other cases and the prior decisions of the appeals board upon similar issues." (Lab.C. 5703.) This broad statute is supplemented by the Appeals Board's Rules of Practice and Procedure, which contain detailed provisions on the admission of written evidence and reports; these, with respect to medical evidence, are favored by the Appeals Board. (8 Cal. Code Reg. §§10600 et seq., 10606.) Copies of reports, or of investigations made without notice, must always be furnished to adverse parties. (See Lab.C. 5704; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §10580; Peak v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1947) 82 C.A.2d 926, 929, 187 P.2d 905.)

If a party refuses to produce a physician's report, the evidence thus suppressed will be presumed adverse. (8 Cal. Code Reg. §10622.) (See generally C.E.B., Workers' Compensation Practice 3d, §§8.18 et seq., 8.32 et seq.)

Lab.C. 5703 and 5704 have been interpreted as requiring an opportunity to cross-examine the author of a report, if the author is available, regardless of whether the report was introduced during a hearing or merely filed. The reason is set forth in Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1946) 74 C.A.2d 911, 916, 170 P.2d 36, as follows: "It would make a farce of the law to hold that if the report is filed at the hearing the adverse party may be denied the rights of cross-examination and rebuttal but that if it is filed after the hearing he must be accorded those rights. The deprivation of due process lies not in the concealment of the evidence but in the lack of opportunity for cross-examination and rebuttal which results from the concealment. There is no magic in the mere disclosure of the evidence where the adverse party is denied all right to test or countervail it." The court also observed: "The reports, though hearsay, are testimonial in character. Unlike business entries, dying declarations, res gestae statements and other recognized exceptions to the hearsay rule, which derive their sanction of veracity from the circumstance that they are not made or uttered with litigation in mind or primarily for the purpose of being used as evidence, the reports of these physicians were expressly made for use as evidence in this proceeding. ... We may suggest that cross-examination, if successful, is the most effective method of rebuttal, and frequently does away with the necessity of producing other rebuttal evidence." (74 C.A.2d 915.) (See also Columbia-Geneva Steel Div., United States Steel Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1953) 115 C.A.2d 862, 864, 253 P.2d 45; Caesar's Restaurant v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1959) 175 C.A.2d 850, 854, 1 C.R. 97 [cross-examination of doctor or rating expert]; 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §396.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §399.

72 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

8. Official Notice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 72

[§ 72] Official Notice.

(1) In General. The doctrine of judicial notice (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Judicial Notice, §1 et seq.) is applicable to administrative proceedings, in which it is properly characterized as "official notice." But its scope may vary with particular agencies and may extend beyond the normal subjects of judicial notice, for an agency has an affirmative duty to carry out the policies of its program in the public interest, and often has a staff of specialists and a great store of information about its special field. (See generally 55 Harv. L. Rev. 410; 60 Harv. L. Rev. 620; 18 A.L.R.2d 552, 565 [agency's notice of its own records]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §351.)

(2) Agencies Under Administrative Procedure Act. The California Administrative Procedure Act appears to be as liberal as any: "In reaching a decision official notice may be taken, either before or after submission of the case for decision, of any generally accepted technical or scientific matter within the agency's special field, and of any fact which may be judicially noticed by the courts of this State. Parties present at the hearing shall be informed of the matters to be noticed, and those matters shall be noted in the record, referred to therein, or appended thereto. Any such party shall be given a reasonable opportunity on request to refute the officially noticed matters by evidence or by written or oral presentation of authority, the manner of such refutation to be determined by the agency." (Govt.C. 11515; see Franz v. Board of Med. Quality Assur. (1982) 31 C.3d 124, 140, 181 C.R. 732, 642 P.2d 792; and see similar provisions of Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981), §4-212(f), 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 87.)

(3) Illustrative Decisions. The California cases appear to fall within the conservative scope of the judicial notice principle. (See Anderson v. Board of Dental Examiners (1915) 27 C.A. 336, 340, 149 P. 1006 [dental board could notice its own records in determining who was or was not licensed]; Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1925) 75 C.A. 709, 714, 243 P. 455 [Commission can take notice of commonly known medical facts but not of a treatment familiar only to experts]; Greif v. Dullea (1944) 66 C.A.2d 986, 998, 153 P.2d 581 [city board of permit appeals could take notice of existence and contents of permit and license ordinances]; California Comp. Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1948) 86 C.A.2d 861, 871, 195 P.2d 880 [Commission could take notice of fact that during March 1947, employment opportunities were good]; Cantrell v. Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles (1948) 87 C.A.2d 471, 477, 197 P.2d 218 [zoning board, revoking permit for hog ranch, could take notice of fact that presence of large numbers of rats and flies is extremely detrimental to public health]; Harris v. Alcoholic Bev. Control App. Bd. (1965) 62 C.2d 589, 596, 43 C.R. 633, 400 P.2d 745, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Judicial Notice, §21; Whispering Pines Mobile Home Park, Ltd. v. Scotts Valley (1986) 180 C.A.3d 152, 160, 225 C.R. 364 [discussing Franz, supra, and emphasizing necessity of opportunity to refute officially noticed matters].)

(4) Effect of Evidence Code. Govt.C. 11515, supra, calls for official notice "of any fact which may be judicially noticed by the courts." This makes applicable the innovations of Division 4 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Judicial Notice, §4).

A concurring opinion of two justices in Franz calls attention to a problem created by the different language in the judicial notice provisions of the Evidence Code and the official notice provision of Govt.C. 11515. Matter judicially noticed must be accepted as a fact (Ev.C. 457, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Judicial Notice, §3); a party cannot offer evidence contrary to the fact noted. Govt.C. 11515, however, states that a party may "refute the officially noticed matters," and this statement could be interpreted to mean that the matter may be contradicted. The justices offer this solution: "Section 11515 antedates the Evidence Code by over two decades and was written at a time when there was a division of judicial and scholarly opinion on the issue whether judicially noticed facts could be contradicted. ... Today the trend, as exemplified by section 457 of our Evidence Code and rule 201(g) of the Federal Rules of Evidence, is unmistakably in favor of conclusiveness of facts judicially noticed. Reconciliation of section 11515 with the Evidence Code is, fortunately, easy enough: if the language concerning an opportunity to refute noticed matter is interpreted as applying before the tribunal makes its final decision on whether to take notice, the two codes are in harmony." (31 C.3d 146.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §349. West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.459-

73 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

9. Witnesses.

a. Attendance and Compensation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 73

[§ 73] Attendance and Compensation.

(1) Power To Summon Witnesses. The administrative power to summon witnesses and take testimony is usually declared in the statute creating the particular agency. (See, e.g., Lab.C. 130 et seq. [Workers' Compensation Appeals Board]; Lab.C. 1176 [Industrial Welfare Commission]; Pub.Util.C. 311 [Public Utilities Commission]; Corp.C. 25531 [Corporations Commissioner]; B. & P.C. 6049, 6051, 6052 [State Bar Board of Governors and Local Administrative Committees (now replaced by State Bar Court and its departments; see 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §625 et seq.)].)

As to agencies subject to the Administrative Procedure Act, detailed provision is made in Govt.C. 11450.05 et seq. (see infra, §77) for the issuance of both subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum at the request of any party pursuant to C.C.P. 1985 et seq. (See Fitzpatrick v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1993) 13 C.A.4th 1771, 1776, 17 C.R.2d 110 [in license suspension hearing, Department of Motor Vehicles' refusal to enforce driver's subpoena as well as its own against accusing officer violated driver's rights of confrontation and cross-examination]; 75 Harv. L. Rev. 1222 [administrative subpoena]; 50 Cal. L. Rev. 532 [subpoena on foreign corporation]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §338 et seq.; 27 A.L.R.2d 1208 [administrative agency's power to subpoena persons not subject to its regulatory jurisdiction].)

Disobedience of a subpoena is a contempt, but an administrative agency lacks the power to punish; it must report the disobedience to the superior court and obtain a court order. (See Parris v. Zolin (1996) 12 C.4th 839, 845, 847, 50 C.R.2d 109, 911 P.2d 9 [when subpoenaed witness fails to respond, it is agency's duty under Govt.C. 11525 (now Govt.C. 11455.20) to transmit certification of facts of apparent contempt to superior court, which must then issue order to show cause; approving Fitzpatrick]; and see Pub.Util.C. 1792 et seq. [Public Utilities Commission proceedings]; C.C.P. 1991 [disobedience to subpoena is contempt; 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §28]; B. & P.C. 6049, 6051 [State Bar proceedings]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §341; 75 Harv. L. Rev. 1222.)

The Workers' Compensation Appeals Board may invoke the procedure of report to the court, but it also has the same power as a court to punish for contempt. (Lab.C. 132.)

(2) Compensation. A number of statutes make specific provision for witness fees and mileage. (See, e.g., Pub.Util.C. 1791; B. & P.C. 108.5 [agencies within Consumer Affairs Department]; see also McLeod v. Board of Pension Commrs. (1970) 14 C.A.3d 23, 31, 94 C.R. 58 [subpoenas may contain language requiring witnesses to be paid fees and mileage prescribed by Govt.C. 68093, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §16]; on compensation of witnesses appearing under compulsion of subpoena or subpoena duces tecum issued in accordance with Administrative Procedure Act, see infra, §77.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Power To Summon Witnesses. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §337 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.463

74 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

9. Witnesses.

b. Privileges.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 74

[§ 74] Privileges.

(1) In General. It has been urged that administrative agencies break away from the strict rules and receive some privileged evidence in confidence. (See 55 Harv. L. Rev. 384.) But the Administrative Procedure Act probably states the generally accepted view: "The rules of privilege shall be effective to the extent that they are otherwise required by statute to be recognized at the hearing." (Govt.C. 11513(e); see Fairfield v. Superior Court (1975) 14 C.3d 768, 777, 122 C.R. 543, 537 P.2d 375 [privilege of elected officials not to disclose basis of public vote]; Welfare Rights Organization v. Crisan (1983) 33 C.3d 766, 772, 190 C.R. 919, 661 P.2d 1073, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §103 [privilege protecting communications between welfare claimants and lay persons authorized to represent them in administrative hearings]; Elder v. Board of Med. Examiners (1966) 241 C.A.2d 246, 252, 50 C.R. 304 [physician-patient privilege]; King v. Mobile Home Rent Review Bd. (1989) 216 C.A.3d 1532, 1537, 265 C.R. 624 [confidentiality of tax returns]; 31 A.L.R.4th 1226 [Crisan]; 10 Stanf. L. Rev. 299, note 13 [attorney-client privilege]; and see similar provision of Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981), §4-212(a), 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 86.)

The Evidence Code, with its revised and somewhat expanded privileges, is expressly made applicable to administrative proceedings. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §65.) Where a claim of privilege is rejected by an administrative agency or officer without judicial powers, a court order to testify is a necessary basis for the sanction of contempt. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §93.)

The Administrative Procedure Act, in addition to acknowledging the applicability of the generally recognized privileges, creates its own privilege for statements made and documents prepared in the course of mediation under the Act's alternative dispute resolution provisions. (See Govt.C. 11420.30.)

(2) Agency With Constitutional Powers. In Southern Calif. Gas Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1990) 50 C.3d 31, 265 C.R. 801, 784 P.2d 1373, the question was whether the constitutional powers of the Public Utilities Commission were subject to the statutory limitation of the attorney-client privilege. The court commented:

"There is no indication in the relevant statutes that the privilege is limited to judicial proceedings. On the contrary, it is evident that the privilege applies in the administrative law setting. Evidence Code section 910, which codifies the scope of several evidentiary privileges including the attorney-client privilege, provides: 'Except as otherwise provided by statute, the provisions of this division apply in all proceedings. The provisions of any statute making rules of evidence inapplicable in particular proceedings, ... do not make this division inapplicable to such proceedings.' ... Evidence Code section 901 defines a 'proceeding' to include 'any action, hearing, investigation, inquest, or inquiry (whether conducted by a court, administrative agency, hearing officer, arbitrator, legislative body, or any other person authorized by law) in which pursuant to law, testimony can be compelled to be given.' " (50 C.3d 38.)

(3) Self-incrimination. As administrative disciplinary proceedings are not criminal actions, there is no privilege of the accused licensee to refuse to take the stand. The licensee has, however, the witness' privilege against self-incrimination, i.e., to refuse to answer incriminating questions. (See West Coast Home Imp. Co. v. Contractors' State License Bd. (1945) 72 C.A.2d 287, 301, 164 P.2d 811; Savoy Club v. Board of Supervisors (1970) 12 C.A.3d 1034, 1038, 91 C.R. 198 [licensees charged with crimes which were basis for license revocation hearing held not entitled to continuance of hearing merely because of possibility of their asserting therein privilege against self-incrimination]; Fielder v. Berkeley Properties Co. (1972) 23 C.A.3d 30, 39, 99 C.R. 791 [propriety of question is subject to superior court determination]; 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §446; 30 A.L.R.4th 243 [attorney's self-incrimination privilege in disciplinary proceeding]; see also Govt.C. 11513(b) [party not testifying on own behalf may be called and examined as if under cross-examination; infra, §84].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

75 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 75

[§ 75] In General.

Prior to 1966, there was neither statutory nor case law authorizing the application of the discovery statutes (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §1 et seq.) to administrative proceedings. (See 16 Stanf. L. Rev. 1035.) Brotsky v. State Bar (1962) 57 C.2d 287, 301, 19 C.R. 153, 368 P.2d 697, authorized discovery in attorneys' disciplinary proceedings, but on the ground that these proceedings were the initial stages of court actions, rather than independent administrative adjudications. (See 83 A.L.R.3d 749 [records of disciplinary proceedings against attorney]; 83 A.L.R.3d 777 [state bar records of complaints against or investigations of attorney]; 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §650.)

Shively v. Stewart (1966) 65 C.2d 475, 55 C.R. 217, 421 P.2d 65, infra, §76, and 1968 amendments to the Administrative Procedure Act (infra, §77 et seq.) established the right to discovery in administrative proceedings. (See 56 Cal. L. Rev. 756; 8 Hastings Const. L. Q. 645; 10 Santa Clara Lawyer 274; on difference between scope of A.P.A. and non-A.P.A. discovery, see 7 U.S.F. L. Rev. 306.)

In disciplinary hearings for permanent school district employees, discovery procedures are not limited to those set forth in the Administrative Procedure Act (see Govt.C. 11507.6, infra, §78), but include "the rights and duties of any party in a civil action brought in a superior court." (Educ.C. 44944; see also Educ.C. 87675 [same full discovery rights for contract and regular employees of community colleges].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

76 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

b. Discovery Right Judicially Established.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 76

[§ 76] Discovery Right Judicially Established.

(1) Principle Declared. In Shively v. Stewart (1966) 65 C.2d 475, 55 C.R. 217, 421 P.2d 65, petitioners, licensed physicians, were accused by the State Board of Medical Examiners of performing illegal abortions. They filed notices of defense and requested hearings. Then, a month before the scheduled hearing date, they requested subpoenas duces tecum to obtain (a) statements taken from the named women and their husbands; (b) copies of petitioners' bills, letters, and documents with respect to the treatment; and (c) all reports and documents gathered by the board's employees and investigators. Because former Govt.C. 11510 (see infra, §80) had been regarded as authorizing use of subpoenas duces tecum only to obtain evidence for the hearing, and they were sought here for the distinct purpose of discovery, the hearing officer refused to sign them. Held, mandamus granted to compel their issuance.

(a) Necessity for judicial action. In several situations, statutory administrative procedures have been augmented with common law rules when necessary to promote fair hearings and effective judicial review. The decisions illustrate Davis' observation that adequacy of administrative hearings "is mostly judge-made law," and that "the standards are essentially the same whether judges are giving content to due process, whether they are giving meaning to inexplicit statutory provisions, or whether they are developing a kind of common law." (65 C.2d 479.)

(b) Analogy of criminal discovery. Discovery in criminal cases was established by judicial decision as a necessary right of the accused (see 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §39), and the analogy is appropriate here: The governmental agency has the resources of the state to obtain information, the disciplinary proceeding is punitive in nature, and the agency both accuses and decides the case; this concentration of functions calls for procedural safeguards. (65 C.2d 479.)

(c) Additional policy reason. It is important that full preparation before the hearing be facilitated, in order to avoid needless continuances. (65 C.2d 480.)

(d) Review of denial by mandamus. The objection that refusal of the subpoena was an interlocutory decision and not reviewable until administrative remedies were exhausted is untenable: There is no administrative remedy for erroneous denial of a subpoena before the hearing. And if, as here held, petitioners had a right to discovery, issuance of the subpoenas duces tecum was a ministerial act of the hearing officer that could be compelled by mandamus. (65 C.2d 480.)

(e) Scope of subpoenas. The papers sought were within the scope of proper discovery, with the exception of the overbroad demand for reports of board employees and investigators. The proper procedure was to take the deposition of the board's attorney and executive secretary, to determine whether there was "good cause" to produce documents neither privileged nor protected as a work product. (65 C.2d 482.)

The court made it clear that the liberal test for inspection under C.C.P. 2031, and not the restrictive requirements of C.C.P. 1985, should govern:

"It is not necessary that the items be admissible in evidence to compel their production. When the agency's subpoena power is invoked to secure discovery, the good cause and materiality requirements of Code of Civil Procedure section 1985 must be governed by discovery standards." (65 C.2d 481.) (See 55 Cal. L. Rev. 1068; 7 U.S.F. L. Rev. 318.)

(2) Criminal Law Limitations Applied. The analogy of criminal discovery was applied to limit the scope of discovery in Everett v. Gordon (1968) 266 C.A.2d 667, 72 C.R. 379. Petitioners, real estate brokers, were accused of misconduct in the sale of property owned by Mrs. B. They sought mandamus to compel the superior court to order prehearing depositions of Mrs. B and Mrs. T, her daughter, who had participated in the transaction, and to permit unspecified interrogatories to the Real Estate Commissioner. Held, the writ was properly denied.

(a) A criminal defendant is not entitled to take the deposition of a potential prosecution witness for discovery purposes. (266 C.A.2d 671, citing the text.) Hence, as to Mrs. B and Mrs. T, petitioners had only the right to compel inspection of statements.

(b) A criminal defendant must show better cause for interrogatories than a mere desire for information obtained by the prosecution in its investigation (see 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §82). Hence, the showing of petitioners, which set forth no particular interrogatories, was insufficient. (266 C.A.2d 672.) They may, however, under Shively, supra, on a proper showing take the deposition of an executive employee of the administrative agency to determine whether the employee possesses any unprivileged documents that they are entitled to inspect. (266 C.A.2d 672.) (On Proposition 115, establishing a comprehensive discovery scheme for criminal trials, see 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §27 et seq.)

(3) Due Process Test Applied. Denial of discovery was also held proper in Mohilef v. Janovici (1996) 51 C.A.4th 267, 58 C.R.2d 721, a nuisance abatement proceeding by a city seeking to terminate the bird farming activities of two property owners on their ranch within the city's boundaries. The court pointed out that there is no basic constitutional right to pretrial discovery in administrative proceedings, and that the extent of discovery allowed is primarily a matter to be determined by the particular agency involved. However, discovery must sometimes be permitted even when it is not provided for by statute or regulation. The question is whether a denial of discovery "would so prejudice a party as to deny him due process." (51 C.A.4th 302, citing and quoting federal case law.) In this case, the denial of prehearing discovery did not result in an unfair hearing, nor did it prejudice defendants' case. In light of the scientific data already collected by defendants, the requested discovery would not have affected the eventual outcome of the hearing. (51 C.A.4th 302, 303.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Principle Declared. C.C.P. 2031, on inspection demands, was repealed and replaced by C.C.P. 2031.010 et seq. in 2004 without substantive change. (3) Due Process Test Applied. In Cimarusti v. Superior Court (2000) 79 C.A.4th 799, 94 C.R.2d 336, Youth Authority correctional officers who were the subject of discipline for allegedly engaging in, or failing to stop or report, the use of unauthorized physical force sought disclosure of the files of certain wards and an opportunity to interview the wards. An administrative law judge denied their requests, and the denial was upheld in the officers' petition for writ relief. Held, denial of the requests was proper. Under Welf.C. 827, the juvenile court has exclusive authority to determine the extent to which juvenile court records may be disclosed. (79 C.A.4th 803, 804.) On remand to the trial court, the petition to compel discovery should be assigned to a juvenile court judge. If the judge determines that the records sought are juvenile court records within the meaning of Welf.C. 827, the judge must exercise his or her discretion by considering the best interests of the wards and balancing their interests in confidentiality against the officers' interests and needs for disclosure. (79 C.A.4th 805, 806.) As to the requests for interviews, generally there is no due process right to prehearing discovery in administrative hearing cases, and particularly no constitutional right to take depositions. The officers have been provided with the wards' statements. At the hearing, the officers can call and examine witnesses, and rebut evidence. "The statutory prehearing discovery and hearing procedures are sufficient to satisfy petitioners' due process rights." (79 C.A.4th 808, 809.) (See California Teachers Assn. v. California Com. on Teacher Credentialing (2003) 111 C.A.4th 1001, 1012, 4 C.R.3d 369 [in investigation of misconduct by credentialed teacher, teacher was entitled only to prehearing discovery allowed by Educ.C. 44244; due process did not require more].)

77 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

c. Discovery Under Administrative Procedure Act.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 77

[§ 77] In General.

In 1968, the Legislature responded to Shively v. Stewart (1966) 65 C.2d 475, 55 C.R. 217, 421 P.2d 65, supra, §76, by additions and amendments to the Administrative Procedure Act. There were two main changes affecting discovery:

First, it was specified that subpoenas duces tecum are to be used to compel the production of documents at the hearing. (Former Govt.C. 11510, replaced in 1997 by Govt.C. 11450.05 et seq.; see infra, §80.)

Second, an exclusive procedure was established for pretrial discovery in adjudicatory hearings. (Govt.C. 11507.5 et seq., infra, §78 et seq.; see C.J.E.R., Judges Benchbook, Discovery, §18.12 et seq.; 10 Santa Clara Lawyer 274; 7 U.S.F. L. Rev. 306.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

78 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

c. Discovery Under Administrative Procedure Act.

2. Procedure.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 78

[§ 78] Procedure.

(1) Notice of Right of Discovery. Copies of the discovery statutes (Govt.C. 11507.5, 11507.6, 11507.7) must be served with an accusation made under Govt.C. 11503 or a statement of issues filed under Govt.C. 11504, and the respondent must be informed of the appropriate person in the agency to contact for discoverable material. (Govt.C. 11504, 11505.)

(2) Type of Proceeding. Discovery may be sought after initiation of any proceeding "in which a respondent or other party is entitled to a hearing on the merits." (Govt.C. 11507.6.)

(3) Request for Discovery. A written request may be made to another party prior to the administrative hearing and within 30 days after the agency serves the initial pleading or within 15 days after service of an additional pleading. (Govt.C. 11507.6.) There is no requirement of a showing of good cause. (See Romero v. Hern (1969) 276 C.A.2d 787, 793, 81 C.R. 281 [main difference between Govt.C. 11507.6 and Shively v. Stewart (1966) 65 C.2d 475, 55 C.R. 217, 421 P.2d 65, supra, §76, is that the former "eliminates the requirement of showing good cause for obtaining the information required by the section to be disclosed, while under the Shively rule, as to some of the information, good cause to receive it must be shown"].)

(4) Scope of Discovery. The party is entitled to obtain the names and addresses of all known witnesses, "including, but not limited to, those intended to be called to testify at the hearing." (Govt.C. 11507.6.) The party may also inspect and copy certain enumerated documents in the "possession or custody or under the control" of the other party. (See Govt.C. 11507.6.) Documents other than those enumerated in the statute must be relevant and admissible in evidence. (Govt.C. 11507.6(e).)

A document "which is privileged from disclosure by law or otherwise made confidential or protected as the attorney's work product" may not be inspected or copied. (Govt.C. 11507.6.) (See 8 Hastings Const. L. Q. 645 [argument that limited administrative discovery provisions deprive accused in license revocation proceedings of due process].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

79 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

c. Discovery Under Administrative Procedure Act.

3. Proceedings To Compel Discovery.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 79

[§ 79] Proceedings To Compel Discovery.

(1) Motion. Under Govt.C. 11507.7(a), a party claiming that its request for discovery has not been complied with may serve and file with the administrative law judge a motion to compel discovery. The motion must include:

(a) A statement of facts showing that the respondent failed or refused to comply with Govt.C. 11507.6.

(b) A description of the matters sought to be discovered.

(c) The reason or reasons why the matter is discoverable under Govt.C. 11507.6.

(d) A statement that a reasonable and good faith attempt to contact the respondent for an informal resolution of the issue has been made.

(e) The ground or grounds of the respondent's refusal so far as is known to the moving party.

(2) Service and Filing. The motion must be served upon the respondent and filed (a) within 15 days after the respondent first evidenced failure or refusal to comply with Govt.C. 11507.6, or (b) within 30 days after request was made, where the respondent has failed to reply to the request, or (c) within another time provided by stipulation, whichever period is longer. (Govt.C. 11507.7(b).)

(3) Hearing. The hearing on the motion must be held within 15 days after the motion is made, "or a later time that the administrative law judge may on the judge's own motion for good cause determine." The respondent has the right to serve and file a written answer or other response to the motion before or at the time of the hearing. (Govt.C. 11507.7(c).)

(4) Determination of Discoverability. Where the matter sought to be discovered is under the custody and control of the respondent and the respondent asserts that the matter is not discoverable under Govt.C. 11507.6 or is privileged from disclosure under that statute, the administrative law judge may order lodged with him or her matters provided in Ev.C. 915(b) (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §88) and examine the matters in accordance with that statute's provisions. (Govt.C. 11507.7(d).)

(5) Basis of Decision. The judge must decide the case on the basis of the matters examined in camera, the papers filed by the parties, and "such oral argument and additional evidence as the administrative law judge may allow." (Govt.C. 11507.7(e).)

(6) Order. Except as otherwise stipulated by the parties, the judge must make a written order denying or granting the motion no later than 15 days after the hearing, and serve a copy of the order by mail on the parties. The order must set forth the matters the moving party is entitled to discover under Govt.C. 11507.6. Where the motion is granted in whole or in part, the order becomes effective 10 days after the order is served. Where the order denies relief, it is effective on the date it is served. (Govt.C. 11507.7(f).)

(7) Sanctions. Govt.C. 11455.10 authorizes the imposition of contempt sanctions on the basis of "[f]ailure or refusal, without substantial justification, to comply with a deposition order, discovery request, subpoena, or other order of the presiding officer, or moving, without substantial justification, to compel discovery." (Govt.C. 11455.10(e).) Additionally, the presiding officer may order a party, the party's attorney or other authorized representative, or both, to pay reasonable expenses, including attorneys' fees, incurred by another party as a result of bad faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay as defined in C.C.P. 128.5 (7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §§239, 240). That order is enforceable in the same manner as a money judgment or by contempt sanction. (Govt.C. 11455.30.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

80 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

d. Subpena or Subpena Duces Tecum.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 80

[§ 80] Subpena or Subpena Duces Tecum.

The use of subpoenas duces tecum in administrative proceedings was formerly covered by Govt.C. 11510, which specified that the subpoenas were to be used only for "production of documents at the hearing." (See Gilbert v. Superior Court (1987) 193 C.A.3d 161, 166, 167, 238 C.R. 220 [license revocation proceeding; Govt.C. 11510 could not be used by community care facility to compel regional centers to produce patient records for inspection and copying at centers' place of business 21 days before hearing].) (On the general law governing production of papers by administrative subpoena, see 20 So. Cal. L. Rev. 66; 50 Cal. L. Rev. 532; 75 Harv. L. Rev. 1222; C.E.B., Workers' Compensation Practice 3d, §8.12 et seq.; on subpoena in aid of investigation, see 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §130 et seq.; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §86.)

Former Govt.C. 11510 was replaced by Govt.C. 11450.05 et seq., which became effective July 1, 1997. The new statute, governing the use of both subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum in adjudicative proceedings under the Administrative Procedure Act, establishes the following procedures:

(1) Issuance of Subpena or Subpena Duces Tecum. Subpoenas or subpoenas duces tecum "may be issued for attendance at a hearing and for production of documents at any reasonable time and place or at a hearing." (Govt.C. 11450.10(a).) They must be issued by the agency or presiding officer at the request of a party, or by the attorney of record for a party, in accordance with C.C.P. 1985 et seq. (Govt.C. 11450.20(a).)

(2) Satisfaction of Subpena Duces Tecum. The custodian of documents subject to a subpoena duces tecum may satisfy the subpoena by delivering the documents or a copy of them, or by making the documents available for inspection or copying, together with an affidavit complying with Ev.C. 1561 (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §51). (Govt.C. 11450.10(b).)

(3) Service. Process extends to all parts of the state, and service must be carried out in accordance with C.C.P. 1987 and 1988. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §26.) The subpoena or subpoena duces tecum may also be delivered "by certified mail return receipt requested or by messenger." Service by messenger is effected when the witness acknowledges receipt of the subpoena to the sender by telephone, mail, or in person, and identifies himself or herself either by reference to date of birth and driver's license number or Department of Motor Vehicles identification number. Alternatively, the sender may verify receipt of the subpoena by obtaining other identifying information from the recipient. The sender must make a written notation of the acknowledgment. (Govt.C. 11450.20(b).)

A subpoena issued and acknowledged in accordance with Govt.C. 11450.20(b) has the same force and effect as a subpoena personally served. (Govt.C. 11450.20(b).) However, no witness is obliged to attend unless the witness is a resident of California at the time of service. (Govt.C. 11450.20(c).)

(4) Where Service Not Required. "In the case of the production of a party to the record of a proceeding or of a person for whose benefit a proceeding is prosecuted or defended," service of the subpoena on the witness is not required if, instead, written notice requesting the witness' attendance and stating the time and place of the hearing is served on the attorney of the party or person. Service of the notice to attend must be made in compliance with C.C.P. 1987. (Govt.C. 11450.50.)

(5) Failure To Comply and Continuance. Failure to comply with a duly issued and acknowledged subpoena may be punished as a contempt, and the subpoena may so state. When a party requests a continuance because of a witness' failure to appear at the time and place required for appearance or testimony by a subpoena, the party must prove compliance with the service requirements. The continuance may be granted only "for a period of time that would allow personal service of the subpoena and in no event longer than that allowed by law." (Govt.C. 11450.20(b).)

(6) Motion for Protective Order. The person served may object to the terms of the subpoena or subpoena duces tecum "by a motion for a protective order, including a motion to quash." The objection must be resolved by the presiding officer, who "may make another order that is appropriate to protect the parties or the witness from unreasonable or oppressive demands, including violations of the right to privacy." A subpoena or subpoena duces tecum issued by the agency on its own motion may be quashed by the agency. (Govt.C. 11450.30.)

(7) Compensation. A witness other than a party is entitled to receive the same mileage and fees as allowed by law to a witness in a civil case. The fees allowance, however, does not apply to an officer or employee of the state or a political subdivision of the state. The compensation must be paid by the party who requested the subpoena. (Govt.C. 11450.40.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §111 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.464, 465

81 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

e. Depositions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 81

[§ 81] Depositions.

(1) Administrative Procedure Act. Govt.C. 11511 makes provision for taking of depositions in the manner prescribed for civil actions, and calls for an order requiring the witness to appear before "an officer named in the petition." (See Reimel v. House (1969) 268 C.A.2d 780, 786, 74 C.R. 345 [taking of deposition before notary other than one named in petition held inconsequential irregularity].)

For depositions sought under Govt.C. 11511, the agency does not have to issue subpoenas until the petitioner has made an adequate showing by verified petition. (Stevenson v. State Bd. of Med. Examiners (1970) 10 C.A.3d 433, 440, 88 C.R. 815.)

In Stevenson, supra, the court commented on the relationship between Shively v. Stewart (1966) 65 C.2d 475, 55 C.R. 217, 421 P.2d 65, supra, §76, and the amendments to the Administrative Procedure Act (supra, §77) as follows:

(a) When Shively mentioned a ministerial duty to issue subpoenas, the court was referring to former Govt.C. 11510(a). (10 C.A.3d 439.)

(b) The depositions authorized by Shively were of a limited nature, i.e., only of the administrative agency's executive employees. Prehearing depositions of alleged material witnesses other than these employees were not authorized. (10 C.A.3d 439.)

(c) The reference in Shively to "prehearing discovery" was limited to the production of evidentiary material in the possession or under the control of the deponent. General discovery was not approved. (10 C.A.3d 439.)

(d) Govt.C. 11511 requires a showing by verified petition and speaks of an agency order; this "indicates the agency must itself assess the sufficiency of the applicant's showing, rather than suggesting that the agency must issue the subpoena and order the deposition regardless of that showing." (10 C.A.3d 439.)

(2) Other Statutes. Other statutes make express provision for depositions in particular situations. (See, e.g., Lab.C. 5710 [Workers' Compensation Appeals Board; "in the manner prescribed by law for like depositions in civil actions"]; Pub.Util.C. 1794 [similar]; B. & P.C. 6052 [State Bar Board of Governors or Local Administrative Committee (now replaced by State Bar Court and its departments; see 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §§625 et seq., 650); as provided in State Bar Rules of Procedure]; see also C.E.B., Workers' Compensation Practice 3d, §§7.7, 7.45; 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §29 et seq.)

(3) Due Process Concerns. In Blinder, Robinson & Co. v. Tom (1986) 181 C.A.3d 283, 226 C.R. 339, plaintiff sought mandamus in the superior court to compel defendant Commissioner of Corporations to commence proceedings to enable plaintiff to take out-of-state depositions for introduction in an administrative proceeding by the Commissioner to revoke plaintiff's broker-dealer license. The superior court judge denied the petition and the Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that the Commissioner did not abuse his discretion in denying the request. The court also rejected a due process attack on the procedure of Govt.C. 11511, observing that the procedure had been upheld by decisions in California and elsewhere. (181 C.A.3d 290.) But the opinion adds the following comment:

"What troubles us about Government Code section 11511, and its application in this case is not merely the combination of investigatory, accusatory and adjudicative functions in one person. It is, rather, the additional power of that same person to make the decision denying the accused the right to produce evidence at the hearing. This is accomplished by effectively denying the accused the right to take depositions without affording it the right to a review of that denial by a neutral or impartial person at any early and meaningful stage of the administrative proceedings before the burden of proof has shifted to the accused." (181 C.A.3d 295.)

However, the court agreed with defendant Commissioner that superior court review of the administrative refusal satisfied due process. (181 C.A.3d 297.)

(4) Equal Protection Concerns. In Kenneally v. Medical Bd. (1994) 27 C.A.4th 489, 32 C.R.2d 504, a physician subject to a disciplinary hearing by the Medical Board of California filed a complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief, claiming that Govt.C. 11511 denied him equal protection of the laws. He pointed out that lawyers facing license revocation proceedings may take preadministrative hearing depositions, while Govt.C. 11511 denied him this right. The trial judge issued a preliminary injunction staying the hearing until plaintiff had an opportunity to take the depositions at issue. Held, reversed.

(a) Neither plaintiff, nor licensed physicians in general, belong to a suspect class, and plaintiff's right to continue to practice was not a fundamental right for equal protection purposes. Thus, to meet the physician's equal protection challenge, the statute only needed to pass the rational basis test. (27 C.A.4th 496, 498.)

(b) The restrictions on the use of depositions help prevent delay and reduce the overall cost of disciplinary proceedings for all parties. The legal profession's historical position--and especially the fact that its regulatory system is controlled by the Supreme Court--make it unlike other professions. And physicians have a greater and more immediate impact on the health and life of those they serve than do attorneys. For this reason, delay reduction in physician disciplinary proceedings is more imperative than in attorney disciplinary proceedings. The need to avoid delay and reduce costs provides a rational basis for restricting a physician's prehearing discovery rights. (27 C.A.4th 500, 501.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.466

82 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

10. Discovery and Production of Evidence.

f. Interrogatories.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 82

[§ 82] Interrogatories.

Interrogatories are not mentioned in Shively v. Stewart (1966) 65 C.2d 475, 55 C.R. 217, 421 P.2d 65, supra, §76, Everett v. Gordon (1968) 266 C.A.2d 667, 72 C.R. 379, supra, §76, or Govt.C. 11507.6, supra, §77. However, where depositions can be used for administrative discovery, there is no logical objection to use of interrogatories for the production of evidentiary material that is in the possession or under the control of a party. (Romero v. Hern (1969) 276 C.A.2d 787, 793, 81 C.R. 281.)

Romero points out that Govt.C. 11507.6 provides for written requests, and indicates that no difference should result because the information was sought through "interrogatories" rather than "requests." (276 C.A.2d 794.) No requirement exists, however, that the answers be given under oath. (276 C.A.2d 793.)

Govt.C. 12963.2 authorizes the Department of Fair Employment and Housing to serve interrogatories after a complaint for employment or housing discrimination is filed with it. (See 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §767.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §948.

83 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

11. Introduction of Evidence.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 83

[§ 83] In General.

There is little California case law on the "trial practice" aspect of administrative proceedings, except for the emphasis on the right to present evidence (supra, §54) and the right to cross-examine (infra, §84) and rebut (infra, §85). The following may be consulted on this subject:

(1) Hearing Officers. (See 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §45; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §308; C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice 2d, §6.2 et seq.)

(2) Confrontation of Witnesses and No Evidence Obtained Secretly by Agency. (See 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §§302, 351, 355 et seq.; C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice 2d, §§7.15 et seq., 7.63 et seq.; on propriety of telephone testimony or hearings, see C & C Partners, Ltd. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1999) 70 C.A.4th 603, 611, 82 C.R.2d 783 [penalty proceeding against garment manufacturer for operating without registration certificate]; 88 A.L.R.4th 1094 [public welfare proceedings]; 90 A.L.R.4th 532 [unemployment compensation proceedings]; 9 A.L.R.5th 451 [prison proceedings].)

(3) Testimony Under Oath. Some statutes expressly require that testimony be taken under oath, and this is the usual practice. (See Govt.C. 11513(a) [Administrative Procedure Act: "Oral evidence shall be taken only on oath or affirmation"]; Govt.C. 11528 [any agency member, secretary, or hearing officer has power to administer oath]; Marlow v. Orange County Human Services Agency (1980) 110 C.A.3d 290, 293, 167 C.R. 776; cf. Tennant v. Civil Service Com. of Los Angeles (1946) 77 C.A.2d 489, 498, 175 P.2d 568 [no oath given but defect waived by failure to object]; and see generally 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §344; C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice 2d, §7.102.)

(4) Introduction of Evidence. (See Govt.C. 11425.10(a) [person to whom agency action is directed has right to present and rebut evidence]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §§302, 338 et seq.; on objections, see C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice 2d, §§7.73, 7.81, 7.96; Board of Trustees of the Contra Costa Junior College Dist. v. Schuyten (1958) 161 C.A.2d 50, 54, 326 P.2d 223 [improper omnibus or compound question]; on impeachment of witness for bias, see Byrd v. Savage (1963) 219 C.A.2d 396, 401, 32 C.R. 881; C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice 2d, §7.108; on suggested use of mathematical tools known as "regression models," see 86 Harv. L. Rev. 1442.)

The workers' compensation hearing is fully discussed in the Continuing Education handbook. (See C.E.B., Workers' Compensation Practice 3d, §§8.1 et seq., 8.40, 8.41 [use of photographs, motion pictures, and diagrams].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Hearing Officers. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §311 et seq.

(2) Confrontation of Witnesses and No Evidence Obtained Secretly by Agency. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §§305, 351 et seq.(4) Introduction of Evidence. On chain of custody requirement, see Edgerton v. State Personnel Bd. (2000) 83 C.A.4th 1350, 1357, 1358, 100 C.R.2d 491.West's Key Number Digest, Administrative Law and Procedure k.476, 477

84 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

11. Introduction of Evidence.

b. Cross-Examination.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 84

[§ 84] Cross-Examination.

(1) General Principle: No Denial of Right. The right to cross-examine witnesses in quasi-judicial administrative proceedings is considered as fundamental an element of due process as it is in court trials. Hence, the denial or substantial curtailment of the right will be grounds for annulment of the agency action. (See Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1941) 47 C.A.2d 713, 715, 118 P.2d 848; Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1946) 74 C.A.2d 911, 913, 170 P.2d 36, supra, §71; Langendorf United Bakeries v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1948) 87 C.A.2d 103, 104, 195 P.2d 887; and see generally 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §355; Model State Administrative Procedure Act (1981) §4-211, 15 U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 85.)

In Greene v. McElroy (1959) 360 U.S. 474, 79 S.Ct. 1400, 3 L.Ed.2d 1377, the Government revoked the security clearance of petitioner, an engineer employed by a private manufacturer of military products. The Court held that, irrespective of constitutional due process, neither Congress nor the President had authorized the administrative agency to act without affording petitioner the safeguards of confrontation and cross-examination. The opinion quotes Wigmore, and restates the court's own position that the traditional rights of confrontation and cross-examination have been protected not only in criminal trials "but also in all types of cases where administrative and regulatory action were under scrutiny." (79 S.Ct. 1414, 3 L.Ed.2d 1391.) The security procedure was criticized as follows: "[N]ot only is the testimony of absent witnesses allowed to stand without the probing questions of the person under attack which often uncover inconsistencies, lapses of recollection, and bias, but, in addition, even the members of the clearance boards do not see the informants or know their identities, but normally rely on an investigator's summary report of what the informant said without even examining the investigator personally." (79 S.Ct. 1415, 3 L.Ed.2d 1391.) (See 73 Harv. L. Rev. 196; 75 Harv. L. Rev. 434 [new Defense Department regulation providing for limited confrontation].)

The right is recognized by the Administrative Procedure Act, but its method and scope are liberalized: Each party has the right "to cross-examine opposing witnesses on any matter relevant to the issues even though that matter was not covered in the direct examination; to impeach any witness regardless of which party first called him or her to testify." (Govt.C. 11513(b).) This statute rejects the court trial limitation of cross-examination to the scope of the direct examination (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §231 et seq.), and removes the old restrictions on impeachment of a party's own witness (now also abolished by the Evidence Code, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §356).

(2) Distinction: Informal Proceedings. Govt.C. 11445.50(b) provides that an agency may specify by regulation the categories of cases in which cross-examination is not deemed necessary under the informal hearing procedures of the Administrative Procedure Act (supra, §52). However, the presiding officer "may allow cross-examination of witnesses in an informal hearing notwithstanding an agency regulation if it appears to the presiding officer that in the circumstances cross-examination is necessary for proper determination of the matter."

(3) Cross-Examination of Respondent. Govt.C. 11513(b), supra, further states: "If respondent does not testify in his or her own behalf he or she may be called and examined as if under cross-examination." This provision was obviously designed to incorporate the practice of examining an adverse party as if under cross-examination (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §202 et seq.). But its peculiar introductory words (italicized, supra) raise a problem of interpretation not yet resolved: May the respondent be called by the agency at any time, or only after the agency has presented a prima facie case, at which time it first becomes necessary for the respondent to testify or refuse to testify "in his or her own behalf"? (See 44 Cal. L. Rev. 400; for dictum that agency must first present a prima facie case, see O'Mara v. State Bd. of Pharmacy (1966) 246 C.A.2d 8, 12, 54 C.R. 862 ["board under [Govt.C. 11513(b)] was required to rest its case temporarily to allow appellant to exercise his right to testify before they might call him as their own witness"]; see also C.E.B., Administrative Hearing Practice 2d, §7.113.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Principle: No Denial of Right. See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §351 et seq.

85 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

11. Introduction of Evidence.

c. Rebuttal.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 85

[§ 85] Rebuttal.

The right to offer evidence in rebuttal is as fundamental as the right of cross-examination (supra, §84), and is expressly stated in Govt.C. 11513(b). (See also Govt.C. 11425.10(a) [hearing rights include opportunity to rebut evidence]; Lab.C. 5704 [workers' compensation proceedings]; 2 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Administrative Law §§302, 355 et seq.)

Pence v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1965) 63 C.2d 48, 50, 45 C.R. 12, 403 P.2d 140, characterizes "improper restrictions on the right to present evidence in rebuttal" as a denial of constitutional due process.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Administrative Law §§305, 351 et seq.

86 of 86 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER I - Introduction

IX. EVIDENCE IN ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEEDINGS

E. Particular Problems.

12. Preservation of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Intro § 86

[§ 86] Preservation of Evidence.

In Scott v. Meese (1985) 174 C.A.3d 249, 219 C.R. 857, plaintiff, who had been arrested for driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, petitioned for mandamus to prevent defendant Department of Motor Vehicles from suspending his license under Veh.C. 13353 (the implied consent law). The only issues at the administrative hearing were whether plaintiff had refused to complete a chemical test after being requested to do so, and whether he had been informed that a refusal would result in license suspension. The hearing officer refused to strike the arresting officer's testimony concerning plaintiff's failure to complete the required test, even though a tape recording of the officer's admonitions and plaintiff's response had been inadvertently erased. The trial court denied plaintiff's petition. Held, affirmed.

(a) Duty to preserve evidence. "[T]he core duty to preserve constitutionally material evidence under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment," imposed on the prosecution in a criminal case by People v. Hitch (1974) 12 C.3d 641, 117 C.R. 9, 527 P.2d 361, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §124, and California v. Trombetta (1984) 467 U.S. 479, 104 S.Ct. 2528, 81 L.Ed.2d 413, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §125, also applies to administrative hearings. (174 C.A.3d 257.)

(b) Sanctions. Assuming that the erased tape recording was constitutionally material, and that comparable evidence (such as a neutral third party overhearing the conversation and recalling it precisely) was not obtainable, the dismissal of the administrative proceeding, or the exclusion of the officer's testimony, would be inappropriate:

(1) There was no conscious effort to suppress exculpatory evidence. Rather, the tape was erased when the arresting officer's partner unknowingly used the same tape to record another suspect's refusal to submit to testing. (174 C.A.3d 258.)

(2) Both plaintiff and the officer could testify and be cross-examined as to their conversation. Thus, the loss of the tape did not deprive plaintiff of his ability to present his defense, but simply placed him in the same position as a person charged with violating the implied consent law whose refusal is not recorded by the police. This is not to say that the officer had no duty to take reasonable steps to preserve the conversation once he decided to record it; however, the "windfall sanction" sought by plaintiff was "too drastic a remedy for the wrong." (174 C.A.3d 258.)

(3) Plaintiff had been advised of his right to take a blood or breath test in the event he was incapable of completing the urine test. The destroyed tape related only to whether he was later readvised of that right when he was unable to furnish a second specimen that was required 20 minutes after the first. (174 C.A.3d 259.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

1 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

I. IN GENERAL

A. Nature of Power.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 1

[§ 1] Nature of Power.

Under the doctrine of judicial notice, certain matters are assumed to be indisputably true, and the introduction of evidence to prove them will not be required. Judicial notice is thus a substitute for formal proof. (See generally Ev.C. 450 et seq.; Del Bosque v. Singh (1937) 19 C.A.2d 487, 489, 65 P.2d 951 [may be relied on to contradict other evidence and to support findings or judgment]; Mann v. Mann (1946) 76 C.A.2d 32, 42, 172 P.2d 369; Post v. Prati (1979) 90 C.A.3d 626, 633, 153 C.R. 511 [fundamental theory is that matter that is judicially noticed is one of law or fact that cannot reasonably be disputed]; 2 McCormick 5th, §328 et seq.; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 31; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2565 et seq.; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, Chap. 47; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §24; 2 Wharton, Crim. Evidence (14th ed.), §204 et seq.; 57 Harv. L. Rev. 269; 18 Hastings L. J. 117; on judicial notice in federal courts, see F.R. Evid., Rule 201; 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §47 et seq.; on procedure, see infra, §36; on power of reviewing court, see infra, §45 et seq.)

The use of judicial notice as a substitute for formal proof of matters that cannot be successfully controverted is a highly desirable means of saving time and money. Nevertheless, relevance considerations remain applicable. Even material for which judicial notice might seem mandatory (see infra, §7 et seq.) may be excluded under Ev.C. 350 (only relevant evidence is admissible; see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §6) and Ev.C. 352 (exclusion of evidence where prejudice outweighs probative value; see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §17). (Mangini v. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (1994) 7 C.4th 1057, 1063, 31 C.R.2d 358, 875 P.2d 73; see Mozzetti v. Brisbane (1977) 67 C.A.3d 565, 578, 136 C.R. 751 [in action by property owners against city and city engineer for flood damage, trial judge properly denied, on relevance grounds, plaintiffs' request for judicial notice of proclamation declaring county a federal disaster area, as proclamation did not specifically refer to area where plaintiffs' property was located].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Shamrock Foods Co. (2000) 24 C.4th 415, 422, footnote 2, 101 C.R.2d 200, 11 P.3d 956 [precondition to judicial notice in either its mandatory or permissive form is that matter to be noticed be relevant to material issue]; 60 Proof of Facts 3d 175 [proving matters by judicial notice]; 2 McCormick 6th, §328 et seq.; Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §7:1 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.304(1); Evidence k.1

2 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

I. IN GENERAL

B. Judge's Knowledge Distinguished.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 2

[§ 2] Judge's Knowledge Distinguished.

By consulting pertinent sources of information, including experts, a judge may take judicial notice of matters of which he or she has no knowledge. (Ev.C. 454, infra, §40; see People v. Mayes (1896) 113 C. 618, 626, 45 P. 860; Allen v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1935) 3 C.2d 214, 215, 43 P.2d 787; People v. Bartlett (1962) 199 C.A.2d 173, 177, 18 C.R. 480; cf. People v. Archerd (1970) 3 C.3d 615, 638, 91 C.R. 397, 477 P.2d 421, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §15 ["we disapprove the action of the trial judge in consulting experts outside of court"].)

But the judge's personal knowledge of a matter is not a sufficient basis for taking judicial notice of it, if it is not already a proper subject of judicial notice as determined by statute or case law. (Varcoe v. Lee (1919) 180 C. 338, 344, 181 P. 223; Estate of Fulcher (1965) 234 C.A.2d 710, 719, 44 C.R. 861, citing the text; see Ev.C. 450, infra, §6; 2 McCormick 5th, §329; 57 Harv. L. Rev. 292.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §329.

3 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

I. IN GENERAL

C. Effect of Judicial Notice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 3

[§ 3] Effect of Judicial Notice.

(1) Substitute for Proof. Former C.C.P. 1827 classified judicial notice as a type of evidence. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §18.) The classification was unsound, for the judge does not proceed in accordance with the rules of competency of witnesses and authentication of writings; moreover, the exclusionary rules (opinion rule, hearsay rule, Secondary Evidence Rule, etc.) are inapplicable. A more important distinction, however, is its conclusive effect (infra, this section). Judicial notice is, therefore, better described as a substitute for proof, "a judicial shortcut, a doing away with the formal necessity for evidence because there is no real necessity for it." (Varcoe v. Lee (1919) 180 C. 338, 344, 181 P. 223; see Sosinsky v. Grant (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1548, 1564, 8 C.R.2d 552, citing the text; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.2.)

(2) Conclusive. Despite the contrary suggestion by Wigmore (9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2567), the weight of authority is that, where notice is mandatory, the effect is substantially that of a conclusive presumption; i.e., the fact must be accepted and no evidence can be offered to dispute it. (See 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2567a; 1 Jones 7th, §2; 57 Harv. L. Rev. 279; 59 Harv. L. Rev. 482.) Unif. Rule 201(g) follows this view. (See 13A (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 195.) It is also the California view, as reflected in Ev.C. 457 (infra, §42). (See 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.6; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §47.60; as to distinction between notice of genuineness and content of official document, and truth of facts recited in document, see infra, §19.)

(3) Operation Against the Pleader. It has long been established in California that allegations in a pleading contrary to judicially noticed facts will be ineffectual; i.e., judicial notice operates against the pleader. (See Arnold v. Universal Oil Land Co. (1941) 45 C.A.2d 522, 529, 114 P.2d 408; Watson v. Los Altos School Dist. (1957) 149 C.A.2d 768, 771, 308 P.2d 872; Carroll v. Puritan Leasing Co. (1978) 77 C.A.3d 481, 485, 143 C.R. 772; Four Star Elec. v. F & H Const. (1992) 7 C.A.4th 1375, 1379, 10 C.R.2d 1; 4 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §401; 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §901.)

Insofar as mandatory judicial notice is concerned, the Evidence Code raises no problem in this connection. But as to matters that require notice to the adverse party and furnishing of information to the judge (see infra, §36 et seq.), a demurring party must specify, in the demurrer or in the supporting points and authorities, the matter to be judicially noticed "except as the court may otherwise permit." (C.C.P. 430.70; see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. Before Trial 3d, §30.10; 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §914.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Conclusive. See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 20 [Unif. Rule 201(g)]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.52

4 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

I. IN GENERAL

D. Former Law and Evidence Code.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 4

[§ 4] Former Law and Evidence Code.

The former judicial notice law--one provision in the Code of Civil Procedure, supplemented by scattered provisions in other codes--was unclear in scope and wholly inadequate in procedural implementation and safeguards. Moreover, in many areas where judicial notice was proper, it was not clear that notice was mandatory. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 451.) These statutes were replaced in 1965 by new Evidence Code provisions, generally following the approach of the original Uniform Rules in distinguishing between matters as to which judicial notice is mandatory and those as to which it is optional unless requested by a party who gives adequate notice and furnishes sufficient information to the judge. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C., Div. 4; C.E.B., Trial Attorney's Evidence Code Notebook 3d, §450 et seq.; 18 Hastings L. J. 117; on current version of Unif. Rules, Rule 201, see 13A (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 195 et seq.)

Division 4 of the Evidence Code is organized as follows:

(1) Compulsory judicial notice. As to certain matters, judicial notice "shall be taken," regardless of whether a party makes a request. (Ev.C. 451; see infra, §7 et seq.)

(2) Optional judicial notice. A much broader list includes matters as to which judicial notice "may be taken." (Ev.C. 452; see infra, §16 et seq.)

The two sections overlap in some respects, and when they do, Ev.C. 451 prevails; i.e., notice is optional only to the extent that the matter is not embraced within Ev.C. 451. (Ev.C. 452, introductory sentence; see Law Rev. Com. Comment to Division 4.)

(3) Optional becomes compulsory on request. The judge must take notice of any matter listed in Ev.C. 452 if a party requests it and complies with certain procedural conditions (notification and information). (Ev.C. 453; see infra, §36 et seq.)

(4) Procedure. The statutes specify the procedure for requesting that notice be taken and giving the adverse party notice of the request (Ev.C. 453(a), infra, §37); presenting information relating to the matter to be noticed (Ev.C. 453(b), infra, §38; Ev.C. 455, infra, §41); instructing the jury (Ev.C. 457, infra, §42); and advising the parties of any denial of a request for notice and making a record of the denial (Ev.C. 456, infra, §39).

Additional sections deal with the judge's sources of information (Ev.C. 454, infra, §40), notice in subsequent trial proceedings (Ev.C. 458, infra, §43) and notice in the reviewing court (Ev.C. 459, infra, §45 et seq.).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 20 [Unif. Rule 201].

5 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

I. IN GENERAL

E. Federal Rules of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 5

[§ 5] Federal Rules of Evidence.

Rule 201 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, entitled "Judicial Notice of Adjudicative Facts," reads as follows:

"(a) Scope of Rule. This rule governs only judicial notice of adjudicative facts."

"(b) Kinds of Facts. A judicially noticed fact must be one not subject to reasonable dispute in that it is either (1) generally known within the territorial jurisdiction of the trial court or (2) capable of accurate and ready determination by resort to sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned."

"(c) When Discretionary. A court may take judicial notice, whether requested or not."

"(d) When Mandatory. A court shall take judicial notice if requested by a party and supplied with the necessary information."

"(e) Opportunity to be Heard. A party is entitled upon timely request to an opportunity to be heard as to the propriety of taking judicial notice and the tenor of the matter noticed. In the absence of prior notification, the request may be made after judicial notice has been taken."

"(f) Time of Taking Notice. Judicial notice may be taken at any stage of the proceeding."

"(g) Instructing Jury. In a civil action or proceeding, the court shall instruct the jury to accept as conclusive any fact judicially noticed. In a criminal case, the court shall instruct the jury that it may, but is not required to, accept as conclusive any fact judicially noticed." (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §47 et seq.; 1 Jones 7th, §2:8; 150 A.L.R. Fed 543 [what constitutes adjudicative facts within meaning of F.R. Evid., Rule 201].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

6 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

I. IN GENERAL

F. Matters Authorized by "Law."

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 6

[§ 6] Matters Authorized by "Law."

(1) In General. Although the statutes in effect before the adoption of the current judicial notice provisions (see supra, §4) enumerated matters that were subject to notice, the courts did not regard this as a limitation and frequently took notice of other matters of common knowledge. (See People v. Tossetti (1930) 107 C.A. 7, 10, 289 P. 881; South Shore Land Co. v. Petersen (1964) 226 C.A.2d 725, 744, 38 C.R. 392, quoting the text.)

The current provisions restrict the authority of trial judges, but recognize the power of the higher courts to create and expand the categories. "Judicial notice may not be taken of any matter unless authorized or required by law." (Ev.C. 450; see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.6.) Because "law" includes "decisional law" (Ev.C. 160, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §17), the matters specified in Ev.C. 451 and 452 are not inclusive.

(2) "Legislative Facts." In determining constitutionality or construing statutes, courts--particularly appellate courts--necessarily take notice of social and economic conditions and views of social policy relevant to the issue. This has been termed "judicial notice of legislative facts." (See Pearson v. State Social Welfare Bd. (1960) 54 C.2d 184, 189, 5 C.R. 553, 353 P.2d 33 [notice by Supreme Court of "the public policy of this state to establish and to maintain conformity between the state law and the requirements of the federal act for the receipt of grants-in-aid in support of the state public assistance program"]; Robinson v. Sacramento City Unified School Dist. (1966) 245 C.A.2d 278, 284, footnote 3, 53 C.R. 781, citing the text [notice of history of high school fraternities, in determining validity of statute prohibiting them as undemocratic]; 100 Harv. L. Rev. 1539; 2 McCormick 5th, §331; 1 Jones 7th, §2:4.) Neither the Model Code of Evidence nor the Uniform Rules of Evidence cover this subject, and the Evidence Code recognizes but makes no attempt to define or regulate the practice:

"Under the Evidence Code, as under existing law, courts may consider whatever materials are appropriate in construing statutes, determining constitutional issues, and formulating rules of law. That a court may consider legislative history, discussions by learned writers in treatises and law reviews, materials that contain controversial economic and social facts or findings or that indicate contemporary opinion, and similar materials is inherent in the requirement that it take judicial notice of the law. In many cases, the meaning and validity of statutes, the precise nature of a common law rule, or the correct interpretation of a constitutional provision can be determined only with the help of such extrinsic aids. ... Section 450 will neither broaden nor limit the extent to which a court may resort to extrinsic aids in determining the rules of law that it is required to notice." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 450; on judicial notice of matters relating to legislative history, see Schmidt v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1993) 14 C.A.4th 23, 30, footnote 10, 17 C.R.2d 340, 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §629 [recommendations of Law Revision Commission as to limitations period for personal injury claim against public entity]; Wolfe v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. (1996) 46 C.A.4th 554, 560, 53 C.R.2d 878 [fact that insurers stopped writing new policies because of fear of being unable to pay claims in event of earthquake was judicially noticeable as part of legislative history of statutes enacted to address issue of availability of earthquake insurance]; Estate of Joseph (1998) 17 C.4th 203, 210, footnote 1, 70 C.R.2d 619, 949 P.2d 472, 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, Supp., §152 [citing Schmidt; Law Revision Commission recommendations on provision allowing intestate's estate to pass to foster or stepchild, even though child was never adopted]; cf. People v. Patterson (1999) 72 C.A.4th 438, 443, 84 C.R.2d 870 [where meaning of controlled substances statute was at issue, judicial notice of legislative materials reflecting views of individual legislators, staffers, or other interested persons was not proper, as these would not reveal collegial intent of Legislature in enacting statute].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Orange v. Smith (2005) 132 C.A.4th 1434, 1450, 34 C.R.3d 383 [on appeal by father from child support order, judicial notice of two law review articles, requested by father, was barred by Ev.C. 450, as judicial notice of law review articles is not authorized under either Ev.C. 451 or 452].

(2) "Legislative Facts." See 2 McCormick 6th, §331. Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §95.

7 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

A. California and Federal Law.

1. Constitutions and Statutes.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 7

[§ 7] Constitutions and Statutes.

Ev.C. 451(a) provides for mandatory judicial notice of the "constitutional, and public statutory law of this state and of the United States." (See Los Angeles v. San Fernando (1975) 14 C.3d 199, 231, 123 C.R. 1, 537 P.2d 1250 [Spanish and Mexican laws governing property rights in California before annexation remain in effect unless repealed or altered and are therefore subject to mandatory judicial notice]; Young v. Boy Scouts of America (1935) 9 C.A.2d 760, 764, 51 P.2d 191 [act of Congress and corporation formed thereunder]; People v. Moore (1997) 59 C.A.4th 168, 178, 179, 69 C.R.2d 56 [in prosecution for conspiring with water district officer to take public monies from "district of this state," judicial notice was properly taken of Water Code provisions identifying water district as district of state]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.8.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Gee v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (2002) 96 C.A.4th 1418, 1426, 118 C.R.2d 105 [Workers' Compensation Appeals Board was required to judicially notice former Lab.C. 4062.9 (presumption that treating physician's diagnosis is correct) where presumption's underlying conditions were met, even though no party raised presumption as issue]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.27 et seq.

8 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

- A. California and Federal Law.
- 2. California City and County Charters.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 8

[§ 8] California City and County Charters.

Ev.C. 451(a), pursuant to express constitutional directions, requires notice of "the provisions of any charter described in Section 3, 4 or 5 of Article XI of the California Constitution." (See Spaulding v. Desmond (1922) 188 C. 783, 790, 207 P. 896; Clark v. Pasadena (1951) 102 C.A.2d 198, 200, 227 P.2d 306; Agostini v. Strycula (1965) 231 C.A.2d 804, 806, 42 C.R. 314, citing the text; Olson v. Sacramento (1974) 38 C.A.3d 958, 964, 113 C.R. 664 [county charter and civil service rules]; San Francisco Fire Fighters v. San Francisco (1984) 152 C.A.3d 113, 121, 201 C.R. 176 [judicial notice of city charter provision to which neither party directed court's attention]; as to powers of such chartered cities and counties, see 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §799.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §993.

9 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

A. California and Federal Law.

3. Decisional Law.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 9

[§ 9] Decisional Law.

Ev.C. 451(a) calls for mandatory notice of the "decisional" law of California and the United States. This also follows former California statutory rule. (See Loranger v. Nadeau (1932) 215 C. 362, 366, 10 P.2d 63 [judicial notice of a common law rule]; People v. Lynam (1967) 253 C.A.2d 959, 966, 61 C.R. 800 [judicial notice of statutes and cases in determining truthfulness of defendant's claims regarding legal consequences of trust plan]; People v. Law (1974) 40 C.A.3d 69, 75, 114 C.R. 708 [judicial notice of case law and comments regarding reliability of scientific test]; 24 Cal. L. Rev. 311, 313 [Loranger].)

However, requests for judicial notice should not be used as a way of circumventing appellate rules, including the normal briefing process. (Mangini v. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (1994) 7 C.4th 1057, 1064, 31 C.R.2d 358, 875 P.2d 73; see People v. Webster (1991) 54 C.3d 411, 428, footnote 4, 285 C.R. 31, 814 P.2d 1273 [prosecutor's request for judicial notice of Court of Appeal's unpublished decision in joint appeal of defendant's codefendants, for purpose of considering Court of Appeal's resolution of common appellate issues, was denied on ground that this would circumvent rule prohibiting citation or reliance on unpublished opinions; see 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §713].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.43 et seq.

10 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

B. Governmental Regulations.

1. California Agencies.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 10

[§ 10] California Agencies.

Judicial notice is taken of "[a]ny matter made a subject of judicial notice by Section 11343.6, 11344.6, or 18576 of the Government Code." (Ev.C. 451(b)); see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.10.) Ev.C. 451(b) continues existing statutory law by requiring judicial notice of the following:

(1) Regulations or orders repealing regulations filed with the Secretary of State. (Govt.C. 11343.6.) (For the modern view, in accord, see 2 McCormick 5th, §335; 1 Jones 7th, §2:111.)

(2) Regulations printed or incorporated by reference into the California Code of Regulations, and the repeal of a regulation as published in the Regulatory Code Supplement. (Govt.C. 11344.6.)

(3) Rules of the State Personnel Board. (Govt.C. 18576.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Regulations filed with Secretary of State: See 2 McCormick 6th, §335.(2) Code of Regulations: Govt.C. 11344.6 was amended in 2000 to substitute "Code of Regulations Supplement" for "Regulatory Code Supplement".

11 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

B. Governmental Regulations.

2. Federal Agencies.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 11

[§ 11] Federal Agencies.

Ev.C. 451(b) also refers to matters made subjects of judicial notice by "Section 1507 of Title 44 of the United States Code," i.e., documents published in the Federal Register. This covers (1) presidential proclamations and executive orders of general applicability and (2) agency orders, regulations, rules, certificates, codes of fair competition, licenses, notices, and other similar instruments of general applicability. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 451; see Ahrens v. Superior Court (1988) 197 C.A.3d 1134, 1141, 1147, 243 C.R. 420 [Environmental Protection Agency's statements in Federal Register regarding use of PCB transformers]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.10.)

These matters were noticed in California even before adoption of the Evidence Code in 1965. (For illustrations, see Downer v. Grizzly Livestock & Land Co. (1935) 6 C.A.2d 39, 42, 43 P.2d 843 [rules and regulations of U.S. land department]; Livermore v. Beal (1937) 18 C.A.2d 535, 541, 64 P.2d 987 [acts of U.S. Department of Interior and General Land Office: regulations, withdrawal orders, surveys and other records and communications]; Arnold v. Universal Oil Land Co. (1941) 45 C.A.2d 522, 529, 114 P.2d 408 [similar records of General Land Office]; People v. Mason (1946) 72 C.A.2d 699, 706, 165 P.2d 481 [Congressional declarations and presidential and executive proclamations made in connection with prosecution of World War II]; Pacific Solvents Co. v. Superior Court (1948) 88 C.A.2d 953, 955, 199 P.2d 740 [U.S. War Food orders]; Strother v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1949) 94 C.A.2d 525, 530, 211 P.2d 624 [regulations of U.S. Department of Commerce]; People v. International Steel Corp. (1951) 102 C.A.2d Supp. 935, 939, 226 P.2d 587 [Ringelmann Chart of air contamination density--official act of Bureau of Mines]; Mendez v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1953) 115 C.A.2d 192, 195, 251 P.2d 773 [contract between defendant and United States for distribution of electricity].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.304(10)

12 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

C. Rules of Court.

1. California Rules.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 12

[§ 12] California Rules.

(1) Judicial Council Rules. "[R]ules of practice and procedure for the courts of this state adopted by the Judicial Council" must be noticed. (Ev.C. 451(c); see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.11; for nature and effect of the rules, and published sources, see 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Courts, §186 et seq.)

(2) Rules of Professional Conduct. The State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct, adopted under B. & P.C. 6076 and approved by the Supreme Court, must be noticed. (Ev.C. 451(c); for nature and effect of the rules, and published sources, see 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §§476, 622.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.42-

13 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

C. Rules of Court.

2. Federal Rules.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 13

[§ 13] Federal Rules.

Only those rules prescribed by the United States Supreme Court are covered by the mandatory provisions of Ev.C. 451(d): "Rules of pleading, practice, and procedure prescribed by the United States Supreme Court, such as the Rules of the United States Supreme Court, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the Admiralty Rules, the Rules of the Court of Claims, the Rules of the Customs Court, and the General Orders and Forms in Bankruptcy." (See 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.12; on optional notice of other court rules, see infra, §26.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

14 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE

D. English Words and Phrases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 14

[§ 14] English Words and Phrases.

"The true signification of all English words and phrases and of all legal expressions" must be noticed. (Ev.C. 451(e)); see Castro v. California (1970) 2 C.3d 223, 239, footnote 28, 85 C.R. 20, 466 P.2d 244 [publication that consistently ignores political news is not "newspaper"]; Davis v. Thayer (1980) 113 C.A.3d 892, 902, 170 C.R. 328 [in ordinary usage "half a year" is equivalent of 6 months]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.13; for illustrations under prior state statute, see People v. Powell (1934) 1 C.A.2d 222, 224, 36 P.2d 201 [slang used by criminals: "plant" and "knock over"]; Irvine v. J. F. Shea Co. (1940) 41 C.A.2d 458, 459, 107 P.2d 80 [nature of "spreader-board or cross brace"]; Hom v. Clark (1963) 221 C.A.2d 622, 637, 35 C.R. 11 [nature of "alley" as used in local traffic code].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Brockey v. Moore (2003) 107 C.A.4th 86, 102, 131 C.R.2d 746 [meaning of "legal aid" as used in Judicial Council forms]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.304(4); Evidence k.16

15 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

II. COMPULSORY JUDICIAL NOTICE
E. Facts Universally Known.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 15

[§ 15] Facts Universally Known.

The Evidence Code distinguishes between facts subject to compulsory and to optional notice. In the highest category are "[f]acts and propositions of generalized knowledge that are so universally known that they cannot reasonably be the subject of dispute." (Ev.C. 451(f)); see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.14; 1 Jones 7th, §2:9.)

Judicial notice of facts of this type should not require any request, and it is accordingly made compulsory. Moreover, "universally known" should be given the practical interpretation of "known among persons of reasonable and average intelligence and knowledge." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 451.) (For illustrations, see infra, §30 et seq.)

By contrast, under F.R. Evid., Rule 201 (supra, §5), a court is not required to judicially notice a fact--even one not subject to reasonable dispute--unless a party requests that it do so.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

16 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

A. Law of Sister State or Territory.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 16

[§ 16] Law of Sister State or Territory.

(1) State. The first category of optional judicial notice (see supra, §4) is "[t]he decisional, constitutional, and statutory law of any state of the United States." (Ev.C. 452(a).) State law is a commonly recognized subject of notice. (See Smiley v. Citibank (1995) 11 C.4th 138, 145, footnote 2, 44 C.R.2d 441, 900 P.2d 690 [sister state decisions relating to interest chargeable by credit card issuer that is national bank]; Zinn v. Ex-Cell-O Corp. (1957) 148 C.A.2d 56, 81, 306 P.2d 1017; 2 McCormick 5th, §335; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.16.)

The former California statute referred to the "laws" and their interpretation by "the highest courts of appellate jurisdiction" of the states. This apparent exclusion of intermediate appellate courts was abandoned in the Evidence Code, which refers broadly to "decisional" law, i.e., to law established by "judicial decisions" (Ev.C. 160). "If this be an extension of existing law, it is a desirable one, for the courts of sister states generally can be considered as responsive to the need for properly determining the law as are equivalent courts in California." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452.)

(2) Territories. The former California statute referred to "the several states," and its coverage of territories was doubtful (except under the later provision on notice of foreign law; infra, §27). (See Perkins v. Benguet Consol. Mining Co. (1942) 55 C.A.2d 720, 768, 132 P.2d 70; 16 Cal. L. Rev. 64; 17 Cal. L. Rev. 417.) The Evidence Code takes care of the problem by its definition of "state" to include "district, commonwealth, territory, or insular possession of the United States." (Ev.C. 220.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) State. See 2 McCormick 6th, §335. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.35

17 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE
B. Governmental Resolutions and Private Acts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 17

[§ 17] Governmental Resolutions and Private Acts.

The "resolutions and private acts of the Congress of the United States and of the Legislature of this state" may be noticed. (Ev.C. 452(a).) The reference to "this state" supersedes language of an original draft referring to "any state." (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452, overlooking the change; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.17; on Ev.C. 452(c), which covers official acts of "any state," see infra, §19.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

18 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

C. Regulations, Ordinances, and Similar Legislative Acts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 18

[§ 18] Regulations, Ordinances, and Similar Legislative Acts.

"Regulations and legislative enactments issued by or under the authority of the United States or any public entity in the United States" may be noticed. (Ev.C. 452(b).)

(1) State and Local Public Entities. The lack of adequate and easily accessible records was the basis for the former view that municipal ordinances or rules of local boards could not be judicially noticed. (See Oakland v. Brock (1937) 8 C.2d 639, 641, 67 P.2d 344; Fickeisen v. Civil Service Com. (1950) 98 C.A.2d 419, 423, 220 P.2d 605; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 672.) This limited view was criticized (see 2 McCormick 5th, §335; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 673), and an exception was recognized for notice of local ordinances by local municipal courts. (See People v. Crittenden (1949) 93 C.A.2d Supp. 871, 877, 209 P.2d 161; People v. Cowles (1956) 142 C.A.2d Supp. 865, 867, 298 P.2d 732.)

Ev.C. 452(b), supra, read in connection with the definition of "public entity" (infra, this section), abandons the limitation, and authorizes notice of ordinances or any similar legislative enactments. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452; see Lab.C. 6304.5 [Ev.C. 452 applies to occupational safety and health standards]; Jordan v. Los Angeles (1968) 267 C.A.2d 794, 798, 73 C.R. 516, citing the text; Holmes v. Oakland (1968) 260 C.A.2d 378, 384, 67 C.R. 197 [city ordinance, to show control and duty of inspection of railroad right of way over city-owned land]; Cooke v. Superior Court (1989) 213 C.A.3d 401, 416, 261 C.R. 706 [county resolution]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.18.)

Ev.C. 200 defines "public entity" as a "nation, state, county, city and county, city, district, public authority, public agency, or any other political subdivision or public corporation, whether foreign or domestic." However, because Ev.C. 452(b) refers to public entities "in the United States," the statute's coverage extends to public entities in sister states, territories, and possessions, but not to those in foreign countries. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452.)

(2) Federal Agencies. Ev.C. 452(b) covers any federal regulations that do not fall within the mandatory class in Ev.C. 451(b), supra, §11. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) State and Local Public Entities. See 2 McCormick 6th, §335.

(3) (New) Tribal Ordinance. An Indian tribe's sovereign immunity ordinance is judicially noticeable. (Smith v. Hopland Band of Pomo Indians (2002) 95 C.A.4th 1, 7, footnote 8, 115 C.R.2d 455.) West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.304(12); Evidence k.32, 47

19 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

D. Official Acts.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 19

[§ 19] In General.

(1) In General. "Official acts of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the United States and of any state of the United States" may be noticed. (Ev.C. 452(c); see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.19.) Under the definition of "state," this also covers territories and possessions. (See Ev.C. 220, supra, §16.) Obviously, Ev.C. 452(c) partly overlaps Ev.C. 451(a) (supra, §7). (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Division 4.)

The "official acts" category was part of the former statute, and illustrative cases under both that and the present statute are plentiful. (See Harris v. Alcoholic Bev. Control App. Bd. (1965) 62 C.2d 589, 595, 43 C.R. 633, 400 P.2d 745 [bulletin of department to area administrators containing schedule of penalties]; E. H. Morrill Co. v. California (1967) 65 C.2d 787, 794, 56 C.R. 479, 423 P.2d 551 [action by contractor against state; notice of section of "General Conditions" of contract, official record of state agency]; Stanislaus Lumber Co. v. Pike (1942) 51 C.A.2d 54, 56, 124 P.2d 190 [Governor's proclamation of legal holiday]; Wilson v. Loew's (1956) 142 C.A.2d 183, 188, 298 P.2d 152 [proceedings and reports of House Committee on Un-American Activities]; Department of Mental Hygiene v. Rosse (1960) 187 C.A.2d 283, 287, 9 C.R. 589 [records of Department of Mental Hygiene showing cost of support of insane person at state hospital]; Chas. L. Harney v. California (1963) 217 C.A.2d 77, 85, 31 C.R. 524 [records of state Board of Control]; South Shore Land Co. v. Petersen (1964) 226 C.A.2d 725, 745, 38 C.R. 392 [official maps, deed from Board of Tideland Commissioners, report of Chief Engineer of Board, United States patent, permit from United States Corps of Engineers, bylaw of reclamation district]; Pratt v. Coast Trucking (1964) 228 C.A.2d 139, 143, 39 C.R. 332 [files and order of Public Utilities Commission]; Agostini v. Strycula (1965) 231 C.A.2d 804, 806, 42 C.R. 314 [records and proceedings of San Francisco Civil Service Commission]; People v. Ouellette (1969) 271 C.A.2d 33, 36, 76 C.R. 346 [Navy regulations requiring enlisted personnel on active duty to carry identification cards]; People v. Terry (1974) 38 C.A.3d 432, 439, 113 C.R. 233 [death certificate]; McGlothlen v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1977) 71 C.A.3d 1005, 1015, 140 C.R. 168, citing the text [report by Department of Motor Vehicles to Legislature]; Hogen v. Valley Hosp. (1983) 147 C.A.3d 119, 125, 195 C.R. 5 [files of Board of Medical Quality Assurance]; Smith v. State Bar (1989) 212 C.A.3d 971, 975, 976, 261 C.R. 24, citing the text [State Bar's "Instructions for Applicants"; State Bar was enough like governmental agency to be treated as one]; San Mateo County Coastal Landowners' Assn. v. San Mateo (1995) 38 C.A.4th 523, 552, 45 C.R.2d 117 [Secretary of Resources' letter and declaration of authentication regarding Coastal Commission review of local coastal plan submittals]; Washington v. Contra Costa (1995) 38 C.A.4th 890, 901, 45 C.R.2d 646 [documents relating to county's regulation of chemical company; quality of documents was irrelevant as to whether they could be judicially noticed].)

(2) Private Acts Not Included. The matter must in some manner meet the test of an official act. Thus, governmental surveys and maps will be noticed, but not private maps or other instruments by or between private parties. (South Shore Land Co. v. Petersen, supra, 226 C.A.2d 745.) Similarly, records of a county commission are noticed because counties are legal subdivisions of the state; records of a council created by a county but not acting for either the state or its subdivision are not. (Edna Valley Assn. v. San Luis Obispo County & Cities Area Planning Coordinating Council (1977) 67 C.A.3d 444, 449, 136 C.R. 665; see People v. Thacker (1985) 175 C.A.3d 594, 598, 599, 221 C.R. 37, citing the text [copies of articles of incorporation, statement by domestic corporation, and notice of issuance of shares were materials prepared by private person, merely on file with state agencies, and not official acts]; Ojavan Investors v. California Coastal Com. (1994) 26 C.A.4th 516, 527, 32 C.R.2d 103 [distinguishing Thacker; judicial notice was properly taken of declarations of restrictions explicitly crafted by Coastal Commission and required by it to be recorded by landowners]; Stevens v. Superior Court (1999) 75 C.A.4th 594, 607, 608, 89 C.R.2d 370 [applications and supporting documents filed by private parties with Department of Insurance were not official acts of department subject to judicial notice].)

(3) Truth of Contents Not Established. Judicial notice of the authenticity and contents of an official document does not establish the truth of all recitals therein, nor does it render inadmissible matter admissible. (Mangini v. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (1994) 7 C.4th 1057, 1063, 31 C.R.2d 358, 875 P.2d 73 [truth of government reports on tobacco use not judicially noticeable]; Love v. Wolf (1964) 226 C.A.2d 378, 403, 38 C.R. 183; Beckley v. Reclamation Bd. (1962) 205 C.A.2d 734, 741, 23 C.R. 428; People v. Long (1970) 7 C.A.3d 586, 591, 86 C.R. 590 ["While the courts take judicial notice of public records, they do not take notice of the truth of matters stated therein"]; Marocco v. Ford Motor Co. (1970) 7 C.A.3d 84, 88, 86 C.R. 526, citing the text.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See People v. Crusilla (1999) 77 C.A.4th 141, 147, 91 C.R.2d 415, citing the text [publication of California Attorney General's Office relating to state and federal jurisdiction over border crossing]; Rodas v. Spiegel (2001) 87 C.A.4th 513, 518, 104 C.R.2d 439 [decision and order of Contractors' State License Board]; Moehring v. Thomas (2005) 126 C.A.4th 1515, 1523, 25 C.R.3d 118 [2000 decennial census found on United States Census Bureau's website, used to determine that Siskiyou County's population falls below 200,000]; El Escorial Owners' Assn. v. DLC Plastering (2007) 154 C.A.4th 1337, 1367, 65 C.R.3d 524 [Secretary of State's certificate showing that painting company's corporate status was suspended, and additional documents showing that its corporate status was revived after payment of back taxes].

20 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

D. Official Acts.

2. Customary Practice as Official Act.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 20

[§ 20] Customary Practice as Official Act.

In Cruz v. Los Angeles (1985) 173 C.A.3d 1131, 219 C.R. 661, plaintiff sued defendant county for medical malpractice at a county medical center. Defendant demurred on the ground that plaintiff had failed to comply with Govt.C. 945.6 (action must be filed within 6 months from date claimant is mailed notice of rejection of claim), and asked the trial court to take judicial notice of a letter from its employee stating that she had personally mailed the rejection. The trial court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend, and plaintiff filed an amended complaint alleging that the rejection was never received. Defendant again demurred, and repeated its request for judicial notice. Plaintiff responded by citing a portion of the employee's deposition indicating that the employee had not mailed the rejection herself, but had given it to a coworker to mail. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. Held, the ruling was erroneous. Assuming that defendant's customary practice concerning the mailing of rejections constituted an official act of which judicial notice might be taken under Ev.C. 452(c), "there was not incontrovertibly contained therein the fact that such practice had been followed in the present instance." (173 C.A.3d 1134.) Hence, it was inappropriate here to resolve at the demurrer stage the factual issue involved. (173 C.A.3d 1133, 1134.) (See Childs v. California (1983) 144 C.A.3d 155, 162, 192 C.R. 526 [individual's declaration describing general mailing practice of state agency, not governed by specific agency rules; not an official act].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

21 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

D. Official Acts.

3. Where No Official Notice Taken.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 21

[§ 21] Where No Official Notice Taken.

In Harris v. Alcoholic Bev. Control App. Bd. (1965) 62 C.2d 589, 43 C.R. 633, 400 P.2d 745, petitioner sought mandamus to review the department's drastic penalty of revocation of a liquor license for minor infractions. The appeals board and superior court gave the requested relief, relying in part on an official department bulletin containing a schedule of penalties, under which the standard penalty for the acts in question was a mere suspension. But the bulletin had not been introduced in evidence in the administrative proceeding, nor had the procedure under Govt.C. 11515 for taking official notice of it been followed (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §72). The department therefore argued that, although the bulletin was a proper subject of both judicial notice and official notice, a court in reviewing an administrative determination could not take judicial notice of a matter not officially noticed. And this position was supported by a strong dictum in De Martini v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1963) 215 C.A.2d 787, 811, 30 C.R. 668.

The Supreme Court, affirming the superior court judgment, took the opposite position, expressly disapproving the De Martini dictum: "There is nothing in the language of section 11515 indicating that failure to take official notice of a matter precludes a court from taking judicial notice of it, and the reasons for the procedural requirements in that section do not necessitate that such requirements always be complied with before a court may take judicial notice of a matter. The requirement in section 11515 that the parties be informed of, and given an opportunity to refute, the matters to be noticed was designed to protect the parties from unwarranted action by an agency, and the requirement that matters noticed be referred to in the record was to insure that the facts noticed would be brought to the attention of the reviewing court. ... In the present case no reason is apparent why the failure to make the bulletin a part of the administrative record should preclude our taking judicial notice of it." (62 C.2d 596.) (See McGlothlen v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1977) 71 C.A.3d 1005, 1015, 1016, 140 C.R. 168 [judicial notice taken of report by Department of Motor Vehicles to Legislature; following Harris].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

22 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

E. Court Records.

1. Former Law.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 22

[§ 22] Former Law.

(1) Records of Same Case. It has long been held proper for a court to take judicial notice of its own records in a particular case. (See Schomer v. R. L. Craig Co. (1934) 137 C.A. 620, 627, 31 P.2d 396 [trial court]; Mason v. Drug (1939) 31 C.A.2d 697, 701, 88 P.2d 929 [same]; Gackstetter v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1935) 10 C.A.2d 713, 716, 52 P.2d 998 [appellate court will notice its record on a prior appeal in same case]; Hammell v. Britton (1941) 19 C.2d 72, 75, 119 P.2d 333 [same]; Brock v. Fouchy (1946) 76 C.A.2d 363, 366, 172 P.2d 945 [trial court could be deemed to have considered its Register of Actions even though photostatic copy, marked as exhibit, may not have been properly introduced in evidence (filing date was subsequent to decision)]; Estate of Wilson (1953) 116 C.A.2d 523, 527, 253 P.2d 1011 [probate court took judicial notice of independent actions pending in same superior court between parties to probate proceeding]; Taliaferro v. Taliaferro (1960) 178 C.A.2d 140, 141, 2 C.R. 716 [related prior proceedings in same case]; San Francisco v. Carraro (1963) 220 C.A.2d 509, 527, 33 C.R. 696, citing the text; 2 McCormick 5th, §330.)

(2) Records of Other Cases. But, despite the broad language of former C.C.P. 1875, it was held that, except in unusual circumstances to avoid unreasonable hardship, a court would not notice the records or judgment in a different case, even though the other action was pending in or was determined by the same court, and was between the same parties. (See Johnston v. Ota (1941) 43 C.A.2d 94, 96, 110 P.2d 507 [answer pleaded res judicata, based on dismissal of former action, but defendant failed to introduce judgment roll in evidence]; Olds v. Peebler (1944) 66 C.A.2d 76, 82, 151 P.2d 901; Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1944) 62 C.A.2d 601, 608, 145 P.2d 344 [no notice of findings or award of Industrial Accident Commission in prior proceeding]; Wolfsen v. Hathaway (1948) 32 C.2d 632, 638, 198 P.2d 1 [opinion erroneously added that "authority" of court is limited]; Alisal Sanitary Dist. v. Kennedy (1960) 180 C.A.2d 69, 80, 4 C.R. 379; and see criticism, 2 McCormick 5th, §330; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 666, footnote 7.)

The hardship exception, however, soon swallowed the rule; i.e., judicial notice was taken in the absence of a showing that this would be unfair to a party. (See Stafford v. Ware (1960) 187 C.A.2d 227, 228, 9 C.R. 706; People v. Adams (1961) 194 C.A.2d 1, 7, 14 C.R. 604.) Thereafter, the Supreme Court, in Flores v. Arroyo (1961) 56 C.2d 492, 496, 15 C.R. 87, 364 P.2d 263, abruptly ended the confusion by a flat declaration that judicial notice is taken in all cases; the contrary decisions were expressly overruled. (See also People v. Rojas (1962) 57 C.2d 676, 679, 21 C.R. 564, 371 P.2d 300 [same rule applies in appellate court]; Escobedo v. Travelers Ins. Co. (1961) 197 C.A.2d 118, 121, 17 C.R. 219; Palm Springs Paint Co. v. Arenas (1966) 242 C.A.2d 682, 687, 51 C.R. 747 [federal court judgment noticed by appellate court].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Records of Same Case. See 2 McCormick 6th, §330.

23 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

E. Court Records.

2. Evidence Code.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 23

[§ 23] In General.

Judicial notice of court records would doubtless be sanctioned by Ev.C. 452(c), supra, §19, as "[o]fficial acts of the ... judicial departments." (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452.) But to make the right to unlimited judicial notice unmistakably clear, Ev.C. 452(d) specifies that judicial notice may be taken of "[r]ecords of (1) any court of this state or (2) any court of record of the United States or of any state of the United States." As pointed out above, "state" includes territories and possessions. (Ev.C. 220, supra, §16.) (See Artucovich v. Arizmendiz (1967) 256 C.A.2d 130, 133, 63 C.R. 810 [under "the encompassing eye of judicial notice," reviewing court affirmed summary judgment because separate court file showed plaintiff had failed to file necessary counterclaim in earlier action]; Knoff v. San Francisco (1969) 1 C.A.3d 184, 200, 81 C.R. 683 [trial court properly took judicial notice of testimony in grand jury transcript which was incorporated by reference in petition for mandamus, and of fact of indictment pursuant to grand jury action]; People v. Bautista (1970) 6 C.A.3d 344, 348, 85 C.R. 688 [motion to augment record on appeal, though defective, substantially complied with Ev.C. 459 (infra, §49) and allowed court to take judicial notice of records of municipal court proceeding attached as exhibits to People's brief]; Gravert v. De Luse (1970) 6 C.A.3d 576, 580, 86 C.R. 93, citing the text [paternity case; trial judge properly refused to admit mother's juvenile court file in evidence because of confidential nature of those records, but took judicial notice of contents of file]; Tarr v. Merco Const. Engineers (1978) 84 C.A.3d 707, 712, 714, 148 C.R. 813 [records of bankruptcy court]; In re Tanya F. (1980) 111 C.A.3d 436, 440, 168 C.R. 713 [proceeding to free child from parental control; judicial notice of findings and orders of juvenile court in dependency proceedings]; People v. Buckley (1986) 185 C.A.3d 512, 525, 228 C.R. 329 [judicial notice of preliminary hearing transcript]; In re Martin L. (1986) 187 C.A.3d 534, 539, 232 C.R. 43 [wardship petition; court properly took judicial notice that prior petitions involving minor had been sustained for same offense, thereby establishing minor's knowledge that conduct was wrongful]; Magnolia Square Homeowners Assn. v. Safeco Ins. Co. (1990) 221 C.A.3d 1049, 1057, 271 C.R. 1 [judicial notice of complaint]; People v. Harbolt (1997) 61 C.A.4th 123, 126, 71 C.R.2d 459 [judicial notice of federal appellate opinion affirming conviction, to prove defendant had prior conviction within meaning of "three strikes" law]; C.E.B., 2 Civil Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.20; on limitation of judicial notice where it would deny defendant trial by jury on essential element of case, see People v. Billon (1968) 266 C.A.2d 537, 540, 72 C.R. 198.)

Under Ev.C. 452.5, the official acts and records of which a court may take judicial notice under Ev.C. 452(d), as well as Ev.C. 452(c) (supra, §19), include computer-generated official court records relating to criminal convictions.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Ross v. Creel Printing & Publishing Co. (2002) 100 C.A.4th 736, 743, 122 C.R.2d 787 [appellate court declined to take judicial notice of complaint filed in Nevada court, where it was not certified or provided under subpoena from Nevada court, and there was thus no assurance of its authenticity]; Salazar v. Upland Police Dept. (2004) 116 C.A.4th 934, 946, 11 C.R.3d 22 [in civil action for false arrest, it was proper to take judicial notice of stipulation signed by district attorney and plaintiff's attorney in related criminal action against plaintiff to effect that arrest was supported by probable cause]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.43 et seq.

24 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

- E. Court Records.
- 2. Evidence Code.
- b. Truth of Findings.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 24

[§ 24] Truth of Findings.

Sosinsky v. Grant (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1548, 8 C.R.2d 552, a malicious prosecution case, held that a court may not take judicial notice of the truth of the factual findings made by a judge who sat as the trier of fact in a previous case.

(a) While it may be proper to take judicial notice that the judge did in fact make a particular finding, it is a different matter to take judicial notice that the fact is necessarily true. (6 C.A.4th 1565.) Taking judicial notice of the truth of a judge's factual finding, even if the finding was made after a contested adversary hearing, is tantamount to taking judicial notice that the judge is infallible. "We resist the temptation to do so." (6 C.A.4th 1568, quoting the text, citing People v. Tolbert (1986) 176 C.A.3d 685, 222 C.R. 313, infra, this section, and disagreeing with Weiner v. Mitchell, Silberberg & Knupp (1980) 114 C.A.3d 39, 45, 170 C.R. 533, where the court took judicial notice of "pertinent facts" stated in a federal appeals court opinion.)

(b) In Columbia Cas. Co. v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. (1991) 231 C.A.3d 457, 282 C.R. 389, the court said that judicial notice of the truth of the content of court records is appropriate only when the existence of the record itself precludes contravention of the content, e.g., where findings of fact are binding on a party for purposes of res judicata or collateral estoppel. This statement improperly merges the doctrine of judicial notice with the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel. "Whether a factual finding is true is a different question than whether the truth of that factual finding may or may not be subsequently relitigated a second time. The doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel will, when they apply, serve to bar relitigation of a factual dispute even in those instances where the factual dispute was erroneously decided in favor of a party who did not testify truthfully." (6 C.A.4th 1569.) (See Western Mut. Ins. Co. v. Yamamoto (1994) 29 C.A.4th 1474, 1485, 35 C.R.2d 698 [judicial notice was properly taken of unpublished appellate court opinion in order to determine what issues had been previously adjudicated in juvenile court and could not therefore be relitigated in insurer's declaratory relief action; distinguishing Sosinsky].)

People v. Tolbert, supra, presented a slightly different issue: Should the trial judge have sustained defendant's demurrer to an information charging kidnapping because of a factual finding, made by the magistrate in the same case, that the alleged victim went willingly with defendant? Held, reversed. A magistrate is not the ultimate trier of fact; hence, although the finding appeared in the magistrate's records, the trial judge could not take judicial notice of the truth of that finding and give it conclusive effect in order to impugn the facial sufficiency of contrary allegations contained in the accusatory pleading. (176 C.A.3d 690.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Lockley v. Law Office of Cantrell, Green, Pekich, Cruz & McCort (2001) 91 C.A.4th 875, 883, 884, 110 C.R.2d 877 [in legal malpractice action, trial judge erred in taking judicial notice of statement in concurring opinion in case involving same parties, to effect that defendant had not represented plaintiff in matter being currently litigated; nothing in record indicated that this finding was product of adversary hearing or that plaintiff was given opportunity to contest it]; Kilroy v. California (2004) 119 C.A.4th 140, 148, 14 C.R.3d 109 [in action by towing business owners against state for violation of civil rights resulting from search of plaintiffs' premises, trial judge properly denied plaintiffs' request for judicial notice of federal judge's order granting motion of one owner to suppress fruits of search; judge's factual findings were not proper subject of notice, and plaintiffs failed in trial court to raise collateral estoppel as basis for notice].

25 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

- E. Court Records.
- 2. Evidence Code.
- c. Hearsay Allegations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 25

[§ 25] Hearsay Allegations.

Hearsay may not be treated as true simply because it is included in a court record that is properly noticed. (Day v. Sharp (1975) 50 C.A.3d 904, 914, 123 C.R. 918.)

Thus, in People v. Rubio (1977) 71 C.A.3d 757, 139 C.R. 750, a robbery trial, the prosecution sought to show defendant's flight as an implied admission of guilt. The showing consisted of minute orders, judicially noticed and read to the jury, stating that defendant's failure to appear for trial was "without sufficient excuse." The judge thereafter instructed the jury that a matter judicially noticed must be accepted as fact. Held, this was error. The entry in the minutes was a hearsay statement by a judge-declarant, and its inclusion in a document of which the court could take judicial notice did not render it admissible. (71 C.A.3d 766.) (See also Williams v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1983) 147 C.A.3d 893, 899, 195 C.R. 448 [trial judge in ruling on demurrer properly took judicial notice of fact of grand jury indictment, but improperly noticed the testimony on which indictment was based]; Garcia v. Sterling (1985) 176 C.A.3d 17, 22, 221 C.R. 349, 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §968 [court could judicially notice existence of statements contained in deposition transcript filed as part of its record, but not truth of those statements]; Bach v. McNelis (1989) 207 C.A.3d 852, 865, 255 C.R. 232; Columbia Cas. Co. v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co. (1991) 231 C.A.3d 457, 473, 282 C.R. 389, citing the text [in ruling on third party's motion for judgment on pleadings, court could not judicially notice truth of statements filed by plaintiff in its complaint and summary judgment motion against defendant]; In re Rocco M. (1991) 1 C.A.4th 814, 819, 2 C.R.2d 429 [in dependency proceeding in which, over mother's objection, judicial notice of file in previous dependency proceeding was taken, not every assertion in file could be accepted as true, but it was up to mother to identify and object to inadmissible portions].)

In Joslin v. H.A.S. Ins. Brokerage (1986) 184 C.A.3d 369, 228 C.R. 878, the court disagreed with the broadness of the rule stated in Garcia: The truth of statements in a deposition should be subject to judicial notice if there is not or cannot be a factual dispute concerning the matter sought to be noticed. (184 C.A.3d 375.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See North Beverly Park Homeowners Assn. v. Bisno (2007) 147 C.A.4th 762, 778, 54 C.R.3d 644, citing the text [in proceeding on defendants' motion to disqualify trial judge, judge hearing motion properly took judicial notice of declarations filed in connection with motions to disqualify same trial judge in other cases, but not of truth of their hearsay contents, where no independent hearsay exception was applicable].

26 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

F. Rules of Court.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 26

[§ 26] Rules of Court.

California Judicial Council and State Bar rules, and rules prescribed by the United States Supreme Court, must be noticed. (Ev.C. 451(c), (d), supra, §§12, 13, respectively.) California local court rules (see 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Courts, §186 et seq.), rules of sister state courts, and local federal court rules are less accessible; hence, judicial notice of them is optional and subject to the procedural conditions of notification and information (infra, §36). On compliance with these conditions, notice is taken under Ev.C. 452(e) of "[r]ules of court of (1) any court of this state or (2) any court of record of the United States or of any state of the United States." (Note that "state" includes territories and possessions; Ev.C. 220, supra, §16.) (See 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.21.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

27 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

G. Foreign Law.

1. Development of Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 27

[§ 27] Development of Rule.

(1) Early Law. Formerly, California courts (like those in the great majority of states) were not authorized to take judicial notice of the law of a foreign country. It was arbitrarily presumed, in the absence of contrary proof, that the foreign law involved was the same as California law, and to make the foreign law applicable it was necessary to plead and prove it as a fact. (See Silveyra v. Harper (1947) 82 C.A.2d 761, 765, 187 P.2d 83 [Mexican law]; Estate of Johnson (1950) 100 C.A.2d 73, 79, 223 P.2d 105 [Norwegian law]; 42 Cal. L. Rev. 701; 45 Cal. L. Rev. 23; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 673, 677; 14 Stanf. L. Rev. 162; 2 McCormick 5th, §335; 75 A.L.R.3d 177 [presumption as to law of foreign country].) This rule not only placed a heavy burden on counsel to establish foreign law by strict methods of formal proof, but also had the undesirable effect of placing the ultimate determination of this "issue of fact" in the hands of the jury, and drastically limiting appellate review of that determination. (See 42 Cal. L. Rev. 707; 45 Cal. L. Rev. 26.)

(2) Modern Statutes and Uniform Rules. The Uniform Judicial Notice of Foreign Law Act, approved in 1936 and withdrawn in 1966, was widely adopted, and the Model Code of Evidence and original Uniform Rules likewise provided for judicial notice. (See 42 Cal. L. Rev. 708; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 679; 2 McCormick 5th, §335; 21 Proof of Facts 2d 15; 23 A.L.R.2d 1437 [Uniform Act]; on F.R. Civ. P., Rule 44.1 and F.R. Crim. P., Rule 26.1, see 1967 A.S. 2; 9 Federal Practice & Procedure (Wright & Miller) §2441.)

In 1957, pursuant to a recommendation of the California Law Revision Commission, California joined the most advanced states by adopting a broad and practical amendment authorizing judicial notice of "[t]he law and statutes of foreign countries and of political subdivisions of foreign countries." (Former C.C.P. 1875(4).) The statute also contained an implementing procedure for notification and resort to reference materials or advice of experts, and gave the court discretion to refuse to take judicial notice when the foreign law could not be determined. (See Estate of Gogabashvele (1961) 195 C.A.2d 503, 508, 16 C.R. 77, citing the text; Gallegos v. Union-Tribune Publishing Co. (1961) 195 C.A.2d 791, 798, 16 C.R. 185, citing the text; Estate of Eng (1964) 228 C.A.2d 160, 167, 39 C.R. 254.)

The implementing procedure is now a general requirement in all optional notice cases (see infra, §36), and the discretion in foreign law cases is continued in the Evidence Code (infra, §29).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Early Law. See 2 McCormick 6th, §335.

(2) Modern Statutes and Uniform Rules. See 2 McCormick 6th, §335. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.304(11); Evidence k.37

28 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

- G. Foreign Law.
- 2. Evidence Code.
- a. Scope of Notice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 28

[§ 28] Scope of Notice.

An exceptionally broad rule is set forth in Ev.C. 452(f): Judicial notice may be taken of "[t]he law of an organization of nations and of foreign nations and public entities in foreign nations." Thus:

(1) Not only foreign countries, but "organizations" of nations are covered. (See Law Rev. Com. Comments on Ev.C. 310, 452.)

(2) Not only the nations and organizations, but their "public entities" are covered; the latter term includes any kind of public agency or subdivision. (See Ev.C. 200, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §17.)

(3) Not only statutory law, but "law" (including decisional law, Ev.C. 160) is covered. "This makes all law, in whatever form, subject to judicial notice." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452; see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.22.) (On maritime law, see 2 McCormick 5th, §335.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) "Law" is covered: See 2 McCormick 6th, §335.

29 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

G. Foreign Law.

2. Evidence Code.

b. When Law Cannot Be Determined.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 29

[§ 29] When Law Cannot Be Determined.

If, from the materials and sources made available, the court is unable to determine what the law is, the principal alternatives appear to be to follow the old presumption that it is the same as California law, or to refuse to decide a case that depends upon that determination. (See 2 McCormick 5th, §335.) The 1957 statute gave discretion to do either, and this statute was substantially restated in Ev.C. 311, as follows:

"If the law of an organization of nations, a foreign nation or a state other than this state, or a public entity in a foreign nation or a state other than this state, is applicable and such law cannot be determined, the court may, as the ends of justice require, either:"

"(a) Apply the law of this state if the court can do so consistently with the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of this state; or

"(b) Dismiss the action without prejudice or, in the case of a reviewing court, remand the case to the trial court with directions to dismiss the action without prejudice."

The language of the former statute--"If a court is unable to determine"--was changed to read "If the law ... cannot be determined." The Commission did this advisedly: "This revised language emphasizes that every effort should be made by the court to determine the applicable law before the case is otherwise disposed of under Section 311." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 311.)

The Comment continues:

"The reason why the court cannot determine the applicable foreign or sister-state law may be that the parties have not provided the court with sufficient information to make such determination. In such a case, the court may, of course, grant the parties additional time within which to obtain such information and make it available to the court. If they fail to obtain such information and the court is not satisfied that they made a reasonable effort to do so, the court may dismiss the action without prejudice. On the other hand, where counsel have made a reasonable effort and when all sources of information as to the applicable foreign or sister-state law are exhausted and the court cannot determine it, the court may either apply California law, within constitutional limits, or dismiss the action without prejudice." (See 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.39.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §335.

30 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

III. OPTIONAL JUDICIAL NOTICE

H. Matters Commonly Known or Readily Determinable.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 30

[§ 30] Matters Commonly Known or Readily Determinable.

Ev.C. 451(f) requires notice of matters "universally known"--the highest category. (See supra, § 15.) Ev.C. 452(g) and (h) provide for optional notice of matters that are not universally known and also of matters that are not known but are easily ascertainable.

(1) Matters of Common Knowledge Within the Jurisdiction. The court may take judicial notice of "[f]acts and propositions that are of such common knowledge within the territorial jurisdiction of the court that they cannot reasonably be the subject of dispute." (Ev.C. 452(g); see Jordan v. Worthen (1977) 68 C.A.3d 310, 319, 137 C.R. 282, citing the text [historical use of road held not a matter of common knowledge within territorial jurisdiction of court]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.23; 2 McCormick 5th, §329; for other examples, see infra, §§31, 32.) "Territorial jurisdiction" means the county for superior courts and the judicial district for municipal courts. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452; on unification of trial courts within each county, see 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Courts, Supp., §169.)

(2) Ascertainable Matters. The courts may also take judicial notice of "[f]acts and propositions that are not reasonably subject to dispute and are capable of immediate and accurate determination by resort to sources of reasonably indisputable accuracy." (Ev.C. 452(h); see People v. Thomas (1972) 8 C.3d 518, 520, 105 C.R. 366, 503 P.2d 1374 [judicial notice under Ev.C. 452(h) and 459 that, for several years immediately before his elevation to bench, challenged judge was assistant district attorney for Los Angeles County]; People v. Flaxman (1977) 74 C.A.3d Supp. 16, 22, 141 C.R. 799 [judicial notice, under Ev.C. 452(h), of foundational facts underlying engineering and traffic survey]; Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 C.A.3d 90, 101, footnote 5, 199 C.R. 383 [judicial notice of relevant criteria in Code of Ethics of National Association of Realtors]; Whispering Pines Mobile Home Park, Ltd. v. Scotts Valley (1986) 180 C.A.3d 152, 162, 225 C.R. 364 [real estate "appraisal treatises" not shown to be sources of reasonably indisputable accuracy]; Gould v. Maryland Sound Industries (1995) 31 C.A.4th 1137, 1145, 37 C.R.2d 718 [in wrongful discharge action in which plaintiff claimed he was employed under oral contract, trial judge erred in taking judicial notice of written contract and sustaining defendant's demurrer on that basis; issue of which contract plaintiff was employed under was matter of dispute, not ascertainable fact]; 2 McCormick 5th, §330; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.24.)

What are "sources of reasonably indisputable accuracy"? They "include not only treatises, encyclopedias, almanacs, and the like, but also persons learned in the subject matter." But reference works would not be received in evidence; they would merely be consulted by the judge and parties to determine whether or not to take judicial notice and the tenor of the matter to be noticed. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452; see People v. Archerd (1970) 3 C.3d 615, 638, 91 C.R. 397, 477 P.2d 421, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §15 [judge's consultation of medical textbooks concerning nature of insulin].)

Except for the basic distinction between compulsory and optional notice, which separates matters universally known from those in the two lesser categories, the Evidence Code provisions do not materially change the preexisting California law, for state courts gave the concept of "matters of common knowledge" a quite liberal application. (See infra, §31 et seq.; People v. Tossetti (1930) 107 C.A. 7, 14, 289 P. 881 [giving numerous examples of judicially noticeable matters of general knowledge].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Matters of Common Knowledge Within the Jurisdiction. See 2 McCormick 6th, §329.

(2) Ascertainable Matters. See Fremont Indem. Co. v. Fremont General Corp. (2007) 148 C.A.4th 97, 112, 55 C.R.3d 621, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, Supp., §702 [in action for misappropriation of funds, trial judge, in ruling on demurrer, erred in taking judicial notice of letter agreement and concluding that agreement allowed defendant to use net operating losses in manner alleged by plaintiff; judicial notice may be taken of existence of document but truth and proper interpretation of its contents remain disputable; relying on Gould v. Maryland Sound Industries (1995) 31 C.A.4th 1137, 37 C.R.2d 718, text, p. 124]; Poseidon Dev. v. Woodland Lane Estates, LLC (2007) 152 C.A.4th 1106, 1117, 62 C.R.3d 59 [in taking judicial notice of recorded documents showing assignment of plaintiff's interest in note and trust deed, trial judge was not precluded from concluding that plaintiff no longer had beneficial interest under documents; legal effect of assignment was not reasonably subject to dispute]; 2 McCormick 6th, §330. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.304(2); Evidence k.5 et seq.

31 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

IV. WELL-KNOWN FACTS: ILLUSTRATIONS

A. Matters of General Knowledge.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 31

[§ 31] Matters of General Knowledge.

The following matters are clearly within Ev.C. 452(g) or (h) (matters of common knowledge within jurisdiction, and matters that are easily ascertained; see supra, §30), and some undoubtedly come within Ev.C. 451(f) (universally known matters; see supra, §15).

(1) Economic Facts. (See O'Meara v. Haiden (1928) 204 C. 354, 367, 268 P. 334; Alexander v. State Capital Co. (1937) 9 C.2d 304, 312, 70 P.2d 619 [depression and declining real estate values]; Kircher v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1948) 32 C.2d 176, 187, 195 P.2d 427 [purchasing power of dollar has decreased to approximately one-half of what it was prior to "present inflationary spiral"]; People v. Chambers (1937) 22 C.A.2d 687, 703, 72 P.2d 746 [strikes and other labor disturbances in which violence and unlawful practices had occurred]; Foster v. Pestana (1947) 77 C.A.2d 885, 891, 177 P.2d 54 [rise in cost of living makes comparison of verdicts of past years improper]; Holmes v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1947) 78 C.A.2d 43, 50, 177 P.2d 32 [increase in values of real estate and personal property]; Gamer v. DuPont Glore Forgan (1976) 65 C.A.3d 280, 290, 135 C.R. 230 [changes in prime rate of interest]; Rowe v. Dorrough (1984) 150 C.A.3d 901, 905, 198 C.R. 131 [great number of Yamaha motorcycles are sold in California]; 12 A.L.R.2d 611 [changes in cost of living]; 42 A.L.R.3d 1439 [assessed valuations]; 21 A.L.R.4th 21 [effect of inflation on damages for future losses].)

(2) War Conditions. (See People v. Mason (1946) 72 C.A.2d 699, 706, 165 P.2d 481 [conditions at shipbuilding plants, including location, size, volume of employees, security regulations, and attempts at sabotage]; McCulloch v. Liguori (1948) 88 C.A.2d 366, 372, 199 P.2d 25 [shortage of building materials and foreseeability of government regulations, in 1946]; Estate of Edwards (1978) 82 C.A.3d 885, 888, 147 C.R. 458 [German occupation of Austria during World War II]; United States v. Reynolds (1953) 345 U.S. 1, 73 S.Ct. 528, 533, 97 L.Ed. 727 ["this is a time of vigorous preparation for national defense"; holding that accident report on Air Force plane testing secret electronic equipment was privileged from disclosure in a discovery proceeding in action under Federal Tort Claims Act].)

(3) Intoxicating Liquor. (See People v. Silva (1924) 67 C.A. 351, 358, 227 P. 976 ["jackass brandy is a distilled liquor containing a high percentage of alcohol"]; People v. Brotherton (1966) 239 C.A.2d 195, 204, 48 C.R. 513 [dicta: effect of drinking]; 49 A.L.R.2d 764 [intoxicating quality, from name].)

(4) Crime and Criminals. (See People v. Torres (1961) 56 C.2d 864, 867, 17 C.R. 495, 366 P.2d 823 [milk sugar and gelatin capsules used in processing narcotics]; Solis v. Superior Court (1966) 63 C.2d 774, 776, 48 C.R. 169, 408 P.2d 945 [heroin pushers are active at night]; People v. Moore (1963) 211 C.A.2d 585, 599, 27 C.R. 526 [colloquialism of criminals, "copped out," meaning admission of guilt, confession, or plea of guilty]; People v. Hubbard (1970) 9 C.A.3d 827, 831, 88 C.R. 411 ["reds," meaning capsules of Seconal]; Powell v. Superior Court (1991) 232 C.A.3d 785, 790, footnote 2, 283 C.R. 777 [judicial notice by appellate court of news media coverage of crime, in determining whether motion for change of venue should have been granted].)

(5) Geographical and Historical Facts. (See People v. Stralla (1939) 14 C.2d 617, 620, 96 P.2d 941 [geographical, historical and political data to determine whether Santa Monica Bay was within territorial boundary of state]; Colberg v. California (1967) 67 C.2d 408, 423, 62 C.R. 401, 432 P.2d 3, citing the text [tidal influence extends up San Joaquin River past port of Stockton]; Estate of Rudolph (1980) 112 C.A.3d 81, 83, 169 C.R. 126 [holographic will dated "Monday 26, 1978"; judicial notice of fact that only once did 26th day of a month occur on a Monday (June), hence, instrument contained "entire" date]; Anaheim v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1981) 116 C.A.3d 248, 261, 172 C.R. 92, 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §344 [distance and travel time between places]; Wolfe v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Ins. Co. (1996) 46 C.A.4th 554, 560, 53 C.R.2d 878 [in action attacking insurers' refusal to write new home insurance policies following major earthquake, judicial notice of fact of earthquake was proper].)

(6) Knowledge of Bench and Bar. Sometimes "common knowledge" is merely that of the particular professional group that administers the judicial processes, i.e., the bench and bar. (See People v. Adamson (1949) 34 C.2d 320, 333, 210 P.2d 13 ["This court can take judicial notice, too, that it would be difficult to find in California any lawyers more experienced or better qualified in defending criminal cases than the Public Defender of Los Angeles County and his staff"]; Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 C.3d 557, 564, 86 C.R. 65, 468 P.2d 193, quoting the text [changes in membership of law firm as reason for delay in bringing action to trial]; People v. Rhodes (1974) 12 C.3d 180, 182, 115 C.R. 235, 524 P.2d 363 [judicial notice by appellate court of fact that appellant's appointed trial counsel was also, at time of trial, city attorney for county seat of county in which trial was held]; Estate of Loud (1945) 70 C.A.2d 399, 403, 161 P.2d 49 [in rejecting attempt to probate precatory writing as codicil to will, court took judicial notice of fact that decedent was a practicing lawyer]; Heller v. Heller (1948) 88 C.A.2d 603, 607, 199 P.2d 44 [Court of Appeal in Los Angeles district took judicial notice of a general order of the Los Angeles Superior Court designating all judges of that court to hear conciliation cases]; Lee v. Cranford (1951) 107 C.A.2d 677, 680, 237 P.2d 986 [judicial notice of fact that court clerks write up minutes as case progresses]; Estate of Costa (1952) 109 C.A.2d 735, 742, 241 P.2d 621 [appellate court took notice of fact that Legislature has assistance of efficient legislative counsel and was therefore aware of rule of certain case]; 61 A.L.R.5th 707 [judicial notice of customs and practices of attorneys].)

(7) Groups. (See Gherna v. Ford Motor Co. (1966) 246 C.A.2d 639, 652, 55 C.R. 94 [automobile manufacturers undertake large-scale advertising programs]; People v. Coulon (1969) 273 C.A.2d 148, 154, 78 C.R. 95 [term "hippies" provides generalized description of external appearance adequate for group identification, but does not create inference about group's living arrangements]; Medina v. Hillshore Partners (1995) 40 C.A.4th 477, 481, 46 C.R.2d 871 [street gangs generally claim "home territory" and attempt to prevent rival gang members from entering].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(5) Geographical and Historical Facts.

Cross-Reference: The discussion of Anaheim v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. was not carried over to the 10th edition of Summary.

32 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

IV. WELL-KNOWN FACTS: ILLUSTRATIONS

B. Matters of Local Knowledge.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 32

[§ 32] Matters of Local Knowledge.

A court sitting in a particular city may take judicial notice of the existence and location of streets, their character and relation to each other, the congestion of pedestrian or vehicular travel, etc. (See Hom v. Clark (1963) 221 C.A.2d 622, 637, 638, 35 C.R. 11 [San Francisco superior court judge could notice fact that Grant Avenue is a main heavily travelled artery in Chinatown and not an "alley"]; People v. Kutz (1960) 187 C.A.2d 431, 434, 9 C.R. 626 [well-known street in city where court sits]; 86 A.L.R.3d 484 [location of street address].)

There are many other examples of cases coming within Ev.C. 452(g). (See Varcoe v. Lee (1919) 180 C. 338, 347, 181 P. 223 [locality where automobile accident occurred was a "business district"]; Mogle v. Moore (1940) 16 C.2d 1, 4, 104 P.2d 785 [local topography]; People v. Tossetti (1930) 107 C.A. 7, 14, 289 P. 881 [justice court took notice of population of township in order to establish its jurisdiction]; Wood v. Kennedy (1931) 117 C.A. 53, 59, 3 P.2d 366 [insolvency of a bank]; Most Worshipful Hiram of Tyre Grand Lodge v. Most Worshipful Sons of Light Grand Lodge (1949) 94 C.A.2d 25, 31, 210 P.2d 34 [knowledge of establishment of grand lodge of Masons in California prior to 1910]; Marin v. Dufficy (1956) 144 C.A.2d 30, 34, 300 P.2d 721 [Marin county superior court could take notice that Marin had no county hospital]; People v. Jacobs (1977) 72 C.A.3d Supp. 46, 48, 140 C.R. 141 [public beach at which defendant disrobed was in unincorporated part of county within meaning of county nudity ordinance]; People v. Edwards (1993) 17 C.A.4th 1248, 1255, footnote 2, 22 C.R.2d 3 [location of superior and municipal court buildings]; and see generally 2 McCormick 5th, §329; 48 A.L.R.2d 1102 [public thoroughfares and parks].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 2 McCormick 6th, §329.

33 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

IV. WELL-KNOWN FACTS: ILLUSTRATIONS

C. Medical and Scientific Facts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 33

[§ 33] Medical and Scientific Facts.

"Subdivisions (g) and (h) include, for example, facts which are accepted as established by experts and specialists in the natural, physical, and social sciences, if those facts are of such wide acceptance that to submit them to the jury would be to risk irrational findings." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 452.) The following are illustrative:

(1) Medical Facts. Judicial notice may be taken of medical facts that are commonly known, such as the nature and location of organs and the seriousness of certain diseases. (See Gallentine v. Fierro (1930) 110 C.A. 345, 346, 294 P. 59 [mortality tables]; Thomsen v. Burgeson (1938) 26 C.A.2d 235, 239, 79 P.2d 136 [location of tonsils, uvula and soft palate]; Agnew v. Los Angeles (1950) 97 C.A.2d 557, 567, 218 P.2d 66 [malpractice suit; failure to use X-ray in diagnosis of fracture is conduct below ordinary degree of care of practicing physicians]; People v. Sanders (1969) 268 C.A.2d 802, 805, footnote 1, 74 C.R. 350 [stoppage of blood flow to head until unconsciousness results is attended by serious danger]; Knowles v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 10 C.A.3d 1027, 1033, 89 C.R. 356 [coronary arteriosclerosis amounts to "heart trouble"]; 72 A.L.R.2d 554 [diseases, wounds, injuries, etc., and procedures for prevention and treatment].) (See also People v. Brotherton (1966) 239 C.A.2d 195, 203, 48 C.R. 513 [dicta: effects of taking alcohol or drugs].)

(2) Scientific Facts. (See McAllister v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1968) 69 C.2d 408, 414, 71 C.R. 697, 445 P.2d 313, citing the text [judicial notice that smoke contains incompletely oxidized materials, and that firefighters are likely to inhale smoke]; Markulics v. Maico Co. (1946) 74 C.A.2d 66, 69, 168 P.2d 35 ["impotence of a B battery," on a hearing aid, to develop fire]; Truck Ins. Exchange v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1946) 77 C.A.2d 461, 464, 175 P.2d 884 [characteristics of lightning, including conductivity of wet objects and likelihood of discharge at particular place]; Cantrell v. Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles (1948) 87 C.A.2d 471, 477, 197 P.2d 218 [presence of large numbers of rats and flies is extremely detrimental to public health, and geographic situation of San Francisco is such as to make constant vigilance against bubonic plague necessary]; People v. Helm (1957) 156 C.A.2d 343, 344, 319 P.2d 644 [notice that "the sun set at 5:35 p.m. on February 13, 1957, and consequently that the burglary was committed in the nighttime"]; People v. MacLaird (1968) 264 C.A.2d 972, 973, 975, 71 C.R. 191 [validity and accuracy of scientific principle of radar devices must be judicially noticed, but accuracy and efficiency of particular apparatus must be established by testimony of police officer]; People v. Law (1974) 40 C.A.3d 69, 75, 114 C.R. 708 [judicial notice of case law and articles in scientific journals on reliability and acceptance of spectrographic voice identification]; People v. Municipal Court (Sansone) (1986) 184 C.A.3d 199, 200, 228 C.R. 798 [reliability of testing urine for blood-alcohol content]; People v. Smith (1989) 215 C.A.3d 19, 25, 263 C.R. 678 [judicial notice properly taken of prior hearings within same superior court in which blood analysis by electrophoresis was found reliable]; 28 A.L.R.2d 1115 [fingerprints, palm, footprint]; 84 A.L.R.2d 979 [driver's reaction time and stopping distance of motor vehicles traveling at various speeds]; 2 McCormick 5th, §330.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Scientific Facts. See 2 McCormick 6th, §330. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.9

34 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

V. MATTERS NOT NOTICED: ILLUSTRATIONS

A. Medical and Scientific Matters.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 34

[§ 34] Medical and Scientific Matters.

(1) Medical Matters. Proof is required of a method of medical or surgical treatment familiar only to experts. (Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1925) 75 C.A. 709, 715, 243 P. 455.) And, while a blood test for intoxication is admissible (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §§53, 54), the inference of intoxication from a concentration of over .15% alcohol is not so irresistible as to call for judicial notice. (King v. Ludlow (1958) 165 C.A.2d 620, 625, 332 P.2d 345 [rejecting defendant's contention that plaintiff's blood test should be deemed conclusive of his contributory negligence].)

Obstetricians are not wholly in agreement on whether a woman with a history of premature births will frequently have subsequent premature births; hence, no judicial notice will be taken on this controversial matter. (Galloway v. Moreno (1960) 183 C.A.2d 803, 809, 7 C.R. 349.) Neither will judicial notice be taken of the controversial propositions that the use of marijuana is harmless (Comings v. State Bd. of Education (1972) 23 C.A.3d 94, 101, 100 C.R. 73, citing the text), and that electric and magnetic fields cause cancer (Ford v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1997) 60 C.A.4th 696, 705, 706, 70 C.R.2d 359).

(2) Scientific Matters. The application of scientific principles to a particular case must be proved. (See Roy v. Smith (1933) 131 C.A. 148, 151, 21 P.2d 151; Roy v. Smith (1933) 134 C.A. 240, 25 P.2d 251.) Thus, in People v. Plywood Mfrs. of Calif. (1955) 137 C.A.2d Supp. 859, 869, 291 P.2d 587, the legislative premise of the Smog Control Law was challenged on the issue of identifiable opacity of smoke of the shade described on the Ringelmann Chart. Because the matter was one on which there was scientific dispute, the court refused to take judicial notice that the premise was unsound. (See also People v. Leahy (1994) 8 C.4th 587, 609, 34 C.R.2d 663, 882 P.2d 321 [judicial notice could not be taken of judicial decisions and published studies approving reliability of horizontal gaze nystagmus testing, as there was substantial opposing authority]; Beckley v. Reclamation Bd. (1962) 205 C.A.2d 734, 741, 23 C.R. 428 [no judicial notice taken of truth of publicly employed engineers' conclusions concerning diversion of flood waters, contained in official reports].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Medical Matters. See In re Andrews (2002) 28 C.4th 1234, 1246, footnote 6, 124 C.R.2d 473, 52 P.3d 656 [in habeas corpus proceeding arising from capital trial, Supreme Court declined to take judicial notice of psychiatric materials that would allegedly rebut referee's conclusions regarding use of posttraumatic stress disorder as defense; psychiatric materials are not matters of such common knowledge that they are not reasonably subject to dispute].

35 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

V. MATTERS NOT NOTICED: ILLUSTRATIONS

B. Other Uncertain or Controversial Matters.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 35

[§ 35] Other Uncertain or Controversial Matters.

Some matters of so-called common knowledge are held not to meet the test because they are not really known or immediately ascertainable within the local area. (See Estate of Wirt (1929) 207 C. 106, 110, 277 P. 118 [no notice of charitable nature of Masonic lodge located outside the state]; Berry v. Chaplin (1946) 74 C.A.2d 669, 675, 169 P.2d 453 [court cannot take judicial notice of wealth of defendant Charles Chaplin from so-called common knowledge derived from newspapers and magazines]; Oakland v. Darbee (1951) 102 C.A.2d 493, 501, 227 P.2d 909 [no notice that bank defendant was doing business in a certain county]; People v. Coulon (1969) 273 C.A.2d 148, 154, 78 C.R. 95 [no judicial notice that particular group of "hippies" had set up single communal living establishment]; Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 C.A.4th 745, 753, footnote 1, 17 C.R.2d 734 [advertisement and brochure of private corporations conducting real property tax-deferred exchanges, and one corporation's summary of changes in federal regulations were not matters of common knowledge within territorial jurisdiction of court].)

Others, though widely believed, are, on analysis, found to be controversial. Thus, in 1942, the California Supreme Court refused to take judicial notice that the Communist Party advocated forcible overthrow of the Government. (Communist Party v. Peek (1942) 20 C.2d 536, 546, 127 P.2d 889.) And in Mack v. State Bd. of Education (1964) 224 C.A.2d 370, 36 C.R. 677, the same conclusion was reached in a proceeding to revoke teaching credentials for alleged false swearing to the Levering Act loyalty oath. There was no evidence before the respondent board to the effect that the Communist Party advocated revolutionary action during the period involved (1953-1957). The board relied on legislative findings, federal and state, of a Communist conspiracy, and contended that this justified official notice (Govt.C. 11515, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §72) of the crucial fact. The court recognized the increasing knowledge of the Party's aims and practices, but declared that "we do not believe that such knowledge has increased to the point where we can now say that it is a matter of common and general knowledge, certain and indisputable," that the Party was guilty of such advocacy in the period. (224 C.A.2d 374, citing the text.)

In Weitzenkorn v. Lesser (1953) 40 C.2d 778, 256 P.2d 947, the action was for damages for unlawful use of literary property--a story entitled "Tarzan in the Land of Eternal Youth." Defendants contended that judicial notice should be taken of the contents of published books in order to decide the issue of originality on demurrer. The court conceded that it could judicially notice the fictional character of Tarzan and the myth of the fountain of youth; "[h]owever, common and general knowledge may not be said to include the fact that, in previously published works, these characters and myth have been combined with the same treatment and manner of expression which Weitzenkorn has used." (40 C.2d 787.) (See also Paramount Television Productions v. Bill Derman Productions (1968) 258 C.A.2d 1, 10, 65 C.R. 473 [no judicial notice that in television industry a "network sale" has a specified meaning; literature cited shows much dispute]; Comings v. State Bd. of Education (1972) 23 C.A.3d 94, 102, 100 C.R. 73, citing the text [common use of marijuana "is the subject of intense scientific and popular controversy; actual judicial knowledge of the relevant truths is limited; and there is no evidence ... supporting a conclusion either way"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Aegis Sec. Ins. Co. (2005) 127 C.A.4th 569, 574, 25 C.R.3d 623 [on appeal from order forfeiting bail bond, judicial notice of declaration of court clerk describing superior court's case management procedures was not appropriate; those procedures did not constitute facts of common knowledge within meaning of Ev.C. 452(g) (text, §30), nor were they matters capable of immediate and accurate determination within meaning of Ev.C. 452(h) (text, §30)].

36 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

A. Compulsory Notice on Request.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 36

[§ 36] In General.

(1) Former Law. The California statute, except as to notice of foreign law, was silent on any duty to request or furnish information to the judge. However, as a matter of practice, reversible error in failure to notice could rarely be shown where counsel failed to bring the matter to the judge's attention. (See Popcorn Equipment Co. v. Page (1949) 92 C.A.2d 448, 454, 207 P.2d 647; People v. Bartlett (1962) 199 C.A.2d 173, 177, 18 C.R. 480, citing the text; 57 Harv. L. Rev. 288; 60 Harv. L. Rev. 299; 69 Harv. L. Rev. 565.)

(2) Uniform Rules and Evidence Code. The original Uniform Rules distinction between compulsory and optional notice, with the notice and information requirement to make optional notice compulsory, was the basis for Ev.C. 453:

"The trial court shall take judicial notice of any matter specified in Section 452 if a party requests it and:

"(a) Gives each adverse party sufficient notice of the request, through the pleadings or otherwise, to enable such adverse party to prepare to meet the request; and

"(b) Furnishes the court with sufficient information to enable it to take judicial notice of the matter." (See Mitroff v. United Services Auto. Assn. (1999) 72 C.A.4th 1230, 1243, 85 C.R.2d 759 [Ev.C. 453 does not compel judge to admit irrelevant matters that would result in undue consumption of time].)

The theory of the requirement is set forth in the Law Revision Commission Comment on Ev.C. 452:

"The matters of law included under Section 452 may be neither known to the court nor easily discoverable by it because the sources of information are not readily available. ... [J]udicial notice of these matters of law is mandatory only if counsel adequately discharges his responsibility for informing the court as to the law applicable to the case. The simplified process of judicial notice can then be applied to all of the law applicable to the case, including such law as ordinances and the law of foreign nations." (See 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.26.)

(3) Burden on Requesting Party. In invoking the optional notice section, the party making the request has a double burden: persuading the judge that the matter is one that properly can be noticed, and also persuading the judge of the tenor of the matter to be noticed. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 453.)

The Commissioners also say: "The degree of the judge's persuasion regarding a particular matter is determined by the subdivision of Section 452 which authorizes judicial notice of the matter. For example, if the matter is claimed to be a fact of common knowledge under paragraph (g) of Section 452, the party must persuade the judge that the fact is of such common knowledge within the territorial jurisdiction of the court that it cannot reasonably be subject to dispute, i.e., that no reasonable person having the same information as is available to the judge could rationally disbelieve the fact. On the other hand, if the matter to be noticed is a city ordinance under paragraph (b) of Section 452, the party must persuade the judge that a valid ordinance exists and also as to its tenor; but the judge need not believe that no reasonable person could conclude otherwise." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 453.)

(4) Judicial Notice Despite Lack of Compliance. The Commission's Comment on Ev.C. 453 makes this distinction:

"Section 453 is intended as a safeguard and not as a rigid limitation on the court's power to take judicial notice. The section does not affect the discretionary power of the court to take judicial notice under Section 452 where the party requesting that judicial notice be taken fails to give the requisite notice to each adverse party or fails to furnish sufficient information as to the propriety of taking judicial notice or as to the tenor of the matter to be noticed. Hence, when he considers it appropriate, the judge may take judicial notice under Section 452 and may consult and use any source of pertinent information, whether or not furnished by the parties. However, where the matter noticed under Section 452 is one that is of substantial consequence to the action—even though the court may take judicial notice under Section 452 when the requirements of Section 453 have not been satisfied--the party adversely affected must be given a reasonable opportunity to present information as to the propriety of taking judicial notice and as to the tenor of the matter to be noticed." (See Estate of Russell (1971) 17 C.A.3d 758, 765, 95 C.R. 88 [unrequested notice of decedent's will was improperly taken where opposing party was given no opportunity to present information on matter "of substantial consequence"]; Estate of Nicholas (1986) 177 C.A.3d 1071, 1090, 223 C.R. 410, infra, §41.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.51

37 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

- A. Compulsory Notice on Request.
- 2. Request and Notice to Adverse Party.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 37

[§ 37] Request and Notice to Adverse Party.

Ev.C. 453(a) merely calls for "sufficient notice," through the pleadings "or otherwise." (See supra, §36.) This lack of specification of the form, time, or place was purposeful, as explained in the Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 453:

"Since Section 452 relates to a wide variety of facts and law, the notice requirement should be administered with flexibility in order to insure that the policy behind the judicial notice rules is properly implemented. In many cases, it will be reasonable to expect the notice to be given at or before the time of the pretrial conference. In other cases, matters of fact or law of which the court should take judicial notice may come up at the trial. Section 453 merely requires reasonable notice, and the reasonableness of the notice given will depend upon the circumstances of the particular case." (See 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §§14.27, 14.28.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

38 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

A. Compulsory Notice on Request.

3. Information Furnished to Court.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 38

[§ 38] Information Furnished to Court.

Again the statute is in general terms, calling only for "sufficient information" (Ev.C. 453(b), supra, §36). And again the Law Revision Commission Comment justifies this lack of specific detail:

"Section 453 does not define 'sufficient information'; this will necessarily vary from case to case. While the parties will understandably use the best evidence they can produce under the circumstances, mechanical requirements that are ill-suited to the individual case should be avoided. The court justifiably might require that the party requesting that judicial notice be taken provide expert testimony to clarify especially difficult problems." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 453; see People v. Maxwell (1978) 78 C.A.3d 124, 130, 144 C.R. 95 ["A court is not required to seek out on its own initiative indisputable sources of information"]; Heist v. Colusa (1984) 163 C.A.3d 841, 850, 213 C.R. 278 [essential fact to be determined, information insufficient]; Willis v. California (1994) 22 C.A.4th 287, 291, 27 C.R.2d 413 [trial judge properly refused to take judicial notice of sections of State Administrative Manual; request was not accompanied by any information]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.29.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

39 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

- A. Compulsory Notice on Request.
- 4. Notification and Record of Denial.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 39

[§ 39] Notification and Record of Denial.

A party should have an opportunity to present evidence on a matter which the party thought would be judicially noticed but was not; and Ev.C. 456 provides it:

"If the trial court denies a request to take judicial notice of any matter, the court shall at the earliest practicable time so advise the parties and indicate for the record that it has denied the request."

However, under some circumstances, a failure to promptly advise the parties of a denial of judicial notice may be deemed harmless error. (Heist v. Colusa (1984) 163 C.A.3d 841, 850, 213 C.R. 278 [even if plaintiff had known of denial of notice request and had had opportunity to provide sufficient information to support request, evidence would not have supported judgment in his favor]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.41.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

40 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

B. Court's Sources of Information.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 40

[§ 40] Court's Sources of Information.

(1) In General. "In determining the propriety of taking judicial notice of a matter, or the tenor thereof" (Ev.C. 454), the judge is free from nearly all of the restrictions of the rules of evidence. Under Ev.C. 454(a): "(1) Any source of pertinent information, including the advice of persons learned in the subject matter, may be consulted or used, whether or not furnished by a party. (2) Exclusionary rules of evidence do not apply except for Section 352 and the rules of privilege." (Ev.C. 352 states the discretionary power to exclude evidence; see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §17.) (See 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.36.)

The judge is also authorized to appoint one or more experts for advice on matters requiring expert opinion, and these are compensated in the same manner as court-appointed expert witnesses. (Ev.C. 460; see 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.38.) But consultation with experts outside of court is improper. (People v. Archerd (1970) 3 C.3d 615, 638, 91 C.R. 397, 477 P.2d 421, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §15 [judge in prosecution for murder by insulin attempted to learn more about the drug from medical professionals at social gathering; error not prejudicial where facts of case not involved].)

(2) Foreign Law. The 1957 statute on judicial notice of foreign law (supra, §27) contained a procedural limitation that is continued in Ev.C. 454(b):

"Where the subject of judicial notice is the law of an organization of nations, a foreign nation, or a public entity in a foreign nation and the court resorts to the advice of persons learned in the subject matter, such advice, if not received in open court, shall be in writing." (See Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft v. Superior Court (1981) 123 C.A.3d 840, 852, 176 C.R. 874 [judicial notice taken of West German law of discovery, based on relevant material submitted by parties and published sources cited by court].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

41 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

C. Opportunity To Present Information.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 41

[§ 41] Opportunity To Present Information.

Ordinarily, when a party requests that judicial notice be taken, or the judge proposes to do so on his or her own initiative, the judge must "afford each party reasonable opportunity" to present "information relevant to (1) the propriety of taking judicial notice of the matter and (2) the tenor of the matter to be noticed." (Ev.C. 455(a); see Unif. Rule 201(e), 13A (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 195; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 668; 2 McCormick 5th, §333; 23 A.L.R.2d 1437 [Uniform Act]; 45 A.L.R.2d 1169.)

Specifically, Ev.C. 455 provides as follows:

(1) Scope. It applies (1) to optional matters noticed under Ev.C. 452; and (2) to "universally known" facts required to be noticed under Ev.C. 451(f). A proviso, however, limits it to matters that are "of substantial consequence to the determination of the action." (Ev.C. 455, first sentence.) Thus, in an action involving the propriety of a trustee's proposed sale of cattle that were part of the trust property, the trial judge could not take judicial notice of court records relating to the trust's previous financial condition without notice to the parties, as the records were "of substantial consequence" to the action. (Estate of Nicholas (1986) 177 C.A.3d 1071, 1090, 223 C.R. 410.)

(2) Time. In jury trials, the opportunity must be given before the jury is instructed; in nonjury trials, before the cause is submitted for decision. (Ev.C. 455(a); see Law Rev. Com. Comment, observing that, if the judge overlooks a matter, the case may be reopened after submission; on reopening case, see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §180.)

(3) Reasonable Opportunity. What constitutes a reasonable opportunity depends on "the complexity of the matter and its importance to the case." Where the matter is simple and undisputed, no hearing will be necessary; but where a complex question is involved (e.g., the tenor of foreign law), a hearing might be required by procedural due process. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 455.)

(4) Record of Information Received Out of Court. Ev.C. 455(b) adds an additional protective requirement: If the judge "resorts to any source of information not received in open court, including the advice of persons learned in the subject matter," the information and its source must be made a part of the record, and each party must be given a reasonable opportunity to meet it before judicial notice is taken.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 20 [Unif. Rule 201(e)]; 2 McCormick 6th, §333.

42 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

D. Instruction to Jury on Noticed Matter.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 42

[§ 42] Instruction to Jury on Noticed Matter.

A matter judicially noticed is conclusive (see supra, §3), and the judge should, and on request must, "instruct the jury to accept as a fact the matter so noticed." (Ev.C. 457; see People v. Moore (1997) 59 C.A.4th 168, 186, 69 C.R.2d 56 [in prosecution for conspiring with water district officer to take public monies from "district of this state," instruction to jury, based on judicial notice of Water Code provisions, that water district was district of state did not deprive defendant of right to have jury determine all elements of crime]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.33; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §§47.60, 47.61.) The former statute was to the same effect. (See People v. Mayes (1896) 113 C. 618, 625, 45 P. 860; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 664.)

The new section applies to "a matter which would otherwise have been for determination by the jury," i.e., one involving an issue of fact. Instruction on issues of law is not a matter of evidence and is covered by other, general provisions of law. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 457.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

43 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

E. Notice in Subsequent Trial Proceeding.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 43

[§ 43] Notice in Subsequent Trial Proceeding.

Ev.C. 458 provides that (1) the failure or refusal of the judge to take judicial notice of a matter, or (2) to instruct the jury thereon, does not preclude the judge from noticing the matter, in accordance with the procedural requirements of the statute, "in subsequent proceedings in the action." (See Ponce v. Tractor Supply Co. (1972) 29 C.A.3d 500, 509, 105 C.R. 628 [notice of prior judgment requested at time of motion for new trial]; 2 C.E.B., Civ. Proc. During Trial 3d, §14.42.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

44 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

F. Effect of Error as to Notice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 44

[§ 44] Effect of Error as to Notice.

The Evidence Code declares the party's right and the trial judge's duty, but does not deal with the problems of appellate review and reversible error. Hence, even though the matter called for compulsory notice, or was appropriate for optional notice, and the appellant fully complied with the procedural requirements, refusal to take notice is merely error. Whether it is reversible error depends on the state of the record, and also involves considerations of estoppel and waiver. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 451; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §§383 et seq., 408 et seq.) Likewise, the improper taking of notice is subject to harmless error analysis. (See West Valley-Mission Community College Dist. v. Concepcion (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1766, 1778, 21 C.R.2d 5 [in mandamus review of discipline imposed on teacher, trial judge's error in judicially noticing transcripts from teacher's criminal trials was harmless, as evidence apart from transcripts adequately supported disciplinary findings].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Aquila v. Superior Court (2007) 148 C.A.4th 556, 569, 55 C.R.3d 803, quoting the text.

45 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

G. Notice in Reviewing Court.

1. Former Law and Evidence Code.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 45

[§ 45] Former Law and Evidence Code.

Even prior to enactment of the Evidence Code, an appellate court had the same power to take judicial notice as a trial court. (See People v. Stralla (1939) 14 C.2d 617, 620, 96 P.2d 941; People v. Tossetti (1930) 107 C.A. 7, 12, 289 P. 881; Ahlgren v. Carr (1962) 209 C.A.2d 248, 257, 25 C.R. 887, citing the text; South Shore Land Co. v. Petersen (1964) 226 C.A.2d 725, 742, 38 C.R. 392; Pratt v. Coast Trucking (1964) 228 C.A.2d 139, 144, 39 C.R. 332; People v. Phillips (1964) 229 C.A.2d 496, 498, 40 C.R. 403; Colvig v. RKO General (1965) 232 C.A.2d 56, 64, 42 C.R. 473; People v. Melchor (1965) 237 C.A.2d 685, 691, 47 C.R. 235; 2 Stanf. L. Rev. 671.)

Ev.C. 459 specifies the power and the duty (infra, §46 et seq.) and establishes the same procedural safeguards for parties as in trial court notice (infra, §49). Additionally, C.R.C., Rule 14.5 requires the request to be made by a motion that includes a proposed order and either a copy of the matter to be noticed or an explanation why it is not practicable to include a copy. (See 15 California Lawyer 59 (December 1995) [use of judicial notice in appellate court to compensate for inadequate trial record].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.R.C., Rule 14.5 was repealed in 2002 and replaced by C.R.C., Rule 22(a) without substantive change. C.R.C., Rule 22(a) became C.R.C., Rule 8.252(a) in 2006.

See Canal Ins. Co. v. Tackett (2004) 117 C.A.4th 239, 243, 11 C.R.3d 626 [on appeal from order awarding plaintiff insurer attorney fees from interest that accrued on interpleaded funds, court declined to consider plaintiff's request for judicial notice of items included in its respondent's brief, where plaintiff failed to file separate motion with proposed order, as required by C.R.C., Rule 22(a), but instead included motion in its brief].

(New) Motion for judicial notice of legislative history: "Even where statutory language is ambiguous, and resort to legislative history is appropriate, as a general rule in order to be cognizable, legislative history must shed light on the collegial view of the Legislature as a whole." Thus, in order to help an appellate court determine what constitutes properly cognizable legislative history, and what does not, a motion for judicial notice of legislative history materials under C.R.C., Rule 22(a) should be in the following form: (1) It should identify each separate document for which judicial notice is sought as a separate exhibit; and (2) the moving party should submit a memorandum of points and authorities citing authority why each such exhibit constitutes cognizable legislative history. (Kaufman & Broad Communities v. Performance Plastering (2005) 133 C.A.4th 26, 29, 30, 34 C.R.3d 520 [criticizing motions for judicial notice of documents "resembling a telephone book," and listing documents that have been and have not been found to constitute cognizable legislative history].)

46 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

G. Notice in Reviewing Court.

2. Power and Duty of Court.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 46

[§ 46] In General.

(1) Compulsory Notice. "The reviewing court shall take judicial notice of (1) each matter properly noticed by the trial court and (2) each matter that the trial court was required to notice under Section 451 or 453." (Ev.C. 459(a); see Hickey v. Roby (1969) 273 C.A.2d 752, 755, 77 C.R. 486; 1 Civil Appellate Practice 3d, §11.87.)

Obviously, matters properly noticed by the trial judge must be noticed on appeal. But the Code goes further: If a party makes an appropriate request for notice of an optional matter and complies with the procedure (supra, §36), the judge's unwarranted failure or refusal to take notice is immaterial; the appellate court must do so. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 459.)

Finally, the Code makes the mandatory provisions of Ev.C. 451, on compulsory notice without request, binding on the appellate court. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 459.)

(2) Optional Notice. "The reviewing court may take judicial notice of any matter specified in Section 452." (Ev.C. 459(a).) Thus, in addition to being bound by the compulsory notice statute in the same manner as the trial judge (supra), the appellate court has the same discretionary power as the trial judge to notice matters listed in the optional notice statute. (See Palm Springs Paint Co. v. Arenas (1966) 242 C.A.2d 682, 687, 51 C.R. 747 [records of federal suit]; Pellandini v. Pacific Limestone Products (1966) 245 C.A.2d 774, 776, 54 C.R. 290, citing the text [Public Utilities Commission decision]; Holmes v. Oakland (1968) 260 C.A.2d 378, 384, 67 C.R. 197 [city ordinance]; Grinnell v. Charles Pfizer & Co. (1969) 274 C.A.2d 424, 444, 79 C.R. 369, infra, §47 [United States Surgeon General's technical report]; People v. Terry (1974) 38 C.A.3d 432, 439, 113 C.R. 233 [death certificate]; Hogen v. Valley Hosp. (1983) 147 C.A.3d 119, 125, 195 C.R. 5 [files of Board of Medical Quality Assurance]; Sebago v. Alameda (1989) 211 C.A.3d 1372, 1380, 259 C.R. 918 [defendant's interrogatory response, which appeared in records of trial court; appellate court may take judicial notice of matter that is subject to notice despite trial judge's refusal to do so]; 1 Civil Appellate Practice 3d, §11.87.)

(3) Different Tenor. "The reviewing court may take judicial notice of a matter in a tenor different from that noticed by the trial court." (Ev.C. 459(a); see 1 Civil Appellate Practice 3d, §11.86.)

(4) Sources of Information. "In determining the propriety of taking judicial notice of a matter, or the tenor thereof, the reviewing court has the same power as the trial court under Section 454." (Ev.C. 459(b).) This makes available to the reviewing court the right under Ev.C. 454 (supra, §40) to use reference works, consult experts, etc., in the exercise of any aspect of its judicial notice power; i.e., to sustain or reject the trial judge's determination of propriety, to take or refuse to take judicial notice on its own initiative, or to take notice in a tenor different from that of the trial judge. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 459.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Compulsory Notice. See People v. Cunningham (2001) 25 C.4th 926, 1012, footnote 12, 108 C.R.2d 291, 25 P.3d 519 [in capital murder trial, judicial notice of reporter's transcript of defendant's prior murder trial, along with search warrant and supporting documents, would have been compulsory in trial court if requested, but there was no request; thus, on appeal, Supreme Court was not required to notice it].

(2) Optional Notice. See In re Karen G. (2004) 121 C.A.4th 1384, 1390, 18 C.R.3d 301 [minute order of juvenile court at 6-month review hearing]; Deveny v. Entropin (2006) 139 C.A.4th 408, 418, 42 C.R.3d 807 [request to take judicial notice of records in related federal action declined; as appeal was from summary judgment and de novo standard of review applied, ruling of another court was not relevant or helpful].

47 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

G. Notice in Reviewing Court.

2. Power and Duty of Court.

b. Effect of Taking Notice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 47

[§ 47] Effect of Taking Notice.

Ev.C. 459 merely deals with the power and duty to take judicial notice on appeal; the effect of matters thus noticed raises problems of appellate practice outside the scope of the Evidence Code. "For example, the appellate court is required to notice the matters of law mentioned in Section 451, but it may hold that an error which the appellant has 'invited' is not reversible error or that points not urged in the trial court may not be advanced on appeal, and refuse, therefore, to apply the law to the pending case. These principles do not mean that the appellate court does not take judicial notice of the applicable law; they merely mean that, for reasons of policy governing appellate review, the appellate court may refuse to apply the law to the case before it." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 459; see People v. Hamilton (1986) 191 C.A.3d Supp. 13, 21, 236 C.R. 894 [although reviewing court may take judicial notice of matters not before trial court, it "need not give effect to such evidence"].)

In Grinnell v. Charles Pfizer & Co. (1969) 274 C.A.2d 424, 79 C.R. 369, the parties at trial and in their briefs referred to a technical report of the Surgeon General of the United States on the association of poliomyelitis cases with certain oral vaccines. The report itself was not introduced in evidence. Before oral argument on appeal, defendant moved that the reviewing court take judicial notice of the report. Held, motion granted for a limited purpose. Because the trial judge could have judicially noticed the report (Ev.C. 452, 453), the reviewing court may also do so (Ev.C. 459). But in this jury trial, the jury would ordinarily have been instructed on the judicially noticed material because those issues were for their determination. "Accordingly, as a reviewing court we can only take notice of the subject report insofar as it assists us in determining what portions of the report were before the jury and we therefore grant the motion for that limited purpose." (274 C.A.2d 444.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.52

48 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

G. Notice in Reviewing Court.

2. Power and Duty of Court.

c. Refusal To Take Notice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 48

[§ 48] Refusal To Take Notice.

Although the appellate court may take judicial notice of lower court records (see supra, §23), it may decline to do so where the matter noticed should not be considered on appeal. Thus, in Simmons v. Southern Pac. Trans. Co. (1976) 62 C.A.3d 341, 133 C.R. 42, plaintiff recovered damages for injuries suffered when struck by defendant's train. Defendant asked the appellate court to take judicial notice of proceedings in a trial court action in which it appeared that plaintiff's expert witness was an impostor. Held, judicial notice would not be taken for the following reasons: (a) Newly discovered evidence to impeach a witness is rarely sufficient to call for a new trial, and there is no authority for reversing a judgment on that ground. (b) Defendant's counsel did not question the witness' qualifications at the trial, and no reason appeared why the information concerning him could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial. (62 C.A.3d 366, 367, quoting the text on the effect of taking notice.)

Similarly, judicial notice will not be taken of matters that should first be presented to the trial court for its initial consideration. (People v. Preslie (1977) 70 C.A.3d 486, 493, 138 C.R. 828, infra, §49; see People v. Hamilton (1986) 191 C.A.3d Supp. 13, 21, 22, 236 C.R. 894 [judicial notice not taken of notices of consent establishing that police officer was authorized to detain defendant; to do so "would allow the People to create a new theory which defendant had no opportunity to dispute in the lower court and which the magistrate was not given the opportunity to review"]; Brosterhous v. State Bar (1995) 12 C.4th 315, 325, 326, 48 C.R.2d 87, 906 P.2d 1242 [on review of trial court decision determining that arbitration was exclusive remedy of State Bar members unhappy with State Bar's finding as to portion of bar dues not chargeable to objecting members, Supreme Court declined to take judicial notice of record of arbitration proceeding, as it was matter that should have been presented first to trial court].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Waidla (2000) 22 C.4th 690, 703, 94 C.R.2d 396, 996 P.2d 46 [on appeal of capital murder conviction, judicial notice of record on appeal in accomplice's case was inappropriate, as it would improperly augment record in defendant's case].

Matters that should first be presented to trial court: See People v. Sakarias (2000) 22 C.4th 596, 636, 94 C.R.2d 17, 995 P.2d 152 [on appeal of capital murder conviction, Supreme Court declined to take notice of transcripts of trial of defendant's accomplice, which defendant asserted would show prosecutor put forth factually inconsistent theories in the two trials, where issue was not presented to or considered by trial court]; cf. Sacramento v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1579, 1589, 64 C.R.3d 302 [on appeal of judgment upholding water quality orders approved by State Water Resources Control Board, Court of Appeal declined to take judicial notice of materials that had not been before board at time it made its decision to approve orders].

"Ordinarily an appellate court will not take judicial notice of matters outside the appellate record, but we have the discretion to do so." (Shamsian v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2003) 107 C.A.4th 967, 975, footnote 5, 132 C.R.2d 635 [appellate court chose to take judicial notice of "case reopen" letter from regional water quality control board to oil company, where review was de novo and letter was material].)

49 of 49 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER II - Judicial Notice

VI. PROCEDURE

G. Notice in Reviewing Court.

3. Opportunity To Present Information.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Jud Notice § 49

[§ 49] Opportunity To Present Information.

Ev.C. 459(c) and (d) make applicable the procedural safeguards of Ev.C. 455, which require the court taking judicial notice to afford each party a reasonable opportunity to present information as to its propriety and tenor. (See supra, §41.) The purpose of this requirement "is to assure that the parties have the opportunity to present relevant argument to the court based on a fair understanding of the facts and issues which will serve as the foundation of the court's decision." (Schneider v. Kaiser Foundation Hosp. (1989) 215 C.A.3d 1311, 1315, footnote 2, 264 C.R. 227.)

Thus, Ev.C. 459(c) calls for compliance with Ev.C. 455(a) "if the matter was not theretofore judicially noticed in the action." A party who has already had the opportunity needs no other.

Ev.C. 459(d) calls for compliance with Ev.C. 455(b) "if the reviewing court resorts to any source of information not received in open court or not included in the record of the action." Because the reviewing courts hold sessions to hear arguments and not to receive "information ... in open court," the principal impact of this section is felt when parties include such information in one of the transcripts, in a document brought up as an original, or in a brief. (See Holmes v. Oakland (1968) 260 C.A.2d 378, 384, 67 C.R. 197 [appellate court requested city defendant to furnish pertinent information for purpose of judicial notice of city ordinance, "and we afforded plaintiff the opportunity to meet such information"]; Smith v. Hatch (1969) 271 C.A.2d 39, 49, 76 C.R. 350 [judicial notice of papers and records in other litigation; opportunity presented, and parties stipulated to notice]; 1 Civil Appellate Practice 3d, §11.89.)

In People v. Preslie (1977) 70 C.A.3d 486, 138 C.R. 828, the court made a number of suggestions as to the methods of invoking the power on appeal:

(a) The appellant moved to augment the record under C.R.C., Rule 12(a) (see 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §577), to consider an affidavit, search warrant and return, in reviewing the trial judge's denial of his motion to suppress evidence. The appellate court pointed out that judicial notice would not be taken unless the documents had been presented to the trial court (see supra, §48) and the issue to which they related was reviewable on appeal; hence, the decision to take judicial notice was postponed until consideration of the appeal on its merits. (70 C.A.3d 493, 494.)

(b) The formal motion to augment was unnecessary: The Code contemplates an informal request, and it can be made in a brief, "though it is desirable in the interest of orderly judicial procedure that it be made well before that time." (70 C.A.3d 494.)

(c) Although Ev.C. 459(c) and (d) impose a duty on the court to give the adverse party an opportunity to meet the matter to be judicially noticed, "fairness dictates that in all cases a request for judicial notice be served upon opposing parties by the party making the request." (70 C.A.3d 494, footnote 6.)

(d) Because the request is to judicially notice an original trial court record, the appellate court must be assured that the original is actually on file below and that the copy is true and correct; accordingly, unless a good excuse is shown for not doing so, the party making the request should furnish the appellate court with a copy certified by its custodian. (70 C.A.3d 494.)

In South Shore Land Co. v. Petersen (1964) 226 C.A.2d 725, 742, 38 C.R. 392, a quiet title action decided prior to the enactment of Ev.C. 459, the cross-complainant and the cross-defendant sought and were granted augmentation of the record to include documents, to be judicially noticed, which were not called to the attention of the trial judge. Because both parties participated, they not only had their "reasonable opportunity," but waived any right to challenge the noticed matter.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
C.R.C., Rule 12(a) was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 8.155(a) in 2006.

1 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

I. THE TWO BURDENS

A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 1

[§ 1] In General.

The term "burden of proof" is often used loosely in two senses: (1) the secondary meaning of the burden of initially producing or going forward with the evidence; and (2) the primary meaning of the burden of proving the issues of the case.

In the first sense, when the plaintiff offers a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the defendant until the case is met; in the second and proper sense, it rests throughout the case with the party who has the burden. (See generally Valente v. Sierra Ry. Co. of Calif. (1907) 151 C. 534, 538, 91 P. 481; Bernesen v. Fish (1933) 135 C.A. 588, 604, 28 P.2d 67; Jolley v. Clemens (1938) 28 C.A.2d 55, 68, 82 P.2d 51; Donovan v. Security-First Nat. Bank of Los Angeles (1945) 67 C.A.2d 845, 853, 155 P.2d 856; Washington v. Washington (1949) 91 C.A.2d 811, 813, 205 P.2d 736; People v. Valverde (1966) 246 C.A.2d 318, 321, 54 C.R. 528, citing the text; Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy v. Seyfert (1990) 219 C.A.3d 875, 880, 268 C.R. 505, infra, §105; Mathis v. Morrissey (1992) 11 C.A.4th 332, 346, 13 C.R.2d 819, citing the text [burden of going forward with evidence does not operate to shift burden of proof]; Mullaney v. Wilbur (1975) 421 U.S. 684, 95 S.Ct. 1881, 1888, 44 L.Ed.2d 508, 517, footnote 20; Director, Office of Workers' Comp. Programs v. Greenwich Collieries (1994) 512 U.S. 267, 114 S.Ct. 2251, 2255, 2256, 129 L.Ed.2d 221, 228, 229 [distinction between two burdens]; 43 Cal. L. Rev. 119; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 13; 59 Harv. L. Rev. 491; 68 Harv. L. Rev. 1382; 2 McCormick 5th, §336; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§2485, 2487, 2489; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, Chap. 45; Evidence Code Notebook 3d, §500 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §155; 23 A.L.R.2d 1243; infra, §§2, 3.)

The practical effect of the distinction is that (1) the burden of going forward or initially producing evidence calls the judge's powers into play (e.g., in ruling on a motion for nonsuit), while (2) the burden of proof in the fundamental sense operates when the case finally reaches the jury. (See 2 McCormick 5th, §336; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2487; 24 Pacific L. J. 1845, 1871; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 500; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 550.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 2 McCormick 6th, §336; Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §9:1 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.326 et seq.; Evidence k.90 et seq.

2 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

I. THE TWO BURDENS

B. Burden of Producing Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 2

[§ 2] Burden of Producing Evidence.

One party has the initial burden of introducing evidence, to make a "prima facie case," and thus avoid the risk of a nonsuit or other unfavorable determination on the issue. (See Mathis v. Morrissey (1992) 11 C.A.4th 332, 346, 13 C.R.2d 819, citing the text; 2 McCormick 5th, §336; Ev.C. 550, infra, §4.)

Descriptive terminology has varied: California courts have long used the phrase "burden of going forward with the evidence." (See People v. Valverde (1966) 246 C.A.2d 318, 321, 54 C.R. 528.) The Model Code of Evidence and the original Uniform Rules referred to the "burden of producing evidence," and Ev.C. 110 adopts this terminology:

" 'Burden of producing evidence' means the obligation of a party to introduce evidence sufficient to avoid a ruling against him on the issue."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 2 McCormick 6th, §336.

3 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

I. THE TWO BURDENS

C. Burden of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 3

[§ 3] Burden of Proof.

The more fundamental burden is the obligation of the party on whom it rests throughout the case to prove the particular fact. (See Ev.C. 500, infra, §6; Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 C.A.3d 828, 838, footnote 5, 83 C.R. 855, infra, §9, citing the text; 2 McCormick 5th, §336; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 13.)

The Model Code rejected the traditional term "burden of proof" because of its history of ambiguity, and substituted the term "burden of persuasion" as more accurately describing the fundamental risk of nonpersuasion. (See also 2 McCormick 5th, §336.) But the original Uniform Rules restored the familiar phrase, and Ev.C. 115 followed the Uniform Rule:

" 'Burden of proof' means the obligation of a party to establish by evidence a requisite degree of belief concerning a fact in the mind of the trier of fact or the court."

Ev.C. 115 further provides that, unless a different degree of proof is required, a "preponderance of the evidence" is sufficient. (See infra, §§35 et seq., 42, 45, 47; see also Ev.C. 502 [instructions]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.60.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See CACI, No. 200 [more-likely-than-not standard]; 2 McCormick 6th, §336.

4 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

A. Burden of Producing Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 4

[§ 4] Burden of Producing Evidence.

"The burden of producing evidence as to a particular fact is on the party against whom a finding on that fact would be required in the absence of further evidence." (Ev.C. 550(a).) This abstraction, essentially a repetition of the definition (supra, §2), offers no test, because there is no single, significant test for either of the burdens. (See infra, §5.) However, Ev.C. 550(b) and its Comment add some specific content to the rule:

(1) "The burden of producing evidence as to a particular fact is initially on the party with the burden of proof as to that fact." (Ev.C. 550(b)); see Baber v. Superior Court (1980) 113 C.A.3d 955, 965, 966, 170 C.R. 353 [since party seeking to establish or reestablish conservatorship under Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §46 et seq.) has burden of proving existence of grave disability, that party has initial burden of producing evidence on that point]; 2 McCormick 5th, §337; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2487.) This established principle makes applicable the considerable body of statutory and case law on burden of proof (infra, §5 et seq.).

(2) The burden of producing evidence will shift to the other party if the party with that initial burden (a) proves a fact giving rise to a presumption (infra, §52), or (b) produces evidence of such weight that a determination in that party's favor would necessarily be required in the absence of contradictory evidence. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 550; see St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S.Ct. 2742, 2747, 125 L.Ed.2d 407, 416, 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, Supp., §737A [where plaintiff establishes prima facie case of employment discrimination, defendant must produce evidence that employment action was taken for legitimate reason]; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2487.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Burden of producing evidence initially on party with burden of proof: See National Council Against Health Fraud v. King Bio Pharmaceuticals (2003) 107 C.A.4th 1336, 1344, 133 C.R.2d 207, citing the text [in action for false advertising, plaintiff has burden of producing evidence showing that challenged advertising claim is false or misleading]; 2 McCormick 6th, §337.(2) Shift of burden of producing evidence: See Sargent Fletcher v. Able Corp. (2003) 110 C.A.4th 1658, 1668, 3 C.R.3d 279, citing the text.

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §870.

5 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

1. Former Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 5

[§ 5] Former Rule.

Former C.C.P. 1981 provided that "[t]he party holding the affirmative of the issue must produce the evidence to prove it; therefore, the burden of proof lies on the party who would be defeated if no evidence were given on either side." This general statement, which echoed the declarations of many courts, warned of the necessity of assuming the burden of proof and of the consequences of failure to assume it, but gave no inkling of a rule or test to determine where the burden of proof lies. The "affirmative of the issue" lacks any substantial objective meaning, and allocation of the burden actually requires the application of several rules of practice and policy. (See 2 McCormick 5th, §337; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§2486, 2488; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 14; 12 Stanf. L. Rev. 11; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §158; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 500.)

The basic rule, followed in California and elsewhere, is that whatever facts a party must affirmatively plead, that party also has the burden of proving. As to the plaintiff, this means the elements of each cause of action pleaded. (See Roddenberry v. Roddenberry (1996) 44 C.A.4th 634, 654, 51 C.R.2d 907, citing the text; Beck Dev. Co. v. Southern Pac. Trans. Co. (1996) 44 C.A.4th 1160, 1205, 52 C.R.2d 518 ["the definitional elements of a plaintiff's cause of action describe the minimum showing which the plaintiff must make to support a favorable judgment"].)

As to the defendant, the rule means that affirmative defenses (sometimes called "new matter") cannot be raised by mere denial but must be specially pleaded. (See 2 McCormick 5th, §337; on elements of cause of action in particular cases, see 4 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §476 et seq.; on affirmative defenses that defendant must specially plead, see 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §1008 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §337.

6 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

a. General Rule: Facts Essential to Claim or Defense.

1. Theory of Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 6

[§ 6] Theory of Rule.

"Except as otherwise provided by law, a party has the burden of proof as to each fact the existence or nonexistence of which is essential to the claim for relief or defense that he is asserting." (Ev.C. 500.)

Ev.C. 500 is an expanded version of the basic rule that the burden of proof follows the burden of pleading. It is broader than the basic rule because it applies to issues that may not have been raised in the pleadings. And the test--whether the fact is essential to a party's claim for relief or defense--is merely stated in the Code; its application, to both pleading and proof, depends on the substantive law. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 500.)

Because the law determines the burden, the judge must instruct the jury as to which party bears the burden. (Ev.C. 502; see BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.60.)

The burden in a declaratory relief action should normally be governed by the rules applicable to the issue if it were raised in an ordinary civil action. (See American Home Assur. Co. v. Essy (1960) 179 C.A.2d 19, 22, 3 C.R. 586 [in action by insurer, burden may be same as in cases where insured sues]; 23 A.L.R.2d 1243 [burden of proof under general declaratory judgment acts].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CACI, No. 200 [explanation of burden of proof]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.91

7 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

a. General Rule: Facts Essential to Claim or Defense.

2. Facts Essential to Claim.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 7

[§ 7] Facts Essential to Claim.

Where, under the substantive law, a fact is essential to the plaintiff's claim for relief, the burden of pleading and proof of that fact is on the plaintiff. (Ev.C. 500, supra, §6; see Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 C.3d 105, 119, 284 C.R. 318, 813 P.2d 1348, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §1377A [plaintiff seeking punitive damages bears burden of producing evidence of defendant's financial condition]; Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 C.4th 1193, 1211, 1212, 31 C.R.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279 [adoption of Ev.C. 500 did not change common law rule that once defamation defendant establishes that statement was otherwise protected by common interest privilege (see 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §§521, 523), plaintiff must prove malice]; Fukuda v. Angels (1999) 20 C.4th 805, 819, 820, 85 C.R.2d 696, 977 P.2d 693, 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, Supp., §274 [normal rule of Ev.C. 500 applies in administrative mandamus proceeding in which trial court exercises independent judgment: party attacking agency's decision bears burden of proving that its findings are incorrect]; Carpenter Steel Co. v. Pellegrin (1965) 237 C.A.2d 35, 42, 46 C.R. 502 [breach of warranty]; People v. Shasta Pipe & Supply Co. (1968) 264 C.A.2d 520, 530, 70 C.R. 618 [condemnation; plaintiff condemnor's interest]; Jordan v. Worthen (1977) 68 C.A.3d 310, 319, 137 C.R. 282 [person claiming prescriptive easement in roadway over another's property must prove all essential elements]; In re Marriage of Iverson (1992) 11 C.A.4th 1495, 1502, 15 C.R.2d 70, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §258 [in dissolution proceeding, party challenging validity of premarital agreement has burden of proof as to agreement's invalidity]; Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 17 C.A.4th 1303, 1311, 22 C.R.2d 37, infra, §11 [secured party has burden of tracing funds received from sales of collateral so as to show they are identifiable proceeds]; In re Lorenzo C. (1997) 54 C.A.4th 1330, 1345, 63 C.R.2d 562 [in proceeding to terminate parental rights, once agency has presented clear and convincing proof of adoptability, it is parent's burden to prove existence of exception identified in Welf.C. 366.26(c)(1)(A), since it is parent who is concerned with avoiding termination; citing the text]; Buzgheia v. Leasco Sierra Grove (1997) 60 C.A.4th 374, 389, 70 C.R.2d 427, 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, Supp., §495, citing the text [in action by contractor against developer in which defendant produced evidence indicating plaintiff was not properly licensed, plaintiff had burden of proof on this issue, since due licensure was essential to his claim]; Edson v. Anaheim (1998) 63 C.A.4th 1269, 1272, 1273, 74 C.R.2d 614, 5 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §376 [prima facie case of battery by police officer is not established unless and until plaintiff proves unreasonable force was used]; Estate of Della Sala (1999) 73 C.A.4th 463, 469, 470, 86 C.R.2d 569 [testator's son claiming right to share of estate as pretermitted heir bore burden of proving that testator believed he was dead]; 82 A.L.R.4th 598 [burden of proof as to reasonableness of force used in making arrest]; on various burdens in marital dissolution proceeding, see 24 Am.Jur.2d, Divorce and Separation §358 et seq.)

The defendant does not have the burden of proof on an allegation which, though affirmative in form, is in essence a denial. (Cahill Bros. v. Clementina Co. (1962) 208 C.A.2d 367, 386, 25 C.R. 301 [plaintiff alleged relationship as independent contract, defendant alleged that it was joint venture]; on general rule as to burden on defenses, see infra, §8.)

Where allegations of a complaint are denied, the plaintiff must produce evidence to establish a prima facie case; in the absence of such evidence, judgment for the plaintiff cannot be based on adverse inferences from the defendant's failure to appear in court. (Vaughn v. Coccimiglio (1966) 241 C.A.2d 676, 678, 50 C.R. 876.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Welf.C. 366.26(c)(1)(A) was relettered Welf.C. 366.26(c)(1)(B)(i) in 2007.

See Dart Industries v. Commercial Union Ins. Co. (2002) 28 C.4th 1059, 1071, 1074, 124 C.R.2d 142, 52 P.3d 79 [in action on insurance policy, it is insured's burden to establish that occurrence forming basis of claim is within scope of coverage, and it is then insurer's burden to prove that claim is specifically excluded]; Sargent Fletcher v. Able Corp. (2003) 110 C.A.4th 1658, 1673, 3 C.R.3d 279 [in action for misappropriation of trade secrets, plaintiff has burden of proof as to every element of claim, including improper use, although once plaintiff produces evidence of improper use, burden of producing evidence on that issue shifts to defendant]; Corbett v. Hayward Dodge (2004) 119 C.A.4th 915, 926, 14 C.R.3d 741 [defendant seeking attorneys' fees under Consumers Legal Remedies Act (4 Summary (10th), Sales, §296) is subject to general rule that party seeking statutory attorneys' fees or sanctions has burden of proof]; Huffman v. Interstate Brands Corp. (2004) 121 C.A.4th 679, 702, 17 C.R.3d 397 [in employment discrimination case, plaintiff bears burden of proof, even though defendant may have burden of production to articulate nondiscriminatory reason for adverse employment action]; Barnes v. Hussa (2006) 136 C.A.4th 1358, 1366, 39 C.R.3d 659 [plaintiff property owners seeking to enjoin neighbor, who had license to convey water across plaintiffs' property to one parcel, from conveying water to additional parcel, had burden of showing that this change in use injured plaintiffs' water rights]; Conservatorship of Hume (2006) 140 C.A.4th 1385, 1391, 44 C.R.3d 906 [after conservator filed final inventory and appraisal of estate, trial judge properly placed burden of proof on objector to establish that appraisal was erroneous; it was objector who sought relief within meaning of Ev.C. 500]; Cassady v. Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP (2006) 145 C.A.4th 220, 234, 51 C.R.3d 527 [where attorney sought indemnity from his law firm under Lab.C. 2802 for attorneys' fees and costs incurred in defending malpractice action against him by former client, attorney bore burden of showing what work he performed for client while employed at firm].

Adams v. Murakami:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1619.

Common interest privilege:

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §§591, 594.

Buzgheia v. Leasco Sierra Grove:

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §491.

Edson v. Anaheim:

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §424.

8 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

a. General Rule: Facts Essential to Claim or Defense.

3. Facts Essential to Defense.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 8

[§ 8] Facts Essential to Defense.

(1) In General. Where, under the substantive law, a fact is essential to a defense raised by the defendant, the defendant has the burden of proof as to that fact. (Ev.C. 500, supra, §6; for illustrations, see Wilson v. California Cen. R. Co. (1892) 94 C. 166, 172, 29 P. 861 [carrier's defense that goods were destroyed by fire without its negligence]; San Francisco v. Tillman Estate Co. (1928) 205 C. 651, 653, 272 P. 585 [condemnation suit; value of defendant owner's property]; Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 C.4th 1, 8, 91 C.R.2d 273, 989 P.2d 701 [defendant in legal malpractice action who raises 1 year from discovery limitation of C.C.P. 340.6(a) (see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §581) as defense, bears burden of proof on that issue]; Lloyd v. Kleefisch (1941) 48 C.A.2d 408, 416, 120 P.2d 97 [payment]; Primm v. Joyce (1948) 87 C.A.2d 288, 291, 196 P.2d 829 [lessee's defense of waiver of breach by acceptance of rent]; Washington v. Washington (1949) 91 C.A.2d 811, 813, 205 P.2d 736 [divorce action by wife for desertion; plaintiff need not prove that separation was without her consent (a negative); defendant who contends that there was consent has burden of proof on this issue; see 23 So. Cal. L. Rev. 277]; Bellows v. San Francisco (1951) 106 C.A.2d 57, 59, 234 P.2d 729 [contributory negligence]; Baruh v. Kuhl (1963) 213 C.A.2d 266, 273, 28 P.2d 573 [duty to minimize damages]; Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 C.A.2d 378, 386, 59 C.R. 382 [self-defense in assault and battery]; Whitehouse v. Six Corp. (1995) 40 C.A.4th 527, 534, 48 C.R.2d 600 [in third-party claim proceeding, creditor raising defense of fraudulent transfer has burden of proof on that issue]; Kellogg v. Asbestos Corp., Ltd. (1996) 41 C.A.4th 1397, 1408, 49 C.R.2d 256 [100% of liability for plaintiff's loss of consortium damages was properly allocated to defendant, even though Proposition 51 (several liability for noneconomic damages; see 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §53) was applicable, since defendant had burden of proving that others were partly responsible and offered no evidence on this issue]; and see 43 Cal. L. Rev. 119 [burden of proving self-defense in action for wrongful death]; 24 Am.Jur.2d, Divorce and Separation §362 [burdens in marital dissolution proceeding; 82 A.L.R.4th 598 [burden of proof as to reasonableness of force used in making arrest]].)

(2) Insurance Exclusion. In Searle v. Allstate Life Ins. Co. (1985) 38 C.3d 425, 437, 438, 212 C.R. 466, 696 P.2d 1308, plaintiff wife was the beneficiary of a life insurance policy issued by defendant to decedent, with a clause excluding coverage for "suicide, whether sane or insane," within 2 years of issuance. Ten months after issuance, decedent shot and killed himself, defendant denied coverage, and plaintiff sued. The judge instructed that plaintiff had the burden of proving that decedent did not intend to take his own life. Held, this was error: The burden of proving an excepted risk or condition subsequent which negates full liability is on the insurer, and suicide provisions are such conditions subsequent. (38 C.3d 437, 438.) "Although the beneficiary may introduce evidence indicating the insured did not intend to commit suicide, the ultimate burden of proving the fact essential to a claim of nonliability rests with the insurer." (38 C.3d 440.) (See Executive Aviation v. National Ins. Underwriters (1971) 16 C.A.3d 799, 806, 94 C.R. 347 [burden is on insurer to bring itself within exculpatory clause of policy]; Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 C.3d 865, 879, 151 C.R. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 [same holding where defense is based on statutory exclusion of liability for wilful act of insured (Ins.C. 533)].)

In a coverage dispute under a commercial general liability policy, however, once the insurer carries the burden of proving that a general pollution exclusion applies, the insured has the normal burden under Ev.C. 500 of proving that the claim comes under an exception for "sudden and accidental" occurrences. (Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 C.4th 1183, 1194, 77 C.R.2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213, 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, Supp., §700.)

(3) Retaliatory Eviction. In Western Land Office v. Cervantes (1985) 175 C.A.3d 724, 220 C.R. 784, the court, on an elaborate examination of the judicially developed defense of retaliatory eviction and its legislative recognition in C.C. 1942.5 (see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §693), came to the following conclusion: "[T]he tenant has the overall burden of proving his landlord's retaliatory motive by a preponderance of the evidence. If the landlord takes action for a valid reason not listed in the unlawful detainer statutes, he must give notice to the tenant of the ground upon which he proceeds; and if the tenant controverts that ground, the landlord has the burden of proving its existence by a preponderance of the evidence." (175 C.A.3d 742.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Smith v. Santa Rosa Police Dept. (2002) 97 C.A.4th 546, 569, 119 C.R.2d 72 [where truck was impounded for being driven by unlicensed driver, owner had burden of proof to show that he did not know his grandson, whom he had allowed to drive truck, had suspended license; "where a defendant claims that mitigating circumstances lessen culpability and warrant lesser or no discipline or punishment, assertion and proof of such is the burden of the person asserting the presence of mitigating circumstances"]; Brentwood v. Central Valley Regional Water Quality Control Bd. (2004) 123 C.A.4th 714, 725, 20 C.R.3d 322 [where violations of wastewater discharge permit are charged, alleged polluter has burden of proving that statutory exceptions from liability for mandatory minimum penalties (Water C. 13385(j)(1)) are applicable].

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §53.

(2) Insurance Exclusion.

Cross-Reference: Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co., formerly discussed in Contracts, has been transferred to 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §82.(3) Retaliatory Eviction.

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §712.

9 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

a. General Rule: Facts Essential to Claim or Defense.

4. Negative Averments.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 9

[§ 9] Negative Averments.

It is sometimes said that negative allegations need not be proved, unless they are an essential part of the party's cause of action. (See Hosang v. Minor (1962) 205 C.A.2d 269, 274, 22 C.R. 794.) This statement was contained in former C.C.P. 1869, but was eliminated by the Evidence Code; because some negative allegations must be proved under the substantive law, the supposed rule is not helpful and could be misleading. (See 2 McCormick 5th, §337; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2486.)

Thus, in Abrams v. Motter (1970) 3 C.A.3d 828, 83 C.R. 855, plaintiff vendor alleged that defendant purchaser had failed to exercise due diligence in seeking a home loan, the obtaining of which was a condition precedent to defendant's obligation to purchase. Held, the burden was on the vendor to prove lack of due diligence. (3 C.A.3d 838, citing the text.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §337. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.92

10 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

b. Factors Calling for Altered Burden.

1. Bases for Exceptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 10

[§ 10] Bases for Exceptions.

In a number of situations, reasons of policy, convenience, or mere tradition place the burden in a manner different from that which would normally be expected from the requirement of pleading. (See 2 McCormick 5th, §337; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2486; see also 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 679 [proposed reallocation of burden of proof in environmental nuisance cases].)

This is recognized by the proviso in Ev.C. 500--"Except as otherwise provided by law"--and by the Comment: "In determining whether the normal allocation of the burden of proof should be altered, the courts consider a number of factors: the knowledge of the parties concerning the particular fact, the availability of the evidence to the parties, the most desirable result in terms of public policy in the absence of proof of the particular fact, and the probability of the existence or non-existence of the fact." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 500; see Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 C.3d 105, 119, 284 C.R. 318, 813 P.2d 1348, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §1377A [discussion of applicable factors in determining who should have burden of producing evidence as to defendant's financial condition where punitive damages are sought]; People v. Williams (1999) 20 C.4th 119, 128, 83 C.R.2d 275, 973 P.2d 52, citing the text; Worsley v. Municipal Court (1981) 122 C.A.3d 409, 420, 176 C.R. 324; Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1987) 191 C.A.3d 1035, 1051, 237 C.R. 14, citing the text.) (On shift of burden where laches is asserted and there is statute of limitations governing analogous action at law, see Fountain Valley Regional Hosp. & Med. Center v. Bonta (1999) 75 C.A.4th 316, 324, 325, 89 C.R.2d 139, 3 Cal Proc. (4th), Actions, Supp., §419; for other illustrations, see infra, §11 et seq.)

McGee v. Cessna Aircraft Co. (1983) 139 C.A.3d 179, 188 C.R. 542, points out that the doctrines of negligence per se based on violation of a safety regulation (see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §821), and strict liability for defective products (see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1247 et seq.) "shift the burden of proof onto defendants for reasons rooted in sound economic and public policy." (139 C.A.3d 190.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Miller v. Superior Court (2002) 101 C.A.4th 728, 747, 124 C.R.2d 591, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, Supp., §230, quoting the text [shifting of burden where prosecution relies on P.C. 1387.1 to file third complaint despite two-dismissal rule]; 2 McCormick 6th, §337.

Adams v. Murakami:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1619.

Violation of safety regulation:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §876.

Strict liability for defective products:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1435 et seq.

11 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

b. Factors Calling for Altered Burden.

2. Knowledge of Party.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 11

[§ 11] Knowledge of Party.

(1) In General. Knowledge of a party is a strong factor calling for alteration of the burden of proof. (See Sanchez v. Unemp. Ins. App. Bd. (1977) 20 C.3d 55, 71, 141 C.R. 146, 569 P.2d 740, 2 Summary (9th), Agency and Employment, §368 [unemployment claimant has burden of proving availability for work, but Department of Employment Development, which has greater knowledge of labor market, has burden of proving that claimant has not made self available to "substantial field of employment"]; Webster v. Trustees of Calif. State University (1993) 19 C.A.4th 1456, 1463, 1464, 24 C.R.2d 150 [even if general rule of Ev.C. 500 would place burden of proof in grievance hearing on professor resisting termination, university trustees' greater knowledge and lack of proof of substandard job performance required placing it on trustees]; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2486; 2 McCormick 5th, §337.)

The "greater knowledge" factor does not, however, apply with any consistency. In Heesy v. Vaughn (1948) 31 C.2d 701, 192 P.2d 753, plaintiff buyer sued for treble damages for alleged violation of the O.P.A. price ceiling in a conditional sale, and proved a charge over the ceiling price. The defense was that customary financing charges had been added. Held, plaintiff had the burden of proving that defendant's charges were higher than had been his custom prior to the Price Control Act, even though defendant was in a superior position to offer evidence on this issue. (31 C.2d 708.) (See also Charach v. Lansing (1951) 106 C.A.2d 735, 737, 236 P.2d 1 [suit by plaintiff tenants for treble damages for excess rent; burden on them to show that premises were subject to rent control].)

(2) Tracing Proceeds of Sales. In Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 17 C.A.4th 1303, 22 C.R.2d 37, plaintiff, a finance corporation that supplied vehicles to a dealer under a security agreement, sought to recover funds from the sale of those vehicles by the dealer. Third parties filed claims against those funds, and the trial judge placed the burden of proving that the funds were identifiable proceeds of sales on plaintiff, and not on the third parties. Held, this was proper. Under a bankruptcy court's ruling, the dealer owed a duty to the secured party to deposit the funds in a cash collateral account. However, the dealer breached that duty. As between plaintiff and the dealer, the burden of tracing the funds might be shifted to the dealer as a result of the dealer's wrongful act. The contest here, however, was between plaintiff and third parties, and the burden of tracing the proceeds would shift to the third parties only if they had knowledge of the wrongful disposition of collateral and plaintiff's interest in it. (17 C.A.4th 1311, 1312.)

(3) Excuse for Employee's Absence. In Baker v. Wadsworth (1970) 6 C.A.3d 253, 85 C.R. 880, a mandamus proceeding by three terminated city employees seeking reinstatement, the Court of Appeal approved application of a civil service rule requiring the employees to bear the burden of proving that their unauthorized absences from work were excusable or justified. The court pointed out that the rule was in harmony with the case law principle that the burden may be placed on the party possessing special knowledge on the point at issue, and also in harmony with former Educ.C. 24311 and former Govt.C. 19503 (now Govt.C. 19996.2), which similarly placed the burden on the employee to explain an unauthorized absence to the satisfaction of the State Personnel Board. (6 C.A.3d 263.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Orange v. Barratt Amer. (2007) 150 C.A.4th 420, 438, 58 C.R.3d 542 [in action against county alleging that fees imposed on development projects were excessive, trial judge properly placed burden on county of showing that expenditures of amounts collected were reasonable and necessary; county was party with knowledge of and access to evidence regarding its compliance with statute]; 2 McCormick 6th, §337.

Cross-Reference: 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §476. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.93

12 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

b. Factors Calling for Altered Burden.

3. Availability of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 12

[§ 12] Availability of Evidence.

The burden of proof may also be altered where there is a greater or almost exclusive availability of evidence to one party. Illustrations include the following:

(1) Loss or Destruction of Goods. A carrier, warehouseman, or other bailee, sued for loss or destruction of goods, has the burden of showing his or her freedom from negligence or other fault. (See Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Elmore & Stahl (1964) 377 U.S. 134, 84 S.Ct. 1142, 1144, 12 L.Ed.2d 194; Convey-All Corp. v. Pacific Intermountain Express Co. (1981) 120 C.A.3d 116, 119, 120, 121, 174 C.R. 443 [burden on carrier even though goods were loaded by shipper, i.e., carrier has burden of proving that damage was caused by act of shipper; following Missouri Pac. R. Co.]; Morris v. Williams (1967) 67 C.2d 733, 760, 63 C.R. 689, 433 P.2d 697, citing the text; 64 Harv. L. Rev. 998; 13 A.L.R.2d 681 [loss or damage where Uniform Warehouse Receipts Act applies]; 65 A.L.R.2d 1228 [injury to or loss of vessel during bailment or charter]; 43 A.L.R.3d 607 [subject of bailment destroyed by windstorm or other weather phenomenon]; 44 A.L.R.3d 171 [subject of bailment destroyed by fire]; 4 Summary (9th), Personal Property, §147.)

(2) Defectively Designed Product. In a strict liability action based on allegations of injury caused by a defectively designed product, once the plaintiff makes a prima facie showing that injury was proximately caused by the product's design, the burden shifts to the manufacturer to prove that the product is not defective. (Barker v. Lull Engineering Co. (1978) 20 C.3d 413, 431, 143 C.R. 225, 573 P.2d 443, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1259.)

(3) Brake Failure. In Harris v. Irish Truck Lines (1974) 11 C.3d 373, 113 C.R. 489, 521 P.2d 481, a personal injury action arising from a traffic accident, defendant claimed that he had been unable to stop because of brake failure. The trial judge instructed the jury that defendant was required to show the cause of the brake failure to rebut the presumption of negligence which, under Veh.C. 26453 (duty to maintain brakes in good working order), arose from that failure. Held, this was proper. "The defendant is the one who was in control of the vehicle prior to the accident and who had access to knowledge of its condition at that time. After the accident, the defendant generally retains possession of the defective vehicle and ... will often repair the brakes before any claim is made by the plaintiff. Under such circumstances, the defendant and his mechanic are in a far better position than the plaintiff to demonstrate what condition caused the brake failure as well as why such condition could not be detected by reasonable inspection and repair." (11 C.3d 378.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

General rule: See Wolf v. Superior Court (2003) 107 C.A.4th 25, 36, 130 C.R.2d 860, quoting the text; cf. Sander/Moses Productions v. NBC Studios (2006) 142 C.A.4th 1086, 1096, 48 C.R.3d 525 [action by executive producers against television production company for money allegedly owed under production services contract; discussing general rule but finding no reason to apply it, and distinguishing Wolf].

(1) Loss or Destruction of Goods.

Cross-Reference: 13 Summary (10th), Personal Property, §174.

(2) Defectively Designed Product.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1455.

13 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

2. Evidence Code.

b. Factors Calling for Altered Burden.

4. Proof of Causation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 13

[§ 13] Proof of Causation.

(1) Concurrent Negligence but Single Unidentified Cause. In Summers v. Tice (1948) 33 C.2d 80, 199 P.2d 1, the court approved the following rule: "When two or more persons by their acts are possibly the sole cause of a harm, or when two or more acts of the same person are possibly the sole cause, and the plaintiff has introduced evidence that the one of the two persons, or the one of the same person's two acts, is culpable, then the defendant has the burden of proving that the other person, or his other act, was the sole cause of the harm." (33 C.2d 85.) (For full discussion of implications of Summers, see 7 Stanf. L. Rev. 265, 490; 28 So. Cal. L. Rev. 429; 3 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 122; 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §971; and see also Vahey v. Sacia (1981) 126 C.A.3d 171, 174, 177, 178 C.R. 559, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §971 [Summers doctrine applied even though plaintiff settled with all parties except defendant, i.e., Summers applies to multiple tortfeasors, not multiple defendants]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 3.80.)

(2) Defendant's Negligence Preventing Proof of Causation. "[W]hen there is a substantial probability that a defendant's negligence makes it impossible, as a practical matter, for plaintiff to prove 'proximate causation' conclusively, it is more appropriate to hold the defendant liable than to deny an innocent plaintiff recovery, unless the defendant can prove that his negligence was not a cause of the injury." (Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 C.3d 756, 774, footnote 19, 91 C.R. 745, 478 P.2d 465; see Galanek v. Wismar (1999) 68 C.A.4th 1417, 1426, 81 C.R.2d 236 [once malpractice plaintiff, who alleged defendant attorney's negligent spoliation of evidence caused her to lose her products liability action, presented prima facie case of causation, burden of proof on that issue shifted to defendant; following Haft case].)

The Haft rule was held inapplicable, however, in McKeon v. Hastings College (1986) 185 C.A.3d 877, 230 C.R. 176, an action by former tenants of residential hotels displaced by a public law school's expansion project. Plaintiffs moved for an order requiring the law school to bear the burden of proving what caused the displaced persons to move, on the ground that the school had neglected to perform its duty to survey and analyze the housing needs of displaced persons. Held, the motion was properly denied. The Haft rule is applied in tort actions, which this is not, and has never been applied to a public entity of quasi-governmental dimension. (185 C.A.3d 901.) (For full discussion of Haft rule and other cases considering its applicability, see 23 Hastings L. J. 650; 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §§972, 973; and see BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.60, Use Note.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Concurrent Negligence but Single Unidentified Cause. See CACI, No. 434 [concurrent negligence but single unidentified cause].

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1194.

Vahey v. Sacia:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1194.

(2) Defendant's Negligence Preventing Proof of Causation.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1195.

14 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

3. Burden on Specific Issues.

a. Guilt of Crime or Wrong.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 14

[§ 14] Guilt of Crime or Wrong.

(1) Former Law. Former C.C.P. 1963(1) stated a disputable presumption, "[t]hat a person is innocent of crime or wrong." This was frequently invoked, and was described as "one of the strongest presumptions known to the law." (Gong v. Firemen's Ins. Co. of Newark, New Jersey (1962) 202 C.A.2d 686, 691, 21 C.R. 110; see also Tri-Q v. Sta-Hi Corp. (1965) 63 C.2d 199, 209, footnote 1, 45 C.R. 878, 404 P.2d 486, quoting the text; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §236.)

Thus, where inferences of fraud or fair dealing were equally possible, that of fair dealing was drawn. (See Michaels v. Pacific Soft Water Laundry (1930) 104 C.A. 366, 368, 286 P. 172; Farmers Auto. Inter-Ins. Exchange v. Calkins (1940) 39 C.A.2d 390, 393, 103 P.2d 230 [action to cancel insurance policy on ground of fraud in the application]; Royal Indem. Co. v. Sherman (1954) 124 C.A.2d 512, 518, 269 P.2d 123; 37 Am.Jur.2d, Fraud and Deceit §438; see also C.C. 3400 [for purposes of contract reformation, it is presumed that parties intended "an equitable and conscientious agreement"].)

Likewise, it was presumed that no crime had been committed (Lanfried v. Bosworth (1941) 45 C.A.2d 408, 410, 114 P.2d 406 [presumption supported finding that driver of another's car operated it with consent of owner]; Gong v. Firemen's Ins. Co., supra, 202 C.A.2d 691 [action on fire insurance policy; presumption operated against insurer's claim that insured had burned own property]), and that death was by natural causes or accident, rather than by suicide. The latter presumption was frequently invoked in actions on insurance policies. (See Byers v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1933) 133 C.A. 632, 636, 24 P.2d 829; Housh v. Pacific States Life Ins. Co. (1934) 2 C.A.2d 14, 20, 37 P.2d 741; 2 McCormick 5th, §343; 85 A.L.R.2d 722 [effect of physical facts in overcoming presumption of suicide].)

(2) Evidence Code. In consonance with the Law Revision Commission's theory that this was not a true presumption (see Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 500), the objects of the old statute were substantially accomplished by restating it as a rule of burden of proof: "The party claiming that a person is guilty of crime or wrongdoing has the burden of proof on that issue." (Ev.C. 520.) (See Lane & Pyron v. Gibbs (1968) 266 C.A.2d 61, 66, 67, 71 C.R. 817 [old presumption replaced by new burden of proof, and defendant carried burden of proving that checks sued on by plaintiff were illegal because "gambling-tinged"; citing the text]; Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 C.3d 278, 290, 137 C.R. 635, 562 P.2d 316; Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 C.3d 865, 879, 151 C.R. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 [insurer had burden of showing that insured's act of shooting victim was wilful, i.e., intentional murder, and thus outside policy coverage]; Fisher v. Superior Court (1980) 103 C.A.3d 434, 448, 163 C.R. 47 [where plaintiff and one of several joint tortfeasors settle, burden of proof that settlement is not in good faith rests with party claiming it is not].)

In FMC Corp. v. Plaisted & Cos. (1998) 61 C.A.4th 1132, 72 C.R.2d 467, a manufacturer sued its liability insurers, claiming that it was entitled to indemnification for costs arising from its release of toxic contaminants. The policies contained pollution exclusions, but an exception applied for damages arising from an "unexpected" occurrence. On appeal, plaintiff contended that Ev.C. 520 imposed on defendants the burden of proving that the property damage caused by its releases of contaminants was not unexpected. Held, the statute is inapplicable. The relevant test for "expected" damage is "whether the insured knew or believed its conduct was substantially certain or highly likely to result in that kind of damage." (61 C.A.4th 1160, quoting Shell Oil Co. v. Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co. (1993) 12 C.A.4th 715, 15 C.R.2d 815, 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, Supp., §632F.) "The wording, history and prior judicial application of Evidence Code section 520 all support a finding that 'wrongdoing' connotes an element of moral disapprobation substantially greater than that which might be implied by the Shell test." (61 C.A.4th 1160.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Former Law. See 2 McCormick 6th, §342.(2) Evidence Code.

Cross-Reference: The Shell Oil case, formerly discussed in Contracts, has been transferred to 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §147.

15 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

3. Burden on Specific Issues.

b. Failure To Exercise Due Care.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 15

[§ 15] Failure To Exercise Due Care.

(1) Former Law. Former C.C.P. 1963(4) stated a disputable presumption, "[t]hat a person takes ordinary care of his own concerns." Coupled with the then rule that a presumption was evidence to be weighed by the jury against actual evidence of lack of due care (see infra, §49), it became an enormously important part of negligence litigation. The following outline and selection of cases will indicate the scope and effect of the former rule:

(a) In favor of plaintiff or decedent. The presumption was applied at the request of the plaintiff in personal injury or wrongful death suits on the issue of contributory negligence of the plaintiff or decedent. (See Smellie v. Southern Pac. Co. (1931) 212 C. 540, 548, 299 P. 529; Klein v. Southern Pac. Co. (1962) 203 C.A.2d 72, 76, 21 C.R. 233; Bove v. Beckman (1965) 236 C.A.2d 555, 558, 46 C.R. 164.) The Smellie rule was soon limited to situations where there was no testimony by eyewitnesses as to what actually occurred at the time of the accident. (See Mundy v. Marshall (1937) 8 C.2d 294, 296, 65 P.2d 65; Coe v. Southern Pac. Co. (1962) 203 C.A.2d 509, 514, 21 C.R. 731.) Later cases held, however, that despite testimony as to the actual circumstances, the presumption remained available in a wrongful death suit on behalf of a decedent (see Westberg v. Wilde (1939) 14 C.2d 360, 367, 94 P.2d 590; 4 Hastings L. J. 143), or in a personal injury action where the plaintiff, although living, was rendered incapable of testifying as a result of the accident. (See Scott v. Sheedy (1940) 39 C.A.2d 96, 101, 102 P.2d 575; Brown v. Connolly (1965) 62 C.2d 391, 395, 42 C.R. 324, 398 P.2d 596, citing the text.)

(b) In favor of defendant. The defendant in a personal injury or wrongful death suit could seek an instruction on the presumption in support of the defense of no negligence. (See Scott v. Burke (1952) 39 C.2d 388, 398, 247 P.2d 313; Meyer v. Cooper (1965) 233 C.A.2d 750, 753, 44 C.R. 57.)

(c) Action for injuries to property. It was also held appropriate to invoke the presumption in an action to recover damages for injuries to property. (See Wells Truckways v. Cebrian (1954) 122 C.A.2d 666, 679, 265 P.2d 557 [action by employer of decedent killed in collision, for damages to truck driven by decedent and its cargo; presumption that decedent exercised due care].)

(2) Evidence Code. The Evidence Code eliminated this as a presumption and restated it as a rule of burden of proof: "The party claiming that a person did not exercise a requisite degree of care has the burden of proof on that issue." (Ev.C. 521.) (See 57A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence, §1096.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Evidence Code. See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §940.

16 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

3. Burden on Specific Issues.

c. Insanity.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 16

[§ 16] Insanity.

A nonstatutory presumption of sanity was formerly recognized in California in both civil and criminal cases. (See Estate of Wright (1936) 7 C.2d 348, 350, 60 P.2d 434, 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §180 [testator presumed sane, and contrary testimony of subscribing witnesses viewed with suspicion]; 18 Proof of Facts 2d 1, 17 [presumptions and burden of proof on issue of whether mentally disordered testator executed will during lucid interval]; on criminal cases, see infra, §27.)

Ev.C. 522 restates the old presumption as a rule of burden of proof: "The party claiming that any person, including himself, is or was insane has the burden of proof on that issue."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §123.

17 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

3. Burden on Specific Issues.

d. Eminent Domain Proceedings.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 17

[§ 17] Eminent Domain Proceedings.

In an eminent domain proceeding, except as otherwise provided "neither the plaintiff nor the defendant has the burden of proof on the issue of compensation." (C.C.P. 1260.210(b); see BAJI (8th ed.), No. 11.98 [instruction on C.C.P. 1260.210(b), not necessarily recommended for every case]; 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §1007.)

The burdens of proof on other issues in eminent domain proceedings are as follows:

(1) Taking property for future use. If the defendant objects to the taking, unless the complaint states an estimated date of use that is not within 7 years from the date the complaint is filed, the defendant has the burden of proving that there is no reasonable probability that the date of use will be within 7 years from the complaint's filing date. (C.C.P. 1240.230(a), 1240.230(b).) However, if the defendant objects to the taking and proves that there is no reasonable probability that the date of use will be within 7 years from the complaint's filing date, or if the complaint states an estimated date of use that is not within 7 years from the filing date, the plaintiff has the burden of proving that the taking for future use satisfies statutory requirements. (C.C.P. 1240.230(a), 1240.230(c).)

(2) Taking property already appropriated to public use. A defendant who objects to the taking under C.C.P. 1240.510 (the proposed use may not "unreasonably interfere with or impair the continuance of the public use as it then exists or may reasonably be expected to exist in the future") has the burden of proving that the property is appropriated to public use. If that fact is established, the plaintiff has the burden of proving that the property's proposed use satisfies the requirements of C.C.P. 1240.510. (C.C.P. 1240.520.)

(3) Appropriation to more necessary public use. A defendant who objects to the taking under C.C.P. 1240.610 (property already appropriated for public use may be acquired if proposed use is more necessary public use than use to which property is currently appropriated) has the burden of proving that the property is appropriated to public use. If that fact is established, the plaintiff has the burden of proving that the proposed use satisfies the requirements of C.C.P. 1240.610. (C.C.P. 1240.620.)

(4) Loss of goodwill. The owner of a business seeking compensation for loss of goodwill has the burden of proving:

(a) The loss is caused by the taking of the property on which the business was conducted, or by injury to the remainder where the remainder is part of a larger parcel and the business was conducted on the remainder. (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(1).)

(b) The loss cannot reasonably be prevented by relocating the business or by taking other prudent steps. (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(2).)

(c) Compensation for the loss will not be included in payments under Govt.C. 7262. (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(3).)

(d) Compensation for the loss will not be duplicated in other compensation. (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(4).)

(5) Facts underlying resolution of necessity. A resolution of necessity, once adopted, conclusively establishes the existence of the requirements for a taking (C.C.P. 1245.250(a)), unless the resolution is shown to have been influenced or affected by an abuse of discretion (C.C.P. 1245.255(b)). Once a defendant property owner establishes by substantial evidence that because of a gross abuse of discretion the resolution of necessity is not entitled to its ordinary conclusive effect, the burden of proving by a preponderance of evidence the elements for a particular taking rests on the governmental agency. (Redevelopment Agency of Huntington Park v. Norm's Slauson (1985) 173 C.A.3d 1121, 1128, 219 C.R. 365.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

BAJI, No. 11.98, as revised in 2004, states simply that "[n]either the plaintiff nor the defendant has the burden of proof on the issue of compensation."

See CACI, No. 3514 [neither condemner nor property owner has burden of proving amount of just compensation].

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §1221.(4) Loss of goodwill. See Regents of Univ. of Calif. v. Sheily (2004) 122 C.A.4th 824, 831, 19 C.R.3d 84 [property owner claiming benefits of C.C.P. 1263.510 bears burden of proving entitlement to those benefits, and proof is by preponderance of evidence].

18 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

3. Burden on Specific Issues.

e. Ownership of Motor Vehicle.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 18

[§ 18] Ownership of Motor Vehicle.

In Enis v. Specialty Auto Sales (1978) 83 C.A.3d 928, 148 C.R. 255, plaintiff brought an action for personal injuries sustained in an automobile accident against the driver, an automobile dealer, and D, a previous owner. Liability of the dealer and previous owner was based on their failure to comply with the Vehicle Code sections requiring sending of notice to the Department of Motor Vehicles (Veh.C. 5602, 5900, 5901; see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1032). The trial judge instructed the jury that plaintiff had the burden of proof on this issue. Held, reversed. The Department records, proved by plaintiff, showed that D was the registered owner and that timely notice of the transfer had not been received. This sustained plaintiff's burden of proving the "ownership" allegation of her complaint. Compliance with the statutory requirements for escaping liability was an affirmative defense, based on facts peculiarly within the knowledge of defendants (i.e., that they mailed notices of sale that, for reasons unknown, were not timely received). (83 C.A.3d 936, 937, 938.) (On facts within party's knowledge, see supra, §11.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1266.

19 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

II. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CIVIL CASES

B. Burden of Proof.

3. Burden on Specific Issues.

f. Land Patented or Granted by State.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 19

[§ 19] Land Patented or Granted by State.

Ev.C. 523 affects the burden of proof in any action in which the state is a party and in which (1) the boundary of land patented or otherwise granted by the state is in dispute, or (2) the validity of any state patent or grant dated prior to 1950 is in dispute. The statute requires the state to bear the burden of proof as to all issues relating to (1) the historic locations of rivers, streams, and other bodies of water, and (2) the authority of the state in issuing the patent or grant. (See 26 Pacific L. J. 315; 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §157.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §§275, 277.

20 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

A. Presumption of Innocence and Prosecution's Burden of Proof.

1. Constitutional Basis.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 20

[§ 20] Constitutional Basis.

"The principle that there is a presumption of innocence in favor of the accused is the undoubted law, axiomatic and elementary, and its enforcement lies at the foundation of the administration of our criminal law." (Taylor v. Kentucky (1978) 436 U.S. 478, 98 S.Ct. 1930, 1934, 56 L.Ed.2d 468, 474 [quoting Coffin v. United States (1895) 156 U.S. 432, 15 S.Ct. 394, 39 L.Ed. 481, and pointing out, in footnote 12, that the "presumption of innocence" is not technically a presumption (mandatory inference drawn from a fact in evidence) but rather an "assumption" that is indulged in the absence of contrary evidence]; Mullaney v. Wilbur (1975) 421 U.S. 684, 95 S.Ct. 1881, 1892, 44 L.Ed.2d 508, 522 [burden of establishing heat of passion on sudden provocation, i.e., justification for homicide, improperly placed on defendant]; Sandstrom v. Montana (1979) 442 U.S. 510, 99 S.Ct. 2450, 2457, 61 L.Ed.2d 39, 48, infra, §90 [presumption that person intends ordinary consequences of act cannot be applied to establish specific intent element of crime]; Francis v. Franklin (1985) 471 U.S. 307, 105 S.Ct. 1965, 1970, 85 L.Ed.2d 344, 352 [instructions that acts of person of sound mind are presumed to be product of person's will, and that person is presumed to intend natural consequences of own acts, unconstitutionally shifted burden of proof to defendant]; Yates v. Aiken (1988) 484 U.S. 211, 108 S.Ct. 534, 536, 98 L.Ed.2d 546, 552 [discussing Sandstrom and Francis]; People v. Montalvo (1971) 4 C.3d 328, 333, 93 C.R. 581, 482 P.2d 205 [narcotics statute applicable to person 21 years of age or over; burden of establishing minority improperly placed on defendant]; People v. Henley (1999) 72 C.A.4th 555, 562, 564, 85 C.R.2d 123 [prior felony was alleged to be serious because it caused great bodily injury to person other than accomplice; defendant's due process rights were violated by placing on him burden of proving injured person's accomplice status]; 89 Harv. L. Rev. 51 [Mullaney]; 1978 A.S. 17 [same]; 94 Harv. L. Rev. 1574 [Rationality, Presumptions, and Judicial Comment]; 94 Harv. L. Rev. 1795 [Constitutional Process of Proof Problems]; 40 Hastings L. J. 457 [The Reasonable Doubt Rule and the Meaning of Innocence]; 1 Wharton 14th, §10 et seq.; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §521 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.327

21 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

A. Presumption of Innocence and Prosecution's Burden of Proof.

2. Statutory Restatement.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 21

[§ 21] Statutory Restatement.

The fundamental presumption of innocence, and the prosecution's burden of proving the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, are stated in P.C. 1096: "A defendant in a criminal action is presumed to be innocent until the contrary is proved, and in case of a reasonable doubt whether his or her guilt is satisfactorily shown, he or she is entitled to an acquittal." (See People v. Miller (1916) 171 C. 649, 651, 154 P. 468; People v. Daugherty (1953) 40 C.2d 876, 896, 256 P.2d 911; People v. Belton (1979) 23 C.3d 516, 520, 153 C.R. 195, 591 P.2d 485; People v. Gonzalez (1990) 51 C.3d 1179, 1214, 1215, 275 C.R. 729, 800 P.2d 1159; 2 McCormick 5th, §341; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2497; 40 Hastings L. J. 457; 24 So. Cal. L. Rev. 496; 18 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 157, 168; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §168 et seq.; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §521 et seq.; on instructions, see infra, §§22, 23.)

The existence and controlling effect of this statute are recognized in Ev.C. 501: "Insofar as any statute, except Section 522, assigns the burden of proof in a criminal action, such statute is subject to Penal Code Section 1096." (Ev.C. 522, infra, §27, deals with the burden of proving insanity.) The Law Revision Commission Comment states:

"Section 501 is intended to make it clear that the statutory allocations of the burden of proof appearing in this chapter and elsewhere in the codes are subject to Penal Code Section 1096, which requires that a criminal defendant be proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, i.e., that the statutory allocations do not (except on the issue of insanity) require the defendant to persuade the trier of fact of his innocence." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 501.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §341.

(New) Revocation of probation under Proposition 36: Where the prosecution seeks to revoke a grant of probation under Proposition 36 on the ground that the defendant violated a non-drug-related condition of probation (see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, Supp., §126C), it bears the burdens of producing evidence and of persuasion that the particular violation did not involve a drug-related probation condition. (People v. Atwood (2003) 110 C.A.4th 805, 812, 813, 2 C.R.3d 67.)

22 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

A. Presumption of Innocence and Prosecution's Burden of Proof.

3. Instructions to Jury.

a. Proper Instructions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 22

[§ 22] Proper Instructions.

(1) Right to Basic Instruction. "In charging a jury, the court may read to the jury Section 1096, and no further instruction on the subject of the presumption of innocence or defining reasonable doubt need be given." (P.C. 1096a; see CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.90 [setting forth presumption of innocence and providing definition of reasonable doubt]; People v. Light (1996) 44 C.A.4th 879, 888, 52 C.R.2d 218 [reasonable doubt instruction based on 1994 revision of CALJIC, No. 2.90, which deleted references to "moral evidence" and "moral certainty," was proper]; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §§521, 637.) The reasonable doubt standard of proof is a constitutional requirement (see infra, §41), and omission of the basic instruction under P.C. 1096 and P.C. 1096a is reversible error. (People v. Vann (1974) 12 C.3d 220, 226, 228, 115 C.R. 352, 524 P.2d 824.)

(2) Instruction on Presumption of Innocence. In Taylor v. Kentucky (1978) 436 U.S. 478, 98 S.Ct. 1930, 56 L.Ed.2d 468, a robbery victim and defendant were the only witnesses, and they gave conflicting stories. Defendant's request for a specific instruction on the presumption of innocence was denied; the judge simply instructed that the state had the burden of proving defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Held, conviction reversed. While an instruction on the "presumption of innocence" is not constitutionally mandated, under the circumstances, the refusal to give one resulted in a violation of defendant's right to a fair trial and therefore a denial of due process. (98 S.Ct. 1937, 56 L.Ed.2d 478.)

Subsequently, in Kentucky v. Whorton (1979) 441 U.S. 786, 99 S.Ct. 2088, 60 L.Ed.2d 640, the Court made it clear that failure to give a presumption of innocence instruction on request "does not in and of itself violate the Constitution." The failure must be evaluated in light of the totality of the circumstances, "including all the instructions to the jury, the arguments of counsel, whether the weight of the evidence was overwhelming, and other relevant factors." (99 S.Ct. 2090, 60 L.Ed.2d 643.) (See 7 Pepperdine L. Rev. 431.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Right to Basic Instruction. See People v. Mayo (2006) 140 C.A.4th 535, 545, 550, 44 C.R.3d 497 [trial judge's inadvertent failure to give CALJIC, No. 2.90, defining reasonable doubt and setting forth presumption of innocence, did not constitute federal constitutional error; definition of reasonable doubt is not required, and other instructions given informed jurors that defendant was entitled to acquittal unless each element of crime was proved beyond reasonable doubt, and that guilt must be judged solely on evidence presented].

23 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

A. Presumption of Innocence and Prosecution's Burden of Proof.

3. Instructions to Jury.

b. Improper Variations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 23

[§ 23] Improper Variations.

In People v. Garcia (1975) 54 C.A.3d 61, 126 C.R. 275, the trial judge instructed the jury on proof beyond a reasonable doubt according to P.C. 1096, but then amplified the instruction by adding: "In other words, reasonable doubt means just what the term implies, a doubt based upon reason, a doubt that presents itself in the minds of reasonable people who are weighing the evidence in the scales, one side against the other, in the logical manner in an effort to determine wherein lies the truth." Held, this "clarification" was prejudicial error.

(a) The language of P.C. 1096 was derived from a Massachusetts decision written in 1850. "It has with near, if not complete, universality been accepted as the best definition of the concept of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Well intentioned efforts to 'clarify' and 'explain' these criteria have had the result of creating confusion and uncertainty, and have repeatedly been struck down by the courts of review of this state." (54 C.A.3d 63.)

(b) There was one authoritative departure in California from the strict language of P.C. 1096, in People v. Hall (1964) 62 C.2d 104, 112, 41 C.R. 284, 396 P.2d 700, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §146: "To justify a criminal conviction, the trier of fact must be reasonably persuaded to a near certainty." The concept of "near certainty" is now a necessarily implied element of P.C. 1096, but it creates no new standard. "[I]t only more sharply defines that of section 1096." (54 C.A.3d 67.)

(c) The disputed instruction here used language like "reasonable doubt," "presumption of innocence" and the need for "an abiding conviction, to a moral certainty, of the truth of the charge." But the instruction called on the jury to weigh the evidence and thus the accused's guilt or innocence. "This 'weighing' process, where a tipping of the scales determines the 'truth,' is wholly foreign to the concept of proof beyond a reasonable doubt." (54 C.A.3d 69, citing the text on the similarity of the challenged instruction to the civil case rule on the preponderance of evidence.) (See also People v. Brigham (1979) 25 C.3d 283, 290, 157 C.R. 905, 599 P.2d 100; People v. Yoshimura (1979) 91 C.A.3d 609, 631, 632, 154 C.R. 314 [improvisations criticized, but verbal error held harmless]; People v. Henderson (1985) 163 C.A.3d 1001, 1012, 209 C.R. 883 [requested special instruction relating identification of defendant to reasonable doubt was redundant and argumentative and properly refused]; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.90; for extensive analysis and criticism of previous version of CALJIC, No. 2.90, which referred to "moral evidence" and "moral certainty," see concurring opinion in People v. Brigham, supra; and see 38 Hastings L. J. 153 ["To a Moral Certainty": Theories of Knowledge and Anglo-American Juries 1600-1850].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

24 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

A. Presumption of Innocence and Prosecution's Burden of Proof.

3. Instructions to Jury.

c. Right to Presence of Counsel During Instruction.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 24

[§ 24] Right to Presence of Counsel During Instruction.

The problem that occurred in People v. Garcia (1975) 54 C.A.3d 61, 126 C.R. 275, supra, §23--the judge's erroneous elaboration on the concept of reasonable doubt--was compounded in People v. Rubalcava (1988) 200 C.A.3d 295, 246 C.R. 75, a prosecution for lewd acts with children. At trial, defendant and his counsel stipulated that the judge could, in their absence, answer any jury question that did not require research or discussion. After being informed that the jury could not agree on the meaning of "moral certainty," the judge gave an extended answer. Held, this was prejudicial error:

"Just as in Garcia, ... the jury was properly instructed on reasonable doubt but the trial court ... , prompted by a jury question, provided an extended discussion of a constituent part of the concept of reasonable doubt. It did so without giving the notice which would have allowed defendant's counsel to be present. If present, defense counsel may well have successfully objected to the giving of any additional instruction on reasonable certainty or reasonable doubt or, at a minimum, may have assisted in the crafting of a different elaboration on that subject. However well-meaning the trial court was in its explanation of moral certainty it encroached upon the defendant's right to assistance of counsel." (200 C.A.3d 301.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

25 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

B. Burden of Producing Evidence on Certain Defenses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 25

[§ 25] Burden of Producing Evidence on Certain Defenses.

In a few situations, case law or a statute places the burden of producing evidence in support of a special defense on the defendant. The following are examples:

(1) Justification or excuse, after proof of abandonment or desertion of a child by the parent. (P.C. 270; see In re Bryant (1928) 94 C.A. 791, 794, 271 P. 926; In re Clarke (1957) 149 C.A.2d 802, 807, 309 P.2d 142; 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Sex Offenses and Crimes Against Decency, §143.)

(2) The defense of lawful arrest, on a charge of false imprisonment. (See People v. Agnew (1940) 16 C.2d 655, 663, 107 P.2d 601, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against the Person, §83 [defendant bears burden of producing evidence that raises reasonable doubt as to unlawfulness of arrest].)

(3) The defense of authority to sign another's name, in a prosecution for forgery. (People v. Hassen (1956) 144 C.A.2d 334, 343, 301 P.2d 80.)

(4) Circumstances that mitigate, justify, or excuse a homicide, once there is proof that the defendant committed it. (P.C. 189.5(a), formerly P.C. 1105.) P.C. 189.5(b) specifies that this burden is not applicable in a capital penalty proceeding. Rather, the statute is intended to place on the defendant, once it is shown he or she committed the crime, the burden of raising a reasonable doubt as to whether the killing was malicious. (People v. Frye (1992) 7 C.A.4th 1148, 1154, 1155, 10 C.R.2d 217; see People v. Wells (1938) 10 C.2d 610, 617, 76 P.2d 493; People v. Deloney (1953) 41 C.2d 832, 841, 264 P.2d 532; People v. Loggins (1972) 23 C.A.3d 597, 602, 603, 100 C.R. 528 ["only when the People's case embodies no evidence of mitigation or justification is section 1105 activated; at that point it warns the defendant that the task or responsibility of producing such evidence has now shifted to him"]; People v. Banks (1976) 67 C.A.3d 379, 384, 137 C.R. 652; 9 So. Cal. L. Rev. 405; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §524.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(5) (New) The defense of a good faith belief that a security is exempt, in a prosecution for sale of unregistered securities. (See People v. Salas (2006) 37 C.4th 967, 981, 38 C.R.3d 624, 127 P.3d 40, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, Supp., §305.) West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.330

26 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

C. Burden of Proof on Certain Defenses.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 26

[§ 26] In General.

Although it is a requirement of due process that the prosecution prove every fact necessary to constitute the charged offense (People v. Jimenez (1995) 33 C.A.4th 54, 61, 39 C.R.2d 12), the Constitution does not require the prosecution to prove that an affirmative defense is inapplicable. Thus, in Martin v. Ohio (1987) 480 U.S. 228, 107 S.Ct. 1098, 94 L.Ed.2d 267, the Supreme Court upheld an Ohio law that imposed on the accused the burden of proving the defense of self-defense by a preponderance of the evidence. (107 S.Ct. 1103, 94 L.Ed.2d 275, 276.) California law, by contrast, only requires the defendant to raise this defense; once that is done, the prosecution bears the burden of proving, beyond a reasonable doubt, that it does not apply. (People v. Pineiro (1982) 129 C.A.3d 915, 920, 179 C.R. 883.) But in a number of other situations, the defendant has the burden not only of raising, but also of proving, an affirmative defense. (See 75 Cal. L. Rev. 1665 [analysis and criticism of rule that defendant may bear burden of proof of affirmative defenses]; infra, §§27 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Dixon v. United States (2006) 548 U.S. 1, 126 S.Ct. 2437, 2442, 165 L.Ed.2d 299, 309, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, Supp., §57 [in federal prosecution for receiving firearm while under indictment, neither United States Constitution nor common law was violated by requiring defendant to prove her duress defense by preponderance of evidence, rather than requiring prosecution to disprove it beyond reasonable doubt].

(New) Distinction: Medication defense in mentally disordered offender proceeding: In a proceeding to extend a mentally disordered offender commitment (see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §639), the defendant's claim that as a result of medication the mental condition at issue is in remission and he or she does not represent a substantial danger to others amounts to a claim that two of the three criteria for extension are not met. These are issues on which the prosecution must bear the burden of proof; thus, giving an instruction characterizing this claim as an affirmative defense as to which the defendant bears the burden of proof constitutes error. (People v. Noble (2002) 100 C.A.4th 184, 189, 190, 121 C.R.2d 918.)

27 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

C. Burden of Proof on Certain Defenses.

2. Insanity.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 27

[§ 27] Insanity.

The former judicially recognized presumption of sanity was applicable to both civil and criminal cases, and, under the old rule that a presumption was evidence, it could be weighed against testimony as to the defendant's sanity. (See People v. Chamberlain (1936) 7 C.2d 257, 260, 60 P.2d 299 [upholding jury's verdict of sanity against uncontradicted evidence that defendant was insane]; 25 Cal. L. Rev. 101 [criticizing Chamberlain]; 25 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 637, 697 [criticizing Chamberlain and examining other jurisdictions' versions of presumption].)

Ev.C. 522 eliminated the presumption and substituted the rule that a person claiming insanity has the burden of proof on that issue, hence, must establish the defense by a preponderance of the evidence. This, in different terms, is the effect of preexisting law. (See People v. Daugherty (1953) 40 C.2d 876, 901, 256 P.2d 911; In re Dennis (1959) 51 C.2d 666, 674, 335 P.2d 657 [disapproving Chamberlain, and finding presumption dispelled by strong uncontroverted evidence of insanity]; People v. Harmon (1952) 110 C.A.2d 545, 554, 243 P.2d 15; People v. Baker (1954) 42 C.2d 550, 564, 268 P.2d 705; see also 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §15.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.331-

28 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

C. Burden of Proof on Certain Defenses.

3. Whether Witness Was Accomplice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 28

[§ 28] Whether Witness Was Accomplice.

When a witness has in some way been connected with the crime charged against the defendant, who has the burden of proving that the witness was--or was not--an accomplice?

The issue may be of the highest significance because an accomplice's testimony must be corroborated while that of an accessory after the fact or of an ordinary witness does not require corroboration. (See People v. Johnson (1971) 18 C.A.3d 458, 463, 95 C.R. 316; People v. Wolden (1967) 255 C.A.2d 798, 803, 63 C.R. 467; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Crimes, §§77, 90; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §96 et seq.) The general rule, followed in California, places the burden of proving accomplice status on the defendant. (See People v. Belton (1979) 23 C.3d 516, 523, 153 C.R. 195, 591 P.2d 485; People v. Fauber (1992) 2 C.4th 792, 834, 9 C.R.2d 24, 831 P.2d 249; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2060; 19 A.L.R.2d 1352, 1358.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

29 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

C. Burden of Proof on Certain Defenses.

4. Other Special Defenses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 29

[§ 29] Other Special Defenses.

In several other situations, for reasons of policy or convenience, the burden of proof is placed on the defendant:

(1) Arrest unlawful where made pursuant to warrant. (See Badillo v. Superior Court (1956) 46 C.2d 269, 272, 294 P.2d 23; People v. Cheatham (1975) 50 C.A.3d 592, 598, 123 C.R. 361; on burden of justifying arrest where there is no warrant, see infra, §89; on search without lawful arrest or search warrant, see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §194 et seq.)

(2) Defendant under 18, in prosecution for capital offense. (P.C. 190.5; see People v. Ellis (1929) 206 C. 353, 356, 274 P. 353; People v. Marquez (1992) 1 C.4th 553, 580, 3 C.R.2d 710, 822 P.2d 418; 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §434.)

(3) Discriminatory enforcement of law. (See People v. Superior Court (Hartway) (1977) 19 C.3d 338, 348, 138 C.R. 66, 562 P.2d 1315; People v. Gray (1967) 254 C.A.2d 256, 265, 63 C.R. 211; on meeting burden, see infra, §47.)

(4) Double jeopardy. (See People v. Newell (1923) 192 C. 659, 667, 221 P. 622; People v. Mason (1962) 200 C.A.2d 282, 285, 19 C.R. 240; People v. Ferguson (1982) 129 C.A.3d 1014, 1023, 181 C.R. 593; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §185.)

(5) Drunk driving, constitutional challenge to validity of prior conviction. (Veh.C. 41403(b)(2), formerly Veh.C. 23102.2; see People v. Zavala (1983) 147 C.A.3d 429, 435, 195 C.R. 527.)

(6) Entrapment. (See People v. Terry (1955) 44 C.2d 371, 372, 282 P.2d 19; People v. Tewksbury (1976) 15 C.3d 953, 963, 964, 127 C.R. 135, 544 P.2d 1335, infra, §47; People v. Cordray (1962) 209 C.A.2d 425, 431, 26 C.R. 42; People v. Hawkins (1962) 210 C.A.2d 669, 671, 27 C.R. 144; People v. Valverde (1966) 246 C.A.2d 318, 319, 54 C.R. 528, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §98; People v. Salas (1975) 51 C.A.3d 151, 158, 123 C.R. 903; 73 Harv. L. Rev. 1344, 1345; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 4.60; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §98.)

(7) Escape because of necessity. (See People v. Condley (1977) 69 C.A.3d 999, 1013, 138 C.R. 515 [defense is founded on public policy and provides a justification distinct from elements required to prove escape].)

(8) Evidence destroyed or suppressed had reasonably apparent exculpatory value. (See People v. Beeler (1995) 9 C.4th 953, 977, 978, 39 C.R.2d 607, 891 P.2d 153 [even if prosecution's test firing of rifle found in murder victim's house made it impossible to subject it to further testing, defendant failed to show that further testing would have had exculpatory value that would have been reasonably apparent at time of test firing]; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §124 et seq.)

(9) Good faith marriage, in bigamy prosecution. (See People v. Vogel (1956) 46 C.2d 798, 803, 299 P.2d 850; 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Sex Offenses and Crimes Against Decency, §134.)

(10) Hypodermic needle lawfully possessed, in prosecution for unlawful possession. (See People v. Fuentes (1990) 224 C.A.3d 1041, 1045, 274 C.R. 17 [in prosecution for violation of former B. & P.C. 4149 (now B. & P.C. 4140), trial judge properly instructed jury that defendant had burden of showing that his acquisition of hypodermic needle was lawful].)

(11) Inability to pay, in contempt proceeding arising from failure to pay child support. (See Moss v. Superior Court (1998) 17 C.4th 396, 426, 71 C.R.2d 215, 950 P.2d 59, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §309A, citing the text.)

(12) Permit for possession of articles otherwise unlawfully possessed. (See People v. Yoshimura (1979) 91 C.A.3d 609, 626, 629, 154 C.R. 314; cf. People v. Gott (1994) 26 C.A.4th 881, 888, 889, 31 C.R.2d 840 [in prosecution under Health & Saf.C. 11106 (interstate receipt, without permit, of ephedrine-containing substance of kind not transferable under federal law), prosecution had to prove that permit was required, as permit requirement was element of offense].)

(13) Prescription's validity, in prosecution for narcotics possession or sale. (See People v. Bill (1934) 140 C.A. 389, 392, 35 P.2d 645; People v. Vasquez (1964) 224 C.A.2d 206, 209, 36 C.R. 337; 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §94.)

(14) Securities laws, applicability of exemption. (See People v. Figueroa (1986) 41 C.3d 714, 720, 224 C.R. 719, 715 P.2d 680.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(11) Inability to pay, in contempt proceeding arising from failure to pay child support.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §437.(12a) (New) Possession of driver's license. See People v. Garcia (2003) 107 C.A.4th 1159, 1164, 132 C.R.2d 694 [because possession of valid driver's license is complete defense to charge of misdemeanor driving without license, it is defendant's burden to produce license].

(15) (New) Vehicle owner's consent, in prosecution for discharging firearm at unoccupied vehicle. See People v. Lam (2004) 122 C.A.4th 1297, 1301, 19 C.R.3d 431 [P.C. 247(b) describes owner's nonconsent not as element of crime but as exception to applicability of statute].

30 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

D. Burden of Proving Incompetence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 30

[§ 30] Burden of Proving Incompetence.

Under P.C. 1369(f), a criminal defendant is presumed competent unless proved incompetent by a preponderance of the evidence. The effect of the presumption is to allocate the burden of proof on this issue to the defendant. (See People v. Medina (1990) 51 C.3d 870, 885, 274 C.R. 849, 799 P.2d 1282 [rejecting contention that placing on defendant burden of proving his or her own incompetence is denial of due process]; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 4.10; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §§709, 710.)

People v. Medina, supra, was affirmed in Medina v. California (1992) 505 U.S. 437, 112 S.Ct. 2572, 120 L.Ed.2d 353:

(a) The proper analytical approach is that set forth in Patterson v. New York (1977) 432 U.S. 197, 97 S.Ct. 2319, 53 L.Ed.2d 281, dealing with the defense of insanity (infra, §45), and Martin v. Ohio (1987) 480 U.S. 228, 107 S.Ct. 1098, 94 L.Ed.2d 267, dealing with self-defense (supra, §26). (112 S.Ct. 2577, 120 L.Ed.2d 363.)

(b) "Based on our review of the historical treatment of the burden of proof in competency proceedings, the operation of the challenged rule, and our precedents, we cannot say that the allocation of the burden of proof to a criminal defendant to prove incompetence 'offends some principle of justice so rooted in the traditions and conscience of our people as to be ranked as fundamental.' " (112 S.Ct. 2577, 120 L.Ed.2d 363.)

(c) "Nothing in today's decision is inconsistent with our longstanding recognition that the criminal trial of an incompetent defendant violates due process. ... Rather, our rejection of petitioner's challenge to §1369(f) is based on a determination that the California procedure is 'constitutionally adequate' to guard against such results, ... and reflects our considered view that '[t]raditionally, due process has required that only the most basic procedural safeguards be observed; more subtle balancing of society's interests against those of the accused ha[s] been left to the legislative branch.' " (112 S.Ct. 2581, 120 L.Ed.2d 368.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Rells (2000) 22 C.4th 860, 867, 94 C.R.2d 875, 996 P.2d 1184 [although P.C. 1372 (hearing on criminal defendant's recovery of mental competence; see 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §714) does not expressly establish presumption of mental competence, presumption should be understood to apply, because it conforms with certificate of restoration filed by specified mental health official]; People v. Johnwell (2004) 121 C.A.4th 1267, 1273, 18 C.R.3d 286 [citing Medina v. California (1992) 505 U.S. 437, 112 S.Ct. 2572, 120 L.Ed.2d 353, text, p. 180].

31 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

E. Burden in O.R. Release of Arrestee.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 31

[§ 31] Burden in O.R. Release of Arrestee.

In Van Atta v. Scott (1980) 27 C.3d 424, 166 C.R. 149, 613 P.2d 210, the court held that the prosecution has the burden of proving that bail is necessary where an arrested person seeks release on his or her own recognizance. "This court has determined that the probable value of placing the burden of proof on the prosecution would be great and that the potential harm to the government's interests, including any administrative costs that the procedural requirement might entail, would be minimal. Accordingly, it is concluded that due process requires the burden of proof concerning the detainee's likelihood of appearing for future court proceedings to be borne by the prosecution at the OR hearing." (27 C.3d 444.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

32 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

III. ALLOCATION OF BURDENS IN CRIMINAL CASES

F. Burden in Eyewitness Identification.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 32

[§ 32] Burden in Eyewitness Identification.

The defendant is entitled to an instruction that the jurors must be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt of the accuracy of the identification of the defendant as the person who committed the offense. (See CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.91.) Recent cases have examined the question whether a more detailed instruction (such as CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.92, which lists numerous factors that may affect the accuracy of an identification) must be given on request.

In People v. Palmer (1984) 154 C.A.3d 79, 203 C.R. 474, defendant was charged with armed robbery, and the only evidence against him was the eyewitness identification by four victims. None of the victims had any expertise in identification or law enforcement background, and of the six "positive" in-court identifications, only one was preceded by an unequivocal photo-lineup identification. Defendant requested a detailed instruction dealing with the matters to be considered in appraising identification testimony (154 C.A.3d 82, footnote 2). The judge refused the request, giving only the general CALJIC, No. 2.91. Held, refusal of a specific instruction was reversible error.

(a) The proposed instructions were aimed at identification factors uniquely relevant to the reliability of the eyewitness identifications; e.g., that in-court identifications are generally less reliable than those where selection is from among members of a similar group; the importance of considering the lapse of time from occurrence of the event until identification is made; the cross-racial nature of the identification; the length of time of the eye contact and the circumstances under which it occurred. (154 C.A.3d 86.)

(b) Although Court of Appeal decisions are in conflict on whether the failure to give specific instruction is error at all or prejudicial or harmless error, the statement in People v. Hall (1980) 28 C.3d 143, 159, 167 C.R. 844, 616 P.2d 826, that it is error to refuse such an instruction, is controlling; and People v. West (1983) 139 C.A.3d 606, 610, 189 C.R. 36, properly holds that refusal is reversible error where the case is close and evidence of identification was conflicting. (154 C.A.3d 87.)

(c) "[A]ny one-on-one confrontation is inherently suggestive . . . The reliability of these in-court identifications should be evaluated in light of psychological influences inherent in being asked to identify the only black person in the courtroom." (154 C.A.3d 88.)

(d) Mere multiplicity of concurring eyewitnesses does not necessarily make the failure to instruct harmless error. The testimony of each must be evaluated separately; and, in the absence of an instruction to that effect, "we find a substantial likelihood a juror would tend not to indulge in individual credibility analyses, but simply count the number of witnesses." (154 C.A.3d 89.) (See People v. Aho (1984) 152 C.A.3d 658, 661, 663, 199 C.R. 671 [reviewing the cases, and holding refusal to give instruction was error, but was harmless in light of record]; People v. Coates (1984)

152 C.A.3d 665, 670, 671, 199 C.R. 675 [reversible error to refuse instruction, where victim's opportunity to view robber was limited and search of defendant's home failed to turn up items of apparel victim had observed]; People v. Wright (1988) 45 C.3d 1126, 1141, 248 C.R. 600, 755 P.2d 1049 [instruction should focus jury's attention on facts relevant to existence of reasonable doubt as to identification by listing, in neutral manner, relevant factors supported by evidence; CALJIC, No. 2.92, which does this, is not deficient for failing to explain effect of each factor]; People v. Gaglione (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1291, 1302, 1303, 32 C.R.2d 169 [trial judge properly gave CALJIC, No. 2.92 without explaining effects of two of enumerated factors].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

33 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

IV. BURDENS IN DETERMINING PRELIMINARY FACTS

A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 33

[§ 33] In General.

In many situations, admissibility of "proffered evidence" is dependent on proof of a "preliminary fact" as a foundation. (Ev.C. 400 et seq., 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §48 et seq.) The Code states the following rules on burdens of producing evidence and proof:

(1) Where the preliminary fact is subject to redetermination by the jury after the judge's ruling in favor of admissibility (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §52 et seq.) the "proponent of the proffered evidence has the burden of producing evidence as to the existence of the preliminary fact." (Ev.C. 403(a).)

(2) Where the preliminary fact is finally determined by the judge (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §59 et seq.), the judge indicates "which party has the burden of producing evidence and the burden of proof on the issue as implied by the rule of law under which the question arises." (Ev.C. 405(a).)

(3) Where a person claims the privilege against self-incrimination, that person has the burden of showing that the proffered evidence might tend to be incriminating. (Ev.C. 404; see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §§462 et seq., 495.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.334

34 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

A. Requisite Degree of Belief: In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 34

[§ 34] Requisite Degree of Belief: In General.

Ev.C. 190 defines "proof" as the establishment by evidence of "a requisite degree of belief" concerning a fact. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §19.) And Ev.C. 115 states that the "burden of proof may require a party to raise a reasonable doubt concerning the existence or nonexistence of a fact or that he establish the existence or nonexistence of a fact by a preponderance of the evidence, by clear and convincing proof, or by proof beyond a reasonable doubt."

These, though not necessarily exclusive, are the typical burdens imposed in civil and criminal cases. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 115; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 500; see Addington v. Texas (1979) 441 U.S. 418, 99 S.Ct. 1804, 1808, 60 L.Ed.2d 323, 329, 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §514, discussing the three standards; 2 McCormick 5th, §339 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §157 et seq.; infra, §§35 et seq., 41 et seq.; on mutually exclusive standards of proof on preliminary fact questions, see 27 Stanf. L. Rev. 271.) And Ev.C. 502, using the language of Ev.C. 115, supra, provides that the judge shall instruct the jury on which of the burdens is required of the party having the burden of proof on an issue. (See Bruck v. Adams (1968) 259 C.A.2d 585, 588, 66 C.R. 395 [reversible error to give instruction departing from standard of preponderance of evidence]; BAJI (8th ed.), Nos. 2.60, 2.62; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.90.) In addition to meeting the appropriate standard of proof, some evidence requires corroboration. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §96 et seq.)

Where the defendant defaults, a standard even lower than a preponderance of the evidence applies. To qualify for an award of damages, the plaintiff need only establish a prima facie case. (Johnson v. Stanhiser (1999) 72 C.A.4th 357, 361, 362, 85 C.R.2d 82.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CACI, No. 200 [more-likely-than-not standard]; CACI, No. 201 [clear and convincing proof standard]; 2 McCormick 6th, §339 et seq.

Addington v. Texas:

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §651. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.94

35 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

B. Civil Cases.

1. Preponderance of Evidence.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 35

[§ 35] In General.

"Except as otherwise provided by law, the burden of proof requires proof by a preponderance of the evidence." (Ev.C. 115.)

Although this requirement is occasionally found in criminal cases (see infra, §§42, 45, 47), its common application is to civil cases. And, as the above quotation makes clear, unless a greater or lesser burden is imposed by statute or judicial decision, the party with the burden of proof satisfies it by a preponderance of the evidence.

The phrase "preponderance of evidence" is usually defined in terms of probability of truth, e.g., "such evidence as, when weighed with that opposed to it, has more convincing force and the greater probability of truth." (BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.60.) Cases discussing and applying this evidentiary standard are numerous. (See Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 C.3d 476, 484, 286 C.R. 40, 816 P.2d 892, 9 Summary (9th), Partnership, Supp., §17A [proof of oral joint venture or partnership agreement]; Buss v. Superior Court (1997) 16 C.4th 35, 53, 65 C.R.2d 366, 939 P.2d 766 [action by insurer seeking reimbursement for defense costs provided to insured for claims that were not potentially covered]; Wirz v. Wirz (1950) 96 C.A.2d 171, 175, 214 P.2d 839 [divorce for incurable insanity, all doctors testified that defendant would get progressively worse "in the realm of reasonable probability"]; Barrett v. Bank of America (1986) 183 C.A.3d 1362, 1370, 229 C.R. 16 [proof of oral modification of written contract]; Glage v. Hawes Firearms Co. (1990) 226 C.A.3d 314, 324, 325, 276 C.R. 430, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §337 [common meaning of "preponderance" includes notion of greater quantity, while legal meaning of "preponderance of evidence" is restricted to quality of evidence; citing the text]; In re Marriage of Peters (1997) 52 C.A.4th 1487, 1491, 61 C.R.2d 493, 11 Summary (9th), Community Property, Supp., §11 [determination of date of separation in marital dissolution proceeding]; Tusher v. Gabrielsen (1998) 68 C.A.4th 131, 145, 80 C.R.2d 126 [existence of easement by implication]; Wollersheim v. Church of Scientology Int. (1999) 69 C.A.4th 1012, 1015, 81 C.R.2d 896 [determination whether judgment should be amended to add alleged alter ego as additional judgment debtor]; Rivera v. Minnich (1987) 483 U.S. 574, 107 S.Ct. 3001, 3004, 97 L.Ed.2d 473, 479, 480 [determination of paternity of child born out of wedlock]; for discussion of statutory confusion of the concepts of "preponderance," "clearly erroneous," and "unreasonable," see Concrete Pipe & Products of Calif. v. Construction Laborers Pension Trust (1993) 508 U.S. 602, 113 S.Ct. 2264, 2279, 124 L.Ed.2d 539, 563; and see 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1585 [Weiner]; 2 McCormick 5th, §339; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2498; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §157.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Superior Court (Plascencia) (2002) 103 C.A.4th 409, 423, 126 C.R.2d 793, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, Supp., §218 [claimant's standing in civil proceeding for forfeiture of drug assets]; Baxter Healthcare Corp. v. Denton (2004) 120 C.A.4th 333, 365, 15 C.R.3d 430, citing the text [proof that product presents no significant risk of cancer in humans and therefore does not require Prop. 65 warning (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §894)]; In re Marriage of Balcof (2006) 141 C.A.4th 1509, 1522, 47 C.R.3d 183 [proof that agreement transferring assets from husband to wife was product of undue influence]; In re Marriage of Ettefagh (2007) 150 C.A.4th 1578, 1584, 59 C.R.3d 419, Supp., infra, §39 [rebutting presumption that property acquired during marriage is community property]; CACI, No. 200 [what party is trying to prove "is more likely to be true than not true"]; 2 McCormick 6th, §339.

Weiner v. Fleischman:

Cross-Reference: 9 Summary (10th), Partnership, §10.

In re Marriage of Peters:

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, §11.

(New) Distinction: Sexually violent predators proceeding: Although the probable cause hearing in a commitment proceeding under the Sexually Violent Predators Act (Welf.C. 6600 et seq.; see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §193 et seq.) is part of a civil proceeding, Ev.C. 115 does not dictate that the preponderance standard be applied. The Legislature's use of the term "probable cause" in Welf.C. 6602(a) indicates that it contemplated a standard of proof similar to the one applied in the felony preliminary hearing context. Thus, the proper standard is: Could a reasonable person entertain a strong suspicion that the offender is a sexually violent predator? (Cooley v. Superior Court (2002) 29 C.4th 228, 251, 252, 127 C.R.2d 177, 57 P.3d 654, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, Supp., §196.)

36 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

B. Civil Cases.

1. Preponderance of Evidence.
  - b. Proof of Crime or Fraud.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 36

[§ 36] Proof of Crime or Fraud.

(1) Proof of Crime. Even where the theory of the case involves the accusation of a crime, the burden of proving the crime (supra, §14) is met by a preponderance of the evidence; i.e., the high degree of proof demanded in criminal cases is not required in civil cases even on the issue of crime. (Estate of Nelson (1923) 191 C. 280, 286, 216 P. 368; Cooper v. Spring Valley Water Co. (1911) 16 C.A. 17, 21, 116 P. 298; Pierce v. Harrold (1982) 138 C.A.3d 415, 427, 188 C.R. 458 [crime of knowingly filing a false declaration of candidacy (former Elec.C. 29303; now Elec.C. 18203) must be established by preponderance of evidence; quoting the text]; see 2 McCormick 5th, §341; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.60.)

(2) Proof of Fraud. The former view that fraud must be proved by "clear and convincing evidence" has been disapproved; the proper standard of proof is a preponderance of the evidence. (See Liodas v. Sahadi (1977) 19 C.3d 278, 291, 137 C.R. 635, 562 P.2d 316, 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §674, disapproving K. King & G. Shuler Corp. v. King (1968) 259 C.A.2d 383, 396, 66 C.R. 330; Herman & MacLean v. Huddleston (1983) 459 U.S. 375, 103 S.Ct. 683, 692, 74 L.Ed.2d 548, 560 [action by defrauded purchasers of stock under Securities Exchange Act, §10(b)]; 5 U.S.F. L. Rev. 440 [argument that ordinary civil case burden of proof should apply to civil penalty suits under B. & P.C. 17536 for false advertising, despite its criminal overtones].)

In Grogan v. Garner (1991) 498 U.S. 279, 111 S.Ct. 654, 112 L.Ed.2d 755, Grogan obtained a judgment against Garner for securities fraud, after a jury had been instructed on the preponderance of evidence standard. Garner filed for bankruptcy, listing the fraud judgment as a dischargeable debt. Grogan requested a determination that the fraud judgment was nondischargeable under §523(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, contending that the doctrine of collateral estoppel applied. Garner argued that collateral estoppel did not apply because the jury had reached its verdict under the preponderance standard instead of by clear and convincing evidence. Held, the preponderance standard applied. "We think it unlikely that Congress ... would have favored the interest in giving perpetrators a fresh start over the interest in protecting victims of fraud. Requiring the creditor to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that his claim is not dischargeable reflects a fair balance between these conflicting interests." (111 S.Ct. 659, 112 L.Ed.2d 765.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Proof of Crime. See CACI, No. 200 [in civil trials, more-likely-than-not standard applies]; 2 McCormick 6th, §341.

(2) Proof of Fraud. See People v. Muhyeldin (2003) 112 C.A.4th 604, 610, 5 C.R.3d 492, quoting the text [in action by insurance company against physicians for insurance fraud, preponderance standard applied].

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §769.

37 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

B. Civil Cases.

1. Preponderance of Evidence.
- c. Proof in Dependency Hearing.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 37

[§ 37] Proof in Dependency Hearing.

In re Cheryl H. (1984) 153 C.A.3d 1098, 200 C.R. 789, involved a dependency proceeding under Welf.C. 300 in which a 3-year-old child had been sexually molested by her father. The juvenile court judge made an order declaring the child a dependent, with custody remaining in her mother on condition that the child have no contact with her father. On appeal, the father contended that the judge should have applied the clear and convincing standard instead of that of preponderance of the evidence. Held, preponderance was the proper standard.

(a) In the jurisdictional phase of the hearing, Welf.C. 355 expressly provides that "proof by a preponderance of evidence" must be adduced to support the finding of dependency, and no higher degree is required. (153 C.A.3d 1112, 1113.)

(b) As to the dispositional phase, the statutes do not provide an express answer, but the same standard applies.

(1) Former Welf.C. 361(b) (now Welf.C. 361(c)) requires clear and convincing evidence where a child is removed from the custody of parents. Former C.C. 4600 (now Family C. 3041) provides that, before custody is awarded to a person other than a parent, there must be a finding that an award to a parent would be detrimental to the child; and this section has been interpreted to require clear and convincing evidence. (153 C.A.3d 1114, citing In re B. G. (1974) 11 C.3d 679, 696, 114 C.R. 444, 523 P.2d 244, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §666.)

(2) Here, however, the child was not removed from her home, nor was custody awarded to a nonparent. And there is neither statutory authority nor compelling policy to require a stringent standard that would make proof of neglect more difficult. (153 C.A.3d 1114, 1115.) (See In re Jennifer V. (1988) 197 C.A.3d 1206, 1211, 243 C.R. 441 [following In re Cheryl H.]; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §§572, 700.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Family C. 3041, as amended in 2002, explicitly imposes a clear and convincing evidence standard, except in one specified circumstance. (See 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §218.)

See Katie V. v. Superior Court (2005) 130 C.A.4th 586, 594, 30 C.R.3d 320 [in finding, at 18-month review hearing, that reasonable reunification services had been provided to mother, trial judge properly applied preponderance of evidence standard].

In re B. G.:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §520.

Standard of proof at jurisdiction and disposition hearings:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§615, 632.

38 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

B. Civil Cases.

2. Clear and Convincing Evidence.

a. Nature of Requirement.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 38

[§ 38] Nature of Requirement.

(1) Other Standards Distinguished. In a few situations, for reasons of policy of the substantive law, the ordinary "preponderance of the evidence" is not considered sufficient to establish the fact in issue, and instead the party must prove it by "clear and convincing evidence." In such cases, of course, the jury or trial judge should not be satisfied with a slight preponderance in favor of the plaintiff. (See Sheehan v. Sullivan (1899) 126 C. 189, 193, 58 P. 543; In re Jost (1953) 117 C.A.2d 379, 383, 256 P.2d 71; United Professional Planning v. Superior Court (1970) 9 C.A.3d 377, 386, 88 C.R. 551, citing the text; In re Marriage of Peters (1997) 52 C.A.4th 1487, 1490, 1491, 61 C.R.2d 493, citing the text; Addington v. Texas (1979) 441 U.S. 418, 99 S.Ct. 1804, 1808, 60 L.Ed.2d 323, 329, 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §514; 2 McCormick 5th, §340; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2498; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §157.)

The phrase has been defined as "clear, explicit and unequivocal," "so clear as to leave no substantial doubt," and "sufficiently strong to command the unhesitating assent of every reasonable mind." (In re Jost, supra, 117 C.A.2d 383.) Otherwise stated, a preponderance calls for probability, while clear and convincing proof demands a high probability. (See BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.62; Ev.C. 115, 502, supra, §34 [recognizing the distinction but not defining the terms]; 25 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 173, 197.)

On the other hand, the evidence required to satisfy the clear and convincing standard falls well short of what is required for a criminal conviction. (See Mattco Forge v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 C.A.4th 820, 848, 849, 60 C.R.2d 780, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §805 [in malpractice action, proposed additions to BAJI, No. 2.62, requiring proof "so clear as to leave no substantial doubt" and "sufficiently strong to command the unhesitating assent of every reasonable mind" would have improperly raised proof level to nearly reasonable doubt standard].)

(2) Review of Trier of Fact's Determination. Appellate review of a determination under this standard is the same as in other cases, i.e., the question whether the plaintiff's evidence is clear and convincing is for the judge or jury, and if the trier of fact's determination is supported by substantial evidence, it will not be disturbed on appeal. (Beeler v. American Trust Co. (1944) 24 C.2d 1, 7, 147 P.2d 583; Hansen v. Bear Film Co. (1946) 28 C.2d 154, 173, 168 P.2d 946 [action to establish a trust, proof by circumstantial evidence held sufficient]; Thomasset v. Thomasset (1953) 122 C.A.2d 116, 123, 264 P.2d 626 [sufficiency of evidence to overcome presumption of community property]; Marshall v. Marshall (1965) 232 C.A.2d 232, 246, 42 C.R. 686, citing the text; Boyd v. Bevilacqua (1966) 247 C.A.2d 272, 292, 55 C.R. 610, citing the text; Adams v. Young (1967) 255 C.A.2d 145, 155, 62 C.R. 877 [proof that deed to convey land, apparently in fee simple, was intended to create trust]; cf. Hoch v. Allied-Signal (1994) 24 C.A.4th 48, 60, 29 C.R.2d 615 [appellate court should uphold nonsuit order in case requiring clear and convincing evidence where no reasonable jury could find that plaintiff met this standard]; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §359.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Other Standards Distinguished. See People v. Mabini (2001) 92 C.A.4th 654, 662, 112 C.R.2d 159, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, Supp., §230 [following Mattco Forge v. Arthur Young & Co. (1997) 52 C.A.4th 820, 60 C.R.2d 780, text, p. 187; in prosecution for lewd acts on child, instruction patterned after BAJI, No. 2.62 adequately defined clear and convincing standard]; CACI, No. 201 [clear and convincing standard]; 2 McCormick 6th, §340.

Addington v. Texas:

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §651.

Mattco Forge v. Arthur Young & Co.:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §994.

39 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

B. Civil Cases.

2. Clear and Convincing Evidence. b. Issues Requiring Such Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 39

[§ 39] Issues Requiring Such Proof.

The principal situations in which the Legislature or the courts have laid down the requirement of this higher degree of proof in civil cases are as follows:

(1) Civil commitment of incompetent person. (See Addington v. Texas (1979) 441 U.S. 418, 99 S.Ct. 1804, 1812, 60 L.Ed.2d 323, 335, 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §514; 97 A.L.R.3d 780.)

(2) Conscientious objection: showing by alien applicant for naturalization without oath to bear arms that opposition is based solely on religious training and belief. (In re Jost (1953) 117 C.A.2d 379, 383, 256 P.2d 71.)

(3) Conservatee's lack of capacity to give written informed consent to convulsive treatment. (See Lillian F. v. Superior Court (1984) 160 C.A.3d 314, 323, 324, 206 C.R. 603.)

(4) Deed absolute in form as conveyance subject to trust. (See Sheehan v. Sullivan (1899) 126 C. 189, 193, 58 P. 543; Spaulding v. Jones (1953) 117 C.A.2d 541, 545, 256 P.2d 637; Adams v. Young (1967) 255 C.A.2d 145, 155, 62 C.R. 877; infra, §87.)

(5) Deed absolute in form as mortgage. (See Wehle v. Price (1927) 202 C. 394, 397, 260 P. 878; Beeler v. American Trust Co. (1944) 24 C.2d 1, 7, 147 P.2d 583; 54A Am.Jur.2d, Mortgages (1996 ed.) §111; 3 Summary (9th), Security Transactions in Real Property, §§9, 10; infra, §87.)

(6) Defamation of public official or public figure: proof of malice. (See Tague v. Citizens for Law & Order (1977) 75 C.A.3d Supp. 16, 25, 142 C.R. 689; Bindrim v. Mitchell (1979) 92 C.A.3d 61, 72, 155 C.R. 29 [test met].)

(7) Denaturalization proceeding: government's burden. (See Chaunt v. United States (1960) 364 U.S. 350, 81 S.Ct. 147, 149, 5 L.Ed.2d 120, 123.)

(8) Deportation proceeding: government's burden. (See Woodby v. Immigration & Naturalization Service (1966) 385 U.S. 276, 87 S.Ct. 483, 488, 17 L.Ed.2d 362, 369; 18 Stanf. L. Rev. 1237.)

(9) Minor's capacity to understand wrongfulness of conduct. P.C. 26(One) provides that a child under the age of 14 is presumed to be incapable of committing a crime without clear proof that the child understood its wrongfulness. The statute imposes a clear and convincing evidence standard; the presumption of incapacity need not be rebutted beyond a reasonable doubt. (In re Manuel L. (1994) 7 C.4th 229, 238, 239, 27 C.R.2d 2, 865 P.2d 718, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §731 [distinguishing In re Winship (1970) 397 U.S. 358, 90 S.Ct. 1068, 25 L.Ed.2d 368, which requires reasonable doubt standard for elements of offense].)

(10) Oral agreement to make a will. (See Lynch v. Lichtenthaler (1948) 85 C.A.2d 437, 441, 193 P.2d 77; 11 Summary (9th), Equity, §29.)

(11) Oral transmutation of separate property into community property. (See In re Marriage of Weaver (1990) 224 C.A.3d 478, 487, 273 C.R. 696; 11 Summary (9th), Community Property, §127.)

(12) Paternity: proof to overcome rebuttable presumptions. (See Family C. 7612, infra, §107.)

(13) Establishment of probate conservatorship. (See Conservatorship of Sanderson (1980) 106 C.A.3d 611, 620, 165 C.R. 217 [rejecting contention that stricter beyond reasonable doubt standard should be required].)

(14) Property acquired after marriage as separate property. (See Estate of Nickson (1921) 187 C. 603, 605, 203 P. 106; Gagan v. Gouyd (1999) 73 C.A.4th 835, 843, 86 C.R.2d 733; 11 Summary (9th), Community Property, §95.)

(15) Public nuisance abatement action: proof of obscenity. (See People v. Mitchell Bros.' Santa Ana Theater (1982) 128 C.A.3d 937, 940, 180 C.R. 728 [opinion after U.S. Supreme Court reversed prior decision requiring proof beyond reasonable doubt].)

(16) Punitive damages: oppression, fraud, or malice. (C.C. 3294(a), governing punitive damages, requires proof by clear and convincing evidence that defendant was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice; see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1327; 58 A.L.R.4th 878 [standard of proof as to conduct underlying punitive damage awards].)

(17) Termination of parental rights. (See In re Angelia P. (1981) 28 C.3d 908, 919, 171 C.R. 637, 623 P.2d 198, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §183; In re Laura F. (1983) 33 C.3d 826, 839, 191 C.R. 464, 662 P.2d 922; Santosky v. Kramer (1982) 455 U.S. 745, 102 S.Ct. 1388, 1402, 71 L.Ed.2d 599, 617 [requirement of due process].)

(18) Waiver of known right. (See DRG/Beverly Hills, Ltd. v. Chopstix Dim Sum Cafe & Takeout III, Ltd. (1994) 30 C.A.4th 54, 60, 61, 35 C.R.2d 515 [waiver of known right must be shown by clear and convincing proof; Supreme Court opinion holding that preponderance standard applied to proof of oral joint venture or partnership agreement did not disapprove clear and convincing standard for all civil cases].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Civil commitment of incompetent person.

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §651.

(1a) (New) Civil service employment action: defense to whistleblower's claim. Where a state civil service employee demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that the employee's opposition to, or complaint regarding, an unlawful employment practice resulted in an adverse employment action against him or her, the burden of proof shifts to the opposing party to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the adverse action would have occurred for legitimate, independent reasons even if the employee had not engaged in protected activities. (Govt.C. 19702(h), added as Govt.C. 19702(j) in 2001 and relettered in 2004.)

(5) Deed absolute in form as mortgage.

Cross-Reference: 4 Summary (10th), Security Transactions in Real Property, §§10, 11.(8a) (New) Donative transfer to drafter of instrument: determination of no fraud, duress, or undue influence. (See Prob.C. 21351(d), 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §304.)

(8b) (New) Equitable adoption: intent to adopt. (See Estate of Ford (2004) 32 C.4th 160, 172, 8 C.R.3d 541, 82 P.3d 747.)

(9) Minor's capacity to understand wrongfulness of conduct.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §732.

(10) Oral agreement to make a will.

Cross-Reference: 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §31.

(11) Oral transmutation of separate property into community property.

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, §153.

(14) Property acquired after marriage as separate property. In re Marriage of Ettefagh (2007) 150 C.A.4th 1578, 59 C.R.3d 419, involved the proper characterization of real property acquired by the husband during marriage. The court described Estate of Nickson (1921) 187 C. 603, 203 P. 106, text, p. 189, as "questionable authority," and applied the preponderance of evidence standard in determining that the community property presumption was rebutted by evidence that the property was a gift to the husband. (150 C.A.4th 1588.)

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, §15.

(15a) (New) Public nuisance abatement action: street gang activity. (See People v. Englebrecht (2001) 88 C.A.4th 1236, 1254, 1256, 106 C.R.2d 738, quoting the text.)

(16) Punitive damages: oppression, fraud, or malice. (See Basich v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2001) 87 C.A.4th 1112, 1118, 105 C.R.2d 153 [in action against insurer for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, clear and convincing standard was applicable in ruling on defendant's motion for summary adjudication of issues as to plaintiff's punitive damages claim]; Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 C.A.4th 1640, 1644, 3 C.R.3d 258 [clear and convincing standard applies not only to proof of oppression, fraud, or malice under C.C. 3294(a), but also to determination under C.C. 3294(b) whether employer should be liable for acts of employee].)

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1559.

(17) Termination of parental rights.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §345.

40 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

B. Civil Cases.

3. Beyond Reasonable Doubt.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 40

[§ 40] Beyond Reasonable Doubt.

In some civil proceedings involving deprivation of important personal rights, as well as in quasi-criminal and Juvenile Court proceedings, the high standard of proof beyond reasonable doubt has been imposed by judicial decisions. The following are illustrations:

(1) Juvenile Court proceedings involving adjudication of wardship. (See In re Winship (1970) 397 U.S. 358, 90 S.Ct. 1068, 25 L.Ed.2d 368, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §574; Welf.C. 701 [proof beyond reasonable doubt required to support finding that minor is ward because of violation of law]; 106 Harv. L. Rev. 1093 [Winship on Rough Waters: The Erosion of the Reasonable Doubt Standard].)

(2) Contempt proceedings, considered "quasi-criminal." (See Ross v. Superior Court (1977) 19 C.3d 899, 913, 141 C.R. 133, 569 P.2d 727, infra, §89.)

(3) Narcotics addict commitment proceedings. (See People v. Thomas (1977) 19 C.3d 630, 637, 139 C.R. 594, 566 P.2d 228.)

(4) Conservatorship under Lanterman-Petris-Short Act for person "gravely disabled." (See Conservatorship of Roulet (1979) 23 C.3d 219, 225, 152 C.R. 425, 590 P.2d 1; Conservatorship of Walker (1987) 196 C.A.3d 1082, 1097, 242 C.R. 289 [following Roulet].)

(5) Conservatorship under Lanterman-Petris-Short Act for incompetent defendant charged with violent felony. (See Conservatorship of Hofferber (1980) 28 C.3d 161, 178, 179, 167 C.R. 854, 616 P.2d 836 [dangerous mental condition must be shown by proof beyond reasonable doubt, but incompetency may be established by preponderance of evidence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Juvenile Court proceedings involving adjudication of wardship.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §878.

41 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

C. Criminal Cases.

1. Prosecution's Burden.

a. Beyond Reasonable Doubt.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 41

[§ 41] Beyond Reasonable Doubt.

(1) Guilt. The defendant's presumption of innocence imposes the burden on the prosecution to prove the issue of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. (P.C. 1096; Ev.C. 520; see 40 Hastings L. J. 457 [The Reasonable Doubt Rule and the Meaning of Innocence]; 108 Harv. L. Rev. 1955 [arguing against defining reasonable doubt for jury]; 1 Wharton 15th, §2:3; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §168; supra, §21.)

In a federal habeas corpus proceeding challenging a state conviction, the petitioner is entitled to relief "if it is found that upon the record evidence adduced at the trial no rational trier of fact could have found proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt." (Jackson v. Virginia (1979) 443 U.S. 307, 99 S.Ct. 2781, 2792, 61 L.Ed.2d 560, 576, 577; see 93 Harv. L. Rev. 210.)

(2) Other issues. The prosecution is also required to prove the following beyond a reasonable doubt:

(a) Special circumstances to justify a death sentence. (See P.C. 190.4(a); 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §438.) However, in the penalty phase of a capital trial, the reasonable doubt standard is not applicable in determining whether death is the appropriate penalty. (People v. Berryman (1993) 6 C.4th 1048, 1101, 25 C.R.2d 867, 864 P.2d 40; see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §466.)

(b) Absence of heat of passion on sudden provocation in a homicide case. (See Mullaney v. Wilbur (1975) 421 U.S. 684, 95 S.Ct. 1881, 1892, 44 L.Ed.2d 508, 522.)

(c) Accuracy of an eyewitness identification. (See CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.91, supra, §32.)

Formerly, the voluntariness of a confession or admission had to be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. (See People v. Jimenez (1978) 21 C.3d 595, 605, 608, 147 C.R. 172, 580 P.2d 672.) The effect of Proposition 8 was to drop the applicable level of proof to that required by the federal Constitution--proof by a preponderance of the evidence. (See People v. Markham (1989) 49 C.3d 63, 71, 260 C.R. 273, 775 P.2d 1042, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §86.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Guilt. See 36 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 85 [flexibility of reasonable doubt standard]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.327

42 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

C. Criminal Cases.

1. Prosecution's Burden.

b. Preponderance of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 42

[§ 42] Preponderance of Evidence.

If the issue is not an element of the offense charged, the ordinary requirement of proof by a mere preponderance of the evidence may apply. Examples of such issues are:

(1) Aggravated circumstances as basis for enhanced punishment. (See People v. Nelson (1978) 85 C.A.3d 99, 101, 103, 149 C.R. 177; 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §254.)

(2) Other offenses committed by defendant as circumstantial evidence of intent, motive, general plan, or scheme. (See People v. Lisenba (1939) 14 C.2d 403, 429, 94 P.2d 569.)

(3) Revocation of probation: proof of supporting facts. (See People v. Rodriguez (1990) 51 C.3d 437, 440, 272 C.R. 613, 795 P.2d 783, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §586.)

(4) Statute of limitations: not run. (See People v. Lopez (1997) 52 C.A.4th 233, 248, 250, 60 C.R.2d 511 [distinguishing between prosecution's burden of proving by preponderance of evidence that limitations period has not run from defendant's burden, on pretrial motion to dismiss, of proving as matter of law that limitations period has run]; citing the text.)

(5) Statute of limitations: tolled by defendant's absence from state. (See People v. McGill (1935) 10 C.A.2d 155, 159, 51 P.2d 433; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §229.)

(6) Territorial jurisdiction of the offense. (See People v. Cavanaugh (1955) 44 C.2d 252, 262, 282 P.2d 53; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Jurisdiction and Venue, §1 et seq.)

(7) Venue of the offense. (See People v. Megladdery (1940) 40 C.A.2d 748, 764, 106 P.2d 84; People v. Arline (1970) 13 C.A.3d 200, 203, 91 C.R. 520; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Jurisdiction and Venue, §48.)

(8) Voluntariness of confession or admission. (See People v. Jimenez (1978) 21 C.3d 595, 605, 608, 147 C.R. 172, 580 P.2d 672, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §86.)

(9) Voluntariness of consent to warrantless search. (See People v. James (1977) 19 C.3d 99, 106, footnote 4, 137 C.R. 447, 561 P.2d 1135.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1a) (New) Gang-relatedness of offense, for purposes of registration requirement. (See In re Jorge G. (2004) 117 C.A.4th 931, 942, 12 C.R.3d 193, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, Supp., §376A; on registration requirement, see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §182.)

(5a) (New) Statute of limitations: extension for specified sex crimes against child. (See People v. Riskin (2006) 143 C.A.4th 234, 238, 49 C.R.3d 287 [under former P.C. 803(g) (now P.C. 803(f)), prosecution's burden of proof as to extension of statute of limitations beyond normal period for specified sex crimes against child is only by preponderance of evidence, while corroboration requirement, which is part of that proof, must be satisfied by clear and convincing evidence].)

43 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

C. Criminal Cases.

1. Prosecution's Burden.

c. Other Standards.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 43

[§ 43] Other Standards.

(1) Corpus Delicti: Slight Proof. In the prosecution's preliminary proof of the corpus delicti as a basis for introducing the defendant's confession or admission, not even a preponderance is required; a "slight" or "prima facie" showing is sufficient. (See People v. Cullen (1951) 37 C.2d 614, 624, 234 P.2d 1; People v. Amaya (1952) 40 C.2d 70, 76, 251 P.2d 324; In re Linda D. (1970) 3 C.A.3d 567, 572, 83 C.R. 544 [corpus delicti proven by circumstantial evidence and any reasonable inference that may be drawn from it]; People v. Martinez (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1098, 1104, 31 C.R.2d 869; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §50.)

(2) Proximate Cause: Reasonable Inference. "The State has the burden of proving proximate cause as it has the burden of proving every material element of a crime. ... This burden is met if the State produces evidence from which it may be reasonably inferred that appellant's act was a substantial factor in producing the accident." (People v. Scola (1976) 56 C.A.3d 723, 726, 128 C.R. 477; see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §35.)

(3) Preliminary Examination: Slight Evidence. At a preliminary examination, only a reasonable probability of guilt need be shown, and "slight evidence" is sufficient. (See People v. Dickinson (1976) 59 C.A.3d 314, 320, 130 C.R. 561; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §21.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

44 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

C. Criminal Cases.

2. Defendant's Burden.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 44

[§ 44] In General.

In People v. Tewksbury (1976) 15 C.3d 953, 127 C.R. 135, 544 P.2d 1335, the court made the following distinctions:

(a) When an accused has the burden of interjecting a factual contention which, if established, would tend to overcome or negate proof of an element of the charged crime, as otherwise established by the prosecution, the accused need only raise a reasonable doubt as to the existence or nonexistence of the disputed fact. (15 C.3d 963.)

(b) Other considerations apply to other defenses, e.g., those which raise factual issues collateral to that of guilt and do not bear directly on any link in the chain of proving an element of the crime, or those which challenge the reliability of particular incriminating evidence. "Proof of such collateral factual issue, as in the case of the proof of the factual issue on which the public policy defense rests, is not one which must be established in the direct chain of proof of the accused's guilt. There is thus no constitutional compulsion that such collateral fact be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, nor does the presumption of the accused's innocence aid in the resolution of such fact." (15 C.3d 965.)

(c) Where an accused must establish factual matters that are preliminary to an attack on the reliability of incriminating evidence, the accused does not satisfy the burden of proof merely by raising a reasonable doubt that the preliminary fact does or does not exist, e.g., in challenging hearsay evidence, in attacking the credibility of a witness because of a prior felony conviction, or in establishing that a witness is an accomplice. (15 C.3d 965.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.330

45 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

C. Criminal Cases.

2. Defendant's Burden.

b. Insanity.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 45

[§ 45] Insanity.

The defendant has the burden of proving insanity by a preponderance of the evidence. (See People v. Daugherty (1953) 40 C.2d 876, 901, 256 P.2d 911; In re Franklin (1972) 7 C.3d 126, 141, 101 C.R. 553, 496 P.2d 465; People v. Drew (1978) 22 C.3d 333, 348, 149 C.R. 275, 583 P.2d 1318 [requirement of proof by preponderance of evidence satisfies both federal and state due process]; People v. Eckstrom (1977) 71 C.A.3d 259, 261, 139 C.R. 341; Patterson v. New York (1977) 432 U.S. 197, 97 S.Ct. 2319, 2333, 53 L.Ed.2d 281, 300 [proof of "extreme emotional disturbance"]; 91 Harv. L. Rev. 94 [Patterson]; 1978 A.S. 30 [same]; 25 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 670; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 501; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §15; supra, §27; on burden of proving incompetence to stand trial, see supra, §30.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

46 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

C. Criminal Cases.

2. Defendant's Burden.

c. Other Issues Relating to Guilt.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 46

[§ 46] Other Issues Relating to Guilt.

Except for the insanity defense, the burden of proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt is placed on the prosecution by P.C. 1096 (supra, §21). Hence, even as to an issue on which the defendant has the burden of proof (see supra, §29), the defendant is only required to raise a reasonable doubt as to his or her guilt. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 500, Ev.C. 501.) The following are illustrative:

(1) Unconsciousness. In People v. Babbitt (1988) 45 C.3d 660, 248 C.R. 69, 755 P.2d 253, defendant was convicted of first degree murder and other felonies, found sane, and sentenced to death. On appeal he asserted error in the instruction on the "presumption of consciousness" (CALJIC, No. 4.31). Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) "[B]ecause consciousness is not an element of the offense of murder (nor of any offense), CALJIC No. 4.31 does not impermissibly shift to the defendant the burden of negating an element, nor does the instruction violate due process by impermissibly lightening the prosecution's burden of proving every element beyond a reasonable doubt. Consequently, there is no constitutional impediment to the state's use of a rebuttable presumption in meeting its assumed burden--once the issue has been raised--to prove consciousness beyond a reasonable doubt." (45 C.3d 693.)

(b) In Patterson v. New York (1977) 432 U.S. 197, 97 S.Ct. 2319, 53 L.Ed.2d 281, "because the emotional-distress defense raised factual issues collateral to the question of guilt and did not serve to negative any element of the crime charged, the state could constitutionally require the defendant to carry the burden of persuasion by a preponderance of the evidence. ... In the instant case, by contrast, defendant's burden was only to raise a reasonable doubt that he was conscious, and then only if the prosecution's proof did not itself raise such a doubt. ... Hence, it is immaterial for present purposes that the unconsciousness defense served to negative an element of the crime." (45 C.3d 694.)

(c) Considered together, the instructions clearly indicated that the prosecution had the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt "not only that defendant appeared to be conscious, but also that he in fact was conscious." (45 C.3d 696.) (See also People v. Kitt (1978) 83 C.A.3d 834, 842, 148 C.R. 447 [approving giving of previous version of CALJIC, No. 4.31 in murder trial, but suggesting rewording]; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §33.)

(2) Duress. (See People v. Graham (1976) 57 C.A.3d 238, 240, 129 C.R. 31 [trial judge erred in instructing that defendant must prove duress by preponderance of evidence]; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §53 et seq.)

(3) Belief that victim of kidnapping and rape consented to accompany defendant and engage in sexual intercourse.

(See People v. Mayberry (1975) 15 C.3d 143, 157, 125 C.R. 745, 542 P.2d 1337, citing the text [defendant was "only required to raise a reasonable doubt as to whether he had such a belief"]; People v. Williams (1992) 4 C.4th 354, 362, 14 C.R.2d 441, 841 P.2d 961 [giving of Mayberry instruction required where there is substantial evidence of equivocal conduct by victim that would have led a defendant to believe, reasonably and in good faith, that consent existed when it did not]; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §§43, 44.)

(4) Challenge of prior conviction on ground of infringement of right to counsel. (See People v. Coffey (1967) 67 C.2d 204, 217, 60 C.R. 457, 430 P.2d 15, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §300; 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §377.)

(5) Exemption defense under state securities laws. (See People v. Figueroa (1986) 41 C.3d 714, 722, 224 C.R. 719, 715 P.2d 680 [burden of proof on defendant accused of selling unregistered security "is merely to raise reasonable doubt that the offering did not require registration"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2a) (New) Belief in need to take child from legal custodian. (See People v. Neidinger (2006) 40 C.4th 67, 79, 51 C.R.3d 45, 146 P.3d 502 [in prosecution for taking child from lawful custodian (P.C. 278.5(a)), in which defendant father raised defense under P.C. 278.7(a) that he was person with right to custody who had reasonable belief in need to take child, trial judge erred in requiring defendant to prove defense by preponderance of evidence; his burden was simply reasonable doubt].)

47 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

V. DEGREE OR MEASURE OF PROOF

- C. Criminal Cases.
- 2. Defendant's Burden.
- d. Miscellaneous Issues.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 47

[§ 47] Miscellaneous Issues.

(1) Preponderance Standard. On some issues, the defendant is required to meet the preponderance of evidence standard:

(a) Constitutional invalidity of prior murder conviction underlying prior murder special circumstance. (See Curl v. Superior Court (1990) 51 C.3d 1292, 1305, 276 C.R. 49, 801 P.2d 292.)

(b) Defendant under 18 when offense committed. (See People v. Nguyen (1990) 222 C.A.3d 1612, 1620, 272 C.R. 523 [party seeking certification to Juvenile Court under Welf.C. 604 must prove by preponderance of evidence that he was under 18 when offense was committed]; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §830.)

(c) Discriminatory enforcement of the law, as a defense. (See People v. Gray (1967) 254 C.A.2d 256, 265, 63 C.R. 211, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §236 [instruction that there must be "clear and convincing proof" held improper]; People v. Smith (1984) 155 C.A.3d 1103, 1129, 203 C.R. 196 [following Gray].)

In People v. Smith, supra, the trial judge seemingly imposed the higher standard, and the appellate court had to determine whether this was federal constitutional error governed by Chapman v. California (1967) 386 U.S. 18, 87 S.Ct. 824, 17 L.Ed.2d 705, 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §10, or ordinary error measured by the probability test of People v. Watson (1956) 46 C.2d 818, 299 P.2d 243, 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §7. The conclusion reached was that, while nonrecognition of the defense of discriminatory prosecution would be federal constitutional error, measuring it by the wrong standard of proof would be governed by the Watson test. (155 C.A.3d 1131, 1132.)

(d) Disposal defense in narcotics possession case. (See People v. Spry (1997) 58 C.A.4th 1345, 1369, 68 C.R.2d 691.)

(e) Entrapment defense. The entrapment doctrine is one of policy; the defense does not relate to the issue of guilt. Hence, the defendant has the burden of proof by a preponderance of evidence. (People v. Moran (1970) 1 C.3d 755, 760, 83 C.R. 411, 463 P.2d 763; People v. Valverde (1966) 246 C.A.2d 318, 324, 325, 54 C.R. 528; People v. Perez (1972) 27 C.A.3d 352, 354, 103 C.R. 669; see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §90 et seq.)

(f) Restoration to sanity after commitment under P.C. 1026.2. (See In re Franklin (1972) 7 C.3d 126, 148, 101 C.R. 553, 496 P.2d 465; In re Moye (1978) 22 C.3d 457, 462, 149 C.R. 491, 584 P.2d 1097; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §679 et seq.)

(g) Witness is an accomplice. The degree of proof is the same as in other instances in which the defendant has the burden of establishing a collateral fact that conditions a challenge to the reliability of incriminating evidence. "As in other such instances he cannot satisfy that burden by merely raising a reasonable doubt that the collateral fact does or does not exist. If he is to prevail he must do so by proof by a preponderance of the evidence, the next lighter burden imposed on a party who has the burden of proof." (People v. Tewksbury (1976) 15 C.3d 953, 968, 127 C.R. 135, 544 P.2d 1335, supra, §44; People v. Fauber (1992) 2 C.4th 792, 834, 9 C.R.2d 24, 831 P.2d 249 [issue properly submitted to jury where defendant failed to establish that witness was accomplice as matter of law; following Tewksbury]; People v. Frye (1998) 18 C.4th 894, 967, 968, 77 C.R.2d 25, 959 P.2d 183 [Tewksbury standard does not violate due process principles].)

(2) Clear and Convincing Standard. In a few situations, the defendant must meet the higher "clear and convincing" standard:

(a) Extradition warrant being resisted by petition for habeas corpus. (See In re Rock (1958) 161 C.A.2d 723, 725, 326 P.2d 865.)

(b) Motion to set aside a plea of guilty. (See People v. Brotherton (1966) 239 C.A.2d 195, 200, 48 C.R. 513; People v. Nance (1991) 1 C.A.4th 1453, 1457, 2 C.R.2d 670.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(b) Defendant under 18 when offense committed.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §§740, 741.

48 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

A. Former Law.

1. Presumptions and Inferences.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 48

[§ 48] Presumptions and Inferences.

Former statutes defined a presumption as a deduction that the law expressly directs to be made from particular facts, and an inference as a deduction that the jury may make from the facts. Because "the law" then meant "statutes," an unfortunate distinction arose between statutory presumptions and nonstatutory presumptions; the latter had to be classified as "inferences." This led to confusing and sometimes conflicting decisions as to their evidentiary effects, and also to reversals for error in using the term "presumption" in instructing the jury on an "inference." (See infra, §§49, 50.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

49 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

A. Former Law.

2. Presumptions and Inferences as Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 49

[§ 49] Presumptions and Inferences as Evidence.

(1) Presumptions as Evidence. Former statutes classified presumptions as a form of "indirect evidence," and stated that, unless a presumption was controverted, the jury had to find according to the presumption. Under these statutes, the rule became established that presumptions constituted independent evidence, to be somehow weighed against other evidence, and that a verdict or finding could rest upon a presumption even though all of the other evidence was opposed to it. The leading case declaring this rule was Smellie v. Southern Pac. Co. (1931) 212 C. 540, 549, 299 P. 529, a wrongful death action, in which uncontradicted testimony showed decedent's contributory negligence. The court held that a directed verdict was error, for the presumption of due care was evidence that created a conflict with the testimony and called for submission of the case to the jury.

The Smellie rule was consistently followed in cases involving the presumption of due care. (See Lahey v. Southern Pac. Co. (1936) 16 C.A.2d 652, 662, 61 P.2d 461; Westberg v. Willde (1939) 14 C.2d 360, 366, 94 P.2d 590; Scott v. Burke (1952) 39 C.2d 388, 394, 247 P.2d 313; Orbach v. Zern (1955) 138 C.A.2d 178, 181, 291 P.2d 120.)

It was also applied to other presumptions. (See Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 C.2d 49, 53, 179 P.2d 804 [presumptions of consideration and legality]; Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 C.2d 147, 153, 272 P.2d 11 [former C.C. 2235, now Prob.C. 16004: presumption of undue influence in transaction between fiduciary and beneficiary]; Halloran v. Isaacson (1949) 95 C.A.2d 357, 213 P.2d 19 [former C.C. 164: property transferred to married woman presumed her separate property; held not overcome by uncontradicted testimony of interested witnesses]; Savarese v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1957) 150 C.A.2d 518, 520, 310 P.2d 142 [ordinary course of business and receipt of letter]; Abrams v. Stone (1957) 154 C.A.2d 33, 39, 315 P.2d 453 [former presumptions of innocence of crime or violation of law].)

(2) Inferences as Evidence. Later cases applied the Smellie rule to the nonstatutory presumptions or "inferences." (See Bushnell v. Tashiro (1931) 115 C.A. 563, 565, 2 P.2d 550 [inference of scope of employment from ownership of car and agency]; Estate of Pitcairn (1936) 6 C.2d 730, 732, 59 P.2d 90 [presumption of due execution of will]; Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 C.2d 533, 538, 282 P.2d 857 ["presumption" that agent communicated facts to principal; held sufficient to sustain contempt adjudication]; Hennelly v. Bank of America (1951) 102 C.A.2d 754, 758, 228 P.2d 79 [inference of delivery of deed from its possession by grantee]; on res ipsa loquitur, see infra, §114 et seq.)

(3) Criticism of Smellie Rule. The California view of the evidentiary effect of presumptions was opposed in strong dissenting opinions (see Speck v. Sarver (1942) 20 C.2d 585, 590, 128 P.2d 16; Scott v. Burke (1952) 39 C.2d 388, 402, 247 P.2d 313), and found scant favor with commentators. (See 18 Cal. L. Rev. 418; 20 Cal. L. Rev. 189; 26 Cal. L. Rev. 519; 31 Cal. L. Rev. 105, 108, 316; 41 Cal. L. Rev. 751; 4 Hastings L. J. 125, 134; 16 So. Cal. L. Rev. 245; 2 Stanf. L.

Rev. 558; 12 Stanf. L. Rev. 5; 13 Stanf. L. Rev. 789; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 21; for judicial views both pro and contra, see 5 A.L.R.3d 19.) The Comment to Ev.C. 600 summarizes the objections to the Smellie line of cases as follows:

(a) "These decisions require the jury to perform an intellectually impossible task. The jury is required to weigh the testimony of witnesses and other evidence as to the circumstances of a particular event against the fact that the law requires an opposing conclusion in the absence of contrary evidence and to determine which 'evidence' is of greater probative force."

(b) "Moreover, the doctrine that a presumption is evidence imposes upon the party with the burden of proof a much higher burden of proof than is warranted. For example, if a party with the burden of proof has a presumption invoked against him and if the presumption remains in the case as evidence even though the jury believes that he has produced a preponderance of the evidence, the effect is that he must produce some additional but unascertainable quantum of proof in order to dispel the effect of the presumption. ... The doctrine that a presumption is evidence gives no guidance to the jury or to the parties as to the amount of this additional proof. The most that should be expected of a party in a civil case is that he prove his case by a preponderance of the evidence (unless some specific presumption or rule of law requires proof of a particular issue by clear and convincing evidence). The most that should be expected of the prosecution in a criminal case is that it establish the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. To require some additional quantum of proof, unspecified and uncertain in amount, to dispel a presumption which persists as evidence in the case unfairly weights the scales of justice against the party with the burden of proof." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 600.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

50 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

A. Former Law.

3. Presumption or Inference Dispelled.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 50

[§ 50] Presumption or Inference Dispelled.

Although the rule of Smellie v. Southern Pac. Co. (1931) 212 C. 540, 549, 299 P. 529, supra, §49, did not succumb to its critics until the adoption of the Evidence Code (infra, §52), two qualifications developed in the case law to keep it within reasonable bounds:

(1) Presumption: Contrary Testimony of Party or Party's Witness. A presumption could be dispelled by the uncontradicted testimony of the party or the party's witnesses to a fact wholly irreconcilable with the presumption. This qualification, declared in Mar Shee v. Maryland Assur. Corp. (1922) 190 C. 1, 9, 210 P. 269, and recognized in the Smellie case, was mainly invoked against the presumption of due care, but was applicable to any presumption. (See Levin v. Brown (1947) 81 C.A.2d 913, 916, 185 P.2d 329 [plaintiff testified that, on clear day, he walked across track of defendant's electric railway, with only one glance in direction from which train struck him]; Ringo v. Johnson (1950) 99 C.A.2d 124, 130, 221 P.2d 267 [plaintiff's own testimony]; Steward v. Paige (1949) 90 C.A.2d 820, 824, 203 P.2d 858 [defendant, relying on presumption of wife's separate property under former C.C. 164, himself introduced evidence showing that it was community property]; Elkinton v. California State Auto. Assn. (1959) 173 C.A.2d 338, 346, 343 P.2d 396.)

(2) Inference: Contrary Evidence That Is Clear, Positive, and Uncontradicted. Later cases established a second qualification applicable to inferences (nonstatutory presumptions): Where the contrary evidence is "clear, positive, uncontradicted, and of such a nature that it can not rationally be disbelieved," the inference is dispelled as a matter of law. (Blank v. Coffin (1942) 20 C.2d 457, 461, 126 P.2d 868; see Hicks v. Reis (1943) 21 C.2d 654, 660, 134 P.2d 788 [dictum]; Leonard v. Watsonville Community Hosp. (1956) 47 C.2d 509, 515, 518, 305 P.2d 36 [res ipsa loquitur; testimony elicited from adverse witness]; Teich v. General Mills (1959) 170 C.A.2d 791, 799, 339 P.2d 627 [following Leonard]; Estate of Gavin (1952) 114 C.A.2d 354, 362, 250 P.2d 333 [delivery of deed]; Redfoot v. J. T. Jenkins Co. (1955) 138 C.A.2d 108, 120, 291 P.2d 134 [negligence of bailee].)

It was consistently held, however, that the qualification for testimony by the party or party's witness was the only one applicable to statutory presumptions; these could not be dispelled even by strong uncontradicted evidence of the opposing party. (See discussion, Leonard v. Watsonville Community Hosp., supra, 47 C.2d 517; Estate of Nidever (1960) 181 C.A.2d 367, 380, 5 C.R. 343; Sadberry v. Griffiths (1961) 191 C.A.2d 610, 614, 12 C.R. 773.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Inference: Contrary Evidence That Is Clear, Positive, and Uncontradicted. See *Ajaxo v. E*Trade Group* (2005) 135 C.A.4th 21, 52, 37 C.R.3d 221, citing the text [Hicks v. Reis (1943) 21 C.2d 654, 134 P.2d 788, text, p. 200, and Teich v.

General Mills (1959) 170 C.A.2d 791, 339 P.2d 627, text, p. 200, applied to inferences or presumptions that must be overcome; neither case stands for proposition that circumstantial evidence fails when there is contradictory direct evidence].Correction: Page 200, line 14, "Gavin" should be "Galvin".

51 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

B. Model Code, Uniform Rules, and Federal Rules.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 51

[§ 51] Model Code, Uniform Rules, and Federal Rules.

(1) Thayer Doctrine and Model Code. Thayer's view that a presumption is not evidence was supported by Wigmore, the federal courts, and many state jurisdictions, and was adopted by the Model Code of Evidence. (See Model C., Rule 704; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2490 et seq.; 2 McCormick 5th, §344; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 21; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 601; 1945 A.S. 1206.) The strictest aspect of this view, expressed in the Model Code, is that a presumption is dispelled when the adverse party produces any evidence contrary thereto, regardless of whether it is credible or substantial. (See 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2491; 59 Harv. L. Rev. 496; 53 Cal. L. Rev. 1441; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 22; on alternatives to the Thayer theory, see 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2493a et seq.; on the general law, see 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §181 et seq.)

(2) Uniform Rules. The more moderate approach of Morgan was embodied in the original Uniform Rules of Evidence, which gave special force to a presumption based on facts having probative value, and called for credible evidence to dispel any presumption. (See 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2493f; 2 McCormick 5th, §344; 53 Cal. L. Rev. 1442; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 22; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 601; 1953 A.S. 788.)

(3) Federal Rules. The Federal Rules of Evidence deal with presumptions as follows:

(a) "In all civil actions and proceedings not otherwise provided for by Act of Congress or by these rules, a presumption imposes on the party against whom it is directed the burden of going forward with evidence to rebut or meet the presumption, but does not shift to such party the burden of proof in the sense of the risk of nonpersuasion, which remains throughout the trial upon the party on whom it was originally cast." (F.R. Evid., Rule 301; see 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §61 et seq.; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2493h; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 647, 655; 31 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1101.)

(b) "In civil actions and proceedings, the effect of a presumption respecting a fact which is an element of a claim or defense as to which State law supplies the rule of decision is determined in accordance with State law." (F.R. Evid., Rule 302; see 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §74 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Thayer Doctrine and Model Code. See 2 McCormick 6th, §344.

(2) Uniform Rules. See 2 McCormick 6th, §344. (3) Federal Rules. See 38 U.S.F. L. Rev. 139 [comparing approaches of Evidence Code and Federal Rules of Evidence to presumptions].

52 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

1. Presumption Is Not Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 52

[§ 52] Presumption Is Not Evidence.

(1) Definition. "A presumption is an assumption of fact that the law requires to be made from another fact or group of facts found or otherwise established in the action." (Ev.C. 600(a); see 2 McCormick 5th, §342; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2490.)

(2) Repudiation of Smellie Rule. "Evidence," as defined in Ev.C. 140 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §18), is limited to matters "offered" as proof, and thus does not include presumptions as defined in Ev.C. 600(a). But to avoid any uncertainty as to its intent, the Commission added an express repudiation of the Smellie rule: "A presumption is not evidence." (Ev.C. 600(a); see Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 600.)

The conventional definition of "inference" is stated in Ev.C. 600(b): It is "a deduction of fact that may logically and reasonably be drawn from another fact or group of facts found or otherwise established in the action." So defined, an inference--consisting of reasoning from evidence--cannot be classified as a form of evidence, and the peculiar application of the Smellie rule to "inferences" (supra, §49) is also obsolete. (See Lane & Pyron v. Gibbs (1968) 266 C.A.2d 61, 66, 71 C.R. 817, citing the text; People v. Bland (1995) 10 C.4th 991, 1003, footnote 5, 43 C.R.2d 77, 898 P.2d 391 [distinguishing between inference and rebuttable presumption]; 2 Lincoln L. Rev. 101; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 647 [rebuttable criminal and civil presumptions].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Definition. See 2 McCormick 6th, §342. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.53

53 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

2. Classification in Civil Cases.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 53

[§ 53] In General.

Eliminating the Smellie aberration that a presumption is evidence (supra, §52) merely cleared the slate; the question remained, what effect does a presumption have? Does it merely affect the burden of producing evidence, and disappear if the adverse party produces any contrary evidence (the Thayer-Wigmore-Model Code view), or does it shift the burden of proof to the adverse party (the Morgan-McCormick view)? (See supra, §51.) The Commission, accepting elements of both doctrines, adopted the theory that presumptions are of two distinct kinds, and the two kinds have different effects: "Every rebuttable presumption is either (a) a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence or (b) a presumption affecting the burden of proof." (Ev.C. 601.)

The Comment states: "Underlying the presumptions provisions of the Evidence Code is the conclusion that the Thayer view is correct as to some presumptions, but that the Morgan view is right as to others. The fact is that presumptions are created for a variety of reasons, and no single theory or rationale of presumptions can deal adequately with all of them. Hence, the Evidence Code classifies all rebuttable presumptions as either (1) presumptions affecting the burden of producing evidence (essentially Thayer presumptions), or (2) presumptions affecting the burden of proof (essentially Morgan presumptions)." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 601; for a comprehensive analysis and critical appraisal of this approach, see 53 Cal. L. Rev. 1439.)

The effect of the distinction, and the criteria for classification, are set forth in Ev.C. 603 et seq. (infra, §54 et seq.), and a number of important presumptions established by prior California statutes are restated and assigned to the two categories (see infra, §§67 et seq., 86 et seq.). But no attempt was made to classify all existing statutory or judicially created presumptions. Hence, in the absence of further legislative action, it will be the task of the courts in particular cases to apply the criteria and thereby add unclassified presumptions to the classified list. (See Law Rev. Com. Comments on Ev.C. 601, 602, 603, 630, 660; Gillette v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1971) 20 C.A.3d 312, 319, 97 C.R. 542, 893 [quoting the text]; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2493i; 2 McCormick 5th, §344; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, Chap. 46; BAJI (8th ed.), Appendix C, p. 491; 53 Cal. L. Rev. 1449; 2 Lincoln L. Rev. 107.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §344.

54 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

2. Classification in Civil Cases.

b. Presumptions Affecting Burden of Producing Evidence.

1. Nature.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 54

[§ 54] Nature.

"A presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence is a presumption established to implement no public policy other than to facilitate the determination of the particular action in which the presumption is applied." (Ev.C. 603; see 53 Cal. L. Rev. 1445.) A number of presumptions falling within this class are listed in Ev.C. 630 et seq. (See infra, §67 et seq.)

Presumptions are "expressions of experience," designed to dispense with unnecessary proof. "Typically, such presumptions are based on an underlying logical inference. In some cases, the presumed fact is so likely to be true and so little likely to be disputed that the law requires it to be assumed in the absence of contrary evidence. In other cases, evidence of the nonexistence of the presumed fact, if there is any, is so much more readily available to the party against whom the presumption operates that he is not permitted to argue that the presumed fact does not exist unless he is willing to produce such evidence. In still other cases, there may be no direct evidence of the existence or nonexistence of the presumed fact; but, because the case must be decided, the law requires a determination that the presumed fact exists in light of common experience indicating that it usually exists in such cases." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 603.) (See also Gillette v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1971) 20 C.A.3d 312, 319, 97 C.R. 542 [quoting the text]; BAJI (8th ed.), Appendix C, p. 491.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §10:11 et seq.

55 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

2. Classification in Civil Cases.

b. Presumptions Affecting Burden of Producing Evidence.

2. Effect.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 55

[§ 55] Effect.

"The effect of a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence is to require the trier of fact to assume the existence of the presumed fact unless and until evidence is introduced which would support a finding of its nonexistence, in which case the trier of fact shall determine the existence or nonexistence of the presumed fact from the evidence and without regard to the presumption. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the drawing of any inference that may be appropriate." (Ev.C. 604.)

The Comment explains:

"Such a presumption is merely a preliminary assumption in the absence of contrary evidence, i.e., evidence sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of the presumed fact. If contrary evidence is introduced, the trier of fact must weigh the inferences arising from the facts that gave rise to the presumption against the contrary evidence and resolve the conflict. For example, if a party proves that a letter was mailed, the trier of fact is required to find that the letter was received in the absence of any believable contrary evidence. However, if the adverse party denies receipt, the presumption is gone from the case. The trier of fact must then weigh the denial of receipt against the inference of receipt arising from proof of mailing and decide whether or not the letter was received.

"If a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence is relied on, the judge must determine whether there is evidence sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of the presumed fact. If there is such evidence, the presumption disappears and the judge need say nothing about it in his instructions. If there is not evidence sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of the presumed fact, the judge should instruct the jury concerning the presumption. If the basic fact from which the presumption arises is established (by the pleadings, by stipulation, by judicial notice, etc.) so that the existence of the basic fact is not a question of fact for the jury, the jury should be instructed that the presumed fact is also established. If the basic fact is a question of fact for the jury, the judge should charge the jury that, if it finds the basic fact, the jury must also find the presumed fact." (Slater v. Kehoe (1974) 38 C.A.3d 819, 832, 113 C.R. 790, infra, §118 [res ipsa loquitur is presumption that disappears once evidence to support contrary finding is introduced]; Security Pac. Nat. Bank v. Associated Motor Sales (1980) 106 C.A.3d 171, 179, 180, 165 C.R. 38 [unless contradicting evidence is offered, there is no triable issue of fact, and summary judgment may be granted]; Bonzer v. Huntington Park (1993) 20 C.A.4th 1474, 1479, 1481, 25 C.R.2d 278 [presumption that letter correctly addressed and properly mailed was received (Ev.C. 641, infra, §78) disappeared once defendant presented uncontradicted evidence of nonreceipt; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 604; see BAJI (8th ed.), Appendix C, p.

491].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.85 et seq.

56 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

2. Classification in Civil Cases.

c. Presumptions Affecting Burden of Proof.

1. Nature.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 56

[§ 56] Nature.

"A presumption affecting the burden of proof is a presumption established to implement some public policy other than to facilitate the determination of the particular action in which the presumption is applied, such as the policy in favor of the establishment of a parent and child relationship, the validity of marriage, the stability of titles to property, or the security of those who entrust themselves or their property to the administration of others." (Ev.C. 605; see Gillette v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1971) 20 C.A.3d 312, 319, 97 C.R. 542, 893, quoting the text; Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 C.A.3d 755, 761, 107 C.R. 629, citing the text; Fisher v. Berkeley (1984) 37 C.3d 644, 695, 209 C.R. 682, 693 P.2d 261, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §15; Hewitt v. Meaney (1986) 181 C.A.3d 361, 366, 367, 226 C.R. 349 [presumption that common grantor intended to reserve easement through one parcel where necessary for access to road from adjacent parcel (see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §§459, 460) serves public policy promoting land use]; William Dal Porto & Sons v. Agricultural Lab. Rel. Bd. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 1195, 1210, 237 C.R. 206 [presumption that agricultural employer would have reached collective agreement had it bargained in good faith promotes public policy discouraging employers from unlawfully refusing to bargain]; 53 Cal. L. Rev. 1447; BAJI (8th ed.), Appendix C, p. 492.) A number of presumptions in this class (augmenting those recited in the definition) are listed in Ev.C. 660 et seq. (See infra, §86 et seq.)

The Comment on Ev.C. 605 clarifies the distinction and explains the criteria as follows:

"Frequently, presumptions affecting the burden of proof are designed to facilitate determination of the action in which they are applied. Superficially, therefore, such presumptions may appear merely to be presumptions affecting the burden of producing evidence. What makes a presumption one affecting the burden of proof is the fact that there is always some further reason of policy for the establishment of the presumption. It is the existence of this further basis in policy that distinguishes a presumption affecting the burden of proof from a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence. For example, the presumption of death from seven years' absence (Section 667) exists in part to facilitate the disposition of actions by supplying a rule of thumb to govern certain cases in which there is likely to be no direct evidence of the presumed fact. But the policy in favor of distributing estates, of settling titles, and of permitting life to proceed normally at some time prior to the expiration of the absentee's normal life expectancy (perhaps 30 or 40 years) that underlies the presumption indicates that it should be a presumption affecting the burden of proof."

"Frequently, too, a presumption affecting the burden of proof will have an underlying basis in probability and logical inference. For example, the presumption of the validity of a ceremonial marriage may be based in part on the probability that most marriages are valid. However, an underlying logical inference is not essential. In fact, the lack of an underlying inference is a strong indication that the presumption affects the burden of proof. Only the needs of public policy can justify the direction of a particular assumption that is not warranted by the application of probability and common experience to the known facts. Thus, the total lack of any inference underlying the presumption of the negligence of an employer that arises from his failure to secure the payment of workmen's compensation (Labor Code §3708) is a clear indication that the presumption is based on public policy and affects the burden of proof. Similarly, the fact that the presumption of death from seven years' absence may conflict directly with the logical inference that life continues for its normal expectancy is an indication that the presumption is based on public policy and, hence, affects the burden of proof." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 605.) The period of the presumption of death is now 5 years (see infra, §92).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Dubon (2001) 90 C.A.4th 944, 953, 108 C.R.2d 914, citing the text [presumption of P.C. 1016.5 (4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §283) that, without record of advisement as to immigration consequences of plea, no such advisement was given, is one affecting burden of proof, as it was enacted to promote fairness by ensuring that defendants receive appropriate warnings]; Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §10:20 et seq.

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §§398, 399.

57 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

2. Classification in Civil Cases.

c. Presumptions Affecting Burden of Proof.

2. Effect.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 57

[§ 57] Effect.

"The effect of a presumption affecting the burden of proof is to impose upon the party against whom it operates the burden of proof as to the nonexistence of the presumed fact." (Ev.C. 606.) (See BAJI (8th ed.), Appendix C, p. 492.)

Once a presumption of this type comes into play, the issue is one that must be presented to the trier of fact. The party "who has the benefit of a presumption affecting the burden of proof may rely on that alone and force the opponent to prove his or her case." (Haycock v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (1994) 22 C.A.4th 1473, 1495, 28 C.R.2d 248 [in light of presumption of at-will employment (Lab.C. 2922; see 2 Summary (9th), Agency and Employment, §165), trial judge erred in deciding as matter of law that there was implied-in-fact contract not to discharge plaintiff without good cause]; see Xebec Dev. Partners, Ltd. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1993) 12 C.A.4th 501, 545, 549, 15 C.R.2d 726, citing the text [in insurance bad faith action by third party, presumption that settlement between insured and third party accurately represented insured's liability was presumption affecting burden of proof and required insurer to carry burden of proving contrary]; Jackson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1994) 22 C.A.4th 730, 739, 27 C.R.2d 712 [in suspension hearing in which officer's unsworn arrest report indicated that licensee stated he had been driving, presumption of official duty regularly performed shifted foundational, method-of-preparation burden to licensee to show that officer failed to observe and correctly report events described]; Alexander v. Nextel Communications (1997) 52 C.A.4th 1376, 1381, 1382, 61 C.R.2d 293 [trial judge committed reversible error in failing to instruct jury on at-will presumption; following Haycock].)

The Comment explains:

"In the ordinary case, the party against whom it is invoked will have the burden of proving the nonexistence of the presumed fact by a preponderance of the evidence. Certain presumptions affecting the burden of proof may be overcome only by clear and convincing proof. When such a presumption is relied on, the party against whom the presumption operates will have a heavier burden of proof.

"If the party against whom the presumption operates already has the same burden of proof as to the nonexistence of the presumed fact that is assigned by the presumption, the presumption can have no effect on the case and no instruction in regard to the presumption should be given ... If the evidence is not sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of the presumed fact, the judge's instructions will be the same as if the presumption were merely a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence ... If there is evidence of the nonexistence of the presumed fact, the judge should instruct the jury on the manner in which the presumption affects the factfinding process. If the basic fact from which the presumption arises is so established that the existence of the basic fact is not a question of fact for the jury (as, for example, by the pleadings, by judicial notice, or by stipulation of the parties), the judge should instruct the jury that the existence of the presumed fact is to be assumed until the jury is persuaded to the contrary by the requisite degree of proof (proof by a preponderance of the evidence, clear and convincing proof, etc.). ... If the basic fact is a question of fact for the jury, the judge should instruct the jury that, if it finds the basic fact, it must also find the presumed fact unless persuaded of the nonexistence of the presumed fact by the requisite degree of proof." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 606.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §231. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.85 et seq.

58 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

a. Nature and Effect of Presumption.

1. Purpose: Policy or Convenience.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 58

[§ 58] Purpose: Policy or Convenience.

For reasons of policy or convenience, it is sometimes necessary to place on the defendant the burden of producing evidence or the burden of proof as to certain defenses. (See supra, §25 et seq.) And the legislative power to create presumptions against the defendant, even though they relate to an element of the crime, is well established, subject to the constitutional requirement of a rational connection between the fact proved and the additional fact presumed. (See Tot v. United States (1943) 319 U.S. 463, 63 S.Ct. 1241, 87 L.Ed. 1519, infra, §61 [requirement of rational connection]; United States v. Gainey (1965) 380 U.S. 63, 85 S.Ct. 754, 758, 13 L.Ed.2d 658, 663 [judge's power over judicial proceedings is not infringed by statute providing that defendant's unexplained presence at illegal still is sufficient evidence for conviction of illegal possession of still apparatus or conducting unlawful distilling business]; People v. Stevenson (1962) 58 C.2d 794, 797, 26 C.R. 297, 376 P.2d 297 [rational connection requirement]; People v. Fuentes (1990) 224 C.A.3d 1041, 1044, 1045, 274 C.R. 17 ["state may allocate the burden of persuasion to a criminal defendant through the device of an affirmative defense"; approving statute allocating to defendant burden regarding lawful acquisition of hypodermic needle or syringe]; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §46.49 et seq.; 2 McCormick 5th, §346 et seq.; 56 Harv. L. Rev. 1324; 17 So. Cal. L. Rev. 48, 384; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 660; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §525 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §346 et seq.

59 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

a. Nature and Effect of Presumption.

2. Effect.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 59

[§ 59] Effect.

Ev.C. 607 states:

"When a presumption affecting the burden of proof operates in a criminal action to establish presumptively any fact that is essential to the defendant's guilt, the presumption operates only if the facts that give rise to the presumption have been found or otherwise established beyond a reasonable doubt and, in such case, the defendant need only raise a reasonable doubt as to the existence of the presumed fact."

This statute lays down two distinct rules:

(1) The prosecution must establish the underlying facts beyond a reasonable doubt; i.e., the usual requirement in a criminal case (supra, §41) applies to proof of the facts giving rise to the presumption.

(2) The defendant's burden is less than that of a person against whom a presumption changing the burden of proof operates in a civil case (supra, §57). The defendant need not overcome the presumption by a preponderance of the evidence, but merely has to raise a reasonable doubt as to the existence of the presumed fact. (See People v. Agnew (1940) 16 C.2d 655, 665, 107 P.2d 601; People v. Hardy (1948) 33 C.2d 52, 64, 198 P.2d 865; People v. Katz (1975) 47 C.A.3d 294, 301, 120 C.R. 603; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §§46.50, 46.51.)

In People v. Hampton (1965) 236 C.A.2d 795, 46 C.R. 338, defendants issued to employees four checks that were dishonored for insufficiency of funds. To meet the presumption of knowledge under Lab.C. 212(a), defendants merely testified, in response to formal questions, that they had no knowledge. Held, conviction affirmed; to overcome the burden, they had to show reasonable steps taken to inform themselves on whether funds would be available. (236 C.A.2d 805.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.324

60 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

a. Nature and Effect of Presumption.

3. Presumption Construed as Inference.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 60

[§ 60] Presumption Construed as Inference.

In People v. Roder (1983) 33 C.3d 491, 189 C.R. 501, 658 P.2d 1302, defendant secondhand dealer was convicted of receiving stolen property (P.C. 496). P.C. 496 then provided that if the prosecution proved three of the statute's four basic facts (defendant was a secondhand dealer, he or she bought or received stolen property, and did so under circumstances that should have caused defendant to make reasonable inquiry), the burden shifted to the defendant to show that such reasonable inquiry was made; and, if the defendant did not meet this burden, he or she "shall be presumed" to have bought or received such property "knowing it to have been so stolen or obtained." (On subsequent changes to P.C. 496, see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Property, §84.)

The trial judge gave an instruction embodying this presumption of guilty knowledge. Held, the presumption is unconstitutional and the instruction was reversible error.

(a) Ulster County test. In County Court of Ulster County, New York v. Allen (1979) 442 U.S. 140, 99 S.Ct. 2213, 2230, 60 L.Ed.2d 777, 796, 798, the United States Supreme Court emphasized the distinction between (1) a permissive inference or presumption that allows but does not require the trier of fact to infer the elemental fact from proof of the basic one, and (2) a mandatory presumption that tells the trier that, on proof of the basic fact, the elemental fact must be found unless the defendant comes forward with evidence to rebut the presumed connection. In that case, the court concluded that the jury instructions described only a proper permissive inference. Shortly thereafter, in Sandstrom v. Montana (1979) 442 U.S. 510, 99 S.Ct. 2450, 2458, 2459, 61 L.Ed.2d 39, 49, 50, 51, a murder case, an instruction that the law presumes that a person intends the ordinary consequences of his or her voluntary acts was held to have improperly relieved the prosecution of its burden of proving all elements of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt. (33 C.3d 497, 498, 499.) Thus, the threshold inquiry in the present case is whether a permissive inference or mandatory presumption is involved. (33 C.3d 499.)

(b) Mandatory presumption involved. (1) The statute clearly establishes a mandatory presumption within the meaning of the Ulster County and Sandstrom cases. (33 C.3d 499, 500, 501.) (2) The actual instruction given the jury was ambiguous, but the jurors could reasonably have interpreted it as relieving the prosecution of part of its burden, i.e., as an unconstitutional mandatory presumption. (33 C.3d 502, 503, 504.)

(c) Chapman rule of reversible error applied. The question whether the error is prejudicial per se or is subject to the lesser standard of harmless-beyond-a-reasonable-doubt under Chapman v. California (1967) 386 U.S. 18, 87 S.Ct.

824, 17 L.Ed.2d 705 (see 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §10) was left open in Sandstrom, supra, and need not be decided here; for, assuming that the Chapman standard applies, it cannot be found beyond a reasonable doubt that the instruction did not affect the verdict. (33 C.3d 504, 505.)

(d) Construction of presumption as inference to avoid unconstitutionality. Ev.C. 501 provides that, insofar as a statute assigns the burden of proof in a criminal case, "such statute is subject to Penal Code section 1096" (supra, §21). Hence, the constitutional reasonable doubt rule should be read into all California statutes which, through the use of presumptions or similar devices, assign the burden of proof in a criminal action. (33 C.3d 505, 506.)

(e) Practical effects of construction as to P.C. 496. (1) From the point of view of the defendant, an instruction that places the inference in context is comparable to a restrained form of judicial comment on the evidence. (33 C.3d 506.) (2) From the point of view of the prosecution, there is considerable benefit in retaining the "secondhand dealer" provision in revised form. It will enable the judge to inform the jury of an inference that the Legislature has concluded can often reasonably be drawn; and it will, even as a permissive inference, serve an important substantive function in regulating the conduct of such dealers. (33 C.3d 507.)

"Accordingly, we conclude that pursuant to Evidence Code section 501, section 496 should be construed as authorizing only a permissive inference, not a mandatory presumption. On remand, the trial court should fashion an appropriate instruction, which informs the jury of the permissive inference but at the same time makes clear that the prosecution retains the burden of proving every element of the offense beyond a reasonable doubt." (33 C.3d 507.)

People v. Roder was followed in People v. Stevens (1986) 189 C.A.3d 1020, 1025, 236 C.R. 296, where the Court of Appeal approved the trial judge's tailoring of the instruction to authorize a permissive inference, rather than a mandatory presumption, that defendant secondhand dealer bought property knowing it had been stolen. (See also In re Feiock (1986) 180 C.A.3d 649, 653, 225 C.R. 748 [presumption of contempt based on nonpayment of court-ordered child support must be construed as permissive]; People v. Reyes Martinez (1993) 14 C.A.4th 1412, 1416, 1417, 18 C.R.2d 300 [trial judge's instruction that movement of victim 500 feet or more was sufficiently substantial to support kidnapping conviction created impermissible mandatory presumption]; People v. Moore (1998) 65 C.A.4th 933, 938, 76 C.R.2d 872 [potential constitutional infirmity in P.C. 270, making it misdemeanor to wilfully omit to provide necessities of life for child and providing that proof of failure to provide is prima facie evidence of wilfulness, is avoided by CALJIC, No. 16.152, which instructs jury that failure to provide gives rise to permissible inference of wilfulness]; 38 Stanf. L. Rev. 423 [argument that distinction between mandatory and permissive presumptions should be abandoned, and that "reasonable doubt" due process scrutiny should be applied to all presumptions].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See In re Ivey (2000) 85 C.A.4th 793, 805, 102 C.R.2d 447 [in criminal contempt proceeding based on father's failure to comply with pendente lite orders to pay wife attorneys' and expert fees, trial judge, in determining that father was aware of orders, would have erred in applying mandatory presumption to fact that father's counsel was present when orders were made and was thereafter served with formal orders; but record indicated that court properly applied permissive inference].

61 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

b. Rational Connection Test.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 61

[§ 61] Rational Connection Test.

In Tot v. United States (1943) 319 U.S. 463, 63 S.Ct. 1241, 87 L.Ed. 1519, the court said: "[A] statutory presumption cannot be sustained if there be no rational connection between the fact proved and the ultimate fact presumed, if the inference of the one from proof of the other is arbitrary because of lack of connection between the two in common experience. This is not to say that a valid presumption may not be created upon a view of relation broader than that a jury might take in a specific case. But where the inference is so strained as not to have a reasonable relation to the circumstances of life as we know them, it is not competent for the legislature to create it as a rule governing the procedure of courts." (63 S.Ct. 1246, 87 L.Ed. 1524.)

The due process rule of Tot has been reaffirmed in many subsequent opinions. (See United States v. Gainey (1965) 380 U.S. 63, 85 S.Ct. 754, 757, 13 L.Ed.2d 658, 663; United States v. Romano (1965) 382 U.S. 136, 86 S.Ct. 279, 282, 15 L.Ed.2d 210, 214, infra, §62; Leary v. United States (1969) 395 U.S. 6, 89 S.Ct. 1532, 1548, 23 L.Ed.2d 57, 91, infra, §64; People v. Henderson (1980) 109 C.A.3d 59, 63, 167 C.R. 47; In re Heather B. (1992) 9 C.A.4th 535, 561, 11 C.R.2d 891; 2 McCormick 5th, §347; infra, §§62 et seq.) (For a suggestion that the jury should be supplied with the facts on which the Legislature has based its presumption, see 18 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 157, 183; for an argument that the rational connection test does not protect the right to acquittal unless guilt is proved beyond reasonable doubt, see 22 Stanf. L. Rev. 341.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §347.

62 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

c. Illustrations.

1. Miscellaneous Offenses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 62

[§ 62] Miscellaneous Offenses.

Presumptions of this type have been established or attempted in connection with a wide variety of criminal offenses. The following cases are illustrative of the situations in which the presumption serves a useful purpose and of the limitations imposed by the rational connection test (supra, §61):

(1) Firearms. (See Tot v. United States (1943) 319 U.S. 463, 63 S.Ct. 1241, 1246, 87 L.Ed. 1519, 1524, supra, §61 [possession of firearm by person previously convicted of crime of violence made presumptive evidence that firearm was received in violation of Federal Firearms Act; presumption held invalid]; County Court of Ulster County, New York v. Allen (1979) 442 U.S. 140, 99 S.Ct. 2213, 2228, 2230, 60 L.Ed.2d 777, 796, 798 [possession of firearm in automobile presumptive evidence of its illegal possession by all persons then occupying the vehicle; presumption valid as applied]; People v. Henderson (1980) 109 C.A.3d 59, 63, 65, 167 C.R. 47 [possession of firearm did not provide sufficient proof of obliteration of manufacturer's number to satisfy reasonable doubt standard]; 87 A.L.R.3d 949 [possession of weapon in vehicle].)

(2) Vehicle Offenses. (See People v. Bigman (1940) 38 C.A.2d Supp. 773, 777, 100 P.2d 370 [presumption that illegally parked car was parked by registered owner; upheld].)

(3) Illegal Possession of Still. In United States v. Romano (1965) 382 U.S. 136, 86 S.Ct. 279, 15 L.Ed.2d 210, federal officers, entering a city industrial building with a search warrant, found defendants standing a few feet from an operating still. They were convicted of illegal possession of the still. Held, reversed for error in instructing, pursuant to statute, that presence at the still was "sufficient evidence to authorize conviction." The court said that, under United States v. Gainey (1965) 380 U.S. 63, 85 S.Ct. 754, 13 L.Ed.2d 658, a presumption that a person at the site of a secret still was "carrying on" an illegal enterprise is reasonable; but the presumption involved here, of possession from mere presence, was not. Presence was relevant on the issue of possession, but its connection was too tenuous to support the presumption. (86 S.Ct. 282, 15 L.Ed.2d 214.)

(4) Theft and Related Offenses. (See People v. Hemmer (1971) 19 C.A.3d 1052, 1060, 97 C.R. 516 [P.C. 484(b), establishing presumption of intent to commit theft after failure to return leased property on demand, is valid when construed to apply only if lessor sent demand in requisite manner, lessee received letter, and property was not returned in statutory period]; Barnes v. United States (1973) 412 U.S. 837, 93 S.Ct. 2357, 2361, 37 L.Ed.2d 380, 386 [unexplained possession of recently stolen mail justifies presumption that defendant possessed mail with knowledge it was stolen; "[I]f a statutory inference submitted to the jury as sufficient to support conviction satisfies the reasonable-doubt standard (that is, the evidence necessary to invoke the inference is sufficient for a rational juror to find the inferred fact beyond a reasonable doubt) as well as the more-likely-than-not standard, then it clearly accords with due process"; Carella v. California (1989) 491 U.S. 263, 109 S.Ct. 2419, 2420, 105 L.Ed.2d 218, 222 [prosecution for grand theft; due process violated by instructions stating that embezzlement of vehicle was presumed from failure to return within 5 days of expiration of rental agreement, and that intent to commit fraud was presumed from failure to return rented property within 20 days of demand]; and see Veh.C. 11511 [presumption of knowledge when stolen vehicle is found with dismantler of automobiles]; 6 Pacific L. J. 352 [same]; 51 A.L.R.3d 727 [exclusive possession of stolen goods giving rise to inference of felonious taking]; 88 A.L.R.3d 1178 [presumption from possession of recently stolen goods].)

(5) Wilful Failure To Support Minor Child. (See People v. Thompson (1979) 89 C.A.3d 193, 200, 152 C.R. 478 [presumption that issue of wife cohabiting with husband who is not impotent or sterile is child of marriage; rational connection requirement satisfied].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Firearms. See In re Christopher K. (2001) 91 C.A.4th 853, 857, 110 C.R.2d 914 [holding of People v. Henderson (1980) 109 C.A.3d 59, 167 C.R. 47, text, p. 212, applied in context of court trial].

(2) Vehicle Offenses. See People v. Vanegas (2004) 115 C.A.4th 592, 601, 9 C.R.3d 398, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against the Person, Supp., §202 [in prosecution for second degree murder and driving under influence, causing great bodily injury to another, jury instruction stating that any violation of basic speed law was inherently dangerous to human life created impermissible mandatory presumption; speed law can be violated by driving at speed that endangers life, but it can also be violated by driving at speed that endangers property or at speed greater than is reasonable or prudent].

63 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

c. Illustrations.

2. Drugs.

aa. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 63

[§ 63] In General.

A criminal defendant's knowledge or intent regarding the illegal drugs he or she is charged with possessing, selling, or transporting is usually an element of the crime the prosecution must prove. Presumptions that help the prosecution in this task have been attacked as unconstitutional in several notable cases and have also given rise to extensive commentary. (See Leary v. United States (1969) 395 U.S. 6, 89 S.Ct. 1532, 23 L.Ed.2d 57, infra, §64; Turner v. United States (1970) 396 U.S. 398, 90 S.Ct. 642, 24 L.Ed.2d 610, infra, §65; People v. Ruiz (1975) 49 C.A.3d 739, 742, 122 C.R. 841; 1970/71 A.S. 183 [suggesting method of testing validity of statutory presumptions in light of Leary and Turner]; 1971/72 A.S. 105 [discussing confusion resulting from Leary and Turner]; 2 McCormick 5th, §347; 60 A.L.R.3d 1128 [possession of specified quantity of illegal drugs as basis for presumption of intent to sell].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §347.

64 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

c. Illustrations.

2. Drugs.

bb. Marijuana.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 64

[§ 64] Marijuana.

In Leary v. United States (1969) 395 U.S. 6, 89 S.Ct. 1532, 23 L.Ed.2d 57, the court declared unconstitutional a statutory inference that the defendant possessing marijuana knew that it had been illegally brought into the United States.

(a) A criminal statutory presumption is "irrational" or "arbitrary," hence, unconstitutional, "unless it can at least be said with substantial assurance that the presumed fact is more likely than not to flow from the proved fact on which it is made to depend." (89 S.Ct. 1548, 23 L.Ed.2d 82.)

(b) If the inference of knowledge is to be sustained, "we must find on the basis of the available materials that a majority of marihuana possessors either are cognizant of the apparently high rate of importation or otherwise have become aware that their marihuana was grown abroad." (89 S.Ct. 1553, 23 L.Ed.2d 88.) Such a determination was impossible. (89 S.Ct. 1557, 23 L.Ed.2d 91.) (See 83 Harv. L. Rev. 103 [Leary]; 22 Hastings L. J. 873 [retroactivity of Leary].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

65 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

c. Illustrations.

2. Drugs.

cc. Heroin.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 65

[§ 65] Heroin.

In Turner v. United States (1970) 396 U.S. 398, 90 S.Ct. 642, 24 L.Ed.2d 610, defendant was indicted under former 21 U.S.C., §174 (now 21 U.S.C., §801 et seq.), for transporting heroin while knowing it had been unlawfully imported into the United States, and for possessing heroin not in the original stamped package. At the trial, the prosecution showed a seizure of narcotics from his possession in packages without federal tax stamps. No evidence was presented on the drugs' origin, and defendant did not testify. In accordance with the statute, the trial judge charged that the jury could infer from the unexplained possession that defendant knew the heroin had been unlawfully imported. He also instructed that possession of drugs not in a stamped package was prima facie evidence under the statute that defendant had purchased, sold, dispensed or distributed the drugs not in or from a stamped package. On defendant's conviction of the heroin offenses, held, affirmed.

(a) "For 60 years defendants charged under the statute have known that the section authorizes an inference of guilt from possession alone, that the inference is rebuttable by evidence that their heroin originated here, and that the inference itself is subject to challenge for lack of sufficient connection between the proved fact of possession and the presumed fact that theirs was smuggled merchandise." (90 S.Ct. 648, 24 L.Ed.2d 619.) To avoid conviction, a defendant should demonstrate, "not necessarily by his own testimony," a domestic source for heroin. Yet: "Over the years, thousands of defendants, most of them represented by retained or appointed counsel, have been convicted under §174. Although there was opportunity in every case to challenge or rebut the inference based on possession, we are cited to no case, and we know of none, where substantial evidence showing domestic production of heroin has come to light." (90 S.Ct. 648, 24 L.Ed.2d 620.) If heroin were being produced in this country in commercial quantities, "it is difficult to believe that resourceful lawyers with adversary proceedings at their disposal would not long since have discovered the truth and placed it on record." (90 S.Ct. 648, 24 L.Ed.2d 620.)

(b) The overwhelming evidence from "official sources," such as senate committee hearings and presidential commission reports, as well as United Nations documents and learned studies, showed that heroin consumed in the United States was illegally imported. (90 S.Ct. 649, 24 L.Ed.2d 620.) "To possess heroin is to possess imported heroin. Whether judged by the more-likely-than-not standard applied in Leary, ... or by the more exacting reasonable-doubt standard normally applicable in criminal cases, §174 is valid insofar as it permits a jury to infer that heroin possessed in this country is a smuggled drug." (90 S.Ct. 652, 24 L.Ed.2d 623, referring to Leary v. United States (1969) 395 U.S. 6,

89 S.Ct. 1532, 23 L.Ed.2d 57, supra, §64.)

(c) Defendant's possession of 275 glassine bags of heroin proved he was distributing the drug. But even if possession did not prove distribution, the conviction must be affirmed. The critical statutory inference could not be sustained to authorize an inference of dispensing, distributing, or selling the drug, because the possession was "far short" of sufficient evidence for those inferences. "But the inference of purchasing in or from an unstamped package is another matter." Possession was sufficient proof that the possessor did not receive the heroin from an original stamped package, "since it is so extremely unlikely that a package containing heroin would ever be legally stamped." The statute did not forbid a person's obtaining heroin by gift, theft or bailment, but because the drug is a high-priced product, "it would be very unreasonable to assume that any sizable number of possessors have not paid for it, one way or another." (90 S.Ct. 655, 24 L.Ed.2d 626.)

The dissenting justices argued that the decision seriously undercut due process standards, because the data relied on by the majority to classify the presumption as "reasonable" and "fair" were never introduced at trial. Defendant "was never given an opportunity to confront before the jury the many expert witnesses now arrayed against him in the footnotes of the Court's opinion." (90 S.Ct. 661, 24 L.Ed.2d 633.) (See also People v. Ruiz (1975) 49 C.A.3d 739, 743, 744, 122 C.R. 841 [following Turner; presumption of unlawful importation held valid].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

66 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VI. NATURE AND EFFECT OF REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Evidence Code.

3. Presumptions Establishing Element of Crime.

c. Illustrations.

2. Drugs.

dd. Cocaine.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 66

[§ 66] Cocaine.

In Turner v. United States (1970) 396 U.S. 398, 90 S.Ct. 642, 24 L.Ed.2d 610, supra, §65, defendant was indicted for both heroin and cocaine offenses. The cocaine charges were brought under former 26 U.S.C., §4704(a) (now 21 U.S.C., §801 et seq.), for transporting cocaine while knowing it had been unlawfully imported into the United States, and for possessing cocaine not in the original stamped package. At the trial, the evidence and instructions on the cocaine charges were virtually identical to those on the heroin charges except that a much smaller amount of cocaine had been found. On defendant's conviction of the cocaine offenses, held, reversed.

(a) Much more cocaine is lawfully produced in this country than is smuggled here, and thefts from legal sources make the presumption of importation invalid. Under the standards of Leary v. United States (1969) 395 U.S. 6, 89 S.Ct. 1532, 23 L.Ed.2d 57, supra, §64, "we cannot be sufficiently sure either that the cocaine that Turner possessed came from abroad or that Turner must have known that it did." (90 S.Ct. 654, 24 L.Ed.2d 625.)

(b) The small quantity of cocaine that defendant possessed was consistent with personal use rather than sale. The statutory inference was therefore critical, because the thief who steals cocaine "very probably obtains it in or from a stamped package." Therefore, because of the reasonable possibility that defendant had stolen the cocaine himself or had obtained it from a stamped package in the possession of the actual thief, the statutory presumption did not provide sufficient evidence to support the conviction. (90 S.Ct. 656, 24 L.Ed.2d 627.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

67 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 67

[§ 67] In General.

Article 3 of the Evidence Code sets forth a number of presumptions affecting the burden of producing evidence. (See infra, §68 et seq.) For the most part, these were transferred without change from former C.C.P. 1963. The Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 630 states:

"The list is not exhaustive. Other presumptions affecting the burden of producing evidence may be found in other codes. Others will be found in the common law. Specific statutes will classify some of these, but some must await classification by the courts. The list here, however, will eliminate any uncertainty as to the proper classification for the presumptions in the article." (See 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §46.30.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

68 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
B. Money Delivered Was Due.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 68

[§ 68] Money Delivered Was Due.

"Money delivered by one to another is presumed to have been due to the latter." (Ev.C. 631; see Rolland v. Porterfield (1920) 183 C. 466, 471, 472, 191 P. 913 [presumption that $ 500 paid by plaintiff to decedent was owed to decedent].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

69 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
C. Thing Delivered Was Owned.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 69

[§ 69] Thing Delivered Was Owned.

"A thing delivered by one to another is presumed to have belonged to the latter." (Ev.C. 632; see Lady v. Barrett (1941) 43 C.A.2d 685, 692, 111 P.2d 702 [presumption that bond interest check delivered to decedent belonged to him].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

70 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
D. Obligation Delivered to Debtor.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 70

[§ 70] Obligation Delivered to Debtor.

"An obligation delivered up to the debtor is presumed to have been paid." (Ev.C. 633; see Rosebrock v. San Diego Trust & Savings Bank (1934) 139 C.A. 75, 78, 33 P.2d 438.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

71 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
E. Possession of Own Order.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 71

[§ 71] Possession of Own Order.

"A person in possession of an order on himself for the payment of money, or delivery of a thing, is presumed to have paid the money or delivered the thing accordingly." (Ev.C. 634; see Black v. Meyer (1928) 204 C. 504, 507, 269 P. 173.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

72 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
F. Obligation Possessed by Creditor.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 72

[§ 72] Obligation Possessed by Creditor.

"An obligation possessed by the creditor is presumed not to have been paid." (Ev.C. 635, codifying a judicially recognized presumption; see Light v. Stevens (1911) 159 C. 288, 292, 113 P. 659.) "The linchpin of the presumption, however, is the near certainty that the face amount of a promissory note was advanced when the note was made"; the mere existence of a line of credit agreement would not support the presumption that the full amount of the line was ever advanced. (Remington Inv. v. Hamedani (1997) 55 C.A.4th 1033, 1041, 1042, 64 C.R.2d 376 ["Promissory Note" found in files of insolvent bank by assignee of Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation did not shift burden to borrower to show that debt had been paid, as note's terms indicated it was only conditional agreement to repay whatever sums might be advanced, not unconditional agreement to pay sum certain].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

73 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
G. Payment of Earlier Rent or Installments.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 73

[§ 73] Payment of Earlier Rent or Installments.

"The payment of earlier rent or installments is presumed from a receipt for later rent or installments." (Ev.C. 636; see Chaplin v. Sullivan (1945) 67 C.A.2d 728, 732, 155 P.2d 368 [plaintiff's concession that defendant paid $ 280 to cover amount of installments called for by land sale contract for period from March 1935 to April 1936 gave rise to presumption that defendant had paid installments for period prior to March 1935].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

74 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE

H. Ownership of Things Possessed.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 74

[§ 74] Ownership of Things Possessed.

"The things which a person possesses are presumed to be owned by him." (Ev.C. 637; see Reynolds v. Dryer (1931) 112 C.A. 712, 714, 297 P. 563; Syme v. Warden (1931) 114 C.A. 707, 711, 300 P. 863; Truck Ins. Exchange v. Torres (1961) 193 C.A.2d 483, 487, 14 C.R. 408; People v. Superior Court (McGraw) (1979) 100 C.A.3d 154, 159, 160 C.R. 663 [in hearing regarding property that is seized by police from burglary suspects and is not claimed by burglary victims, property is presumed to be owned by suspects until evidence to contrary is presented]; 5 A.L.R.3d 19, 81 [effect of presumption as to ownership of property where controverting evidence is introduced]; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §§288, 289; 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §10.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §208.

75 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE

I. Exercise of Acts of Ownership.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 75

[§ 75] Exercise of Acts of Ownership.

"A person who exercises acts of ownership over property is presumed to be the owner of it." (Ev.C. 638; see Syme v. Warden (1931) 114 C.A. 707, 711, 300 P. 863; Whiteside v. United Theatres (1951) 106 C.A.2d 471, 477, 235 P.2d 261.) Former C.C.P. 1963(12) additionally provided that a presumption of ownership arose from "common reputation of ... ownership," but that provision was deleted as inaccurate when the remainder of C.C.P. 1963(12) was transferred to Ev.C. 638. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 638.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

76 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
J. Judgment Correctly Determines Rights.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 76

[§ 76] Judgment Correctly Determines Rights.

"A judgment, when not conclusive, is presumed to correctly determine or set forth the rights of the parties, but there is no presumption that the facts essential to the judgment have been correctly determined." (Ev.C. 639.)

The Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 639 explains:

"The presumption involved here is that the judgment correctly determines that one party owes another money, or that the parties are divorced, or their marriage has been annulled, or any similar rights of the parties. The presumption does not apply to the facts underlying the judgment. For example, a judgment of annulment is presumed to determine correctly that the marriage is void. ... However, the judgment may not be used to establish presumptively that one of the parties was guilty of fraud as against some third party who is not bound by the judgment." (See Clark v. Los Angeles (1960) 187 C.A.2d 792, 800, 9 C.R. 913 [presumption arising from annulment judgment].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

77 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
K. Writing Truly Dated.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 77

[§ 77] Writing Truly Dated.

"A writing is presumed to have been truly dated." (Ev.C. 640; see Robinson v. Puls (1946) 28 C.2d 664, 668, 171 P.2d 430 [books of account properly admitted as being made within reasonable proximity of time of respective transactions]; 30 A.L.R.3d 571 [presumption as to whether deed was altered before or after its execution]; on presumption that duly executed grant was delivered "at its date," see C.C. 1055; Estate of Galvin (1952) 114 C.A.2d 354, 360, 250 P.2d 333; 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §175.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §295.

78 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE

L. Letter Received.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 78

[§ 78] Letter Received.

"A letter correctly addressed and properly mailed is presumed to have been received in the ordinary course of mail." (Ev.C. 641; see Johnson & Johnson v. Superior Court (1985) 38 C.3d 243, 255, 211 C.R. 517, 695 P.2d 1058 [presumption furnished support for conclusion that affidavits of mailing included in return of summons provided sufficient notice of service to satisfy trial court that plaintiffs had completed all acts necessary to effect service within 3 years as required by former C.C.P. 581a, now C.C.P. 583.210]; Carl v. Thomas (1931) 116 C.A. 294, 300, 2 P.2d 872 [presumption held not to prevail over uncontradicted testimony that it was not received]; Jensen v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1956) 141 C.A.2d 162, 164, 296 P.2d 434 [presumption controverted by plaintiff's testimony and circumstantial evidence]; Idaho Maryland Mines Corp. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1959) 174 C.A.2d 693, 695, 345 P.2d 109 [finding that defendant was served by mail]; Berger v. Limon (1963) 214 C.A.2d 149, 151, 29 C.R. 483 [presumption overcome]; Bunner v. Imperial Ins. Co. (1986) 181 C.A.3d 14, 21, 225 C.R. 912 [Ev.C. 641 applies to Ins.C. 1063.7, requiring mailed notice of claim period for insolvent insurer; proof of mailing to insured's last known address creates presumption of receipt, which may be rebutted by evidence of nonreceipt]; Bonzer v. Huntington Park (1993) 20 C.A.4th 1474, 1479, 1481, 25 C.R.2d 278 [presumption that defendant received notice of hearing was improper basis for denying relief from default; once defendant presented uncontradicted evidence of nonreceipt, presumption disappeared and inference of receipt was inappropriate as matter of law]; 2 McCormick 5th, §343; 5 A.L.R.3d 19, 78; 7 Proof of Facts 417 [sufficiency of proof of mailing to raise presumption of receipt]; 35 Proof of Facts 2d 589 [proof of routine business practice of mailing letter]; on inapplicability of presumption to mailing of overtime parking penalty payment, see Veh.C. 40309; on receipt of telegram, see 24 A.L.R.3d 1434; 21 Proof of Facts 783.)

A party who invokes the presumption and seeks an instruction as to the ordinary mailing time between two cities must produce competent evidence on that subject. (Enis v. Specialty Auto Sales (1978) 83 C.A.3d 928, 943, 148 C.R. 255.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Craig v. Brown & Root (2000) 84 C.A.4th 416, 421, 100 C.R.2d 818, citing the text [in wrongful termination action in which defendant employer petitioned for arbitration, defendant's evidence that it sent memorandum and brochure containing arbitration provision to plaintiff employee created presumption that she received them]; 2 McCormick 6th, §343. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.71

79 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
M. Conveyance by Person Under Duty.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 79

[§ 79] Conveyance by Person Under Duty.

"A trustee or other person, whose duty it was to convey real property to a particular person, is presumed to have actually conveyed to him when such presumption is necessary to perfect title of such person or his successor in interest." (Ev.C. 642.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

80 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE

N. Authenticity of Ancient Instrument.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 80

[§ 80] Authenticity of Ancient Instrument.

(1) In General. Ev.C. 643 creates a presumption of authenticity as to a "deed or will or other writing purporting to create, terminate, or affect an interest in real or personal property" where the document:

- "(a) Is at least 30 years old;
- (b) Is in such condition as to create no suspicion concerning its authenticity;
- (c) Was kept, or if found was found, in a place where such writing, if authentic, would be likely to be kept or found; and
- (d) Has been generally acted upon as authentic by persons having an interest in the matter."

The Commission emphasizes the importance of the "acted upon" condition, as "a requirement of the possession of property by those persons who would be entitled to such possession under the document if it were genuine." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 643; see Devereaux v. Frazier Mountain Park & Fisheries Co. (1967) 248 C.A.2d 323, 329, 56 C.R. 345; 50 Proof of Facts 2d 321 [sufficiency of foundation for admission as ancient document].)

(2) Limitation to Dispositive Documents. Although the predecessor statute applied to documents and writings generally, Ev.C. 643 applies only to dispositive instruments. The Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 643 states: "Giving the ancient documents rule a presumptive effect--i.e., requiring a finding of the authenticity of an ancient document--seems justified when it is a dispositive instrument and the persons interested in the matter have acted upon the instrument for a period of at least 30 years as if it were genuine. Evidence which is not of this strength may be sufficient in particular cases to warrant an inference of genuineness and thus justify the admission of the document into evidence, but the presumption should be confined to those cases where the evidence of genuineness is not likely to be disputed." (On authentication generally, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §3 et seq.; on hearsay exception for recitals in ancient documents, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §293.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

81 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
O. Publicly Published Book.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 81

[§ 81] Publicly Published Book.

"A book, purporting to be printed or published by public authority, is presumed to have been so printed or published."
(Ev.C. 644; see also F.R. Evid., Rule 902(5) [no extrinsic evidence of authenticity required for admission of official publication].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

82 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE

P. Reported Decisions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 82

[§ 82] Reported Decisions.

"A book, purporting to contain reports of cases adjudged in the tribunals of the state or nation where the book is published, is presumed to contain correct reports of such cases." (Ev.C. 645; on judicial notice of "decisional law," see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Judicial Notice, §9.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

83 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
Q. Newspaper or Periodical.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 83

[§ 83] Newspaper or Periodical.

"Printed materials, purporting to be a particular newspaper or periodical, are presumed to be that newspaper or periodical if regularly issued at average intervals not exceeding three months." (Ev.C. 645.1; see 18 Pacific L. J. 658; F.R. Evid., Rule 902(6) [printed materials purporting to be newspapers or periodicals do not require extrinsic evidence of authenticity].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

84 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE
R. Res Ipsa Loquitur Codified.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 84

[§ 84] Res Ipsa Loquitur Codified.

Res ipsa loquitur, which remained a judicial doctrine even after adoption of the Evidence Code, was codified in 1970 as a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence. (See Ev.C. 646, infra, §118.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

85 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PRODUCING EVIDENCE

S. Facts in Return of Process or Notice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 85

[§ 85] Facts in Return of Process or Notice.

The return of process or notice, made by a registered process server (see B. & P.C. 22350 et seq.), "establishes a presumption, affecting the burden of producing evidence, of the facts stated in the return." (Ev.C. 647; see 10 Pacific L. J. 350; 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §983.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

86 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF
A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 86

[§ 86] In General.

The Evidence Code contains a number of presumptions specifically identified as ones affecting the burden of proof. For the most part, these are contained in Article 4 (Ev.C. 660 et seq.). The Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 660 states:

"[I]t is desirable to classify as many presumptions as possible. Article 4 ... , therefore, lists several presumptions that are to be regarded as presumptions affecting the burden of proof. The list is not exclusive." (On classification problem, see infra, §104.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

87 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

B. Legal and Beneficial Title.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 87

[§ 87] Legal and Beneficial Title.

(1) In General. "The owner of the legal title to property is presumed to be the owner of the full beneficial title. This presumption may be rebutted only by clear and convincing proof." (Ev.C. 662, codifying a judicially recognized presumption; see Rench v. McMullen (1947) 82 C.A.2d 872, 874, 187 P.2d 111; Spaulding v. Jones (1953) 117 C.A.2d 541, 545, 256 P.2d 637; supra, §39.)

Cases applying, or declining to apply, the statutory presumption are numerous. (See Toney v. Nolder (1985) 173 C.A.3d 791, 794, 219 C.R. 497 [there is no "confidential relationship" exception to requirement of clear and convincing evidence to rebut presumption]; Tannehill v. Finch (1986) 188 C.A.3d 224, 228, 232 C.R. 749 [following Toney]; In re Marriage of Weaver (1990) 224 C.A.3d 478, 486, 273 C.R. 696 [applying presumption in marital dissolution action]; Murray v. Murray (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1062, 1067, 1068, 31 C.R.2d 855 [presumption was inapplicable in quiet title action alleging that plaintiff's adoptive father fraudulently transferred title to her property to his wife; statute applies when valid legal title is undisputed and controversy only involves beneficial title].)

(2) Inapplicability in Face of More Specific, Conflicting Presumption. In re Marriage of Haines (1995) 33 C.A.4th 277, 39 C.R.2d 673, concerned a husband's claim, on dissolution of marriage, for reimbursement for his separate property contribution to the acquisition of the couple's community property residence. The trial judge awarded the husband reimbursement on the theory that at the time the husband had deeded the property to his wife and himself it had been his separate property, by virtue of an earlier quitclaim signed by the wife. Held, reversed; the presumption of Ev.C. 662 should not have been applied. The implied holding of the Weaver case, supra, that the presumption is applicable in marital proceedings, regardless of any conflict with other presumptions, is incorrect. Here, the stronger and more specific presumption of interspousal undue influence arising from the signing of the quitclaim deed (Family C. 721(b)) prevailed over the presumption as to ownership. Thus, instead of giving the wife the initial burden of rebutting the presumption of title, the trial judge should have required the husband to show that the quitclaim transaction did not violate his fiduciary duties. (33 C.A.4th 300, 301.) (See In re Marriage of Barneson (1999) 69 C.A.4th 583, 593, 81 C.R.2d 726 [presumption arising from Family C. 852(a) that transactions between spouses are not transmutations prevails over title presumption of Ev.C. 662; relying on Haines].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See People v. Semaan (2007) 42 C.4th 79, 88, 64 C.R.3d 1, 163 P.3d 949 [in proceeding by third-party claimant seeking release of funds in bank account frozen under P.C. 186.11 (3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §293), presumption of Ev.C. 662 was inapplicable where there was undisputed evidence that claimant's name was used as alias on account by participants in illegal credit card scheme, and prosecution disputed genuineness of claimant's title to account; relying on Murray v. Murray (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1062, 31 C.R.2d 855, text, p. 222].

(2) Inapplicability in Face of More Specific, Conflicting Presumption. See In re Marriage of Delaney (2003) 111 C.A.4th 991, 999, 4 C.R.3d 378 [trial judge properly applied undue influence presumption in setting aside grant deed of husband's separate property to wife and husband as joint tenants; holding of In re Marriage of Haines (1995) 33 C.A.4th 277, 39 C.R.2d 673, text, p. 222, regarding conflicting presumptions applies to any interspousal property transaction where evidence is offered that one spouse has been disadvantaged by other]; In re Marriage of Mathews (2005) 133 C.A.4th 624, 630, 35 C.R.3d 1 [in awarding marital residence to husband as his separate property, trial judge erred in failing to apply presumption of Family C. 721 on basis that wife had quitclaimed her interest to husband; however, ruling could be upheld on ground that husband rebutted presumption of undue influence by preponderance of evidence].

The undue influence presumption discussed in Haines does not apply (a) to marital settlement agreements reached through mediation, (b) in the context of a motion for relief from judgment under Family C. 2122 (11 Summary (10th), Community Property, §243), at least where the time to act under C.C.P. 473 (8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attack on Judgment in Trial Court, §152 et seq.) has expired, or (c) where the parties to a marital settlement agreement acknowledge that no undue influence was exercised. (In re Marriage of Kieturakis (2006) 138 C.A.4th 56, 87, 41 C.R.3d 119, 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, Supp., §243; see 37 McGeorge L. Rev. 33 [undue influence presumption].)

88 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

C. Ceremonial Marriage Valid.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 88

[§ 88] Ceremonial Marriage Valid.

"A ceremonial marriage is presumed to be valid." (Ev.C. 663, codifying a judicially recognized presumption; see Estate of Hughson (1916) 173 C. 448, 451, 160 P. 548; Hamburgh v. Hys (1937) 22 C.A.2d 508, 509, 71 P.2d 301; In re Marriage of Recknor (1982) 138 C.A.3d 539, 547, 187 C.R. 887 [where, in dissolution proceeding, husband contended marriage was invalid, presumption of Ev.C. 663 lent support to wife's position that husband's conduct estopped him to deny validity]; 36 Proof of Facts 2d 441 [proving validity of marriage]; 11 Summary (9th), Husband and Wife, §51.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Estate of DePasse (2002) 97 C.A.4th 92, 107, 118 C.R.2d 143 [executor of decedent's estate successfully rebutted presumption arising from decedent's ceremonial marriage with estate claimant in hospital 1 day before she died, where he proved that claimant had never obtained marriage license].

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §54.

89 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

D. Official Duty Regularly Performed.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 89

[§ 89] Official Duty Regularly Performed.

(1) General Presumption. "It is presumed that official duty has been regularly performed." (Ev.C. 664, first sentence; see People v. Tenner (1993) 6 C.4th 559, 566, 24 C.R.2d 840, 862 P.2d 840, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §378 [abstract of judgment and commitment form were sufficient, in light of presumption, to support inference prior prison term was served]; Moyer v. State Bd. of Equalization (1956) 140 C.A.2d 651, 655, 295 P.2d 583 [applied in answer to petitioner's contention that respondent board did not read transcript of hearing]; People v. Stoliker (1961) 192 C.A.2d 263, 267, 13 C.R. 437 [federal authorities delivering prisoner]; Los Angeles v. Young (1961) 196 C.A.2d 405, 409, 411, 16 C.R. 553 [board of supervisors' determination of ability of relatives to contribute to support of needy person]; Fisk v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1981) 127 C.A.3d 72, 77, 179 C.R. 379, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §247 [preparation of report by police officer]; In re Martin L. (1986) 187 C.A.3d 534, 540, 232 C.R. 43 [juvenile court was presumed to have properly determined, in sustaining prior wardship petitions, that minor understood wrongfulness of acts]; Roelfsema v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1995) 41 C.A.4th 871, 880, 48 C.R.2d 817 [in license revocation proceeding, presumption that authorities properly set up and operated sobriety checkpoint attached]; 2 McCormick 5th, §343.)

In Ross v. Superior Court (1977) 19 C.3d 899, 141 C.R. 133, 569 P.2d 727, petitioners challenged a contempt order on the ground that the record did not affirmatively show that the trial judge applied the correct standard of proof (beyond a reasonable doubt; see supra, §40). Held, the presumption of Ev.C. 664, applicable in civil, criminal, and quasi-criminal cases, "encompasses a presumption that the trial court applied the proper burden of proof in matters tried to the court." (19 C.3d 913, 914.) The opinion adds: "In the typical criminal case in which a jury trial is waived, the judge, of course, does not normally publicly announce that he is applying the reasonable doubt standard, but simply finds the defendant guilty or not guilty of the charged offense." (19 C.3d 914.)

(2) Official Conduct Challenged in Criminal Proceeding. Where a criminal defendant raises official misconduct as a defense, the placement of the burden of proof depends on the type of conduct at issue:

(a) Discriminatory enforcement. Where the defendant claims discriminatory enforcement of the law, the presumption of official conduct operates to require him or her to prove the facts supporting the defense. (See People v. Gray (1967) 254 C.A.2d 256, 265, 63 C.R. 211; supra, §29.)

(b) Unlawful arrest pursuant to warrant. Similarly, where an arrest was made pursuant to a warrant, the defendant has the burden of proving that the arrest was unlawful. (See People v. Cheatham (1975) 50 C.A.3d 592, 598, 123 C.R. 361; supra, §29.)

(c) Unlawful arrest without warrant. "This presumption does not apply on an issue as to the lawfulness of an arrest if it is found or otherwise established that the arrest was made without a warrant." (Ev.C. 664, supra, second sentence.) The exception codifies the holding of a number of cases to the effect that, on proof that an arrest was made without a warrant, the burden of proof is on the arresting officials to show that the circumstances justified the arrest. (See Badillo v. Superior Court (1956) 46 C.2d 269, 272, 294 P.2d 23 [once defendant makes prima facie case of illegal arrest by establishing that there was no warrant, burden rests on prosecution to prove arrest was legal].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Presumption. See People v. Allegheny Cas. Co. (2007) 41 C.4th 704, 715, 61 C.R.3d 689, 161 P.3d 198, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, Supp., §103 [where record was silent, it could be presumed that forfeiture of bail bond was duly declared in open court]; Baker v. Gourley (2000) 81 C.A.4th 1167, 1173, 97 C.R.2d 451 [in action challenging suspension of driver's license for driving under influence, official duty presumption as to testing of driver's blood was not rebutted by evidence that seal on blood sample was cut 6 days before testing, where relevant regulations imposed no requirements as to cutting of seal or lapse of time]; Petricks v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2001) 89 C.A.4th 1341, 1351, 107 C.R.2d 909 [in action challenging suspension of driver's license for driving under influence, trial judge erred in granting writ relief based on DMV's failure to prove that blood sample was properly collected; official duty presumption applied, and driver presented no evidence to rebut it]; People v. Cruz (2001) 93 C.A.4th 69, 73, 74, 113 C.R.2d 86 [in prosecution for sexual offenses, trial judge's failure to include in jurors' oath language requiring them to agree to follow judge's instructions did not constitute reversible error; under Ev.C. 664, it was presumed that they properly performed their duties, and defendant presented no evidence rebutting presumption]; In re Raphael P. (2002) 97 C.A.4th 716, 738, 118 C.R.2d 610 [where man seeking presumed father status presented prima facie evidence that he signed voluntary declaration of paternity at hospital, he was entitled to rely on official duty presumption to establish that hospital properly filed it and that it therefore had force of paternity judgment]; Manriquez v. Gourley (2003) 105 C.A.4th 1227, 1237, 130 C.R.2d 209 [fact that officer did not focus his eyes on defendant 100% of time while transporting him in his car after arresting him for driving under influence did not rebut presumption that he properly performed breath test, including requirement that defendant be under continuous observation for at least 15 minutes prior to collection of sample]; Morgenstern v. Department of Motor Vehicles (2003) 111 C.A.4th 366, 374, 4 C.R.3d 46 [even though officer failed to sign portion of sworn arrest report certifying that he obtained breath samples in regular course of duties, was qualified to operate equipment, and administered test in accordance with regulations, his signature at bottom of report was sufficient to trigger official duty presumption as to these matters]; Taxara v. Gutierrez (2003) 114 C.A.4th 945, 949, 951, 8 C.R.3d 172 [in driver's license suspension proceeding, driver failed to rebut presumption that blood-alcohol test requirements were complied with, including requirement that driver be observed continuously for 15 minutes before test; although officer administering test was not present during whole period, arresting officer was; citing Manriquez, supra]; Marvin Lieblein v. Shewry (2006) 137 C.A.4th 700, 725, 40 C.R.3d 547 [it was presumed that Department of Health Services mailed notice within 60 days, as required by former Welf.C. 14043.26(e)(1) (now Welf.C. 14043.26(h)(1)), to pharmacist that his application for continued enrollment as Medi-Cal pharmacist was rejected; pharmacist had burden of producing evidence that letter, which was dated within 60 days, was not timely mailed, and he made no such showing]; 2 McCormick 6th, §343.(2) Official Conduct Challenged in Criminal Proceeding.

(d) (New) Postjudgment discovery by defendant sentenced to death or life without parole. Where a defendant sentenced to death or life in prison without parole files a motion for postconviction discovery under P.C. 1054.9, the official duty presumption of Ev.C. 664 does not require the court to assume that the prosecution regularly performed its official duty at the time of trial and provided the defendant with whatever materials it was required to provide. Application of the presumption would require the defendant to prove the actual existence of the documents he or she is seeking before the court could order discovery. The Legislature did not intend this result. (People v. Superior Court (Maury) (2006) 145 C.A.4th 473, 484, 51 C.R.3d 670 [trial judge properly determined that defendant was not required to show that he had good faith basis for believing that requested materials actually existed and were in possession of prosecution].) West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.83 et seq.

90 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

E. Ordinary Consequences of Voluntary Act.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 90

[§ 90] Ordinary Consequences of Voluntary Act.

(1) General Presumption. "A person is presumed to intend the ordinary consequences of his voluntary act." (Ev.C. 665, first sentence; see People v. Sandoval (1963) 222 C.A.2d 348, 351, 35 C.R. 227 [presumption supported finding of general criminal intent sufficient for conviction of assault with deadly weapon].)

(2) Distinction: Consequences of Insured's Intentional Act. In Meyer v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1965) 233 C.A.2d 321, 43 C.R. 542, an action for a declaration of rights under a liability insurance policy, the court held that the presumption had no bearing on whether the consequences of plaintiff insureds' intentional act (the drilling of a water well on their property, thereby causing damage to their neighbors' buildings) were unexpected and thus accidental within the meaning of the policy. (233 C.A.2d 326.)

(3) Exception: Crime Involving Specific Intent. "This presumption is inapplicable in a criminal action to establish the specific intent of the defendant where specific intent is an element of the crime charged." (Ev.C. 665, second sentence.) The statutory exception reflects the holding of many decisions that it is error to instruct the jury in terms of the general presumption in such a case. (See People v. Maciel (1925) 71 C.A. 213, 218, 234 P. 877; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §6.) And the United States Supreme Court has declared that, whether regarded as a conclusive presumption or one shifting the burden of proof to the defendant, a jury instruction embodying it conflicts with the fundamental presumption of innocence and is constitutionally defective. (Sandstrom v. Montana (1979) 442 U.S. 510, 99 S.Ct. 2450, 2458, 2459, 61 L.Ed.2d 39, 49, 50, 51; Francis v. Franklin (1985) 471 U.S. 307, 105 S.Ct. 1965, 1977, 85 L.Ed.2d 344, 356 [reaffirming Sandstrom rule].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.68

91 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF F. Jurisdiction of Court.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 91

[§ 91] Jurisdiction of Court.

(1) General Presumption. "Any court of this state or the United States, or any court of general jurisdiction in any other state or nation, or any judge of such a court, acting as such, is presumed to have acted in the lawful exercise of its jurisdiction." (Ev.C. 666, first sentence; see People v. Stoliker (1961) 192 C.A.2d 263, 267, 13 C.R. 437, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Jurisdiction and Venue, §5 [presumption that superior court had jurisdiction to impose judgment and sentence on defendant for state robbery charges after he was released to federal authorities under writ of habeas corpus ad prosequendum and convicted on federal charges]; 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attack on Judgment in Trial Court, §5.)

The predecessor statute was interpreted as applicable only to a court of general jurisdiction; hence, there was no presumption of jurisdiction of an inferior court. (See Santos v. Dondero (1936) 11 C.A.2d 720, 722, 54 P.2d 764; 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attack on Judgment in Trial Court, §16.) The Evidence Code retained this qualification as to foreign courts, but eliminated it as to California and federal courts. The Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 666 states: "There is no reason to perpetuate this distinction insofar as the courts of California and of the United States are concerned. California's municipal and justice courts are served by able and conscientious judges and are no more likely to act beyond their jurisdiction than are the superior courts. Moreover, there is no reason to suppose that a superior court or a federal court is less respectful of its jurisdiction when acting in a limited capacity (for example, as a juvenile court) than it is when acting in any other capacity."

(2) Exception: Direct Attack. "This presumption applies only when the act of the court or judge is under collateral attack." (Ev.C. 666, second sentence; see Starkweather v. Minarets Mining Co. (1935) 5 C.A.4th 501, 503, 43 P.2d 321 [on "the direct attack of a judgment there is no presumption in favor of the existence of any fact essential to the jurisdiction of the court over the defendant"]; as to distinction between direct and collateral attack, see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attack on Judgment in Trial Court, §16.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Presumption. See People v. Allegheny Cas. Co. (2007) 41 C.4th 704, 715, 61 C.R.3d 689, 161 P.3d 198, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, Supp., §103 [where nothing in record suggested trial court failed to declare forfeiture of bail in open court, it could be presumed that it performed that duty and acted in lawful exercise of its jurisdiction].

92 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

G. Death Presumed From 5 Years' Absence.

1. Nature of Presumption and Proof of Absence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 92

[§ 92] Nature of Presumption and Proof of Absence.

"A person not heard from in five years is presumed to be dead." (Ev.C. 667, amended in 1983 to reduce the period from 7 to 5 years; see Benjamin v. District Grand Lodge (1915) 171 C. 260, 266, 152 P. 731 [construing former statute]; Estate of Bassi (1965) 234 C.A.2d 529, 548, 44 C.R. 541; 45 Proof of Facts 3d 307; 6 So. Cal. L. Rev. 163.) This presumption has been criticized as arbitrary and undesirable (see 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2531b; 2 McCormick 5th, §343), and absentee or missing persons statutes have been drafted to meet the need for administration without proof of death. (See Prob.C. 12400 et seq.; Conservatorship of Geiger (1992) 3 C.A.4th 127, 134, 135, 4 C.R.2d 252 [comparing presumptions of death contained in Ev.C. 667 and Prob.C. 12401]; 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §351 et seq.; see also Absence as Evidence of Death and Absentees' Property Act, 8A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 1.)

Usually, some showing must be made of search and inquiry to locate the absentee before the presumption will arise. (See 45 Proof of Facts 3d 318; 99 A.L.R.2d 307, 312.) But there is no fixed rule, and the circumstances surrounding the disappearance may render search unnecessary. (See Estate of Bassi, supra, 234 C.A.2d 549; 99 A.L.R.2d 307, 350.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See In re Starr (2002) 104 C.A.4th 487, 496, 128 C.R.2d 282 [proper test under Prob.C. 12401 is whether missing person's absence is capable of satisfactory explanation other than by death, not whether death is most satisfactory explanation for absence]; 2 McCormick 6th, §343.

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §365 et seq.

93 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

G. Death Presumed From 5 Years' Absence.

2. Presumption of Life During Period.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 93

[§ 93] Presumption of Life During Period.

Normally, it is presumed that life continues through the entire statutory period. (People v. Niccoli (1951) 102 C.A.2d 814, 819, 228 P.2d 827 [decided under former statute requiring absence of 7 years]; Liberty Transport v. Harry W. Gorst Co. (1991) 229 C.A.3d 417, 441, 442, 280 C.R. 159 [in action against insurer that denied claim arising from disappearance of insured's employee with insured's truck on ground employee had stolen truck, it was improper to instruct jury on presumption, even though at time of trial employee had been gone 61/2 years, where at time of insured's claim, employee had been missing only 15 months].) However, evidence that the missing person was subject to some specific peril or illness, or other circumstances, may justify the inference of death prior thereto. Thus, in Estate of Christin (1933) 128 C.A. 625, 631, 17 P.2d 1068, a husband escaped from an insane asylum and was not heard from for over 7 years. His wife died 5 years after his escape. Held, evidence that he was seriously ill at the time of his escape justified the conclusion that he predeceased her. (See also Pollack v. Hamm (1970) 3 C.3d 264, 269, 90 C.R. 181, 475 P.2d 213 [judge lost at sea during boating accident presumed dead approximately 3 weeks later].)

On the other hand, in People v. Niccoli, supra, appellant, surety on defendant's bail bond, sought to avoid forfeiture of bail by a showing of defendant's death (P.C. 1305). The proof was that defendant disappeared, leaving his car near an airport, and that an intensive search failed to locate him. Held, evidence of disappearance without motive is admissible to "quicken the time," but, where a motive or doubt as to the reason for disappearance exists, the presumption of continued life remains. Here, the evidence showed that defendant was penniless, that he had been indicted, had removed labels from his clothing and license plates from his car, was a member of a group on whom a murderous assault had been made, etc., and thus had a good reason for flight. Accordingly, the court's discretion in ordering forfeiture was upheld. (102 C.A.2d 819, 820.)

It has been said that neither the presumption of death nor of continuing life has any place in a trial for homicide. Thus, in People v. Scott (1959) 176 C.A.2d 458, 501, 1 C.R. 600, the victim had disappeared and the corpus delicti was established entirely by circumstantial evidence. (See 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §52.) Defendant's contention that the presumption of life negated the circumstantial evidence of death was rejected as wholly untenable. (176 C.A.2d 505.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

94 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF
H. Unlawful Intent From Unlawful Act.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 94

[§ 94] Unlawful Intent From Unlawful Act.

"An unlawful intent is presumed from the doing of an unlawful act. This presumption is inapplicable in a criminal action to establish the specific intent of the defendant where specific intent is an element of the crime charged." (Ev.C. 668, repeating the exception stated in Ev.C. 665, supra, §90, for the same reason; see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §§3, 6.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.312; Evidence k.64

95 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

I. Negligence Per Se.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 95

[§ 95] Negligence Per Se.

(1) General Presumption. Ev.C. 669 codifies the presumption that unexcused conduct below the standard prescribed by a statute or public regulation may be considered negligence per se. Following established case law, the statute classifies the presumption as one affecting the burden of proof. (See DiRosa v. Showa Denko K.K. (1996) 44 C.A.4th 799, 808, 52 C.R.2d 128 [federal statute or regulation may be adopted as standard of care in state negligence action]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 3.45; 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §818 et seq.)

(2) Proximate Cause Requirement. In Traxler v. Varady (1993) 12 C.A.4th 1321, 16 C.R.2d 297, plaintiff sued defendants, a hospital and three physicians, for negligence after learning that she had received HIV-infected blood. Defendants had performed a dilation and curettage on plaintiff in an attempt to stop her from hemorrhaging, but failed to follow state regulations requiring that tissue removed during the procedure be sent to a pathologist. Plaintiff contended that this failure constituted negligence per se, but the trial judge refused to give an instruction to that effect. Held, refusal of the instruction was proper. There was no causal relationship between the decision to give plaintiff a transfusion and the failure to send the tissue to a pathologist. The transfusion had been ordered in response to plaintiff's loss of blood, independent of the presence or absence of a pathology finding. Thus, the alleged violation of the regulation did not proximately cause plaintiff's injury. (12 C.A.4th 1329.)

(3) Exception: Local Rules and Policies. In Peterson v. Long Beach (1979) 24 C.3d 238, 244, 155 C.R. 360, 594 P.2d 477, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §822, the court held that guidelines for the discharge of a firearm, in a police department's manual, were standards having the force of law; hence, the presumption of Ev.C. 669 applied where an officer violated the guidelines.

The Legislature's initial reaction to Peterson was to enact Ev.C. 669.1, providing that a local rule, regulation, or guideline setting forth the standards of conduct for peace officers in the use of deadly force was not to be considered a statute, ordinance, or regulation for purposes of Ev.C. 669, supra. In 1983, Ev.C. 669.1 was repealed and reenacted in a broadened form. The revised statute provides that a state or local rule, policy, manual, or guideline setting forth standards of conduct or guidelines for public employees in the conduct of their employment will not be considered a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public entity within the meaning of Ev.C. 669, unless formally adopted as a statute, ordinance, or regulation.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Presumption. See CACI, No. 418 [presumption of negligence per se].

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §871 et seq.

(3) Exception: Local Rules and Policies.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §877.

96 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF
J. Official Writings Affecting Property.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 96

[§ 96] Official Writings Affecting Property.

The presumptions stated in Ev.C. 1600 (official records of documents affecting property interests) and Ev.C. 1603 (deeds by officers in pursuance of court process) originally did not specify the applicable burden. The statutes were amended in 1967 to classify the presumptions among those affecting the burden of proof. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §57.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

97 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF

K. Impact of Zoning Ordinance.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 97

[§ 97] Impact of Zoning Ordinance.

(1) In General. Under Ev.C. 669.5, certain zoning ordinances are presumed to have an impact on the supply of residential units available in an area that includes territory outside the jurisdiction of the city or county; hence, in an action challenging the validity of the ordinance, the city or county has the burden of proof that the ordinance is necessary for the protection of the public health, safety, or welfare of the population of the city or county. Ev.C. 669.5(a) specifies the types of zoning ordinance giving rise to this presumption:

(a) Ordinances limiting the building permits that may be issued for residential construction.

(b) Ordinances limiting the buildable lots that may be developed for residential purposes.

(c) Ordinances changing the standards of residential development on vacant land so as to violate Govt.C. 65913.1 (requiring a zoning authority to zone sufficient vacant land for residential use; see 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §834).

Ev.C. 669.5 recognizes that in certain instances the public health, safety, and welfare may warrant the enactment of ordinances that restrict the number of housing units that may be built; but it requires that local governments "exercise these powers only in a manner consistent with a proper respect for regional housing needs." (Building Industry Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 211 C.A.3d 277, 292, 259 C.R. 325.)

(2) Illustrations. In Building Industry Assn. v. Camarillo (1986) 41 C.3d 810, 817, 226 C.R. 81, 718 P.2d 68, the issue was whether Ev.C. 669.5 applies to initiative ordinances other than those adopted prior to the effective date of the statute and specifically described in Ev.C. 669.5(d). Resolving an ambiguity arising from the statute's use of the term "governing body," the court held that Ev.C. 669.5 applies to initiative measures adopted after the statute's effective date. "Concluding that section 669.5 does not apply to initiative measures would render subdivision (d) meaningless." It would also be "inconsistent with the statutory language and with the purpose of the statute, which is to support the public policy favoring construction of affordable housing." (41 C.3d 820; see 14 Pepperdine L. Rev. 194.)

In Murphy v. Alameda (1992) 11 C.A.4th 906, 14 C.R.2d 329, plaintiffs challenged the validity of a city charter amendment adopted by initiative and an ordinance implementing the amendment, both of which were enacted before the effective date of Ev.C. 669.5. The amendment declared that no multiple dwelling units should be built in the city, and the ordinance defined the prohibited multiple dwelling units. The trial judge ruled that Ev.C. 669.5 was inapplicable to plaintiffs' attack on the validity of the amendment and ordinance. Held, the ruling was incorrect.

(a) Even though the challenged provisions did not impose any numerical limits on permits or lots, but instead regulated the type of units that could be constructed, it is the practical effect of such provisions, not their literal terms, that dictates whether the statute applies. The growth restrictions at issue effectively limited to zero the number of permits that could be issued for certain kinds of residential construction. Thus, the ordinance unquestionably fell within the scope of the statute. (11 C.A.4th 911.)

(b) The trial judge wrongly assumed that application of Ev.C. 669.5 to this case would give the statute retroactive effect. However, because the statute does not change the legal consequences of the parties' past conduct, it operates prospectively. It simply subjects previously enacted ordinances to a rebuttable presumption of impact on the housing supply and places on the local entity a new burden of proof. (11 C.A.4th 912.)

(c) Even if it is assumed that application of the statute in this case would be retroactive, the Legislature intended that it so apply. "By expressly declaring that the section should not apply only to certain ordinances adopted by initiative or referendum adopted prior to its effective date, the Legislature impliedly indicated that it should apply to all other ordinances, whether adopted by legislative bodies or by the voters, including all ordinances adopted by initiative prior to its effective date but not specifically exempted." (11 C.A.4th 914.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General.

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §1019.

98 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

VIII. EVIDENCE CODE PRESUMPTIONS: BURDEN OF PROOF
L. Payment of Check by Bank.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 98

[§ 98] Payment of Check by Bank.

Ev.C. 670 provides that in a dispute concerning payment by check, a copy of the check produced in accordance with Ev.C. 1550 (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §46), together with the original bank statement reflecting payment of the check by the bank on which it was drawn or a copy of the statement produced in the same manner, creates a presumption that the check has been paid.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

99 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

IX. FORMER PRESUMPTIONS NOT RESTATED AS PRESUMPTIONS

A. Presumptions Eliminated.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 99

[§ 99] Presumptions Eliminated.

The Evidence Code restated as presumptions only about half of those set forth in former C.C.P. 1963. (For the listing and dispositions, see the Legislative Committee Comment on repealed C.C.P. 1963 contained in 7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 1312.) Some were reclassified as general maxims (infra, §100), some as rules of burden of proof (infra, §101), and some as bases of permissible inferences (infra, §102).

Others were wholly eliminated:

(1) Former C.C.P. 1963(14), that a person acting in a public office was regularly appointed to it. This was discontinued as "unnecessary, inaccurate, and misleading," the subject being adequately covered by the de facto officer doctrine. (Legislative Committee Comment on repealed C.C.P. 1963.)

(2) Former C.C.P. 1963(18), that matters within an issue were passed on by the jury, and matters within an arbitration were passed on by the arbitrators. This was discontinued as useless, the subject being covered by the doctrine of res judicata and principles of appellate review. (Legislative Committee Comment on repealed C.C.P. 1963.)

(3) Former C.C.P. 1963(21), that a promissory note or bill of exchange was given or indorsed for sufficient consideration. This is covered by the Negotiable Instruments Law as restated in the Commercial Code. (U.C.C. 3303; 3 Summary (9th), Negotiable Instruments, Supp., §206.)

(4) Former C.C.P. 1963(22), that an indorsement of a negotiable note or bill of exchange was made at the time and place of its making. The Commercial Code now occupies the field. (Legislative Committee Comment on repealed C.C.P. 1963.)

(5) Former C.C.P. 1963(29), that persons acting as copartners have entered into a contract of copartnership, was discontinued as unnecessary, the subject being covered by the doctrine of ostensible authority. (Legislative Committee Comment on repealed C.C.P. 1963; see 2 Summary (9th), Agency and Employment, §93.)

(6) Former C.C.P. 1963(38), that uninterrupted public use of land for 5 years as a burial ground, with the owner's unrestricted consent, is presumptive evidence of intention to dedicate the land for that purpose. This presumption, never applied in a reported case, was discontinued as unnecessary in view of the substantive law of dedication. (Legislative Committee Comment on repealed C.C.P. 1963; see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §120 et seq.)

(7) Former C.C.P. 1963(39), that there was a good and sufficient consideration for a written contract. The same presumption is contained in C.C. 1614. (See 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §211.)

(8) Former C.C.P. 1963(40), that property owned at death by a person divorced more than 4 years prior thereto is separate property. This is incorporated in Family C. 802, not as a presumption of separate property, but as an exception to the general presumption of community property. (See 11 Summary (9th), Community Property, §95.)

(9) Former C.C.P. 1847, that a witness is presumed to speak the truth, and that the "presumption" may be "repelled" by impeaching evidence, was eliminated; there is no such presumption, and impeachment is covered by other sections of the Code. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to repealed C.C.P. 1847; see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §258 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Promissory note given for sufficient consideration:

Cross-Reference: 4 Summary (10th), Negotiable Instruments, §29.

(5) Persons acting as copartners have entered into contract:

Cross-Reference: 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §144.(6) Uninterrupted public use of land as intention to dedicate:

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §239 et seq.

(7) Good and sufficient consideration for written contract:

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §206.

(8) Property owned at death by divorced person:

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, §15.

100 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

IX. FORMER PRESUMPTIONS NOT RESTATED AS PRESUMPTIONS

B. Presumptions Restated as Maxims.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 100

[§ 100] Presumptions Restated as Maxims.

Part 4 of Division IV of the Civil Code, entitled "Maxims of Jurisprudence," sets forth a number of general propositions "intended not to qualify any of the foregoing provisions of this code, but to aid in their just application." (C.C. 3509.) Included are such statements as "No one should suffer by the act of another" (C.C. 3520), "For every wrong there is a remedy" (C.C. 3523), and "No man is responsible for that which no man can control" (C.C. 3526).

According to the Legislative Committee Comment on C.C. 3545 et seq. (see 7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 1293), the matters contained in several subdivisions of former C.C.P. 1963 did not fall within the definition of a presumption (Ev.C. 600, supra, §52) and were commonly cited in appellate opinions as makeweights in cases where the decision actually rested on a more basic ground. Thus, they were similar in purpose to the other maxims in Civil Code, Division IV, Part 4, and were accordingly added to that Code, as follows:

(1) C.C. 3545: "Private transactions are fair and regular." (Superseding former C.C.P. 1963(19); see Janise v. Bryan (1948) 89 C.A.2d Supp. 933, 943, 201 P.2d 466 [former presumption described as equivalent to a presumption of good faith].)

(2) C.C. 3546: "Things happen according to the ordinary course of nature and the ordinary habits of life." (Superseding former C.C.P. 1963(28), discussed in Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39 C.2d 12, 21, 24, 244 P.2d 395 [tractor-trailer must have been carrying cargo of fuel oil immediately prior to accident, because, in ordinary course of nature, it would not have been empty before accident and full immediately thereafter].)

(3) C.C. 3547: "A thing continues to exist as long as is usual with things of that nature." (Superseding former C.C.P. 1963(32); on this former "presumption of continuity," see Pfingsten v. Westenhaver, supra, 39 C.2d 21; Estate of Fosselman (1957) 48 C.2d 179, 186, 308 P.2d 336; Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 C.A.2d 637, 646, 301 P.2d 440 [evidence that child threw rocks at people in 1952 justified presumption that his proclivities continued through 1953 when he threw again; "[t]raits of character and habits of conduct are in their nature continuous"].)

(4) C.C. 3548: "The law has been obeyed." (Superseding former C.C.P. 1963(33); on the former statute, see Estate of Neilson (1962) 57 C.2d 733, 745, 22 C.R. 1, 371 P.2d 745.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

101 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

IX. FORMER PRESUMPTIONS NOT RESTATED AS PRESUMPTIONS

C. Presumptions Restated as Rules of Burden of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 101

[§ 101] Presumptions Restated as Rules of Burden of Proof.

Three important former presumptions were restated in terms of the burden of proof on the party against whom the presumption had operated:

(1) The presumption of innocence of crime or wrong (former C.C.P. 1963(1)), now the burden of proving that a person is guilty of crime or wrongdoing. (Ev.C. 520, supra, §14.)

(2) The presumption of due care (former C.C.P. 1963(4)), now the burden of proving failure to exercise due care. (Ev.C. 521, supra, §15.)

(3) The judicially created presumption of sanity, now the burden of proving insanity. (Ev.C. 522, supra, §16.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

102 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

IX. FORMER PRESUMPTIONS NOT RESTATED AS PRESUMPTIONS

D. Presumptions Treated as Bases for Inferences.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 102

[§ 102] Presumptions Treated as Bases for Inferences.

Some matters, formerly stated as presumptions, appear upon analysis not to meet the test of a law-directed presumption (supra, §52), and, whether or not restated in the Evidence Code, are treated as bases for permissible inferences that may be drawn by the trier of fact. These are:

(1) Evidence wilfully suppressed would be adverse. (Former C.C.P. 1963(5), restated in Ev.C. 412 and Ev.C. 413; see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §115 et seq.)

(2) Available higher evidence would be adverse when inferior evidence is offered. (Former C.C.P. 1963(6), restated in Ev.C. 412; see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §114.)

(3) The ordinary course of business was followed. (Former C.C.P. 1963(20).) This was discontinued on the ground that evidence of business custom may or may not support an inference that the custom was followed on a particular occasion. (See Ev.C. 1105; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §67.) "There is no reason to compel the trier of fact to find that the custom was followed by applying a presumption." (Legislative Committee Comment on repealed C.C.P. 1963 (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 1314).)

(4) Identity of person could be presumed from identity of name. (Former C.C.P. 1963(25).) This was discontinued on the ground that the matter should be left to inference. (See Legislative Committee Comment on former C.C.P. 1963 (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 1314); 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §130.)

(5) Acquiescence followed from a belief in the right or fact. (Former C.C.P. 1963(27).) This was occasionally applied to statements made in the presence of a person who remained silent, but it was discontinued on the ground that the matter should be left to inference. (See Legislative Committee Comment on former C.C.P. 1963 (7 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 1314); 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §103.)

(6) A man and woman depicting themselves as husband and wife have entered into a lawful contract of marriage. (Former C.C.P. 1963(30).) This is more accurately restated in expanded form as a hearsay exception for evidence of community reputation, which may support an inference. (Ev.C. 1314; see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §284.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

103 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

A. In General.

1. Nature and Sources.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 103

[§ 103] Nature and Sources.

There are many presumptions in California law which are not restated in the Evidence Code. Grouping them according to their origin or source, rather than subject matter, they are of two kinds:

(1) Presumptions Created by Legislature. The legislative power to create presumptions, in civil and criminal cases, is well established. (See People v. Fitzgerald (1936) 14 C.A.2d 180, 191, 58 P.2d 718; People v. Superior Court (Steven S.) (1981) 119 C.A.3d 162, 175, 173 C.R. 788, citing the text; Conservatorship of Geiger (1992) 3 C.A.4th 127, 135, 4 C.R.2d 252, citing the text; 2 McCormick 5th, §§345, 347; 4 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1356; see also supra, §62 [criminal cases].) Accordingly, presumptions now contained in any of the other codes, or enacted by future Legislatures as parts of some other codes, will have to be sought in those statutory sources. (For illustrations of statutes currently in force, see infra, §105 et seq.)

The Law Revision Commission's plan was, in general, to restate in the Evidence Code the retained presumptions listed in the repealed evidence sections of the Code of Civil Procedure, together with a few important judicially created presumptions. No attempt was made to extract the material from other codes, or to codify all judicially created presumptions.

The Evidence Code does, however, state a commonly accepted rule of interpretation for statutes that use the phrase "prima facie evidence" rather than the more precise term "presumption": "A statute providing that a fact or group of facts is prima facie evidence of another fact establishes a rebuttable presumption." (Ev.C. 602; see Hansen v. G & G Trucking Co. (1965) 236 C.A.2d 481, 492, 46 C.R. 186; infra, §104.)

(2) Presumptions Created by Courts. California courts, following the theory that presumptions were evidence because so classified in the Code, refused to apply the designation to any not listed in a statute. But some of the nonstatutory "inferences" were given substantially the effect of presumptions (see supra, §49), and occasionally the supposed distinction was itself overlooked, as in the case of the judicially recognized presumptions of sanity and due execution (supra, §16; infra, §113). (See also, on judicial recognition of common law presumptions, Yaeger v. City Council (1965) 231 C.A.2d 557, 561, 41 C.R. 904.)

No such distinction can be made under the Evidence Code. The power of the higher courts to create presumptions is expressly recognized by Ev.C. 600 (assumption that "the law requires to be made") read in connection with Ev.C. 160 ("law" includes "decisional law"). Hence, an existing judicially created nonstatutory "inference," if it meets the test of a presumption, should be regarded as, and given the effect of, a presumption. (See infra, §113.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Presumptions Created by Legislature. See 2 McCormick 6th, §§345, 347.

104 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

A. In General.

2. The Problem of Classification.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 104

[§ 104] The Problem of Classification.

The Evidence Code, pursuant to its stated criteria (supra, §§54, 56), classifies many presumptions as affecting either the burden of producing evidence (supra, §67 et seq.), or the burden of proof (supra, §86 et seq.). Many others, created by statute or judicial decision, remain unclassified. The Law Revision Commission, in what seems to be careful understatement, observes: "In some cases it may be difficult to determine whether a particular presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof or a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 660; see People v. Superior Court (Steven S.) (1981) 119 C.A.3d 162, 175, 173 C.R. 788, citing the text.)

Despite the difficulty, the task is one that the courts must undertake from time to time, as the situations arise. The guidelines will be the criteria of the Evidence Code, but the effect that prior decisions gave to particular presumptions will undoubtedly be considered.

The Commission offers one suggestion: A statute creating a presumption by use of the phrase "prima facie evidence" may have a public policy objective, but it is more likely that such a statute was not intended to affect the burden of proof. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 602.) This section may call for a reexamination of prior California cases. Former C.C.P. 1833, defining "prima facie evidence," described it as sufficient "until contradicted and overcome" by other evidence; and, when this definition was read in connection with a statute making some act "prima facie" evidence of a fact, the effect was to shift the burden of proof. (See Miller & Lux v. Secara (1924) 193 C. 755, 770, 227 P. 171; Overton v. Harband (1935) 6 C.A.2d 455, 460, 44 P.2d 484; People v. Van Gorden (1964) 226 C.A.2d 634, 637, 38 C.R. 265.) With the repeal of C.C.P. 1833, there will be no automatic classification of such statutes in the burden-of-proof-shifting group.

Nevertheless, as the Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 602 states: "In some instances, these statutes have been enacted for reasons of public policy that require them to be treated as presumptions affecting the burden of proof." The Comment cites People v. Schwartz (1947) 31 C.2d 59, 63, 187 P.2d 12, and People v. Mahoney (1939) 13 C.2d 729, 732, 91 P.2d 1029, both dealing with Rev.C. 6714, on certificate of delinquency in sales tax. (See 9 Summary (9th), Taxation, §319.) To these may be added People v. Van Gorden, supra, a condemnation suit in which plaintiff, the state, relied on the declaration of public necessity by the Director of Parks and Recreation. Former Pub.Res.C. 5006.1 made this declaration "prima facie evidence." Held, "[u]ntil the prima facie case ... was overcome by contrary evidence," the plaintiff was under no duty to offer evidence. (226 C.A.2d 640.) (On the present effect of a resolution of public necessity, see 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §986.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-References: 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §369; 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §1200.

105 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

B. Presumptions Stated in Other Codes.

1. Contracts and Commercial Transactions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 105

[§ 105] Contracts and Commercial Transactions.

(1) Consideration for Written Contract. "A written instrument is presumptive evidence of a consideration." (C.C. 1614; see Estate of McConnell (1936) 6 C.2d 493, 499, 58 P.2d 639; Brooks v. Fidelity Savings & Loan Assn. (1938) 26 C.A.2d 114, 116, 78 P.2d 1175; Hamilton v. Abadjian (1947) 30 C.2d 49, 52, 179 P.2d 804; Estate of Lynch (1978) 83 C.A.3d 296, 302, 147 C.R. 861; 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §211.)

In Rancho Santa Fe Pharmacy v. Seyfert (1990) 219 C.A.3d 875, 268 C.R. 505, the issue was whether the presumption of consideration affected the burden of proof or only the burden of producing evidence. The court first pointed out that, although the particular burden has been legislatively declared as to a number of presumptions (see supra, §§67 et seq., 86 et seq.), the presumption of C.C. 1614 has not been so classified. (219 C.A.3d 883.) The court then gave two reasons for holding that only the burden of producing evidence was affected by the presumption:

(a) No public policy concern appears: "We think section 1614's presumption exists because the Legislature thought it was experientially sound. It is logically founded on the recognition that, in most cases, where there is writing, there is consideration. Section 1614 therefore merely relieves the party producing the written document of the need to make the initial showing on what in most cases will be a nonissue, i.e., consideration." (219 C.A.3d 883.)

(b) "We also note section 1614 involves the debtor-creditor relationship. This fact is significant since the Legislature has determined a number of presumptions arising from the debtor-creditor relationship affect the burden of producing evidence. For example, the presumption that money delivered to a person was owed him or her is one affecting the burden of production. (Evid. Code, §631.) Also affecting this burden is the presumption that an obligation in the creditor's possession has not been paid. (Evid. Code, §635.) In cases giving rise to these presumptions, then, the creditor retains the burden of proving the presumed fact when the debtor produces sufficient evidence to call the validity of the presumption into question." (219 C.A.3d 883; on Ev.C. 631, 635, see supra, §§68, 72.)

(2) Joint and Several Contracts. An obligation imposed on a number of persons is presumed to be joint (C.C. 1431); but where all the parties receive some benefit from the consideration, or the promise is in the singular number and is executed by all, the obligation is presumed to be joint and several (C.C. 1659, 1660). (See Dewing v. Chow (1933) 129 C.A. 441, 445, 19 P.2d 12; Kaneko v. Okuda (1961) 195 C.A.2d 217, 227, 15 C.R. 792; 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §674 et seq.)

(3) Penalties and Liquidated Damages. Former C.C. 1671 provided that the parties to a contract could agree on an amount presumed to be the amount of damage sustained by a breach. The statute thus created a rebuttable presumption that affected the burden of producing evidence. (See United Savings & Loan Assn. v. Reeder Dev. Corp. (1976) 57 C.A.3d 282, 296, 129 C.R. 113; Barbera v. Sokol (1980) 101 C.A.3d 725, 732, 161 C.R. 843.) In 1977, the statute was extensively revised (see 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §528 et seq.) to provide "a new general rule favoring the enforcement of liquidated damages provisions except against a consumer in a consumer case"; as to consumer cases, the statutory revisions are "not intended to alter the substance" of the former statute "as interpreted by the courts." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to 1977 revision of C.C. 1671.) Accordingly, in consumer cases the rebuttable presumption should remain in effect.

(4) Advantage Obtained by Fiduciary. In a transaction between a trustee and beneficiary, in which the trustee obtains an advantage, the trustee's fiduciary duties are presumed to be violated. (Prob.C. 16004(c), formerly C.C. 2235; see Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 C.2d 147, 151, 272 P.2d 11; Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 C.2d 244, 250, 18 C.R. 736, 368 P.2d 360; People v. Hewlett (1951) 108 C.A.2d 358, 373, 239 P.2d 150; Rebmann v. Major (1970) 5 C.A.3d 684, 688, 85 C.R. 399; 13 Hastings L. J. 1 [advantage obtained by attorney]; 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §425; 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §119; infra, §158.) Prob.C. 16004(c) specifies that the presumption affects the burden of proof.

(5) Negotiable Instruments. A signature is presumed genuine or authorized. (U.C.C. 3308; see 3 Summary (9th), Negotiable Instruments, Supp., §218.) This presumption, and all others in the Commercial Code except as otherwise provided in U.C.C. 1202, affect only the burden of producing evidence. (U.C.C. 1210; see Security Pac. Nat. Bank v. Associated Motor Sales (1980) 106 C.A.3d 171, 178, 165 C.R. 38 [U.C.C. 3505(a): presumption of dishonor of instrument]; 3 Summary (9th), Sales, §19.) U.C.C. 1202, dealing with the evidentiary effect of a bill of lading and other documents issued by a third party, provides that the document, in due form, is presumed to be authentic and genuine, and if found authentic and genuine, the facts stated therein are presumed to be true. The first presumption merely affects the burden of producing evidence; the second presumption affects the burden of proof. (See 3 Summary (9th), Sales, §19.)

(6) Sales To Injure Competitors. The selling or giving away of an article below cost or in limited quantities is rebuttably presumed to have been done with an intent to injure competitors. (B. & P.C. 17071, 17071.5; see Dooley's Hardware Mart v. Food Giant Markets (1971) 21 C.A.3d 513, 517, 518, 98 C.R. 543 [presumption created by B. & P.C. 17071.5 is one affecting burden of proof]; Western Union Financial Services v. First Data Corp. (1993) 20 C.A.4th 1530, 1540, 25 C.R.2d 341 [presumption rebutted by evidence of defendant's good faith intent to use below-cost money transfer services to increase and maintain customer base].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Consideration for Written Contract.

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §206.

(2) Joint and Several Contracts.

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §108 et seq.(3) Penalties and Liquidated Damages.

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §533 et seq.

(4) Advantage Obtained by Fiduciary.

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §318.

(5) Negotiable Instruments. In 2006, U.C.C. 1202 was repealed and replaced by U.C.C. 1307 without substantive change, and U.C.C. 1210 was repealed. Under U.C.C. 1206, added the same year, when the Code creates a presumption regarding a fact, or provides that a fact is presumed, "the trier of fact must find the existence of the fact unless and until evidence is introduced that supports a finding of its nonexistence."

Cross-References: 4 Summary (10th), Negotiable Instruments, §41; 4 Summary (10th), Sales, §19.

106 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

B. Presumptions Stated in Other Codes.

2. Property.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 106

[§ 106] Property.

(1) Appropriation of Property for Public Use. In eminent domain proceedings, appropriations to public use and to more necessary public use and to the best and most necessary public use were made subject to presumptions by statutes enacted in 1975. (See C.C.P. 1240.660, 1240.670, 1240.680; 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §981.)

(2) Community and Separate Property. (a) Property acquired during marriage is presumed community. (Family C. 760; see In re Marriage of Haines (1995) 33 C.A.4th 277, 289, 290, 39 C.R.2d 673, supra, §87 ["This is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof"]; 11 Summary (9th), Community Property, §95.) This presumption does not apply to property owned at death by a person whose marriage was dissolved more than 4 years prior thereto. (Family C. 802; see 11 Summary (9th), Community Property, §95.) (b) Property acquired by a married woman prior to January 1, 1975, by an instrument in writing is presumed to be separate property; but if the property was acquired prior to that date by a husband and wife by an instrument in which they are described as husband and wife, it is presumed community unless a different intention is expressed in the instrument. (Family C. 803; see 11 Summary (9th), Community Property, §§99, 101.)

(3) Compensation for Breach of Agreement To Transfer Real Property. The presumption that breach of an agreement to transfer real property cannot be adequately relieved by pecuniary compensation is a presumption affecting the burden of proof. However, the presumption is conclusive in the case of a single-family dwelling that the party seeking performance intends to occupy. (C.C. 3387; see 11 Summary (9th), Equity, §25.)

(4) Exclusive Right To Use Fictitious Name. The first person to file a fictitious business name in a county is rebuttably presumed to have the exclusive right to use that name, or a confusingly similar trade name, as his or her trade name, if the person is actually engaged in a trade or business using that name in the county. (B. & P.C. 14411 et seq.) Use of a corporate name as a fictitious name is rebuttably presumed to be the exclusive right of the first corporation, actually engaged in trade or business, to file the appropriate articles of incorporation or obtain a certificate of qualification. (B. & P.C. 14415.) If there is a conflict between the registrant under B. & P.C. 14411 and the corporation under B. & P.C. 14415, the presumption is that the earliest date gives the right. (B. & P.C. 14416.) (See 4 Pacific L. J. 279; 4 Summary (9th), Personal Property, §63.)

(5) Fee Simple Title. "A fee simple title is presumed to be intended to pass" by a grant of real property. (C.C. 1105; see Manhattan Beach v. Superior Court (1996) 13 C.4th 232, 242, 52 C.R.2d 82, 914 P.2d 160, 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, Supp., §442 [statutory presumption supported finding that quitclaim deed of "right of way" conveyed fee title and not just railroad easement]; Basin Oil Co. v. Inglewood (1954) 125 C.A.2d 661, 664, 271 P.2d 73; 4 Summary (9th),

Real Property, §236.) This presumption places on the plaintiff the burden of proving that the presumed fact, i.e., that a grant deed conveyed a fee simple title, was nonexistent. (Develop-Amatic Engineering v. Republic Mortg. Co. (1970) 12 C.A.3d 143, 148, 91 C.R. 193.)

(6) Gift in View of Impending Death. A gift made under certain circumstances is presumed to be a gift in view of impending death. (Prob.C. 5703; see Rosenberg v. Broy (1961) 190 C.A.2d 591, 595, 12 C.R. 103 [presumption arising under former C.C. 1150]; 4 Summary (9th), Personal Property, §108.)

(7) Joint Tenancy in Bank Deposit. Funds remaining on deposit at the death of a party to a joint account belong to the surviving joint tenant "unless there is clear and convincing evidence of a different intent." (Prob.C. 5302(a); see Law Rev. Com. Comment to Prob.C. 5302 [statute "strengthens survivorship rights, since under prior law the presumption of survivorship arising from the joint tenancy form of the account could be overcome by a preponderance of the evidence"]; Schmedding v. Schmedding (1966) 240 C.A.2d 312, 316, 49 C.R. 523 [construing prior law]; on Multiple-Party Accounts Law, see 3 Summary (9th), Negotiable Instruments, §142 et seq.)

(8) Purported Trust Without Named Beneficiary. If an interest is conveyed to a "trustee" without naming a beneficiary, it is presumed that the grantee holds in his or her individual right, free from any trust. "This is a presumption affecting the burden of proof." (Prob.C. 18104(a); see Hansen v. G & G Trucking Co. (1965) 236 C.A.2d 481, 490, 46 C.R. 186 [applying similar predecessor statute].)

(9) Sale Under Trust Deed. A recital in a trustee's deed of compliance with statutory notice requirements is prima facie evidence of such compliance, and is "conclusive evidence thereof in favor of bona fide purchasers and encumbrancers for value and without notice." (C.C. 2924; see Wolfe v. Lipsy (1985) 163 C.A.3d 633, 639, 209 C.R. 801; 3 Summary (9th), Security Transactions in Real Property, §148.)

(10) Term of Tenancy. Where no limit is fixed, a tenancy in real property is presumed to be month to month, except in the case of lodgings or dwelling-houses, when it is for the length of time adopted for estimation of the rent. (C.C. 1943, 1944; see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §549.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Appropriation of Property for Public Use.

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §1195.

(2) Community and Separate Property.

Cross-References: 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, §§15, 20, 22.

(3) Compensation for Breach of Agreement To Transfer Real Property.

Cross-Reference: 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §28.

(4) Exclusive Right To Use Fictitious Name.

Cross-Reference: 13 Summary (10th), Personal Property, §87.(5) Fee Simple Title.

Manhattan Beach v. Superior Court:

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §390.

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §14.

(6) Gift in View of Impending Death.

Cross-Reference: 13 Summary (10th), Personal Property, §134.

(7) Joint Tenancy in Bank Deposit.

Cross-Reference: 4 Summary (10th), Negotiable Instruments, §77 et seq.(9) Sale Under Trust Deed.

Cross-Reference: 4 Summary (10th), Security Transactions in Real Property, §164.

(10) Term of Tenancy.

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §524.West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.57

107 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

B. Presumptions Stated in Other Codes.

3. Family and Probate Issues.

a. Parent-Child Relationship.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 107

[§ 107] Parent-Child Relationship.

(1) In General. The Uniform Parentage Act (Family C. 7600 et seq.) eliminated the concept of legitimacy and replaced it with that of parent-child relationship. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §409 et seq.) Under Family C. 7611, a man is presumed to be the natural father of a child if he meets the conditions set forth in Family C. 7540 et seq. (presumption arising from birth during marital cohabitation; see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §448B) or Family C. 7570 et seq. (paternity by voluntary declaration; see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §448D), or the conditions set forth in Family C. 7611 itself, which are as follows:

(a) The man and the child's natural mother are or have been married to each other, and the child is born during the marriage or within 300 days after its termination by death, annulment, declaration of invalidity or divorce, or after a decree of separation. (Family C. 7611(a).)

(b) The man and the child's natural mother "have attempted to marry each other by a marriage solemnized in apparent compliance with law, although the attempted marriage is or could be declared invalid," and (1) if the attempted marriage could be declared invalid only by a court, the child is born during the attempted marriage or within 300 days after its termination; or (2) if it is invalid without a court order, the child is born within 300 days after the termination of cohabitation. (Family C. 7611(b).)

(c) After the child's birth, the man and the child's natural mother have married or attempted to marry by a marriage solemnized in apparent compliance with law, although it is or could be declared invalid, and (1) with his consent he is named as the father on the child's birth certificate; or (2) he is obligated to support the child under a written voluntary promise or by court order. (Family C. 7611(c).)

(d) The man "receives the child into his home and openly holds out the child as his natural child." (Family C. 7611(d).)

These rebuttable presumptions affect the burden of proof, and they may be rebutted only by "clear and convincing evidence" (see supra, §39) or by a court decree establishing paternity by another man; if two or more presumptions conflict, "the presumption which on the facts is founded on the weightier considerations of policy and logic controls." (Family C. 7612; see 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §419.)

(2) Child Conceived as Result of Designated Crimes. Where Family C. 7611, supra, is inapplicable, a man may not be presumed to be the natural father of a child if: (a) the child was conceived as a result of a violation of P.C. 261 (rape), and the father was convicted; or (b) the child was conceived as a result of a violation of P.C. 261.5 (statutory rape), the father was convicted, and the mother was under 15 and the father was 21 or older at the time of conception. (Family C. 7611.5.)

(3) Paternity Index Finding. Family C. 7555 provides a rebuttable presumption of paternity where the "paternity index" (defined in Family C. 7555(b)(2)), as calculated by experts qualified as examiners of "genetic markers" (defined in Family C. 7555(b)(1)), is 100 or greater. The presumption affects the burden of proof, and may be rebutted by a preponderance of the evidence. (Family C. 7555(a).) (See Sonoma v. Grant W. (1986) 187 C.A.3d 1439, 1447, 232 C.R. 471, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §242 [effect of statute is to shift burden of proof of paternity to putative father where genetic evidence warrants presumption that he is actual parent]; El Dorado v. Misura (1995) 33 C.A.4th 73, 88, 38 C.R.2d 908 [defendant failed to rebut presumption stemming from paternity index of 970; evidence that mother had sex with two untested, unexcluded men during period of conception did not constitute required preponderance of evidence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General.

Elimination of concept of legitimacy:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §17 et seq.

Presumption arising from birth during marital cohabitation:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §25.

Paternity by voluntary declaration:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §32 et seq.(d) Man receives child into home: See In re Nicholas H. (2002) 28 C.4th 56, 63, 120 C.R.2d 146, 46 P.3d 932, 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §36 [presumption of paternity under Family C. 7611(d) may apply even where man admits he is not biological father]; In re A.A. (2003) 114 C.A.4th 771, 784, 788, 7 C.R.3d 755 [in dependency proceeding, trial judge erred in denying presumed father status under Family C. 7611(d) to man who held minor out as his child, visited with her regularly, provided for her financial support, and took her into his home once she was removed from mother's care; although judge made finding, based on biological test, that another man was father, that was not "judgment establishing paternity of the child by another man" within meaning of Family C. 7612]; Librers v. Black (2005) 129 C.A.4th 114, 123, 28 C.R.3d 188, 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, Supp., §47 [trial judge erred in finding that mother's former live-in boyfriend lacked standing to prosecute paternity action as presumed father under Family C. 7611(d), notwithstanding that child was not dependent child and genetic testing had determined that boyfriend was not biological father; holding of Nicholas H., supra, is not confined to dependency context].

(e) (New) Child born after father's death: Family C. 7611(f), added in 2004, provides that the presumption applies if the child "is in utero after the death of the decedent" and the conditions set forth in Prob.C. 249.5 (inheritance rights of posthumously conceived child) are met.

Rebuttal of presumption: Biological paternity by a competing presumed father does not necessarily rebut another man's presumption of paternity under Family C. 7612(a). "A juvenile court confronted with such a claim must instead consider whether rebuttal of the presumption would be appropriate in the circumstances of the case. ... This is a matter entrusted to the juvenile court's discretion." (In re Jesusa V. (2004) 32 C.4th 588, 606, 10 C.R.3d 205, 85 P.3d 2, 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §12.)

Conflicting presumptions: When conflicting presumptions arise under Family C. 7611(a) and Family C. 7611(d), the court, under Family C. 7612, "must make factual findings with respect to each presumption and only then weigh which presumption is entitled, in that case, to greater weight. The nature of each presumed father's role in the life of a child and the marital circumstances will vary from case to case and thus the trial court must make its determination under section 7612 on a case-by-case basis. In resolving such a conflict, the trial court must at all times be guided by the principle that the goal of our paternity statutes is 'the protection of the child's well-being.' " (Craig L. v. Sandy S. (2004) 125 C.A.4th 36, 52, 22 C.R.3d 606 [trial judge erred in failing to engage in any fact-finding and determining that husband's presumed father's status prevented biological father from asserting paternity under Family C. 7611(d)].)

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §35.

(3) Paternity Index Finding. The plain language of Family C. 7555 clearly contemplates that evidence other than the presumption can be deemed more credible than the paternity index number. Nothing suggests that the evidentiary heft of the presumption established by the statute is increased by a higher number on the paternity index. "If there is evidence other than the presumption, the trial court is to consider all of it. ... Implicit in such a plenary examination is the chance of the other evidence being deemed more persuasive." (San Francisco v. Givens (2000) 85 C.A.4th 51, 55, 56, 101 C.R.2d 859 [in proceeding by city and county to recover support payments from alleged father, trial judge did not err in determining, despite paternity index of 1290, that there was no probability that defendant was father, based on evidence that judge found to be clear and convincing that defendant had no access to mother].) West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.56

108 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

B. Presumptions Stated in Other Codes.

3. Family and Probate Issues.

b. Other Issues.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 108

[§ 108] Other Issues.

(1) Birth Date: Judicial Determination. A court order determining the date of an unregistered birth creates a presumption affecting the burden of proof. (Health & Saf.C. 103485, formerly Health & Saf.C. 10557; see Schmidt v. Retirement Bd. of San Francisco City & County Employees (1995) 37 C.A.4th 1204, 1211, 44 C.R.2d 297 [because statute specifies only birth orders, marriage orders are not entitled to same presumption].)

(2) Capacity To Make Health Care Decisions. Under Prob.C. 4657, a patient is presumed to have the capacity to make his or her own health care decisions, give or revoke an advance health care directive, and designate or disqualify a surrogate. (See 2 Summary (9th), Agency and Employment, Supp., §246ZZ.)

(3) Intent To Abandon Minor. Under Family C. 7822, a parent's failure to provide identification for a child under the age of 18 years, to provide for the child's support, or to communicate with the child for the periods specified in the statute is presumptive evidence that the parent intended to abandon the child. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §184.)

(4) Recorded Document Establishing Fact of Death. A document establishing the fact of death of a person, when recorded under Prob.C. 210 et seq. (see 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §93), is prima facie evidence of death insofar as it identifies real property in the county, title to which is affected by death. (Prob.C. 212.)

(5) Spousal Support: Decreased Need. Except as otherwise agreed to by the parties in writing, Family C. 4323 creates a rebuttable presumption, affecting the burden of proof, that there is a decreased need for spousal support if the supported party is cohabiting with a person of the opposite sex. (See 11 Summary (9th), Husband and Wife, §264 et seq.)

(6) Will Destroyed With Intent To Revoke. Under Prob.C. 6124, if a will was last in the testator's possession, the testator was competent at death, and neither the will nor a copy can be found after the testator's death, it is presumed the will was destroyed with an intent to revoke it. This presumption affects the burden of producing evidence. (See 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §522.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Capacity To Make Health Care Decisions.

Cross-Reference: Prob.C. 4657, formerly discussed in Agency and Employment, has been transferred to 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §881.

(3) Intent To Abandon Minor.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §312.

(4) Recorded Document Establishing Fact of Death.

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §15.

(5) Spousal Support: Decreased Need.

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §286 et seq.

(5a) (New) Spousal Support: History of Domestic Violence. In a marital dissolution proceeding, there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that an award of temporary or permanent spousal support should not be made to a spouse who has been convicted of domestic violence directed at the other spouse. (Family C. 4325, added in 2001.)

(6) Will Destroyed With Intent To Revoke. See Lauermann v. Superior Court (2005) 127 C.A.4th 1327, 1333, 26 C.R.3d 258 [presumption of Prob.C. 6124 was applicable even though photocopy, not personally signed, survived].

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §552.

109 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

B. Presumptions Stated in Other Codes.

4. Vehicle Code.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 109

[§ 109] Vehicle Code.

(1) Driving Under the Influence of Intoxicating Liquor. In a criminal proceeding arising out of acts allegedly committed while the defendant was driving a vehicle and was under the influence of an alcoholic beverage, the results of a chemical analysis of the defendant's blood, breath, or urine are a basis for presumptions as to whether or not the defendant was under the influence of an alcoholic beverage. (Veh.C. 23610; see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §54.) Additionally, in a prosecution for driving a vehicle while under the influence of an alcoholic beverage or drug, Veh.C. 23152(b) creates a rebuttable presumption that the defendant had an excessive blood-alcohol concentration when driving if the defendant had an excessive blood-alcohol concentration as shown by a chemical test performed within 3 hours of driving. (See Bell v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1992) 11 C.A.4th 304, 312, 13 C.R.2d 830, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §62 [presumption is applicable in an administrative suspension hearing].)

(2) Driving When Privilege Is Suspended or Revoked. Veh.C. 14601 et seq., prohibiting the driving of a motor vehicle when the driver has knowledge that his or her license has been suspended or revoked because of specified violations, establish a conclusive presumption that the driver has such knowledge, if mailed notice has been given to the driver by the Department of Motor Vehicles under Veh.C. 13106. The presumption affects the burden of proof. (See 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §241.)

(3) Residence for Purposes of Vehicle Registration. For purposes of Veh.C. 4000, requiring California registration of motor vehicles owned by California residents, possession of a California driver's license gives rise to a rebuttable presumption that the vehicle's owner is a California resident. (Veh.C. 4000(g).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Driving Under the Influence of Intoxicating Liquor. See Komizu v. Gourley (2002) 103 C.A.4th 1001, 1008, 127 C.R.2d 229 [where officer received call "of a vehicle into the bay" at 11:57 p.m., arrived at scene approximately 3 minutes later, and driver's blood was drawn at 2:15 a.m., it was reasonable to conclude that accident occurred less than 3 hours before blood was drawn, and thus presumption of Veh.C. 23152(b) applied].

110 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

B. Presumptions Stated in Other Codes.

5. Miscellaneous Presumptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 110

[§ 110] Miscellaneous Presumptions.

(1) At-Will Employment. Under Lab.C. 2922, where there is no specified term, an employment is presumed to be terminable at the will of either party on notice to the other. (See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 C.3d 654, 665, 254 C.R. 211, 765 P.2d 373, 2 Summary (9th), Agency and Employment, Supp., §184A.)

(2) Compensable Injuries: Failure To Reject Claim. Lab.C. 5402 provides that failure to reject liability for a workers' compensation injury claim within 90 days after the filing of the claim creates a rebuttable presumption that the injury is compensable. The statute was intended to affect the burden of proof rather than the burden of producing evidence. "As such, once the underlying facts have been established, its effect in workers' compensation litigation is to place on the defendant employer/carrier the burden of proving the employee/applicant does not have a compensable injury; in the absence of such proof, the consequences are adverse to the employer/carrier." (State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1995) 37 C.A.4th 675, 682, 683, 43 C.R.2d 660.)

(3) Compensable Injuries: Peace Officer's Heart Trouble. Lab.C. 3212.5 creates a rebuttable presumption that when a peace officer employed for 5 or more years develops "heart trouble," the condition arose out of and in the course of employment. (See San Francisco v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1978) 22 C.3d 103, 148 C.R. 626, 583 P.2d 151, 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §233.)

(4) Elections Code Presumptions. Elec.C. 2154 provides the following rebuttable presumptions in the event the county elections official receives an affidavit of registration not containing certain information:

(a) If no middle name or initial is shown, it is presumed none exists.

(b) If no party affiliation is shown, it is presumed the affiant has none.

(c) If no execution date is shown, it is presumed that the affidavit was executed on or before the 29th day prior to the election, if (1) the county elections official receives the affidavit on or before that day, (2) the county elections official receives the affidavit by mail no later than the 4th day after the 29th day prior to the election, or (3) the affidavit is postmarked on or before the 29th day prior to the election and received by mail by the county elections official.

(d) If the affiant fails to identify a state of birth, it is presumed that the affiant was born in a state or territory of the United States if his or her birthplace is shown as "United States," "U.S.A.," or other recognizable term for the United States.

(5) Emergency Rescue Personnel. Health & Saf.C. 1799.107 creates an immunity from tort liability for action taken by emergency rescue personnel acting within the scope of their employment, unless the action was performed in bad faith or in a grossly negligent manner. Health & Saf.C. 1799.107(c) states: "For purposes of this section, it shall be presumed that the action taken when providing emergency services was performed in good faith and without gross negligence. This presumption shall be one affecting the burden of proof."

(6) Food and Agricultural Code Presumptions. A number of presumptions are contained in this code. Some are conclusive (see Food & Ag.C. 54266 [in action on marketing agreement, that landlord is able to control delivery of product produced on his or her land]), and others are rebuttable (see Food & Ag.C. 12974 [person using pesticide without possessing written recommendation has assumed responsibility for recommendation].) Certain presumptions affect the burden of proof (see Food & Ag.C. 64307 [certificate of Director of Food and Agriculture showing unpaid milk fees is prima facie evidence of delinquency], Food & Ag.C. 64308 [certificate of Director of Food and Agriculture estimating amount of unpaid milk fees is prima facie evidence of delinquency of amount shown]), while others affect only the burden of producing evidence (see Food & Ag.C. 5552 [cotton plant that is uncultivated or left from previous season harbors pests].)

(7) Landlord's Breach of Statutory Habitability Requirements. C.C. 1942.3 creates "a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence" that the landlord has breached the habitability requirements of C.C. 1941 if certain specified conditions exist. (See 17 Pacific L. J. 767.)

(8) Minor Not Fit for Juvenile Treatment. Welf.C. 707 creates presumptions of unfitness for treatment under the juvenile court law based on previous felony violations (Welf.C. 707(a)(2)) or the nature of the current offense (Welf.C. 707(c)), unless the court, based on specified criteria, finds that the minor would be amenable to the care, treatment, and training program available through the juvenile court. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §757.) The presumption relating to the nature of the current offense has been classified as one affecting the burden of proof. (People v. Superior Court (Steven S.) (1981) 119 C.A.3d 162, 175, 177, 173 C.R. 788; see also Hicks v. Superior Court (1995) 36 C.A.4th 1649, 1659, 43 C.R.2d 269 [presumption that minor 14 or 15 years of age who commits certain types of murder is unfit for juvenile treatment is constitutional].)

(9) Physical Handicap. Govt.C. 12940.1 creates a presumption that an individual with heart trouble cannot perform the duties of a firefighter, firefighter trainee or active law enforcement officer without endangering the safety of the individual or others. The presumption is rebutted if the individual establishes, by a preponderance of the evidence, his or her ability to perform the job. (See 16 Pacific L. J. 667.)

(10) Uninsured Employer's Negligence. In a tort action by an employee, or a dependent of the employee, against an employer who has failed to obtain workers' compensation insurance, it is presumed that the injury or death was caused by the employer's negligence. (Lab.C. 3708; see Chakmakjian v. Lowe (1949) 33 C.2d 308, 313, 201 P.2d 801; Hall v. Burton (1962) 201 C.A.2d 72, 79, 19 C.R. 797; 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §38.)

(11) Uninsured Motorist. A certificate from the Department of Motor Vehicles that a person has not filed evidence of insurance or bond creates a presumption that the vehicle was uninsured. (Ins.C. 11580.4; see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1193.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) At-Will Employment.

Cross-Reference: 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §271.

(3) Compensable Injuries: Peace Officer's Heart Trouble. See Pellerin v. Kern County Employees' Retirement Assn. (2006) 145 C.A.4th 1099, 1106, 52 C.R.3d 201 [Govt.C. 31720.5, which is part of County Employees' Retirement Law and contains language similar to Lab.C. 3212.5 (text, p. 244), creates presumption affecting burden of proof, not merely presumption affecting burden of producing evidence].

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §241.(4) Elections Code Presumptions.

(c) Execution date: If no execution date is shown, it is presumed that the affidavit was executed on or before the 15th day prior to the election, if (1) the affidavit is received by the county elections official on or before the 15th day prior to the election, or (2) the affidavit is postmarked on or before the 15th day prior to the election and received by mail by the county elections official. (Elec.C. 2154(c), as amended in 2000.)(8) Minor Not Fit for Juvenile Treatment.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §837.

(10) Uninsured Employer's Negligence. See Huang v. L.A. Haute (2003) 106 C.A.4th 284, 291, 130 C.R.2d 619 [presumption of Lab.C. 3708 does not remove employee's burden of proving that injury occurred in scope of employment].

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §53.

(11) Uninsured Motorist.

Cross-Reference: The discussion of Ins.C. 11580.4 has been transferred to 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §210.

111 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

C. Nonstatutory Presumptions.

1. Scope of Employment and Agency.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 111

[§ 111] Scope of Employment and Agency.

A nonstatutory "inference," which should now be regarded as a presumption (supra, §103), is invoked in automobile litigation where an employer is charged with responsibility for negligence of the operator (respondeat superior). If it is shown that the operator was an employee, and the car being driven belonged to the operator's employer, an "inference" arises that it was being driven within the scope of employment. (Westberg v. Willde (1939) 14 C.2d 360, 371, 94 P.2d 590; Bushnell v. Tashiro (1931) 115 C.A. 563, 569, 2 P.2d 550; Rosenberg v. Berry (1950) 101 C.A.2d 526, 532, 225 P.2d 620; Halbert v. Berlinger (1954) 127 C.A.2d 6, 17, 273 P.2d 274; see 13 Cal. L. Rev. 474; 19 Cal. L. Rev. 327.)

In Nash v. Wright (1947) 82 C.A.2d 467, 186 P.2d 686, decedent was killed by a truck negligently driven by W, an employee of B. In the wrongful death action, W had disappeared, and B offered testimony (1) that W had used the truck, contrary to instructions, for personal purposes, and had been discharged; and (2) that record title to the truck was in P Co., not B. Plaintiff showed that the truck had B's name on a sign bolted to it, and was part of a pool used by B and P Co. The trial court directed the jury to return a verdict against plaintiff. Held, this was error. Plaintiff's evidence, together with various presumptions of ownership (e.g., from possession, and from exercising acts of ownership--Ev.C. 637, 638, supra, §§74, 75), justified the "inference" that B was in practical effect the owner of the truck for the purpose of liability under the driving with permission law (Veh.C. 17150, infra, §112). And, because W was driving his employer's truck, the further "inference" that W was acting within the scope of his employment could be drawn. (82 C.A.2d 473, 474.) (See also 8 A.L.R.3d 826 [inference of agency or employment from name, color, etc., of taxicab].)

Even if there is no proof of employment, it has been suggested that an "inference" of agency arises from a showing that the operator was a member of the family group of the owner and that he or she had permission to use the car. (See Sanfilippo v. Lesser (1922) 59 C.A. 86, 88, 210 P. 44; Stewart v. Norsigian (1944) 64 C.A.2d 540, 553, 149 P.2d 46, 150 P.2d 554.) However, where nothing is shown but the ownership of a car by the defendant, the identity of the driver being undisclosed, no "inference" of agency arises. (Wilson v. Droege (1930) 110 C.A. 578, 582, 294 P. 726.) Nor does it arise from a showing that the driver was operating the car with the permission of the owner, without a further showing that the driver was an employee or belonged to the owner's family group. (Stewart v. Norsigian, supra, 64 C.A.2d 553; Soils v. Oilfields Trucking Co. (1979) 90 C.A.3d 349, 352, 153 C.R. 371 [following Norsigian]; and see 2 McCormick 5th, §§343, 344; 19 Cal. L. Rev. 327.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §§343, 344.

112 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

C. Nonstatutory Presumptions.

2. Driving With Permission.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 112

[§ 112] Driving With Permission.

Even where it is not possible to show acts in the scope of employment (see supra, §111), proof of ownership and employment gives rise to an "inference" that the employee was driving with the owner's permission under Veh.C. 17150 (imposing liability on owner for operator's acts where vehicle was driven with owner's permission; see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1028). (Blank v. Coffin (1942) 20 C.2d 457, 460, 126 P.2d 868 ["If the evidence shows that an automobile was being driven by an employee of the owner at the time of an accident, the jury may infer that the employee was operating the automobile with the permission of the owner"]; Hicks v. Reis (1943) 21 C.2d 654, 659, 134 P.2d 788; Burgess v. Cahill (1945) 26 C.2d 320, 324, 158 P.2d 393 [rule applied where employee's wife was driving car but employee was in car with her]; Marquez v. Enterprise Rent-A-Car (1997) 53 C.A.4th 319, 323, 61 C.R.2d 557 [noting in dictum that principal/agent relationship creates strong inference of implied permission].)

In Flemmer v. Monckton (1946) 73 C.A.2d 271, 166 P.2d 380, defendants employer and employee both testified that the negligent employee had wrongfully taken a truck for a personal errand in violation of express instructions restricting the use of that truck (which had no vehicle license) to the employer's premises. Held, however, the "inference" of driving with permission was properly drawn by the trial court on proof of the employer-employee relationship and the ownership of the car. (73 C.A.2d 274.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1260.

113 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

X. PRESUMPTIONS NOT IN EVIDENCE CODE

C. Nonstatutory Presumptions.

3. Other Judicially Declared Presumptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 113

[§ 113] Other Judicially Declared Presumptions.

The judicial presumption (now codified) most frequently invoked in litigation is res ipsa loquitur, fully considered in this Chapter. (See infra, §114 et seq.) Other important presumptions, treated elsewhere, are:

(1) Attorney's Authority. The attorney's status and power to act for a client create a strong presumption that the attorney acted within the scope of his or her employment and authority. (Gagnon Co. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 C.2d 448, 460, 289 P.2d 466; Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Fink (1956) 141 C.A.2d 332, 335, 296 P.2d 843; see 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §263.)

(2) Bilateral Contract. The rule of interpretation favoring a bilateral rather than a unilateral contract has been expressed in terms of a presumption. (See Davis v. Jacoby (1934) 1 C.2d 370, 380, 34 P.2d 1026; 17A Am.Jur.2d (1991 ed.), Contracts §5; 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §15.)

(3) Deed: Delivery Presumed From Recordation or Possession. Recordation of a deed at the request of the grantor raises a presumption of delivery with intent to convey the interest set forth in the deed. (Butler v. Butler (1961) 188 C.A.2d 228, 233, 10 C.R. 382; see 23 Am.Jur.2d (1983 ed.), Deeds §165; 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §175.) And possession of the deed by the grantee raises the same presumption. (Estate of Galvin (1952) 114 C.A.2d 354, 360, 250 P.2d 333; Estate of Pieper (1964) 224 C.A.2d 670, 685, 37 C.R. 46; see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §175; 13 Proof of Facts 483, 489.)

(4) Employment Discrimination. In a civil rights action under 42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(a), for unlawful employment discrimination, plaintiff employee's establishment of a prima facie case in effect creates a presumption that defendant employer unlawfully discriminated against plaintiff. This presumption places on defendant the burden of producing evidence that the adverse employment actions were taken for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason. (St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S.Ct. 2742, 2747, 125 L.Ed.2d 407, 416, 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, Supp., §737A.)

(5) Housing Discrimination. In a housing discrimination case under the federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C., §1982), if the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case creating a presumption of discrimination, the burden shifts to the defendant to rebut the presumption by producing evidence that the plaintiff was rejected for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason. If the defendant does so, the plaintiff must then demonstrate that the proffered reason was not the true reason. This burden merges with the ultimate burden of persuading the court that the plaintiff has been the victim of intentional discrimination. (Barber v. Rancho Mortg. & Inv. Corp. (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1819, 1834, 1835, 32

C.R.2d 906, citing St. Mary's Honor Center, supra; 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, Supp., §737A.)

(6) Will: Due Execution. Upon proof of the genuine signatures of a testator and attesting witness, a presumption of due execution of a will arises, which is applied not only where witnesses are dead, unavailable, or unable to testify or recollect, but also where they are adverse and corrupt. Hence, this presumption may justify admission of the will to probate in spite of testimony by the attesting witnesses of lack of compliance with statutory formalities. (See Estate of Pitcairn (1936) 6 C.2d 730, 733, 59 P.2d 90; Estate of Braue (1941) 45 C.A.2d 502, 505, 114 P.2d 386; Estate of Browne (1958) 159 C.A.2d 99, 101, 323 P.2d 827; 40 A.L.R.2d 1223; 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §204.)

(7) Will: Undue Influence. A presumption of undue influence arises where a beneficiary is in a confidential relationship with the testator, actively participates in procuring execution of the will, and unduly profits by it. (See Estate of Clegg (1978) 87 C.A.3d 594, 602, 151 C.R. 158; 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §192.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Bilateral Contract.

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §106.

(2a) (New) Cause of Injury. There is a general, rebuttable presumption that plaintiffs have knowledge of the wrongful cause of their injury. In order to rebut that presumption, a plaintiff whose complaint shows on its face that the claim would be barred by the statute of limitations without the benefit of the discovery rule must specifically plead facts to show the time and manner of discovery, and the inability to have made earlier discovery despite reasonable diligence. (Grisham v. Philip Morris U.S.A. (2007) 40 C.4th 623, 638, 54 C.R.3d 735, 151 P.3d 1151.)

(3) Deed: Delivery Presumed From Recordation or Possession.

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §295.(4) Employment Discrimination.

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §870.

(5) Housing Discrimination.

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §870.

(6) Will: Due Execution.

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §147.

(7) Will: Undue Influence.

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §135.

114 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

A. Nature of Doctrine.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 114

[§ 114] In General.

The most important of the presumptions formerly termed "inferences" is that of negligence, embodied in the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur ("the thing speaks for itself").

The supposed three conditions that make the doctrine applicable have been stated as follows: (1) The accident must be caused by an agency or instrumentality under the exclusive control of the defendant; (2) the accident must be of a type that ordinarily does not happen unless someone is negligent; (3) it must not have been due to any voluntary act or contributory fault of the plaintiff. When these conditions are shown, a presumption arises that the accident arose from the defendant's want of proper care. (See generally Michener v. Hutton (1928) 203 C. 604, 609, 265 P. 238; Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 C.2d 486, 490, 154 P.2d 687; Seeley v. Combs (1966) 65 C.2d 127, 130, 52 C.R. 578, 416 P.2d 810, infra, §125 [conditions shown]; Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 C.4th 820, 825, 15 C.R.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624, infra, §151; Roddiscraft v. Skelton Logging Co. (1963) 212 C.A.2d 784, 793, 28 C.R. 277, citing the text; Cordova v. Ford (1966) 246 C.A.2d 180, 186, 54 C.R. 508 [conditions not shown]; Gotcher v. Metcalf (1970) 6 C.A.3d 96, 102, 85 C.R. 566, infra, §131, citing the text; Kohler v. Aspen Airways (1985) 171 C.A.3d 1193, 1201, 1202, 214 C.R. 720, infra, §128 [accident was not type that ordinarily only happens because of negligence]; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2509; 57B Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence §§1819 et seq., 2074 et seq.; 48 Cal. L. Rev. 252; 38 So. Cal. L. Rev. 740; 7 Stanf. L. Rev. 482; 17 Stanf. L. Rev. 768; 8 U.S.F. L. Rev. 343; 84 A.L.R.2d 697; 59 A.L.R.4th 201 [action involving multiple nonmedical defendants]; 67 A.L.R.4th 544 [action involving multiple medical defendants]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 4.00 et seq.; for instructions, see infra, §§126, 127; on effect of specific pleading or proof, see infra, §§123, 124.)

In Seeley v. Combs, supra, the court said: "The inferences resulting from the application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur are but a form of circumstantial evidence. The use of that battered and somewhat ambiguous phrase does not change the fact that what we are talking about is a special application of the rules surrounding the use and weight of circumstantial evidence ... and that the doctrine is applicable to nonjury as well as jury cases." (65 C.2d 130.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §1163 et seq.; CACI, No. 417 [res ipsa loquitur]. West's Key Number Digest, Negligence k.1610

115 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

A. Nature of Doctrine.

2. Theory of Probability of Negligence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 115

[§ 115] Theory of Probability of Negligence.

Various attempts, not entirely consistent, have been made to explain the res ipsa loquitur doctrine. (See cases and notes cited supra, §114.) One of the most frequently cited discussions of the subject is found in Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 247 P.2d 344, where the court explained that the probability of negligence is central to the doctrine: The notion that what has happened in the past, under the same conditions, will probably happen in the future, is both a reason for the doctrine and a basic condition for its application. (39 C.2d 442.) The court restated the doctrine as follows: "[R]es ipsa loquitur applies where the accident is of such a nature that it can be said, in the light of past experience, that it probably was the result of negligence by someone and that the defendant is probably the person who is responsible. In determining whether such probabilities exist with regard to a particular occurrence, the courts have relied both upon common knowledge and the testimony of expert witnesses, and they have considered the circumstances relating to the accident in each particular case, such as the extent of control exercised by the defendant, the plaintiff's own conduct, the likelihood of negligence by some third person, and, in some situations, evidence that the defendant is better able than the plaintiff to explain what happened. All of these matters have been treated as aids to help the courts in determining whether the accident was of such a nature that the injury was more probably than not the result of the defendant's negligence." (39 C.2d 446.)

The Zentz theory, sometimes described as the "conditional res ipsa loquitur" doctrine, has been consistently followed. (See Borenkraut v. Whitten (1961) 56 C.2d 538, 547, 15 C.R. 635, 364 P.2d 467; Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 C.3d 593, 597, 108 C.R. 364, 510 P.2d 724; Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 C.3d 351, 362, 124 C.R. 193, 540 P.2d 33; Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 C.4th 820, 828, 15 C.R.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624, infra, §151; Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equipment (1960) 184 C.A.2d 724, 731, 7 C.R. 879; Gicking v. Kimberlin (1985) 170 C.A.3d 73, 75, 215 C.R. 834.)

The theory, however, is something less than a formula, for the attempt to "balance the probabilities" often leads to sharp disagreement and some inconsistency in results. (See, e.g., Fowler v. Seaton (1964) 61 C.2d 681, 686, 39 C.R. 881, 394 P.2d 697, infra, §116; Quintal v. Laurel Grove Hosp. (1964) 62 C.2d 154, 164, 41 C.R. 577, 397 P.2d 161, infra, §139.) And the following observation in Cho v. Kempler (1960) 177 C.A.2d 342, 2 C.R. 167, perhaps offers a more realistic explanation:

"The increasing use of res ipsa loquitur exemplifies the growing recognition of the courts of the special obligations which arise from particular relationships. Prosser ... points out that 'where the particular defendant is in a position of some special responsibility toward the plaintiff or the public' ... the doctrine is designed to protect the dependent party from unexplained injury at the hands of one in whom he has reposed trust. The device 'has been used by the courts, consciously or otherwise, as a deliberate instrument of policy imposing a procedural disadvantage upon the defendant which will require him to establish his freedom from negligence or to pay.' ... In an integrated society where individuals become inevitably dependent upon others for the exercise of due care, where these relationships are closely interwoven with our daily living, the requirement for explanation is not too great a burden to impose upon those who wield the instruments of injury and whose due care is vital to life itself." (177 C.A.2d 348, 349.)

Thus, even though the doctrine is inapplicable where there is no balance of probabilities in favor of negligence, "it may apply where the cause of the injury is a mystery, if there is a reasonable and logical inference that defendant was negligent and that such negligence caused the injury." (Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 C.A.3d 755, 762, 107 C.R. 629.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

116 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

A. Nature of Doctrine.

3. Defendant's Superior Knowledge.

a. As a Factor Justifying Application.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 116

[§ 116] As a Factor Justifying Application.

"[T]he particular force and justice of the rule, regarded as a presumption throwing upon the party charged the duty of producing evidence, consists in the circumstance that the chief evidence of the true cause, whether culpable or innocent, is practically accessible to him but inaccessible to the injured person." (Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 C.2d 486, 490, 154 P.2d 687 [quoting Wigmore].) Thus, superior knowledge of the defendant may be a persuasive reason for extending application of the doctrine to new situations. (See Ybarra v. Spangard, supra, and other multiple defendant cases relaxing the control requirement, infra, §§147, 148; Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 445, 247 P.2d 344, infra, §142; Fowler v. Seaton (1964) 61 C.2d 681, 687, 39 C.R. 881, 394 P.2d 697, infra, this section; Blackwell v. Hurst (1996) 46 C.A.4th 939, 945, 54 C.R.2d 209 [wrongful death action arising from alleged dental malpractice: the doctrine "is especially suited to a medical or dental malpractice setting in which the unwitting and often unconscious or semiconscious patient is at an evidentiary disadvantage because of his or her inability to demonstrate what occurred"]; 7 Stanf. L. Rev. 480, 493 [applicability of doctrine where multiple defendants sued].)

One commentator has gone so far as to suggest that the controversy concerning the so-called "conditions" of the doctrine can readily be resolved in favor of both sides: "At present there really are two branches to the doctrine. Under one branch, evidence that the defendants controlled an instrumentality that normally does not cause injury in the absence of negligence makes it more probable than not that the defendants were negligent and the cause of the plaintiff's injury. The other and newer branch of the doctrine applies where the defendant has superior knowledge and there is a substantial possibility that he was responsible. Here the courts feel that it is proper to put pressure on the defendants to force them to come forward with an explanation." (7 Stanf. L. Rev. 495.)

Fowler v. Seaton, supra, shows how the factor of superior knowledge (often assumed rather than demonstrated) can be used to strain the probability requirement (supra, §115) to the breaking point. By stipulation, the issue of applicability of the doctrine was decided by a nonsuit granted on the opening statement, which was to this effect: Plaintiff, a girl nearly 4 years old, was left in defendant's nursery school in the morning, perfectly well. When picked up by her mother in the evening, she had a large bump on her forehead, which caused cross-eyes and required considerable surgery. Because of her age or shock, she was unable to give any information about the accident, and the other children, also of tender years, were likewise unable to give any. The only explanation came from defendant, who, after inquiry, first said that the child wet her pants, then that a little boy had suddenly without warning hit her with his hands. Counsel asserted that the evidence would show that the child no longer wet her pants, and that medical proof would show that such a blow would not cause such a concussion.

Reversing the judgment of nonsuit, the court stressed the special duty of supervision in a nursery school (61 C.2d 688), and held that the jury could have found a probability of violation in defendant's efforts to conceal the facts:

"Here we have a severe and unusual injury, one that does not normally occur in nursery schools if the children are properly supervised. We have a volunteer explanation that was inferably false, and, when faced with a demand to explain, the proffering of another inferably false explanation. We have a case where it appears that the plaintiff did not contribute to her own injuries. Thus the proffered evidence showed the existence of a duty of careful supervision owed by defendant to plaintiff. Under the circumstances it is inferable that defendant had a consciousness of guilt, knew the cause of the injury, was under a duty to explain, and was trying to conceal it. Thus it may be reasonably inferred that the duty was violated. Certainly it is more probable than not that the injury was the result of defendant's faulty supervision. Thus the jury could find that the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur is applicable, and for that reason it was error to grant the nonsuit." (61 C.2d 690.)

Two dissenters assert that "the majority opinion--when stripped of its tone of moral indignation--in effect holds defendant absolutely liable for this unexplained accident." (61 C.2d 691.) They argue that reasonable supervision is all that is required of any school; that plaintiff made no attempt, by discovery proceedings, to find out what kind of supervision was given; that the assertions in the opening statement did not justify the inference of false explanations indicating a consciousness of guilt, for it was equally inferable that defendant herself may not have known what caused the injury. They conclude that the decision allowed the case to go to the jury on a mere showing that the accident happened and the defendant was unable to produce a satisfactory explanation. (61 C.2d 697.) (See 17 Stanf. L. Rev. 768 [Fowler]; 38 So. Cal. L. Rev. 740 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Negligence k.1615

117 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

A. Nature of Doctrine.

3. Defendant's Superior Knowledge.

b. Not a Condition.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 117

[§ 117] Not a Condition.

Some early opinions, misconceiving the superior knowledge factor as a limitation, declared that the doctrine was inapplicable where, under the facts, the information as to cause was no more accessible to the defendant than to the plaintiff. (See Alexander v. Wong Yick (1938) 25 C.A.2d 265, 269, 77 P.2d 476, listing prior cases; Billeter v. Rhodes & Jamieson (1951) 104 C.A.2d 137, 147, 231 P.2d 93.)

This view has been repudiated: "[T]he doctrine may be applied even though the defendant is not in a better position than plaintiff to explain what occurred if it appears more probable than not that the injury resulted from negligence on the part of defendant." (Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 445, 247 P.2d 344; Seffert v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1961) 56 C.2d 498, 501, 15 C.R. 161, 364 P.2d 337; Di Mare v. Cresci (1962) 58 C.2d 292, 299, 23 C.R. 772, 373 P.2d 860 [disapproving inconsistent language in Billeter]; Khanoyan v. All Amer. Sports Enterprises (1964) 229 C.A.2d 785, 790, 40 C.R. 596; see 17 Stanf. L. Rev. 769 ["inclusion [of this element] in the doctrine has been criticized"].)

In Khanoyan, plaintiff was a paying spectator in the 12th row of the grandstand at a "Destruction Derby," in which the drivers of a number of "jalopies" deliberately collided until the winner was decided--the driver of the last operable vehicle. A portion of a fan blade fell off a colliding vehicle and struck plaintiff. Held, judgment for defendant reversed for refusal to instruct on the doctrine. The crucial question was whether defendant took proper precautions to protect spectators from injury; many factors could have been considered by the jury, e.g., proximity of seats, nature and extent of barriers, care exercised in inspection of vehicles, and special precaution to prevent parts jarring loose. "Thus, while precise knowledge as to what struck plaintiff and from whence the missile came is known and undisputed, whether such occurrence was the result of negligence on the part of defendant due to a faulty protective fence, or whatever cause, was an issue for the jury and concerning which plaintiff was entitled to the application of the doctrine." (229 C.A.2d 793.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

118 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR B. Codification of Doctrine.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 118

[§ 118] Codification of Doctrine.

In 1969, the California Law Revision Commission recommended that res ipsa loquitur be codified as a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence, in conformity with the existing case law. (See 9 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 141, citing the text.) "The result will be that, as under prior law, the finding of negligence is required when the facts giving rise to the doctrine have been established unless the adverse party comes forward with contrary evidence. If contrary evidence is produced, the trier of fact will then be required to weigh the conflicting evidence--deciding for the party relying on the doctrine if the inference of negligence preponderates in convincing force, and deciding for the adverse party if it does not." (Report, p. 142.)

The 1970 Legislature accordingly enacted Ev.C. 646, characterizing the "judicial doctrine" as a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence, and stating the right to a conditional res ipsa loquitur instruction as follows:

"If the evidence, or facts otherwise established, would support a res ipsa loquitur presumption and the defendant has introduced evidence which would support a finding that he was not negligent or that any negligence on his part was not a proximate cause of the occurrence, the court may, and upon request shall, instruct the jury to the effect that:"

"(1) If the facts which would give rise to a res ipsa loquitur presumption are found or otherwise established, the jury may draw the inference from such facts that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant; and"

"(2) The jury shall not find that a proximate cause of the occurrence was some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant unless the jury believes, after weighing all the evidence in the case and drawing such inferences therefrom as the jury believes are warranted, that it is more probable than not that the occurrence was caused by some negligent conduct on the part of the defendant."

In Slater v. Kehoe (1974) 38 C.A.3d 819, 113 C.R. 790, the court said:

"The language of the statute and the legislative history clearly show that the mere introduction of evidence sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of the presumed fact causes the presumption, as a matter of law, to disappear. The legislative history also shows beyond dispute that this determination is to be made by the trial judge; if he finds there is evidence which, if believed, would rebut the presumption, he cannot give the jury the unqualified res ipsa instruction." (38 C.A.3d 833.)

The Law Revision Commission Comment to Ev.C. 646 states the three judicially established conditions of the doctrine, and points out that the facts that give rise to res ipsa loquitur are themselves circumstantial evidence of negligence. (See also 2 Pacific L. J. 414; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 4.02; Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 C.4th 820, 825, 826, 15 C.R.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624, infra, §151; Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 C.A.3d 755, 761, 107 C.R. 629, citing the text; Tobler v. Chapman (1973) 31 C.A.3d 568, 585, 107 C.R. 614; Pappas v. Carson (1975) 50 C.A.3d 261, 267, 123 C.R. 343; Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Trans. Co. (1977) 74 C.A.3d 762, 777, 142 C.R. 1, citing the text [jury must determine whether plaintiff has satisfied the three conditions]; Frantz v. San Luis Med. Clinic (1978) 81 C.A.3d 34, 42, 146 C.R. 146.)

The Commission also lists, and gives illustrative examples of, four varying sets of circumstances under which the doctrine may be applicable:

"(1) Where the facts giving rise to the doctrine are established as a matter of law (by the pleadings, by stipulation, by pretrial order, or by some other means) and there is no evidence sufficient to sustain a finding either that the accident resulted from some cause other than the defendant's negligence or that he exercised due care in all possible respects wherein he might have been negligent."

"(2) Where the facts giving rise to the doctrine are established as a matter of law, but the defendant has introduced evidence sufficient to sustain a finding either of his due care or of some cause for the accident other than his negligence."

"(3) Where the defendant introduces evidence tending to show the nonexistence of the essential conditions of the doctrine but does not introduce evidence to rebut the presumption."

"(4) Where the defendant introduces evidence to contest both the conditions of the doctrine and the conclusion that his negligence caused the accident." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 646.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See CACI, No. 417 [res ipsa loquitur].

119 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

C. Effect of Doctrine.

1. Plaintiff's Burden of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 119

[§ 119] Plaintiff's Burden of Proof.

Res ipsa loquitur is generally considered a rebuttable presumption. (See 2 McCormick 5th, §342; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2509; 57B Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence §§1920 et seq., 2077, 2078.) Former California cases, carrying out the theory that presumptions were only created by statute (supra, §48), insisted on characterizing it as an "inference." (See Hardin v. San Jose City Lines (1953) 41 C.2d 432, 436, 260 P.2d 63; Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co. (1954) 42 C.2d 682, 688, 268 P.2d 1041; Leonard v. Watsonville Community Hosp. (1956) 47 C.2d 509, 514, 305 P.2d 36.) However, later decisions gave the "inference" of res ipsa loquitur the same effect as a statutory presumption. (See Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co., supra, 42 C.2d 691; 43 Cal. L. Rev. 146; 48 Cal. L. Rev. 260.) (On uncertainty of the old law, see Villa v. Shaffer (1966) 242 C.A.2d 815, 818, 51 C.R. 856; 23 Cal. L. Rev. 169; 37 Cal. L. Rev. 218; 3 Santa Clara Lawyer 173; 1 Pacific L. J. 637.)

The problem of characterization was solved by the Evidence Code, under which a judicially created "inference" that meets the test of a presumption is regarded as one (see supra, §103). And Ev.C. 646 (supra, §118) classifies res ipsa loquitur as a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence. (See Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 C.A.3d 755, 761, 107 C.R. 629, citing the text; Slater v. Kehoe (1974) 38 C.A.3d 819, 832, 113 C.R. 790, supra, §118.)

Hence, application of the doctrine satisfies the plaintiff's first duty, that of offering a prima facie case to go to the jury; but ultimately the plaintiff must prove negligence by a preponderance of the evidence. (Scarborough v. Urgo (1923) 191 C. 341, 347, 216 P. 584; O'Neill v. San Francisco (1930) 209 C. 418, 420, 287 P. 449; Druzanich v. Criley (1942) 19 C.2d 439, 444, 122 P.2d 53; Allbritton v. Interstate Transit Lines (1939) 31 C.A.2d 149, 153, 87 P.2d 704; Kohl v. Disneyland (1962) 201 C.A.2d 780, 783, 20 C.R. 367; Frantz v. San Luis Med. Clinic (1978) 81 C.A.3d 34, 44, 146 C.R. 146; see 97 A.L.R.2d 522 [doctrine as ground for directed verdict in plaintiff's favor]; 12 Cal. L. Rev. 138 [weight of authority is that ultimate burden of proof does not shift]; 10 So. Cal. L. Rev. 166, 171 [same]; for argument that doctrine should be given effect of shifting burden of proof, see 48 Cal. L. Rev. 252, 256 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §1259 et seq.; 2 McCormick 6th, §342. West's Key Number Digest, Negligence k.1618 et seq.

120 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

C. Effect of Doctrine.

2. Defendant's Burden of Producing Evidence.

a. Rule and Test.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 120

[§ 120] Rule and Test.

(1) Decisions Prior to Evidence Code. The defendant had the initial burden of producing evidence (supra, §2); i.e., the defendant had to produce "evidence sufficient to meet the inference of negligence by offsetting or balancing it." (Hardin v. San Jose City Lines (1953) 41 C.2d 432, 437, 260 P.2d 63; see also Dierman v. Providence Hosp. (1947) 31 C.2d 290, 295, 188 P.2d 12; Talbert v. Ostergaard (1954) 129 C.A.2d 222, 228, 276 P.2d 880.)

The defendant satisfied this burden by producing evidence tending to show that the injury was due to natural causes, or that it could not reasonably have been anticipated, or that the defendant exercised due care in inspection, took precautions, etc. The trier of fact--jury or judge sitting without a jury--then could decide in favor of the defendant, and its decision would be affirmed. (See Williams v. Long Beach (1954) 42 C.2d 716, 718, 268 P.2d 1061; Danner v. Atkins (1956) 47 C.2d 327, 332, 303 P.2d 724; Roberts v. Trans World Airlines (1964) 225 C.A.2d 344, 352, 37 C.R. 291, infra, §121.)

(2) Effect of Evidence Code. Ev.C. 646 classifies res ipsa loquitur as a presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence. (See supra, §118.) Thus, under Ev.C. 604 (see supra, §55), the defendant's burden should merely be to introduce evidence that would support a finding of no negligence. Cases decided prior to the Evidence Code are of little value in construing the procedural effect of res ipsa loquitur under Ev.C. 604 and Ev.C. 646. (Slater v. Kehoe (1974) 38 C.A.3d 819, 832, footnote 11, 113 C.R. 790.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

121 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

C. Effect of Doctrine.

2. Defendant's Burden of Producing Evidence.

b. Illustrations.

1. Presumption Overcome.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 121

[§ 121] Presumption Overcome.

In Kohl v. Disneyland (1962) 201 C.A.2d 780, 20 C.R. 367, plaintiff rode in a horse-drawn "Surrey with the Fringe on Top" in defendant's amusement facility. The horses, for reasons not established, ran away and tipped over the vehicle. Held: (1) In a carrier case, the defendant must rebut the inference of negligence raised by the res ipsa loquitur doctrine with evidence that the carrier's duty of utmost care and diligence was met. (2) However, whether the evidence satisfies this burden is a question for the trier of fact; and here, the verdict for defendant was supported by proof that the horses were without runaway propensities, the driver was capable, and reasonable efforts were made to halt the horses. (201 C.A.2d 784.)

In Roberts v. Trans World Airlines (1964) 225 C.A.2d 344, 37 C.R. 291, a jet plane, landing on a slick runway, could not be stopped in time by use of ordinary methods, and the pilot turned it off into soft mud, injuring plaintiff passenger. The trial judge properly instructed on the doctrine, and the verdict was for defendants. Held, affirmed: (1) The pilot's conjectural opinion that a "shear wind" caused the accident was insufficient. (225 C.A.2d 354, citing the text.) (2) But proof of compliance with Federal Aviation Agency safety standards was substantial evidence of care which the jury could accept. (225 C.A.2d 357.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

122 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

C. Effect of Doctrine.

2. Defendant's Burden of Producing Evidence.

b. Illustrations.

2. Burden Not Satisfied.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 122

[§ 122] Burden Not Satisfied.

A typical mistaken approach is to offer "an explanation" of how the injury might have occurred without negligence, and to contend that this meets the burden. This contention was rejected in the second appeal in Ybarra v. Spangard (1949) 93 C.A.2d 43, 208 P.2d 445 (see infra, §147, for first decision). Plaintiff, after an operation, developed a condition which, he alleged, arose out of a traumatic injury. Defendants' expert witnesses offered the opinion that the probable cause was an infection, and each defendant (there were no other eyewitnesses) testified that he saw nothing occur during the operation that could have produced the condition. Held, the trial judge, sitting without a jury, was warranted in giving judgment for plaintiff if the explanation did not satisfy him. "It was for the trial judge to weigh the circumstantial evidence which made the prima facie case under the res ipsa rule against the positive testimony of the appellants and to determine whether the prima facie case had been met. ... There is nothing inherent in direct testimony which compels a trial court to accept it over the contrary inferences which may reasonably be drawn from circumstantial evidence." (93 C.A.2d 46.)

In Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 C.3d 351, 124 C.R. 193, 540 P.2d 33, a wrongful death action based on an airplane crash from which there were no survivors, plaintiff introduced sufficient evidence to satisfy all three conditions for the applicability of res ipsa loquitur as a matter of law. Defendant, however, argued that the crash could have resulted from causes other than the pilot's negligence. Held, negligence was properly established as a matter of law. After the presumption arose, defendant had the burden of introducing sufficient evidence to sustain a finding either that the accident resulted from some cause other than the pilot's negligence, or that the pilot had exercised due care in all possible respects where he might have been negligent. Arguments about other possible causes did not meet the burden. "Mere speculation of this sort is insufficient to discharge defendant's burden of explanation." (15 C.3d 365.)

To similar effect are Dierman v. Providence Hosp. (1947) 31 C.2d 290, 295, 188 P.2d 12 [suppressed evidence, presumed adverse, vitiated defendants' explanation]; Rose v. Melody Lane of Wilshire (1952) 39 C.2d 481, 487, 247 P.2d 335; Doke v. Pacific Crane & Rigging (1947) 80 C.A.2d 601, 607, 182 P.2d 284 [plaintiff cannot be deprived of benefits of doctrine "merely because some agency over which defendants had no control could have caused the accident"]; Talbert v. Ostergaard (1954) 129 C.A.2d 222, 229, 276 P.2d 880 [same]; Nelson v. American Airlines (1968) 263 C.A.2d 742, 746, 70 C.R. 33 [in action for injuries resulting from malfunction of airplane's automatic pilot, trial judge erred in finding presumption rebutted, where defendant's evidence showed neither definite cause of malfunction unconnected with defendant's lack of care, nor such overall care as to indicate that accident must have been due to some unknown but unpreventable cause]; Sanchez v. Bay General Hosp. (1981) 116 C.A.3d 776, 789, 172 C.R. 342 [in medical malpractice action in which res ipsa requirements were satisfied, defendant hospital failed to carry its burden of producing sufficient evidence to sustain finding that patient's death resulted from cause other than defendant's negligence or that defendant exercised due care in all respects in which it might have been negligent].

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

123 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR D. Effect of Specific Pleading, Proof, or Findings. 1. Specific Pleading.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 123

[§ 123] Specific Pleading.

The earlier cases held the doctrine inapplicable unless the plaintiff pleaded negligence generally: "The rule that plaintiff cannot rely upon the doctrine where he pleads only specific acts of negligence has been predicated upon the principle that he may not prove a case outside the scope of his pleading and to permit him to have an inference of negligence which embraces acts or omissions not set forth in the complaint would violate that principle." (Leet v. Union Pac. R. Co. (1944) 25 C.2d 605, 619, 155 P.2d 42.) This rule was later relaxed by decisions holding that, where negligence was pleaded both generally and specifically, the specific allegations merely operated to confine the inference to the particular acts specified. Still later, a further relaxation was made which in effect ignored the specific allegations for the purposes of the doctrine, and made the inference fully available under the general allegations. (See Leet case, supra, 25 C.2d 618, 619; 37 Cal. L. Rev. 183, 214; 2 A.L.R.3d 1335 [pleading of particular act of negligence as waiving reliance on res ipsa loquitur]; 4 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §§567, 568.)

The present rule is, therefore, that specific pleading will do no harm if negligence is also pleaded generally, but without a general allegation, the inference cannot be invoked. (On what constitutes general pleading for this purpose, see 4 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §567.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Negligence k.1624-

124 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

D. Effect of Specific Pleading, Proof, or Findings.

2. Specific Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 124

[§ 124] Specific Proof.

The theory that res ipsa loquitur is grounded in part on the superior knowledge possessed by or accessible to the defendant led some courts to hold the presumption inapplicable where this superior knowledge did not exist. This, it has been pointed out, is erroneous; the defendant's superior knowledge may be a reason for extending application of the doctrine, but its absence is not a reason for rejecting it. (See supra, §§116, 117.) So if the plaintiff, in a proper res ipsa loquitur case, does not stop with proof of the happening of the accident and await the defendant's explanation of its cause, but goes on with proof of one or more specific acts or omissions, the plaintiff is not for this reason deprived of the benefit of the doctrine. It is only when the plaintiff goes so far as to prove facts that dispel the presumption as a matter of law that the benefit is lost. (Leet v. Union Pac. R. Co. (1944) 25 C.2d 605, 621, 155 P.2d 42; Di Mare v. Cresci (1962) 58 C.2d 292, 299, 23 C.R. 772, 373 P.2d 860 [disapproving inconsistent language in McKenzie v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1962) 200 C.A.2d 731, 735, 19 C.R. 628]; Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 C.2d 554, 562, 563, 30 C.R. 521, 381 P.2d 377; Roddiscraft v. Skelton Logging Co. (1963) 212 C.A.2d 784, 803, 28 C.R. 277, quoting the text; Hudspeth v. Jaurequi (1965) 234 C.A.2d 526, 528, 44 C.R. 428; Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 C.3d 593, 599, 108 C.R. 364, 510 P.2d 724; see 37 Cal. L. Rev. 183, 212; 33 A.L.R.2d 791 [effect of evidence of specific negligence on availability of res ipsa loquitur].)

The court in the Di Mare case, supra, observed: "If the rule were otherwise, a plaintiff would be penalized for producing all of the evidence he has as to the cause of the accident, and in some cases the trier of fact might be denied evidence useful and relevant to the proper determination of the case." (58 C.2d 299.) (On the unavailability of the doctrine where, because of the introduction of specific evidence, the facts as to the accident's cause and the care exercised by defendant are shown as a matter of law, see Keeton v. Henning (1969) 1 C.A.3d 50, 54, 81 C.R. 424 [where there was no conflict as to manner in which accident occurred and what care defendant exercised, there was "clearly" no need to resort to res ipsa doctrine].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

125 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR D. Effect of Specific Pleading, Proof, or Findings. 3. Specific Findings.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 125

[§ 125] Specific Findings.

Even where the judge issues a statement of decision (see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §398 et seq.), the res ipsa doctrine may be available.

In Seeley v. Combs (1966) 65 C.2d 127, 52 C.R. 578, 416 P.2d 810, plaintiff, owner of a ranch, engaged defendant C to haul hay from the field and stack it in plaintiff's barn. Defendant backed his truck into the heavily stacked barn, heard his helper shout that the barn was on fire, drove his truck clear and saw flames leaping up the hay on the passenger side of the truck. At the trial, the helper was not available as a witness, and plaintiff relied on circumstantial evidence. Defendant asked for specific findings (now a statement of decision) under former C.C.P. 634. The judge found that defendant negligently drove his truck into the barn containing inflammable loose hay and straw, and that hot gas and sparks from the exhaust system caused the hay to ignite, proximately causing the damage. On appeal, defendant contended that the specific finding on causation was incompatible with res ipsa loquitur (cause not known). Held, judgment for plaintiff affirmed. Evidence of specific acts of negligence does not deprive a plaintiff of the benefit of the doctrine (see supra, §124), and it may be used to uphold a judgment even if it was not invoked at the trial or on appeal. (65 C.2d 132.) By analogy, therefore, the doctrine should be available in cases in which the judge finds the facts: "We see no reason for holding that a court cannot derive a specific ultimate fact from circumstantial evidentiary facts. If the critical evidence as to an issue is largely circumstantial, as sometimes happens, it is the only way that a court can comply with Code of Civil Procedure section 634 and make specific findings of ultimate facts." (65 C.2d 132.)

A strong dissent argued that there was a total absence of evidence to support the judge's specific finding, and that res ipsa loquitur could not save the judgment on appeal in this court trial because former C.C.P. 634 prohibited inferred findings against the appellant. (See 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §407.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

126 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

E. Instructions.

1. BAJI Forms.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 126

[§ 126] BAJI Forms.

Res ipsa loquitur instructions may be tailored to the state of the evidence (depending, for example, on whether or not the conditions for application of the doctrine are in dispute) and the nature of the case. (See 57B Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence §2035 et seq.) In California, BAJI (8th ed.) covers res ipsa loquitur in four general instructions and two medical negligence instructions, as follows:

(1) Res Ipsa Loquitur--Necessary Conditions for Application BAJI, (No. 4.00). "This conditional instruction of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine should never be given alone. It must be followed by BAJI 4.02 if there is evidence sufficient to support a finding that defendant was not negligent, or by Instruction 4.03 in the rare case where there is no evidence sufficient to support a finding." (Use Note to BAJI, No. 4.00, adding that in medical negligence cases, BAJI, No. 6.35 or BAJI, No. 6.36 should be used instead.) (See infra, this section.)

(2) Res Ipsa Loquitur--Necessary Conditions for Application--Injury or Accident Denied (BAJI, No. 4.01). This instruction is designed to be used "in lieu of BAJI 4.00 where there is a question whether the alleged accident or incident occurred or, if it occurred, whether plaintiff was injured thereby." (Use Note to BAJI, No. 4.01, adding that in medical negligence cases, BAJI, No. 6.36 should be used instead.)

(3) Res Ipsa Loquitur--Permissible Inference of Negligence (BAJI, No. 4.02). "The 'basic' instruction of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine must be preceded by BAJI 4.00 or BAJI 4.01, unless all three of the conditions for the application of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine are undisputed or are established as a matter of law by uncontradicted evidence or admissions." (Use Note to BAJI, No. 4.02, adding that in medical negligence cases where there is a question whether facts exist giving rise to the doctrine, BAJI, No. 4.02 must be preceded by BAJI, No. 6.35 and, if necessary, BAJI, No. 6.36.)

(4) Res Ipsa Loquitur--Presumption of Negligence (BAJI, No. 4.03). "This instruction is designed for use in conjunction with BAJI 4.00, where the existence of the conditional facts of res ipsa loquitur are in issue but there is no evidence sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of defendant's negligence." (Use Note to BAJI, No. 4.03, adding that the instruction may be used alone in the extremely rare situation where the conditional facts are undisputed or established as a matter of law, and there is no evidence sufficient to sustain a finding of the nonexistence of defendant's negligence.)

(5) Medical Negligence--Conditional Res Ipsa Loquitur (BAJI, No. 6.35). "This instruction should never be given alone. It must be followed by BAJI 4.02 if there is evidence sufficient to support a finding that there was no negligent conduct; or by BAJI 4.03 if there is not sufficient evidence to support such a finding." (Use Note to BAJI, No. 6.35, adding that the instruction is unnecessary and that BAJI, No. 4.02 may be given alone if all three conditions are established as a matter of law; also, that if there is an issue whether the treatment administered by the defendant was a cause of the injury complained of, BAJI, No. 6.36 should be given as a preliminary to BAJI, No. 6.35.)

(6) Medical Negligence--Necessity of Causal Relation Between Treatment and Injury--Res Ipsa Loquitur (BAJI, No. 6.36). "This instruction is designed for use where it must be determined whether the treatment administered is the cause of the complained of condition in order for res ipsa loquitur to be considered." (Use Note to BAJI, No. 6.36, adding that the instruction, if given, must be immediately followed by BAJI, No. 6.35.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §1350 et seq.

(1) Res Ipsa Loquitur--Necessary Conditions for Application (BAJI, No. 4.00). In the ninth edition, the language quoted in the text from the Use Note was changed to read: "This conditional instruction of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine should never be given alone. It must be followed by BAJI 4.02 if there is evidence sufficient to support a finding that defendant was not negligent, or by BAJI 4.03 in the rare case where there is no evidence sufficient to support such a finding." (See also CACI, No. 417 [res ipsa loquitur].)(5) Medical Negligence--Conditional Res Ipsa Loquitur (BAJI, No. 6.35). See CACI, No. 518 [conditional res ipsa loquitur in medical malpractice case].

127 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

E. Instructions.

2. Necessary Conditions for Application.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 127

[§ 127] Necessary Conditions for Application.

(1) Request by Plaintiff. The plaintiff must ask for a res ipsa instruction; the judge is not required to give one, absent a request. (Gagosian v. Burdick's Television & Appliances (1967) 254 C.A.2d 316, 318, 62 C.R. 70; see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §273.) And the judge is under no duty to correct an erroneous instruction requested by a party. (Clemens v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1970) 8 C.A.3d 1, 14, 87 C.R. 108 [proposed instruction included defendant to whom doctrine was not applicable]; see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §277.)

(2) Preliminary Instruction on Conditions of the Doctrine. The existence of the three conditions making the doctrine applicable (see supra, §114) is normally a question of fact for the jury. Whenever there is an issue of fact as to the existence of any of the conditions, it is error to instruct that "[f]rom the happening of the accident involved in this case as established by the evidence" the inference arises. (See Tallerico v. Labor Temple Assn. (1960) 181 C.A.2d 15, 21, 4 C.R. 880; Exploration Drilling Co. v. Heavy Transport (1963) 220 C.A.2d 397, 404, 33 C.R. 747.) And where the theory of the case is constructive control (infra, §§145, 146), the instructions must inform the jurors that before they may accord the plaintiff the benefit of the doctrine, they must believe that there were no intervening harmful forces. (See Gordon v. Aztec Brewing Co. (1949) 33 C.2d 514, 520, 203 P.2d 522 [error held not prejudicial where additional qualifying instructions given]; Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1949) 92 C.A.2d 130, 134, 206 P.2d 653 [instruction without sufficient qualification held reversible error]; Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co. (1954) 42 C.2d 682, 691, 268 P.2d 1041 [court should inform jury that plaintiffs "must show that the instrumentality which caused the damage was not mishandled or its condition otherwise changed after control was relinquished by the person against whom the doctrine is to be applied"].)

(3) Defendant's Burden of Producing Evidence. Pursuant to the holding in Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co., supra, 42 C.2d 691, and using the terminology of the Evidence Code, the jury should be instructed that the defendant must present evidence sufficient to support a finding that he or she was not negligent.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

128 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 1. Carriers.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 128

[§ 128] Carriers.

(1) Ordinary Carriers. Accidents on trains, streetcars, and buses furnish common examples of res ipsa loquitur cases. (See McIntosh v. Los Angeles Ry. Corp. (1936) 7 C.2d 90, 93, 59 P.2d 959 [streetcar, operating at excessive speed around curve, lurched and threw plaintiff out of window]; Hardin v. San Jose City Lines (1953) 41 C.2d 432, 436, 260 P.2d 63 [same]; Sinan v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1930) 103 C.A. 703, 708, 284 P. 1041 [train ran into open switch]; Freitas v. Peerless Stages (1952) 108 C.A.2d 749, 753, 239 P.2d 671 [bus stopped suddenly]; Adam v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1957) 154 C.A.2d 535, 539, 317 P.2d 642 [streetcar seat in front of passenger broke and fell on her]; Albers v. Greyhound Corp. (1970) 4 C.A.3d 463, 471, 84 C.R. 846 [consignee of heavy package injured when package fell apart shortly after carrier delivered it]; 33 A.L.R.2d 814, 820 [evidence of specific negligence as affecting reliance on res ipsa loquitur: sudden start or stop, or derailment]; 57 A.L.R.2d 5 [liability for injury caused by sudden start, stop, or lurch]; 58 A.L.R.2d 937 [liability for injury inflicted on passenger who has alighted]; 60 A.L.R.2d 642 [action under F.E.L.A.; sudden stop, start or jerk of train]; 93 A.L.R.3d 776 [application of doctrine where passenger injured boarding or alighting from carrier]; 68 A.L.R.4th 14, 62 [application of doctrine where ambulance service passenger injured].)

The doctrine was also applied where bus passengers were struck by suitcases that fell from the baggage racks while the buses were in operation. (Prunty v. Allred (1946) 73 C.A.2d 67, 72, 165 P.2d 935 [bus passed truck and came back to its own lane]; Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 78 C.A.2d 482, 487, 177 P.2d 977 [bus swayed and jolted while rounding sharp curve in highway].)

Mere proof of injury while riding in a carrier does not justify the inference; the basic conditions for application of the doctrine (see supra, §114) must be present. But the passenger need not prove that the movement or operation was unusual; it is enough to show that the injury resulted from movement of a vehicle in control of the defendant. (Mudrick v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1938) 11 C.2d 724, 728, 81 P.2d 950; Prunty v. Allred, supra, 73 C.A.2d 73; Dempsey v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1947) 79 C.A.2d 216, 218, 179 P.2d 34.)

(2) Airlines. Airplane collisions and crashes are treated in the same manner as other carrier cases. (See Smith v. O'Donnell (1932) 215 C. 714, 719, 12 P.2d 933; Roberts v. Trans World Airlines (1964) 225 C.A.2d 344, 351, 37 C.R. 291; Nelson v. American Airlines (1968) 263 C.A.2d 742, 746, 70 C.R. 33; Irwin v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 C.A.3d 709, 716, 184 C.R. 228; 25 A.L.R.4th 1237 [application of doctrine in aviation accidents]; 64 A.L.R.5th 235, 312 [collision in air or on ground].) (On private airplane accidents, see infra, §131.)

In Kohler v. Aspen Airways (1985) 171 C.A.3d 1193, 214 C.R. 720, the doctrine was found inapplicable to injuries arising from an airplane's encounter with clear air turbulence. Plaintiff alleged generally that defendant's negligence caused the airplane to drop 500 feet, and specifically that defendant should have followed a flight plan that would have minimized or avoided the effects of the turbulence. Defendant presented "overwhelming" evidence that the turbulence was unforeseeable and that the flight crew took an approved, safe route and handled all aspects of the flight properly. Held, plaintiff's proposed instructions on res ipsa loquitur were properly refused: Injuries arising from an airplane encountering air turbulence "cannot be said to ordinarily occur only because defendant was negligent." (171 C.A.3d 1202.)

(3) Escalators. An escalator in a department store is considered a common carrier, and the doctrine may be invoked in an action for injuries suffered in its use. (Vandagriff v. J.C. Penney Co. (1964) 228 C.A.2d 579, 582, 39 C.R. 671; see 33 A.L.R.2d 791, 829 [evidence of specific negligence as affecting reliance on res ipsa loquitur: escalators].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

129 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 2. Motor Vehicles.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 129

[§ 129] Motor Vehicles.

(1) In General. Where the element of control is satisfied, the doctrine should apply against the owner or operator of a motor vehicle. However, early cases held it inapplicable where the injury was caused by a collision between two or more vehicles, only one of which was in the control of the defendant. (See Keller v. Cushman (1930) 104 C.A. 186, 188, 285 P. 399; Gritsch v. Pickwick Stages System (1933) 131 C.A. 774, 778, 22 P.2d 554.)

Although the courts were initially reluctant to apply the doctrine in collision cases, they recognized an exception for cases involving common carriers: It was said that the high degree of care placed upon them justified the application of the doctrine even where there was more than one instrumentality involved. (See Stark v. Yellow Cab Co. (1949) 90 C.A.2d 217, 220, 202 P.2d 802 ["It is thoroughly established in this state that a passenger who is injured while riding in the vehicle of a carrier for hire is not deprived of the benefit of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur merely because the accident involved another vehicle not under the control of the carrier"]; 37 Cal. L. Rev. 204.) And the carrier exception was applied to an analogous situation involving ordinary vehicles in Godfrey v. Brown (1934) 220 C. 57, 63, 29 P.2d 165, where plaintiff was a passenger in one automobile that collided with another.

More recently, the doctrine has been held applicable in the following cases: Hudspeth v. Jaurequi (1965) 234 C.A.2d 526, 527, 44 C.R. 428 [defendant's car struck rear of car in which plaintiff was riding]; Getas v. Hook (1965) 236 C.A.2d 705, 715, 46 C.R. 249 [multi-car accident caused by icy roadway]; Mercer v. Perez (1968) 68 C.2d 104, 126, 65 C.R. 315, 436 P.2d 315 [plaintiffs' car was struck from behind by defendants' car]; Tobler v. Chapman (1973) 31 C.A.3d 568, 584, 107 C.R. 614 [head-on collision].

The doctrine was held inapplicable in Cordova v. Ford (1966) 246 C.A.2d 180, 186, 54 C.R. 508, involving a two-car intersection collision; but the court in Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 C.A.3d 986, 996, 111 C.R. 817, a boating case, suggested that, despite the focus on the exclusive control issue in Cordova, the real basis of the holding was simply that neither party's right-of-way could be established. (See also 71 A.L.R.2d 375 [injury from contact with open door or tailgate of motor vehicle]; 79 A.L.R.2d 153 [stopping on highway]; 79 A.L.R.2d 211 [turning over on highway]; 55 A.L.R.3d 1260 [accidental starting up of parked motor vehicle]; 18 Am.Jur. Trials 443, 485 [application of doctrine in unwitnessed automobile cases].)

(2) Action Against Manufacturer or Dealer. The doctrine may be invoked in an action for property damage resulting from a defect in the automobile. (See Ghera v. Ford Motor Co. (1966) 246 C.A.2d 639, 647, 55 C.R. 94 [new car properly driven for about 1,600 miles, suddenly developed fire in engine compartment]; Hinckley v. La Mesa R. V. Center (1984) 158 C.A.3d 630, 639, 205 C.R. 22 [relatively new motor home destroyed by fire]; 79 A.L.R.3d 346 [wheel detached from automobile].)

(3) Exception: Motor Vehicle and Animal. Injury to a motor vehicle or its passenger resulting from a collision with a domestic animal at large on a street or highway could be a proper case for the doctrine. (See 29 A.L.R.4th 431, 466.) But in California, Food & Ag.C. 16904 (replacing former Food & Ag.C. 423) provides that in a collision between a motor vehicle and a domestic animal on a highway, "there is no presumption or inference that the collision was due to negligence on behalf of the owner or the person in possession of the animal." (See Pepper v. Bishop (1961) 194 C.A.2d 731, 733, 15 C.R. 346 [applying former Food & Ag.C. 423].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

130 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR
F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine.
3. Boats.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 130

[§ 130] Boats.

The doctrine is applicable in actions against owners or operators of motor boats. (See Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 C.2d 554, 559, 30 C.R. 521, 381 P.2d 377 [water skiing accident]; Press v. Lyford (1974) 36 C.A.3d 986, 994, 111 C.R. 817 [same]; 63 A.L.R.2d 343, 358 [action against owner or operator of motor boat]; 1 A.L.R.3d 642 [action involving injury or death on or about ship]; 35 A.L.R.4th 104, 123 [action against owner or operator of pleasure boat for injury or death of passenger].) However, it will not be applied where there is no balance of probabilities in favor of negligence, or where the element of control is negated by the intervention of natural forces. (Carrick v. Pound (1969) 276 C.A.2d 689, 692, 693, 81 C.R. 234, infra, §142 [sudden swell required defendant to decelerate boat, causing passenger to fall].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

131 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 4. Private Airplanes.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 131

[§ 131] Private Airplanes.

(1) In General. In Newing v. Cheatham (1975) 15 C.3d 351, 124 C.R. 193, 540 P.2d 33, the court said:

"Whether aircraft accidents are more often than not the result of negligence is a question that has vexed the courts of many jurisdictions for decades. ... According to Prosser, many early cases took the position that not enough was known about the hazards of flight to permit an inference of negligence to arise from the mere fact of a plane crash. ... Advances in the safety and frequency of air travel, however, have led to a trend in the opposite direction. Thus, while judicial opinion on the subject is by no means unanimous, res ipsa loquitur, over the years, has been applied to an increasing variety of aircraft mishaps." (15 C.3d 360.) (See also Mittelman v. Seifert (1971) 17 C.A.3d 51, 79, 94 C.R. 654 [inference of negligence not rebutted]; 13 Am.Jur. Trials 557, 715, 726 [res ipsa loquitur in light aircraft litigation]; 25 A.L.R.4th 1237 [res ipsa loquitur in aviation accidents].)

(2) Collisions. In Gotcher v. Metcalf (1970) 6 C.A.3d 96, 85 C.R. 566, plaintiffs' decedent was killed following the collision of two single-engine planes. The pilot and passengers in the other plane survived, and the pilot testified that he did not see the first plane before the accident. Held, the trial judge properly refused to give plaintiffs' requested conditional res ipsa loquitur instruction. Because two moving planes were involved, the accident was not caused by an instrumentality under defendant's exclusive control. (6 C.A.3d 102, citing the text.) And the evidence failed to establish that "it is more probable than not that the accident was caused by the defendant's negligence or that he could have avoided it." (6 C.A.3d 103.) A concurring justice pointed out that plaintiffs had gone to trial against only one participant in the accident, i.e., the pilot of the other plane, rather than the pilots of both planes. "To apply res ipsa loquitur piecemeal in cases of concurring causation seems to me to place an unfair burden on the one party who is brought to trial." (6 C.A.3d 105.)

The dissenting justice argued that, in a collision of two or more vehicles, the exclusive control condition is met "if the defendant was in exclusive control of one of the vehicles, if the evidence warrants a finding by the jury that it is more probable than not that the collision could have been avoided regardless of the fault of the other driver had defendant been exercising the degree of care required of him, and if the evidence as to why defendant failed to do so is 'practically accessible' to him and inaccessible to the injured person." (6 C.A.3d 109.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

132 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 5. Falling Objects.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 132

[§ 132] Falling Objects.

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur originated in a falling object case (see 37 Cal. L. Rev. 183), and such cases continue to be common. (See Raber v. Tumin (1951) 36 C.2d 654, 657, 226 P.2d 574 [ladder fell on plaintiff invitee in defendant's store]; Michener v. Hutton (1928) 203 C. 604, 607, 265 P. 238 [vent pipe fell on plaintiff, working on floor below]; Mintzer v. Wilson (1937) 21 C.A.2d 85, 88, 68 P.2d 370 [plaster fell from ceiling on plaintiff, asleep in hotel bed]; Helms v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1937) 21 C.A.2d 711, 713, 70 P.2d 247 [glass globe of electrolier fell on plaintiff, standing on sidewalk]; Khanoyan v. All Amer. Sports Enterprises (1964) 229 C.A.2d 785, 40 C.R. 596, supra, §117 [flying debris from colliding vehicles in "Destruction Derby"]; 24 A.L.R.2d 643 [object falling from ceiling of public resort]; 33 A.L.R.2d 791, 826 [evidence of specific negligence as affecting reliance on doctrine: falling objects]; 41 A.L.R.2d 932 [object falling from train]; 66 A.L.R.2d 1255 [object falling from motor vehicle]; 81 A.L.R.2d 897 [glass falling from window, door, or wall]; 86 A.L.R.2d 838, 852 [tenant's injury from falling electrical equipment]; 97 A.L.R.2d 664, 674 [falling utility pole]; 97 A.L.R.2d 1431, 1444 [injury to person on street from object falling or thrown from building]; 61 A.L.R.4th 27 [falling object in store].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

133 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 6. Defective Appliances and Equipment.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 133

[§ 133] Defective Appliances and Equipment.

Mishaps involving machinery and equipment of various kinds often give rise to the res ipsa loquitur presumption.

(1) Vehicles and Their Accessories. (See Stanford v. Richmond Chase Co. (1954) 43 C.2d 287, 292, 272 P.2d 764 [mechanized forklift used to load boxes on truck]; McLaughlin v. Lasater (1954) 129 C.A.2d 432, 434, 277 P.2d 41 [automobile wheel came off]; Nungaray v. Pleasant Valley Lima Bean Growers & Warehouse Assn. (1956) 142 C.A.2d 653, 660, 300 P.2d 285, infra, §154 [blocks to hold plaintiff's truck were too flat and truck moved]; Khanoyan v. All Amer. Sports Enterprises (1964) 229 C.A.2d 785, 790, 40 C.R. 596 [injury from flying fan blade at destruction derby]; Springer v. Reimers (1970) 4 C.A.3d 325, 332, 84 C.R. 486 [truck-trailer allegedly "jerked" suddenly]; Preissman v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 1 C.A.3d 841, 852, 82 C.R. 108 [automobile parking gear failed to hold; parked car rolled into attendant]; 55 A.L.R.3d 1260 [accidental starting up of parked motor vehicle].)

(2) Elevators, Hoists, Scaffolding, etc. (See Giardini v. Amship Corp. (1947) 81 C.A.2d 751, 767, 185 P.2d 94 [collapse of scaffold on which man was working]; Talbert v. Ostergaard (1954) 129 C.A.2d 222, 227, 276 P.2d 880 [electrical swing stage used by painter gave way and fell]; Rodin v. American Can Co. (1955) 133 C.A.2d 524, 529, 284 P.2d 530 [construction elevator fell]; Keller v. Morrison-Knudsen Co. (1957) 149 C.A.2d 205, 206, 308 P.2d 370 [hoist from which pipe fell on plaintiff]; Rollins v. Department of Water & Power (1962) 209 C.A.2d 526, 535, 26 C.R. 162 [delivery person's foot was caught between elevator shaft wall and elevator floor]; 22 A.L.R.2d 1176 [scaffold injuries]; 56 A.L.R.2d 1059 [elevator injuries]; 17 Am.Jur. Trials 755, 803 [elevator shaft accidents].)

(3) Sprinklers and Water Mains. (See Juchert v. California Water Service Co. (1940) 16 C.2d 500, 515, 106 P.2d 886 [leaking water main]; Buffums' v. Long Beach (1931) 111 C.A. 327, 329, 295 P. 540 [same]; Hercules Powder Co. v. Automatic Sprinkler Corp. of America (1957) 151 C.A.2d 387, 395, 311 P.2d 907 [automatic sprinkler system failed to work and fire caused explosion].)

(4) Heating and Electrical Equipment. (See Knell v. Morris (1952) 39 C.2d 450, 454, 247 P.2d 352 [leaking water heater]; Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equipment (1960) 184 C.A.2d 724, 731, 7 C.R. 879 [gas burner, used to dry sand and gravel for blacktop road paving mix, exploded]; Pappas v. Carson (1975) 50 C.A.3d 261, 267, 123 C.R. 343 [fire started either from defendant's overloading of electrical circuits or from defect in installation of wiring]; 3 A.L.R.2d 1448 [injuries from heating unit or electrical appliance]; 21 A.L.R.4th 929 [cause of liability for real property fires].)

(5) Furniture. (See Rose v. Melody Lane of Wilshire (1952) 39 C.2d 481, 486, 247 P.2d 335, infra, §144 [barstool with defective pin fastening it to base broke and caused plaintiff to fall]; Keena v. Scales (1964) 61 C.2d 779, 782, 40

C.R. 65, 394 P.2d 809 [office swivel chair fell when tilted backward]; 21 A.L.R.2d 420 [injury from defect in or fall of seat]; Owens v. White Memorial Hosp. (1956) 138 C.A.2d 634, 638, 292 P.2d 288 [hospital bed with broken safety spring fell on plaintiff when she pressed release pedal].)

(6) Other Appliances and Equipment. (See Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co. (1954) 42 C.2d 682, 687, 268 P.2d 1041 [sealed metal drums containing insecticide used in cropdusting]; Rafter v. Dubrock's Riding Academy (1946) 75 C.A.2d 621, 627, 171 P.2d 459 [slipping of saddle on rented riding horse]; Emerick v. Raleigh Hills Hosp. (1982) 133 C.A.3d 575, 583, 184 C.R. 92 [sink on which patient in alcoholic rehabilitation hospital leaned or sat collapsed].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Correction: Page 270, line 12, "Giondini" should be "Biondini".

134 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 7. Explosions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 134

[§ 134] Explosions.

Injuries from the explosion of tanks or other receptacles containing flammable gases are proper res ipsa loquitur cases. (See Chutuk v. Southern Calif. Gas Co. (1933) 218 C. 395, 397, 23 P.2d 285 [explosion of gas in service pipe]; Hinds v. Wheadon (1942) 19 C.2d 458, 460, 121 P.2d 724 [explosion of dehydrator tank]; Dierman v. Providence Hosp. (1947) 31 C.2d 290, 295, 188 P.2d 12 [tank of nitrous oxide used as anesthetic]; Rohar v. Osborne (1955) 133 C.A.2d 345, 350, 284 P.2d 125 [kerosene weed burner; see 7 Hastings L. J. 106]; Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equipment (1960) 184 C.A.2d 724, 732, 7 C.R. 879; 3 A.L.R.2d 1453 [gas stoves, furnaces, etc.]; 34 A.L.R.5th 1 [gas leak causing explosion].) The doctrine has also been applied in the case of explosions not involving flammable materials. (See Baker v. B.F. Goodrich Co. (1953) 115 C.A.2d 221, 223, 252 P.2d 24 [automobile tire burst while being inflated]; on exploding bottles, see infra, §135.)

The exploding of true explosives such as gunpowder usually gives rise to liability without fault and makes reliance on the presumption unnecessary. (See McGrath v. Basich Bros. Const. Co. (1935) 7 C.A.2d 573, 576, 46 P.2d 981; 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1232.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1418.

135 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 8. Bursting Bottles.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 135

[§ 135] Bursting Bottles.

Bursting bottle cases are similar to the exploding receptacle cases, and are so treated. (See Escola v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1944) 24 C.2d 453, 458, 150 P.2d 436 [Coca Cola]; Gordon v. Aztec Brewing Co. (1949) 33 C.2d 514, 523, 203 P.2d 522 [beer]; Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 440, 247 P.2d 344 [Coca Cola]; 36 So. Cal. L. Rev. 619 [discussing Colorado case involving carbonated beverage bottle exploding on grocery store shelf]; 36 A.L.R.4th 419 [explosion or breakage of beverage bottle]; 10 Am.Jur. Trials 381 [litigating claim for injury from exploding carbonated beverage bottle]; and see infra, §145.)

In Honea v. City Dairy (1943) 22 C.2d 614, 620, 140 P.2d 369, where a milk bottle broke in plaintiff's hands, the court held the doctrine inapplicable on the ground that the evidence showed reasonable inspection and no feasible means of discovering hidden defects or flaws. Whatever vitality is left in this opinion (see dissent, 22 C.2d 623; dissent in Trust v. Arden Farms Co. (1958) 50 C.2d 217, 230, 324 P.2d 583) is confined to bottles of ordinary liquids. Where the bottle contains carbonated beverages and bursts or "explodes," the record usually contains evidence of reasonable means of testing for defects. (See Escola v. Coca Cola Bottling Co., supra, 24 C.2d 460; 33 Proof of Facts 2d 1 [proving due care in handling of carbonated beverage bottle].)

Thus, in Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno, supra, defendant company delivered bottles of Coca Cola to plaintiff's restaurant, where they were placed by defendant's delivery man in a waist-high top opening cooler. About an hour after a new delivery to an empty cooler, plaintiff reached in, and, before she touched any bottles, one exploded, severely cutting her arm. Held, a res ipsa loquitur instruction was proper. "The bottle may have been improperly handled in such a manner as to damage it; there may have been a failure to make a proper inspection for defects; it could have been filled with an excessive charge of gas; or it might have been improperly manufactured. Common experience indicates that it would be unreasonable to hold that a bottle of carbonated liquid would be likely to explode if all persons who had anything to do with it had exercised proper care." (39 C.2d 447.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

136 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR
F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine.
9. Medical Malpractice.
a. Modern Development.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 136

[§ 136] Modern Development.

"The application of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur in malpractice cases is a development of comparatively recent years. Before that time, the facts that medicine is not an exact science, that the human body is not susceptible to precise understanding, that the care required of a medical man is the degree of learning and skill common in his profession or locality, and that even with the greatest of care untoward results do occur in surgical and medical procedures, were considered paramount in determining whether the medical man in given circumstance had been negligent. But gradually the courts awoke to the so-called 'conspiracy of silence.' No matter how lacking in skill or how negligent the medical man might be, it was almost impossible to get other medical men to testify adversely to him in litigation based on his alleged negligence. Not only would the guilty person thereby escape from civil liability for the wrong he had done, but his professional colleagues would take no steps to insure that the same results would not again occur at his hands. This fact, plus the fact that usually the patient is by reason of anesthesia or lack of medical knowledge in no position to know what occurred that resulted in harm to him, forced the courts to attempt to equalize the situation. ... One other fact contributed to the application of the doctrine, namely, that certain medical and surgical procedures became so common that in many of them the laymen knew that if properly conducted untoward results did not occur, and in others medical men (when it was possible to get them to admit it) from their specialized knowledge knew that without negligence the result would have been a good one." (Salgo v. Leland Stanford Jr. University Bd. of Trustees (1957) 154 C.A.2d 560, 568, 317 P.2d 170.)

There are many other general discussions of this area of operation of the doctrine. (See Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 C.2d 486, 494, 154 P.2d 687, infra, §147; Seneris v. Haas (1955) 45 C.2d 811, 825, 291 P.2d 915; Quintal v. Laurel Grove Hosp. (1964) 62 C.2d 154, 164, 41 C.R. 577, 397 P.2d 161, infra, §139; Clark v. Gibbons (1967) 66 C.2d 399, 408, 58 C.R. 125, 426 P.2d 525, infra, §139; Meier v. Ross General Hosp. (1968) 69 C.2d 420, 426, 71 C.R. 903, 445 P.2d 519, infra, §155; Bardessono v. Michels (1970) 3 C.3d 780, 788, 91 C.R. 760, 478 P.2d 480; Folk v. Kilk (1975) 53 C.A.3d 176, 183, 126 C.R. 172; Blackwell v. Hurst (1996) 46 C.A.4th 939, 943, 54 C.R.2d 209; 48 Cal. L. Rev. 131, 231; 30 So. Cal. L. Rev. 80; 14 Stanf. L. Rev. 251; 15 Stanf. L. Rev. 77; 77 Harv. L. Rev. 343; 8 U.S.F. L. Rev. 343; 6 West L.A. L. Rev. 40 [confronting conspiracy of silence]; 41 A.L.R.2d 355 [injury by X-ray]; 82 A.L.R.2d 1262 [application of doctrine in action against doctor]; 9 A.L.R.3d 1315 [application of doctrine in action against hospital]; infra, §§139, 147.)

For instructions, see BAJI (8th ed.), Nos. 6.35, 6.36; supra, §126; Frantz v. San Luis Med. Clinic (1978) 81 C.A.3d 34, 45, 146 C.R. 146 ([order in which instructions should be given].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See CACI, No. 518 [res ipsa loquitur in medical malpractice action].

137 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 9. Medical Malpractice. b. Illustrations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 137

[§ 137] Illustrations.

The doctrine has been invoked in a wide variety of situations involving negligent medical treatment or hospital care. (For examples of proper bases for a jury's determination as to the probability of negligence, see infra, §139.)

(1) Injuries while patient anesthetized, drugged, or sedated. (See Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 C.2d 486, 494, 154 P.2d 687, infra, §147; Cavero v. Franklin General Benevolent Soc. (1950) 36 C.2d 301, 309, 223 P.2d 471 [death of 3-year-old boy while anesthetized during tonsillectomy]; Tomei v. Henning (1967) 67 C.2d 319, 323, 62 C.R. 9, 431 P.2d 633 [plaintiff's ureter accidentally sutured during surgery]; Brown v. Shortlidge (1929) 98 C.A. 352, 357, 277 P. 134 [anesthetized child's tooth knocked out during tonsillectomy]; Ybarra v. Spangard (1949) 93 C.A.2d 43, 45, 208 P.2d 445 [injury to neck; patient anesthetized on operating table]; Oldis v. La Societe Francaise de Bienfaisance Mutuelle (1955) 130 C.A.2d 461, 464, 279 P.2d 184 [patient suffered third degree burn while heavily sedated in hospital bed]; McDonald v. Foster Memorial Hosp. (1959) 170 C.A.2d 85, 98, 338 P.2d 607 [sedated child fell out of hospital bed]; Cho v. Kempler (1960) 177 C.A.2d 342, 347, 349, 2 C.R. 167, infra, §139 [mastoidectomy; cranial nerve severed during surgery]; Belshaw v. Feinstein (1968) 258 C.A.2d 711, 718, 65 C.R. 788 [brain was cut during trephining of skull]; Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 C.A.3d 755, 761, 107 C.R. 629 [patient anesthetized during total abdominal hysterectomy; death resulted 2 days later from continuous hemorrhage at or about operative site]; Blackwell v. Hurst (1996) 46 C.A.4th 939, 944, 945, 54 C.R.2d 209 [sedated dental patient aspirated crown after dentist dropped it on her tongue]; 49 A.L.R.4th 63 [res ipsa loquitur in negligent anesthesia cases].)

(2) Cardiac arrest during treatment. (See Quintal v. Laurel Grove Hosp. (1964) 62 C.2d 154, 164, 41 C.R. 577, 397 P.2d 161, infra, §139 [cardiac arrest under anesthetic]; Edelman v. Zeigler (1965) 233 C.A.2d 871, 880, 44 C.R. 114 [same].)

(3) Surgical tool left inside patient. (See Ales v. Ryan (1936) 8 C.2d 82, 100, 64 P.2d 409 [sponge left in patient's abdomen by operating surgeon]; Bowers v. Olch (1953) 120 C.A.2d 108, 115, 260 P.2d 997 [surgical needle left in patient's abdomen].)

(4) Harmful side effects. (See Seneris v. Haas (1955) 45 C.2d 811, 825, 291 P.2d 915 [patient paralyzed following administration of spinal anesthetic for childbirth]; Wolfsmith v. Marsh (1959) 51 C.2d 832, 835, 337 P.2d 70 [injury to knee following injection there of sodium pentothal]; Davis v. Memorial Hosp. (1962) 58 C.2d 815, 817, 26 C.R. 633, 376 P.2d 561 [enema given; rectal abscess]; Clark v. Gibbons (1967) 66 C.2d 399, 413, 58 C.R. 125, 426 P.2d 525, infra, §147 [arthritis followed premature termination of ankle surgery]; Bardessono v. Michels (1970) 3 C.3d 780, 790, 91 C.R. 760, 478 P.2d 480 [pain and paralysis followed cortisone injections]; Moore v. Steen (1929) 102 C.A. 723, 725, 283 P. 833 [X-ray burns received by plaintiff in course of diagnosis of his case]; Bauer v. Otis (1955) 133 C.A.2d 439, 442, 284 P.2d 133 [injury to nerve in arm following injection]; Ragusano v. Civic Center Hosp. Foundation (1962) 199 C.A.2d 586, 591, 19 C.R. 118 [nerve pinched and leg permanently injured following injection of spinal anesthetic for childbirth]; Rawlings v. Harris (1968) 265 C.A.2d 452, 458, 71 C.R. 288 [fistula followed hysterectomy]; Berkey v. Anderson (1969) 1 C.A.3d 790, 799, 82 C.R. 67 ["rubber leg" followed pain caused during myelogram tests]; Rimmele v. Northridge Hosp. Foundation (1975) 46 C.A.3d 123, 129, 120 C.R. 39 [spinal osteomyelitis and probable sciatic nerve involvement were due to infection caused by injections in buttocks during childbirth]; Hale v. Venuto (1982) 137 C.A.3d 910, 919, 187 C.R. 357 [foot numbness following knee operation].)

(5) Improper supervision. (See Vistica v. Presbyterian Hosp. & Med. Center of San Francisco (1967) 67 C.2d 465, 470, 62 C.R. 577, 432 P.2d 193, infra, §155 [psychiatric patient committed suicide]; Meier v. Ross General Hosp. (1968) 69 C.2d 420, 421, 71 C.R. 903, 445 P.2d 519, infra, §155 [same]; Gin Non Louie v. Chinese Hosp. Assn. (1967) 249 C.A.2d 774, 793, 57 C.R. 906 [patient fell out of bed despite guardrails]; Emerick v. Raleigh Hills Hosp. (1982) 133 C.A.3d 575, 583, 585, 184 C.R. 92 [plaintiff alcoholic rehabilitation patient sat or leaned against sink which detached, causing serious injuries].)

(6) Inadequate postoperative advice. (See Kerr v. Bock (1971) 5 C.3d 321, 324, 95 C.R. 788, 486 P.2d 684, infra, §139 [plaintiff received no warning about lifting leg from which some bone had been removed].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Surgical tool left inside patient. See Fields v. Yusef (2006) 144 C.A.4th 1381, 1390, 51 C.R.3d 277 [where sponge was left in patient's leg during surgery, it was reversible error to fail to instruct on res ipsa loquitur; following Ales v. Ryan (1936) 8 C.2d 82, 64 P.2d 409, text, p. 274].

138 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine.

9. Medical Malpractice.

c. Common Knowledge and Expert Testimony.

1. Former Restrictive Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 138

[§ 138] Former Restrictive Rule.

In medical malpractice cases, expert testimony is generally required to establish the applicable standard of care. (See Sinz v. Owens (1949) 33 C.2d 749, 753, 205 P.2d 3, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §191.) Under a "common knowledge" exception, however, if the injury or treatment is within the common knowledge of laypersons, as where infection results from a vaginal examination conducted with unsterilized hands, no expert testimony is required. (See Inderbitzen v. Lane Hosp. (1932) 124 C.A. 462, 467, 12 P.2d 744, 13 P.2d 905; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §86.) Originally, the jurors' common knowledge was also the only basis for determining, for purposes of res ipsa loquitur, whether the accident was of a type that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of negligence. Thus, in Engelking v. Carlson (1939) 13 C.2d 216, 88 P.2d 695, defendant surgeon, in performing an operation on an unconscious plaintiff's knee, severed the peroneal nerve. Held, judgment of nonsuit affirmed; res ipsa loquitur was inapplicable. The doctrine applies in malpractice cases only where a layperson may say as a matter of common knowledge that the injury would not have happened if due care had been exercised. Where, as here, the matter is not one of common knowledge, expert medical opinion is required, and the medical testimony was to the effect that occasionally the nerve is severed in this type of operation without negligence. (13 C.2d 221.)

Similarly, in Farber v. Olkon (1953) 40 C.2d 503, 510, 254 P.2d 520, plaintiff was given electric shock therapy. In a convulsive state, his brittle legs broke and he suffered a permanently deformed hip. Held, the doctrine was not applicable; expert opinion is required to evaluate the procedures and hazards of shock therapy in a particular case. (See also Bennett v. Los Angeles Tumor Institute (1951) 102 C.A.2d 293, 295, 227 P.2d 473 [doctrine was inapplicable; expert testimony was needed to determine whether negligent X-ray therapy for foot wart caused burns]; Dees v. Pace (1953) 118 C.A.2d 284, 288, 257 P.2d 756 [hysterectomy operation resulting in fistula in bladder was beyond realm of laypersons' common knowledge]; on interplay of "common knowledge" exception and res ipsa loquitur, see Flowers v. Torrance Memorial Hosp. Med. Center (1994) 8 C.4th 992, 1001, 35 C.R.2d 685, 884 P.2d 142 ["exception is principally limited to situations in which the plaintiff can invoke the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur"]; 77 Harv. L. Rev. 343; 14 Pacific L. J. 143.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

139 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine.

9. Medical Malpractice.

c. Common Knowledge and Expert Testimony.

2. Approach of Later Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 139

[§ 139] Approach of Later Cases.

(1) Jurors' Common Knowledge. In a proper case, the jurors' common knowledge remains an acceptable basis for a determination as to the probability of negligence. (See Bardessono v. Michels (1970) 3 C.3d 780, 790, 91 C.R. 760, 478 P.2d 480 ["if the routine medical procedure is relatively commonplace and simple, rather than special, unusual and complex, the jury may properly rely upon its common knowledge in determining whether the accident is of a kind that would ordinarily not have occurred in the absence of someone's negligence"].)

In Kerr v. Bock (1971) 5 C.3d 321, 95 C.R. 788, 486 P.2d 684, the 67-year-old plaintiff underwent surgery for removal of some bone in her left leg. Defendant surgeon warned her to use crutches at all times, with minimal weight bearing, and to avoid violent motions. There was no evidence, however, that he warned her about danger from lifting her leg. On the day after she was discharged from the hospital, plaintiff was lying on a sofa and attempted to rise by lifting her left leg "just a little." The leg fractured at the site of the operation. She requested a res ipsa loquitur instruction but the trial judge refused to give it. Held, this was prejudicial error. A res ipsa loquitur instruction could not have been supported on the basis of expert testimony because there was no substantial expert evidence on the issue. But such an instruction could have been based on the considerable common knowledge among laypersons about the results of defendant's failure to instruct plaintiff that she faced a danger of breakage if she lifted her leg. "It is just common sense that after removing a substantial portion of a patient's leg bone, a doctor should warn his patient that there is considerable risk to the patient in lifting the leg horizontally until after the healing process has been completed. Neither such a warning nor the breaking of the leg is so uncommon or so complicated that expert testimony would be required in order to render a res ipsa loquitur instruction appropriate." (5 C.3d 324.)

(2) Expert Testimony. The strict view of Engelking v. Carlson (1939) 13 C.2d 216, 221, 88 P.2d 695, and similar cases (supra, §138) was repudiated in a number of important later decisions.

In Cho v. Kempler (1960) 177 C.A.2d 342, 2 C.R. 167, plaintiff, on recommendation of defendant doctor, underwent an operation in her left ear (mastoidectomy). Her seventh cranial nerve was severed, and she suffered partial paralysis and other serious injuries to her face and left eye. Held, an instruction on res ipsa loquitur was proper, and verdict for plaintiff affirmed. Evidence to establish the condition that the accident must be of a kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence was as follows: (a) solidity of the bone surrounding the nerve--a protective substance; (b) rarity of occurrence of this kind of injury in this kind of operation (testimony of three doctors of 1,630 operations without severance of the nerve); (c) medical testimony that severance was unlikely but might occur if doctor got "disoriented" ("Disorientation in itself is a form of negligence"); and (d) defendant's statement that he was "at fault" (express admission) and his payment of costs of a second remedial operation and subsequent therapy treatments (implied admission). (177 C.A.2d 350, 351.)

As to this last item, defendant contended that the alleged admissions could only be applicable to negligence in this particular case, relying on Dees v. Pace (1953) 118 C.A.2d 284, 257 P.2d 756. But the court, disapproving the Dees case, declared: "The fact that even in one case the injury was caused by negligence, and not by other factors, would have some bearing, even if minor, upon the probability, in general, that the injury does not ordinarily occur except from negligence." (177 C.A.2d 351.)

In Siverson v. Weber (1962) 57 C.2d 834, 836, 22 C.R. 337, 372 P.2d 97, the Engelking test was disapproved, and the court declared that in determining probabilities, reliance may be placed on both common knowledge and expert testimony. The court pointed out, however, that rarity of the occurrence of an injury is not alone sufficient to justify application of the doctrine:

"To permit an inference of negligence under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur solely because an uncommon complication develops would place too great a burden upon the medical profession and might result in an undesirable limitation on the use of operations or new procedures involving an inherent risk of injury even when due care is used. Where risks are inherent in an operation and an injury of a type which is rare does occur, the doctrine should not be applicable unless it can be said that, in the light of past experience, such an occurrence is more likely the result of negligence than some cause for which the defendant is not responsible." (57 C.2d 839.) (See Gerhardt v. Fresno Med. Group (1963) 217 C.A.2d 353, 360, 31 C.R. 633 [Siverson rule applied and doctrine held applicable]; 15 Stanf. L. Rev. 77 [Siverson].)

In Quintal v. Laurel Grove Hosp. (1964) 62 C.2d 154, 41 C.R. 577, 397 P.2d 161, the court held the conditional doctrine applicable to a case of cardiac arrest occurring in an eye operation on a 6-year-old boy. The testimony--all elicited on cross-examination of defendant doctors and their experts--indicated that 90% of deaths from cardiac arrest occurred by reason of faulty intubation; that if an operation had been performed within 3 minutes of the heart stoppage, no brain damage would have resulted; and that the patient's temperature and apprehension (both present), increase the risk. (62 C.2d 164, 166.) A strong dissent argues that the expert testimony was inadequate, and that facts that might be independent proof of negligence have no bearing on the question whether the res ipsa loquitur doctrine applies. (62 C.2d 170; see 18 Hastings L. J. 691 [criticizing Quintal].)

(3) Examples: Doctrine Found Applicable. (See Clark v. Gibbons (1967) 66 C.2d 399, 413, 58 C.R. 125, 426 P.2d 525 [patient suffered permanent arthritic condition following premature termination of surgery; expert testimony as to low incidence of accidents when due care is used, along with evidence of defendants' specific negligent acts, were sufficient basis to allow jury to make determination as to probability of negligence]; Meier v. Ross General Hosp. (1968) 69 C.2d 420, 431, 71 C.R. 903, 445 P.2d 519 [course of medical treatment was not necessarily beyond layperson's common knowledge; conditional res ipsa instruction was improperly refused]; Belshaw v. Feinstein (1968) 258 C.A.2d 711, 722, 65 C.R. 788 [following Quintal and Clark, supra; res ipsa instruction was proper where expert testified that stereotaxic trepanning operation involved low accident rate, and there was some evidence of negligence]; Rawlings v. Harris (1968) 265 C.A.2d 452, 458, 71 C.R. 288 [following Clark, supra; res ipsa instruction was improperly refused where plaintiff introduced expert testimony that her injury (bladder puncture and fistula resulting from hysterectomy) was necessarily caused by negligence of doctor]; Hale v. Venuto (1982) 137 C.A.3d 910, 919, 187 C.R. 357 [foot numbness following knee surgery; res ipsa instruction was improperly refused where there was expert testimony that negligence was probable cause of injury]; Gannon v. Elliot (1993) 19 C.A.4th 1, 7, 23 C.R.2d 86 [where defendant allegedly left surgical instrument cap in plaintiff's hip, jurors could rely on common knowledge to determine negligence issue, although expert testimony that defendant was within standard of care could be used to rebut inference of negligence arising from doctrine].)

(4) Examples: Doctrine Found Inapplicable. (See Surabian v. Lorenz (1964) 229 C.A.2d 462, 467, 40 C.R. 410

[uncontradicted medical witnesses testified that dental patient's reaction to anesthetic was inherent risk of approved injection]; Inouye v. Black (1965) 238 C.A.2d 31, 34, 47 C.R. 313 [steel wire used in neurosurgery broke into fragments; negligence on part of defendant surgeon was purely speculative]; Crawford v. Sacramento (1966) 239 C.A.2d 791, 797, 49 C.R. 115 [distinguishing Quintal, supra; cardiac arrest; accident was outside reach of lay experience, and there was no expert testimony to narrow field of possibilities and allow lay mind to draw inference of probability of negligence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Examples: Doctrine Found Inapplicable. See Elcome v. Chin (2003) 110 C.A.4th 310, 320, 1 C.R.3d 631 [in medical malpractice action by patient who suffered upper extremity injuries after pelvic surgery, defendants' summary judgment motion was properly granted despite plaintiff's assertion that res ipsa loquitur applied; plaintiff failed to present any evidence that injuries were of kind that do not ordinarily occur in absence of negligence or that they were caused by instrumentality within defendants' exclusive control].

140 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine.

9. Medical Malpractice.

c. Common Knowledge and Expert Testimony.

3. Unusual Result Following Complex Procedure.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 140

[§ 140] Unusual Result Following Complex Procedure.

In Clemens v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1970) 8 C.A.3d 1, 87 C.R. 108, plaintiff was treated by a new (but no longer experimental) isolation perfusion procedure to destroy a recurring tumor in his right arm. About 1 week after the surgery, he developed inflammation of an artery and circulation difficulties in that arm. As a result, he lost four fingers by surgical amputation and was restricted in the use of his arm. The trial judge refused to give either unconditional or conditional res ipsa loquitur instructions. Held, no error.

(a) The surgical procedure was highly complex, and plaintiff's injury, while unusual, was a possible complication of which he had been informed. (8 C.A.3d 12.) And a difference of medical opinion on desirability of a particular medical procedure does not establish that the determination to use it rather than another was negligent. (8 C.A.3d 13.)

(b) Plaintiff's suggestion that the rule of Clark v. Gibbons (1967) 66 C.2d 399, 413, 58 C.R. 125, 426 P.2d 525, and Quintal v. Laurel Grove Hosp. (1964) 62 C.2d 154, 41 C.R. 577, 397 P.2d 161 (supra, §139), should be applied to all situations in which a rare result flowed from a medical procedure, was unacceptable: "That extension by this court would be inappropriate. We do not have the means to determine such matters as the impact of the extension upon the development of progressive medical procedures ... , nor do we have the means to determine impact upon the cost of medical services to the public. A change in the present doctrine of conditional res ipsa loquitur should be considered only by a forum possessed of the facilities to determine the full consequences of the change." (8 C.A.3d 13.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Curtis v. Santa Clara Valley Med. Center (2003) 110 C.A.4th 796, 803, 2 C.R.3d 73 [in action by patient who became partially blind after undergoing posterior spinal fusion surgery, trial judge did not err in refusing to give res ipsa loquitur instruction and in granting nonsuit for defendants in absence of expert testimony from plaintiff; procedure was complex and only expert testimony could establish whether there was deviation from standard of care].

141 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR F. Illustrations of Application of Doctrine. 10. Other Situations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 141

[§ 141] Other Situations.

Among other cases in which the doctrine was applied are the following:

(1) Fire. (See Seeley v. Combs (1966) 65 C.2d 127, 132, 52 C.R. 578, 416 P.2d 810, supra, §125 [fire in barn]; Horner v. Barber (1964) 229 C.A.2d 829, 836, 40 C.R. 570 [fire in garage]; Hinckley v. La Mesa R. V. Center (1984) 158 C.A.3d 630, 639, 205 C.R. 22 [motor home destroyed by fire]; 21 A.L.R.4th 929 [real property fires].)

(2) Discharge of firearm. (See Robledo v. Los Angeles (1967) 252 C.A.2d 285, 294, 60 C.R. 328; 46 A.L.R.2d 1216 [firearms accidents].)

(3) Chemicals or electricity. (See Romero v. And'ra (1963) 216 C.A.2d 295, 300, 30 C.R. 645 [injury from hair bleaching chemicals]; 25 A.L.R.2d 740 [damage by lightning transmitted on power lines]; 55 A.L.R.2d 134 [electrified guy wire].)

(4) Business floors or stairways. (See 55 A.L.R.2d 897 [stairway or steps of theatre or other place of amusement]; 61 A.L.R.2d 59 [debris on floor]; 61 A.L.R.2d 132 [obstacle on floor]; 61 A.L.R.2d 191 [debris on stairway]; 62 A.L.R.2d 57 [floor made slippery by water, oil, mud, etc.]; 62 A.L.R.2d 144 [steps made slippery by water, oil, mud, etc.]; 63 A.L.R.2d 635 [floor made slippery by waxing]; 63 A.L.R.2d 710 [floor made slippery by washing or cleaning]; 64 A.L.R.2d 365 [defective floor]; 64 A.L.R.2d 437 [defective stairway].)

(5) Doors. (See 16 A.L.R.2d 1167 [swinging door]; 93 A.L.R.3d 132 [revolving door].)

(6) Broken glass. (See Dryden v. Continental Baking Co. (1938) 11 C.2d 33, 39, 77 P.2d 833 [glass particles in bread]; Young v. Gautier (1938) 28 C.A.2d 494, 498, 82 P.2d 959 [broken glass on bottom of resort swimming pool]; Dennis v. Carolina Pines Bowling Center (1967) 248 C.A.2d 369, 376, 56 C.R. 453 [broken glass from door with loose aluminum frame].)

(7) Escape or overflow of water. (See Diamond Springs Lime Co. v. American River Constructors (1971) 16 C.A.3d 581, 601, 94 C.R. 200 [dam burst]; 91 A.L.R.3d 186.)

(8) Contaminated food or beverage. (See 59 A.L.R.4th 201, 290 [action against multiple defendants arising from contaminated food or beverage].)

(9) Miscellaneous situations. (See Hansen v. Matich Corp. (1965) 234 C.A.2d 129, 131, 44 C.R. 149 [depression in highway]; 94 A.L.R.2d 1431 [skiing, tobogganing or bobsledding facilities]; 93 A.L.R.3d 897 [injury in beauty salon].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

142 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.

a. In General.

1. Nature and Theory of Condition.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 142

[§ 142] Nature and Theory of Condition.

One of the stated conditions of the doctrine is that the injury must be caused by an instrumentality under the exclusive control of the defendant. (See supra, §114.) If such exclusive control is absent, res ipsa loquitur is, in theory, inapplicable. However, the concept of "control" is vague, and exceptions have been recognized that make it most uncertain in application. (See generally 37 Cal. L. Rev. 199 et seq. [suggesting that control requirement is unnecessary and misleading and should be dropped]; for exceptions to the requirement, see infra, §145 et seq.)

In Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 247 P.2d 344, infra, §145, the court dissipated some of the mystery surrounding this supposed condition by pointing out that its purpose is to eliminate the possibility that the accident was caused by someone other than the defendant, and thus to aid in determination of the probability of the defendant's negligence. But, said the court: "The requirement of control is not an absolute one. Although, as we have seen, the doctrine will not ordinarily apply if it is equally probable that the negligence was that of someone other than the defendant, the plaintiff need not exclude all other persons who might possibly have been responsible where the defendant's negligence appears to be the more probable explanation of the accident." (39 C.2d 443.) (See also Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 C.3d 593, 597, 108 C.R. 364, 510 P.2d 724 [quoting Zentz]; Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 C.4th 820, 827, 15 C.R.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624, supra, §151 [slip and fall case; there was no basis for finding that lunch meat that plaintiff slipped on was within exclusive control of defendant school district]; Roddiscraft v. Skelton Logging Co. (1963) 212 C.A.2d 784, 798, 28 C.R. 277, citing the text [control found]; Moreno v. Sayre (1984) 162 C.A.3d 116, 125, 208 C.R. 444 [control not found]; Gicking v. Kimberlin (1985) 170 C.A.3d 73, 77, 215 C.R. 834 [same].)

An intervening natural force may defeat the element of defendant's exclusive control. Thus, in Carrick v. Pound (1969) 276 C.A.2d 689, 81 C.R. 234, plaintiff was a passenger in defendant's pleasure boat, which defendant was operating and over which he had exclusive control. Without warning, a swell appeared immediately in front of the boat. Defendant pulled back the throttle, the boat sharply decelerated and plaintiff fell backward onto a tackle box. Held, a res ipsa loquitur instruction was properly denied: "The instrumentality was two-fold, viz., an act of nature in the form of a sudden swell coupled with the respondent's very normal reaction of decelerating to minimize the impact." (276 C.A.2d 693.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Negligence k.1614

143 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.

a. In General.

2. Third Person in Control.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 143

[§ 143] Third Person in Control.

The lack of control defense may be successfully advanced where the instrumentality was under the control of a third person. Here, the res ipsa loquitur doctrine is clearly inapplicable. (See Olson v. Whitthorne & Swan (1928) 203 C. 206, 208, 263 P. 518 [door of a building, partly operated by plaintiff who was struck]; Cunningham v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. (1948) 87 C.A.2d 106, 111, 198 P.2d 333 [injury to oil company employee from explosion in Coca-Cola vending machine; machine owned and operated by oil company, defendant bottling company merely had duty of inspection and maintenance]; Hubbert v. Aztec Brewing Co. (1938) 26 C.A.2d 664, 688, 80 P.2d 185 [one of several instrumentalities caused explosion, but not all under defendant's control and no showing as to which did it]; Sherman v. Hartman (1955) 137 C.A.2d 589, 595, 290 P.2d 894 [defendant surgeon started giving patient blood transfusion, then left her in charge of registered nurse, and needle came out]; Andrews v. Barker Bros. Corp. (1968) 267 C.A.2d 530, 534, 73 C.R. 284 [chair that collapsed under plaintiff was on retailer's sales floor 60 to 90 days after passing from control of defendant manufacturer]; Putensen v. Clay Adams (1970) 12 C.A.3d 1062, 1074, 91 C.R. 319 [surgical tubing neither in defendant manufacturer's control nor in same condition as when it left defendant's possession]; Bergman v. St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. (1982) 134 C.A.3d 696, 704, 185 C.R. 150, citing the text [plaintiff was injured when handle broke off of box car door; defendant railway company owned box car but parted with possession of it 4 months earlier, and several other carriers used it prior to accident].)

In Larson v. St. Francis Hotel (1948) 83 C.A.2d 210, 188 P.2d 513, plaintiff, while on the sidewalk in front of defendant's hotel at a time of public celebration, was struck on the head by an armchair, which apparently came from some part of the hotel. Held, the doctrine was inapplicable, one reason being that a hotel "does not have exclusive control, either actual or potential, of its furniture. Guests have, at least, partial control." (83 C.A.2d 212.) This view seems highly questionable, for it would preclude application of the doctrine in the falling baggage cases where some other passenger who places the baggage in the rack has just as much partial control over it as the driver of the vehicle (see supra, §128), and it would also preclude its application in cases where a person was injured as a result of the collapse or breaking of hotel furniture.

Other cases take a more reasonable view. In Doke v. Pacific Crane & Rigging (1947) 80 C.A.2d 601, 182 P.2d 284, Acme Company prepared certain heavy machinery (a spark arrester) for installation on an incinerator, and defendant was engaged to lift it into place by a truck crane. An Acme employee was killed, and, in the action for wrongful death, defendant contended that it did not have exclusive control of all the instrumentalities because the arrester with its sling had been hooked to the crane by Acme employees. Held, the element was satisfied because, from the time of hooking on the load, defendant had exclusive control over the hoisting equipment and the machinery. (80 C.A.2d 607.) (See also Keller v. Morrison-Knudsen Co. (1957) 149 C.A.2d 205, 212, 308 P.2d 370 [pipe rigged by plaintiff's co-employees but hoisted by defendant's employees fell and injured plaintiff; doctrine was applicable, as there was no evidence that plaintiff or co-employees did anything abnormal, and defendant's employees were in complete control of hoisting apparatus]; Pappas v. Carson (1975) 50 C.A.3d 261, 268, 123 C.R. 343 [although independent contractors probably caused fire, for purposes of doctrine, defendant, who hired them, was deemed in control of their actions].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

144 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.

a. In General.

3. Plaintiff or Decedent in Control.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 144

[§ 144] Plaintiff or Decedent in Control.

The doctrine is also inapplicable where the instrumentality was entirely under the control of the plaintiff or decedent. (See Hohnemann v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1939) 35 C.A.2d 597, 602, 96 P.2d 350 [gas leak; meter under defendant's control, but pipe and cap under decedent's control]; 57B Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence §1901 et seq.)

Some cases, however, have found sufficient underlying control or right of control by the defendant, despite a superficial control by the plaintiff. Thus, in Rose v. Melody Lane of Wilshire (1952) 39 C.2d 481, 247 P.2d 335, plaintiff was injured by a fall from a bar stool that broke off its base. The court observed that "in one sense plaintiff was in control of the stool while using it," but it was the condition of the stool and not its use which caused the injury. "So far as construction, inspection, or maintenance of the stool were concerned, defendant had exclusive control." (39 C.2d 486, 487.) (See also Albers v. Greyhound Corp. (1970) 4 C.A.3d 463, 471, 84 C.R. 846, infra, §146 ["The mere fact that the box was in the custody and control of the plaintiff at the time the accident occurred does not prevent the application of the doctrine"]; Bedford v. Re (1973) 9 C.3d 593, 598, 108 C.R. 364, 510 P.2d 724 [sturdy-appearing wall collapsed, but plaintiff's young sisters subjected it to no greater stress than did defendant's children].)

In Black v. Partridge (1953) 115 C.A.2d 639, 252 P.2d 760, decedent was asphyxiated by an unvented gas heater in a room in which he was a lodger. Defendant argued that decedent had some control over the heater and that the accident could have happened because he tampered with it. But it also could have happened because of the control that defendant exercised in removing the chemicals used to absorb carbon monoxide from this dangerous type of heater; i.e., the jury could have found that death was caused by defendant's negligent failure to replenish the chemicals. Hence, plaintiffs were entitled to res ipsa loquitur instructions. (115 C.A.2d 646.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §1239 et seq.

145 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.

b. Constructive Control (Condition Unchanged).

1. Bursting Bottles.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 145

[§ 145] Bursting Bottles.

"Constructive control" is a theory best illustrated by the breaking or bursting bottle cases. The instrumentality causing injury in these cases--the bottle--is under the manufacturer's control at the time of bottling, but afterwards is delivered to a retailer and to the customer. Although at the time of injury the bottle is technically no longer under the defendant's control, the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur may still be applied if the plaintiff shows that the condition of the bottle did not change after it left the manufacturer's possession. This showing negatives any explanation based upon an intervening cause. (See Escola v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1944) 24 C.2d 453, 458, 150 P.2d 436; Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 444, 247 P.2d 344; 73 Harv. L. Rev. 782; 81 A.L.R.2d 229, 350.)

The constructive control theory may be employed not only where the bottling company itself delivers the bottle, but also where others deliver it, provided that the test is met by proof of the absence of intervening harmful forces. (Gordon v. Aztec Brewing Co. (1949) 33 C.2d 514, 518, 203 P.2d 522 [beer delivered by trucking company to warehouse, then delivered to plaintiff by warehouse driver; evidence offered that no accidents occurred in transportation and cases were carefully handled]; McClelland v. Acme Brewing Co. (1949) 92 C.A.2d 698, 700, 207 P.2d 591 [similar facts].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

146 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.
- b. Constructive Control (Condition Unchanged).
  2. Other Situations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 146

[§ 146] Other Situations.

In Rafter v. Dubrock's Riding Academy (1946) 75 C.A.2d 621, 171 P.2d 459, defendant riding academy was held to have constructive control over a horse and saddle that plaintiff had rented for a ride, and the res ipsa loquitur doctrine was applied where the saddle slipped and plaintiff was thrown to the ground. (75 C.A.2d 626.)

In Albers v. Greyhound Corp. (1970) 4 C.A.3d 463, 84 C.R. 846, plaintiff was injured when he took delivery of a box containing heavy milling cutters and it broke open, wounding his thigh. The trial judge granted defendant shipper's nonsuit motion. Held, reversed; the case should have gone to the jury under a res ipsa loquitur theory. "The mere fact that the box was in the custody and control of the plaintiff at the time the accident occurred does not prevent the application of the doctrine. ... There is nothing in the evidence to indicate that plaintiff mishandled the box in the brief interval commencing with the time he picked it up and culminating a few steps away in the accident." (4 C.A.3d 471, 472.)

In Tallerico v. Labor Temple Assn. (1960) 181 C.A.2d 15, 4 C.R. 880, defendant rented its hall to a club for a New Year's party. A member pulled a balloon drop installed on a chandelier, the chandelier fell shortly afterwards, and plaintiff was injured. Held, a res ipsa loquitur instruction was properly given; plaintiff met her burden of showing the absence of any mishandling of the chandelier by club members or party-goers in the installation and operation of the balloon drop. (181 C.A.2d 20.)

To similar effect are Burr v. Sherwin Williams Co. (1954) 42 C.2d 682, 687, 268 P.2d 1041 [insecticide spray was delivered in sealed drums by defendant manufacturer to agricultural cooperative; though defendant had relinquished control, there was sufficient evidence of no mishandling or other changing of condition thereafter]; Baker v. B.F. Goodrich Co. (1953) 115 C.A.2d 221, 227, 252 P.2d 24 [auto tire delivered by defendant manufacturer to plaintiff's employer and stored in suitable place and manner]; Rohar v. Osborne (1955) 133 C.A.2d 345, 349, 284 P.2d 125 [weed burner rented to plaintiff, who filled it with kerosene, operated it for a time, and was injured when it exploded]; Hercules Powder Co. v. Automatic Sprinkler Corp. of America (1957) 151 C.A.2d 387, 395, 311 P.2d 907 [sprinkler system manufactured, installed and inspected by defendant, with part recently replaced]; Hinckley v. La Mesa R. V. Center (1984) 158 C.A.3d 630, 640, 205 C.R. 22 ([mobile home destroyed several months after plaintiffs' purchase in fire allegedly resulting from negligent wiring; although plaintiffs made minor modifications to electrical system, there was evidence these were not cause of fire].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

147 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.

c. Multiple Defendants.

1. Medical Malpractice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 147

[§ 147] Medical Malpractice.

(1) Unconscious Patient. The test of exclusive control over a particular instrumentality by a particular defendant was repudiated in the leading case of Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 C.2d 486, 154 P.2d 687. Plaintiff received an injury to his neck while unconscious on the operating table of a hospital, under anesthetic. The defendants, including several doctors and nurses and the owner of the hospital, objected that there was no showing of any particular instrumentality under the exclusive control of any single defendant. The court declared that strict adherence to the single instrumentality rule in such cases would nearly always result in denial of recovery, and held that "where a plaintiff receives unusual injuries while unconscious and in the course of medical treatment, all those defendants who had any control over his body or the instrumentalities which might have caused the injuries may properly be called upon to meet the inference of negligence by giving an explanation of their conduct." (25 C.2d 494.) (See 18 So. Cal. L. Rev. 310 [Ybarra]; 33 Cal. L. Rev. 248, 273, 331 [same]; 37 Cal. L. Rev. 223 [same]; and see also 48 Cal. L. Rev. 252 [future of res ipsa loquitur in medical malpractice cases]; 9 Stanf. L. Rev. 731, 738 [malpractice crisis arising, in part, from liberalization of res ipsa loquitur]; 67 A.L.R.4th 544 [applicability of doctrine in cases of multiple medical defendants--modern status]; 57B Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence §§1963 et seq., 2074.)

The rule of the Ybarra case was applied in a number of other decisions dealing with unconscious patients undergoing medical treatment. (See Ybarra v. Spangard (1949) 93 C.A.2d 43, 48, 208 P.2d 445 [decision affirming judgment for plaintiff after retrial]; Cavero v. Franklin General Benevolent Soc. (1950) 36 C.2d 301, 308, 223 P.2d 471 [death of child during removal of tonsils and adenoids]; Bowers v. Olch (1953) 120 C.A.2d 108, 115, 260 P.2d 997 [operating surgeon, two assistants and hospital which employed one assistant as resident surgeon]; Seneris v. Haas (1955) 45 C.2d 811, 825, 291 P.2d 915 [woman given spinal anesthetic for childbirth, awoke with paralysis]; Ragusano v. Civic Center Hosp. Foundation (1962) 199 C.A.2d 586, 19 C.R. 118 [same]; Leonard v. Watsonville Community Hosp. (1956) 47 C.2d 509, 514, 305 P.2d 36 [surgical clamp left in body; operating surgeon, hospital, surgical nurse].)

(2) Patient Sedated or Given Local Anesthetic. In Oldis v. La Societe Francaise de Bienfaisance Mutuelle (1955) 130 C.A.2d 461, 279 P.2d 184, plaintiff received a severe burn on his abdomen during the period after his return from surgery. He was under heavy sedation and only semiconscious. The court held that his situation was similar to that of the "unconscious patient" in the Ybarra case. (130 C.A.2d 464.)

In Clark v. Gibbons (1967) 66 C.2d 399, 58 C.R. 125, 426 P.2d 525, the rule was extended to injuries occurring while the patient was under local anesthetic. The court commented: "The plaintiff's lack of knowledge may exist not only where he is totally unconscious but also where he is partially unconscious and largely, if not entirely, unaware of what the medical personnel are doing." (66 C.2d 411.)

The Clark court also made the following comments on the burden imposed on the individual doctor, once the rule has been invoked:

"Ybarra and Leonard establish that, if the conditions giving rise to the doctrine are present when the medical personnel are treated as a group acting in concert and they collectively have access to the chief evidence as to the cause of the injury but the plaintiff does not, a single doctor may not escape the inference as a matter of law merely by showing that as to him alone it is more probable than not that he was free from fault. The basis of the application of the doctrine to all defendants in the cases is that the medical personnel acted as a group, and that collectively, without regard to what any one may individually know, or did, they are in a position to explain the cause and produce the chief evidence bearing on the question whereas the plaintiff is not. To avoid the inference as a matter of law an individual doctor must go beyond showing that it was unlikely or not probable he was negligent and must establish that he is free from negligence by evidence which cannot be rationally disbelieved. Falling short of such a showing, it remains for the jury to determine whether the inference arising from the doctrine has been rebutted as to any particular doctor." (66 C.2d 411.) (See O'Connor v. Bloomer (1981) 116 C.A.3d 385, 392, 172 C.R. 128 [where doctrine is asserted against multiple defendants, summary judgment is proper to excise those defendants for whom factual predicates of doctrine have not been established]; 55 Cal. L. Rev. 1193 [Clark].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Unconscious Patient. See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §1299 et seq.

148 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.
- c. Multiple Defendants.
2. Other Situations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 148

[§ 148] Other Situations.

The opinion in Ybarra v. Spangard (1944) 25 C.2d 486, 154 P.2d 687, supra, §147, was carefully limited to the unconscious patient undergoing medical treatment. But its extension into other types of cases involving multiple defendants was inevitable. (See Giondini v. Amship Corp. (1947) 81 C.A.2d 751, 767, 185 P.2d 94 [plaintiff was injured by collapse of defective scaffold built by one defendant and used by two defendants]; Rodin v. American Can Co. (1955) 133 C.A.2d 524, 530, 284 P.2d 530 [plaintiff was injured as result of fall of construction elevator; both owner of plant being constructed, and contractor who was building it, were subject to doctrine]; Poulsen v. Charlton (1964) 224 C.A.2d 262, 268, 36 C.R. 347 [defendants--landlord, general contractor and roofing contractor--undertook replacement of roof, and left old roof off without temporary protection, thereby damaging plaintiff tenant's shop; doctrine applied]; 59 A.L.R.4th 201 [applicability of doctrine where multiple, nonmedical defendants sued]; 73 Harv. L. Rev. 782 [discussing District of Columbia bursting bottle action against bottler and retailer].)

In Tobler v. Chapman (1973) 31 C.A.3d 568, 107 C.R. 614, plaintiffs' vehicle was on the correct side of the road when it was struck head-on by defendant's vehicle, which assertedly had been forced into the wrong lane by X's trailer. (X apparently had settled with plaintiffs before counsel argued the case.) The trial judge refused to give a res ipsa instruction, because it was not reasonably probable that the negligence was attributable to defendants rather than to X. Held, the refusal was error. The probabilities might have been equal in an action between defendants and X or between a passenger in one of those vehicles and the driver of the other. Here, however, the probabilities were threefold: (a) The collision resulted solely from defendant's negligence; (b) it resulted solely from X's negligence; (c) it resulted from the concurrent negligence of both drivers. With such a probability, it would be proper to permit the jury to weigh the inference of negligence along with the evidence defendant produced in explanation. As admittedly innocent bystanders, plaintiffs were entitled to have all other actors explain their conduct. (31 C.A.3d 582.)

However, "[t]he doctrine of Ybarra has never been extended to a case ... where a conscious person receives an injury from a known object in a known way." (Gobin v. Avenue Food Mart (1960) 178 C.A.2d 345, 347, 2 C.R. 822.) In this case, plaintiff, a 6-year-old boy, was injured by a defective dart from a toy gun. He sued the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer. The evidence showed that the gun and darts, when manufactured, were enclosed in a stapled plastic bag and never opened until purchased from the retailer. Held, because neither the wholesaler nor the retailer had a duty to inspect, the trial judge properly refused to instruct on res ipsa loquitur as to all defendants.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Correction: Page 288, line 1, "Giondini" should be "Biondini".

149 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

1. Defendant's Control.
- c. Multiple Defendants.
3. Special Relationship Between Defendants Not Required.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 149

[§ 149] Special Relationship Between Defendants Not Required.

The contention that the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur can be applied against multiple defendants only if some special relationship between the defendants warrants shared responsibility for the injury-causing event was rejected in Martinides v. Mayer (1989) 208 C.A.3d 1185, 256 C.R. 679. Plaintiff was injured in a hit-and-run accident, and, although no one was able to identify the driver of the offending vehicle, that vehicle was owned by one of two codefendants and driven only by the codefendants. The codefendants had the only sets of keys, and there was no evidence that the vehicle had been tampered with or stolen. The jury was given the conditional res ipsa loquitur instruction, and found defendants negligent. Held, the instruction was proper. Suit was brought against both parties who had joint and exclusive right of control and access to the vehicle, and neither party was able to rebut the inference that he negligently caused the accident. Thus, the requirements of the doctrine were satisfied, and California imposes no further requirement of a special relationship between the defendants. (208 C.A.3d 1195, 1196, citing the text.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

150 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

2. Circumstances Not Indicative of Negligence.

a. Balancing Probabilities: In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 150

[§ 150] Balancing Probabilities: In General.

The doctrine is intended to apply where the instrumentality was such that no injury would ordinarily have occurred except by reason of its negligent construction or operation, or by reason of failure to make proper inspection. Accordingly, it will be held inapplicable where it is shown that injury might normally occur in spite of the exercise of due care; under such circumstances, the happening of the accident cannot be said to justify an inference of negligence. Thus the court must balance the probabilities. (See La Porte v. Houston (1948) 33 C.2d 167, 169, 199 P.2d 665 [applicability of res ipsa loquitur depends on "whether it can be said, in the light of common experience, that the accident was more likely than not the result of their (defendants') negligence"]; Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 442, 247 P.2d 344; Siverson v. Weber (1962) 57 C.2d 834, 836, 22 C.R. 337, 372 P.2d 97, supra, §139; Brocato v. Standard Oil Co. (1958) 164 C.A.2d 749, 757, 331 P.2d 111 [doctrine properly held inapplicable to alleged emission of noxious gases from defendant's waste burner where there was no evidence identifying source of fumes]; Guillory v. American President Lines, Ltd. (1964) 230 C.A.2d 296, 306, 40 C.R. 796; ["Where reasonable men may differ as to the balance of probabilities, the question whether an inference of negligence is to be drawn should be submitted to the jury"]; Blackwell v. Hurst (1996) 46 C.A.4th 939, 944, 54 C.R.2d 209 [same]; for examples of the balancing of probabilities in medical malpractice cases, see supra, §139.)

In Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno, supra, the rule was stated as follows: "[I]t must appear either as a matter of common experience or from evidence in the case, that the accident is of a type which probably would not happen unless someone was negligent. In the absence of such a probability there would be no basis for an inference of negligence which would serve to take the place of evidence of some specific negligent act or omission. The defendant, of course, should not be liable unless it appears from all the facts and circumstances that there is a sufficient causal connection between his conduct and the plaintiff's injury, and it has been held that res ipsa loquitur will not apply if it is equally probable that the negligence was that of someone other than the defendant." (39 C.2d 442.)

Because the determination of probability of negligence may depend on the evidence of common experience offered in the particular case, the result is not always predictable and is sometimes questionable. La Porte v. Houston, supra, is an extreme case. Plaintiff, owner of a car with a "hydramatic" transmission, brought it to defendant's garage for a carburetor adjustment. Plaintiff parked it, with the motor running, set the hand brake, left the gear lever in neutral, released the hood, and went out in front of the car to watch the mechanic working under the hood. After the latter had made various adjustments and raced the motor several times, the car lurched forward and struck plaintiff. The trial judge refused an instruction on res ipsa loquitur and a verdict for defendants resulted. Held, the doctrine was inapplicable.

Plaintiff's own expert witness testified that, because of a mechanical defect, the vibration of the motor will cause the gear to shift from neutral to drive "in about one car in a thousand," and the mechanic testified that he did nothing to affect the shifting mechanism but accelerate the motor. The opinion states: "It was at least equally probable that the accident was caused by some fault in the mechanism of the car for which defendants were not liable as that it resulted from any negligent act or omission of the mechanic." (33 C.2d 170.) The dissent, however, argues that the effect of this reasoning is to require the plaintiff to explain how the accident happened, a position wholly at odds with res ipsa loquitur. "[T]he majority opinion states that the probabilities are at least equal that the forward movement of the car was caused by a mechanical defect in the car. That cannot follow for the reason that plaintiff's evidence shows that there were no defects in the car and his expert witness eliminated such possibility when he testified that such defect only occurred once in a thousand times." (33 C.2d 171, 172.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

151 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

- G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.
- 2. Circumstances Not Indicative of Negligence.
  - b. Slip and Fall Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 151

[§ 151] Slip and Fall Cases.

In Brown v. Poway Unified School Dist. (1993) 4 C.4th 820, 15 C.R.2d 679, 843 P.2d 624, plaintiff, a computer repairman, was delivering computers to defendant district at its building at 9:30 a.m. On a trip back to his van plaintiff slipped and fell. Defendant's employees who helped him to his feet found a fresh slice of lunch meat stuck to the sole of his shoe. Although there was a picnic table outside the building where employees sometimes ate their lunches, no one had seen anyone eating at the table or in the hallway on the morning the accident occurred. In plaintiff's action against the district under Govt.C. 835 (see 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §183), the trial court granted summary judgment for defendant, the Court of Appeal reversed, and the Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the Court of Appeal.

(a) Res ipsa loquitur doctrine inapplicable.

(1) In order to recover from the district under Govt.C. 835(a), plaintiff had to prove that a negligent act or omission of an employee "created" the dangerous condition. Because there was no evidence that the lunch meat came to be on the floor through an employee's negligence, defendant was entitled to summary judgment unless the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur would permit a jury to infer that fact. (4 C.4th 825.)

(2) "Experience teaches that slips and falls are not so likely to be the result of negligence as to justify a presumption to that effect." (4 C.4th 826.) "This is true even when the fall is associated with a slippery object, because objects all too often appear on floors without sufficient explanation." Hence, something slippery on the floor affords no res ipsa case against the owner unless it is shown to have been there long enough so that he should have discovered and removed it. (4 C.4th 826, citing Prosser & Keeton.) "This common wisdom is reflected in a legion of cases from many jurisdictions declaring as a general rule that res ipsa loquitur does not apply to slip and fall cases." (4 C.4th 826.)

(3) "While we need not go so far as to say that res ipsa loquitur can never apply to a slip and fall, the evidence in this case fittingly illustrates why such an occurrence ordinarily does not 'speak for itself.' The lunch meat that apparently caused the accident went undetected until Brown fell; afterward, it was found stuck to the sole of his shoe. To be sure, the lunch meat might have been dropped by an employee, but it might also have been dropped by a visitor, tracked in from the outside or from Brown's own van, transported by an animal, or fallen from an object carried down the hall, even from one of the computers that Brown was delivering. Some of these explanations do not presuppose negligence, and none is inherently more probable than the others. In short, there is no basis whatever for a finding that either of the doctrine's first two conditions existed, i.e., (1) that the accident was of a kind which ordinarily does not occur in the absence of someone's negligence, or (2) that it was caused by an agency or instrumentality within the defendant's exclusive control." (4 C.4th 827.)

(b) Doctrine could not establish prima facie case under Govt.C. 835.

(1) Even if the facts satisfied the requirements of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine, plaintiff could not use the doctrine to establish a prima facie case. His suit was not an ordinary negligence action, but an action against a public entity under Govt.C. 835 for injury caused by a dangerous condition of property; and that statute requires a showing either of a negligent act or omission of an employee or of the public entity's actual or constructive notice of the dangerous condition in time to have taken protective measures. Here there was no evidence of such notice. (4 C.4th 829.)

(2) Plaintiff nevertheless contended that the res ipsa loquitur doctrine permitted the inference that an employee "created" the dangerous condition. (4 C.4th 829.) But the legislative history of the codification of the doctrine (see supra, §118) refutes this contention. (4 C.4th 832, 836.) And "[o]ne searches the reported decisions in vain for an opinion applying section 835, subdivision (a), to facts like those of the case before us. Instead, one finds cases in which public employees actively created dangerous conditions under circumstances that would clearly justify a presumption of notice on the part of a public employer." (4 C.4th 837.) And to hold that the res ipsa loquitur presumption, alone, established a prima facie case would permit the jury to find the District liable even though there was no evidence that an employee was involved in creating the dangerous condition. "In such a case, the assumptions that underlie the Legislature's waiver of sovereign immunity for dangerous conditions created by public employees do not apply." (4 C.4th 838.) (See 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 352.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §270.

152 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

- G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.
- 2. Circumstances Not Indicative of Negligence.
  - c. Other Situations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 152

[§ 152] Other Situations.

The following cases illustrate the use of the balance of probabilities test to exclude the res ipsa loquitur doctrine on the showing made:

(1) Dangerous materials or equipment. (See Simmons v. Rhodes & Jamieson, Ltd. (1956) 46 C.2d 190, 195, 293 P.2d 26 [ready-mixed cement to which plaintiff added water and which gave him serious burns through his clothes]; Tucker v. Lombardo (1956) 47 C.2d 457, 465, 303 P.2d 1041 [gunshot injury to boy operating shielded ejection apparatus at skeet-shooting range]; Rodella v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1957) 148 C.A.2d 708, 712, 307 P.2d 436 [defendant's power pole, near vent pipe of boiler in candle making factory, burned and crashed]; Moreno v. Sayre (1984) 162 C.A.3d 116, 124, 125, 208 C.R. 444 [punch press in which defendant manufacturer installed one component].)

(2) Helicopter piloting procedures. (See Gradus v. Hanson Aviation (1984) 158 C.A.3d 1038, 1055, 1056, 205 C.R. 211 [pilot's failure to complete successful autorotation in order to avoid accident after helicopter's engine failed].)

(3) Horseback riding. (See Griffin v. Sardella (1967) 253 C.A.2d 937, 941, 61 C.R. 834 [saddle slipped; question for jury whether accident caused by instrumentality within defendants' control (loose cinch knot), and judgment for defendants affirmed].)

(4) Motorboat. (See Carrick v. Pound (1969) 276 C.A.2d 689, 81 C.R. 234, supra, §142 [act of nature affected defendant's control so balance of probabilities did not favor negligence].)

(5) Moving vehicles. (See Faulk v. Soberanes (1961) 56 C.2d 466, 470, 14 C.R. 545, 363 P.2d 593 [evidence that another driver could have been negligent]; Fuller v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1982) 136 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 6, 186 C.R. 26 [blowout of 6-month-old tire did not create an inference of manufacturer's negligence].)

(6) Ski lift. (See Houser v. Floyd (1963) 220 C.A.2d 778, 784, 34 C.R. 96; 95 A.L.R.3d 203 [injury caused by ski lift or ski tow].)

(7) Stationary carrier. The mere fact that a person falls and is injured while boarding or alighting from a carrier that is not moving is not enough to justify application of the doctrine, for such accidents and similar ones on immovable premises frequently happen without the fault of others. (Gray v. San Francisco (1962) 202 C.A.2d 319, 322, 20 C.R.

894 [passenger slipped and fell while boarding streetcar].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

153 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR
G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.
3. Plaintiff's Voluntary Act.
a. Contributory Fault.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 153

[§ 153] Contributory Fault.

One of the three conditions of the doctrine is that the plaintiff's own conduct be eliminated as a responsible cause. (See supra, §114.) Thus, the doctrine does not apply where the accident is a result of the plaintiff's own contributory fault. (Moore v. Belt (1949) 34 C.2d 525, 531, 212 P.2d 509 [instruction that fails to include element of causation is erroneous]; Cordova v. Ford (1966) 246 C.A.2d 180, 187, 54 C.R. 508 [plaintiff, driving at early hour on dark and cloudy morning without headlights on, collided with defendant's car at intersection; res ipsa instruction was properly refused where plaintiff failed to explain why she proceeded at same speed after defendant's car appeared directly in front of her]; Anderson v. Jones (1968) 266 C.A.2d 284, 289, 72 C.R. 187 [plaintiff stopped on freeway to render aid to person whose car was apparently disabled, and was struck by another motorist while running down median strip to place flares; voluntary choice of this path made doctrine inapplicable]; Davis v. Safeway Stores (1969) 271 C.A.2d 365, 370, footnote 1, 76 C.R. 490 [plaintiff shopper put carton of cola bottles on bottom sloping rack of cart, from where they fell to cement floor; when picked up, one bottle exploded]; see 37 Cal. L. Rev. 201.)

The doctrine is similarly inapplicable when both parties are exercising "an equal right" and each is chargeable with the same degree of care. (Duncan v. Queen of Angels Hosp. (1970) 11 C.A.3d 665, 668, 90 C.R. 157 [70-year-old plaintiff was walking in hospital corridor when she was struck by food cart being pulled backwards by employee].)

It has been argued, in light of California's adoption of comparative negligence, that the plaintiff's own fault should not bar application of the doctrine (see Emerick v. Raleigh Hills Hosp. (1982) 133 C.A.3d 575, 585, 586, 184 C.R. 92; 57B Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence §1912); but more recent cases continue to require satisfaction of all three of the traditional conditions. (See Hinckley v. La Mesa R. V. Center (1984) 158 C.A.3d 630, 641, 205 C.R. 22; Ford v. Miller Meat Co. (1994) 28 C.A.4th 1196, 1202, 1203, 33 C.R.2d 899, citing the text.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §1250. West's Key Number Digest, Negligence k.1617

154 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

3. Plaintiff's Voluntary Act.

b. Conduct Not Responsible Cause.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 154

[§ 154] Conduct Not Responsible Cause.

A distinction has been recognized where the plaintiff merely participates in the events. In Zentz v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. of Fresno (1952) 39 C.2d 436, 247 P.2d 344, the court said of the factor of plaintiff's voluntary act: "This is allied to the condition of control by the defendant and has also been employed as a means of showing that the defendant, rather than the plaintiff, had control and was responsible for the injury. ... It should not be confused with the problem of contributory negligence, as to which defendant has the burden of proof, and its purpose, like that of control by the defendant, is merely to assist the court in determining whether it is more probable than not that the defendant was responsible for the accident. ... [A] plaintiff may properly rely upon res ipsa loquitur even though he has participated in the events leading to the accident if the evidence excludes his conduct as the responsible cause." (39 C.2d 444.)

So, in Baker v. B.F. Goodrich Co. (1953) 115 C.A.2d 221, 228, 252 P.2d 24, where plaintiff was injured by an exploding automobile tire, the fact that the accident occurred while he was mounting the tire did not render the doctrine inapplicable.

In Nungaray v. Pleasant Valley Lima Bean Growers & Warehouse Assn. (1956) 142 C.A.2d 653, 300 P.2d 285, plaintiff drove his employer's truck onto the platform of defendant's warehouse. Defendant's manager, C, placed blocks that were too flat, so that the truck moved and hit plaintiff. Held, the doctrine applied. C was in control of the hoisting apparatus and flat blocks; he lifted the platform, and tilted the truck; plaintiff had no contact with the truck after he backed it on the platform, set the brakes and dismounted. (142 C.A.2d 665.) (See also Seffert v. Los Angeles Transit Lines (1961) 56 C.2d 498, 502, 15 C.R. 161, 364 P.2d 337; Shahinian v. McCormick (1963) 59 C.2d 554, 560, 30 C.R. 521, 381 P.2d 377; Keller v. Morrison-Knudsen Co. (1957) 149 C.A.2d 205, 210, 308 P.2d 370 [following Baker, Nungaray, and similar cases]; Rollins v. Department of Water & Power (1962) 209 C.A.2d 526, 534, 535, 26 C.R. 162; 57B Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Negligence §1903.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 57B Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Negligence §1240.

155 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

3. Plaintiff's Voluntary Act.

c. Self-Harm by Psychiatric Patient.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 155

[§ 155] Self-Harm by Psychiatric Patient.

In Vistica v. Presbyterian Hosp. & Med. Center of San Francisco (1967) 67 C.2d 465, 62 C.R. 577, 432 P.2d 193, decedent, a mentally ill woman with a schizophrenic personality and suicidal and elopement tendencies, was a patient in the psychiatric ward of defendant hospital. The ward, of the "open type," had a solarium furnished with a radio console, light wooden chairs and a metal wastebasket; and its upper transom, though fitted with chains, could be opened wide. One day decedent was found in the solarium with dust on her dress, the chair and wastebasket mounted on the console, and the transom open. Her doctor ordered a 24-hour surveillance, but the following evening, during an 8-minute period when no nurse or orderly was in attendance, she stacked the furniture and went through the transom to her death three floors below. In this wrongful death action, the verdict was for defendant. Held, reversed, for error in giving the standard instruction.

The court emphasized the distinction made in the Zentz case (supra, §154), that the "no voluntary contribution" aspect of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine has nothing to do with the affirmative defense of contributory negligence, and is merely one element that helps to determine the probability that the defendant's act or omission was the responsible cause. In the bald form in which this element was stated in the instruction, the jury might have been led erroneously to conclude that, because decedent engineered her own escape, the doctrine was inapplicable:

"It was not sufficient for the court to instruct the jury with respect to the third requirement set forth in the instruction ... without explaining that Lorraine's voluntary conduct had to be the responsible cause of her death." (67 C.2d 470.)

Meier v. Ross General Hosp. (1968) 69 C.2d 420, 71 C.R. 903, 445 P.2d 519, applies the Vistica rule to similar facts. Decedent tried to commit suicide by slashing his wrists. His family brought him to defendant hospital where defendant Dr. S attended him. The hospital had adopted an "open door" policy for psychiatric patients, and decedent was in a room with a window. He refused medication, opened the window, and plunged two stories to his death. Verdict and judgment were for defendants after refusal of a res ipsa loquitur instruction. Held, reversed; the instruction, with the Vistica addition, should have been given.

The court also held that there was no need of expert testimony to lay the foundation for the instruction, because the negligence was of the ordinary type not involving medical matters: Dr. S, called as an adverse witness, testified that a secured type of unopenable window was compatible with the "open door" policy. "We hold that the trial court must submit a conditional res ipsa instruction, even absent expert testimony on the 'probabilities of negligence,' when the evidence supports a conclusion that the cause of the accident (the openable window) was not inextricably bound up in a course of treatment involving the exercise of medical judgment beyond the common knowledge of laymen." (69 C.2d 421.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

156 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

4. Action Based on Strict Liability.

a. Exclusive Reliance on Strict Liability.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 156

[§ 156] Exclusive Reliance on Strict Liability.

In Tresham v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 C.A.2d 403, 79 C.R. 883, the driver of an automobile was injured when the vehicle went out of control, allegedly because of a faulty braking system. Plaintiffs requested a form of res ipsa loquitur instruction which substituted "defect" for "negligence" (was the accident the kind that ordinarily does not occur in the absence of some defect in the automobile?). Held, the instruction was properly refused. What plaintiffs sought to accomplish was a shifting, from themselves to defendants, of the burden of proof of showing the existence of a defect which proximately caused them injury or damage. "This would have the effect of making the respondents insurers unless they could produce satisfactory evidence that there was no defect or if there was that such defect was not the cause of the injury or damage. The application of such a doctrine in the cause before this court would require the respondents to exculpate themselves from circumstances where neither had control of the vehicle for some six weeks during which time the automobile had been driven some 1,500 miles by decedent Vandermark or others." (275 C.A.2d 407.) "There is no reason in law or logic why the doctrine embedded in the instruction requested by appellants should be extended to include the type of case before this court." (275 C.A.2d 407.) (See also Lewis v. American Hoist & Derrick Co. (1971) 20 C.A.3d 570, 579, 97 C.R. 798 ["Res ipsa loquitur has no application to strict liability in tort"]; Barrett v. Atlas Powder Co. (1978) 86 C.A.3d 560, 565, 150 C.R. 339 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

157 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XI. RES IPSA LOQUITUR

G. Limitations on Application of Doctrine.

4. Action Based on Strict Liability.

b. Reliance on Strict Liability and Negligence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 157

[§ 157] Reliance on Strict Liability and Negligence.

In Jiminez v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1971) 4 C.3d 379, 387, 93 C.R. 769, 482 P.2d 681, the court said: "No valid reason appears to require a plaintiff to elect whether to proceed on the theory of strict liability in tort or on the theory of negligence."

In the Jiminez case, plaintiff bought a ladder from defendant and kept it in a storage room. A few days before the accident, he tried to use it to prune a tree but stopped because the ground was too muddy. The time of the accident was the only other occasion he used the ladder. He placed it on the cement floor of his garage and began to climb up towards the attic. While he was standing on the second highest step, the ladder broke, he fell on it and was injured. At the trial, experts for both sides presented conflicting testimony on whether the ladder met safety code standards. The trial judge refused at first to give instructions on negligence or res ipsa loquitur but, in granting plaintiff's motion for a new trial after a defense verdict, declared that plaintiff was entitled to have those issues go to the jury. Held, the judge's failure to give instructions on negligence and res ipsa loquitur required affirmance of his new trial order.

(a) Defendants contended that where instructions are given on strict liability, instructions on negligence and res ipsa loquitur would not benefit a plaintiff. They pointed out that, to recover under a strict liability theory, the plaintiff need only show that he was injured by a defect in the product and that the product was defective when it left the hands of the retailer or manufacturer. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1241 et seq.) To recover in negligence, however, the plaintiff must prove an additional element: That the defect in the product was due to the defendant's negligence. (4 C.3d 383.) This argument is not persuasive:

"Although seemingly it would always be simpler for a plaintiff in a products case to recover under a theory of strict liability in tort where only two of the three elements of the negligence cause of action are necessary of proof, this is not necessarily true, and in some situations it will be to the plaintiff's advantage to have negligence instructions." (4 C.3d 383.)

(b) Res ipsa loquitur instructions could have been helpful to plaintiffs. Before adoption of the rules of strict liability, a plaintiff would have proved that the occurrence was of such a nature that it was probably the result of someone's negligence and that the defendant was probably the one responsible. The jury would then have been told to draw an inference of negligent causation by the defendant. The plaintiff could have prevailed if he failed to identify the inferred defect or even if he presented evidence of particular defects. This same proof supports application of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine, and current strict liability doctrines have not changed the rules. "Although the science of accident investigation has proceeded apace, it obviously has not reached the point where the scientists are able to explain all accidents." (4 C.3d 385.)

Thus, expert witnesses might not be able to tell why a bottle broke, a motor caught fire or a drive shaft became disconnected, or may be able to give only weak evidence as to the cause of the occurrences. "In such cases, the plaintiff, assuming all requirements of the res ipsa loquitur doctrine are met, should be permitted to claim, and have the jury instructed, that from the happening of the accident an inference arises that the defendant manufacturer was negligent and that it is incumbent upon the defendant to meet or balance the inference. He should not be denied the inference of negligence merely because he has presented some evidence of a defect or of specific acts of negligence." (4 C.3d 385.)

(c) With respect to the breaking ladder, a res ipsa loquitur instruction would have focused consideration on inferences from the accident itself, as distinct from the inferences, if any, from the expert testimony. The jury might have rejected plaintiff's expert testimony and concluded that he failed to prove a specific defect in the design or manufacture of the ladder. But if the jurors accepted plaintiff's testimony about his minimal use of the ladder and his description of the accident, they could reasonably have found that "it is more likely than not that when such an accident occurs, the manufacturer or seller of the ladder is negligent. Under the instruction, the jury could properly have concluded that the happening of the accident itself warranted an inference of negligence and that the inference had not been balanced." (4 C.3d 386.) A plaintiff may need the inference most when, as here, the evidence is sharply conflicting as to any particular defect in design or construction. (4 C.3d 387.) (See Bridgestone/Firestone v. Superior Court (1992) 7 C.A.4th 1384, 1394, 9 C.R.2d 709 [strict liability and negligence action for wrongful death resulting from failure of automobile tire; court states in dictum that plaintiffs may rely on res ipsa loquitur].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1428 et seq.

158 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XII. INCONSISTENT PRESUMPTIONS

A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 158

[§ 158] In General.

On rare occasions, the plaintiff and defendant may each invoke some presumption in his or her favor on the same issue. This happened more frequently in the past than it does now. Under the Evidence Code, presumptions are no longer treated as evidence (supra, §52), and some presumptions have been eliminated (supra, §99). Nevertheless, conflicts may still occur, and their evidentiary and procedural effects must somehow be resolved.

Unif. Rule 301(b) states: "If presumptions are inconsistent, the presumption applies that is founded upon weightier considerations of policy. If considerations of policy are of equal weight neither presumption applies." (13A U.L.A. (Part 1A) (Master Ed.), p. 220.) (See also 2 McCormick 5th, §344; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §201; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 29.)

The Evidence Code is silent on this subject, and a wholly different theory was invoked in Rader v. Thrasher (1962) 57 C.2d 244, 252, 18 C.R. 736, 368 P.2d 360. The special presumption of lack of consideration where a fiduciary obtains an advantage (former C.C. 2235, now Prob.C. 16004(c); see supra, §105) was held to prevail over the general presumption arising from a written instrument (former C.C.P. 1963(39), now C.C. 1614; see supra, §99). The court relied on the rule of statutory construction declared in C.C.P. 1859, that a particular statute prevails over a general statute. (See also In re Marriage of Haines (1995) 33 C.A.4th 277, 301, 39 C.R.2d 673, supra, §87 [conflict between presumption of undue influence arising from interspousal transactions and presumption that title reflects actual ownership resolved on basis of both overriding importance of interspousal presumption and its more specific nature].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

The substance of Unif. Rule 301(b), quoted in the text, was transferred to Unif. Rule 302(b) in the 1999 version of the Rules. (See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 23.)

See 2 McCormick 6th, §344. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.325; Evidence k.88

159 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XII. INCONSISTENT PRESUMPTIONS

B. Validity of Second Marriage.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 159

[§ 159] Validity of Second Marriage.

(1) In General. Conflict is likely to occur where the validity of a second marriage is attacked by evidence of a prior marriage, and there is no direct evidence of death or divorce (dissolution) terminating the prior marriage. Formerly, two presumptions were involved: (a) the presumption of continuity (former C.C.P. 1963(32)), based on probability and convenience, which supported the continuing status of the prior marriage; and (b) the presumption of innocence of crime or wrong (former C.C.P. 1963(1)), which, to avoid the crime of bigamy and incidental illegitimacy of children, supported the validity of the second marriage.

California, like most jurisdictions, gave greater weight to the presumption of innocence, hence, to the validity of the second marriage. This was expressed in a derivative presumption that the prior marriage was dissolved by death or divorce, and it was said that the party attacking the second marriage had a heavy burden of proving the negative fact that no divorce was obtained in any place in which the parties may have resided. (See Estate of Borneman (1939) 35 C.A.2d 455, 459, 96 P.2d 182; Estate of Winder (1950) 98 C.A.2d 78, 86, 219 P.2d 18; Estate of Vinson (1963) 212 C.A.2d 543, 546, 28 C.R. 94; Leslie v. Leslie (1966) 244 C.A.2d 516, 518, 519, 53 C.R. 402; 14 A.L.R.2d 7 [presumption of validity of second marriage]; on the effect of the conflicting presumptions in bigamy prosecutions, see People v. Burke (1941) 43 C.A.2d 316, 318, 110 P.2d 685.)

The Evidence Code abolished both of the statutory presumptions as presumptions--former C.C.P. 1963(32) became a maxim of jurisprudence (C.C. 3547; supra, §100), and former C.C.P. 1963(1) was restated in terms of burden of proof (Ev.C. 520; supra, §14). However, the derivative presumption survives. (See Estate of Smith (1973) 9 C.3d 74, 80, 106 C.R. 774, 507 P.2d 78; 11 Summary (9th), Husband and Wife, §§52, 53.)

(2) Presumption Overcome or Inapplicable. The presumption has been held overcome or inapplicable in the following cases: Estate of Smith (1949) 33 C.2d 279, 282, 201 P.2d 539 [plaintiff claimed portion of decedent's estate as his widow, even though after ceasing to live with him she remarried; evidence that records in counties where parties to first marriage were domiciled contained no divorce record, combined with decedent's mention of "wife" in will, were sufficient to overcome presumption]; Bancroft v. Bancroft (1935) 9 C.A.2d 464, 469, 50 P.2d 465 [presumption inapplicable in separate maintenance action; defendant contending he had divorced plaintiff (and married another) was testifying to fact peculiarly within his knowledge]; Vargas v. Superior Court (1970) 9 C.A.3d 470, 474, 477, 88 C.R. 281 ([presumption overcome where decedent lived with first wife continuously for 40 years up until his death, listed her as wife on tax returns, and held her out publicly as wife; it was not necessary to search records of all potential areas of conceivable divorce jurisdiction].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General.

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §§55, 56.

160 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XIII. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS

A. Nature of Conclusive Presumptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 160

[§ 160] Nature of Conclusive Presumptions.

The Evidence Code, following the usual practice, classifies presumptions as "conclusive or rebuttable." (Ev.C. 601; see also Ev.C. 620.) But a conclusive or indisputable presumption is entirely different from the ordinary rebuttable presumption: It need not have a logical basis, and no evidence may be received to contradict it. Hence, it is more accurately described as a rule of substantive law rather than of evidence. (See Kusior v. Silver (1960) 54 C.2d 603, 619, 7 C.R. 129, 354 P.2d 657; Gayton v. Pacific Fruit Express Co. (1932) 127 C.A. 50, 61, 15 P.2d 217; Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1947) 81 C.A.2d 37, 41, 183 P.2d 344; In re Heather B. (1992) 9 C.A.4th 535, 560, 11 C.R.2d 891; Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Superior Court (1997) 54 C.A.4th 337, 346, 62 C.R.2d 713, citing the text; 9 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2492; Law Rev. Com. Comments on Ev.C. 601, 620.)

The substantive nature of a conclusive presumption is illustrated by Kusior v. Silver, supra, in which the logical basis of the former conclusive presumption of legitimacy (infra, §161) was challenged. As the court pointed out, the Legislature has the power to determine, as a matter of social policy, that in a certain relationship between husband and wife, the husband is to be responsible and the integrity of the family maintained. (The presumption of legitimacy is now a presumption of parent-child relationship; see infra, §161.)

The Evidence Code continued, without change, the conclusive presumptions formerly set forth in C.C.P. 1962 (see infra, §161) with three exceptions:

(1) "A malicious and guilty intent, from the deliberate commission of an unlawful act, for the purpose of injuring another." This presumption (former C.C.P. 1962(1)) was eliminated after being disparaged by the Supreme Court as having "little meaning, either as a rule of substantive law or as a rule of evidence." (People v. Gorshen (1959) 51 C.2d 716, 731, 336 P.2d 492.)

(2) "The judgment or order of a court, when declared by this code to be conclusive." This presumption (former C.C.P. 1962(6)) was eliminated as a statement of a meaningless truism. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to repeal of C.C.P. 1962.)

(3) "Any other presumption which by statute is expressly made conclusive." This presumption (former C.C.P. 1962(7)) was replaced by the broader provision of Ev.C. 620 (infra, §164).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cf. People v. McCall (2004) 32 C.4th 175, 189, 8 C.R.3d 337, 82 P.3d 351, citing the text [former Health & Saf.C. 11383(f), which provided that possession of red phosphorus and iodine "shall be deemed" possession of hydriodic acid, did not create conclusive presumption but was simply definitional provision that specified conduct deemed criminal]; People v. Williams (2005) 130 C.A.4th 1440, 1446, 30 C.R.3d 909 [Veh.C. 2800.2(b) (driving while fleeing peace officer during which time three or more traffic violations occur or property damage occurs constitutes wilful or wanton disregard for safety of persons or property) establishes rule of substantive law rather than presumption that varies burden of proof]; People v. Burroughs (2005) 131 C.A.4th 1401, 1407, 32 C.R.3d 729 [in recommitment proceeding under mentally disordered offender law, prosecution, by presenting evidence of defendant's physical violence, did not rely on mandatory rebuttable presumption to meet requirement under P.C. 2970 that defendant could not be kept in remission without treatment, but simply proved conduct necessary to satisfy requirement; following McCall]; People v. Laughlin (2006) 137 C.A.4th 1020, 1027, 1028, 40 C.R.3d 737 [agreeing with People v. Williams].

161 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XIII. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS

B. Statutory Listing.

1. In Evidence Code.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 161

[§ 161] In Evidence Code.

The Evidence Code incorporates several conclusive presumptions drawn without substantive change from former C.C.P. 1962. Apart from the presumption of parentage, which was subsequently transferred to the Family Code (see infra, §162), these include:

(1) Facts Recited in Written Instrument. "The facts recited in a written instrument are conclusively presumed to be true as between the parties thereto, or their successors in interest; but this rule does not apply to the recital of a consideration." (Ev.C. 622, restating former C.C.P. 1962(2).) This is the doctrine of "estoppel by contract." (See Estate of Watkins (1940) 16 C.2d 793, 798, 108 P.2d 417, 109 P.2d 1; Palermo v. Pyke (1952) 111 C.A.2d 350, 354, 244 P.2d 726; Estate of Wilson (1976) 64 C.A.3d 786, 801, 134 C.R. 749, citing the text [provision in joint and mutual will transmuting joint tenancy property into community property]; on the consideration exception, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §99.) The doctrine does not apply to a declaration of homestead, which is not a "written instrument" between the parties. (Rich v. Ervin (1948) 86 C.A.2d 386, 390, 194 P.2d 809.)

(2) Estoppel by Own Statement or Conduct. "Whenever a party has, by his own statement or conduct, intentionally and deliberately led another to believe a particular thing true and to act upon such belief, he is not, in any litigation arising out of such statement or conduct, permitted to contradict it." (Ev.C. 623, restating former C.C.P. 1962(3).) This is the doctrine of "estoppel in pais." (See R. D. Reeder Lathing Co. v. Allen (1967) 66 C.2d 373, 378, 57 C.R. 841, 425 P.2d 785; San Diego Mun. Credit Union v. Smith (1986) 176 C.A.3d 919, 922, 923, 222 C.R. 467; 11 Summary (9th), Equity, §177 et seq.)

(3) Estoppel of Tenant To Deny Title of Landlord. "A tenant is not permitted to deny the title of his landlord at the time of the commencement of the relation." (Ev.C. 624, restating former C.C.P. 1962(4); see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §§570, 571.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Facts Recited in Written Instrument. See Santa Cruz v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (2000) 82 C.A.4th 1167, 1176, 99 C.R.2d 198 [estoppel by contract doctrine was inapplicable to recitals contained in complementary franchises entered into by cities and utilities; complementary franchise is contractual only in sense that parties mutually agree to enter into franchise relationship, but does not involve arm's-length negotiations and is offered on "take-it-or-leave-it" basis]; Quintanilla v. Dunkelman (2005) 133 C.A.4th 95, 117, 34 C.R.3d 557, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, Supp., §400 [Ev.C. 622 did not render recitals in Spanish-language written consent form signed by medical malpractice plaintiff conclusively binding on her as to issue of informed consent, where there was evidence that she was rushed through admissions process with no real opportunity to read form, that, although fluent in oral Spanish, she was not able to read language on form, and that she did not understand what procedures were going to be performed on her]; Stoneridge Parkway Partners, LLC v. MW Housing Partners III, L.P. (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1373, 1382, 64 C.R.3d 61 [erroneous recitals in loan agreement were not entitled to presumption of Ev.C. 622 where they related to consideration].

(New) Estoppel certificates: "Estoppel certificates are almost always used in commercial real estate transactions. They inform lenders and buyers of commercial property of the tenant's understanding of the lease agreement. Lenders and buyers rely upon the certificates in finalizing loans and purchases. Thus, application of [Ev.C.] 622 to estoppel certificates would promote certainty and reliability in commercial transactions. A contrary conclusion would defeat the purpose behind the widespread practice of using estoppel certificates. ... [W]e hold that, under section 622, when a tenant signs and delivers an estoppel certificate, as required under the commercial lease agreement, that tenant is bound to the recitations of fact contained therein." (Plaza Freeway Ltd. Partnership v. First Mountain Bank (2000) 81 C.A.4th 616, 628, 629, 96 C.R.2d 865 [in unlawful detainer action, trial judge erred in determining that lease termination date was date later than that stated in estoppel certificate and that tenant's exercise of option to renew was therefore timely]; see Robert T. Miner, M.D. v. Tustin Avenue Investors, LLC (2004) 116 C.A.4th 264, 272, 10 C.R.3d 178 [estoppel certificate signed by tenant created ambiguity and thus did not extinguish tenant's option right, where it stated that lease, which contained option right, remained in full force and effect, but also stated that tenant had no options but those listed in certificate and it listed none; distinguishing Plaza Freeway].)

(2) Estoppel by Own Statement or Conduct.

Cross-Reference: 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §190 et seq.

(3) Estoppel of Tenant To Deny Title of Landlord.

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §607.

162 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XIII. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS

B. Statutory Listing.

2. In Other Codes.

a. Parentage.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 162

[§ 162] Parentage.

(1) From Cohabitation of Spouses. Former C.C.P. 1962(5), restated in former Ev.C. 621, established a conclusive presumption that "the issue of a wife cohabiting with her husband, who is not impotent" is legitimate. (See Kusior v. Silver (1960) 54 C.2d 603, 619, 7 C.R. 129, 354 P.2d 657.)

The Uniform Parentage Act (Family C. 7600 et seq.) eliminated the concept of legitimacy and replaced it with that of parent-child relationship. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §409 et seq.) Family C. 7540, to which the presumption was transferred, now states that "the child of a wife cohabiting with her husband, who is not impotent or sterile, is conclusively presumed to be a child of the marriage." (See Steven W. v. Matthew S. (1995) 33 C.A.4th 1108, 1114, 1115, 39 C.R.2d 535 [presumption was improperly applied where "cohabitation" consisted of mother spending weekend with husband with whom she was no longer living]; In re Marriage of Freeman (1996) 45 C.A.4th 1437, 1449, 53 C.R.2d 439 [presumption applied even though husband had only one-fourth live sperm count needed to be considered fertile; "sterility" within meaning of statute "is limited to cases where, by a preponderance of the evidence, a party can demonstrate that the presumed father could not produce live sperm count at the time of conception"]; 26 Golden Gate L. Rev. 337 [circumvention of presumption in order to protect rights of unwed fathers]; on constitutionality of the presumption, see infra, §§165, 166.)

The presumption, however, is no longer "conclusive" in one sense: The husband may obtain a finding of nonpaternity if blood tests administered pursuant to the Uniform Act on Blood Tests to Determine Paternity (Family C. 7550 et seq.; see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §69) show that he is not the child's father. (Family C. 7541.)

(2) From Voluntary Declaration. Under Family C. 7570 et seq., parents of a new-born infant may execute a voluntary declaration of paternity at the hospital or other place of birth, thereby establishing a conclusive presumption of paternity having the same force and effect as the presumption under Family C. 7540, supra. Procedures for rescinding or setting aside the declaration are set forth in Family C. 7575. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §448D.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) From Cohabitation of Spouses. See 34 McGeorge L. Rev. 637 [proposal to abolish presumption arising from cohabitation and make related presumptions concerning paternity and maternity fully rebuttable].

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §17 et seq.(2) From Voluntary Declaration.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §31 et seq.

163 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XIII. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS

B. Statutory Listing.

2. In Other Codes.

b. Other Presumptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 163

[§ 163] Other Presumptions.

Additional conclusive presumptions in codes other than the Evidence Code include:

- (1) Consolidated or unified judicial districts' boundaries, as shown on approved and filed map. (Govt.C. 71042.6.)
- (2) Conviction of heir or beneficiary. A final judgment of conviction of a felonious and intentional killing is conclusive, with respect to the loss of the perpetrator's right to take the victim's estate by will or succession. (Prob.C. 254(a); see 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §62.)
- (3) Fraud against creditors, from transfer by insolvent person without consideration. (C.C. 3439.05; see Wright v. Salzberger (1932) 121 C.A. 639, 643, 9 P.2d 860; Bank One Texas v. Pollack (1994) 24 C.A.4th 973, 980, 29 C.R.2d 510; 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §469).
- (4) Partnership members. Corp.C. 15010.5 creates a conclusive presumption, in favor of any bona fide purchaser for value of partnership real property, that the persons listed in the recorded partnership statement are actually partners of the partnership. (See Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Superior Court (1997) 54 C.A.4th 337, 345, 346, 62 C.R.2d 713 [citing the text; in action by receiver of lender to recover loans, secured by partnership property, to two men who claimed, at time of loan, that they were partners, trial judge erred in applying presumption against plaintiff to find they were not partners on basis of amended partnership statements that deleted their names; presumption was not intended to bind anyone other than partnership itself]; 9 Summary (9th), Partnership, §27.)
- (5) Payment of insurance premium, from acknowledgment of receipt in policy. (Ins.C. 484; see 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §§212, 871.)
- (6) Payment of property tax, 30 years after it becomes a lien. (Rev.C. 2195; see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §609.)
- (7) Permissive use precluding acquisition of prescriptive right, from posting of specified notice. (C.C. 1008; see 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §466.)
- (8) Priority of most recent legislation. A later enacted statute in a legislative session is conclusively presumed to prevail over earlier enacted statutes in the same session, unless the later enacted statute contains an express provision to the contrary. However, a statute with a higher chapter number, and no express provisions to the contrary, is simply "presumed" (i.e., not conclusively) to prevail over statutes enacted at the same session, but with lower chapter numbers.

(Govt.C. 9605; see 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §94.)

(9) Sale under trust deed. Under C.C. 2924, a recital in a trustee's deed that statutory notice requirements were complied with is "conclusive evidence thereof in favor of bona fide purchasers and encumbrancers for value and without notice." (See Homestead Savings v. Darmiento (1991) 230 C.A.3d 424, 434, 435, 281 C.R. 367, 3 Summary (9th), Security Transactions in Real Property, Supp., §148 [upholding conclusive presumption against constitutional challenge].)

(10) Sanity. A defendant who does not plead "not guilty by reason of insanity" is conclusively presumed to have been sane at the time of the commission of the offense. (P.C. 1016; see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Pretrial Proceedings, §257.)

(11) Survival of persons dying in same calamity, under simultaneous death rules. (Prob.C. 220 et seq.; see 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §96 et seq.; 39 A.L.R.3d 1332, 1347 [presumptions under Uniform Simultaneous Death Act]; 3 Proof of Facts 235 [determination of order of death in case of common disaster].)

(12) Workers' compensation benefits. The following statutes create conclusive presumptions regarding workers' compensation benefits:

(a) Ins.C. 11650 [statutory provisions included in workers' compensation insurance policy]. (See Hubbert v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1936) 14 C.A.2d 171, 173, 58 P.2d 171.)

(b) Lab.C. 3501(a) [dependency of child under 18 or incapacitated]. (See Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1947) 81 C.A.2d 37, 41, 183 P.2d 344; 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §§309, 310.)

(c) Lab.C. 3501(b) [dependency of surviving spouse where he or she earned $ 30,000 or less in 12 months preceding employee's death]. (See 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, Supp., §307.)

(d) Lab.C. 4155 [election of governmental agency to bring excluded employments within Workers' Compensation Act]. (See 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §183.)

(e) Lab.C. 4662 [permanent total disability from certain kinds of serious injuries]. (See 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §275.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Conviction of heir or beneficiary.

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §293 et seq.(4) Partnership members.

Cross-Reference: 9 Summary (10th), Partnership, §29.

(5) Payment of insurance premium, from acknowledgment of receipt in policy.

Cross-Reference: Ins.C. 484, formerly discussed in Contracts, has been transferred to 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §§67, 219.

(7) Permissive use precluding acquisition of prescriptive right, from posting of specified notice.

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §404.

(8) Priority of most recent legislation.

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §115 et seq.

(9) Sale under trust deed.

Cross-Reference: 4 Summary (10th), Security Transactions in Real Property, §164.(11) Survival of persons dying in same calamity, under simultaneous death rules.

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §289 et seq.

(12) Workers' compensation benefits.

(b) Lab.C. 3501(a):

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §§312, 313.

(c) Lab.C. 3501(b):

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §313.

(d) Lab.C. 4155:

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §192.

(e) Lab.C. 4662:

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §287.

164 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XIII. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS

C. Nonstatutory Conclusive Presumptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 164

[§ 164] Nonstatutory Conclusive Presumptions.

(1) In General. "The presumptions established by this article, and all other presumptions declared by law to be conclusive, are conclusive presumptions." (Ev.C. 620.) Under the definition of "law" (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §17), this section recognizes the existence of judicially created conclusive presumptions. The former statute (C.C.P. 1962) did not, but in at least two instances, common law presumptions survived despite the "no others" provision:

(a) The much criticized conclusive presumption that a woman is capable of bearing children (the "fertile octogenarian rule"). (See Fletcher v. Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank (1920) 182 C. 177, 184, 187 P. 425; 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §388.)

(b) The agency doctrine of imputed notice, in civil actions (perhaps statutory, under C.C. 2332). (See Jaffe v. Heffner (1959) 173 C.A.2d 512, 518, 343 P.2d 374, citing the text; 2 Summary (9th), Agency and Employment, §99; on disputable nature of presumption in criminal action or contempt proceeding, see Freeman v. Superior Court (1955) 44 C.2d 533, 538, 282 P.2d 857.)

(2) Serious Error in Criminal Trial. The continued affirmation of common law rules, phrased as conclusive presumptions or otherwise, is quite a different matter from creating new conclusive presumptions. But in one area, that power appears to have been exercised: In criminal trials, the judicially developed doctrine of reversible error in effect conclusively presumes prejudice from certain types of serious error, e.g., denial of the right to counsel. In such cases, even overwhelming evidence of guilt will be disregarded. (See People v. Ortiz (1990) 51 C.3d 975, 988, 275 C.R. 191, 800 P.2d 547; 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §20 et seq.) The once numerous kinds of error subject to this rule, however, have been reduced in recent years. (See Rose v. Clark (1986) 478 U.S. 570, 106 S.Ct. 3101, 3106, 92 L.Ed.2d 460, 471, 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §14 ["if the defendant had counsel and was tried by an impartial adjudicator, there is a strong presumption that any other errors that may have occurred are subject to harmless-error analysis"]; People v. Cahill (1993) 5 C.4th 478, 509, 20 C.R.2d 582, 853 P.2d 1037, 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §12 [overruling earlier decisions to the effect that admission of involuntary confession was reversible error per se under California law].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General.

(a) Fertile octogenarian rule:

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §178.(b) Imputed notice:

Cross-Reference: 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §150.

165 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XIII. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS

D. Constitutionality.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 165

[§ 165] In General.

A conclusive presumption, which prevents a party from offering evidence on the issue, may sometimes be successfully challenged as a denial of due process. (See Vlandis v. Kline (1973) 412 U.S. 441, 93 S.Ct. 2230, 2236, 37 L.Ed.2d 63, 71 ["In sum, since Connecticut purports to be concerned with residency in allocating the rates for tuition and fees at its university system, it is forbidden by the Due Process Clause to deny an individual the resident rates on the basis of a permanent and irrebuttable presumption of nonresidence, when that presumption is not necessarily or universally true in fact, and when the State has reasonable alternative means of making the crucial determination"]; Cleveland Bd. of Education v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 94 S.Ct. 791, 800, 39 L.Ed.2d 52, 64 [mandatory unpaid leaves for pregnant schoolteachers and mandatory limitations on their return to work after giving birth violated Due Process Clause; irrebuttable presumptions unduly penalized female teachers for deciding to bear children]; Atkisson v. Kern County Housing Authority (1976) 59 C.A.3d 89, 97, 130 C.R. 375 [regulation of public housing authority automatically presumed immorality, irresponsibility and demoralization of tenant relations from fact that tenant cohabited with person of opposite sex to whom tenant was not married; irrebuttable presumption was thus invalid as denial of due process because it was not necessarily universally true in fact]; 27 Stanf. L. Rev. 449 [appropriate question should be whether statutory relationship between criterion and consequence violates Constitution]; 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §513.)

On the other hand, where the conclusive presumption does not implicate a constitutionally protected right, and it is rationally related to a legitimate state objective, the challenge is rejected. (See Weinberger v. Salfi (1975) 422 U.S. 749, 95 S.Ct. 2457, 2470, 45 L.Ed.2d 522, 542, 543 [upholding Social Security survivor benefits' duration-of-relation requirements]; Paterson v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1985) 171 C.A.3d 1126, 1130, 217 C.R. 881 [to the extent statute requiring automatic suspension of license following three convictions for drunk driving within 5 years created conclusive presumption that driver could not be entrusted with license, it was valid as reasonably related to strong legislative policy of ridding state's highways of drunk drivers]; 89 Harv. L. Rev. 77 [Salfi]; 30 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 211 [discussing Salfi and earlier cases it repudiated]; on due process challenges to presumptions implicating parent-child relationship, see infra, §166.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §650.

Valid presumptions: See Griffiths v. Superior Court (2002) 96 C.A.4th 757, 779, 117 C.R.2d 445 [B. & P.C. 2239(a), by creating conclusive presumption of physician's unprofessional conduct based on two or more misdemeanor convictions for offenses involving alcohol consumption, does not violate due process, as there is rational relationship between such offenses and ultimate fact (unprofessional conduct) required to be drawn; relying on Weinberger v. Salfi (1975) 422 U.S. 749, 95 S.Ct. 2457, 45 L.Ed.2d 522, text, p. 307].

166 of 166 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER III - Burden of Proof and Presumptions

XIII. CONCLUSIVE PRESUMPTIONS

D. Constitutionality.

2. Parentage.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Burden § 166

[§ 166] Parentage.

The constitutionality of applying the conclusive presumption of parentage (see supra, §161) in a particular case is determined by balancing the parties' private interests in establishing paternity against the state's interests in familial stability and the welfare of the child. (See Michelle W. v. Ronald W. (1985) 39 C.3d 354, 363, 216 C.R. 748, 703 P.2d 88.) Because the facts of each situation are unique, the result of the balancing process varies, as illustrated below.

(1) Challenge by Child. In Estate of Cornelious (1984) 35 C.3d 461, 198 C.R. 543, 674 P.2d 245, a 27-year-old adult woman sought to prove she was the child of an intestate decedent. Because her mother was married and lived with her husband at the time plaintiff was conceived, and he was neither impotent nor sterile, she was conclusively presumed under former Ev.C. 621(a) (see supra, §162) to be the child of her mother's husband, and not of the decedent. Despite compelling evidence that the decedent was her father, the trial judge applied the presumption. Held, plaintiff's due process rights were not violated.

The presumption is ancient and promotes the important social policies of preserving the integrity of the family and protecting the welfare of children. (35 C.3d 465.) In response to criticism, it has been supplied with exceptions allowing a challenge, on the basis of blood test evidence, within 2 years of birth (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §71), probably because during that early period there is less of a parent-child relationship to protect. (35 C.3d 465, 466.) Here the alleged natural father is dead, and plaintiff's main interest is simply to gain a right to inherit his estate (a right that his sisters also claim). The state's competing interests are well served by applying the presumption, because plaintiff had a true family relationship with her mother's husband, who reared and supported her and died thinking he was her father. (35 C.3d 467, distinguishing Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 92 S.Ct. 1208, 31 L.Ed.2d 551, 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §513, and In re Lisa R. (1975) 13 C.3d 636, 119 C.R. 475, 532 P.2d 123, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §404, in which putative fathers sought to care for and nurture their own children.) (See also Susan H. v. Jack S. (1994) 30 C.A.4th 1435, 1440, 1444, 37 C.R.2d 120 [application of conclusive parentage presumption did not infringe any interest of child's worthy of constitutional protection; there was no relationship between child and putative father, and putative father had no interest in creating one].)

(2) Challenge by Natural Father: Presumption Properly Applied. In Michelle W. v. Ronald W., supra, two men claimed to be the father of a 7-year-old girl (Michelle). One man (Ronald) was the husband of the girl's mother at the time Michelle was conceived, he fulfilled all the responsibilities of a father to her and, after divorcing the mother, assumed the obligation of support. The other man (Donald) had had sexual relations with the mother at the time of conception and later married her, holding out Michelle as his natural child. The trial judge applied the presumption, finding that Ronald was the father. Held, this was proper. In those cases where application of the presumption has been found violative of due process, the state was seeking to terminate or prevent the establishment of a parent-child relationship. (39 C.3d 362.) Here Donald was seeking a declaration of fatherhood notwithstanding the established and continuing relationship between Ronald and Michelle. His private interest in doing so did not outweigh the state's substantial interest in familial stability and the child's welfare. (39 C.3d 362, 363.)

Michelle's own due process claim, because it was asserted through a guardian ad litem, may or may not have represented her true wishes. In any case, she was not being threatened with a termination of her association with Donald, nor was she being prevented from obtaining information as to who her biological father was. The state's interests here too outweighed her abstract interest in vindicating true parentage. (39 C.3d 364.) (See Michael H. v. Gerald D. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 995, 1008, 1009, 236 C.R. 810 [presumption applied to defeat paternity claim of man who had had affair with child's mother at time of child's conception; even though blood tests showed he was almost certainly biological father, his claim, opposed by mother and her husband, would disrupt existing family unit]; Michael H. v. Gerald D. (1989) 491 U.S. 110, 109 S.Ct. 2333, 2346, 105 L.Ed.2d 91, 110, 111 [affirming Court of Appeal judgment and declining to decide whether child has liberty interest, symmetrical with parent's, in maintaining filial relationship]; Dawn D. v. Superior Court (1998) 17 C.4th 932, 942, 72 C.R.2d 871, 952 P.2d 1139 [following U.S. Supreme Court holding in Michael H.; because alleged biological father who lacked presumed father status had no constitutionally protected liberty interest in being allowed to form parental relationship with child, application against him of statutory presumption in favor of mother's husband did not deprive him of due process]; Rodney F. v. Karen M. (1998) 61 C.A.4th 233, 239, 71 C.R.2d 399 [presumption violates neither due process nor equal protection; following Michelle W.; 103 Harv. L. Rev. 177 [Supreme Court opinion in Michael H.; 20 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 705, 734 [Michelle W.].)

(3) Challenge by Natural Father: Presumption Violative of Due Process. In re Melissa G. (1989) 213 C.A.3d 1082, 261 C.R. 894, was a dependency proceeding in which the court ordered blood tests establishing to a near certainty that the father of the subject minor was her mother's husband (Felix), with whom the minor had been living since shortly after her birth. Nevertheless, because the mother had been married to another man (Fermin) at the time the minor was conceived, the trial judge ruled that he was compelled to apply the presumption and ignore the results of the blood test. Held, reversed. Felix's interest in a paternal relationship with the minor was far more significant than that of the putative father in Michael H.. Felix had lived with her for several years, while Fermin had no ongoing relationship with her. Further, the public interest in the minor's welfare encompassed her sibling relationship with her younger sister (Felix's other daughter). (213 C.A.3d 1089.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Challenge by Child.

Stanley v. Illinois:

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §650.

In re Lisa R.:

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §603.(3) Challenge by Natural Father: Presumption Violative of Due Process. In Brian C. v. Ginger K. (2000) 77 C.A.4th 1198, 92 C.R.2d 294, a baby girl was conceived at a time when the girl's mother was having an affair with Brian but was still cohabiting with her husband. At the time the baby was born, the mother had left her husband and was living with Brian. Brian's name appeared on the birth certificate as the father, and Brian cared for the child as a parent for more than a year after her birth. When the mother reconciled with her husband, she attempted to cut off all contact with Brian, and Brian brought an action to establish his paternity. The trial judge granted the mother's summary judgment motion on the basis of the conclusive presumption of Family C. 7540; judge made no ruling on Brian's request for DNA tests. Held, reversed. "[T]here are times when the due process clause of the federal Constitution precludes states from applying substantive rules of paternity law which have the effect of terminating an existing father-child relationship. This case is one of them. In particular, because the child was not 'born into' an extant marital union (in any meaningful sense) and because the plaintiff developed a substantial parent-child relationship with the child immediately upon her birth and for a year and one-half thereafter, he can bring an action to be declared the legal father of the child." (77 C.A.4th 1200.)

1 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

I. IN GENERAL

A. Distinction Between Direct and Circumstantial Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 1

[§ 1] Distinction Between Direct and Circumstantial Evidence.

"As used in this chapter, 'direct evidence' means evidence that directly proves a fact, without an inference or presumption, and which in itself, if true, conclusively establishes that fact." (Ev.C. 410.)

"Indirect evidence" was formerly defined by statute as evidence tending to establish the fact in dispute by proving another. This archaic term is seldom used to describe what is called "circumstantial evidence," and the definition was omitted from the Evidence Code. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to repeal of C.C.P. 1832.)

The distinction between direct and circumstantial evidence is not, however, merely one of description or classification; it has a special significance in criminal cases where the defendant asks for the standard instruction on sufficiency of circumstantial evidence. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §142.) Accordingly, a working definition of the latter term and a practical means of distinguishing the two are important.

Both are given in People v. Goldstein (1956) 139 C.A.2d 146, 152, 293 P.2d 495: "Direct evidence is that which is applied to the fact to be proved, immediately and directly, and without the aid of any intervening fact or process: as where, on a trial for murder, a witness positively testifies he saw the accused inflict the mortal wound, or administer the poison. Circumstantial evidence is that which is applied to the principal fact, indirectly, or through the medium of other facts, from which the principal fact is inferred. The characteristics of circumstantial evidence, as distinguished from that which is direct, are, first, the existence and presentation of one or more evidentiary facts; and, second, a process of inference, by which these facts are so connected with the fact sought, as to tend to produce a persuasion of its truth. ... It has been said that circumstantial evidence, as distinguished from direct evidence, is testimony not based on actual personal knowledge or observation of the facts in controversy, but of other facts from which deductions are drawn, showing indirectly the facts sought to be proved." (See People v. Malbrough (1961) 55 C.2d 249, 251, 10 C.R. 632, 359 P.2d 30; People v. Pruitt (1969) 269 C.A.2d 501, 505, 75 C.R. 125; People v. Nealy (1991) 228 C.A.3d 447, 451, 279 C.R. 36 [phone calls requesting "doves" and heard by officer while executing warrant in defendant's apartment were circumstantial evidence that rock cocaine seized was possessed for purpose of sale]; 1 McCormick 5th, §185, 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §25, 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §313; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.00; 1 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, Chap. 19.)

The term "circumstantial evidence" emphasizes the effect of the evidence--the necessity of drawing inferences from it. "An inference is a deduction of fact that may logically and reasonably be drawn from another fact or group of facts found or otherwise established in the action." (Ev.C. 600(b).) The other "fact or group of facts" from which the inferences are to be drawn may be established by any kind of competent and relevant evidence, e.g., testimony, real or demonstrative evidence, or documentary evidence.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CACI, No. 202 [difference between direct evidence and circumstantial evidence (referred to as "indirect evidence")]; CALCRIM, No. 223 [Direct and Circumstantial Evidence: Defined]; 1 McCormick 6th, §185. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.338(2); Evidence k.100

2 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

I. IN GENERAL

B. Testimony as Circumstantial Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 2

[§ 2] Testimony as Circumstantial Evidence.

It is obvious that the classification of circumstantial and testimonial evidence is not mutually exclusive; i.e., testimony may be direct evidence of one fact, but circumstantial evidence of another. Thus, "the testimony of a witness that the defendant admitted guilt would seem to be direct evidence that an admission or confession was made by defendant but circumstantial evidence of the truth of what was admitted." (People v. Koenig (1946) 29 C.2d 87, 91, 173 P.2d 1; see People v. Gould (1960) 54 C.2d 621, 629, 7 C.R. 273, 354 P.2d 865 [admission]; People v. Di Giacomo (1961) 193 C.A.2d 688, 696, 14 C.R. 574, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Governmental Authority, §76 [expert's comparison of handwriting]; 1 McCormick 5th, §185 [pointing out that testimony that A fled from scene of murder would be direct evidence of his flight and circumstantial evidence of guilt (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §107)]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §25.)

In People v. Goldstein (1956) 139 C.A.2d 146, 293 P.2d 495, supra, §1, involving the circumstantial evidence instruction (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §142), the court held that expert testimony of an officer as to the nature of certain papers found on defendant's premises was circumstantial evidence from which the jury might infer that defendant acted as a bookmaker. The opinion reviews decisions in which the opinion of a chemist concerning the purity of tomato paste, testimony as to handwriting based on comparison of writings, the opinion of a ballistic expert that the death bullet was fired from defendant's gun, and testimony of officers that mash found in defendant's potato patch was suitable for distillation of alcoholic liquor, were held to be circumstantial evidence. (139 C.A.2d 153, 154.)

Another illustration is the use of testimony of a grantor, testator, or alleged incompetent as circumstantial evidence on the issue of mental capacity and condition. (See Estate of Moore (1919) 180 C. 570, 580, 583, 182 P. 285 [testator]; Guardianship of Waite (1939) 14 C.2d 727, 730, 97 P.2d 238 [right of alleged incompetent to testify in her own behalf]; Anderson v. Torrey (1951) 105 C.A.2d 671, 675, 234 P.2d 142 [grantor's confused testimony supported finding of his incapacity].)

In making a distinction between direct and circumstantial evidence, the Koenig case, supra, relied on the since-repealed provisions of C.C.P. 1832 (supra, §1). People v. McRae (1967) 256 C.A.2d 95, 111, footnote 4, 63 C.R. 854, suggests that repeal of the statute "may leave the way open for consideration of the general rule ... that oral confessions are direct and not circumstantial evidence."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 1 McCormick 6th, §185.

3 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

A. Definitions and Distinctions.

1. Materiality.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 3

[§ 3] Materiality.

It is fairly common practice to use the terms "relevant" and "material," and particularly their opposites--"irrelevant" and "immaterial"--as interchangeable and synonymous. Modern writers, however, point out that, although relevant is the broader term and is often used in the double sense of relevant and material (see Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 401; F.R. Evid., Rule 401; 1 Wharton, Crim. Evidence (15th ed.), §4:1; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 690), the distinction between the two concepts is substantial. A "material matter" is one "the existence or non-existence of which is provable in the action." (Model C., Rule 1(8).) In other words, materiality depends on the issues in the case; evidence that does not relate to a matter in issue is immaterial. (See Andalon v. Superior Court (1984) 162 C.A.3d 600, 604, footnote 3, 208 C.R. 899, quoting the text; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 690; 1 McCormick 5th, §185; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §2; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §304.)

What matters are in issue (and consequently material) is determined mainly by the pleadings, the rules in pleading, and the substantive law relating to the particular kind of case. (See 29 Cal. L. Rev. 690; 1 McCormick 5th, §185; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §2; on effect of admissions of matters alleged in the pleadings, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §97 et seq.) Under the liberal modern view, some matters not actually pleaded may become issues (and therefore material) when the case is tried on the theory that they are in issue. (See 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §402.) Conversely, matters pleaded and originally in issue may be eliminated by a pretrial order. (See 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §56.) Evidence to impeach a witness is "within the area of dispute" (and therefore material), though it may not relate to an issue made by the pleadings. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §185.)

In Trafton v. Youngblood (1968) 69 C.2d 17, 69 C.R. 568, 442 P.2d 648, 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §1148, a suit by a client against his former attorney, the trial court received evidence of the attorney's services as background for the attorney's claim of an account stated. After judgment for the client, the attorney sought to direct the reviewing court's attention to that evidence, contending that it showed the reasonable value of his services. Held, judgment affirmed; the reasonableness of services was not before the court. Evidence offered on one issue may establish facts supporting a different issue, provided both issues are being tried. But the evidence cannot determine an issue that the parties have left out of their pleadings. (69 C.2d 32.) (See Hughes v. Blue Cross of Northern Calif. (1989) 215 C.A.3d 832, 858, 263 C.R. 850, quoting the text and Trafton and adding: "The rule arises from the fundamental consideration, implied by due process, that a party must have notice of a claim and an opportunity to defend"; but see Lever v. Garoogian (1974) 41 C.A.3d 37, 39, 115 C.R. 856, citing the text [evidence of fraud held properly admitted under defendant's general denial to plaintiff's complaint on promissory note].)

Unfortunately, the terms "material" and "immaterial" have not always been used with precision; evidence that is within the issues (and therefore material), but is of slight probative value or significance in the case, has been described as "immaterial." To eliminate this confusing loose usage, the Evidence Code substitutes the word "disputed" for "material," and covers this correct concept of materiality in the single definition of "relevant evidence" (Ev.C. 210, infra, §4). (See People v. Hill (1992) 3 C.A.4th 16, 29, 4 C.R.2d 258, quoting the text.) "Remoteness" thus becomes a ground of discretionary exclusion under Ev.C. 352 (infra, §17).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §185. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.338 et seq.; Evidence k.99 et seq.

4 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

A. Definitions and Distinctions.

2. Relevancy.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 4

[§ 4] Relevancy.

(1) General Definitions. Relevancy is concerned with the probative quality of the evidence offered. (See 29 Cal. L. Rev. 690 ["Relevancy, as the word itself indicates, is not an inherent characteristic of any item of evidence but exists as a relation between an item of evidence and a proposition sought to be proved"]; 22 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1039 [An Overview of Relevance and Hearsay: A Nine Step Analytical Guide]; 1 McCormick 5th, §185 ["The second aspect of relevance is probative value, the tendency of evidence to establish the proposition that it is offered to prove"]; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §10; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §307; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 5; Firlotte v. Jessee (1946) 76 C.A.2d 207, 210, 172 P.2d 710 ["Evidence is relevant not only when it tends to prove or disprove the precise fact in issue, but when it tends to establish a fact from which the existence or non-existence of the fact in issue can be directly inferred"]; People v. Lint (1960) 182 C.A.2d 402, 415, 6 C.R. 95, infra, §89, quoting the text; Larson v. Solbakken (1963) 221 C.A.2d 410, 419, 34 C.R. 450, quoting the text; People v. Warner (1969) 270 C.A.2d 900, 908, 76 C.R. 160, citing the text; Marocco v. Ford Motor Co. (1970) 7 C.A.3d 84, 91, 86 C.R. 526, citing the text; Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 C.A.3d 462, 467, footnote 3, 93 C.R. 270 ["Relevancy is probative worth. The most accepted test of relevancy is: Does the evidence offered render the desired inference more probable than it would be without the evidence?"]; People v. Garceau (1993) 6 C.4th 140, 177, 24 C.R.2d 664, 862 P.2d 664 ["The test of relevance is whether the evidence tends 'logically, naturally, and by reasonable inference' to establish material facts such as identity, intent, or motive"]; In re Romeo C. (1995) 33 C.A.4th 1838, 1843, 40 C.R.2d 85 ["Evidence is relevant when no matter how weak it is it tends to prove a disputed issue"]; F.R. Evid., Rule 401 ["'Relevant evidence' means evidence having any tendency to make the existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action more probable or less probable than it would be without the evidence"]; 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §83.) (For exhaustive analysis of modern theories of relevancy, see 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §37.1 et seq.)

The Evidence Code defines relevant evidence as evidence "having a tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action." (Ev.C. 210.)

(2) Erroneous Concept of "Legal Relevancy." There are occasional expressions to the effect that inadmissible hearsay statements or opinions are irrelevant; also that evidence, though logically relevant (tending to prove a material matter), is so remote or conjectural, i.e., of so slight persuasive value, as to be legally irrelevant. And sometimes the exclusion of evidence for the policy reason of undue prejudice is placed on the ground of irrelevancy.

This splitting of the relevancy doctrine into "logical" and "legal" phases has been strongly criticized as useless and misleading. The better view seems to be to consider relevancy a single concept, and to treat all exclusions of logically relevant evidence as exceptions based on policy; e.g., remote or conjectural matter may be relevant but is excluded because it would result in an undue consumption of time. (See 29 Cal. L. Rev. 701; 1 McCormick 5th, §185; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §12; infra, §24.)

(3) Relation to Circumstantial Evidence. The test of materiality must be applied to any kind of evidence. But the concept of relevancy is normally discussed in connection with circumstantial evidence and not testimonial evidence. The reason is that, most often, in the case of testimony, the only inference sought to be drawn is the truth of the fact from the witness' statement of it, and this inference (that the witness properly recollected and truthfully stated the fact) is usually considered a part of the law of qualification of witnesses. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §185; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §475.) It should be recalled, however, that testimonial, documentary, or real evidence may be circumstantial evidence and subject to the same test of relevancy. (See supra, §§1, 2.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Definitions. See 1 McCormick 6th, §185.(2) Erroneous Concept of "Legal Relevancy." See The New Wigmore: Selected Rules of Limited Admissibility §1.9.2; 1 McCormick 6th, §185.

(3) Relation to Circumstantial Evidence. See 1 McCormick 6th, §185.

5 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

1. In General.

a. Admissibility of Relevant Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 5

[§ 5] Admissibility of Relevant Evidence.

The Thayer doctrine, accepted by most authorities, is that all relevant evidence (see supra, §4) is admissible unless excluded for some special reason. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §184; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §10; 13A (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 289 [Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 402]; People v. Jones (1954) 42 C.2d 219, 222, 266 P.2d 38 [quoting Wigmore: "All facts having rational probative value are admissible, unless some specific rule forbids"]; Dike v. Golden State Co. (1954) 125 C.A.2d 6, 11, 269 P.2d 619 [exclusion of relevant evidence held reversible error]; People v. Curtis (1965) 232 C.A.2d 859, 869, 43 C.R. 286, quoting the text; People v. Reeder (1978) 82 C.A.3d 543, 552, 553, 147 C.R. 275, infra, §22; Cramer v. Morrison (1979) 88 C.A.3d 873, 879, 153 C.R. 865, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §74; People v. Deletto (1983) 147 C.A.3d 458, 478, 195 C.R. 233.)

Ev.C. 351 uses this approach: "Except as otherwise provided by statute, all relevant evidence is admissible." (On exclusion of relevant evidence for policy reasons, see infra, §8.)

The Truth-in-Evidence provision of Proposition 8, adopted in June 1982, states that, except in the specified situations, "relevant evidence shall not be excluded in any criminal proceeding." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d).) This provision has had a significant impact on California evidence law. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8 et seq.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 402 states: "All relevant evidence is admissible, except as otherwise provided by the Constitution of the United States, by Act of Congress, by these rules, or by other rules prescribed by the Supreme Court pursuant to statutory authority." (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §§90, 91; 64 Am.Jur. Trials 543 [federal relevancy rules].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 28 [Unif. Rules, Rule 402]; 1 McCormick 6th, §184.

6 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

1. In General.

b. Exclusion of Irrelevant Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 6

[§ 6] Exclusion of Irrelevant Evidence.

"No evidence is admissible except relevant evidence." (Ev.C. 350; see 1 McCormick 5th, §184; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §9; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 689; F.R. Evid., Rule 402 ["Evidence which is not relevant is not admissible"]; 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §§90, 91; Brokopp v. Ford Motor Co. (1977) 71 C.A.3d 841, 853, 139 C.R. 888; People v. Slone (1978) 76 C.A.3d 611, 631, 143 C.R. 61; People v. Kitt (1978) 83 C.A.3d 834, 849, 148 C.R. 447 ["There is no discretion vested in a court to admit irrelevant evidence"]; People v. Babbitt (1988) 45 C.3d 660, 681, 248 C.R. 69, 755 P.2d 253.)

This basic proposition calls for application of the test of relevancy (infra, §26), but also, at times, for the rules governing misconduct of counsel. Indirect methods of bringing irrelevant matters before the jury, by improper questions on direct or cross-examination, will fail in accomplishing their ostensible purpose; i.e., objections will be sustained and the irrelevant evidence will be excluded. But the effect of the maneuver may be more prejudicial than the actual admission of the inadmissible evidence. The judge must then impose an appropriate sanction: rebuke to counsel, admonition to the jury, or, in extreme cases, a mistrial. (See 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §234 et seq.; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §§555, 556; on admissibility of evidence relating to uncontested issues, see infra, §11 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Stitely (2005) 35 C.4th 514, 549, 26 C.R.3d 1, 108 P.3d 182 [in prosecution for capital murder with special circumstance of murder during commission of unlawful sodomy, trial judge properly excluded evidence that victim had .26 blood-alcohol level; nothing in defendant's offer of proof showed how evidence affected victim's judgment and behavior on night she was killed, or increased chance that she consented to vaginal and anal intercourse]; 1 McCormick 6th, §184.

7 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

1. In General.

c. Exclusion of Relevant Evidence Under Exclusionary Rules.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 7

[§ 7] Exclusion of Relevant Evidence Under Exclusionary Rules.

(1) General Principle. The proviso in Ev.C. 351 (supra, §5) makes applicable all rules of exclusion, in the Constitution, in the Evidence Code, or in other Codes. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 351; Kaplan v. Superior Court (1971) 6 C.3d 150, 160, 98 C.R. 649, 491 P.2d 1 [proviso makes applicable exclusionary rules based on constitutional principles].) And, because the relevancy concept includes materiality, it is always necessary to consider first whether the evidence relates to a fact in issue ("disputed fact"). (See supra, §4.)

However, exclusionary rules in criminal cases must be examined in the light of Proposition 8, which, with specified exceptions, requires admission of all relevant evidence. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8 et seq.)

(2) Rejection of Original Uniform Rule. The drafters of the Uniform Rules of Evidence, pursuant to a suggestion of Wigmore, supported by an A.B.A. Committee and the Model Code of Evidence, adopted the following rule: "If upon the hearing there is no bona fide dispute between the parties as to a material fact, such fact may be proved by any relevant evidence, and exclusionary rules shall not apply, subject, however, to Rule 45 [discretionary exclusion] and any valid claim of privilege." The theory of this exception is that invocation of exclusionary rules (e.g., opinion rule or hearsay rule) to keep out relevant evidence on a matter actually admitted results in waste of court time and unwarranted expense to litigants and the public. (See Model C., Rule 3, Comment.) In practice, the judge would be required, in some manner, to ascertain the fact that the adverse party, despite allegations or denials in the party's pleadings, does not really dispute the fact.

The Law Revision Commission rejected this rule for the following reasons: (1) In criminal trials, it would violate the fundamental principle that requires proper proof by the prosecution of all matters relating to guilt. (2) In civil cases, the basic objective is already attainable in discovery proceedings (requests for admissions, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §157 et seq.) and at pretrial conferences (see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §52 et seq.), and it is not desirable to allow a party to bypass these statutory procedures and belatedly invoke their equivalent at the trial. (3) Determination of the issue of "no bona fide dispute" by the trial judge would be difficult, and could encourage appeals asserting error in the determination. (6 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 14.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

8 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

1. In General.

d. Exclusion of Relevant Evidence for Policy Reasons.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 8

[§ 8] In General.

Relevant evidence is subject to a number of exclusionary rules making certain kinds of evidence incompetent because of doubtful reliability; e.g., the opinion rule, the hearsay rule, and the secondary evidence rule. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §31; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §1; 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §27.) But even when the evidence offered is relevant and not subject to any exclusionary rule of competency, it still may be excludable for policy reasons distinct from probative value. These so-called "counterbalancing factors" of "extrinsic policy" have been listed as (1) undue prejudice, (2) unfair surprise, (3) confusion of issues, and (4) undue consumption of time. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §§184, 185; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §10A; Model C., Rule 303; 13A (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 466 [Unif. Rules, Rule 403]; on exclusion as result of balancing probative value against potential prejudice, see infra, §17.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 403 incorporates all of these factors: "Although relevant, evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence." (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §92 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §324 et seq.; 49 So. Cal. L. Rev. 220.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 46 [Unif. Rules, Rule 403]; 1 McCormick 6th, §§184, 185; 37 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1317 [arguing that federal court improperly applied elements of F.R. Evid., Rule 403 to admit witness' racial voice identification testimony].

9 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

1. In General.

d. Exclusion of Relevant Evidence for Policy Reasons.

2. Miscellaneous Exclusionary Rules.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 9

[§ 9] Miscellaneous Exclusionary Rules.

(1) Evidence Code and Other Statutes. Under Ev.C. 351 (supra, §5), all relevant evidence is admissible "[e]xcept as otherwise provided by statute." Thus, in addition to express exclusionary rules in the Evidence Code, there are provisions in other codes making certain matters confidential or inadmissible in evidence. (See statutory list set forth in Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 351.)

The important rules are in the Evidence Code:

- (a) The hearsay rule (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §1 et seq.).
- (b) The rules of privilege (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §59 et seq.).
- (c) Rules of extrinsic policy excluding evidence involving undue prejudice (infra, §132 et seq.).
- (d) Ev.C. 1156, 1157 et seq. (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §503 et seq.), excluding evidence of medical committee records.
- (e) Ev.C. 351.1 (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §95), excluding evidence of polygraph tests.
- (f) Ev.C. 1150 (7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §392 et seq., and 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Judgment, §84), limiting evidence in new trial proceedings to impeach a jury's verdict.

(2) Judicially Declared Rules. Another group of exclusionary rules has been judicially developed to implement constitutional guarantees, such as protection against unreasonable search and seizure, involuntary confessions or admissions, and the right to counsel and to remain silent at the accusatory stage of police interrogation. (See 42 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1 [guaranty of free speech and expression as limiting admission of evidence]; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §51 et seq. [confessions and admissions]; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §131 [Miranda rule on right to remain silent at accusatory stage]; 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §1 et seq. [protection against unreasonable search and seizure].) (On effect of Truth-in-Evidence measure (Proposition 8), see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

10 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

2. Evidence on Uncontested Issue.

a. General Rule of Exclusion.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 10

[§ 10] General Rule of Exclusion.

(1) Adoption of Rule. A problem of policy arises where a particular matter is part of the cause of action but is either admitted in the pleadings or at the trial. The typical example is a personal injury or wrongful death action in which the defendant admits liability and seeks to confine the evidence to the amount of damages. There is some authority for the view, followed in earlier California cases, that the trial judge has discretion to allow the plaintiff to prove the relevant facts and circumstances giving rise to the cause of action, without which the jury might be unable to accord proper weight to the evidence. (See Martin v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1928) 203 C. 291, 299, 264 P. 246; Rowe v. Rennick (1931) 112 C.A. 576, 579, 297 P. 603; Behrendt v. Times-Mirror Co. (1938) 30 C.A.2d 77, 83, 85 P.2d 949; 19 Cal. L. Rev. 643.)

These cases were disapproved and a contrary rule laid down in Fuentes v. Tucker (1947) 31 C.2d 1, 187 P.2d 752. Plaintiffs in two consolidated cases sued for wrongful death of their minor sons, killed in an automobile accident. On the day of the trial, defendant filed an amended answer in each case admitting "that he was and is liable for the death of the deceased ... and the damages directly and proximately caused thereby." Plaintiffs were nevertheless allowed to prove the circumstances of the accident, including the facts that defendant was intoxicated and that the children were thrown 80 feet by the blow. Held, introduction of the evidence was error (although, in view of the small verdict, not prejudicial).

The court pointed out that facts alleged in the complaint and not controverted by the answer are not in issue; evidence of them is not only unnecessary, but also immaterial and irrelevant. Hence, where an issue has been completely removed from the case by an unequivocal admission in the answer, the trial judge should not receive evidence on it. One reason is to avoid confusion of the jury, but a broader policy is also involved. "This is merely one aspect of the larger problem of delay in the conduct of litigation. Every court has a responsibility to the public to see that justice is administered efficiently and expeditiously and that the facilities of the court are made available at the first possible moment to those whose cases are awaiting trial. It would be an unwarranted waste of public funds, and a manifest injustice to the many litigants seeking an early trial date, to allow counsel in a particular case to occupy substantial periods of time in the useless presentation of evidence on matters not in controversy." (31 C.2d 4.)

(2) Illustrations. In Aramenta v. Churchill (1954) 42 C.2d 448, 456, 267 P.2d 303, the action was for wrongful death resulting from a truck backing into decedent. Plaintiff sued D, the truck driver, and A, his wife who was the registered owner of the car, in two counts, alleging that (a) the driver was the agent of his wife, and (b) the wife was negligent in entrusting the truck to a reckless driver. Defendants admitted the first count, but denied the second. Thus, superficially they denied recklessness of the driver, and plaintiff tried to introduce evidence of D's 37 traffic violations and conviction of manslaughter, all known to his wife. Held, this evidence was properly excluded where the wife, at the time of the offer, again admitted liability for all damages if the husband were found liable. Although her admission was not directly responsive to the second count, the two counts were merely alternative theories of liability of the wife; and, on liability for the husband's tort, if any, her admission was unqualified. "Since the legal issue of her liability for the alleged tort was thereby removed from the case, there was no material issue remaining to which the offered evidence could be legitimately directed." (42 C.2d 457.) (See Sumrall v. Butler (1951) 102 C.A.2d 515, 519, 227 P.2d 881 [admission at beginning of trial]; People v. Hall (1980) 28 C.3d 143, 152, 167 C.R. 844, 616 P.2d 826, infra, §15; 80 A.L.R.2d 1224 [evidence of circumstances of accident on issue of damages in tort action for personal injury, wrongful death, or property damage]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.61.)

In Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 C.A.3d 173, 85 C.R. 659, infra, §151, a personal injury case, plaintiff's receipt of a $ 75,000 pretrial settlement from a codefendant was undisputed. Despite plaintiff's proposal that his prospective judgment be reduced by this amount, without calling the procedure to the jury's attention, the remaining defendant was allowed to introduce evidence about the settlement. Held, this was prejudicial error. The situation was closely analogous to an admission of liability by a defendant. Evidence of that liability is precluded unless it is relevant to some distinct issue remaining in the case. "[N]either side is entitled to litigate a nonexistent issue for no purpose other than to alter the decisional context in his favor." (6 C.A.3d 178, citing the text.)

Elimination of an issue in discovery proceedings has a similar effect. Thus, in Campain v. Safeway Stores (1972) 29 C.A.3d 362, 104 C.R. 752, plaintiff sought damages for personal injuries allegedly suffered when she slipped and fell in defendant's market. Her complaint asserted that the accident prevented her from attending to her usual occupation and her attorney intimated that there might be a claim for prospective loss of earnings, but the combined effect of her deposition and answers to interrogatories was that neither loss of earnings or earning capacity would be raised. At trial, however, she offered evidence of prospective employment. Over objection, the evidence was admitted. Held, this was error; the discovery had set the issue at rest. Defendant was genuinely surprised and unprepared to meet the claim, and the surprise prejudiced its defense. (29 C.A.3d 366.) (But see Kelly v. New West Fed. Savings (1996) 49 C.A.4th 659, 673, 56 C.R.2d 803, infra, §11.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Correction: Page 331, second full paragraph, line 1, "Aramenta" should be "Armenta".

11 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

2. Evidence on Uncontested Issue.

b. Exceptions and Distinctions.

1. Factual Description of Injury.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 11

[§ 11] Factual Description of Injury.

In Kelly v. New West Fed. Savings (1996) 49 C.A.4th 659, 56 C.R.2d 803, an action for injuries suffered by plaintiffs when they exited an elevator, one plaintiff testified at her deposition that she believed the accident involved the smaller of defendants' two elevators. Defendants then moved in limine to preclude plaintiffs from presenting any evidence relating to the larger elevator. The trial judge granted the motion. Held, this was error. "It is a misuse of a motion in limine to attempt to compel a witness or a party to conform his or her trial testimony to a preconceived factual scenario based on testimony given during pretrial discovery. One purpose of pretrial discovery is to pin down the testimony of parties and witnesses which can be used for impeachment at the time of trial. Amtech clearly succeeded in this regard. Other than issue preclusion based on responses to requests for admissions, sanctions for abuse of the discovery process, or a clear case of waiver or estoppel, a court abuses its discretion when it precludes a party from trying a case on a theory consistent with existing evidence, even though the pretrial testimony of the party relating to how the accident occurred is contrary to the theory." (49 C.A.4th 672, 673.) Even in Campain v. Safeway Stores (1972) 29 C.A.3d 362, 104 C.R. 752, supra, §10, where the appellate court found that plaintiff's pretrial election not to seek damages for loss of earnings proved prejudicial to defendant, the court did not preclude plaintiff from making such a claim; rather, it reversed the judgment and remanded the matter so that the damages issue could be retried after defendant had an opportunity for further discovery. (49 C.A.4th 673, 674.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

12 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

2. Evidence on Uncontested Issue.

b. Exceptions and Distinctions.

2. Defective Admission or Stipulation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 12

[§ 12] Defective Admission or Stipulation.

(1) Defective Admission. Evidence on the circumstances of an accident may properly be received despite an express admission of liability, where the admission "is ambiguous in form or limited in scope or where, during the trial of a case, a party seeks to deprive his opponent of the legitimate force and effect of material evidence by the bald admission of a probative fact." (Fuentes v. Tucker (1947) 31 C.2d 1, 7, 187 P.2d 752, supra, §10; see Sumrall v. Butler (1951) 102 C.A.2d 515, 520, 227 P.2d 881, infra, §13.)

(2) Stipulation With Unacceptable Conditions. In People v. Gambos (1970) 5 C.A.3d 187, 84 C.R. 908, defendant offered to stipulate that he had knowledge of the narcotic nature of heroin, but conditioned his offer on the prosecution's being prevented from using or commenting on the stipulation during the trial. The trial judge refused the stipulation. Held, no error. "[T]he stipulation may be treated as evidence, or at least as a substitute for evidence. The stipulation must be made known to the jury, and the district attorney must be permitted to point out that a necessary element of the charge, i.e., knowledge of the narcotic nature of the substance, is established by the stipulation." (5 C.A.3d 195.) Fears of improper comment on the stipulation were baseless; the trial judge would have prevented or appropriately dealt with misconduct. (5 C.A.3d 195.) (See People v. Lynn (1971) 16 C.A.3d 259, 270, 94 C.R. 16 [defendants' offer to stipulate did not cover crucial probative facts].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

13 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

2. Evidence on Uncontested Issue.

b. Exceptions and Distinctions.

3. Evidence Relevant on Distinct Issue.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 13

[§ 13] Evidence Relevant on Distinct Issue.

In a wrongful death action, where liability is admitted and the damages consist of pecuniary loss resulting from the death, the manner in which the death occurred is irrelevant. (Fuentes v. Tucker (1947) 31 C.2d 1, 5, 187 P.2d 752, supra, §10; Sumrall v. Butler (1951) 102 C.A.2d 515, 519, 227 P.2d 881.) But in a personal injury action, the force of the impact and other circumstances may tend to indicate the extent of the injuries suffered. (See Martin v. Miqueu (1940) 37 C.A.2d 133, 136, 98 P.2d 816.)

In the Sumrall case, supra, an automobile collision caused the death of parents and an injury to a daughter. The wrongful death and personal injury actions were, on motion of defendants, consolidated for trial; and, at the beginning of the trial, defendants admitted liability, and also admitted that the vehicles collided with great force and violence. Held, evidence of the nature of the accident was properly received under instructions that it was to be considered solely as proof of the daughter's injuries. The daughter sought, as one element, recovery for great shock, the allegation being denied by defendants. Her evidence was that the car was crushed, that she was trapped for some time, and that she was eventually released by someone breaking the back window and taking her out. The effect on her of this series of events was properly placed before the jury, and it could not have been covered by the bald admission of a violent impact. (102 C.A.2d 520.) (See 17 Stanf. L. Rev. 539 [Michigan automobile accident case; evidence of defendant son's reckless driving record admissible on issue of defendant father's negligent entrustment of car despite father's admission of vicarious liability]; People v. Maler (1972) 23 C.A.3d 973, 978, 100 C.R. 650 [defendant offered to stipulate that, if convicted of arson, he acted to defraud insurance company; evidence of prior fires was nonetheless admissible as relevant to arson count, for which there was no stipulation].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

14 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

2. Evidence on Uncontested Issue.

b. Exceptions and Distinctions.

4. Prosecution's Evidence on Element of Crime.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 14

[§ 14] Prosecution's Evidence on Element of Crime.

(1) In General. Where the prosecution must establish an element of the crime, a statement by counsel for the defendant that no issue will be made as to this element does not necessarily preclude its proof. This appears to be the effect of People v. Solis (1961) 193 C.A.2d 68, 75, 13 C.R. 813, although neither the reasoning nor the factual background make it a particularly strong authority. Defendant was charged with possession of marijuana, and knowledge of its character was an element of the crime (see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §90). In chambers, his counsel said that the knowledge issue would not be raised, and, in view of the authority of trial counsel, it would seem that this statement made it an uncontested issue. The court declared that the prosecution had to prove the element despite counsel's statement (193 C.A.2d 76), but then it found the proof entirely proper for a distinct reason: Defendant did not make good on the promise; he testified that he was unfamiliar with marijuana cigarettes. (193 C.A.2d 76.)

(2) Defense Cannot Force Election of Theory of Guilt. People v. McClellan (1969) 71 C.2d 793, 80 C.R. 31, 457 P.2d 871, raised the problem of uncontested issue in a unique situation. Defendant and his accomplice M committed an armed robbery, during the course of which both fired shots and two victims were killed. M pleaded guilty and testified against defendant. At the trial defense counsel offered to stipulate that, if the jury found that defendant was one of the robbers, he was guilty of two counts of first degree murder under the felony-murder rule. His purpose was to prevent introduction of evidence that defendant fired the fatal shots; and his theory was that, in view of the felony-murder rule, the issue of the actual killer was of no probative value in the main trial, and should not be permitted in evidence until a possible later trial on penalty. If he could keep it out of the guilt trial, he could concentrate on disputing the evidence identifying defendant as one of the robbers, instead of tacitly conceding defendant's participation by trying to show that M was the killer. Held, the trial judge properly allowed the prosecutor to reject the stipulation and offer evidence that defendant fired the shots.

The court first pointed out that the stipulation probably would not have had its intended effect, for the prosecutor, in establishing the identity of defendant as one of the robbers, would have been able to introduce testimony concerning the firing of shots at particular times and places. But the more compelling reasons for the holding were two:

(a) "[T]here is a strong policy against depriving the state's case of its persuasiveness and forcefulness by forcing the prosecutor to accept stipulations that soften the impact of the evidence in its entirety." (71 C.2d 802.) This policy is particularly important when the stipulation would preclude a coherent presentation of the evidence; and here, deletion of references to firing of shots would have made it difficult to prove what happened. (71 C.2d 802.)

(b) "[I]t is doubtful" whether the defendant could require the prosecution to seek conviction only under the felony-murder rule and prevent it from making out a case of first degree murder by premeditation as well. (71 C.2d 802.) (But see People v. Hall (1980) 28 C.3d 143, 167 C.R. 844, 616 P.2d 826, infra, §15.)

(3) Distinction: Stipulation on Knowledge of Narcotic. In a prosecution for selling narcotics, an essential element of the crime is knowledge of the narcotic nature of the substance sold, and one method of proof is by the highly prejudicial evidence of prior narcotic convictions. To avoid this damaging evidence, the defendant has a right to eliminate the issue by stipulation. In People v. Washington (1979) 95 C.A.3d 488, 157 C.R. 58, defendant's counsel said: "We are willing to stipulate Mr. Washington is familiar with heroin, the way it is packaged and the way it is sold. I'm not prepared to stipulate that Mr. Washington knew the contents of the yellow balloon in the prosecution's case." The trial judge refused to accept this limited stipulation, and the prosecution then offered evidence of a prior conviction. Held, this was reversible error. To require an admission of knowledge of the narcotic nature of the substance possessed or sold would be tantamount to a confession of guilt; and the stipulation offered would not have impaired the effectiveness of the prosecutor's case. (95 C.A.3d 492, citing People v. Sherren (1979) 89 C.A.3d 752, 152 C.R. 828, infra, §15.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. A fact, such as the defendant's intent, generally becomes disputed when it is raised by a plea of not guilty or a denial of an allegation. The general rule is that the prosecution in a criminal case cannot be compelled to accept a stipulation that would limit the prosecution's evidence if the effect would be to deprive the state's case of its persuasiveness and force. (People v. Thornton (2000) 85 C.A.4th 44, 48, 49, 101 C.R.2d 825, citing People v. Rowland (1992) 4 C.4th 238, 14 C.R.2d 377, 841 P.2d 897.) "We emphasize that this is a 'general rule.' The exception--which we count on the trial courts to recognize and enforce--is the instance in which the probative value of the evidence is substantially outweighed by its prejudicial effect." (85 C.A.4th 49, citing Ev.C. 352, text, §17 et seq.)

15 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

2. Evidence on Uncontested Issue.

c. Stipulation on Prior Conviction.

1. Former Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 15

[§ 15] Former Rule.

In People v. Sherren (1979) 89 C.A.3d 752, 152 C.R. 828, defendant, charged with violation of P.C. 12021 (felon in possession of firearm), offered to admit the prior felony conviction and moved that the jury not be informed of it. The motion was denied, and the fact of the prior conviction was brought out in the trial. Held, this was error. Although the prosecution cannot be compelled to accept a stipulation that deprives its case of forcefulness (see People v. McClellan (1969) 71 C.2d 793, 80 C.R. 31, 457 P.2d 871, supra, §14), where the defendant offers to stipulate to an element of the case that would involve highly prejudicial evidence, and the stipulation would not impair the effectiveness of the prosecution's case, it should be accepted. (89 C.A.3d 755.) In the present case, defendant "has given to the prosecution all the benefit, as it were, that the prosecution could legitimately obtain if it had to prove the conviction by the introduction of evidence." (89 C.A.3d 760.)

The Sherren rule was approved in People v. Hall (1980) 28 C.3d 143, 167 C.R. 844, 616 P.2d 826, a trial for robbery, in which defendant offered to stipulate that he was an ex-felon and would be guilty of violating P.C. 12021 if the jury found that he had possessed a firearm during the commission of the robbery. The prosecutor refused to stipulate, the trial judge denied defendant's motion to exclude evidence of his prior convictions, and evidence was offered of a prior robbery conviction. Held, this was error, though not prejudicial in this case.

(a) A fact that is "of consequence" to the prosecution's case is not "disputed" merely because the accused has pleaded not guilty. Hence, "if a defendant offers to admit the existence of an element of a charged offense, the prosecutor must accept that offer and refrain from introducing evidence of other crimes to prove that element to the jury." (28 C.3d 152.) The rule of exclusion is subject to exceptions where the facts retain some probative value or the stipulation is defective (see supra, §§12, 13). (28 C.3d 152, 153.)

(b) Defendant's offer to stipulate raised two issues: (1) He was entitled to prevent the jury from learning the nature of any prior felony conviction. P.C. 12021 makes it a crime for a person convicted of any felony to possess a concealable firearm; hence, omission of its nature would not impair the effectiveness of the prosecutor's case. (28 C.3d 153.) (2) He was also entitled to keep from the jury the fact that he had been convicted of any felony. Once he admitted his ex-felon status, the only remaining issue was whether he had possessed a concealable firearm. The prosecution's contention that this would allow the jury to acquit because they might not believe that simple possession should be criminal is not persuasive. "Instructions can be framed in such a manner that the potentially prejudicial prior conviction is not mentioned to the jury yet the jury can be informed that possession of a concealable firearm is not criminal under all circumstances." (28 C.3d 154; see footnote 7, suggesting possible modification of CALJIC, No. 12.40.)

(c) "[I]n a prosecution for violating section 12021 the element of a prior conviction of a felony may not be given to a jury if the accused stipulates to it. This rule applies unless the state can clearly demonstrate that its application will legitimately impair the prosecutor's case or preclude presentation of alternate theories of guilt. No opinion is expressed on the application of this rule to any other section of the Penal Code." (28 C.3d 156; see footnote 8, disapproving to the extent inconsistent a long list of Court of Appeal cases.) The defendant should be informed of the effects of this tactical choice: "[T]rial courts in the future would be well-advised to assure the record adequately reflects the fact that a defendant is advised of any constitutional rights waived when stipulating to the status of an ex-felon. He should be informed as to the nature and the consequences of the stipulation. Such a requirement is already in use in cases which involve the admission of prior felony convictions. ... Therefore, the practice endorsed today should not unduly burden the judicial process." (28 C.3d 157, footnote 9.) (On effect of Proposition 8, see infra, §16.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

16 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

2. Evidence on Uncontested Issue.

c. Stipulation on Prior Conviction.

2. Effect of Proposition 8.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 16

[§ 16] Effect of Proposition 8.

(1) In General. Under Proposition 8 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8), a prior felony conviction "shall subsequently be used without limitation for purposes of impeachment or enhancement of sentence in any criminal proceeding," and when such a conviction "is an element of any felony offense, it shall be proven to the trier of fact in open court." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(f).) This provision was aimed at, and operates to abrogate, much of the holding of People v. Hall (1980) 28 C.3d 143, 167 C.R. 844, 616 P.2d 826, supra, §15. (See People v. Valentine (1986) 42 C.3d 170, 176, 228 C.R. 25, 720 P.2d 913.) However, some aspects of the former rule survive, as demonstrated in the cases discussed below. (See People v. Bouzas (1991) 53 C.3d 467, 480, 279 C.R. 847, 807 P.2d 1076, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §376 [contrary to dicta in Hall case, prior conviction and incarceration requirement of P.C. 666 is sentencing factor for trial court and not "element" of P.C. 666 offense that must be determined by jury, and therefore defendant may stipulate to prior conviction]; Old Chief v. United States (1997) 519 U.S. 172, 117 S.Ct. 644, 647, 136 L.Ed.2d 574, 584 [under F.R. Evid., Rule 403, supra, §8, trial judge abused discretion by spurning offer to concede fact of prior conviction and admitting full record of prior judgment, where prior offense raised risk of verdict tainted by improper considerations, and where purpose of evidence was solely to prove element of prior conviction]; 111 Harv. L. Rev. 360 [Old Chief]; 49 Hastings L. J. 463 [same].)

(2) Multiple Prior Felonies Inadmissible. In People v. Patino (1984) 160 C.A.3d 986, 206 C.R. 762, defendant was charged with possession of PCP for sale and being an ex-felon in possession of a concealable firearm. Before trial, defendant admitted two prior felony convictions, but the trial judge, over objection, permitted the prosecutor to introduce both under the concealable firearm charge. Held, this was error, though harmless in the light of the evidence.

(a) The rule of People v. Hall that the stipulation precluded introduction of evidence of a prior conviction was changed by Proposition 8. (160 C.A.3d 991, 992.) But pre-Proposition 8 decisions precluded the use of more than one felony conviction to prove an element of the crime (160 C.A.3d 991, 992), and the proposition does not provide for unlimited use of prior convictions to prove an element of an offense. The phrase "without limitation" refers only to impeachment of credibility and sentence enhancement. (160 C.A.3d 993.)

(b) Where the charge is of possession of a firearm by an ex-felon, proof of a single prior felony is sufficient to meet the prior conviction element. Additional priors would be irrelevant, i.e., they would have no tendency in reason to prove or disprove any disputed fact of consequence. The Truth-in-Evidence provision (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8), which applies only to "relevant evidence," does not mandate admission of multiple prior felony convictions. (160

C.A.3d 994.) In addition, admission of multiple priors would be both unnecessary and time-consuming, and any possible probative value would be outweighed by the substantial danger of undue prejudice under Ev.C. 352 (infra, §17 et seq.). (160 C.A.3d 994.)

(3) Nature of Prior Conviction Inadmissible. In People v. Valentine, supra, defendant was charged with robbery and possession of a concealable firearm by an ex-felon. Defendant offered to stipulate to the element of prior felonies (robbery and assault with a deadly weapon) so that, under People v. Hall, supra, the jury would not be informed of them. The trial judge, following the language of Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(f) (on proof in open court), denied the request. The prior conviction count, specifying the prior as robbery, was then read to the jury; an abstract of judgment showing conviction of robbery and assault with a deadly weapon was introduced in evidence; and the jury was instructed that it could consider the priors only for purposes of the ex-felon element of the charge and for impeachment. Held, proof of the nature of the prior conviction was reversible error.

(a) The second sentence of Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(f) reads: "When a prior felony conviction is an element of any felony offense, it shall be proven to the trier of fact in open court." This language was obviously intended to nullify the holding in Hall, and to permit proof of the fact of a prior felony despite the stipulation. (42 C.3d 176.)

(b) Before Hall, California decisions permitted the defendant, by stipulation to his status as an ex-felon, to exclude evidence of the nature of the prior convictions. (42 C.3d 177.) Proposition 8 does not change that pre-Hall law. Because any prior felony, regardless of its nature, satisfies the ex-felon element of the offense, only the fact, not the nature of the prior, is an "element" of the current charge. This distinction must have been known to the drafters of Proposition 8. (42 C.3d 177.) Moreover, proof in open court of the nature of a prior conviction would have no "tendency in reason" to prove anything the prosecution must show under P.C. 12021, and might violate the fair-trial requirement "that a jury consider only relevant and competent evidence bearing on the issue of guilt or innocence." (42 C.3d 177.)

(c) Defendant contended that even the fact of a prior conviction must still be kept from the jury, because it would be an abuse of discretion under Ev.C. 352 to refuse to withhold it. But the language of Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(f) "overrules Hall's holding that such a procedure is unduly prejudicial as a matter of law." (42 C.3d 179.) And even if the judge "theoretically retains some discretion with respect to the 'open court' provision, it is difficult to see how that discretion would apply in practice." In impeachment, the probative value is weighed against prejudicial effect principally by assessing the nature of the prior; where the defendant stipulates to ex-felon status the jury will learn only that fact, and there is little basis for a decision that disclosure is more or less "probative" or "prejudicial" in individual cases. (42 C.3d 179.)

(d) Defendant's argument that Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(f) must be harmonized with preexisting principles of state due process is unsound. "The people may adopt constitutional amendments which define the scope of existing state constitutional protections. The voters have decreed that henceforth the California Constitution not only permits, but requires, proof 'in open court' of ex-felon status when that status is a substantive element of a current charge. This clear, recent, and specific command supersedes any previous inconsistent interpretations of our state charter's due process guarantees." (42 C.3d 181.)

(e) Disclosure of the nature of the prior remains error in post-Proposition 8 trials (42 C.3d 181, 182), and the error was prejudicial under the test of People v. Watson (1956) 46 C.2d 818, 299 P.2d 243, 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §7. (42 C.3d 183.)

(4) Prior Misdemeanor Convictions. In People v. Wade (1996) 48 C.A.4th 460, 55 C.R.2d 855, a prosecution under P.C. 12021(c)(1) for possession of a firearm after conviction of prior specified misdemeanors, the trial judge denied defendant's request to stipulate to the prior misdemeanor convictions and thereby withhold the nature of the convictions from the jury. Held, this was error, although harmless. The "proof in open court" provision of Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(f) does not apply to prior misdemeanor convictions and thus did not bar the stipulation. (48 C.A.4th 465.) Because P.C. 12021(c)(1) does not require proof of the nature of the underlying misdemeanor conviction, only the fact, and not the nature, of the conviction is required to establish the prior conviction element of the offense. The trial judge should have accepted defendant's offer to stipulate to the fact of the convictions. However, the error was harmless because the jury did not find defendant guilty of the offenses for which the prior convictions posed potential prejudice. (48 C.A.4th 469.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Nature of Prior Conviction Inadmissible.

(New) Distinction: No general stipulation: People v. Valentine (1986) 42 C.3d 170, 228 C.R. 25, 720 P.2d 913, text, p. 339, was distinguished in People v. Stewart (2004) 33 C.4th 425, 15 C.R.3d 656, 93 P.3d 271. Defendant was charged with capital murder and being a felon in possession of a firearm, but defense counsel was unwilling to stipulate generally to defendant's status as a convicted felon, out of concern that the jury might assume that the unspecified felony was more serious than the convictions defendant had actually suffered. Held, the trial judge did not err in failing to force the prosecution to accept defense counsel's less-than-general stipulation. By refusing to stipulate generally to felon status, defendant lost his right to keep the details out. In any case, defense counsel had stated that he preferred the jury to hear the actual list of all prior felonies alleged in the possession count, and that is what ultimately occurred. (33 C.4th 478.)

17 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

a. Statutory Balancing Test.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 17

[§ 17] Statutory Balancing Test.

Ev.C. 352 states a policy of discretionary exclusion in the form of a balancing test:

"The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will (a) necessitate undue consumption of time or (b) create substantial danger of undue prejudice, of confusing the issues, or of misleading the jury."

Although a few specific rules of exclusion have crystallized (see infra, §132 et seq.), in most cases, these general policies are applied in the trial judge's discretion. Many decisions, both before and after the adoption of Ev.C. 352, illustrate this practice of discretionary exclusion of relevant evidence. (See Moody v. Peirano (1906) 4 C.A. 411, 418, 88 P. 380 ["a wide discretion is left to the trial judge"]; People v. Boggess (1924) 194 C. 212, 234, 228 P. 448 [remoteness is left to discretion of court]; Cherrigan v. San Francisco (1968) 262 C.A.2d 643, 655, 66 C.R. 42, citing the text [wrongful death action; testimony by sociologist, called by defendant, that, because of youthful age of spouses, short engagement, and plaintiff wife's pregnancy at time of marriage, marriage would not have lasted, was properly excluded on grounds of remoteness and prejudice]; People v. Haston (1968) 69 C.2d 233, 244, 70 C.R. 419, 444 P.2d 91, infra, §94; People v. Sam (1969) 71 C.2d 194, 77 C.R. 804, 454 P.2d 700, infra, §86; People v. Coleman (1969) 71 C.2d 1159, 1164, 80 C.R. 920, 459 P.2d 248; Helfend v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 1, 16, 84 C.R. 173, 465 P.2d 61; Acosta v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 19, 26, 27, 84 C.R. 184, 465 P.2d 72; Hrnjak v. Graymar (1971) 4 C.3d 725, 732, 94 C.R. 623, 484 P.2d 599, infra, §160; People v. Maler (1972) 23 C.A.3d 973, 980, 100 C.R. 650 [Ev.C. 352 applies to evidence admissible under Ev.C. 1101(b), infra, §75]; Smith v. Lewis (1975) 13 C.3d 349, 364, 118 C.R. 621, 530 P.2d 589 [legal malpractice action; declaration filed by defendant in underlying divorce proceeding in which he sought relief due to his mistake, inadvertence, and excusable neglect was properly excluded; jury could have confused quantum of asserted negligence necessary to permit amendment of judgment with that required to support finding of malpractice]; People v. Phillips (1985) 41 C.3d 29, 49, 222 C.R. 127, 711 P.2d 423; Michail v. Fluor Mining & Metals (1986) 180 C.A.3d 284, 286, 225 C.R. 403; Hinson v. Clairemont Community Hosp. (1990) 218 C.A.3d 1110, 1125, 267 C.R. 503; People v. Sutton (1993) 19 C.A.4th 795, 800, 801, 23 C.R.2d 632 [evidence that defendant fought extradition was more prejudicial than probative in prosecution for wilful failure to appear on felony charge]; People v. Humiston (1993) 20 C.A.4th 460, 481, 24 C.R.2d 515 [in murder case, trial judge erred in admitting evidence that defendant had communicated with boyfriend with beeper using code 187 (Penal Code section for murder); it was relevant only to prove defendant's disposition to commit murder and was highly prejudicial]; 69 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1389 [arguing that criminal defendant should have option of having court hear evidence that is suggestive of innocence but highly prejudicial]; 1 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, Chap. 22; 18 A.L.R.5th 804 [defendant's involvement with witchcraft or satanism].)

Two distinctions must be stated: (1) The statute applies to evidence only; evidentiary objections are not within its compass. (People v. Filson (1994) 22 C.A.4th 1841, 1851, 1852, 28 C.R.2d 335, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §122 [trial judge's ruling precluding defense from asking witnesses about any statements defendant might have made could not be justified on basis that prosecution would be prejudiced by its mere voicing of objections].) (2) Ev.C. 352 is frequently applied in the context of hearsay evidence, because, in judging probative value, the credibility of the hearsay declarant must be assessed; but the testimony of a live witness is not excludable on credibility grounds, except in the very rare case where the falsity is demonstrable. (Vorse v. Sarasy (1997) 53 C.A.4th 998, 1007, 1013, 62 C.R.2d 164; see People v. Chandler (1997) 56 C.A.4th 703, 711, 65 C.R.2d 687 [trial judge improperly excluded, on sole ground of unbelievability, testimony concerning alleged rape victim's sexual conduct that would have been used to attack her credibility].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Phillips (2000) 22 C.4th 226, 234, 92 C.R.2d 58, 991 P.2d 145 [although fact that prosecution witness was prostitute was marginally relevant in capital murder case, trial judge did not err in determining that its relevance was outweighed by its prejudicial impact]; People v. Hillhouse (2002) 27 C.4th 469, 496, 117 C.R.2d 45, 40 P.3d 754, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against the Person, Supp., §265 [trial judge did not abuse his discretion in excluding toxicology report showing marijuana in murder victim's system; when defendant and victim were driving to location where victim was ultimately killed, victim asked where they were going and was told "to get some pot," but even if victim's marijuana use reflected on his purpose in going on drive, it had little relevance to defendant's purpose]; People v. Jablonski (2006) 37 C.4th 774, 805, 38 C.R.3d 98, 126 P.3d 938 [in competency phase of capital murder trial, tape recording defendant had made in which he graphically described his murders was strongly probative in that it demonstrated his ability to speak and remember; as to prejudice, there was no indication jury did not follow instruction to consider recording solely for competence determination]; People v. Bell (2007) 40 C.4th 582, 608, 54 C.R.3d 453, 151 P.3d 292 [in murder prosecution in which defendant declined to testify, trial judge properly balanced probativeness against prejudice in refusing to allow defense psychologist, who was to testify regarding his interview with defendant, to recount defendant's statements about events underlying charged crimes; although jury could have been instructed not to consider statements for truth, it would have been difficult to separate proper and improper uses of evidence]; People v. Zambrano (2007) 41 C.4th 1082, 1136, 63 C.R.3d 297, 163 P.3d 4 [in prosecution for murder and attempted murder, admission of expert testimony concerning recovery and rehabilitation of two attempted murder victims was proper; it was probative as to allegation of great bodily injury and was not presented in sensational way]; People v. Bojorquez (2002) 104 C.A.4th 335, 343, 344, 128 C.R.2d 411 [in prosecution for robbery and false imprisonment, admission of evidence regarding criminal gangs should have ended with rebuttal of defendant's and witness' denial of gang membership; additional testimony by detective, including repeated references to gang robberies, declaration that defendant's gang was involved in criminal activity, and accounts of gang members' use of violence to prevent testimony, was only minimally relevant and highly prejudicial]; *Ajaxo v. E*Trade Group* (2005) 135 C.A.4th 21, 45, 37 C.R.3d 221 [in trade secret misappropriation action against wireless vendor and Internet stock trading company, trial judge did not err in failing to exclude evidence of venture capital funding received by wireless vendor (plaintiff's competitor), even though funding occurred after alleged misappropriation; it shed light on stock trading company's motive to give plaintiff's secrets to vendor, and it created no emotional bias against stock trading company]; People v. Fulcher (2006) 136 C.A.4th 41, 58, 38 C.R.3d 702 [in sexually violent predator proceeding, 3 pornographic photos, out of 200 found plastered to walls of defendant's bedroom at time defendant was arrested for predicate offense, were properly admitted; they were relevant to show evidence experts relied on, and to establishing defendant's state of mind, and they depicted only what had already been described]; Geffcken v. D'Andrea (2006) 137 C.A.4th 1298, 1308, 41 C.R.3d 80 [in action alleging that defendants caused plaintiffs to be exposed to mold mycotoxins, trial judge did not err in excluding expert witness' environmental sampling data; data had little probative value both because of chain of custody errors and because at most data showed presence of mold spores, not mycotoxins, and probability that data would mislead jury was high]; People v. Celis (2006) 141 C.A.4th 466, 476, 46 C.R.3d 139 [in murder prosecution, exclusion of evidence showing that defendant's son, who was also charged in same murder, expected to receive sentence of life without parole was properly excluded under Ev.C. 352, despite defense counsel's argument that evidence enhanced son's credibility; probative value was actually low, as, faced with life without parole, son had nothing to lose by lying]; People v. Albarran (2007) 149 C.A.4th 214, 223, 57 C.R.3d 92 [in attempted murder prosecution in which gang enhancements were alleged, some of gang evidence admitted rendered trial fundamentally unfair; even if evidence of defendant's gang membership was relevant to issues of motive and intent, other portions of evidence, including threats by members of defendant's gang to kill police and references to "Mexican mafia," were extremely inflammatory and had no connection to charged crimes]; People v. Gunder (2007) 151 C.A.4th 412, 416, 59 C.R.3d 817 [in prosecution for murder and being ex-felon in possession of firearm, trial judge did not abuse discretion in refusing to exclude testimony by defendant's son about previous occasion on which defendant had displayed firearm; evidence was relevant to defendant's claim that police had planted firearm found in his possession, and it would not have caused emotional response in jury evoking bias against him for reason unrelated to guilt or innocence]; Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §1:25 et seq. Testimony of live witness as to hearsay statement: When hearsay evidence is offered under one of the recognized exceptions, the trial judge must determine, as preliminary facts, both that the out-of-court declarant made the statement as represented, and that the statement meets trustworthiness standards. However, the direct testimony of a single witness is sufficient to support a finding unless the testimony is physically impossible or its falsity is apparent without resorting to inferences or deductions. Thus, except in those rare instances of demonstrable falsity, doubts about the credibility of the in-court witness should be left for the jury's resolution; they do not afford a ground for refusing to admit hearsay evidence under an applicable exception. (People v. Cudjo (1993) 6 C.4th 585, 608, 610, 25 C.R.2d 390, 863 P.2d 635 [in capital murder case, trial judge's doubts about credibility of in-court witness (jail inmate who had been incarcerated together with defendant's brother and maintained that brother confessed to defendant's crime) did not constitute "prejudice" such that exclusion under Ev.C. 352 was warranted].)

18 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

b. Power Confirmed by Proposition 8.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 18

[§ 18] Power Confirmed by Proposition 8.

Ev.C. 352 is expressly excluded from the Truth-in-Evidence provision of Proposition 8, and the statute has become increasingly important as a basis for exclusion of evidence otherwise admissible under the constitutional provision. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8.)

Thus, in People v. Castro (1985) 38 C.3d 301, 211 C.R. 719, 696 P.2d 111, the court held that Proposition 8 did not authorize unlimited impeachment of a witness by proof of prior felony convictions, because the discretion to limit impeachment could still be exercised under Ev.C. 352. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §303.) "The legislative and judicial history of sections 352 and 788, the circumstances under which article I, section 28, was enacted, the language of the enactment--concededly ambiguous--as well as certain policy considerations convince us that section 28 was not intended to abrogate the traditional and inherent power of the trial court to control the admission of evidence by the exercise of discretion to exclude marginally relevant but prejudicial matters--as, indeed, is provided by Evidence Code section 352." (38 C.3d 306.) (See People v. Taylor (1986) 180 C.A.3d 622, 633, 225 C.R. 733; People v. Wheeler (1992) 4 C.4th 284, 295, 14 C.R.2d 418, 841 P.2d 938, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §286.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

19 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

c. Judge's Duty To Exercise Discretion.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 19

[§ 19] Judge's Duty To Exercise Discretion.

"Because of conditions created by the law explosion, the concept of a kindly, benign trial judge who listens passively and patiently while the lawyers try their cases without his interference is no longer valid--if it ever was. To be a real factor in the administration of justice, a trial judge must alertly supervise proceedings in his court, curbing when necessary over-zealous advocates and, in his rulings on evidence strike a 'careful balance between the probative value of the evidence and the danger of prejudice, confusion and undue time consumption.' ... Lawyers are advocates. Asking them to police themselves is not fair. Admitting all evidence which has any probative value is sometimes unnecessary to the orderly ascertainment of the truth. The judicious use of the inherent powers of the court, set forth in Evidence Code, section 352, is to be encouraged." (People v. Jackson (1971) 18 C.A.3d 504, 509, 95 C.R. 919.) (See People v. Allen (1976) 65 C.A.3d 426, 435, 135 C.R. 276 [tenuous inference from defendant's statements (implied admission) involving danger of jury's treatment of it as character-trait evidence; abuse of discretion to refuse to exclude it under Ev.C. 352]; People v. Ross (1979) 92 C.A.3d 391, 407, 154 C.R. 783; People v. Bush (1978) 84 C.A.3d 294, 307, 148 C.R. 430 [evidence that merely points to a possible ground of suspicion could encourage jurors to engage in improper speculation and should be excluded].) (On procedure under Ev.C. 352, see infra, §20.)

However, in Kessler v. Gray (1978) 77 C.A.3d 284, 143 C.R. 496, the court upheld the trial judge's refusal to exclude evidence. "Reasonable exercise of trial court discretion ... requires that the trial judge balance the probative value of the offered evidence against its potential of prejudice, undue consumption of time, and confusion. ... That balancing process requires consideration of the relationship between the evidence and the relevant inferences to be drawn from it, whether the evidence is relevant to the main or only a collateral issue, and the necessity of the evidence to the proponent's case as well as the reasons recited in section 352 for exclusion. ... The more substantial the probative value of the evidence, the greater the danger of the presence of one of the excluding factors that must be present to support an exercise of trial court discretion excluding the evidence." (77 C.A.3d 291.)

The court then pointed out that (1) the testimony directly supported an inference relevant to a vital issue; (2) no other evidence approached its value on that issue; and (3) there was no possibility of confusion or undue consumption of time. Hence, there was no reasonable basis for exercise of the discretion to exclude. (77 C.A.3d 292.) (See Hilliard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 C.A.3d 374, 398, 196 C.R. 117, infra, §123; People v. Taylor (1986) 180 C.A.3d 622, 633, 225 C.R. 733; People v. Champion (1995) 9 C.4th 879, 922, 39 C.R.2d 547, 891 P.2d 93 [in murder case, probative value of evidence that defendants were members of street gang outweighed prejudicial effect]; People v. Williams (1997) 16 C.4th 153, 193, 66 C.R.2d 123, 940 P.2d 710 [same]; People v. Quartermain (1997) 16 C.4th 600, 628, 66

C.R.2d 609, 941 P.2d 788, 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §122 [defendant's use of racial epithets during interviews with police was relevant to motive for murder and, because that language is regrettably not uncommon, would not inevitably bias jury against defendant]; O'Mary v. Mitsubishi Electronics America (1997) 59 C.A.4th 563, 574, 575, 69 C.R.2d 389 [in age discrimination action, evidence that employer's senior managing director had stated that company should get rid of older managers and that employer's president had concurred was more probative than prejudicial; direct evidence of intent in civil rights case is difficult to find and should not be lightly discarded]; People v. Millwee (1998) 18 C.4th 96, 128, 74 C.R.2d 418, 954 P.2d 990 [after defendant in capital murder case testified to his good relationship with victim (his mother), trial judge properly ruled admissible victim's statements of fear of defendant; evidence was highly relevant to assess defendant's credibility and his version of events, and inquiry into thefts and violent acts underlying victim's fear was avoided].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Kipp (2001) 26 C.4th 1100, 1126, 113 C.R.2d 27, 33 P.3d 450 [in capital murder trial, trial judge did not abuse discretion in admitting evidence of defendant's attempted jail escape; although probative value of escape, as evidencing consciousness of guilt, was diminished by fact that defendant was already under death sentence for another crime, risk of undue prejudice was slight, in that attempt involved no overt violence, defendant having offered only brief resistance on being captured]; People v. Carter (2003) 30 C.4th 1166, 1195, 135 C.R.2d 553, 70 P.3d 981 [in capital murder prosecution, trial judge did not abuse discretion in admitting lay testimony that defendant belonged to gang and expert testimony concerning defendant's gang, a related gang, and an opposing gang, where gang evidence was relevant to both identity and motive]; People v. Brown (2003) 31 C.4th 518, 551, 3 C.R.3d 145, 73 P.3d 1137 [in capital murder case, trial judge did not abuse discretion in determining that any prejudice arising from admitting defendant's nickname ("Bam" or "Bam Bam") was outweighed by its probative value; several witnesses knew defendant only by that name]; People v. Archer (2000) 82 C.A.4th 1380, 1394, 99 C.R.2d 230 [in murder prosecution, trial judge erred in denying defendant's motion to exclude books, videotapes, and catalogs seized from his home and locker; some material related to use or purchase of knives, but it had little probative value, as there was no evidence indicating murder, although committed with knife, was carried out in manner requiring special training or would have required special instrument]; People v. Leon (2001) 91 C.A.4th 812, 817, 110 C.R.2d 776 [in child molestation case, trial judge should have excluded, as unduly prejudicial, testimony of court interpreter to effect that she saw defendant touching crotch area while victim testified; judge assumed that because charges were so serious, evidence would not be prejudicial, but opposite was true]; People v. Houston (2005) 130 C.A.4th 279, 304, 29 C.R.3d 818 [in prosecution of defendant accused of murdering his estranged wife, trial judge did not abuse his discretion in refusing under Ev.C. 352 to exclude evidence that defendant had had extramarital affairs, where defendant had put his own credibility at issue by testifying to good relationship with wife in months leading up to her death].

20 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

d. Procedure Under Ev.C. 352.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 20

[§ 20] Procedure Under Ev.C. 352.

(1) In the absence of an objection based on Ev.C. 352, or a specific request for the court to exercise its discretion under that section, the judge is not required to engage in the weighing process. (People v. Smith (1984) 151 C.A.3d 89, 97, 198 C.R. 623 [defendant's counsel objected to introduction of defendant's admission on ground that it was "irrelevant," merely adding brief statement that it was "prejudicial with no probative value"].)

(2) If, however, a proper objection is made, the record must affirmatively show that the trial judge weighed the possibility of prejudice against the probative value of the evidence. (People v. Leonard (1983) 34 C.3d 183, 188, 193 C.R. 171, 666 P.2d 28; People v. Wright (1985) 39 C.3d 576, 582, 217 C.R. 212, 703 P.2d 1106; People v. Montiel (1985) 39 C.3d 910, 924, 218 C.R. 572, 705 P.2d 1248; People v. Lankford (1989) 210 C.A.3d 227, 241, 258 C.R. 322 [record failed to show that judge engaged in weighing process, but error was harmless because there was no grave doubt as to defendant's guilt]; Burns v. 20th Century Ins. Co. (1992) 9 C.A.4th 1666, 1674, 12 C.R.2d 462 [record need not contain any "magic words" as long as it reflects that weighing process was carried out]; People v. Triplett (1993) 16 C.A.4th 624, 628, 629, 20 C.R.2d 225 [same]; In re Romeo C. (1995) 33 C.A.4th 1838, 1845, 40 C.R.2d 85, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §47.)

(3) There is no requirement, however, that the judge make an affirmative finding on the result of the weighing process. "[W]hen an objection to proffered evidence is made on the ground that its prejudicial effect will exceed its probative value, the record need only reflect that the judge did in fact weigh the conflicting factors so that the reviewing court can determine whether that discretion was properly exercised." (People v. Holt (1972) 28 C.A.3d 343, 352, 104 C.R. 572; Michail v. Fluor Mining & Metals (1986) 180 C.A.3d 284, 287, 225 C.R. 403; Continental Airlines v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 C.A.3d 388, 412, 264 C.R. 779, citing the text.) (But see People v. Love (1977) 75 C.A.3d 928, 939, 940, 142 C.R. 532 [suggesting that it might be helpful for judge to state on record the basis for exclusion, rather than merely to declare that exclusion was pursuant to Ev.C. 352].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

21 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

e. Particular Grounds.

1. Evidence Prejudicial to Prosecution.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 21

[§ 21] Evidence Prejudicial to Prosecution.

In People v. Arline (1970) 13 C.A.3d 200, 205, 91 C.R. 520, the court said: "Cases almost without number hold that evidence unduly prejudicial to the defendant, compared with its probative value, must be excluded. ... It would seem to be an elementary although too seldom enunciated principle that the prosecution as well as the defendant is entitled to the protection of the court from prejudicial evidence."

The chief issue on appeal in the Arline case, a robbery prosecution, was whether the trial judge properly excluded evidence that a third party committed the robbery. Held, affirmed. There were no facts to connect the third party with the crime, and detailed questioning concerning the facts of the two robberies, followed by the third party's invocation of his self-incrimination privilege, might have created an impression of his possible guilt in the minds of the jurors that would have been "difficult, if not impossible," to erase by judicial admonition. (13 C.A.3d 204, 205.)

In People v. Hall (1986) 41 C.3d 826, 226 C.R. 112, 718 P.2d 99, the court rejected defendant's argument that exclusion of his proffered evidence of third-party culpability under Ev.C. 352 denied him his constitutional right to present a defense. But the court also rejected one aspect of People v. Arline, supra: its application of a "distinct and elevated standard" of admissibility. If relevant, evidence of this type, like any other, should be admitted unless its probative value is substantially outweighed by risk of undue delay, prejudice, or confusion. (41 C.3d 834.) (See People v. Jackson (1991) 235 C.A.3d 1670, 1677, 1 C.R.2d 778 [evidence of third-party culpability may be excluded as unduly prejudicial; citing People v. Hall]; on third-party culpability evidence generally, see infra, §122.)

People v. Wright (1985) 39 C.3d 576, 585, 217 C.R. 212, 703 P.2d 1106, adds these cautions: (1) The purported prejudice to the prosecution cannot be based on mere speculation and conjecture. (2) Evidence relevant to the prime theory of the defense cannot be excluded merely because the trial would be simpler without it.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

22 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

e. Particular Grounds.

2. Evidence Prejudicial Only to Codefendant.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 22

[§ 22] Evidence Prejudicial Only to Codefendant.

In People v. Reeder (1978) 82 C.A.3d 543, 147 C.R. 275, defendant and his codefendant C were charged with selling and possessing narcotics. Defendant sought to introduce hearsay evidence of declarants who told defendant that C had committed reprehensible acts against defendant and his family, including an attempt to induce use of heroin. Held, exclusion of the evidence was prejudicial error.

(a) The declarations were relevant and admissible for the nonhearsay purpose of affording an inference of defendant's state of mind--dislike of C making it unlikely that he would have had narcotics dealing with C. (82 C.A.3d 550; see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §40.)

(b) The evidence was excluded on the theory that the jury could use the proffered evidence for its truth, i.e., for the inadmissible purpose of proving bad character of C. Thus, the danger of prejudice was not to the prosecution but to the codefendant C; and this danger did not justify exclusion of significant, relevant evidence for defendant. (82 C.A.3d 553, 554.) The proper course for C was to seek a limiting instruction under Ev.C. 355 (see infra, §30) or, if he felt that the danger could not be alleviated by an instruction, to move for a mistrial and separate trial. (82 C.A.3d 555.)

People v. Greenberger (1997) 58 C.A.4th 298, 352, 68 C.R.2d 61, cited the Reeder case for its rule requiring instruction or severance rather than exclusion. But it found the rule inapplicable, because the evidence at issue (a murder charged against two codefendants but not against defendant) was not significant to defendant's defense, was highly prejudicial to one codefendant, and was also cumulative.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

23 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

e. Particular Grounds.

3. Confusion of Issues and Misleading Jury.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 23

[§ 23] Confusion of Issues and Misleading Jury.

It is surely desirable to avoid confusing the issues or misleading the jury, but it is most difficult to conceive of relevant evidence (evidence relating to an issue and logically tending to prove it, supra, §4) that can be condemned on these grounds alone. (See 6 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1904.) Even if there is some reason for believing that the evidence might confuse the issues or mislead the jury, the judge's authority to interfere with counsel's trial strategy is doubtful. In excluding useful, probative evidence (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §3 et seq.), the judge risks reversible error, except where a criminal defendant successfully invokes the rule against the prosecution (which has no appeal from a verdict of acquittal).

Nevertheless, where there is a possibility of undue prejudice (infra, §132) or undue consumption of time (infra, §24), the opinions sometimes stress the need to avoid confusing the issues and misleading the jury. (See People v. Cegers (1992) 7 C.A.4th 988, 1001, 9 C.R.2d 297 [where the evidence is cumulative, involves collateral matters, or would require a great amount of time, "the trial court serves as something of a referee, monitoring the progress of the case and precluding wasteful consumption of time, or excluding evidence of questionable pertinence to the issues of the case tending improperly to influence the jury"].)

In People v. Ross (1979) 92 C.A.3d 391, 154 C.R. 783, defendant and A were charged with burglary, robbery, arson, and murder by torture. After his arrest defendant confessed to the burglary, but asserted that his accomplice A tied the victim up, beat him, and set the fatal fire over his protests. At trial defendant did not testify, but called a roommate of A to testify to A's out of court declarations of his sole involvement in the crime, an admissible declaration against penal interest under Ev.C. 1230 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §143). In rebuttal, the prosecution--to impeach the hearsay declarant (see Ev.C. 1202, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §358), offered inconsistent in-custody statements of A denying complicity in the arson and homicide, denying that he had made any such declaration to his roommate, and describing defendant as the active wrongdoer. Held, the evidence should have been excluded. It was admissible only for the limited purpose of impeachment, but it was highly likely that the jury would be misled into giving it substantive effect; and this danger of undue prejudice was enhanced by the prosecutor's misconduct in urging the jurors to consider A's statements in contrast to defendant's denials in his own confession. (92 C.A.3d 407.)

In People v. Green (1980) 27 C.3d 1, 164 C.R. 1, 609 P.2d 468, defendant sought an instruction on the opposite of the implied admission of guilt resulting from flight (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §107), i.e., that the jury may consider the absence of flight as circumstantial evidence of an innocent frame of mind. Held, the instruction was properly refused. There are other plausible reasons for not attempting flight; e.g., fear of recapture, the inference of guilt from a fruitless attempt, or a strong confidence in acquittal. (27 C.3d 37.) Thus, the absence of flight is so laden with conflicting interpretations that its probative value is slight and it involves the risk of confusing the issues and misleading the jury. (27 C.3d 38.) Although ordinarily the trial judge must perform a weighing process, "the scales tip so heavily against admission of evidence of absence of flight that it must be excluded as a matter of law." (27 C.3d 39.)

In People v. Shoemaker (1982) 135 C.A.3d 442, 185 C.R. 370, infra, §59, the trial judge in a deadly weapon assault case excluded defendant's proffered evidence of the victim's subsequent violent conduct (an alleged attack on an elderly couple). Upholding the ruling, the court pointed out that the evidence was cumulative (two defense witnesses testified that the victim, Kelly, was a violent, dangerous person who had committed prior assaults, and the jury had learned of the charges Kelly faced from the alleged assault on the elderly couple). "In light of the multiplicity of charges against Kelly, and the fact he had not yet been tried, undue consumption of time, as well as confusion of the issues and the jury, was substantially certain to result." (135 C.A.3d 449.)

There are numerous additional cases touching on these dangers. (See People v. Harvey (1984) 163 C.A.3d 90, 115, 208 C.R. 910 [citing People v. Green, supra; evidence of defendant's cooperative attitude when questioned by police was properly excluded, as there could be many reasons why a guilty defendant would want to appear cooperative]; People v. Hall (1986) 41 C.3d 826, 834, 226 C.R. 112, 718 P.2d 99, infra, §122; Hilliard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 C.A.3d 374, 399, 196 C.R. 117, infra, §123 ["policy factors of undue prejudice, confusion of the issues, and misleading the jury are practically the same"]; DePalma v. Westland Software House (1990) 225 C.A.3d 1534, 1545, 276 C.R. 214, 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, Supp., §866A [evidence of tax benefits, as offset to damages recoverable in breach of contract action, would raise complicated, time-consuming, and confusing issues, hence, may be excluded under Ev.C. 352]; People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 1310, footnote 15, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §19; Webber v. Inland Empire Inv. (1999) 74 C.A.4th 884, 909, 88 C.R.2d 594 [in action for intentional interference with contract, trial judge properly excluded letter from defendants' in-house counsel to bank vice-president, even though possibly relevant to claim of one defendant that he relied on advice of counsel, on ground that it contained incorrect legal conclusion and therefore would confuse jury].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cases illustrating dangers: See People v. Snow (2003) 30 C.4th 43, 89, 132 C.R.2d 271, 65 P.3d 749 [in capital murder prosecution arising from defendant's killing of robbery victim to prevent his testimony, trial judge properly excluded evidence that during investigation of robbery, victim had made erroneous identification; defendant's knowledge of weakness of robbery case against him was slightly relevant as showing lack of motive, but jury might have lost sight of fact that victim's identification was not directly at issue in murder case]; Thompson v. Los Angeles (2006) 142 C.A.4th 154, 171, 47 C.R.3d 702 [in civil rights action stemming from injuries inflicted on plaintiff by police dog, trial judge properly excluded summaries of medical treatment provided to 43 persons bitten by sheriff's department dog used by specific handler; possibility of confusing jurors with information concerning dog handled by deputy who was not part of case outweighed any probative value].

DePalma v. Westland Software House:

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §923. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.146

24 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

e. Particular Grounds.

4. Undue Consumption of Time.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 24

[§ 24] Undue Consumption of Time.

(1) In General. Relevant evidence may be excluded if "its probative value is substantially outweighed" by the unwarranted time it takes to present it. (Ev.C. 352, supra, §17.) (See DePalma v. Westland Software House (1990) 225 C.A.3d 1534, 1545, 276 C.R. 214, 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, Supp., §866A; People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 1310, footnote 15, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §19; People v. Rodrigues (1994) 8 C.4th 1060, 1125, 36 C.R.2d 235, 885 P.2d 1 [even if evidence of bad relationship between murder victim and his brother had some slight relevance (defense was not based on theory that brother was killer), exploring it would lead to undue consumption of time and confuse issues]; People v. Pelayo (1999) 69 C.A.4th 115, 121, 81 C.R.2d 373 [in rape prosecution, trial judge did not err in excluding school records of one victim, which defendants offered to contradict her testimony that her grades suffered because of defendants' crimes; records were extensive, contained lengthy, differing opinions, and did not specifically contradict any critical prosecution evidence].)

Undue consumption of time is an amorphous concept, difficult to reduce to concrete terms, and it brings the trial judge to the danger point of reversible error. (See People v. Torres (1964) 61 C.2d 264, 267, 37 C.R. 889, 391 P.2d 161, infra, §28; and see 6 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1865 [undue consumption of time is not in itself ground for exclusion].)

In People v. Mayfield (1972) 23 C.A.3d 236, 100 C.R. 104, the trial judge admitted the preliminary examination testimony of a deputy sheriff who had died before the trial, but excluded evidence attacking the decedent's credibility. Held, this was error. "The right of a defendant to attack the credibility of her hearsay accuser is so fundamental that consumption of time is irrelevant where the evidence is not cumulative. ... Thus to deny defendant the right to adduce pertinent evidence that bears upon the credibility of a witness unseen by the jury and who had not been fully cross-examined at the preliminary hearing was to deny her due process of law." (23 C.A.3d 243.)

Nevertheless, this ground of exclusion is specifically mentioned in Ev.C. 352, and is supported by most authorities. (See supra, §17.) It breaks down into two familiar categories: (a) cumulative or repetitive evidence, which has long been subject to discretionary exclusion (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §67); and (b) collateral or remote evidence (infra, this section).

(2) Collateral or Remote Evidence. Evidence relevant only indirectly, and so far removed from the fact in issue as to render its probative value slight and its usefulness in the case practically nil, may be excluded. Whether "collateral" and "remote" are distinct or related concepts, the judge's discretion to apply them in the interests of expedition of the trial is clear, and in a few situations positive rules of exclusion have developed. (See, e.g., People v. Mehaffey (1948) 32 C.2d 535, 555, 197 P.2d 12; People v. Gonzales (1967) 66 C.2d 482, 499, 58 C.R. 361, 426 P.2d 929; People v. Rocha (1971) 3 C.3d 893, 900, 92 C.R. 172, 479 P.2d 372, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §266; People v. Lepe (1997) 57 C.A.4th 977, 988, 67 C.R.2d 525, citing the text [in murder prosecution in which witness' preliminary hearing testimony was admitted at trial on basis of his unavailability, testimony as to reasons for witness' unavailability was evidence on collateral issue subject to discretionary exclusion by trial judge]; People v. Hart (1999) 20 C.4th 546, 607, 85 C.R.2d 132, 976 P.2d 683 [in capital murder trial, judge properly excluded evidence that surviving victim had filed civil suit alleging that county sheriff's department mistreated and lied to her when she reported murder; evidence would have shifted focus of testimony from events concerning charged offenses to officers' conduct after offenses were committed]; infra, §39 et seq. [character for care]; infra, §42 [character to prove conduct]; infra, §106 [absence of similar accidents]; infra, §109 [prior acts]; infra, §122 [motive of third person]; infra, §159 [other claims or litigation by plaintiff]; see also, on remoteness of prior offense, infra, §77; on discretionary exclusion of impeaching evidence on collateral matter, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §341 et seq.)

In Hicks v. Hicks (1967) 249 C.A.2d 964, 58 C.R. 63, a husband and wife were divorced, and custody of four children was given to the wife. The husband moved to modify, contending only that the children's association with their stepfather L would be detrimental to their interests. He offered evidence of arrests and a narcotics conviction of L some 12 years before the present proceedings. The trial judge excluded it as remote. Held, affirmed. In a custody case, the criminal background of a stepparent or close associate of a parent is a proper factor to be considered by the court. But the issue is present fitness; past misconduct, at an unreasonable period before the hearing, may be excluded as remote. (249 C.A.2d 968.)

Error in admitting testimony that was remote when originally offered may be cured when subsequent testimony makes it relevant. (People v. Simms (1970) 10 C.A.3d 299, 312, 89 C.R. 1.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See People v. Halvorsen (2007) 42 C.4th 379, 410, 64 C.R.3d 721, 165 P.3d 512 [in murder prosecution in which, in cross-examining defense psychiatrist, prosecutor elicited opinion that defendant's case did not support any psychiatric defenses, trial judge did not err in refusing to allow defense counsel, on redirect, to explore psychiatrist's understanding of concept of legal insanity; exploring this issue risked undue consumption of time, as well as confusion of issues]; People v. Vargas (2001) 91 C.A.4th 506, 543, 544, 110 C.R.2d 210 [in murder prosecution, defendant was properly precluded from cross-examining two prosecution witnesses and conducting direct examination of one potential defense witness regarding uncharged homicide; defense would have used evidence to impeach one prosecution witness, but result would have been mini-trial on crime with which defendant was not charged].

DePalma v. Westland Software House:

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §923.(2) Collateral or Remote Evidence. See People v. Basuta (2001) 94 C.A.4th 370, 387, 114 C.R.2d 285 [in prosecution of day care operator for fatal assault on child, trial judge erred in excluding, as collateral, confusing, and time-consuming, evidence that child's mother, when angry or frustrated, had jerked and shaken child; medical evidence was conflicting and allowed for multiple possible causes of child's death]; Gouskos v. Aptos Village Garage (2001) 94 C.A.4th 754, 762, 114 C.R.2d 558, 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, Supp., §4 [in action against automobile repair shop for violation of Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (C.C. 1788 et seq.), evidence regarding defendant's conduct with two customers other than plaintiff was properly excluded; whether defendant had habit of violating Act was collateral matter and would have been unduly time-consuming]; People v. Feaster (2002) 102 C.A.4th 1084, 1094, 125 C.R.2d 896 [in prosecution for assault with firearm, proffered impeachment evidence of prosecution witness' prior conviction for negligent discharge of firearm was properly excluded under Ev.C. 352; witness' offense was committed 12 years earlier, he had committed no subsequent offenses, and because offense was "wobbler," it would have to be determined whether conviction was for felony or misdemeanor].

25 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

B. Admissibility and Exclusionary Rules.

3. Discretionary Exclusion Under Ev.C. 352.

e. Particular Grounds.

5. Distinction: Unfair Surprise.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 25

[§ 25] Distinction: Unfair Surprise.

"Unfair surprise" is one of the generally stated bases for exclusion (see supra, §8). But there is a dearth of case law illustrating this supposed rule, and it seems both unnecessary and dangerous. Discovery (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §1 et seq. ) and pretrial conference (see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §52 et seq.) are means of preventing surprise. And if, despite diligent preparation and use of these procedures, evidence is introduced that is so important and so wholly outside reasonable anticipation that the other party is harmed by its sudden introduction, the appropriate statutory remedy is a request for a continuance. (See 6 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1848; 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §7 et seq.; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §331.) For these reasons, the Law Revision Commission eliminated this ground from Ev.C. 352.

In Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 C.3d 136, 104 C.R. 443, 501 P.2d 1163, plaintiff had claimed surprise at defendant manufacturer's introduction of a safety leaflet after defendant's answer to written interrogatories denied reliance on the leaflet. The court, citing the text, said: "It is a sufficient answer to plaintiff's contention that on retrial plaintiff will no longer be able to object to this evidence since he has now had ample time to prepare for its introduction." (8 C.3d 147.)

However, unfair surprise may be a factor in the exclusion of evidence as part of the trial judge's basic power to insure a fair trial. In Castaline v. Los Angeles (1975) 47 C.A.3d 580, 121 C.R. 786, defense counsel's request that plaintiffs be examined by defendant's physician was withdrawn when answers to interrogatories established that plaintiffs were fully recovered. A physician for plaintiffs examined one of them 3 days before trial (4 years after the accident), but was not allowed to testify. Plaintiffs' counsel did not specify what he hoped to accomplish by the excluded testimony. Held, no error; defendant's claim of unfair surprise had merit, and under all the circumstances, exclusion of the physician's testimony was justified. (47 C.A.3d 592.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

26 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

C. Test of Relevancy.

1. General Principles.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 26

[§ 26] General Principles.

(1) Relevancy Determined by Logic and Experience. "No precise or universal test of relevancy is furnished by the law. The question must be determined in each case according to the teachings of reason and judicial experience." (Moody v. Peirano (1906) 4 C.A. 411, 418, 88 P. 380 [quoting Thayer].) This admission of the impossibility of stating adequate legal tests of relevancy is reiterated by other authorities. (See Larson v. Solbakken (1963) 221 C.A.2d 410, 420, 34 C.R. 450, quoting the text; Traxler v. Thompson (1970) 4 C.A.3d 278, 286, 84 C.R. 211, citing the text; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §309; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §37 et seq.)

(2) The Reasonable Inference Test. "The general test of relevancy of indirect evidence is whether it tends logically, naturally, and by reasonable inference to prove or disprove a material issue." (People v. Jones (1954) 42 C.2d 219, 222, 266 P.2d 38; see Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 C.A.3d 462, 467, 93 C.R. 270; People v. Stein (1979) 94 C.A.3d 235, 240, 156 C.R. 299, quoting the text; People v. Freeman (1994) 8 C.4th 450, 491, 34 C.R.2d 558, 882 P.2d 249.)

In People v. Graziadio (1964) 231 C.A.2d 525, 42 C.R. 29, the court, answering the contention that the evidence was speculative, said: "The test is whether the inferences which it is alleged may be drawn from proffered evidence might be drawn by a reasonable mind and whether it is relevant to the issues to be determined by the jury. Although when stated as an abstract rule it may seem somewhat nebulous, it can be applied, nevertheless, with satisfactory practicality to the facts of a particular case." (231 C.A.2d 530.)

Sometimes the rule is stated in terms of "greater" or "more probable" inference; this kind of test, however, seems more appropriately directed to the sufficiency of circumstantial evidence to justify a verdict or finding (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §138) than to its initial admission. (See 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §37.4; 1 McCormick 5th, §185; People v. Graves (1934) 137 C.A. 1, 10, 29 P.2d 807, 30 P.2d 508; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 395.)

(3) Application of Test to Single Items. Circumstances that, taken singly, seem to afford no logical inference as to the issue, may, when considered with other circumstances, give rise to such an inference. Thus, the test of relevancy must not be too strictly applied to a single question asked of a witness or to any other single item of evidence. "The theory upon which evidence of circumstances is admitted ... is not that each circumstance stands flawless in its proof of the ultimate fact, but that each certain circumstance has a relation to and points reasonably to the fact sought to be proved." (People v. Graves, supra, 137 C.A. 10; see People v. Andrews (1963) 222 C.A.2d 242, 246, 35 C.R. 118, quoting the text; People v. Manson (1976) 61 C.A.3d 102, 153, 132 C.R. 265, quoting the text; 1 McCormick 5th, §185; on admission of superficially irrelevant evidence subject to its being "connected up," see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th),

Presentation at Trial, §45.)

(4) Judicial Rules of Relevancy. It follows from the foregoing principles that judicial decisions, no matter how numerous, cannot cover all of the problems of relevancy that may arise in the trial of cases. Nevertheless, a great many doctrines have developed in the course of repeated holdings on the admissibility of common types of circumstantial evidence; e.g., character, habit, similar acts, etc. (see infra, §38 et seq.). And many decisions illustrate the manner in which relevancy of separate bits of evidence is determined under the test set forth above. (See infra, §§27, 28.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Relevancy Determined by Logic and Experience. See Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §1:1 et seq. (2) The Reasonable Inference Test. See 1 McCormick 6th, §185.

(3) Application of Test to Single Items. See 1 McCormick 6th, §185.

27 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

C. Test of Relevancy.

2. Civil Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 27

[§ 27] Civil Cases.

In I.E.S. Corp. v. Superior Court (1955) 44 C.2d 559, 563, 283 P.2d 700, plaintiff, after having contracted to buy machinery from defendant, brought this action alleging (a) conspiracy of defendant with the sellers, and (b) fraud of defendant in representing that he had funds and organizational capacity to perform, that the engines were new, that the price was below market rates, etc. On deposition, defendant refused to answer many questions concerning the identities of persons who sold goods to him or from whom he intended to buy, and concerning his knowledge of engines and market values. Held, the questions were proper. Defendant's knowledge of engines and market values was relevant on the issue whether his representations were made without belief or reasonable grounds for belief in their truth. And the sources of goods and identities of the sellers were relevant on the issue whether defendant had an anticipated source of supply or made the promise without intention to perform.

In Estate of Zalud (1972) 27 C.A.3d 945, 104 C.R. 329, decedent, an elderly woman, left nearly all of her large estate to W, who was unrelated to her. The purported will was witnessed by W's brother and nephew, was completed some 4 months before her death, and decisively changed the beneficiaries named in her earlier will and codicil. The contestants claimed lack of execution and improper attestation. W testified that he had not discussed preparation of the will with decedent and that, when she handed the will to him, he did not know who had prepared it, where the printed form had been obtained, or whose typewriter had been used to type the provisions. Over objection, the contestants introduced evidence that two other deceased women had executed wills in which W was the principal beneficiary under one and his brother was the principal beneficiary under the other. The contestants also introduced decedent's prior wills. The judge found that decedent had not signed the disputed will. Held, affirmed.

(a) Admission of the unrelated wills was not error. They were similar in form to the disputed will, and the similarities, together with evidence that one will had been typed on W's typewriter, tended to impeach W's testimony that he did not know how the disputed will was prepared and lent support to the inference that he had that knowledge. "Irrespective of whether Joe Witt had committed any wrong insofar as either the Wells will or the Sammons will was concerned, his connection with each will supported the inference that he had knowledge of the availability of the Wolcott forms which could readily be used in the preparation of a will without recourse to the services of a lawyer. It was an unusual circumstance that in three instances he would have some relationship to a will which was prepared on such a form, the named testator in each instance not being related to the principal beneficiary and provisions having been inserted in each form which contain striking similarities to provisions so inserted in one or both of the other will forms." (27 C.A.3d 956.)

(b) Admission of decedent's prior wills was also proper to corroborate other evidence of forgery by showing previous dispositions of her property inconsistent with the challenged disposition. (27 C.A.3d 957.) (See Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge (1991) 230 C.A.3d 1507, 1523, 281 C.R. 890 [in action for intentional interference with employment contract, trial judge properly excluded evidence that, 6 months after plaintiff's termination, plaintiff's superior traveled to Hawaii with another employee, with whom he allegedly had romantic relationship and who disliked plaintiff; excluded evidence did not support inference that defendant acted under other employee's influence in removing plaintiff]; 86 A.L.R.4th 1135 [admissibility on issue of life expectancy, in action for personal injury or death, of injured party's use of intoxicants or illegal drugs].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Kotla v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (2004) 115 C.A.4th 283, 295, 8 C.R.3d 898 [in wrongful termination action alleging that defendant laboratory fired plaintiff for impermissible retaliatory reasons, trial judge erred in allowing plaintiff to testify that she had once been given permission to do what, according to defendant, she was fired for; testimony was irrelevant absent evidence that supervisors who fired her were aware of permission claim and failed to investigate it or consider it before discharging her].

28 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

C. Test of Relevancy.

3. Criminal Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 28

[§ 28] Criminal Cases.

(1) Homicide. In People v. Reilly (1970) 3 C.3d 421, 90 C.R. 417, 475 P.2d 649, the victim was last seen alive as she left her home soon after the second beating that defendant had given her that day. The next morning she was found lying in bed in her home, dead of multiple injuries. In the time between the victim's having left her home and the discovery of her body, defendant, a frequent visitor, had been seen sitting in her kitchen and sobbing. Held, conviction of manslaughter affirmed. Although the trial judge might have inferred that defendant's emotional state was due to his son's death in Vietnam, the evidence established defendant's propensity to beat the victim. "Twice within 24 hours of her death he committed a brutal assault upon her with his fists or hands, and from the recited evidence it may be inferred that during the fatal assault she was severely beaten, as well as being lacerated with a pointed instrument. Added to the foregoing is the inference which the trier of fact could consider from the evidence of defendant sitting by himself sobbing on the night of the homicide in the immediate vicinity of the place where the body was found the next morning." (3 C.3d 425.)

In People v. Hamilton (1985) 41 C.3d 408, 221 C.R. 902, 710 P.2d 981, defendant was charged with murdering a woman whose body was found bound and missing its head and hands. The prosecution's theory was that defendant had been surprised by the victim while he was breaking into her van, and he then murdered her because of his deathly fear of prison. The prosecution was permitted to introduce evidence that approximately a week later, after threatening a girlfriend to whom he had told incriminating facts, defendant purchased a pruning saw, a butcher knife, and two shanks of twine. Held, the evidence was admissible both to show defendant's consciousness of guilt and his identity as the murderer. (41 C.3d 429.)

In People v. Thurmond (1985) 175 C.A.3d 865, 221 C.R. 292, the prosecution's theory was that defendant shot his lover during an angry dispute over whether the victim would return to her husband. Defendant claimed that he had his gun out to defend himself from an unknown intruder, possibly the victim's husband; and, after the victim entered the room, the gun went off by accident. In response to questions as to why he thought the intruder was the victim's husband and his attitude toward the husband, defendant sought to testify that the victim's husband had threatened and "roughed around" the victim, but prosecution objections were sustained. Defendant was convicted of attempted murder. Held, reversed.

To succeed with his defense of accident or misfortune, defendant was required by P.C. 26(five) to establish the absence of evil design, intention, and culpable negligence. This required that defendant explain to the jury why he thought the husband would come to his house and why he needed to be ready to use deadly force in self-defense. The excluded testimony would have lent credibility to defendant's asserted state of mind, hence, was relevant, competent evidence not precluded by the hearsay rule. (175 C.A.3d 871.)

In People v. Anderson (1990) 52 C.3d 453, 276 C.R. 356, 801 P.2d 1107, defendant's death sentence was reversed and the special circumstance was set aside for failure to instruct that intent to kill was an element of the special circumstance. He was then retried on the special circumstance issues and the penalty phase of his murder and robbery prosecution, and the prosecution presented evidence that, after killing the victim, defendant remained in her house and cooked and ate a bowl of noodles. The prosecution later called additional witnesses during the penalty phase to confirm the incident. Held, this evidence was properly admitted.

(a) "[T]hat defendant had the presence of mind to calmly cook and eat noodles after killing Mrs. Lyman indicated a lack of concern and remorse usually associated with an accidental or unintentional killing, and accordingly bore on the disputed issue of defendant's intent to kill." (52 C.3d 471.)

(b) "As for calling additional penalty phase witnesses to prove the point, the People reasonably deemed it appropriate to call these witnesses after defendant took the stand and recanted his recorded statement and denied cooking or eating the noodles." (52 C.3d 471.) (See People v. Romero (1999) 69 C.A.4th 846, 854, 81 C.R.2d 823 [sociologist's testimony about role of "honor" in Hispanic culture was irrelevant to murder defendant's claim of self-defense, as it shed no light on whether defendant was in actual fear of death or great bodily harm or whether his fear was objectively reasonable].)

(2) Other Offenses. In People v. Graves (1934) 137 C.A. 1, 11, 29 P.2d 807, 30 P.2d 508, a prosecution of defendant county official for taking a bribe from building contractors, evidence was offered that on a certain day the contractors withdrew $ 80,000 in currency from a bank. Held, this was admissible when considered in connection with other evidence, e.g., that defendant on the same day made a secret trip to the same city under an assumed name and obtained a similar sum of money.

In People v. Wissenfeld (1951) 36 C.2d 758, 227 P.2d 833, defendant L testified that he alone stole a car and violated the Gun Law by obliterating serial numbers on a gun. It was nevertheless held that the evidence sustained the conviction of defendant W as well. The circumstantial evidence included the following: (a) On theft of the car: W's driving of the stolen car when apprehended; his false and equivocal statements when queried on ownership; the presence of the codefendant who claimed to be the thief and was an admitted associate in bookmaking; defendant's need for a car in gambling collections but not one in his own name (motive for theft); defendant's exercise of dominion over the car. (36 C.2d 763.) (b) On violation of the Gun Law by tampering with identification marks: Defendant's possession of the stolen car and guns in the glove compartment (inference that possessor of guns committed crime of tampering); defendant's need for the guns in his criminal activity. (36 C.2d 764.)

In People v. Torres (1964) 61 C.2d 264, 37 C.R. 889, 391 P.2d 161, defendant was charged with a sale of narcotics on January 25 at 8 p.m., 15 months before his arrest. His only real defense was the alibi that he and his wife on that evening had seen a certain motion picture at a particular theatre. To corroborate the testimony of his wife, sister, and mother on this issue, he called a meteorologist who testified that it rained on that day. But the judge refused to allow him to testify that it did not rain on any other day while that picture was showing. Held, this was reversible error. A fact, though collateral to the main issue, is relevant if it tends to make the essential facts in issue more certain. Here, proof that there was only one rainy evening while the picture was showing would connect up defendant's activities with a collateral matter which would normally be remembered, and the date of which could be established by incontrovertible scientific testimony. (61 C.2d 266.)

In People v. Peters (1972) 23 C.A.3d 522, 101 C.R. 403, defendant was charged with pilferages from only one department store, but evidence was admitted to show shortages in other stores of the same chain. Held, this was proper. Although the absence of direct evidence that there were shortages in the store from which defendant was charged with stealing merchandise would seemingly render the other evidence irrelevant, the testimony was admissible. The merchandise found in defendant's apartment came from the chain for which defendant worked, the serial numbers matched those on missing merchandise, and these facts tended to prove the disputed fact. (23 C.A.2d 534.)

In People v. Heller (1979) 96 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 157 C.R. 830, defendant was charged with possession of an allegedly obscene film ("Swedish Erotica No. 17") dealing with abnormal sexual acts. His counsel offered to prove that similar films ("Deep Throat," "Devil in Miss Jones," and "Behind the Green Door") had been playing in the community for years to millions of adult viewers. Held, it was error to exclude the evidence. It was relevant on the issue of what was acceptable under contemporary community standards--the test of obscenity (see 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §§312, 313). (96 C.A.3d Supp. 6.)

In People v. Harlan (1990) 222 C.A.3d 439, 271 C.R. 653, after the 4-year-old victim of a sex crime testified that defendant was wearing women's underwear during commission of the crime, the trial judge admitted other evidence establishing that the defendant often wore women's underwear. Held, this was proper. Because the central issue was the victim's credibility, his ability to recall and describe the circumstances of the crime, including the clothing the defendant wore, was highly relevant. And the evidence did not involve such undue prejudice that it had to be excluded under Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17). (222 C.A.3d 446.)

In People v. Alvarez (1996) 49 C.A.4th 679, 56 C.R.2d 814, defendant confessed to having committed various drug offenses and later recanted. At trial, he sought to introduce evidence as to his potential punishment in order to explain his reasons for recanting. Held, the trial judge properly excluded this evidence. Evidence as to punishment is generally irrelevant to the question of guilt. The relevant question was why, if he was innocent, did he confess, and he was allowed to explain that he had done so to protect his wife. (49 C.A.4th 687, 688.)

(3) Distinction: Profile Evidence. In People v. Derello (1989) 211 C.A.3d 414, 259 C.R. 265, a prosecution for transporting cocaine, the trial judge admitted evidence of "the drug trafficker profile." In holding this error (though not prejudicial), the court said: "[I]t is clear that characteristics of the drug courier profile which are evidence of ongoing criminal activity may be introduced at trial to prove the elements of the crime charged. In the case at bench evidence of such activity could be found in the use of aliases, tagging of the luggage with the aliases, as well as the peculiar manner of these defendants' moving through the concourse. These characteristics were admissible because of their tendency to prove the material facts of knowledge and intent." However, "evidence of the amount of gold jewelry worn by Derello, of the amount of cash defendants carried, of the youth and casual dress of defendants, and of their rental of an expensive car had no tendency in reason to prove any issue in the trial. ... Moreover, there is no justification for admitting testimony concerning the existence and nature of the drug trafficker profile itself. Such evidence has absolutely no relevancy to the elements of the crime and might be perceived by the jury to be evidence of the character of defendants as drug couriers." (211 C.A.3d 426.) (See People v. Castaneda (1997) 55 C.A.4th 1067, 1071, 1072, 64 C.R.2d 395 [in prosecution for possession of heroin, admission of expert testimony regarding heroin dealer profile was error; evidence was inherently prejudicial, because profile fit defendant perfectly and defendant was not even charged with dealing; citing Derello].)

The Derello case was distinguished in People v. Singh (1995) 37 C.A.4th 1343, 44 C.R.2d 644, a prosecution arising from the fraudulent staging of automobile accidents. The trial judge admitted the opinions of two police officers that, based on circumstantial evidence presented by the prosecution, the collisions were staged. Held, this was proper; the opinions were not inadmissible profile evidence. The only element at issue in Derello ... was defendant's knowledge of the illegal nature of the substance transported. "Such is not the case here. Singh's posture at trial was that the collisions were not staged. Short of an admission from him or an accomplice, the prosecution was left to circumstantial evidence. The experts testified in order to explain the relationship between the various pieces of evidence, e.g., the extent of damage, type and extent of injuries, number of passengers in the car, use of a common caregiver or attorney, etc. ... These opinions were relevant because Singh was charged with ... a sophisticated course of conduct." (37 C.A.4th 1379, 1380.) (On admissibility of profile testimony as "other crimes" evidence, see infra, §83.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Homicide. See People v. Ortiz (2003) 109 C.A.4th 104, 116, 134 C.R.2d 467 [in murder prosecution arising from vehicular collision, evidence of past incidents of defendant's drunk driving was relevant to determination whether defendant had wanton disregard for human life, which was necessary for finding of implied malice, even though parties stipulated prior to trial that intoxication was not involved in present offense].(2) Other Offenses. Test of obscenity:

Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §§437, 438.(3) Distinction: Profile Evidence. See People v. Robbie (2001) 92 C.A.4th 1075, 1084, 112 C.R.2d 479 [in prosecution for kidnaping and sexual offenses, law enforcement officer's testimony as to behavior of persons who commit sexual assaults constituted inadmissible profile evidence; testimony, which was given in response to prosecutor's hypotheticals that incorporated victim's description of defendant's conduct, helped guide jury to conclusion that defendant was guilty because he fit profile]; cf. People v. Prince (2007) 40 C.4th 1179, 1226, 57 C.R.3d 543, 156 P.3d 1015 [in murder prosecution, opinion testimony of FBI agent that, based on his experience and common marks among six charged homicides, all six were committed by same person, was not profile evidence of type improperly admitted in Robbie; agent did not evaluate defendant's behavior against pattern or profile, and did not refer to defendant at all].

29 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

C. Test of Relevancy.

4. Negative Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 29

[§ 29] Negative Evidence.

Testimony that the witness did not see or hear something is often admitted to show that the thing did not happen. Thus, testimony in an accident case, by witnesses in a position to hear and see, that they did not hear any warning bell or whistle, or observe any other signal given, is admissible and may support a verdict though there is direct testimony to the contrary. (Jones v. Southern Pac. Co. (1925) 74 C.A. 10, 26, 239 P. 429; People v. McWilliams (1931) 117 C.A. 732, 735, 4 P.2d 601; Ostertag v. Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. (1944) 65 C.A.2d 795, 800, 151 P.2d 647; Quiroga v. Southern Pac. Co. (1955) 130 C.A.2d 93, 99, 278 P.2d 80; Beauchamp v. Los Gatos Golf Course (1969) 273 C.A.2d 20, 36, 77 C.R. 914 [discussion and review of cases]; Riddick v. Jim Hay Co. (1975) 45 C.A.3d 464, 472, 119 C.R. 546, quoting the text [statement of truck driver that he looked and did not see lights on car in which plaintiff was passenger was "negative evidence," but admissible to show that vehicle did not have headlights on]; see 1958 A.S. 649 [proof that liquor buyers on defendant's books were fictitious, by checking local sources without locating such persons]; on negative evidence of character, see infra, §44; on absence of business entry, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §234; on absence of official record, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §254.)

In Hamilton v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1939) 12 C.2d 598, 603, 86 P.2d 829, an action for injuries received when plaintiff slipped on oil in a waiting room, the issue was whether defendant failed to make reasonable inspection. Plaintiff was allowed to testify that she sat in a waiting room 20-30 minutes, and saw no one enter, prior to the accident.

Hinton v. California (1954) 124 C.A.2d 622, 269 P.2d 154, quotes from Wigmore as follows: "Courts have often been asked to exclude testimony based on what may be called negative knowledge, i.e., testimony that a fact did not occur, founded on the witness' failure to hear or see a fact which he would supposedly have heard or seen if it had occurred. Yet there is no inherent weakness in this kind of knowledge. It rests on the same data of the senses. It may even sometimes be stronger than affirmative impressions. The only requirement is that the witness should have been so situated that in the ordinary course of events he would have heard or seen the fact had it occurred. This sort of testimony is constantly received--particularly in proof of the failure to give railroad signals, the loss of a chattel, the absence of a witness, the non-existence of a fictitious person, the non-payment of money, and other negative facts." (124 C.A.2d 625.) (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.), §664.)

In the Hinton case, supra, plaintiff, a pedestrian, was struck by a car while crossing a state highway. The automatic signal allowed only 10 seconds, insufficient for crossing. A pushbutton was available for a pedestrian to signal and get 24 seconds, enough for crossing, and a sign was placed there, explaining the use of the button. Plaintiff's evidence was that the sign had not been inspected for at least 7 days, that similar signs were frequently removed by children, that it was not there 4 days after the accident, and that plaintiff looked at the pole twice on the evening of the accident but did not see it. Held, this negative evidence was sufficient to show that the sign was missing, and to sustain a verdict for plaintiff.

However, the evidence may sometimes be of such slight probative value that its exclusion by the trial judge will be upheld, either as a proper exercise of discretion, or as nonprejudicial error. Thus, in People v. Mehafeey (1948) 32 C.2d 535, 555, 197 P.2d 12, the prosecution, in a murder case, showed that the decomposed body of the deceased was found concealed 40 feet from an isolated country road. Defendant offered testimony that persons living in the vicinity and passing along the highway had not seen or smelled the body. Held, exclusion of this testimony was not prejudicial error; the circumstances were not such as to have caught the attention of anyone.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.147

30 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

D. Limited Admissibility.

1. In General.

a. Nature of Doctrine.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 30

[§ 30] Nature of Doctrine.

Some evidence may be relevant for one purpose and inadmissible for another purpose, either because it is irrelevant or because some rule excludes it for that other purpose. It may be admitted, but only for the proper purpose, and under instructions of the court so limiting it. (See Adkins v. Brett (1920) 184 C. 252, 256, 193 P. 251; Wagner v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1930) 210 C. 526, 531, 292 P. 645; Daggett v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1957) 48 C.2d 655, 665, 313 P.2d 557; Behr v. Santa Cruz (1959) 172 C.A.2d 697, 704, 342 P.2d 987; People v. Sweeney (1960) 55 C.2d 27, 42, 9 C.R. 793, 357 P.2d 1049, infra, §35; People v. Burton (1961) 55 C.2d 328, 348, 11 C.R. 65, 359 P.2d 433; Mecchi v. Picchi (1966) 245 C.A.2d 470, 479, 54 C.R. 1, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §184, citing the text; People v. Reyes (1976) 62 C.A.3d 53, 61, 62, 132 C.R. 848; People v. Miranda (1987) 44 C.3d 57, 83, 241 C.R. 594, 744 P.2d 1127, citing the text; Continental Airlines v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 C.A.3d 388, 412, 264 C.R. 779; 1 McCormick 5th, §59; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §13; 1 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §20.11 et seq.; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §382; on limiting instructions, see BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.05.)

The same is true in actions involving several parties, where certain evidence is admissible against one party and not against another. (See Williams v. E. W. Robinson Van Lines (1955) 46 C.2d 14, 16, 291 P.2d 453; Stathos v. Lemich (1963) 213 C.A.2d 52, 57, 28 C.R. 462.)

Ev.C. 355, based on Unif. Rules, Rule 105 (formerly Rule 106), codifies this doctrine: "When evidence is admissible as to one party or for one purpose and is inadmissible as to another party or for another purpose, the court upon request shall restrict the evidence to its proper scope and instruct the jury accordingly."

F.R. Evid., Rule 105 is almost identical. (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §38 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §322.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CACI, No. 206 [evidence admitted for limited purpose], CACI, No. 207 [evidence applicable to only one party]; CALCRIM, No. 303 [Limited Purpose Evidence in General]; CALCRIM, No. 304 [Multiple Defendants: Limited Admissibility of Evidence]; CALCRIM, No. 305 [Multiple Defendants: Limited Admissibility of Defendant's Statement]; 1 McCormick 6th, §59. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.114

31 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

D. Limited Admissibility.

1. In General.

b. Procedural Rules.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 31

[§ 31] Procedural Rules.

Several procedural rules have been developed in implementation of the doctrine of limited admissibility:

(1) Statement of Proper Purpose for Admission. The party offering the evidence must state the proper purpose. If the only theory expressed in offering it is an improper one, the judge may exclude the evidence. (See Estate of Parkinson (1923) 190 C. 475, 476, 213 P. 259; Estate of Smead (1933) 219 C. 572, 576, 28 P.2d 348; Larson v. Solbakken (1963) 221 C.A.2d 410, 422, 34 C.R. 450, infra, §109, citing the text; Warner Const. Corp. v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 C.3d 285, 298, footnotes 14, 15, 85 C.R. 444, 466 P.2d 996, citing the text [for evidence generally admissible, the theory under which it is admitted is immaterial, but when evidence should be admitted only for a limited purpose, "the theory of admission is crucial"].)

(2) Request for Limiting Instruction. The adverse party must act affirmatively to limit the effect of the evidence by requesting the limiting instruction; in the absence of a request, there is no reversible error in the unlimited admission. (See Hatfield v. Levy Bros. (1941) 18 C.2d 798, 810, 117 P.2d 841; People v. Hawkins (1960) 177 C.A.2d 714, 719, 2 C.R. 524, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §218; Wicktor v. Los Angeles (1960) 177 C.A.2d 390, 405, 2 C.R. 352; Foreman & Clark Corp. v. Fallon (1971) 3 C.3d 875, 887, 92 C.R. 162, 479 P.2d 362, infra, §32, citing the text; People v. Kendrick (1989) 211 C.A.3d 1273, 1278, 260 C.R. 27 [no sua sponte duty to instruct that prior conviction was admitted only for impeachment]; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §382.)

This requirement may be excused where the request would be futile. In Warner Const. Corp. v. Los Angeles, supra, plaintiff introduced exhibits relating to settlement negotiations. Defendant unsuccessfully objected to their admissibility, but failed to request a limiting instruction. Held, defendant did not waive its objection.

(a) Defendant's opportunity to seek a limiting instruction was an insufficient remedy. "The evidence was offered generally; when defendant objected, plaintiff's counsel defended the offer primarily on the ground that the correspondence showed the actions of the parties under the contract. The trial court admitted the evidence without any hint of limited purpose, and to all appearances the trial judge had rejected defendant's contention that the correspondence constituted negotiations of compromise under section 1152. Under these circumstances defense counsel cannot be expected to speculate upon the possibility that the court received the evidence for some undisclosed and limited purpose other than that suggested by its proponent, or to prepare instructions based on any such speculation." (2 C.3d 298.)

(b) By the time the jury instructions were submitted, much trial testimony had been devoted to a discussion of the meaning and import of the disputed exhibits. "At this point a request for a limiting instruction would have been doubly futile; not only had the court apparently rejected the contention of the defense that the letters were offers of compromise under section 1152, but so much testimony had pertained to the letters that the jury could not reasonably be expected to follow any such instruction." (2 C.3d 299.)

(3) Timing of Instruction. An appropriate limiting instruction is required if properly requested. "However, ... the trial court is not obliged to give limiting instructions the moment they are requested or when the limited evidence is presented; subsequent instructions can be sufficient in a proper case." (People v. Dennis (1998) 17 C.4th 468, 533, 534, 71 C.R.2d 680, 950 P.2d 1035 [trial judge did not err in waiting until end of trial to give instruction that statements defendant made to medical expert in course of examination could only be used to show information on which expert based his opinion].)

(4) Exclusion Where Prejudice Is Unavoidable. Ev.C. 355 is subject to the broader discretionary rule of Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17); i.e., if the improper purpose is so prejudicial that the limiting instruction would be an inadequate protection for the adverse party, and the fact can be established by other evidence without the harmful effect, the judge can exclude the evidence offered. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 355; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §59 [confession of codefendant].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Request for Limiting Instruction. See People v. Hernandez (2004) 33 C.4th 1040, 1051, 16 C.R.3d 880, 94 P.3d 1080 [trial judge had no sua sponte duty to give limiting instruction relating to evidence supporting criminal street gang enhancement]; People v. Griggs (2003) 110 C.A.4th 1137, 1139, 2 C.R.3d 380 [in prosecution for being felon in possession of firearm, trial judge had no sua sponte duty to instruct on limited purposes for which defendant's stipulation to prior felony convictions could be used].

32 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

D. Limited Admissibility.

1. In General.

c. Doctrine in Bifurcated Trial.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 32

[§ 32] Doctrine in Bifurcated Trial.

In Foreman & Clark Corp. v. Fallon (1971) 3 C.3d 875, 92 C.R. 162, 479 P.2d 362, the litigation was based on cross-claims between plaintiff lessee, who was suing for damages for nondelivery of the premises, and defendant landlords, who sought rescission and damages for plaintiff's alleged misrepresentations. By agreement between counsel and the trial judge, the trial was divided into four phases: defendants' liability, plaintiff's liability, the judge's opinion based on the two preceding stages, and damages. During the first phase, plaintiff introduced his written lease with defendant, apparently to establish its existence and the claimed breach. In the second phase, defendant introduced evidence of prior leases of the same premises to show the allegedly fraudulent conduct of plaintiff and his agent. In the last phase, the judge considered the prior leases and the agreed rent as factors in awarding plaintiff general damages of $ 25,000 (the difference between the agreed rent and the rental value for the lease term). Appealing on the ground of inadequacy of damages, plaintiff argued that the judge should not have considered those factors because the evidence was introduced for a different purpose at a different stage of the trial. Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) Plaintiff contended, in effect, that each stage was an evidentiary compartment hermetically sealed off from the other stages because the usefulness of a bifurcated trial would be destroyed if evidence were considered at different stages on different issues. Plaintiff further argued that the divided trial could be a trap for unsuspecting counsel, who might neglect to request a limitation on admissibility to the sole issue being tried during the particular phase; hence, in the absence of an explicit agreement to the contrary, evidence in a bifurcated trial should be considered only on the issue presented at the stage in progress. This approach is unsupported by any authority and is directly contrary to the rule that the court may consider evidence for any relevant and competent purpose unless there is an express agreement between the trial judge and counsel limiting it to a particular matter. (Ev.C. 355.) (3 C.3d 887, citing the text.)

(b) "The major objective of bifurcated trials is to expedite and simplify the presentation of evidence. Yet this objective would be thwarted by the limitation of the scope of evidence introduced at one stage of a bifurcated trial to the issue presented at that stage. To assure that the trier of fact could consider all the evidence on each issue, the parties would be required to reintroduce every piece of evidence at each stage of the trial. Thus, in the present case, plaintiff had to show the difference between the agreed rent and the rental value of the premises to establish damages. If plaintiff's theory were applied, plaintiff would have been required to reintroduce the lease in evidence during the damages stage of the trial to show the agreed rent. The prior admission of the lease during the first stage of the trial would not suffice. Such duplication of effort is the very opposite of the purpose of bifurcated trials." (3 C.3d 888.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

33 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

D. Limited Admissibility.

1. In General.

d. Deletion of Inadmissible Matter.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 33

[§ 33] Deletion of Inadmissible Matter.

The theory that an instruction will protect against improper consideration of the inadmissible part has been questioned, and in a few situations a different method of handling the problem has been prescribed: deletion of the inadmissible matter where this is feasible.

The principal illustration is the redaction of portions of a codefendant's confession (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §59), but the procedure is used in other contexts as well. In People v. Crosslin (1967) 251 C.A.2d 968, 60 C.R. 309, a prosecution for armed robbery and felonious assault, defendant's fingerprint card, taken on his arrest, was introduced as an exhibit for comparison with fingerprints found on a beer can left by the victim's assailant. The card contained, on its back, a space for statistics concerning the person; and on the first line there appeared the date of taking the prints and a notation referring to various charges pending against defendant: "Charge 211 PC 11530 H&S 12951-21650 CVC." These other offenses were clearly inadmissible, and the prosecution offered to scratch out the entry, but defendant rejected the offer because it would call the jury's attention to something they were not to see. Held, there was no error in admitting the exhibit; either obliterating or covering the objectionable part, as the prosecution offered to do, was a sufficient protection. (251 C.A.2d 979.) (See People v. Fairchild (1967) 254 C.A.2d 831, 839, 62 C.R. 535 [police photograph with police record on the back, used by victim to identify defendant; judge blocked out objectionable matter]; People v. Washington (1969) 71 C.2d 1061, 1081, 1082, 80 C.R. 567, 458 P.2d 479 [trial judge did not abuse discretion in admitting medical testimony tending to show that defendant was once in prison; but when possible, judge "should give serious consideration to ordering the severance of portions of testimony so as to protect the rights of the defendant without totally destroying the value of the witness' testimony"]; People v. Coleman (1985) 38 C.3d 69, 92, 93, 211 C.R. 102, 695 P.2d 189, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §211.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

34 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

D. Limited Admissibility.

2. Illustrations.

a. Civil Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 34

[§ 34] Civil Cases.

(1) Personal Injury Action: Prior Accidents. In Brown v. Affonso (1960) 185 C.A.2d 235, 239, 8 C.R. 156, plaintiff sued for damages for head injuries received in 1957. Defendant, cross-examining her doctor, asked about his reports and testimony relating to prior accidents in 1954 and 1956, seeking to show that the injuries claimed in the present case were identical with those claimed in the previous cases. Held, the questions were proper. Although ordinarily evidence of prior litigation is objectionable as involving undue prejudice and confusion of issues, it was relevant for the limited purpose.

In a negligence action, evidence of other accidents of the driver of an automobile is excluded because its probative value is outweighed by the likelihood that the jury would improperly infer negligence from a trait of character (see Ev.C. 1104; infra, §39). But where the action is also against another defendant for negligent entrustment of the car to an incompetent driver, the prior accidents are admissible on the issue of that defendant's knowledge of the driver's unfitness. (Allen v. Toledo (1980) 109 C.A.3d 415, 419, 167 C.R. 270.)

(2) Personal Injury Action: Plaintiff's Misconduct. In McGee v. Cessna Aircraft Co. (1983) 139 C.A.3d 179, 185, 188 C.R. 542, the action was against an airplane manufacturer for injuries suffered in an airplane crash. On the strict liability cause of action, evidence of personal misconduct of the plaintiff was prejudicial and excludable, but on the negligence cause of action, it was probative and admissible.

(3) Party's Poverty or Wealth. Poverty of an injured plaintiff is ordinarily irrelevant and its suggestion is highly prejudicial (infra, §138), but relevant evidence of the nature of the plaintiff's work is admissible despite the incidental disclosure of low wages and straitened circumstances. (Hughes v. Quackenbush (1934) 1 C.A.2d 349, 358, 37 P.2d 99.) Similarly, wealth of the defendant cannot be shown in an action for damages for personal injuries; but where plaintiff sued a pharmaceutical company alleging overpromotion of a drug, proof of large sales volume was relevant to show motive, and was admissible with a limiting instruction. (Love v. Wolf (1964) 226 C.A.2d 378, 389, 38 C.R. 183, citing the text; see infra, §139.)

(4) Impeachment. The limited admissibility rule is frequently applied in cross-examination. Questions may be asked that incidentally bring out inadmissible matter, if they are offered in good faith for a legitimate purpose such as testing the recollection or accuracy of observation of the witness. Thus, evidence of precautions taken after an accident, though inadmissible to prove negligence (infra, §163), may be brought in to impeach testimony of a witness who says that he saw nothing wrong with the condition before the accident. (See Wagner v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1930)

210 C. 526, 531, 292 P. 645; Hatfield v. Levy Bros. (1941) 18 C.2d 798, 810, 117 P.2d 841; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §239.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

35 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

D. Limited Admissibility.

2. Illustrations.

b. Criminal Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 35

[§ 35] Criminal Cases.

The limited admissibility doctrine has frequent application in the criminal context. In addition to the cases discussed below, see People v. Gilliland (1940) 39 C.A.2d 250, 255, 103 P.2d 179 [evidence was competent against one defendant but hearsay as to another, who was entitled to limiting instruction]; People v. Miranda (1987) 44 C.3d 57, 82, 83, 241 C.R. 594, 744 P.2d 1127, citing the text [in murder trial, failure to give requested limiting instruction after admitting evidence of incident (a robbery threat) preceding charged crimes constituted error, although harmless, where evidence was relevant to codefendant's state of mind and degree of participation but was cumulative on issue of defendant's identity and state of mind]; People v. Olguin (1994) 31 C.A.4th 1355, 1368, 37 C.R.2d 596 [evidence of threats against prosecution witness was properly admitted for limited purpose of establishing witness' state of mind, attitude, actions, bias, prejudice, or lack of prejudice].

(1) Reference to Defendant's Parole Officer. In People v. Gilkey (1970) 6 C.A.3d 183, 191, 85 C.R. 642, a key prosecution witness stated that he was a parole agent. Defense counsel demanded a mistrial on the ground that the jury was thus improperly informed that defendant had previously been convicted of a felony. Held, no error. Gratuitous reference to a defendant's parole officer would have been improper, but evidence from this witness was necessary to show defendant's use of a garage where stolen merchandise was found. "Since it was legitimate to use the officer's testimony, it was equally proper to identify him. The jury was entitled to know who he was and what office he held in judging his credibility." (6 C.A.3d 192.)

(2) Reference to Civil Injunction Against Defendants. In People v. Lynam (1968) 261 C.A.2d 490, 68 C.R. 202, defendants were charged with grand theft and conspiracy to commit grand theft by selling trust indentures ("pure trusts") to the public on false representations that they would avoid estate and inheritance taxes. Because knowledge of falsity and intent to defraud were essential elements of the offense, and innocent or inadvertent statements would not be punishable, the prosecution offered in evidence an injunction issued against defendants in a civil suit by the Attorney General, restraining them from making these false representations. Held, this evidence was properly received. (261 C.A.2d 497.)

(3) Impeachment. In People v. Sweeney (1960) 55 C.2d 27, 9 C.R. 793, 357 P.2d 1049, a prosecution for giving a narcotic to a hospital patient, the patient testified for defendant. She was then impeached for bias and interest by evidence that she lived with defendant at his expense as a common law wife (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §344). Held, this was proper despite the disclosure of the degrading conduct of defendant. "Here it is clear that the point to prove which this evidence was competent could not just as well, or at all, have been proved by other evidence, nor can it be said that this evidence was of slight weight or importance upon the question of the witness' interest and bias. There is nothing in the record to support a conclusion that the real object for which the evidence was introduced was not to establish probable interest and bias or to get evidence before the jury for the purpose for which it was not competent. The prosecution did not introduce repeated declarations, but only the evidence of one conversation and the birth certificates, which were all reasonably necessary to establish the facts relied upon by the prosecution to prove interest and bias." (55 C.2d 43.)

In People v. Mattison (1971) 4 C.3d 177, 187, 93 C.R. 185, 481 P.2d 193, defendant was charged with murdering a fellow prisoner by means of poison. Prior to trial two inmates had given statements about certain remarks allegedly made by defendant but at the trial both inmates testified they did not remember their statements. To establish that the memory loss was feigned, the prosecution introduced a newspaper article which stated that defendant was charged with furnishing methyl alcohol to the victim and that prisoners would be the key prosecution witnesses. Because the article had been posted on the prison bulletin board, the prosecution sought to show that the witnesses were intimidated by the possibility of retaliation from other inmates. Held, the article was admissible for the limited purpose. "The record reflects that the article did not contain any prejudicial or inflammatory statements. Moreover, the jury was instructed to consider only the fact that such an article was published to the extent that it impeached the testimony of the two witnesses and not for the truth of the statements contained therein." (4 C.3d 187.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Holloway (2004) 33 C.4th 96, 132, 14 C.R.3d 212, 91 P.3d 164 [in capital murder prosecution in which evidence that female victim had had homosexual relationship was admitted in connection with pubic hair evidence and also to aid jurors in understanding defendant's recorded statements to detective and his state of mind concerning his relationship with victim at time of interview, trial judge properly gave limiting instruction to jurors to prevent misuse of evidence as reflecting negatively on victim's character]; CALJIC, No. 17.24.3 [limiting instruction where evidence of gang activity introduced].

36 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

E. Entire Act To Explain Part.

1. Rule and Theory.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 36

[§ 36] Rule and Theory.

"Where part of an act, declaration, conversation, or writing is given in evidence by one party, the whole on the same subject may be inquired into by an adverse party; when a letter is read, the answer may be given; and when a detached act, declaration, conversation, or writing is given in evidence, any other act, declaration, conversation, or writing which is necessary to make it understood may also be given in evidence." (Ev.C. 356.)

The obvious purpose of this statute is to avoid distortion of acts or statements that should be viewed in their proper context. (See Ashley v. Rivera (1934) 220 C. 75, 79, 29 P.2d 199; Hatfield v. Levy Bros. (1941) 18 C.2d 798, 812, 117 P.2d 841; Hawkinson v. Oesdean (1943) 61 C.A.2d 712, 719, 143 P.2d 967; Leboire v. Royce (1950) 100 C.A.2d 610, 619, 224 P.2d 106; Conderback v. Standard Oil Co. of Calif. (1966) 239 C.A.2d 664, 685, 48 C.R. 901, citing the text; Sprague v. Equifax (1985) 166 C.A.3d 1012, 1035, 1036, 213 C.R. 69; People v. Douglas (1991) 234 C.A.3d 273, 285, 285 C.R. 609, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §60; People v. Zapien (1993) 4 C.4th 929, 959, 17 C.R.2d 122, 846 P.2d 704; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2097 et seq.; 1 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §20.17 et seq.) It is an exception to the rule that cross-examination is confined to the scope of the direct examination. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §231.)

There is no requirement of ambiguity in the primary admission; the rule merely calls for fair play. "If a statement is admissible in evidence as an admission or declaration, it is admissible as an entirety, including parts that are unfavorable, as well as those that are favorable, to the party offering it in evidence. In the event a statement admitted in evidence constitutes part of a conversation or correspondence, the opponent is entitled to have placed in evidence all that was said or written by or to the declarant in the course of such conversation or correspondence, provided the other statements have some bearing upon, or connection with, the admission or declaration in evidence and are not excluded by a rule of law other than the hearsay rule." (Rosenberg v. Wittenborn (1960) 178 C.A.2d 846, 852, 3 C.R. 459 [quoting Am.Jur. and citing the text].)

In the Rosenberg case, a personal injury action, defendant driver had talked with a police officer. Plaintiff called the officer and elicited from him the testimony that defendant said he was going about 30 miles an hour and crossed the intersection while the light was red (thus giving the impression that he ran the red light because he was going too fast). On cross-examination, over objection, the officer was allowed to read from his police report the whole of defendant's statement: that he stepped on the brakes, realized that they were not working, kept pumping and tried to stop, and that his brake had recently been fixed and had been all right. Held, this was proper.

In People v. Williams (1975) 13 C.3d 559, 119 C.R. 210, 531 P.2d 778, defendant testified that witness T had not witnessed the fatal stabbing and that defendant did not say otherwise to a detective at the crime scene. On rebuttal, the detective testified that defendant had told him T witnessed the slaying. When cross-examining the detective, defense counsel asked, "What was the whole conversation you had with Mrs. Williams?" A prosecution objection that the question called for hearsay was sustained. Held, this was error. (13 C.3d 565.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 106 is narrower in scope: "When a writing or recorded statement or part thereof is introduced by a party, an adverse party may require the introduction at that time of any other part or any other writing or recorded statement which ought in fairness to be considered contemporaneously with it." (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §42 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §358 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Sakarias (2000) 22 C.4th 596, 644, 94 C.R.2d 17, 995 P.2d 152 [where defense counsel, during cross-examination, asked detective about defendant's involvement with gangs, he opened door to admission under Ev.C. 356 of defendant's statements to detective concerning his violent intentions toward three gang members, even though trial judge had previously sustained defendant's Miranda objection to this evidence]; People v. Harrison (2005) 35 C.4th 208, 238, 25 C.R.3d 224, 106 P.3d 895 [in capital murder case in which defense witness, a police sergeant, was allowed to testify as to interview with unavailable witness who identified defendant as perpetrator of both charged murders, prosecutor was properly allowed to inquire about remainder of interview, in which unavailable witness described details of killings]; People v. Harris (2005) 37 C.4th 310, 334, 33 C.R.3d 509, 118 P.3d 545 [in prosecution for attempted murder and capital murder, once defendant presented evidence that attempted murder victim admitted he had participated in illegal loan shark activity, prosecution was entitled to present entire context in which admission was made--telephonic interview from hospital in which victim explained he had lent money to defendant, and while he was driving defendant to and from his apartment in effort to get money owed, defendant shot him]; People v. Guerra (2006) 37 C.4th 1067, 1121, 40 C.R.3d 118, 129 P.3d 321 [in capital murder prosecution, trial judge did not err in excluding defendant's proffered surrebuttal evidence (in form of testimony by defendant's wife) explaining why defendant did not tell his wife about finding victim's body; defendant himself was proponent of evidence that his wife would scold him for having tried to help victim, and thus he was not adverse party entitled to inquire into whole subject under Ev.C. 356]; 27 A.L.R.6th 183 [Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 106, which is identical to F.R. Evid., Rule 106].(New) Effect of Crawford case: Statements otherwise made admissible by Ev.C. 356 are not generally made inadmissible by Crawford v. Washington (2004) 541 U.S. 36, 124 S.Ct. 1354, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, Supp., §21. "This is because, like forfeiture by wrongdoing, section 356 is not an exception to the hearsay rule that purports to assess the reliability of testimony. The statute is founded on the equitable notion that a party who elects to introduce a part of a conversation is precluded from objecting on Confrontation Clause grounds to introduction by the opposing party of other parts of the conversation which are necessary to make the entirety of the conversation understood." (People v. Parrish (2007) 152 C.A.4th 263, 272, 273, 60 C.R.3d 868 [where defendant claimed he was no longer part of gang and introduced evidence that one of his accomplices had said people were trying to kill defendant because he was snitch, prosecution was properly allowed to introduce other parts of accomplice's statement indicating that defendant had possessed handgun].) West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.362 et seq.; Evidence k.118 et seq.

37 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

II. RELEVANCY AND MATERIALITY

E. Entire Act To Explain Part.

2. Limitation: Matters Related to Part.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 37

[§ 37] Limitation: Matters Related to Part.

The rule is not applied mechanically to permit the whole of a transaction to come in without regard to its competency or relevancy; other exclusionary rules may bar incompetent parts, and only those relevant to and necessary for an understanding of the part admitted may be introduced. (See Witt v. Jackson (1961) 57 C.2d 57, 67, 17 C.R. 369, 366 P.2d 641; Russell v. Geis (1967) 251 C.A.2d 560, 568, 59 C.R. 569; People v. Gambos (1970) 5 C.A.3d 187, 192, 84 C.R. 908; People v. Perry (1972) 7 C.3d 756, 786, 103 C.R. 161, 499 P.2d 129, quoting the text; People v. Williams (1975) 13 C.3d 559, 564, 119 C.R. 210, 531 P.2d 778, quoting the text; Benson v. Honda Motor Co. (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1337, 1349, 1350, 32 C.R.2d 322 [product liability action; trial judge properly refused, on grounds of relevancy and prejudice, plaintiffs' request to admit entire crash test report from which defendant used one photograph]; People v. Sanchez (1995) 12 C.4th 1, 58, 47 C.R.2d 843, 906 P.2d 1129, citing the text [evidence may not be admitted under Ev.C. 356 if it is protected from disclosure under newsperson's shield law (Cal. Const., Art. I, §2; see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §333 et seq.)].)

Thus, in Magee v. Wyeth Laboratories (1963) 214 C.A.2d 340, 29 C.R. 322, the action was for wrongful death based on breach of warranty in the sale of a drug. Plaintiff offered interrogatories including part of a report of the Council on Drugs of the American Medical Association dealing with fatalities in its use. Defendant then insisted on a reading of the last paragraph of the report commending defendant for its cooperation in warning physicians of the dangers. Held, this was improper. That portion of the report was not an official or business record, but only the hearsay statement of a voluntary association, not necessary for an understanding of the admissible part. (214 C.A.2d 355.)

The statute may be applied with reasonable restraint to voluminous writings. Thus, where portions of the defendant's testimony before the grand jury are introduced by the prosecution, the defendant cannot, on cross-examination of the reporter, require introduction of the entire record, but can only bring in those parts that are pertinent to the portions introduced on the prosecution's direct examination. Of course, during the defense's case-in-chief, the defendant is entitled to introduce all material and relevant parts of the previous record. (People v. Snyder (1958) 50 C.2d 190, 195, 324 P.2d 1.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

38 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

1. Nature and Distinctions.

a. Moral Character.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 38

[§ 38] Moral Character.

"Character" is one of the most elusive concepts in the law of evidence, and certain basic distinctions are essential to any understanding of the highly specialized rules governing its admissibility and manner of proof.

The typical use of the term by courts and lawyers refers to moral character. This may relate to a defendant in a criminal case (infra, §50), a party in a civil case in which his or her character is in issue (infra, §45), a witness in any case (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §281), a victim of homicide or assault (infra, §57), or a rape victim (infra, §61). In all of these situations, the admissibility of character evidence is well established, and the problems relate to the manner of proof (infra, §43). (See People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 1311, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §19 [construing "high moral character"]; 22 So. Cal. L. Rev. 341 [distinctions in law of character evidence]; 21 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 123 [comprehensive analysis of law of character evidence]; 1 McCormick 5th, §186 et seq.; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §52 et seq.; 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, Chap. 33; 1985 A.S. 683; 21 Proof of Facts 3d 629.)

There is, however, no single concept of "moral character" involved in these cases. There are different traits of character, and the evidence must relate to the particular trait involved: peaceableness of the defendant or victim in a criminal case (infra, §§51, 57); chastity of a rape victim (infra, §61); honesty or veracity of a witness (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §280). (See People v. Shoemaker (1982) 135 C.A.3d 442, 446, footnote 2, 185 C.R. 370, quoting the text.)

A further distinction must be made as to the purpose for which character is proved: Only in a very few situations is character an issue in the action (infra, §45); in most cases character is offered as circumstantial evidence, e.g., as tending to disprove the criminal defendant's guilt (infra, §51), as tending to prove the victim an aggressor (infra, §57), or as casting doubt on the credibility of a witness (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §280).

F.R. Evid., Rule 404(a), entitled "Character evidence generally," reads as follows:

"Evidence of a person's character or a trait of character is not admissible for the purpose of proving action in conformity therewith on a particular occasion, except:

"(1) Character of accused. Evidence of a pertinent trait of character offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same;

"(2) Character of victim. Evidence of a pertinent trait of character of the victim of the crime offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same, or evidence of a character trait of peacefulness of the victim offered by the prosecution in a homicide case to rebut evidence that the victim was the first aggressor;

"(3) Character of witness. Evidence of the character of a witness, as provided in rules 607, 608 and 609." (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §99 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §363 et seq.; 56 A.L.R.4th 402 [admissibility of evidence of pertinent trait under identical Rule 404(a) of the Uniform Rules of Evidence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §186 et seq. Federal rule: F.R. Evid., Rule 404(a), as amended in 2006, now reads:

"Evidence of a person's character or a trait of character is not admissible for the purpose of proving action in conformity therewith on a particular occasion, except:"

"(1) Character of accused. In a criminal case, evidence of a pertinent trait of character offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same, or if evidence of a trait of character of the alleged victim of the crime is offered by an accused and admitted under Rule 404(a)(2), evidence of the same trait of character of the accused offered by the prosecution;"

"(2) Character of alleged victim. In a criminal case, and subject to the limitations imposed by Rule 412, evidence of a pertinent trait of character of the alleged victim of the crime offered by an accused, or by the prosecution to rebut the same, or evidence of a character trait of peacefulness of the alleged victim offered by the prosecution in a homicide case to rebut evidence that the alleged victim was the first aggressor;"

"(3) Character of witness. Evidence of the character of a witness, as provided in Rules 607, 608 and 609."

See 76 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1189 [proposing additional federal rule that would allow prosecution to attack defendant's character for racism where defense raises victim's race in manner insinuating violent stereotypes]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.106 et seq.

39 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

1. Nature and Distinctions.

b. Character for Care or Skill Inadmissible.

1. Exclusionary Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 39

[§ 39] Exclusionary Rule.

Except where it is relevant under Ev.C. 1102, 1103 (conduct of defendant or victim in a criminal case, infra, §§50, 57), "evidence of a trait of a person's character with respect to care or skill is inadmissible to prove the quality of his conduct on a specified occasion." (Ev.C. 1104; see Lowenthal v. Mortimer (1954) 125 C.A.2d 636, 642, 270 P.2d 942; Webb v. Van Noort (1966) 239 C.A.2d 472, 478, 48 C.R. 823; Downing v. Barrett Mobile Home Transport (1974) 38 C.A.3d 519, 524, 113 C.R. 277 ["accident proneness": "evidence that a litigant was involved in a prior accident is inadmissible when its only purported relevance is to show a propensity for negligent acts, thus enhancing the probability of negligence on the occasion in suit"]; Brokopp v. Ford Motor Co. (1977) 71 C.A.3d 841, 851, 139 C.R. 888; Hinson v. Clairemont Community Hosp. (1990) 218 C.A.3d 1110, 1122, 267 C.R. 503 [evidence that defendant doctor performed poorly in medical school and during prior employment was inadmissible to show negligence on particular occasion]; 1 McCormick 5th, §189; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§65, 65.1.)

Thus, in Towle v. Pacific Imp. Co. (1893) 98 C. 342, 343, 33 P. 207, an action for wrongful death of plaintiff's wife, who was run over by a team of horses, defendant was allowed to introduce evidence that his driver was "first-class," and "careful in handling horses." Held, this was error; the negligence issue is determined by the nature of the act or omission, not by defendant's character for care; and evidence that defendant is a careful, prudent, and cautious person is inadmissible to negative any want of ordinary care on the particular occasion. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1104: Slight probative value of the evidence, balanced against danger of confusion of issues, collateral inquiry, prejudice, etc., warrants fixed exclusionary rule.)

In Stafford v. United Farm Workers (1983) 33 C.3d 319, 188 C.R. 600, 656 P.2d 564, plaintiff's evidence showed that A, a striking farm worker about to picket, parked his truck in such a manner as to protrude onto a highway and partially block an access road to a tomato field; and that plaintiff hit the truck, swerved and hit another car, and was injured. Plaintiff sued defendant union on theories of (a) vicarious liability for A's negligence as an agent of the union, and (b) the union's negligence in failing to supervise the parking of pickets' vehicles. At trial, plaintiff offered in evidence a temporary restraining order issued against the union a week before the accident, prohibiting it from blocking access to the field, and barring violent and threatening behavior. The order was admitted, read to the jury, referred to during the trial, and emphasized in plaintiff's closing argument. The jury found the union liable and awarded $ 100,000 in damages. Held, judgment reversed for error in admission of the order.

(a) In negligence per se cases, admissibility of the statute depends on a showing that the plaintiff was a member of the class of persons the statute was designed to protect, and the harm must have been one the statute was designed to prevent. (Ev.C. 669; see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §818 et seq.) The same rule of relevancy should apply to an injunction or temporary restraining order. Here, the order by its terms protected only the class of tomato growers and those with whom they did business--not passing motorists; and, the order was designed to prevent labor violence, not automobile collisions. (33 C.3d 324.)

(b) Plaintiff argued that, even if the order was irrelevant on the issue of negligence in parking, the union's lack of due care in omitting to publicize the contents of the order was relevant on the question whether it was negligent in failing to tell the pickets where not to park their cars. "In other words, the jury was invited to infer the negligent quality of the latter omission from the union's negligence with respect to the former," which is precisely what is prohibited by Ev.C. 1104. (33 C.3d 325.)

(c) Even if the union's failure to communicate the portions of the order prohibiting the blocking of access did have some bearing on the union's negligence liability, admitting the entire order, with its prohibitions against violence and destruction of property, was highly prejudicial, and its irrelevant matter was effectively used in argument. "Plaintiff's counsel adroitly turned a simple issue of negligence into an OSC in re contempt--a referendum on whether the jury should 'send a message' to union that restraining orders cannot be violated with impunity." (33 C.3d 327.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §189.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §871 et seq.

40 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

1. Nature and Distinctions.
- b. Character for Care or Skill Inadmissible.
2. Other Accidents of Driver.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 40

[§ 40] Other Accidents of Driver.

The character of an automobile driver for care or skill cannot be shown in a negligence case by evidence of a reputation for careless or unskillful driving, by opinions to that effect, or by specific acts of negligent driving. The evidence is objectionable on two grounds: It is often remote and time-wasting (see supra, §24), and it is prejudicial (supra, §39). (See Shmatovich v. New Sonoma Creamery (1960) 187 C.A.2d 342, 344, 9 C.R. 630; 1 McCormick 5th, §189; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§65, 65.1; 20 A.L.R.2d 1210; 17 Stanf. L. Rev. 539 [suggesting separate trial of negligent entrustment cause of action, for which evidence of this type is relevant and should be admitted].)

In the Shmatovich case, supra, plaintiff's 17-year-old son, driving her car with permission, was killed in a head-on collision with a truck. She sued the truck driver, his employer, the county and certain other defendants. The trial judge admitted evidence (a) that the mother had obtained a cancellation of the son's driver's license for his previous careless operation; and (b) that in her presence he had pleaded guilty to reckless driving and hit-and-run driving and had been admitted to probation on condition of no driving for 1 year (the fatal accident occurred less than 3 months later). Held, judgment on verdict for defendants reversed. (a) Lack of a driver's license does not prove negligence in the particular case, and except in special situations, it is error to permit proof of it. (187 C.A.2d 344.) (b) Evidence of a driver's prior accidents is ordinarily immaterial in determining negligence on the occasion in question. (187 C.A.2d 344.) "It seems even clearer that evidence of conviction of a previous traffic offense would not normally be permitted in a civil action against the driver for negligent operation of an automobile." (187 C.A.2d 344.)

Defendants, conceding that the evidence was not admissible to prove the son's contributory negligence, nevertheless contended that it could be received on the issue of contributory negligence of plaintiff mother in permitting him to drive, with knowledge of his reckless driving habits and his lack of a license. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §999; 17 Stanf. L. Rev. 539.) The court's answer was that this depended on proof of causation; i.e., the negligence of plaintiff mother in entrusting the car to her son could be a proximate cause of the collision only if the son in fact drove negligently. (187 C.A.2d 344.) Because the jury was not properly instructed on the special circumstances that would make the evidence admissible, the issue was left in confusion, and the error was prejudicial. (187 C.A.2d 347.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Jeld-Wen v. Superior Court (2005) 131 C.A.4th 853, 869, 870, 32 C.R.3d 351 [in wrongful death action against truck driver employee and his employer arising from collision, once defendant employer made pretrial admission of liability on respondeat superior theory, plaintiffs were precluded from presenting evidence of driver's prior accidents on their negligent entrustment cause of action; once employer admitted liability, there was no basis to attempt to prove employer's own negligence]; 1 McCormick 6th, §189.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1222.

41 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

1. Nature and Distinctions.

b. Character for Care or Skill Inadmissible.

3. Habit Distinguished.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 41

[§ 41] Habit Distinguished.

"It is sometimes difficult to distinguish between character and habit, especially when the quality in question is skill or care. To have the habit of being careful generally is to have a careful disposition or character, while to have the habit of doing a particular thing in a careful manner is not, properly speaking, to have a careful disposition, for one might well be careless in all other respects." (Comment to Model C., Rule 307.) In other words, character (or "disposition," in Wigmore's language), e.g., for care or skill, means a general trait, exhibited in all situations; the habit is limited to a particular kind of situation or act, such as stopping and looking about at a railroad crossing. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §195; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§65, 92; Webb v. Van Noort (1966) 239 C.A.2d 472, 478, 48 C.R. 823, citing the text.)

Despite its thin line, this distinction must be understood and applied, for a habit of care or skill is admissible (see infra, §67), and the witness can often testify to it if the question is properly put. Thus, in Webb v. Van Noort, supra, an action for wrongful death of plaintiff's daughter, plaintiff was asked: "As far as you could observe when you rode with her, how did she drive?" Held, objection was properly sustained. "[T]he single question asked the witness was general in nature and called for a general answer. In response to the question as it was phrased, the witness could only have answered that Loretta drove carefully, or that she drove negligently, or that she drove in an average manner. Such an answer would run to a general character trait for driving, and not to the decedent's habit of doing a particular thing in a particular way. Counsel did not see fit to rephrase his question so as to elicit habit evidence." (239 C.A.2d 479.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 1 McCormick 6th, §195.

42 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

1. Nature and Distinctions.

c. Character To Prove Conduct Inadmissible.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 42

[§ 42] Character To Prove Conduct Inadmissible.

(1) Exclusionary Rule. With certain exceptions, "evidence of a person's character or a trait of his or her character (whether in the form of an opinion, evidence of reputation, or evidence of specific instances of his or her conduct) is inadmissible when offered to prove his or her conduct on a specified occasion." (Ev.C. 1101(a).) The reasons for exclusion are: "First, character evidence is of slight probative value and may be very prejudicial. Second, character evidence tends to distract the trier of fact from the main question of what actually happened on the particular occasion and permits the trier of fact to reward the good man and to punish the bad man because of their respective characters. Third, introduction of character evidence may result in confusion of issues and require extended collateral inquiry." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1101; see 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §54.1.)

(2) Exceptions and Distinctions. This rule is subject to several exceptions, and calls for some distinctions:

(a) In a criminal action, character may be proved as permitted under the conditions set forth in Ev.C. 1102 (evidence of defendant's character where offered by defendant, or to rebut character evidence offered by defendant; see infra, §50), Ev.C. 1103 (victim's character; see infra, §57), Ev.C. 1108 (defendant's other sexual offenses; see infra, §97), and Ev.C. 1109 (defendant's other domestic violence; infra, §98). (Ev.C. 1101(a).)

(b) Other offenses of the defendant may be shown in a criminal or civil case to prove some relevant fact such as intent or knowledge. (Ev.C. 1101(b); see infra, §75.)

(c) The rule only excludes evidence of character to prove conduct; where character is itself in issue, it may be proved. (See infra, §45.)

(d) Character may also be proved to support or attack the credibility of a witness. (Ev.C. 1101(c); see People v. Millwee (1998) 18 C.4th 96, 130, 131, 74 C.R.2d 418, 954 P.2d 990 [where defendant claimed that he fatally shot his mother accidentally, evidence of subsequent shooting that he also claimed was accidental was admissible to show implausibility and untruthfulness of his testimony]; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §280.)

(3) Proposition 8. Although Proposition 8 (Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d), the Truth-in-Evidence provision, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8) does not expressly preserve Ev.C. 1101, that statute remains effective. (See People v. Perkins (1984) 159 C.A.3d 646, 650, 205 C.R. 625 [Ev.C. 1101 survives]; People v. Scott (1987) 194 C.A.3d 550, 553, 239 C.R. 588 [even if Proposition 8 repealed statute by implication, it was reenacted by 1986 amendment by more than two-thirds vote of Legislature]; People v. Ewoldt (1994) 7 C.4th 380, 390, 391, 27 C.R.2d 646, 867 P.2d 757, infra, §96 [approving reasoning of Scott court].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Exclusionary Rule. See People v. Holloway (2004) 33 C.4th 96, 128, 14 C.R.3d 212, 91 P.3d 164 [trial judge may have violated Ev.C. 1101 by failing to redact defendant's admissions to detective to remove statement that he could hurt someone when he was drunk, but failure did not render trial fundamentally unfair].

(2) Exceptions and Distinctions.

(a) In criminal actions: Ev.C. 1109, as amended in 2000 and 2005, encompasses elder abuse and child abuse, as well as domestic violence.

43 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

2. Methods of Proof.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 43

[§ 43] In General.

"Except as otherwise provided by statute, any otherwise admissible evidence (including evidence in the form of an opinion, evidence of reputation, and evidence of specific instances of such person's conduct) is admissible to prove a person's character or a trait of his character." (Ev.C. 1100.)

This statute purports to allow proof of a relevant trait of character by any of the three specified methods. But the apparent enlargement of existing law (by allowing proof of opinions and specific acts) is in great part dissipated by the proviso, which incorporates by reference a number of limiting rules on the kind of evidence that may be offered to prove character of the defendant or victim (infra, §54 et seq.), or character of a witness (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §285).

Thus, Ev.C. 1100 merely applies the general rule of admissibility of all relevant evidence (Ev.C. 351, supra, §5) specifically to character evidence. Judicially created restrictions on the kinds of proof are eliminated, but those established by statute remain. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1100.) The result is that reputation evidence (infra, §44) remains the chief method of proving the relevant character trait, but, in a few special situations, the other methods are not expressly precluded, and are therefore permissible. (As to specific acts, see infra, §§46, 58 et seq.; as to opinions, see infra, §§46, 55, 58 et seq.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 405(a), entitled Reputation or opinion, reads as follows: "In all cases in which evidence of character or a trait of character of a person is admissible, proof may be made by testimony as to reputation or by testimony in the form of an opinion. On cross-examination, inquiry is allowable into relevant specific instances of conduct." (See 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §119 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §375 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

44 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

2. Methods of Proof.

b. Reputation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 44

[§ 44] Reputation.

(1) Reputation Distinguished From Character. Reputation, as such, is almost never in issue in a civil or criminal case. (See Model C., Rule 304, Comment; but see 68 A.L.R.2d 1300 [evidence of general reputation of premises in liquor nuisance prosecution].) Reputation evidence is, however, the traditional and most commonly used method of proving character, when character is relevant. The distinction is clear: "Character" is "disposition," what a person "is"; "reputation" is what the person is "reputed to be." From evidence of a bad reputation for peaceableness an inference of bad character (that particular trait) can be drawn; and the same is true of good reputation and good character. (See 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §52; 5 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1608.)

(2) Proof by Witness With Knowledge. Reputation tends to prove character, but how is reputation proved? The ordinary and "preferred" method is by testimony of a witness who has knowledge of the general reputation of the person in the place where the person lives or works, for the traits of character involved. (See Estate of Akers (1920) 184 C. 514, 519, 194 P. 706 [reputation at remote time in another community; admissibility rests in court's discretion]; Pyper v. Jennings (1920) 47 C.A. 623, 630, 191 P. 565 ["Reputation ... is a fact to be proved by the testimony of witnesses who know it"]; People v. Soules (1940) 41 C.A.2d 298, 305, 106 P.2d 639 [specific violent acts by deceased victim, excluded]; People v. Carnavacci (1953) 119 C.A.2d 14, 17, 258 P.2d 1121 [knowledge of victim's reputation for peace and quiet limited to few people who came to witness' place of work; no proper foundation and stricken]; 1 McCormick 5th, §186; 5 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1608; 21 Proof of Facts 3d 629; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §288 et seq.)

In Orloff v. Los Angeles Turf Club (1951) 36 C.2d 734, 739, 227 P.2d 449, the court, in excluding the evidence, said: "The testimony was not given by persons who knew the defendant's reputation, but by witnesses who inquired of others as to the defendant's reputation. The rule is that evidence of reputation when relevant may not be shown by witnesses conducting an inquiry, but must be given by persons having knowledge thereof."

(3) Proof by Negative Evidence. A defendant's character witness may testify to never having heard the reputation discussed, the theory being that a person of good reputation may not inspire any discussion of it. (People v. Adams (1902) 137 C. 580, 582, 70 P. 662 ["it is a matter of common sense, common observation, and common knowledge that a man's reputation for peace and quiet is seldom a matter of discussion until some alleged breach of the law calls up its consideration"]; People v. Stennett (1921) 51 C.A. 370, 386, 197 P. 372 [error to reject testimony of character witness who admitted never having heard reputation discussed]; but see People v. Pauli (1922) 58 C.A. 594, 596, 209 P. 88 [rule presupposes sufficient period of residence and acquaintanceship to acquire reputation in community; hence, "a stranger ... working for a single employer therein for a few months, going about little and forming no associations," has no such general reputation]; and see 5 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1614.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Proof by Witness With Knowledge. See 1 McCormick 6th, §186.

45 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

3. Proof of Character in Civil Cases.

a. In General.

1. Character in Issue.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 45

[§ 45] Character in Issue.

In a few situations, a party's good or bad character is directly in issue under the substantive law and the pleadings. (See generally 1 McCormick 5th, §187; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§54, 69.1; 21 Proof of Facts 3d 629; on admissibility of evidence of plaintiff's sexual conduct in sexual assault or harassment case, see infra, §§47, 48.) Some common examples of cases where character is, or may become, an issue are:

(1) Malicious Prosecution. In a malicious prosecution case, "the good reputation of the plaintiff has a direct bearing on the question of probable cause and may, therefore, be proven in chief, especially when such reputation is known to the defendant or defendants." (Murphy v. Davids (1919) 181 C. 706, 717, 186 P. 143.)

(2) Libel. In a libel action, although the plaintiff's character is involved, it is presumed to be good; hence, before the plaintiff can introduce evidence of character, it must be put in issue by the pleadings (by a plea of truth) or be attacked during cross-examination of his or her witnesses. (Davis v. Hearst (1911) 160 C. 143, 185, 116 P. 530; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§70, 70.1.)

(3) Wrongful Termination. In Pugh v. See's Candies (1988) 203 C.A.3d 743, 756, 250 C.R. 195, plaintiff held a managerial position. His ability to work well with the company's officers was crucial, and this made his character or personality in the workplace an issue. He asserted that he was a cooperative employee who was never criticized; hence, defendant was properly allowed to introduce evidence of specific acts revealing the negative attitude of other employee witnesses toward plaintiff. (203 C.A.3d 757, citing Ev.C. 1100 and the text.)

(4) Child Custody. (See Estate of Akers (1920) 184 C. 514, 519, 194 P. 706 [proceeding to appoint guardian]; Feist v. Feist (1965) 236 C.A.2d 433, 435, 46 C.R. 93 [proceeding to modify award]; Hicks v. Hicks (1967) 249 C.A.2d 964, 967, 58 C.R. 63, supra, §24, citing the text.)

In re Dorothy I. (1984) 162 C.A.3d 1154, 209 C.R. 5, makes an obvious distinction. The juvenile court found the minor to be a dependent child under Welf.C. 300, on evidence that her father had sexually molested her and two other children, and on testimony of a child psychiatrist that there was a substantial danger in the father's continued custody as a result of his prolonged abusive conduct. The father had objected on the ground that Ev.C. 1101 prohibits evidence of a trait of character to prove misconduct on a specified occasion. Held, the evidence was properly admitted. "[T]he character evidence is not being used to prove a charge of past conduct against appellant, but is being used in helping the court determine his predisposition toward future sexual abuse with the minor Dorothy. This type of character evidence is essential, when available, to aid the court in dependency actions, which are concerned with the future well-being of a minor." (162 C.A.3d 1159.)

In the great majority of cases, character is not in issue and is excluded, e.g., assault and battery. (Vance v. Richardson (1895) 110 C. 414, 417, 42 P. 909; Neely v. California State Personnel Bd. (1965) 237 C.A.2d 487, 492, 47 C.R. 64.) (See generally 22 So. Cal. L. Rev. 343, 486; 91 A.L.R.3d 718 [civil action for assault]; 1 McCormick 5th, §192; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §70 et seq.; 1955 A.S. 652.) (On evidence of defendant's rehabilitation or reformation as relevant on issue of punitive damages, see 39 A.L.R.4th 1122.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §187.(4) Child Custody. See 1 McCormick 6th, §192. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.106 et seq.

46 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

3. Proof of Character in Civil Cases.

a. In General.

2. Manner of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 46

[§ 46] Manner of Proof.

Ev.C. 1100 "applies without restriction only when character or a trait of character is an ultimate fact in dispute in the action." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1100.) In this situation, therefore, the statute permits proof by any of the three methods:

(1) Reputation. (See Estate of Akers (1920) 184 C. 514, 518, 194 P. 706; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 15 [Character: Reputation Evidence].)

(2) Specific acts. (See Guardianship of Casad (1951) 106 C.A.2d 134, 135, 234 P.2d 647; Guardianship of Wisdom (1956) 146 C.A.2d 635, 639, 304 P.2d 221; Hicks v. Hicks (1967) 249 C.A.2d 964, 967, 58 C.R. 63, supra, §24, citing the text; 1 McCormick 5th, §187; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§70 et seq., 202; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 16 [Character: Specific Acts Evidence]; F.R. Evid., Rule 405(b) ["In cases in which character or a trait of character of a person is an essential element of a charge, claim, or defense, proof may also be made of specific instances of that person's conduct"]; see 1 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §§121, 122; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §381.)

(3) Opinions. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §187; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1980 et seq.; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 14 [Character: Opinion Evidence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Specific acts. See 1 McCormick 6th, §187.(3) Opinions. See 1 McCormick 6th, §187.

47 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

3. Proof of Character in Civil Cases.

b. Action for Sexual Assault or Harassment.

1. Nature and Purpose of Statutes.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 47

[§ 47] Nature and Purpose of Statutes.

(1) In General. The 1985 Legislature enacted statutes limiting admissibility of evidence of sexual conduct of a plaintiff in a civil suit, patterned on similar legislation dealing with sexual conduct of the victim in a criminal proceeding (see infra, §61 et seq.). (Ev.C. 783, 1106, infra, §48 et seq.; see 17 Pacific L. J. 632; Govt.C. 11440.40 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §68), limiting admissibility of this type of evidence in administrative hearings; F.R. Evid., Rule 412, infra, §66.)

The purpose of the statutes is set forth in the following declaration of legislative intent (Stats. 1985, Chap. 1328, §1):

"The Legislature finds and declares that it is the existing policy of the State of California to ensure that the causes of action for claims of sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery are given proper meaning. The discovery of sexual aspects of complainant's lives, as well as those of their past and current friends and acquaintances, has the clear potential to discourage complaints and to annoy and harass litigants. That annoyance and discomfort, as a result of defendant or respondent inquiries, is unnecessary and deplorable. Without protection against it, individuals whose intimate lives are unjustifiably and offensively intruded upon might face the "Catch-22" of invoking their remedy only at the risk of enduring further intrusions into details of their personal lives in discovery, and in open quasi-judicial or judicial proceedings."

"The Legislature is mindful that a similar state of affairs once confronted victims in criminal prosecutions for rape, who often ran the risk of finding their own moral characters on trial during the prosecution of their assailants. The Legislature has taken measures to curb those abuses in rape proceedings. It is the intent of the Legislature to take similar measures in sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery cases."

"The Legislature concludes that the use of evidence of a complainant's sexual behavior is more often harassing and intimidating than genuinely probative, and the potential for prejudice outweighs whatever probative value that evidence may have. Absent extraordinary circumstances, inquiry into those areas should not be permitted, either in discovery or at trial."

(2) Distinction: Limitations Inapplicable in Malpractice Action. In Patricia C. v. Mark D. (1993) 12 C.A.4th 1211, 16 C.R.2d 71, plaintiff brought an action against her psychologist for malpractice and infliction of emotional distress through sexual contact with her. Plaintiff moved to exclude evidence of her sexual contact with persons other than defendant and evidence of her employment as a topless dancer. The trial judge ruled that the evidence was not barred by Ev.C. 1106 and was essential to a fair trial on the issue of damages (whether plaintiff's mental condition was attributable to defendant's conduct or to her "pretreatment psychosexual history"). (12 C.A.4th 1215.) Held, the trial judge properly found the statute inapplicable. Whether the case was treated as an action for malpractice or for psychotherapist-patient sexual contact, it was not a civil action alleging conduct constituting sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery within the meaning of the statute. (12 C.A.4th 1218.) (On admissibility of evidence of plaintiff's sexual history in statutory action against psychotherapist for sexual contact, see infra, §48.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

48 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

3. Proof of Character in Civil Cases.

b. Action for Sexual Assault or Harassment.

2. Limited Admissibility of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 48

[§ 48] Limited Admissibility of Evidence.

(1) Sexual Conduct of Plaintiff Not Admissible To Prove Consent or Absence of Injury. In a civil action alleging conduct constituting sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery, evidence relating to the plaintiff's sexual conduct (whether opinion evidence, reputation evidence, or evidence of specific instances of conduct) may not be introduced by the defendant in order to prove the plaintiff's consent or the absence of injury to the plaintiff, unless the alleged injury is in the nature of loss of consortium. (Ev.C. 1106(a).) (See 100 A.L.R.3d 569 [admissibility of character or reputation evidence regarding plaintiff in civil sexual assault action on issues other than impeachment]; on loss of consortium, see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1417 et seq.)

Ev.C. 1106(b) states an exception to the limiting rule of Ev.C. 1106(a): It does not apply to evidence of the plaintiff's sexual conduct with the alleged perpetrator.

(2) Cross-Examination and Rebuttal Evidence Where Plaintiff Raises Issue. "If the plaintiff introduces evidence, including testimony of a witness, or the plaintiff as a witness gives testimony, and the evidence or testimony relates to the plaintiff's sexual conduct, the defendant may cross-examine the witness who gives the testimony and offer relevant evidence limited specifically to the rebuttal of the evidence introduced by the plaintiff or given by the plaintiff." (Ev.C. 1106(c).)

(3) Evidence To Attack Credibility of Plaintiff. On a proper showing, the defendant may be allowed to introduce evidence of sexual conduct of the plaintiff for the purpose of attacking credibility. (Ev.C. 783, 1106(d); see infra, §49.)

(4) Discovery of Plaintiff's Sexual Conduct. In a civil action alleging sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery, a party, in order to obtain discovery regarding the plaintiff's sexual conduct with individuals other than the alleged perpetrator, must "establish specific facts showing good cause for that discovery, and that the matter sought to be discovered is relevant to the subject matter of the action and reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence." The showing must be made by noticed motion and may not be made or considered by the court at an ex parte hearing. The motion must be accompanied by a declaration indicating that a good faith attempt at informally resolving each issue presented by the motion was made. (C.C.P. 2017(d).)

(5) Distinction: Statutory Action Against Psychotherapist for Sexual Contact. In an action under C.C. 43.93 against a psychotherapist for sexual contact (see 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §367), evidence of the plaintiff's sexual history is neither subject to discovery nor admissible as evidence except where: (a) the plaintiff claims damage to sexual functioning; or (b) the defendant requests a hearing prior to conducting discovery and establishes that the history is relevant and that its probative value outweighs its prejudicial effect. Only that specific information or those examples of the plaintiff's conduct that are determined to be relevant are discoverable or admissible. (C.C. 43.93(d).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Sexual Conduct of Plaintiff Not Admissible To Prove Consent or Absence of Injury.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1679 et seq.

Exception for conduct with alleged perpetrator: See Rieger v. Arnold (2002) 104 C.A.4th 451, 465, 128 C.R.2d 295 [in action for sexual harassment in which plaintiff's claim is based on hostile work environment theory and plaintiff does not allege failure to protect her from anyone other than individual named defendants, "alleged perpetrator" must be understood as including individual defendants, as well as others whose conduct plaintiff ascribes to employer, regardless of whether conduct occurred in or outside workplace]. (4) Discovery of Plaintiff's Sexual Conduct. C.C.P. 2017(d) was repealed and replaced by C.C.P. 2017.220(a) in 2004 without substantive change.

(5) Distinction: Statutory Action Against Psychotherapist for Sexual Contact.

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §416.

49 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

3. Proof of Character in Civil Cases.

b. Action for Sexual Assault or Harassment.

3. Manner of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 49

[§ 49] Manner of Proof.

The defendant in a civil action for sexual assault or harassment may introduce evidence of sexual conduct of the plaintiff to attack the credibility of the plaintiff as a witness under Ev.C. 780 (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §259). (Ev.C. 783.) Admissibility, however, must be determined according to the following procedure:

(1) Written motion. The defendant must make a written motion to the court and the plaintiff's attorney "stating that the defense has an offer of proof of the relevancy of evidence of the sexual conduct of the plaintiff proposed to be presented." (Ev.C. 783(a).)

(2) Affidavit. The motion must be accompanied by an affidavit in which the offer of proof is stated. (Ev.C. 783(b).)

(3) Hearing. Upon finding that the offer of proof is sufficient, the judge must order a hearing and, at the hearing, must allow the questioning of the plaintiff regarding the offer of proof. If there is a jury, the hearing must be held outside its presence. (Ev.C. 783(c).)

(4) Order. At the conclusion of the hearing, if the proposed evidence is found relevant under Ev.C. 780 and not inadmissible under Ev.C. 352 (weighing of probative value against prejudicial effect; see supra, §17), "the court may make an order stating what evidence may be introduced by the defendant, and the nature of the questions to be permitted. The defendant may then offer evidence pursuant to the order of the court." (Ev.C. 783(d).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

50 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

a. Character of Defendant.

1. Admissibility.

aa. Bad Character Initially Excluded.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 50

[§ 50] Bad Character Initially Excluded.

"[E]vidence of the defendant's character or a trait of his character" is admissible in two situations: (a) when offered by the defendant, "to prove his conduct in conformity with such character or trait of character"; (b) when offered by the prosecution, "to rebut evidence adduced by the defendant." (Ev.C. 1102.)

The general rules codified in this section do not authorize proof of the bad character of the defendant as part of the prosecution's case-in-chief. Evidence of this type is some indication of the likelihood of the defendant's guilt and is therefore relevant, but it would be highly prejudicial in its tendency to draw the attention of the jury away from the evidence dealing with the crime charged. Hence, the universal rule prohibits the prosecution from introducing it in the first instance, i.e., where the defendant has not offered evidence of his or her good character. (People v. McKelvey (1927) 85 C.A. 769, 770, 260 P. 397; see 1 McCormick 5th, §190; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §57.)

In People v. Terry (1970) 2 C.3d 362, 400, 85 C.R. 409, 466 P.2d 961, a homicide case, defendant J was questioned by attorneys for codefendant T to show that J had been found unfit to have custody of her eldest child and had committed welfare fraud. Held, the cross-examination was plainly impermissible. "That she had been found unfit to have custody of her child and that she was guilty of welfare fraud were not relevant to the question of her relationship to Terry. The cross-examination on these matters was an attempt to prove bad character, which cannot be done until and unless the accused first puts in evidence of his good character." (2 C.3d 400, citing the text.)

In People v. Walkey (1986) 177 C.A.3d 268, 223 C.R. 132, defendant was convicted of child endangerment and first degree murder by torture in connection with the death of a 2-year-old child who lived in defendant's house. The child's death was caused by a severe beating, and there were bite marks on the child's body. A physician testifying for the prosecution was permitted to describe the "battering parent syndrome," and he discussed the various factors constituting the profile of a child abuser, including the most important single factor, i.e., the alleged abuser had himself or herself been an abused child. The prosecution was additionally permitted to elicit from defendant, on cross-examination, that defendant had been disciplined as a child by being struck with a board and bitten. During closing argument, the prosecution argued that defendant fit the physician's profile of a battering parent. Held, the physician's testimony and the information elicited on cross-examination were impermissible character evidence (though the error was harmless in light of the prosecution's strong case).

Although the physician never expressly concluded that defendant fit the profile of a battering parent, his testimony clearly implicated defendant's character by tending to associate defendant with a group of persons who are often child abusers. This testimony, coupled with (a) defendant's admission that he had been physically disciplined as a child, and (b) other testimony that defendant had certain characteristics typical of a battering parent, impermissibly permitted the jury to infer that defendant was a battering parent and that he must have caused the child's injuries. (177 C.A.3d 279.) (On admissibility of syndrome evidence generally, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §48 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CALCRIM, No. 350 [Character of Defendant]; 1 McCormick 6th, §190. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.375 et seq.

51 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

a. Character of Defendant.

1. Admissibility.

bb. Good Character Admissible.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 51

[§ 51] Good Character Admissible.

The good character of the defendant is relevant as tending in some slight degree to show that the defendant probably did not commit the crime, and here there is no danger of undue prejudice. The defendant therefore may call character witnesses in his or her defense, to testify to the relevant character trait. (See People v. Ashe (1872) 44 C. 288, 291; People v. Stennett (1921) 51 C.A. 370, 381, 197 P. 372; People v. Jones (1954) 42 C.2d 219, 223, 266 P.2d 38, infra, §55 [defendant's sexual normality]; but see People v. Taylor (1986) 180 C.A.3d 622, 629, 225 C.R. 733 [defendant's reputation for truth and veracity was not admissible under Ev.C. 1102, as it was not relevant to elements of charged rape]; and see generally 1 McCormick 5th, §191; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§56, 56.1.)

A defendant may sometimes introduce evidence of good character--and thus make impeachment possible--without specifically intending to do so. In People v. Wagner (1975) 13 C.3d 612, 119 C.R. 457, 532 P.2d 105, defendant testified on direct examination as to his civil activities, family background, and similar matters. By so doing, he placed his character in issue. "If defendant's purpose was solely to refute the prosecution's evidence of the lucrative nature of narcotics sales which inferred that defendant may have had a general financial motive, his testimony properly should have been limited to the subject of his personal wealth, or perhaps his business activities, to negate or minimize any financial motive. Instead, defendant's testimony in this connection ranged more broadly and included his family and civic activities as well. It constituted an attempt to show that he was not likely to commit, and therefore did not commit, the crime charged ... , not solely that he lacked financial motive. A defendant cannot bar the prosecution from rebutting favorable character evidence merely by characterizing the direct examination as being narrower in scope than in fact it was." (13 C.3d 617.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §191.

52 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

a. Character of Defendant.

1. Admissibility.

cc. Bad Character in Rebuttal.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 52

[§ 52] Bad Character in Rebuttal.

After the defendant has introduced evidence of his or her good character, the prosecution may offer evidence of bad character in rebuttal. (Ev.C. 1102(b); see People v. Gin Shue (1943) 58 C.A.2d 625, 634, 137 P.2d 742 [cross-examination of character witness]; People v. Westek (1948) 31 C.2d 469, 479, 190 P.2d 9 [rebuttal witnesses]; People v. Ogg (1968) 258 C.A.2d 841, 845, 66 C.R. 289; People v. Wagner (1975) 13 C.3d 612, 617, 618, 119 C.R. 457, 532 P.2d 105; People v. Qui Mei Lee (1975) 48 C.A.3d 516, 526, 122 C.R. 43; but see People v. McKelvey (1927) 85 C.A. 769, 770, 260 P. 397, supra, §50 [rebuttal witnesses were improper where no evidence of defendant's good character was introduced]; and see generally 1 McCormick 5th, §191; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §58; on cross-examination of character witness, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §243 et seq.; on cross-examination of murder defendant who has introduced character evidence in mitigation at penalty trial, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §27.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §191.

53 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

a. Character of Defendant.

1. Admissibility.

dd. Character for Violence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 53

[§ 53] Character for Violence.

(1) In General. After the defendant has introduced evidence that the victim had a character or trait of character for violence (Ev.C. 1103(a); see infra, §57), the prosecution may offer evidence of the defendant's character or trait of character for violence to prove "conduct of the defendant in conformity with the character or trait of character." (Ev.C. 1103(b).) (See People v. Walton (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1004, 1014, 1015, 49 C.R.2d 917 [rejecting defendant's contention that testimony as to victim's bad character was offered under Ev.C. 1101(b) (see infra, §75), not Ev.C. 1103(a), and that therefore testimony as to defendant's bad character was not allowed]; 23 Pacific L. J. 656; on methods of proving defendant's character for violence, see infra, §54 et seq.)

(2) Constitutionality of Statute. In People v. Blanco (1992) 10 C.A.4th 1167, 13 C.R. 176, the court rejected defendant's contention that admission of evidence under Ev.C. 1103(b) was a violation of due process.

(a) The California rule is a minority view in common law jurisdictions. It was originally espoused by Wigmore, but was criticized by the reviser of Wigmore's treatise. (10 C.A.4th 1173, 1174.) And most American jurisdictions bar the evidence as a matter of statutory construction, common law development, or application of theoretical and jurisprudential principles. (10 C.A.4th 1174.)

(b) Missouri, by judicial decision, has applied the Wigmore view for at least 50 years. "We have found no case law holding that Missouri's adoption of the Wigmore view offended constitutional due process principles." (10 C.A.4th 1174.) And "[w]e believe the federal Supreme Court would conclude that section 1103(b)'s allowance of certain types of character evidence in rebuttal, only after the defendant first raises the issue by presenting evidence of the victim's character in order to prove the defendant's own reasonable response to alleged provocation or attack, is not so 'extremely unfair' as to be within the 'very narrowly' defined class of evidentiary statutes which violate 'fundamental conceptions of justice.' " (10 C.A.4th 1175.) "Nor do we doubt that our own Supreme Court would reach the same result under the similar guarantee in the California Constitution." (10 C.A.4th 1175.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See People v. Myers (2007) 148 C.A.4th 546, 552, 56 C.R.3d 27 [in prosecution for resisting officer and committing battery on officer, defendant's testimony did not open door to evidence of his violent character; his testimony about officer's aggressive conduct at time of incident was not character evidence within meaning of Ev.C.

1103].

54 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

a. Character of Defendant.

2. Manner of Proof.

aa. Reputation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 54

[§ 54] Reputation.

The usual method of proving either good or bad character as circumstantial evidence of conduct is by reputation in the place where the defendant lives or works. (See People v. Fair (1872) 43 C. 137, 148; People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 1310, 1311, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §19; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 15 [Character: Reputation Evidence]; 1 McCormick 5th, §191; 5 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1608 et seq.; 21 Proof of Facts 3d 629; 82 A.L.R.3d 525 [reputation at place of employment]; 87 A.L.R.2d 968 [admissibility of good reputation as affected by remoteness of time to which it relates].) Both Ev.C. 1102, supra, §50, and Ev.C. 1103(b), supra, §53, specify reputation evidence as one of the permissible means of proof.

In People v. Cobb (1955) 45 C.2d 158, 287 P.2d 752, the trial judge excluded testimony of defendant's employer, who had 4 years of association with him at work but no contact outside the business area. Disapproving this limitation, the court said: "[I]t would be illogical to say that reputation evidence should be limited to the community of one's residence to the exclusion of the community of one's place of business; and if it is shown that a general reputation exists in the community of one's place of business, and that the witness has sufficient knowledge of it, the witness should be permitted to testify concerning such general reputation." (45 C.2d 164; see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §289.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 1 McCormick 6th, §191.

55 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

a. Character of Defendant.

2. Manner of Proof.

bb. Opinions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 55

[§ 55] Opinions.

(1) Former Law. In the past, the courts almost invariably excluded opinion evidence to prove good or bad moral character. (See People v. Spigno (1957) 156 C.A.2d 279, 287, 319 P.2d 458; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1980 et seq.) But an exception was declared in People v. Jones (1954) 42 C.2d 219, 266 P.2d 38, a prosecution for violation of P.C. 288 (lewd conduct with a child under 14 years of age). Defendant offered the testimony of a psychiatrist that defendant was not a sexual deviate and was incapable of having the necessary intent to do the acts charged. Held, it was reversible error to exclude this evidence. The court, on the narrow issue before it, declared that the statutes dealing with sex perversions and sexual psychopathy show a legislative determination that a sexual psychopath is more likely to violate P.C. 288 than one who has no such propensity. Hence, "[e]vidence that a person has no such disposition is analogous to that in regard to character, for it bears upon the probability of the innocence of the accused. From evidence which tends to prove that a person is not a sexual psychopath, an inference reasonably may be drawn that he did not commit the act denounced by section 288." (42 C.2d 225.) People v. Sellers (1951) 103 C.A.2d 830, 230 P.2d 398, holding that a neurologist-psychiatrist could not express an opinion on whether the defendant was homosexual, was disapproved. (See 42 Cal. L. Rev. 880; 1956 A.S. 566.)

(2) Evidence Code. Ev.C. 1102, following Wigmore's view (7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1986) and Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 405(a), make opinion evidence admissible. "The opinions of those whose personal intimacy with a person gives them firsthand knowledge of that person's character are a far more reliable indication of that character than is reputation, which is little more than accumulated hearsay. ... The danger of collateral issues seems no greater than that inherent in reputation evidence." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1102.) (See People v. Ogg (1968) 258 C.A.2d 841, 846, 66 C.R. 289; People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 1153, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §58 [expert opinion as to defendant's lack of sexual deviancy]; People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 1306, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §19 [lay opinion as to defendant's lack of sexual deviancy]; but see People v. Honig (1996) 48 C.A.4th 289, 348, 349, 55 C.R.2d 555, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Governmental Authority, §105 [character witnesses' ignorance of facts surrounding charges made their opinions whether defendant would have committed charged offenses inadmissible]; and see generally C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 14 [Character: Opinion Evidence].)

Ev.C. 1103(b), supra, §53, allowing proof of the defendant's character for violence after the defendant introduces evidence regarding the victim's violent nature, also specifies that opinion evidence may be used.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Evidence Code. See People v. Guerra (2006) 37 C.4th 1067, 1118, 40 C.R.3d 118, 129 P.3d 321 [in prosecution for murder with attempted rape-murder special circumstance, trial judge erred in excluding testimony of expert witness as to defendant's passive character on ground that witness was not completely sure that defendant would not commit violent act under any circumstances; however, error was harmless, as testimony would have opened door to evidence of defendant's prior assault].

56 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

a. Character of Defendant.

2. Manner of Proof.

cc. Specific Acts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 56

[§ 56] Specific Acts.

(1) General Rule of Exclusion. Ev.C. 1102 retains the existing rule that specific acts of a defendant are inadmissible to prove either good or bad character. (See People v. Gin Shue (1943) 58 C.A.2d 625, 634, 137 P.2d 742; People v. Cordray (1962) 209 C.A.2d 425, 439, 26 C.R. 42, quoting the text [possession of marijuana; defendant's education and scholastic honors rejected]; People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 1309, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §19; People v. Felix (1999) 70 C.A.4th 426, 432, 82 C.R.2d 701 [restriction in Ev.C. 1102 permitting proof of character only by opinion or reputation survived passage of Truth-in-Evidence provision (Cal. Const., Art. I, §28(d)); see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §8]; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 16 [Character: Specific Acts Evidence]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§58.1, 58.2, 192; on inquiry into reports of specific acts in cross-examination of defendant's character witnesses, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §245.)

(2) Exception for Proof of Violent Character. The defendant's character or trait of character for violence (see supra, §53) may be proved by evidence of specific acts. (Ev.C. 1103(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.380

57 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

b. Character of Victim.

1. Admissibility.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 57

[§ 57] Admissibility.

(1) Rule in Homicide and Assault Cases. An accused claiming self-defense in a prosecution for homicide or assault is entitled to prove the dangerous character of the victim. If this character was known to the defendant, the evidence tends to show the defendant's apprehension of danger; if it was not known, the evidence nevertheless tends to show that the victim was probably the aggressor. "[T]he law recognizes the well-established fact in human experience that the known reputation or character of an assailant as to violence and turbulence has a very material bearing on the degree and nature of the apprehension of danger on the part of a person assaulted; also that one who is turbulent and violent may the more readily provoke or assume the aggressive in an encounter." (People v. Brophy (1954) 122 C.A.2d 638, 647, 265 P.2d 593 [approving statement in A.L.R.]; see People v. Lamar (1906) 148 C. 564, 574, 83 P. 993; People v. Mathis (1965) 63 C.2d 416, 430, 46 C.R. 785, 406 P.2d 65; People v. Gonzales (1967) 66 C.2d 482, 499, 58 C.R. 361, 426 P.2d 929 [reputation for violence 7 years before the acts involved was properly excluded as too remote]; People v. Castain (1981) 122 C.A.3d 138, 142, 175 C.R. 651 [trial for battery of arresting officer in which defendant claimed that officer was not acting within scope of his duties in that he used excessive force; evidence of officer's past use of excessive force was relevant to show that he acted "in character" on night in question]; 25 Cal. L. Rev. 459 [discussing and explaining apparently contrary cases]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§63, 63.1; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §246; 1 McCormick 5th, §193; 1 A.L.R.3d 571.)

(2) Statutory Extension to Other Crimes. Ev.C. 1103(a) extended the rule of these cases to cover the victim of any crime. The defendant may offer evidence "of the character or a trait of character ... of the victim of the crime for which the defendant is being prosecuted" to prove "conduct of the victim in conformity with the character or trait of character."

In People v. Wall (1979) 95 C.A.3d 978, 157 C.R. 587, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §287, evidence that the complainant in a rape case had threatened to make a false accusation of rape against a former boyfriend was excluded. Held, this was error. The evidence was admissible under Ev.C. 1103(a) as a specific instance of nonsexual conduct tending to disprove the truthfulness of the complainant's testimony. (95 C.A.3d 989.) (For restrictions on admissibility of evidence of complainant's sexual conduct, see infra, §63 et seq.)

In People v. Burrell-Hart (1987) 192 C.A.3d 593, 237 C.R. 654, defendant, accused of rape, offered the defense of denial and alibi. He sought to bolster his denial defense by showing that the complainant, with whom defendant had argued prior to the accusation, had previously falsely accused another man, with whom she had also argued, of attempting to sexually assault her. Held, exclusion of the evidence was error (though harmless in this case).

(a) The evidence could support an inference that the complainant, having previously falsely accused a man with whom she had fought, would under similar circumstances have a motive to testify falsely against defendant. (192 C.A.3d 597, 598.)

(b) People v. Jones (1984) 155 C.A.3d 153, 202 C.R. 162, does not require exclusion. Regardless of whether Ev.C. 787 (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §285) would make evidence of the allegedly false prior accusation inadmissible if its only relevancy was to attack the complainant's credibility as a witness, the evidence was admissible under Ev.C. 1103(a) on the substantive issue of defendant's guilt or innocence. (192 C.A.3d 599.) Ev.C. 1103(a) permitted defendant to offer evidence of the complainant's character for the purpose of showing that the complainant acted in conformity with that character. (192 C.A.3d 598, citing the text.)

(c) The evidence was not subject to discretionary exclusion under Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17 et seq.). Defendant's fundamental due process right to a fair trial and to present all relevant evidence of probative value required admission of the "highly relevant" evidence of prior allegedly false accusations. Moreover, the trial judge's discretion should favor the defendant in cases of doubt; and here the evidence would not consume an undue amount of time or confuse the issues. (192 C.A.3d 599, 600.) (See People v. Rowland (1968) 262 C.A.2d 790, 797, 69 C.R. 269 [in assault case in which defendant claimed that his gun went off accidentally while he was trying to ward off homosexual advance, evidence that victim was aggressive homosexual was improperly excluded].)

(3) Rebuttal Evidence: Victim's Good Character. Ev.C. 1103(a) also codified existing law making admissible rebuttal evidence by the prosecution to show the good character of the victim. (See People v. Fitch (1938) 28 C.A.2d 31, 42, 81 P.2d 1019 [approving view that good character may be shown in rebuttal even though attack was by evidence of prior threats]; People v. Clark (1982) 130 C.A.3d 371, 384, 181 C.R. 682 [where defendant introduced evidence that victim was in violent rage at time he was killed, prosecution was entitled to present testimony that victim was cordial and friendly]; 1 McCormick 5th, §193.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Rule in Homicide and Assault Cases. See 1 McCormick 6th, §193.(3) Rebuttal Evidence: Victim's Good Character. See 1 McCormick 6th, §193.

58 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

b. Character of Victim.

2. Manner of Proof.

aa. Reputation and Opinions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 58

[§ 58] Reputation and Opinions.

Ev.C. 1103(a) approves the use of any of the three methods--reputation, opinions, or specific acts (infra, §59).

(1) Reputation. This is the usual method. (See People v. Brophy (1954) 122 C.A.2d 638, 647, 265 P.2d 593, supra, §57; People v. Yokum (1956) 145 C.A.2d 245, 259, 302 P.2d 406; People v. Davis (1965) 63 C.2d 648, 656, 47 C.R. 801, 408 P.2d 129; Lemelle v. Superior Court (1978) 77 C.A.3d 148, 163, 143 C.R. 450 [dictum: all three methods are available]; 25 Cal. L. Rev. 467.)

(2) Opinions. Ev.C. 1103 makes opinion evidence of the character of the victim admissible for the same reason that Ev.C. 1102 makes opinion evidence of the character of the defendant admissible. (See supra, §55.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

59 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

b. Character of Victim.

2. Manner of Proof.

bb. Specific Acts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 59

[§ 59] Specific Acts.

(1) Former Law. California cases prior to the Evidence Code sanctioned the admission of evidence of previous threats or attacks on the defendant, to show the defendant's reasonable apprehension of danger. (See People v. Yokum (1956) 145 C.A.2d 245, 260, 302 P.2d 406.) Evidence of attacks on others was generally excluded. (See People v. Soules (1940) 41 C.A.2d 298, 306, 106 P.2d 639; People v. Keys (1944) 62 C.A.2d 903, 912, 145 P.2d 589; People v. Wong (1947) 83 C.A.2d 60, 69, 187 P.2d 828; People v. Kennedy (1962) 200 C.A.2d 814, 818, 19 C.R. 683; Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 C.A.2d 448, 452, 23 C.R. 617.)

But a distinction was made where the defendant claimed to have been in fear of the deceased victim of a homicide. The defendant's mental state was relevant on the issue of self-defense, and thus the defense could attempt to show the reasonableness of the defendant's fear by evidence of prior violent acts committed by the deceased against other persons. (See People v. Mathis (1965) 63 C.2d 416, 430, 46 C.R. 785, 406 P.2d 65; People v. Davis (1965) 63 C.2d 648, 656, 47 C.R. 801, 408 P.2d 129, following People v. Carmichael (1926) 198 C. 534, 548, 246 P. 62.) Thus, in the Davis case, defendant testified that he saw the deceased commit several acts of violence, beating and cutting his victims with a knife; that the deceased had told him of committing violent crimes; and that he had heard of other acts of violence of the deceased. He also called three of the victims as witnesses, but none was allowed to testify to the attacks by the deceased. Held, it was error (though not prejudicial here) to exclude this evidence.

(2) Evidence Code. Under Ev.C. 1103(a), the distinction relating to homicide defendants claiming self-defense, supra, is obsolete: The defendant may offer specific acts of the victim and the prosecution may rebut with similar evidence. (See People v. Smith (1967) 249 C.A.2d 395, 404, 57 C.R. 508, quoting the text; People v. Rowland (1968) 262 C.A.2d 790, 797, 69 C.R. 269.)

(3) Issue Other Than Self-Defense. Although this type of evidence is usually offered in support of a claim of self-defense, there is no bar to its admission on another relevant theory, e.g., accidental killing. Thus, in People v. Mizchele (1983) 142 C.A.3d 686, 191 C.R. 245, defendant, charged with murder of his wife with her gun, testified that he knew she had a gun in the pocket of her jacket which had been thrown to the floor, that he was fearful that she might use it because of her prior violent conduct, that he picked up the jacket, removed the gun, and it accidentally discharged. His attorney then sought to offer testimony of the probation officer and others of specific acts of aggression by the victim. Held, exclusion of this testimony was reversible error. "The evidence before the jury, that defendant had knowingly retrieved the gun from the pocket of the jacket on the floor with an apparent purpose to use it as a weapon, tended strongly to discredit the testimony of his intent not to use it. Evidence tending to establish a purpose other than to use it as such a weapon would, if believed by the jury, manifestly support his credibility and therefore be relevant under Evidence Code section 210." (142 C.A.3d 690.)

(4) Evidence of Subsequent Acts. The reported decisions on evidence of the victim's acts have dealt with acts committed prior to the time of the charged crime, and it has been argued that admissibility is limited to prior conduct. But People v. Shoemaker (1982) 135 C.A.3d 442, 185 C.R. 370, found no such restriction in Ev.C. 1103, and quoted Wigmore on admissibility of subsequent acts: "Character at an earlier or later time than that of the deed in question is relevant only on the assumption that it was substantially unchanged in the meantime, i.e., the offer is really of character at one period to prove character at another, and the real question is of relevancy of this evidence to prove character, not of the character to prove the act. ... [T]here is no difficulty from the point of view of the relevancy of character; a man's trait or disposition a month or a year after a certain date is as evidential of his trait on that date as his nature a month or a year before that date; because character is a more or less permanent quality and we may make inferences from it either forward or backward." (135 C.A.3d 447.)

After adopting the Wigmore view on admissibility, the court upheld the trial judge's exclusion of the evidence under Ev.C. 352. (135 C.A.3d 448; see supra, §23.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.366 et seq.

60 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

c. Character of Victim's Associates.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 60

[§ 60] Character of Victim's Associates.

In People v. Minifie (1996) 13 C.4th 1055, 56 C.R.2d 133, 920 P.2d 1337, defendant, charged with assault with a deadly weapon, claimed self-defense and made an offer of proof of evidence of threats directed against him by associates of the victim. The trial judge excluded the evidence, reasoning that the reputation for violence of the victim's "crowd" was character evidence made inadmissible by Ev.C. 1101. Held, the ruling constituted prejudicial error.

(a) Ev.C. 1101(a) limits the use of character evidence to prove conduct on a specific occasion. Here the evidence was offered not to prove the victim's intentions, but to explain defendant's state of mind, which was relevant because of his claim of self-defense. Moreover, nothing in the statute is intended to affect the admissibility of evidence offered to support or attack the credibility of a witness (Ev.C. 1101(c)), and in this case the evidence was offered to lend credibility to defendant's claim that he lived in fear of the victim's associates. (13 C.4th 1067.)

(b) Evidence of threats by the victim himself is clearly admissible when the defendant claims self-defense. The prosecution argued that the justification for this rule is that the victim, by his own actions, has "subjected himself to a quicker and harsher self-defense response on the part of the person threatened," and that this justification disappears when the threat is by a third party and is not adopted by the victim: The third party, who did nothing to cause the use of greater force, is entitled to the protections of the standard rules of self-defense. This argument misperceives the focus of the law of self-defense, which is on the reasonableness of the defendant's action. Reasonableness is judged by how the situation appeared to the defendant, not the victim. "The test, therefore, is not whether the victim adopted the third-party threats, but whether the defendant reasonably associated the victim with those threats." (13 C.4th 1068.)

(c) The trial court also ruled that the evidence was inadmissible under Ev.C. 352 as more prejudicial than probative. Bearing as it did on defendant's state of mind, however, the evidence was highly probative, had no unique tendency to evoke an emotional bias against the prosecution, and would not have resulted in an undue consumption of time. (13 C.4th 1070, 1071.)

(d) The question of prejudice from the erroneous ruling must be decided in defendant's favor. Without the evidence, defendant could argue only that the victim was a friend of a person defendant had killed, and that defendant thought the unarmed victim was about to hit him with a crutch. The proffered evidence would have allowed defendant to argue that the victim's associates had in fact killed his friend and threatened that defendant would be "next." The jury might find, under these circumstances, that a stronger reaction on defendant's part was reasonable. (13 C.4th 1071.) (See 55 A.L.R.5th 449 [admissibility of third-party threats against defendant in assault or homicide prosecution].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

61 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

d. Character of Victim in Sex Case.

1. Former Law and Statutory Revision.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 61

[§ 61] Former Law and Statutory Revision.

(1) Former Rule of Admissibility. Where the crime charged was rape with force and violence, and the defense was that the victim voluntarily submitted to intercourse, the bad character (unchastity) of the victim could be proved by the defendant. The theory was that "a woman who has previously consented to an act of sexual intercourse would be more likely to consent again to such an act, thereby negating the charge that force and violence were used against her in order to accomplish the rape." (People v. Walker (1957) 150 C.A.2d 594, 601, 310 P.2d 110; see People v. Pantages (1931) 212 C. 237, 262, 297 P. 890; People v. Battilana (1942) 52 C.A.2d 685, 696, 126 P.2d 923; In re Ferguson (1971) 5 C.3d 525, 534, 96 C.R. 594, 487 P.2d 1234; 90 A.L.R.3d 1300.) Ev.C. 1103, as originally enacted, covered this rule by allowing evidence to be introduced of the bad character of the victim of any crime. (See supra, §57.)

(2) Former Methods of Proof. California cases upheld admissibility not only of the usual reputation evidence but also of evidence of specific acts of intercourse with others. (See People v. Battilana, supra, 52 C.A.2d 695; People v. Pantages, supra; People v. Walker, supra; 94 A.L.R.3d 257 [complainant's prior sexual acts]; 95 A.L.R.3d 1181 [complainant's general reputation for unchastity]; 81 A.L.R.4th 1076 [admissibility of evidence of victim's sexual activity after the offense].)

(3) Statutory Revision. The 1974 Legislature, responding to criticism of the traditional rules, enacted statutes restricting admissibility of evidence of the victim's prior sexual conduct to prove consent. Ev.C. 782 was added to require an offer of proof showing relevancy of the evidence (see infra, §62), Ev.C. 1103 was amended to establish standards of admissibility (see infra, §63), and P.C. 1127d was added to restrict jury instructions in cases of rape or related offenses (see infra, §65). (See 6 Pacific L. J. 261; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 443, 452, 473 [analysis of statutes and suggestion of changes to avoid serious due process problems]; People v. Blackburn (1976) 56 C.A.3d 685, 691, 128 C.R. 864, infra, §§62, 63 [upholding constitutionality of statutes]; 1 A.L.R.4th 283 [constitutionality of "rape shield" statute]; 54 So. Cal. L. Rev. 35 ["Unchaste Character," Ideology, and the California Rape Evidence Laws]; 24 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1013 [When Will We Be Believed? Rape Myths and the Idea of a Fair Trial in Rape Prosecutions]; for listing of "rape shield" statutes in other jurisdictions, see 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §62.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

62 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

d. Character of Victim in Sex Case.

2. Manner of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 62

[§ 62] Manner of Proof.

(1) Scope of Statute. Ev.C. 782, as enacted in 1974, set forth the procedure for attacking the credibility of a complaining witness in rape and related cases when the witness' own sexual conduct was put in issue. (See 13 Pacific L. J. 658.) Subsequent amendments have made it applicable to prosecutions for numerous other sexual offenses, including attempts and conspiracies to commit the listed offenses.

The section applies to preliminary hearings. (People v. Jordan (1983) 142 C.A.3d 628, 631, 191 C.R. 218.) (a) The purpose of the statute would be defeated if defense counsel could obtain the same information at the preliminary hearing that may not be elicited at trial. (142 C.A.3d 633.) (b) Because Ev.C. 782 applies to "any prosecution," and refers to a hearing "out of the presence of the jury, if any," it encompasses court trials and preliminary hearings. (142 C.A.3d 634.) (c) The Ev.C. 782 limitation of defendant's right to use the preliminary hearing for discovery is within the Legislature's power. (142 C.A.3d 635.)

(2) Procedure. The statutory procedure is as follows:

(a) The defendant must make a written motion stating that the defense has an offer of proof showing the relevancy of evidence about the complaining witness' sexual conduct and its relevancy in attacking the witness' credibility. (Ev.C. 782(a)(1).) The motion must be accompanied by an affidavit in which the offer of proof is stated. (Ev.C. 782(a)(2).) (See People v. Harlan (1990) 222 C.A.3d 439, 447, 271 C.R. 653 [masturbation qualifies as prior sexual conduct within meaning of statute; there is no requirement that conduct be "blameworthy"].)

(b) If the trial judge finds that the offer of proof is sufficient, a hearing out of the jury's presence must be ordered. At the hearing, the judge must allow questioning of the complaining witness about the offer of proof. (Ev.C. 782(a)(3).)

(c) At the conclusion of the hearing, if the judge finds that the proffered evidence is relevant under Ev.C. 780 (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §259) and is not inadmissible under Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17 et seq.), the judge may make an order stating what evidence the defendant may introduce and the nature of the questions to be permitted. The defendant may then offer evidence according to this order. (Ev.C. 782(a)(4).) (See People v. Varona (1983) 143 C.A.3d 566, 569, 192 C.R. 44 [evidence that complaining witness was on probation for prostitution was improperly excluded]; People v. Rioz (1984) 161 C.A.3d 905, 914, 207 C.R. 903, infra, §64; People v. Chandler (1997) 56 C.A.4th 703, 711, 65 C.R.2d 687 [following Vorse v. Sarasy (1997) 53 C.A.4th 998, 62 C.R.2d 164, supra, §17; in carrying out weighing process required by Ev.C. 352 concerning evidence sought to be admitted under Ev.C. 782, trial judge may not exclude witness' testimony on sole ground of unbelievability]; 26 Hastings L. J. 1551 [analysis of legislative approach, with suggestion that Legislature should give trial judge specific guidelines for Ev.C. 352 weighing process when evidence of sexual conduct is offered on issue of consent]; 6 Pacific L. J. 261.)

(3) Constitutionality. People v. Blackburn (1976) 56 C.A.3d 685, 691, 692, 128 C.R. 864, upheld the constitutionality of Ev.C. 782 against challenges of vagueness (no standard by which the offer of proof is to be tested as "sufficient") and violation of the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination.

(a) As to the vagueness challenge, the court said: "Read as a whole, the section empowers the trial judge first to accept the offer of proof as true. He then determines whether, if the evidence is as the defendant claims, it is relevant and if relevant whether its probative value is outweighed by the probability of undue prejudice or the undue consumption of trial time. ... Only if the judge determines both questions in favor of admissibility is the offer of proof 'sufficient.' Only if it is 'sufficient' is the trial court required to conduct the hearing to determine if the offer truly recites what the evidence will be." (56 C.A.3d 691.)

(b) On the self-incrimination contention, the court relied on the holding in Jones v. Superior Court (1962) 58 C.2d 56, 22 C.R. 879, 372 P.2d 919, 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §28, that a reasonable demand for factual information on a particular defense is permissible. "The offer was related only to evidence of sexual conduct of Deborah not concerned with the crime charged. The offer came after the essence of the prosecution's case had been presented so that nothing in it could lessen the prosecution's burden. The offer concerned only evidence that defendant desired to present to the jury." (56 C.A.3d 692.) (See People v. Jordan, supra, 142 C.A.3d 634; Michigan v. Lucas (1991) 500 U.S. 145, 111 S.Ct. 1743, 1748, 114 L.Ed.2d 205, 214, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §8 [Sixth Amendment is not violated per se by preclusion sanction for defendant's failure to comply with Michigan rape shield statute's notice and hearing requirements as to evidence of past sexual conduct with victim].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Scope of Statute. Ev.C. 782, as amended in 2006, applies in any of the circumstances specified in Ev.C. 782(c) (see infra, this section), rather than to "any prosecution."

(2) Procedure. Ev.C. 782(a)(2) was amended in 2004 to additionally provide that the affidavit must be filed under seal. It may be unsealed by the court to determine whether the offer of proof is sufficient to order a hearing under Ev.C. 782(a)(3), and then it must be resealed. (On subsequent access to sealed affidavit where defendant raises issue on appeal or collateral review relating to offer of proof, see Ev.C. 782(a)(5), added in 2004.)

Ev.C. 782 was further amended in 2006. Ev.C. 782(a), as amended, states that the statute's procedures apply in any of the circumstances described in Ev.C. 782(c), which was added in 2006. The circumstances specified in Ev.C. 782(c) include: (a) a prosecution for enumerated sex crimes; (b) when an alleged victim testifies under Ev.C. 1101(b) as a victim of an enumerated sex crime; (c) when an alleged victim of a sexual offense testifies under Ev.C. 1108. All three of the circumstances are made inapplicable if the crime is alleged to have occurred in a local detention facility or a state prison.

63 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

d. Character of Victim in Sex Case.

3. Restrictions on Admissibility.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 63

[§ 63] Restrictions on Admissibility.

(1) Differing Standards of Admissibility. Ev.C. 1103(c) applies to prosecutions for the same sexual offenses as Ev.C. 782, supra, §62. As amended in 1974, the subdivision establishes different standards of admissibility for different categories of evidence. (See 6 Pacific L. J. 263; 18 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 895.)

(a) Evidence of the complaining witness' own sexual conduct with the defendant is unaffected by these restrictions. (Ev.C. 1103(c)(3).)

(b) If a prosecutor introduces any evidence about the complaining witness' sexual conduct, the defendant may cross-examine the witness giving that testimony and may offer evidence to rebut specifically the evidence introduced by the prosecutor or given by the complaining witness. (Ev.C. 1103(c)(4).)

(c) Neither opinion evidence, reputation evidence, nor evidence of specific instances of the complaining witness' sexual conduct is admissible for the defendant to prove the complaining witness' consent, unless the evidence satisfies the requirements for an attack on credibility under Ev.C. 782. (Ev.C. 1103(c)(1), 1103(c)(5).) (See People v. Chandler (1997) 56 C.A.4th 703, 708, 65 C.R.2d 687 [credibility exception is "utilized sparingly, most often in cases where the victim's prior sexual history is one of prostitution"]; 79 Cal. L. Rev. 541 [limits on using rape victim's sexual history to show defendant's mistaken belief in consent].)

(d) Evidence of the victim's manner of dress at the time of the offense is not admissible when offered by either party on the issue of consent "unless the evidence is determined by the court to be relevant and admissible in the interests of justice." For this purpose, "manner of dress" does not include the condition of the victim's clothing before, during, or after the offense. A party seeking to introduce evidence of this type must make its offer of proof outside the hearing of the jury, and the judge, in ruling on the request, must state his or her reasons on the record. (Ev.C. 1103(c)(2).)

(2) Constitutionality. The constitutionality of Ev.C. 1103(c) was upheld in People v. Blackburn (1976) 56 C.A.3d 685, 690, 128 C.R. 864, against the contentions that it denies the rights of confrontation and fair trial.

(a) The statute excludes evidence of the victim's sexual conduct only when it is offered to prove consent. "That limited exclusion no more deprives a defendant of a fair trial than do the rules of evidence barring hearsay, opinion evidence, and privileged communications. Hearsay evidence tending to exonerate a defendant may be highly relevant to his innocence but is excluded from consideration by the jury. So also is testimony from a highly respected citizen that he believes the defendant did not commit the crime or, absent a waiver of privilege, testimony of a clergyman that another person has confessed the crime in a manner exonerating the defendant. In those situations, policy considerations dictate that the evidence be excluded, and those policy considerations are deemed incorporated within the definition of a fair trial." (56 C.A.3d 690.)

(b) "In contrast to the hearsay, opinion, and privilege bars, the effect upon the outcome of a trial of the 1974 exclusion is minimal. The relevance of past sexual conduct of the alleged victim of the rape with persons other than the defendant to the issue of her consent to a particular act of sexual intercourse with the defendant is slight at best. The historical rule allowing the evidence may be more a creature of a one-time male fantasy of the 'girls men date and the girls men marry' than one of logical inference." (56 C.A.3d 690.)

(c) Because the due process right to a fair trial does not require admission of all relevant evidence tending to exonerate a defendant, and the evidence barred by the statute is of limited probative value, the statute does not deprive the defendant of a fair trial. Because the statute does not bar evidence of sexual conduct of the victim or her cross-examination concerning that conduct to attack her credibility, the right of confrontation is not violated. (56 C.A.3d 691.)

(3) Illustrations. In People v. Steele (1989) 210 C.A.3d 67, 257 C.R. 687, defendant, after being convicted of various sex crimes against a minor, moved for a new trial on the basis of new evidence that, on the night before the alleged offenses occurred, the victim had sexual intercourse with another man under similar circumstances, i.e., in a car with a man she had just met. Held, motion properly denied; the evidence was inadmissible under former Ev.C. 1103(b)(1) (now Ev.C. 1103(c)(1)).

(a) Evidence of the character of the complaining witness in a sex case is inadmissible either under former Ev.C. 1103(b)(1) as evidence offered to prove consent, or under P.C. 1127d (infra, §65) as evidence of "sexual conduct in and of itself" offered to attack the witness' credibility. However, noncharacter evidence relevant to the witness' credibility may be admissible even though it involves prior sexual conduct: "[W]hen the evidence is offered on a noncharacter theory, the mere fact of prior sexual conduct is never in itself important. It becomes important only when linked with other facts that prove, for example, modus operandi or motive to lie. Put another way, it is not the fact of prior sexual activity as such that is important, but something about the special circumstances under which that prior sexual activity took place that renders it important." (210 C.A.3d 75, quoting Letwin, "Unchaste Character," Ideology, and the California Rape Evidence Laws, 54 So. Cal. L. Rev. 35, 71.)

(b) By tending to show the victim's promiscuity, the evidence offered here permits an inference that she consented to sexual activity on the occasion of the alleged offense. Hence, it is inadmissible under former Ev.C. 1103(b)(1). The evidence is also relevant to the victim's credibility because, by suggesting a predisposition to have sex with strangers in vehicles, it casts doubt on the truthfulness of her testimony of being forcibly abducted and sexually assaulted. However, because this predisposition relates primarily to her character, it is inadmissible under P.C. 1127d as relating to "sexual conduct in and of itself." (210 C.A.3d 75.)

(c) Defendant argued that the evidence was admissible on the noncharacter theory of tending to prove the modus operandi of having sex with strangers in vehicles. However, one prior occasion of sexual intercourse in vaguely parallel circumstances falls well short of indicating such a modus operandi. (210 C.A.3d 76.) (See People v. King (1979) 94 C.A.3d 696, 704, 156 C.R. 268 [evidence that alleged rape victim had suffered six previous unreported rapes was admissible on issue of consent, because it bore on her credibility; but inquiry into circumstances of prior rapes was prohibited under Ev.C. 1103(2)(a) (now Ev.C. 1103(c)(1))]; People v. Perez (1987) 194 C.A.3d 525, 529, 239 C.R. 569 [victim's prior sexual conduct with defendant is admissible under statute to show actual consent or defendant's reasonable, good faith belief that victim consented].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Differing Standards of Admissibility. The scope of Ev.C. 782 was widened in 2006. (See Supp., supra, §62.)

64 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

d. Character of Victim in Sex Case.

4. Illustrations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 64

[§ 64] Illustrations.

(1) Evidence Admissible. In People v. Rioz (1984) 161 C.A.3d 905, 207 C.R. 903, defendant, charged with forcible rape, made a motion before trial to be allowed to introduce evidence of the complaining witness' activities and conviction as a prostitute. The judge initially denied the motion; at the trial, defendant testified that the complaining witness had agreed to intercourse for pay, and counsel then renewed the motion. The trial judge, relying on former Ev.C. 1103(b)(1) (now Ev.C. 1103(c)(1)), denied it. Held, this was error.

(a) Former Ev.C. 1103(b)(4) (now Ev.C. 1103(c)(5)) provides that nothing in this subdivision makes inadmissible evidence to attack the credibility of the complaining witness under Ev.C. 782. And in People v. Varona (1983) 143 C.A.3d 566, 569, 192 C.R. 44, it was held an abuse of discretion to refuse to permit evidence that the victim was a practicing prostitute. But the Varona court did not discuss "the inherent tension" between Ev.C. 782 and former Ev.C. 1103(b)(1). (161 C.A.3d 915.)

(b) "There is necessarily a certain amount of overlap between the issues of the victim's consent in a rape or other sex offense case and the victim's credibility. Presumably, any complaining witness in a rape case will deny consent to the sexual acts complained of; to avoid the harassment which has traditionally plagued complaining witnesses in cases of this type, the Legislature excluded evidence of prior sexual activity by the complaining witness with persons other than the defendant in order to prove consent. Thus, it seems clear under Evidence Code section 1103, subdivision (b)(1), that a defendant in a rape case cannot, based solely upon the victim's testimony and her presumed denial of consent, introduce evidence that she engaged in sexual activity with 1 other man, 10 other men, or 100 other men, nor that she engaged in such activity freely or for monetary compensation. This rule properly prevents the victim of sexual assault from being herself placed on trial." (161 C.A.3d 916.)

(c) However, once the defendant makes a sworn offer of proof under Ev.C. 782 concerning the relevance of the sexual conduct of the complaining witness to attack her credibility, even though it is the underlying issue of consent that is being challenged, the "absolute protection" afforded by Ev.C. 1103 "gives way to the detailed procedural safeguards" of Ev.C. 782. (161 C.A.3d 916.)

(d) Ev.C. 782, along with its other safeguards--including the requirement of a sworn offer of proof--gives the trial judge broad discretion to weigh the proffered evidence under Ev.C. 352 and exclude it as more prejudicial than probative. And this discretion and the safeguards provide a rational resolution of the tension. (161 C.A.3d 917.)

(e) Where, as here, multiple defendants are charged with sex offenses in concert, and only one of them intends to rely on the defense of consent or otherwise challenge the credibility of the complaining witness, the trial may be severed or a limiting instruction may be given. (161 C.A.3d 918.)

(f) The defendant who seeks to offer this evidence must affirmatively offer to prove its relevance. "It is not enough that a defendant alleges the complaining witness is a prostitute, has been convicted of prostitution, or engages in any particularized aspects of that profession unless the complaining witness has testified she did not consent to sex with that defendant and the defendant has presented evidence by his own testimony or otherwise which directly challenges the complaining witness' denial of consent and the defendant offers to prove, by sworn affidavit, that her prior sexual conduct is sufficient to attack her credibility as distinguished from her character. Notwithstanding the overlap between the issues of credibility and consent in such a case, Evidence Code section 782 applies only when the credibility of the complaining witness is attacked." (161 C.A.3d 918.)

In People v. Daggett (1990) 225 C.A.3d 751, 275 C.R. 287, a prosecution for sexual offenses against a child, the trial judge refused to hold an Ev.C. 782 hearing to evaluate defendant's offer of proof concerning similar molestations of the victim by others. In addition, the prosecutor was permitted to argue that the victim must have learned about the matters concerning which the victim testified as a result of having been molested by defendant. Held, this was reversible error.

"A child's testimony in a molestation case involving oral copulation and sodomy can be given an aura of veracity by his accurate description of the acts. This is because knowledge of such acts may be unexpected in a child who had not been subjected to them. In such a case it is relevant for the defendant to show that the complaining witness had been subjected to similar acts by others in order to cast doubt upon the conclusion that the child must have learned of these acts through the defendant. Thus, if the acts involved in the prior molestation are relevant to the acts of which the defendant stands accused, evidence of the prior molestation is relevant to the credibility of the complaining witness and should be admitted." (225 C.A.3d 757.)

(2) Evidence Inadmissible. In People v. Casas (1986) 181 C.A.3d 889, 226 C.R. 285, defendant, charged with forcible rape, contended that his act of intercourse with the complaining witness had been solicited by her at a price of $ 20. Defendant made a motion to present evidence that on the evening of the alleged rape the complaining witness had offered his friend sex for money. The trial judge, relying on the Rioz case, supra, ruled that, because of evidence that the complaining witness had been beaten, the defendant's evidence was not relevant, and that any slight relevancy would be outweighed by prejudice to the complaining witness. Held, affirmed.

(a) Contrary to defendant's contention, solicitation of an act of prostitution is "sexual conduct" within the meaning of Ev.C. 782 and 1103, which the Legislature added to prevent rape victims from being questioned extensively about any prior sexual history without a showing of relevance. (181 C.A.3d 895.)

(b) The issues before the trial judge on the Ev.C. 782 motion were whether the proffered testimony was relevant to attack the witness' credibility and whether it was more prejudicial than probative. The only evidence that the victim was a prostitute came from defendant and his friend, and defendant's account "verges on the impossible" and was inconsistent with the victim's injuries; hence, the judge did not abuse his discretion in excluding the evidence. (181 C.A.3d 897.)

One justice strongly dissented. "I submit that when the issue is whether a woman was raped or had consensual relations, the fact that the woman is then in the business of prostitution has a strong tendency in reason to point to the truth of one of the alternative inferences." (181 C.A.3d 898.) "If prostitution is highly relevant, the effect of violence is for the jury. It is of course a factor which points towards defendant's guilt but it is not inconsistent with a woman having consented to sex but drawing the line at unexpected brutalization which, when it occurred, provided the motive for revenge and fabrication." (181 C.A.3d 899.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Evidence Inadmissible. See People v. Woodward (2004) 116 C.A.4th 821, 831, 10 C.R.3d 779, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Sex Offenses and Crimes Against Decency, Supp., §100, citing the text [in prosecution for lewd conduct with child, trial judge properly excluded other incidents of molestation involving victim, which defendant wished to introduce to show victim's prior knowledge of sexual practices; other incidents were not similar to charged offense; distinguishing People v. Daggett (1990) 225 C.A.3d 751, 275 C.R. 287, text, p. 401].

65 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

d. Character of Victim in Sex Case.

5. Instructions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 65

[§ 65] Instructions.

P.C. 1127d and 1127e restrict jury instructions in cases of rape and related offenses (violation of P.C. 261, 261.5) or attempt or assault with intent to commit any such offense, as follows:

(1) Prior consent to intercourse. "[T]he jury shall not be instructed that it may be inferred that a person who has previously consented to sexual intercourse with persons other than the defendant or with the defendant would be therefore more likely to consent to sexual intercourse again." However, if evidence was presented indicating that the victim did previously engage in consensual intercourse with the defendant, "the jury shall be instructed that this evidence may be considered only as it relates to the question of whether the victim consented to the act of intercourse charged against the defendant in the case, or whether the defendant had a good faith reasonable belief that the victim consented to the act of sexual intercourse." The jury must be instructed not to consider the evidence for any other purpose. (P.C. 1127d(a).)

(2) Prior sexual conduct. "A jury shall not be instructed that the prior sexual conduct in and of itself of the complaining witness may be considered in determining the credibility of the witness." (P.C. 1127d(b).) (See People v. Steele (1989) 210 C.A.3d 67, 75, 257 C.R. 687, supra, §63.)

(3) Use of term "unchaste character." The term "unchaste character" may not be used in jury instruction "by any court in any criminal case" in which the defendant is charged with a violation of P.C. 261, 261.5, or 262, or attempt to commit or assault with intent to commit any crime defined in these sections. (P.C. 1127e.) (See 6 Pacific L. J. 261.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Prior consent to intercourse. See CALCRIM, No. 1194 [Consent: Prior Sexual Intercourse].

66 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A. Character.

4. Proof of Character in Criminal Cases.

d. Character of Victim in Sex Case.

6. Federal Rules of Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 66

[§ 66] Federal Rules of Evidence.

F.R. Evid., Rule 412 (The Privacy Protection for Rape Victims Act of 1978) was extensively revised in 1994. As amended, it states a general rule of exclusion, creates separate exceptions for criminal and civil cases, and establishes a new procedure for admission that includes an in camera hearing:

(1) General Rule. Subject to exceptions stated in Rule 412(b), evidence offered to prove that the alleged victim engaged in other sexual behavior or to prove the victim's sexual predisposition is not admissible in any civil or criminal proceeding involving alleged sexual misconduct. (F.R. Evid., Rule 412(a).)

(2) Exceptions Applicable in Criminal Proceeding. Under F.R. Evid., Rule 412(b)(1), the following evidence, if otherwise admissible, is not made inadmissible in a criminal case by the general rule of exclusion stated in F.R. Evid., Rule 412(a):

(a) Evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's sexual behavior if offered to prove that someone other than the accused was the source of semen, injury, or other physical evidence.

(b) Evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's sexual behavior with the accused if offered by the accused to prove consent, or by the prosecution.

(c) Evidence "the exclusion of which would violate the constitutional rights of the defendant."

(3) Exceptions Applicable in Civil Proceeding. Under F.R. Evid., Rule 412(b)(2), despite the general rule of exclusion, evidence offered to prove the alleged victim's sexual behavior or sexual predisposition may be admitted in a civil case if it is otherwise admissible and its probative value substantially outweighs the danger of harm to any victim and unfair prejudice to any party. However, evidence of the alleged victim's reputation may be admitted only if it has been placed in controversy by the victim.

(4) Procedure. A party intending to take advantage of one of the rule's exceptions must file a written motion at least 14 days before trial, unless the court, for good cause, imposes a different time limit or permits filing during trial. The motion must be served on all parties and the alleged victim must be notified. (F.R. Evid., Rule 412(c)(1).) The court then conducts an in camera hearing. Both the victim and the parties have a right to attend and be heard. Unless the court orders otherwise, the motion, related papers, and record of the hearing must be sealed and remain under seal. (F.R. Evid., Rule 412(c)(2).) (See 2 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §155 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §496 et seq.; 25 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 363.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 57 Hastings L. J. 991 [role of F.R. Evid., Rule 412 during discovery in sexual harassment action]; 166 A.L.R. Fed 639 [admissibility of victim's past sexual behavior under F.R. Evid., Rule 412].

67 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

B. Habit or Custom of Party.

1. Admissibility To Prove Conduct.

a. General Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 67

[§ 67] General Rule.

(1) In General. A person's character (general disposition or propensity) is not admissible to prove conduct on a particular occasion. (See supra, §42.) But the person's habit or custom (regular response to a repeated specific situation) is admissible "to prove conduct on a specified occasion in conformity with the habit or custom." (Ev.C. 1105; see Law Rev. Com. Comment, pointing out that such evidence is relevant and admissible under Ev.C. 351, but that Ev.C. 1105 states a specific rule to avoid misconceptions from the rule excluding character; and see also Driscoll v. Los Angeles (1967) 67 C.2d 297, 312, 61 C.R. 661, 431 P.2d 245, citing the text; Brawthen v. H & R Block (1975) 52 C.A.3d 139, 148, 124 C.R. 845 [in suit for wrongful termination of employment contract, employee properly introduced statements defendant employer made to all its managers, not to prove terms of other contracts or of plaintiff's contract, but to show that employer had "standard pitch" for all prospective managers, thus showing common habit or usage]; In re Charles G. (1979) 95 C.A.3d 62, 66, 156 C.R. 832, infra, §68; Dincau v. Tamayose (1982) 131 C.A.3d 780, 793, 182 C.R. 855, infra, §69, citing the text; People v. Memro (1985) 38 C.3d 658, 681, 214 C.R. 832, 700 P.2d 446 [evidence that interrogating officers had custom or habit of obtaining confessions by unlawful means would be admissible on issue whether confession had been coerced]; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 29 [Habit or Custom Evidence]; 1 McCormick 5th, §195; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §92 et seq.; Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 406(a); 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §390 et seq.; 7 Proof of Facts 3d 523 [habit of person]; 64 A.L.R.4th 567 [habit or routine practice evidence under Uniform Rule 406].)

(2) Federal Rule. F.R. Evid., Rule 406 states: "Evidence of the habit of a person or of the routine practice of an organization, whether corroborated or not and regardless of the presence of eyewitnesses, is relevant to prove that the conduct of the person or organization on a particular occasion was in conformity with the habit or routine practice." (See 2 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §123 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §390.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 1 McCormick 6th, §195. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.138, 139

68 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

B. Habit or Custom of Party.

1. Admissibility To Prove Conduct.
  - b. Doing of Act.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 68

[§ 68] Doing of Act.

Evidence of a habit or custom of doing something is admissible to show that the thing was done on a particular occasion as usual. (See Hughes v. Pacific Wharf & Storage Co. (1922) 188 C. 210, 223, 205 P. 105 [to prove that letter was sent, witness may testify to habit of sender's office in addressing and mailing letters]; Shearer v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1941) 43 C.A.2d 306, 309, 110 P.2d 690 [habit of plaintiff, to examine his truck to determine whether any articles should be removed, tends to show this was his purpose at time of accident]; Conderback v. Standard Oil Co. of Calif. (1966) 239 C.A.2d 664, 684, 48 C.R. 901 [similar contracts between same parties]; Driscoll v. Los Angeles (1967) 67 C.2d 297, 312, 61 C.R. 661, 431 P.2d 245, citing the text; In re Lopez (1970) 2 C.3d 141, 146, 84 C.R. 361, 465 P.2d 257 [trial judge had no independent recollection of particular case but recalled "invariable practice" of informing defendants of right to counsel and of appointing counsel for indigents who made requests; petitioner's "bare allegation" that he was not so informed was insufficient to refute judge's affidavit]; Jenkins v. Tuneup Masters (1987) 190 C.A.3d 1, 13, 14, 235 C.R. 214 [testimony of tenant's vice-president concerning tenant's custom and habit regarding mailing practices was sufficient to show proper mailing of lease extension notice]; Ev.C. 1105, supra, §67; 45 A.L.R.4th 476 [proof of mailing by evidence of office custom]; 35 Proof of Facts 589 [routine business practice of organization in mailing letter, etc.].)

In re Charles G. (1979) 95 C.A.3d 62, 156 C.R. 832, was a juvenile court proceeding on a Welf.C. 602 petition charging a minor with commission of burglary of an automobile. An essential element of the crime is that the vehicle must be locked (P.C. 459). The victim testified that "to the best of my knowledge" the car was locked, and "I make it a habit of locking my car because I realize that there are a lot of thefts." Held, the evidence was admissible, and supported the finding that the minor had committed the criminal act. (95 C.A.3d 65, 66.)

Formerly, a statutory presumption that "the ordinary course of business has been followed" served a similar purpose; e.g., when a telephone call was made, it was presumed from general experience that the operator gave the right number and that the person who answered was the one called; also, where a letter or telegram, properly addressed and prepaid, was delivered to the post office or telegraph company, it was presumed to have been delivered in due course. (See Union Const. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. (1912) 163 C. 298, 306, 125 P. 242.) The presumption was eliminated by the Evidence Code (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §99), and now proof of the business custom simply permits an inference, depending upon the strength of the proof, that the custom was followed.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

69 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

B. Habit or Custom of Party.

1. Admissibility To Prove Conduct.

c. Due Care or Negligence.

1. Due Care.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 69

[§ 69] Due Care.

(1) In General. A habit of care in certain activities may be shown to prove due care, or the absence of contributory negligence, on a particular occasion. (See Wallis v. Southern Pac. Co. (1921) 184 C. 662, 665, 195 P. 408; Fowler v. Key System Transit Lines (1951) 37 C.2d 65, 68, 230 P.2d 339 [custom of defendant to stop buses on crosswalk, relied on by plaintiff, admissible where defendant without warning departed therefrom]; 28 A.L.R.3d 1293 [pedestrian]; 29 A.L.R.3d 791 [motor vehicle driver or passenger]; 10 A.L.R.4th 1243 [propriety, in medical malpractice case, of admitting testimony regarding physician's usual custom or habit in order to establish nonliability].)

However, the evidence must not be too remote. Thus, a habit of stopping at a railroad crossing and looking about must be limited to habit at the place of the accident. Evidence of that habit at another place and under different circumstances is inadmissible. (Lindsey v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1931) 111 C.A. 482, 499, 296 P. 131.)

(2) Illustrations. Romeo v. Jumbo Market (1967) 247 C.A.2d 817, 823, 56 C.R. 26, was an action against a market operator for injuries sustained from a fall on a broken bottle of cherries on the floor. Held, citing the text, it was proper to ask a regular shopper whether, in her experience, the floor was always clean and orderly.

In Dincau v. Tamayose (1982) 131 C.A.3d 780, 182 C.R. 855, plaintiffs sued defendant doctors for malpractice in failing to make a timely diagnosis of spinal meningitis in plaintiffs' 8-week-old child. The mother testified that she talked to the doctors and their nurses on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, describing the child's serious symptoms which were indicative of bacterial meningitis, and that in none of these contacts did either of the doctors or their employees advise that the child be seen. Defendant doctors and the nurse gave a different version of the mother's calls and the minor symptoms that she had described. Defendants also offered evidence of the habit and custom of the doctors and staff in responding to telephone calls about minors' conditions, including requests that a child be brought in under certain conditions. Held, admission of this evidence was proper.

(a) Habit evidence can be used to show due care on a particular occasion. (131 C.A.3d 794, citing the text.) Plaintiffs' contention that the evidence was not introduced for that purpose but rather to impeach the mother's testimony is unsound. "[I]f Doctor Tamayose and his staff habitually asked that an infant with a temperature of more than 100 be brought in for an examination, and did not prescribe over the telephone under such circumstances, this renders it less likely that Doctor Tamayose was negligent and more likely that he used care during the critical weekend. As an incidental effect, such habit evidence also tends to prove that it was less likely that the mother reported the telephone conversation correctly, and thus tends to be impeaching evidence against mother. But such incidental effects should not render habit evidence inadmissible." (131 C.A.3d 794.)

(b) The further contention of plaintiffs, that the habit testimony of the receptionist and nurse should have been excluded because they were able to remember the particular conversations, was an attempt to apply the abrogated "eyewitness" limitation (infra, §71). (131 C.A.3d 795.)

In People v. Cabral (1983) 141 C.A.3d 148, 190 C.R. 194, defendant chiropractor was convicted of unlawful practice of medicine, after his patient, a 21-year-old epileptic, died as a result of a seizure. The patient had been under the treatment of a medical doctor who prescribed anticonvulsant drugs. The chief prosecution evidence was testimony of the parents of the patient, that defendant told them that the medication should be discontinued. Defendant testified that he did not discourage use of the medication but merely advised the parents that he could not prescribe or administer it; and he also testified that his habit in dealing with patients under treatment of a medical doctor was not to interfere with medication prescribed or administered. He then offered to prove through the testimony of other patients of his that he had adhered to this habit of noninterference. Held, it was reversible error to exclude this latter testimony. The entire case against defendant turned on the content of the advice given to the parents, and probative evidence to support his version of the conversation was crucial to the defense. (141 C.A.3d 154.)

In United Pac. Ins. Co. v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1985) 163 C.A.3d 700, 209 C.R. 819, plaintiffs sued defendant electrical utility for damages resulting from a fire when a kite became entangled in the electric conductors. The complaint alleged that the transmission lines were too close together for their amount of sag. The trial judge allowed defendant to introduce a Public Utilities Commission general safety order setting minimum standards for electric transmission lines, together with evidence that defendant had complied with the order. Defendant's theory was that the safety order was as relevant as custom, or tended to prove custom in the regulated industry. Held, the evidence was inadmissible. The safety order did not directly cover the defect alleged in the complaint; hence, its introduction did not tend to prove or disprove that defendant used due care. (163 C.A.3d 713.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

70 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

B. Habit or Custom of Party.

1. Admissibility To Prove Conduct.

c. Due Care or Negligence.

2. Negligence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 70

[§ 70] Negligence.

Habit evidence may also be used to prove lack of due care, i.e., negligence of the defendant or contributory negligence of the plaintiff. (See Craven v. Central Pac. R. Co. (1887) 72 C. 345, 348, 350, 13 P. 878 [evidence that plaintiff frequently jumped off cars while they were in motion]; Boone v. Bank of America (1934) 220 C. 93, 95, 29 P.2d 409 [habit of deceased to drive his motorcycle at excessive speed along the highway in vicinity of accident].) (See 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §97; 70 Harv. L. Rev. 375; Webb v. Van Noort (1966) 239 C.A.2d 472, 477, 478, 48 C.R. 823, supra, §41 [distinguishing between character and habit].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

71 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

B. Habit or Custom of Party.

1. Admissibility To Prove Conduct.
  - c. Due Care or Negligence.
3. Abrogation of Eyewitness Limitation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 71

[§ 71] Abrogation of Eyewitness Limitation.

California cases decided before the Evidence Code, and perhaps confusing character and habit (see supra, §41), excluded habit evidence where there were eyewitnesses to the accident. (See Lindsey v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1931) 111 C.A. 482, 498, 296 P. 131; White v. Shepardson (1931) 116 C.A. 716, 719, 3 P.2d 346; Boone v. Bank of America (1934) 220 C. 93, 95, 29 P.2d 409 [approving the limitation]; Linde v. Emmick (1936) 16 C.A.2d 676, 685, 61 P.2d 338 [excluding testimony that plaintiff was "a careful, cautious driver" (really character) because plaintiff fully described his operation of car]; Whittemore v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (1944) 65 C.A.2d 737, 752, 151 P.2d 670.)

Ev.C. 1105 abandoned this limitation. As the Law Revision Comment states: "Eyewitnesses frequently are mistaken, and some are dishonest. The trier of fact should be entitled to weigh the habit evidence against the eyewitness testimony as well as all of the other evidence in the case."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

72 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

B. Habit or Custom of Party.

2. Manner of Proof.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 72

[§ 72] Manner of Proof.

"Any otherwise admissible evidence" of habit or custom may be offered to prove conduct in conformity therewith. (Ev.C. 1105; see 7 Proof of Facts 3d 523.) It usually takes one of two forms:

(1) Opinions of the person whose conduct is in question or of some other witness familiar with the person's conduct on a sufficient number of occasions. (See Hughes v. Pacific Wharf & Storage Co. (1922) 188 C. 210, 220, 224, 205 P. 105; Whittemore v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (1944) 65 C.A.2d 737, 750, 151 P.2d 670; Lindsey v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1931) 111 C.A. 482, 498, 296 P. 131 [improper question calling for general habit instead of habit at particular place]; 1 McCormick 5th, §195; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §375; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §402.)

(2) Specific instances of behavior. (See Whittemore v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp., supra, 65 C.A.2d 751; People v. Memro (1985) 38 C.3d 658, 681, 214 C.R. 832, 700 P.2d 446 [habit or custom "is often established by evidence of repeated instances of similar conduct"]; 1 McCormick 5th, §195; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §375.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Opinions: See 1 McCormick 6th, §195.

(2) Specific instances of behavior: See 1 McCormick 6th, §195.

73 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

B. Habit or Custom of Party.

3. Inadmissible in Products Liability Case.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 73

[§ 73] Inadmissible in Products Liability Case.

The issue in a strict products liability case is whether the product is defective, not whether the defendant exercised reasonable care in design or manufacture. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1244.) Hence, evidence of custom or practice in the business or industry is irrelevant. (Foglio v. Western Auto Supply (1976) 56 C.A.3d 470, 477, 128 C.R. 545; Titus v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (1979) 91 C.A.3d 372, 378, 154 C.R. 122; Grimshaw v. Ford Motor Co. (1981) 119 C.A.3d 757, 803, 174 C.R. 348 ["the jury's focus is properly directed to the condition of the product itself, and not to the reasonableness of the manufacturer's conduct"]; Akers v. Kelley Co. (1985) 173 C.A.3d 633, 652, 219 C.R. 513 [citing Grimshaw].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1431.

74 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

a. General Rule of Exclusion.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 74

[§ 74] General Rule of Exclusion.

The fact that the defendant in a criminal prosecution has committed other crimes may be evidence of bad character and a propensity or disposition to commit the crime charged. But bad character of a defendant cannot be shown for this purpose (see supra, §50), and if this is the only purpose, the evidence is excluded. (See People v. Coan (1927) 85 C.A. 580, 586, 259 P. 998; People v. Kelley (1967) 66 C.2d 232, 238, 57 C.R. 363, 424 P.2d 947; People v. Schader (1969) 71 C.2d 761, 772, footnote 4, 80 C.R. 1, 457 P.2d 841, infra, §86, citing the text; People v. Long (1970) 7 C.A.3d 586, 592, 86 C.R. 590 ["In the eyes of the jury, defendant's possible guilt of the crime charged made probable his complicity in the other three forgeries, while his possible complicity in the other three forgeries made probable his guilt of the crime charged"]; People v. Matlock (1970) 11 C.A.3d 453, 460, 89 C.R. 862, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §352; People v. Guzman (1975) 47 C.A.3d 380, 389, 121 C.R. 69 ["Where it is possible to meet the issue by a stipulation it is error to refuse to do so and thus unnecessarily bring before the jury the evidence of other crimes"]; People v. Gibson (1976) 56 C.A.3d 119, 127, 128 C.R. 302 [extensive discussion of applicable principles]; People v. Thompson (1979) 98 C.A.3d 467, 474, 159 C.R. 615, infra, §85; People v. Thompson (1980) 27 C.3d 303, 316, 165 C.R. 289, 611 P.2d 883, infra, §84; People v. Alcala (1984) 36 C.3d 604, 630, 205 C.R. 775, 685 P.2d 1126; People v. Valentine (1988) 207 C.A.3d 697, 702, 704, 254 C.R. 822 [prosecution made no offer of proof to show purpose other than bad character, such as motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident]; People v. Moten (1991) 229 C.A.3d 1318, 1325, 280 C.R. 602 [evidence of prenatal drug use was inflammatory (see supra, §17 et seq.) in prosecution for murder and felony child endangerment arising from death by malnutrition and dehydration of defendant's 8-week-old infant]; 78 Harv. L. Rev. 436; 35 Cal. L. Rev. 131; 5 Hastings L. J. 73; 82 A.L.R.4th 913 [admissibility of evidence of other offense where record has been expunged]; 1 McCormick 5th, §196 et seq.; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §58.2; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §404 et seq.; on exclusionary rule as applied to evidence of third-party offenses, see infra, §100.)

The theory of exclusion is stated in People v. Baskett (1965) 237 C.A.2d 712, 47 C.R. 274, quoting Wigmore: "It may almost be said that it is because of this indubitable Relevancy of such evidence that it is excluded. It is objectionable, not because it has no appreciable probative value, but because it has too much. The natural and inevitable tendency of the tribunal--whether judge or jury--is to give excessive weight to the vicious record of crime thus exhibited, and either to allow it to bear too strongly on the present charge, or to take the proof of it as justifying a condemnation irrespective of guilt of the present charge. Moreover, the use of alleged particular acts ranging over the entire period of the defendant's life makes it impossible for him to be prepared to refute the charge, any or all of which may be mere fabrications." (237 C.A.2d 715, 716, citing the text.)

Ev.C. 1101(a), supra, §42, and F.R. Evid., Rule 404(b), affirm the exclusion of this type of evidence; Ev.C. 1101(b) and Rule 404(b) state the limited admissibility exception (infra, §75). (See 23 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 661 [F.R. Evid., Rule 404(b)]; 28 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1259 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Armstead (2002) 102 C.A.4th 784, 793, 125 C.R.2d 651, citing the text; 1 McCormick 6th, §190. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.369 et seq.

75 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

b. Exceptions Applicable and Other Offenses Admissible.

1. Theory of Limited Admissibility.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 75

[§ 75] Theory of Limited Admissibility.

(1) Admission To Prove Fact Other Than Character. Where the purpose of introducing evidence of other crimes is not to show bad character but to establish some other fact in issue, the limited admissibility doctrine (supra, §30) allows its admission for that particular purpose. (See People v. Phillips (1960) 186 C.A.2d 231, 245, 8 C.R. 830, quoting the text; People v. Kelley (1967) 66 C.2d 232, 239, 57 C.R. 363, 424 P.2d 947; People v. Covert (1967) 249 C.A.2d 81, 57 C.R. 220; People v. Rainville (1974) 39 C.A.3d 982, 989, 114 C.R. 902 [evidence of past welfare fraud was admissible to show that defendant was willing to engage in dishonest conduct to "beat the system" and therefore had intent to defraud county by filing false homeowner's property tax exemption claim]; People v. Beamon (1973) 8 C.3d 625, 632, 105 C.R. 681, 504 P.2d 905 [evidence of prior robberies was admissible to establish accuracy and integrity of victim's identification of defendant, as well as to show defendant's motive, mens rea for robbery, and intent to commit bodily harm]; People v. Powell (1974) 40 C.A.3d 107, 154, 115 C.R. 109 [proof of defendant's parole status could reasonably tend to prove that he killed police officer to avoid revocation]; People v. Douglas (1990) 50 C.3d 468, 510, 268 C.R. 126, 788 P.2d 640 [where identity was at issue, evidence that defendant had previously planned crimes similar to ones charged was relevant]; People v. Thomas (1992) 2 C.4th 489, 520, 7 C.R.2d 199, 828 P.2d 101 [evidence that defendant charged with murder liked to "stalk," i.e., sneak up behind persons without their knowing it, was relevant to show opportunity]; People v. Garrett (1994) 30 C.A.4th 962, 967, 36 C.R.2d 33 [in prosecution for threatening another with great bodily injury, evidence of victim's knowledge of defendant's prior conviction for manslaughter and fact that defendant had beaten her was properly admitted to establish element of offense (victim's "sustained fear")]; 1 McCormick 5th, §190; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §58 et seq.; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §300 et seq.; 87 A.L.R.2d 891 [other fires in prosecution for criminal burning or maintaining fire hazard]; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.50.)

(2) Traditional Exceptions Not Exclusive. There is no fixed category of mutually exclusive exceptions; i.e., intent, common plan, identity, etc., are merely illustrative of the types of relevant facts in proof of which other crimes may be shown as circumstantial evidence. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §190; 29 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 939 [proposing additional exception for past incidents of abuse against victim in spousal homicide case]; on admissibility of evidence that defendant may have committed similar crimes, to prove corpus delicti of murder, i.e., that death of child was by criminal agency, see 87 Harv. L. Rev. 1074; on flight, resistance, or escape as admission by conduct, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §106 et seq.; on impeachment of defendant as witness by proof of conviction of felony, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §292 et seq.)

(3) Exclusionary Rule as Exception to General Rule of Admissibility. The cases illustrating the exceptions are so much more numerous than those applying the exclusionary rule that it has been suggested that the true rule could be more realistically stated in affirmative form: that evidence of other crimes is admissible whenever it is relevant to a material issue, and that it should be excluded only where its sole purpose and effect is to show the defendant's bad moral character (disposition to commit crime). (See People v. Peete (1946) 28 C.2d 306, 314, 169 P.2d 924; People v. Lindsey (1961) 188 C.A.2d 471, 481, 10 C.R. 488, quoting the text; People v. Haslouer (1978) 79 C.A.3d 818, 825, 145 C.R. 234, quoting the text ["In practical terms this actually means that the defendant always starts his discussion with a quotation from Evidence Code section 1101, subdivision (a) and the Attorney General starts his with a quotation from Evidence Code section 1101, subdivision (b)"]; 13 So. Cal. L. Rev. 511; 22 So. Cal. L. Rev. 345; 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 463 [criticizing present approach and proposing more rigorous analytical method for determining admissibility]; 78 Harv. L. Rev. 449 [proposing that admissibility become rule].)

(4) Evidence Code. Ev.C. 1101(b) states the exception as follows: "Nothing in this section prohibits the admission of evidence that a person committed a crime, civil wrong, or other act when relevant to prove some fact (such as motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, absence of mistake or accident, or whether a defendant in a prosecution for an unlawful sexual act or attempted unlawful sexual act did not reasonably and in good faith believe that the victim consented) other than his or her disposition to commit such an act."

(5) Federal Rule. F.R. Evid., Rule 404(b) is similar. The substantive portion of the rule states: "Evidence of other crimes, wrongs, or acts is not admissible to prove the character of a person in order to show action in conformity therewith. It may, however, be admissible for other purposes, such as proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident." (See Huddleston v. United States (1988) 485 U.S. 681, 108 S.Ct. 1496, 1501, 99 L.Ed.2d 771, 782 [court need not make preliminary finding that prosecution has proved the "other act" by a preponderance of evidence; similar act evidence is admissible if there is sufficient evidence to support that finding]; Dowling v. United States (1990) 493 U.S. 342, 110 S.Ct. 668, 674, 107 L.Ed.2d 708, 720 [evidence of prior crime on issue of identity of defendant is admissible under Rule 404(b), despite fact that defendant was acquitted on trial of that prior crime; neither Double Jeopardy Clause nor due process bars such proof]; 25 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1297 [The Depraved Sexual Instinct Theory: An Example of the Propensity for Aberrant Application of Federal Rule of Evidence §404(b)]; 64 Am.Jur. Trials 543, 556 [Huddleston and Dowling]; 2 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §106; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §404 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Admission To Prove Fact Other Than Character. See People v. Roldan (2005) 35 C.4th 646, 706, 27 C.R.3d 360, 110 P.3d 289 [in prosecution for murder that occurred during robbery at swap meet, admission of evidence of defendant's participation in robbery at prior swap meet was proper as relevant to issues of identity, intent, and motive]; CALCRIM, No. 375 [Evidence of Uncharged Offense to Prove Identity, Intent, Common Plan, etc.]; 1 McCormick 6th, §190.

(2) Traditional Exceptions Not Exclusive. See People v. Catlin (2001) 26 C.4th 81, 146, 109 C.R.2d 31, 26 P.3d 357, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, Supp., §188, citing the text [in capital murder prosecution, evidence of uncharged crime (death of defendant's fifth wife by paraquat poisoning) could be used to establish cause of death of victims of charged crimes (defendant's mother and fourth wife)]; 1 McCormick 6th, §190.

76 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

b. Exceptions Applicable and Other Offenses Admissible.

2. Subsequent Offenses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 76

[§ 76] Subsequent Offenses.

There is some authority, including a holding in an early California case, to the effect that other offenses subsequent to the crime charged are not admissible. Where, e.g., the charge is receiving stolen property, and the issue is receiving goods with knowledge, the theory is advanced that the subsequent similar acts do not indicate guilty knowledge at the time of the first act. (See People v. Willard (1891) 92 C. 482, 488, 28 P. 585.) The majority of courts and more recent California cases admit the evidence on the theory that a series of similar criminal acts may indicate guilty knowledge regardless of the time when they take place. (See People v. Bean (1957) 149 C.A.2d 299, 303, 308 P.2d 27 [knowledge that drugs were narcotics]; People v. Freytas (1958) 157 C.A.2d 706, 718, 719, 321 P.2d 782 [same]; People v. Perez (1974) 42 C.A.3d 760, 763, 117 C.R. 195 [same]; 13 So. Cal. L. Rev. 515.)

Where matters other than guilty knowledge are in issue, the admissibility of subsequent offenses is well established in California. (See People v. Ferdinand (1924) 194 C. 555, 561, 229 P. 341 [charge of murder in perpetration of robbery; subsequent robbery to show identity of murderers and acts part of general conspiracy]; People v. Griffin (1967) 66 C.2d 459, 464, 465, 58 C.R. 107, 426 P.2d 507 [later rape was admissible to prove intent to rape in charged offense]; People v. Ward (1968) 266 C.A.2d 241, 255, 72 C.R. 46 [in murder trial, subsequent murder was admissible to prove common plan]; People v. Holliman (1969) 274 C.A.2d 89, 92, 78 C.R. 826, citing the text.) In People v. Coefield (1951) 37 C.2d 865, 236 P.2d 570, a prosecution for murder in the course of robbery of a liquor store, the evidence was that defendant had participated in three other liquor store robberies within a month of the homicide, two before and one the night after. In each of the three others and in the one charged, the method was strikingly similar: a liquor store, late evening or early morning, a gun used to intimidate the victim, the victim forced into a back room or basement and struck with a gun to render him unconscious and permit escape. Held, the evidence of common method or plan (see infra, §92) was relevant on the issue of intent to rob, and was admissible "whether the other offenses were prior or subsequent." (37 C.2d 870.) (See 5 Hastings L. J. 77 [criticizing result in Coefield as undesirable extension of common plan exception]; 88 A.L.R.3d 8 [other sexual offenses]; 92 A.L.R.3d 545 [admissibility of subsequent offense as affected by proximity of time and place].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Matters other than guilty knowledge in issue: See People v. Garcia (2001) 89 C.A.4th 1321, 1335, 107 C.R.2d 889 [in prosecution for spousal rape, defendant's violation of restraining order and battery on victim were admissible, even though they occurred 1 year after charged offense].

77 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

b. Exceptions Applicable and Other Offenses Admissible.

3. Remoteness of Prior Offense.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 77

[§ 77] Remoteness of Prior Offense.

(1) In General. The admissibility of other offenses is subject to some question when they long antedate the time of the crime charged. Remoteness may be a reason for exclusion, or it may be sufficiently explained so as to justify admission. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §190; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §305.)

Thus, in People v. Peete (1946) 28 C.2d 306, 169 P.2d 924, defendant was charged with murdering the deceased as part of a scheme to acquire the latter's property. The prosecution was allowed to offer evidence of a prior murder by defendant, some 18 years before, with the same object, accomplished by the same means, and preceded and followed by similar unusual conduct. Held, the evidence was admissible as tending to show motive for the crime and identity of defendant as the murderer, and also as tending to rebut defendant's innocent explanation of her conduct. The court observed that remoteness of time was not significant in this case, for defendant had been convicted of the first murder and had spent most of the intervening period in prison. (28 C.2d 318.) (See 35 Cal. L. Rev. 131; People v. Grimes (1952) 113 C.A.2d 365, 373, 248 P.2d 130, infra, §92; People v. Terry (1969) 70 C.2d 410, 422, 77 C.R. 460, 454 P.2d 36 [to show that murder was committed intentionally to avoid arrest, evidence of robbery of a bank was properly admitted even though statute of limitations had run on the robbery]; People v. Douglas (1990) 50 C.3d 468, 511, 268 C.R. 126, 788 P.2d 640 [where defendant was charged with taking two women to desert to make pornographic films and then murdering them, 3-year time lag did not render testimony as to prior incident, involving pornographic photo session, too remote or unreliable]; People v. Daniels (1991) 52 C.3d 815, 857, 277 C.R. 122, 802 P.2d 906 [in trial for murder of police officers, 2-year time lag did not make evidence of prior crimes (bank robbery and ensuing shootout with police) too distant and remote]; 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 475.)

In People v. Burns (1952) 109 C.A.2d 524, 241 P.2d 308, the charge was second degree murder, arising from the fatal beating of a woman after a nude swimming party. A prior plea of guilty to assault in Massachusetts 13 years before, on a girl who refused to engage in sex activity, was held admissible. (109 C.A.2d 534, 538.) A strong dissent argued that the line of reasonableness was passed in this case: "In other words, because defendant was charged and convicted some 13 years before of assaulting a woman, while under the influence of liquor, in which case she charged that he had first attempted sexual intercourse and then threatened to commit an unnatural sex act, it is now claimed that those facts are relevant in proving that, while under the influence of liquor, some 13 years later, he brutally beat the deceased and murdered her. While sex, in a general sense, was undoubtedly present in both cases, there is not one word of testimony that defendant attempted sexual intercourse in the instant case or threatened or attempted to perform any unnatural sex act." (109 C.A.2d 554.)

In People v. Lapin (1956) 138 C.A.2d 251, 259, 291 P.2d 575, a prosecution for possession of marijuana, it was held error to admit evidence of a misdemeanor conviction for possession, which had occurred 9 years before.

(2) Distinction: Penalty Phase of Capital Trial. Possible remoteness of a defendant's prior offenses is not a proper ground of exclusion under P.C. 190.3 (determination of penalty for capital offense; see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §473), because remoteness affects the weight, not admissibility, of the prior offense. (People v. Anderson (1990) 52 C.3d 453, 476, 276 C.R. 356, 801 P.2d 1107, supra, §28.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 1 McCormick 6th, §190. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.384

78 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.
- b. Exceptions Applicable and Other Offenses Admissible.
4. Defendant Not Prosecuted or Convicted.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 78

[§ 78] Defendant Not Prosecuted or Convicted.

Because the relevant ultimate fact is not the guilt of the other crime, the evidence is admissible even though the defendant was never prosecuted for the other offense. (See People v. Archerd (1970) 3 C.3d 615, 638, 91 C.R. 397, 477 P.2d 421, infra, §82; People v. Jenkins (1970) 3 C.A.3d 529, 534, 83 C.R. 525 [evidence of other offense was admissible but it was error to exclude evidence that offense was never prosecuted]; People v. Rogers (1985) 173 C.A.3d 205, 212, 218 C.R. 494; People v. Simon (1986) 184 C.A.3d 125, 129, 228 C.R. 855, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §55.)

Where the defendant was prosecuted for the other offense, the evidence can be admitted even though an acquittal resulted. (See People v. Raleigh (1948) 83 C.A.2d 435, 442, 189 P.2d 70; People v. Griffin (1967) 66 C.2d 459, 465, 58 C.R. 107, 426 P.2d 507 [evidence was admissible despite acquittal, but exclusion of evidence of acquittal was error]; 25 A.L.R.4th 934.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Mullens (2004) 119 C.A.4th 648, 663, 14 C.R.3d 534, Supp., infra, §97 [in prosecution for lewd conduct with child, it was reversible error to admit evidence of defendant's conduct with other child without also admitting evidence that he was acquitted of charges arising from that conduct].

79 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

b. Exceptions Applicable and Other Offenses Admissible.

5. Constitutionally Invalid Confession.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 79

[§ 79] Constitutionally Invalid Confession.

Confessions to other crimes obtained in violation of constitutional safeguards (see 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §89 et seq.) are inadmissible as circumstantial evidence of the crime charged. (People v. Jack (1965) 233 C.A.2d 446, 463, 43 C.R. 566; People v. Haston (1968) 69 C.2d 233, 251, footnote 23, 70 C.R. 419, 444 P.2d 91; but see People v. Coffey (1967) 67 C.2d 204, 218, 60 C.R. 457, 430 P.2d 15, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §300 [dictum that prior conviction obtained in violation of right to counsel could be used to circumstantially establish motive for charged offense].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

80 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

b. Exceptions Applicable and Other Offenses Admissible.

6. Procedure.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 80

[§ 80] Procedure.

(1) Test for Admissibility. In People v. Poulin (1972) 27 C.A.3d 54, 65, 103 C.R. 623, the court described the procedure as follows: "Before evidence of a collateral offense can be admitted, (1) ground must first be laid implicating the accused in the charge under trial, and unless sufficient evidence of this has, in the opinion of the trial judge, first been adduced, all evidence of other offenses must be excluded; (2) the collateral offense cannot be put in evidence without proof that the accused was involved in its commission; (3) there must be identity of person or crime, scienter, intent, system, or some integral parts of the exceptions established between the charge under trial and that sought to be introduced, that clearly connect the accused, showing that the person who committed the one crime must have committed the other. ... The test of admissibility, thus, is whether there is some clear connection between the collateral offense and the one charged so that it may logically be inferred that if the defendant is guilty of one offense, he must be guilty of the other." (See People v. Simon (1986) 184 C.A.3d 125, 129, 228 C.R. 855, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §55 [admissibility of prior act may depend on determination of preliminary fact pursuant to Ev.C. 403 (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §48 et seq.)].)

(2) Burden of Proof. The prosecution is not subject to the same burden of proof as on the main issue of guilt (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §41 et seq.); i.e., the other offenses may be shown by a preponderance of the evidence, and need not be established beyond a reasonable doubt. (People v. Lisenba (1939) 14 C.2d 403, 429, 94 P.2d 569; People v. Albertson (1944) 23 C.2d 550, 579, 145 P.2d 7 [proof must be substantial]; People v. Durham (1969) 70 C.2d 171, 187, footnote 15, 74 C.R. 262, 449 P.2d 198 [proof by preponderance of substantial evidence]; People v. Harris (1977) 71 C.A.3d 959, 965, 139 C.R. 778; People v. Carpenter (1997) 15 C.4th 312, 382, 63 C.R.2d 1, 935 P.2d 708 [preponderance of evidence standard applies to proof of other offenses in guilt phase of capital trial, notwithstanding language in previous cases suggesting proper standard is clear and convincing evidence]; see 1 McCormick 5th, §190; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §307; 13 So. Cal. L. Rev. 511.)

(3) Distinction: Penalty Phase of Capital Case. In the separate penalty trial for capital cases (see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §463), the proof of other crimes is regarded as so damaging in its impact on the jury that a special rule has developed: The defendant is entitled to an instruction that the other crimes must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. (People v. Polk (1965) 63 C.2d 443, 450, 47 C.R. 1, 406 P.2d 641.) But failure to give the instruction is subject to harmless error analysis. (People v. Avena (1996) 13 C.4th 394, 429, 53 C.R.2d 301, 916 P.2d 1000.)

(4) Rebuttal by Defendant. The defendant must be allowed to deny or explain the alleged offenses. (People v.

Zerillo (1950) 36 C.2d 222, 230, 223 P.2d 223; People v. Griffin (1967) 66 C.2d 459, 465, 58 C.R. 107, 426 P.2d 507 [right to show acquittal]; People v. Jenkins (1970) 3 C.A.3d 529, 534, 83 C.R. 525 [right to show no prosecution]; on argument for exclusion of evidence of acquittal, see 21 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 892; on admissibility of defendant's evidence of other acts tending to rebut fraudulent intent, see 90 A.L.R.2d 903.)

Also, "[t]he possibility of severing relevant from irrelevant portions should, in every case, be considered, thereby protecting the defendant against reference to other crimes where it has no tendency to establish facts pertinent to the proof of the crime charged." (People v. Dabb (1948) 32 C.2d 491, 500, 197 P.2d 1; see People v. Jackson (1950) 36 C.2d 281, 285, 223 P.2d 236.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Burden of Proof. See 1 McCormick 6th, §190.

81 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

c. Exceptions Inapplicable and Other Offenses Inadmissible.

1. Issue Uncontested.

aa. General Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 81

[§ 81] General Rule.

If the issue on which evidence of other offenses is offered is uncontested, the evidence is irrelevant and should be excluded. (People v. Gonzales (1968) 262 C.A.2d 286, 290, 68 C.R. 578; People v. Anderson (1970) 6 C.A.3d 364, 370, 85 C.R. 669; People v. Swearington (1977) 71 C.A.3d 935, 947, 140 C.R. 5.) (On elimination of issue by stipulation, see supra, §15.)

In People v. Gregg (1968) 266 C.A.2d 389, 71 C.R. 920, defendant was charged with sale of heroin. The prosecution proved sale to an officer, who testified that defendant was at the time giving himself an injection, and that defendant asked the officer whether he wanted to use the "outfit." Defendant's direct testimony made no claim of ignorance of the narcotic nature of heroin; and, on cross-examination, he stated, without objection, that he "might have been" using heroin "off and on." But the prosecutor, over objection, continued to question him on the nature of the drug, its usual form of packaging, its price, and its strength for a "fix." This brought to the jury's attention his apparent familiarity with sale, as distinguished from his own claim of being only an "off and on" user. One question was, "In fact, you have bought it in that particular amount, packaged in a balloon, haven't you?" Held, admission of this evidence was prejudicial error.

(a) One theory, supported by a number of cases, is that a plea of not guilty puts everything material in issue, hence permits proof of other offenses, even though the defendant does not actually raise the issue of knowledge by claiming lack of it. (266 C.A.2d 391.) Other cases, including People v. Kelley (1967) 66 C.2d 232, 242, 243, 57 C.R. 363, 424 P.2d 947, and People v. Gonzales, supra, take the opposite view, holding that where the defendant does not raise an issue, the sole effect of the evidence is to show criminal disposition. (266 C.A.2d 392.)

(b) The issue is clearly eliminated by a testimonial admission or a stipulation; but this is not the only way that the defendant can remove the issue and prevent the introduction of evidence of prior offenses. Here, e.g., the offer of his "outfit" obviously negated any inference of honest mistake as to knowledge of the narcotic character of the substance furnished. (266 C.A.2d 395.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

82 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

c. Exceptions Inapplicable and Other Offenses Inadmissible.

1. Issue Uncontested.

bb. Issues Part of Prosecution's Burden.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 82

[§ 82] Issues Part of Prosecution's Burden.

In People v. Archerd (1970) 3 C.3d 615, 91 C.R. 397, 477 P.2d 421, defendant contended that until he put in issue either identity, intent, or some other fact, the prosecution was prohibited from anticipating the defense and presenting evidence of other acts in its case-in-chief. The court rejected the contention. "It is not necessary for the defendant to raise issues before the People may meet them where this is part of the prosecution's burden. The People have the burden of establishing intent and identity." (3 C.3d 639.) (See People v. Lawrence (1972) 25 C.A.3d 213, 220, 101 C.R. 671 [declaring that People v. Gregg (1968) 266 C.A.2d 389, 394, 71 C.R. 920, supra, §81, and People v. Anderson (1970) 6 C.A.3d 364, 370, 85 C.R. 669, are no longer authoritative in light of People v. Archerd; but see People v. Perez (1974) 42 C.A.3d 760, 767, 117 C.R. 195, observing that if Archerd were taken literally, it could be argued that evidence of other crimes could be admitted "at any time in any case"].)

In People v. Perkins (1984) 159 C.A.3d 646, 205 C.R. 625, defendant was charged with burglary, and the prosecution, for enhancement purposes, alleged a prior felony conviction for receiving stolen property. In order to avoid getting the evidence of the prior before the jury, defendant admitted it out of the jury's presence for enhancement purposes only. By a motion in limine, the prosecution sought to prove the prior conviction to show defendant's intent and knowledge, contending that these were elements of the charged crime. Held, it was error, though harmless, to admit the evidence.

(a) If defendant had placed these elements in issue, the evidence would have been admissible; if he did not, evidence of the uncharged offense would not be admissible. And here, the motion to admit the uncharged offense was made and granted in limine; defendant at that time had not put intent or knowledge in issue, and he did not do so later. (159 C.A.3d 651, 652.)

(b) To reduce the possibility that an uncharged offense will be admitted to prove an element of the crime before that element is placed in issue, trial judges are advised to follow the procedure used by the trial judge in People v. Scott (1980) 113 C.A.3d 190, 199, 169 C.R. 669: "He instructed the prosecutor to avoid reference to an uncharged offense in his case in chief, but ruled that, if the defense placed any ultimate facts into issue, he would consider allowing the prosecutor to use an uncharged offense in rebuttal. Evidence of the prior was admitted because the testimony of Scott's codefendant placed Scott's intent in issue and Scott, also, testified." (159 C.A.3d 652.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

83 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

c. Exceptions Inapplicable and Other Offenses Inadmissible.

2. Offenses Not Connected.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 83

[§ 83] Offenses Not Connected.

(1) In General. People v. Jackson (1967) 254 C.A.2d 655, 62 C.R. 208, condemns a completely improper use of other offense evidence.

(a) No connection with anyone. "Evidence of other similar crimes linked to no one at all is clearly inadmissible to prove any element of the crime charged against a defendant, even though the crime occurred within a reasonable proximity of time and place." Otherwise, a defendant charged with robbing a service station could be convicted on proof that four other stations were robbed in the same city and on the same night by persons unknown, simply because the modus operandi as to each was the same as that used in the crime charged. (254 C.A.2d 658.)

(b) Connection with alleged accomplice not prosecuted. The Jackson case presented a variation of the situation in which the other offenses were not connected with the defendant. An electric utility had suffered a number of thefts at substations. Officers apprehended defendant and L, who carried objects which they threw away. These turned out to be a bolt cutter and a wire cutter for achieving entry through the chain link fence. Defendant was charged with attempt to commit grand theft. To prove his specific intent the prosecution advanced the theory that L was his accomplice, and that L's intent was consequently imputed to him. L's intent was then proved by evidence of three similar offenses connected with L.

The defect in this approach was that L was not charged with the crime. If defendant and L had been jointly charged and tried, L's other crimes would have been admissible against L, and defendant might have been found guilty as an aider and abettor of L. Charging defendant alone, and giving him the impossible burden of refuting the evidence of other crimes allegedly committed by L, "violates the fundamental principles of due process of the law." (254 C.A.2d 660.) (See People v. Long (1970) 7 C.A.3d 586, 591, 86 C.R. 590 [in prosecution for passing forged check, it was reversible error to admit evidence that defendant was present when third party forged three other checks, where there was no substantial evidence of defendant's complicity in those other forgeries]; People v. Hernandez (1997) 55 C.A.4th 225, 242, 63 C.R.2d 769 [trial judge committed reversible error in admitting testimony by crime analyst concerning data in in-house police sex crimes data base indicating that two cases matching modus operandi of charged crimes had occurred in area searched while defendant lived there].)

(2) Criminal Practices Involving Similar Offenses. In People v. Martinez (1992) 10 C.A.4th 1001, 12 C.R.2d 838, a prosecution for unlawfully driving a stolen vehicle and other offenses, the trial court admitted expert opinion evidence on how auto theft rings operate. (10 C.A.4th 1004.) Held, this was reversible error. The court, after discussing the Jackson and Long cases, supra, said: "Presumably the purpose of the evidence was to show that defendant was lying when he claimed he bought the car on a street corner and did not know it was stolen. The prosecution tried to prove this by showing that other drivers found driving similar vehicles under similar circumstances made the same claim. Here the prosecution implicitly asked the jury to use defendant's disavowal of knowledge to bolster the theory that the other drivers were lying when they denied knowledge and then using that conclusion in turn to reach the conclusion that defendant knew the vehicle was stolen. This sort of bootstrap reasoning is impermissible, and the trial court erred in admitting the evidence of other crimes without first requiring proof that defendant was connected with the other crimes." (10 C.A.4th 1007.) (But see People v. Lopez (1994) 21 C.A.4th 1551, 1555, 1556, 26 C.R.2d 741, distinguishing Martinez [narcotics agent's testimony about organization of methamphetamine manufacturing rings was not improper "profile" testimony, but was background testimony allowing jury to understand other evidence addressing guilt or innocence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

84 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.
- c. Exceptions Inapplicable and Other Offenses Inadmissible.
3. Unsupported Assertion of Admissible Purpose.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 84

[§ 84] Unsupported Assertion of Admissible Purpose.

(1) Murder Prosecution: Evidence of Prior Rape. In People v. Guerrero (1976) 16 C.3d 719, 724, 129 C.R. 166, 548 P.2d 366, the court declared that "admission of other crimes evidence cannot be justified merely by asserting an admissible purpose."

Defendant was charged with murdering a 17-year-old girl. He had given her an automobile ride shortly before her body was found with her blouse above her brassiere, with no sign of sexual molestation, and with wounds that could have been caused by a blunt instrument like a lug wrench. The trial judge admitted testimony from L, another 17-year-old girl, that 6 weeks before the alleged murder defendant had given her a ride in his automobile, forced her into acts of oral copulation and sexual intercourse, and threatened her with a lug wrench. Held, evidence of the earlier rape and threat should have been excluded.

(a) Testimony about L's rape was inadmissible on the issue of identity for two reasons. Defendant's presence at the crime scene had been well established by other evidence that defendant was with the victim at or near the time she died; evidence of the crimes against L was irrelevant. "If the victim had been attacked in a distinctive manner that was identical to a previous crime defendant had committed, then the evidence of the other crime might have probative value. But the only claimed connection that has any logical relevance is evidence of 'sexual activity' in both cases and the possible use of a wrench. Even if both facts were established ... it could not reasonably be claimed that the two offenses were committed in a particularly distinct manner that tends to inculcate defendant." (16 C.3d 725.)

(b) Could the testimony have been admitted to show that defendant killed his victim during an attempted rape? In People v. Kelley (1967) 66 C.2d 232, 242, 57 C.R. 363, 424 P.2d 947, other-crimes evidence was properly introduced to show intent where proof of intent was ambiguous. But other-crimes evidence may not be used to show the otherwise ambiguous intent behind an act when there is little evidence that the act was committed. "Indeed, the standard framework for admission of evidence of other crimes is if there is no doubt that defendant has committed an act, but some question as to his intent in doing so." (16 C.3d 726.)

Here, evidence on the cause of the victim's death was ambiguous; i.e., was she killed by blows from a blunt instrument or by a fall? Evidence of L's rape did nothing to resolve this ambiguity, because even if defendant's threatening gesture with a wrench was admitted, it would not prove that the present victim was killed intentionally rather than accidentally. Nor could evidence of L's rape be used to show that defendant killed the victim in the course of an attempted rape, because there was no evidence whatsoever of sexual intercourse or attempted sexual intercourse which the L rape might explain. "Contrary to the prosecutor's broad assumption, boy plus girl does not invariably equal sex." (16 C.3d 727.)

(c) The prosecution argument is circular: "(1) sexual activity must have taken place in the Santana offense because defendant's rape of Miss Lopez demonstrates his aggressive sexual tendencies; (2) therefore, evidence of the Lopez rape may be introduced to show the intent with which defendant tried to engage in sex with Miss Santana. The first premise, of course, seeks to prove defendant's conduct in this case by means of evidence of his criminal disposition. Such proof is expressly prohibited by Evidence Code section 1101, subdivision (a). ... In short, the People may not conjure up an attempted rape in this instance in order to introduce evidence of another rape." (16 C.3d 728.)

(d) The similarities between the two offenses are not substantial enough to have probative value. "If aimless cruising and drinking beer were distinctive earmarks of criminal behavior, a large percentage of the teenage population of Southern California would be prime suspects in this case." (16 C.3d 729.)

(e) The harmful impact of the testimony about the threat would not alone justify reversal, but admission of evidence of the L rape--a brutal and abhorrent one--was prejudicial beyond a shadow of a doubt. "No limiting instruction, however thoughtfully phrased or often repeated, could erase from the jurors' minds the picture of defendant's role in raping a 17-year-old girl and forcing her to commit oral copulation." (16 C.3d 730.)

(2) Felony-Murder Prosecution: Evidence of Prior Robbery. In People v. Thompson (1980) 27 C.3d 303, 165 C.R. 289, 611 P.2d 883, the prosecution was for robbery, burglary, and felony-murder based on robbery and burglary. The specific intent to steal was an important issue, for, if the jury accepted defendant's contention that he lacked that intent, he would have established a defense to the special-circumstances allegations for first degree murder and to the robbery and burglary counts. The judge permitted the prosecution to introduce evidence of another robbery committed 2 weeks after the crimes charged. Held, this was error.

(a) Because defendant placed the element of specific intent to steal in issue, the requirements of materiality and necessity of other offense evidence were met. (27 C.3d 315, 318.) But under People v. Guerrero, mere assertion of an admissible purpose does not justify admission, and the question remains whether the particular evidence of defendant's other offenses is relevant to prove intent in the present case. (27 C.3d 319.)

(b) Here, the only similarities in the two crimes were that the defendant demanded an automobile and left the scene with a set of his victim's car keys. In other respects, his conduct was quite different; and "[e]vidence that an individual intended to steal car keys on one occasion does not, by itself, substantially tend to prove that he intended to steal them on a second occasion." (27 C.3d 321.)

(3) Murder Prosecution: Evidence of Prior Offers To Implicate Others in Exchange for Leniency. In People v. Hamilton (1985) 41 C.3d 408, 221 C.R. 902, 710 P.2d 981, the prosecution's theory was that the victim had surprised defendant while he was breaking into her van, and, because of his deathly fear of prison, defendant murdered the victim. The trial judge permitted the prosecution to introduce letters written by defendant while he was in prison years earlier in which, in exchange for release or reduction of sentence, he promised to implicate a number of persons, including his own brother, in various crimes. Held, this was error. "The proffered motive of killing eyewitnesses because of defendant's extreme fear of prison simply does not wash. It rests entirely on speculation on how an assumed 'normal' burglar would have behaved after being discovered, which, in turn, is based entirely on speculation on how such a 'normal' burglar would have weighed the possibility of going to prison against the problems associated with the taking of a human life. The jury is then asked to compare this supposed reaction of a 'normal' burglar with the assumed reaction of a person who dislikes prison with the intensity which the defendant's letters imply. It is difficult to imagine a more tenuous chain of inferences on which to base a finding that one person has killed another." (41 C.3d 426.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

85 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

c. Exceptions Inapplicable and Other Offenses Inadmissible.

4. Inadmissible To Support Prosecution Witness.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 85

[§ 85] Inadmissible To Support Prosecution Witness.

(1) In General. In People v. Thompson (1979) 98 C.A.3d 467, 159 C.R. 615, defendant was charged with a sex offense against F, a minor, and with furnishing marijuana to F. F testified to these facts, and defendant gave a completely contrary version of what took place. The trial judge then allowed F to testify that on several prior occasions defendant had provided him with marijuana cigarettes and that he had smoked them at defendant's apartment. The jury was instructed that this testimony was admitted for the limited purpose of supporting F's credibility with respect to his testimony as to the acts charged. Held, admission of this supporting evidence was error.

(a) Ev.C. 1101(b) (supra, §75) does not deal with character trait evidence offered on credibility of a witness; this subject is covered by Ev.C. 786 et seq. (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §281 et seq.). (98 C.A.3d 473, quoting Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1101.)

(b) Ev.C. 786 limits evidence of this type to the character traits of dishonesty and untruthfulness (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §281), and Ev.C. 787 prohibits proof of specific wrongful acts (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §285). The general authorization of evidence to impeach a witness (Ev.C. 780, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §259) is subject to the limitations of Ev.C. 786 and Ev.C. 787. (98 C.A.3d 476, 477 et seq., analyzing People v. Thomas (1978) 20 C.3d 457, 143 C.R. 215, 573 P.2d 433.) "To hold that such evidence is admissible in the case at bench on a support-of-witness-credibility theory would espouse an evidentiary rule of law that would constitute an emasculation of the statutory prohibition (set forth in Evid. Code, §1101) against the admissibility of evidence that defendant committed a similar offense when the sole relevancy of such evidence is that of proof of defendant's disposition, propensity or character trait to commit such offenses from which it may be inferred that he acted in conformity with his propensity and committed the charged offense." (98 C.A.3d 481.)

(2) Distinction: Evidence Explaining Witness' Fear of Testifying. In People v. Feagin (1995) 34 C.A.4th 1427, 40 C.R.2d 918, a murder case, a prosecution witness was allowed to testify that defendant had previously tried to kill him. The trial judge found that most of the witness' testimony was admissible under the hearsay exceptions for admissions and adoptive admissions; the details of the murder attempt would be too hard to excise from the rest of the testimony and were more relevant than prejudicial. Held, the testimony was properly admitted. "Evidence that a witness is afraid to testify is relevant to the credibility of the witness. ... The testimony explained the fear Deitric felt when appellant's aunt followed him from the courtroom; his reaction to the assault on his brother in jail by Feagin two days after his earlier testimony; his reluctance to testify and inconsistent statements, his reasons for leaving a group in which he overheard statements when approached by appellants; and his reasons for hiding his face while testifying." (34 C.A.4th 1433, 1434.)

(3) Distinction: Prosecution for Sexual Offense. In a prosecution for sexual offenses, where the victim's credibility is often at issue, admissibility of the defendant's other sexual offenses is controlled by Ev.C. 1108. (See infra, §97.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

86 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

c. Exceptions Inapplicable and Other Offenses Inadmissible.

5. Discretionary Exclusion.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 86

[§ 86] Discretionary Exclusion.

In People v. Sam (1969) 71 C.2d 194, 77 C.R. 804, 454 P.2d 700, D, a stranger to defendant, became insulting and objectionable, challenged him to a fight, and leaped at him. Defendant threw him down, stamped his foot on his stomach, and left. D died 2 weeks later. Defendant was charged with murder, and to show a common plan or scheme (see infra, §92), the judge admitted evidence of two prior acts: (1) While living with C, defendant, in a drunken quarrel, kicked her in the ribs; she was hospitalized and he pleaded guilty to assault and battery and disturbing the peace. (2) Defendant had a fight with a longtime friend, and kicked him. Defendant was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter. Held, reversed.

(a) The evidence was of doubtful relevance. Crimes sharing common features may be shown to prove identity (infra, §92), but no such issue was involved. They may be shown where the offenses are connected (infra, §93), but there was no connecting link here. They may also be shown to prove criminal intent and thereby negate a claim of self-defense (infra, §89), but two drunken fights during a 2-year period had little probative value on a recent altercation. (71 C.2d 205.)

(b) Even if there was some relevance, its prejudicial effect was so great as to call for exclusion under Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17). "This case is a dramatic illustration of the prejudice that can be injected into a trial through the device of demonstrating prior criminal acts. By use of this stratagem, the prosecution was able to place before the jury the largely irrelevant but manifestly harmful information that defendant was a man who often drank to excess and was frequently drunk; that he was often belligerent and fought with others; that he had been living with a married woman not his wife; that he had struck that same woman with sufficient force to hospitalize her; that he had helped to assault his good friend Tubby so severely that an ambulance and the police had to be called; that he had admitted to one assault and battery and had been charged with another. In short, defendant was made to appear to be an antisocial individual of generally bad character, an immoral person unworthy of the jury's belief or consideration. Certainly a substantial showing of probative value was required to justify admission of this prejudicial and inflammatory evidence so that the jury could dispassionately perform its function of ascertaining the truth as to the events involved in this case." (71 C.2d 206.)

People v. Schader (1969) 71 C.2d 761, 80 C.R. 1, 457 P.2d 841, holding the evidence admissible, examines and restates the criteria of admissibility, again emphasizing the necessity of weighing probative value against prejudice likely to result: "Before permitting the jury to hear evidence of other offenses the court must ascertain that the evidence (a) 'tends logically, naturally and by reasonable inference' to prove the issue upon which it is offered; (b) is offered upon an issue which will ultimately prove to be material to the People's case; and (c) is not merely cumulative with respect to other evidence which the People may use to prove the same issue. In determining relevance, the trial court must look behind the label describing the kind of similarity or relation between the other offense and the charged offense; it must examine the precise elements of similarity between the offenses with respect to the issue for which the evidence is proffered and satisfy itself that each link of the chain of inference between the former and the latter is reasonably strong. In order to assess materiality, the court must consider not merely the elements of the offense, but also the defendant's testimonial admissions." (71 C.2d 775.) (See People v. Stanley (1967) 67 C.2d 812, 818, 63 C.R. 825, 433 P.2d 913 ["The court should not permit the admission of other crimes until it has ascertained that the evidence tends logically and by reasonable inference to prove the issue upon which it is offered, that it is offered on an issue material to the prosecution's case, and is not merely cumulative"]; People v. Perez (1974) 42 C.A.3d 760, 766, 117 C.R. 195; People v. Gibson (1976) 56 C.A.3d 119, 130, 128 C.R. 302; People v. Perry (1985) 166 C.A.3d 924, 929, 931, 212 C.R. 793 [evidence of slight relevancy, cumulative, and extremely prejudicial]; People v. Escobar (1996) 48 C.A.4th 999, 1024, 55 C.R.2d 883 [reviewing relevant factors; under state of evidence and offer of proof then before court, trial judge did not abuse discretion in admitting evidence of one defendant's prior carrying of loaded firearm to show that other defendant acted out of fear of him].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

87 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

d. Required Degree of Similarity.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 87

[§ 87] Required Degree of Similarity.

(1) In General. Most of the exceptions specified in Ev.C. 1101(b)--"motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, absence of mistake or accident"--can be lumped together in three categories: intent, common design or plan, and identity. In People v. Ewoldt (1994) 7 C.4th 380, 27 C.R.2d 646, 867 P.2d 757, a prosecution for lewd acts with a child, the Supreme Court pointed out that the required degree of similarity between the current offense and the uncharged misconduct depends upon the purpose for which the evidence is to be admitted. The least degree of similarity is required to prove intent; the similarity must merely be sufficient to support the inference that the defendant probably harbored the same intent in each instance. (7 C.4th 402.) A greater degree of similarity is required to prove the existence of a common design or plan; the uncharged misconduct must demonstrate "not merely a similarity in the results, but such a concurrence of common features that the various acts are naturally to be explained as caused by a general plan of which they are the individual manifestations." (7 C.4th 402.) The greatest degree of similarity is required to prove identity; the common features of the uncharged misconduct and the current offense must be sufficiently distinctive as to support the inference that the same person committed both acts. (7 C.4th 403.) (See People v. Nible (1988) 200 C.A.3d 838, 850, 247 C.R. 396 [in burglary prosecution, evidence that defendant had previously climbed through windows of women's bedrooms after removing window screen, and touched the women, was admissible on issue of intent to rape, even if incidents were not similar enough to be admitted to prove identity]; People v. Gallego (1990) 52 C.3d 115, 171, 276 C.R. 679, 802 P.2d 169 [first degree murder and kidnapping prosecution; trial judge's belief that other crimes were insufficiently similar to justify their admission to prove identity did not preclude his ruling that they were sufficiently similar to permit admission to establish intent]; People v. Wilson (1991) 227 C.A.3d 1210, 1217, 278 C.R. 319 [following People v. Nible]; People v. Delgado (1992) 10 C.A.4th 1837, 1845, 13 C.R.2d 703 [same].)

(2) Distinction: Prior Violent Acts Against Victim of Current Crime. People v. Linkenauger (1995) 32 C.A.4th 1603, 38 C.R.2d 868, adopts a lenient standard of admissibility for evidence of prior violent acts directed against the victim of the current offense. Defendant was charged with murdering his wife, and the trial judge admitted evidence of defendant's past violent conduct toward his wife on the issues of intent, motive, and identity. Held, this was proper.

(a) People v. Ewoldt, supra, is distinguishable, and its standards of admissibility are inapplicable here. (1) Ewoldt did not involve a violent crime; (2) the issue in Ewoldt was common design or plan; and (3) the high degree of distinctiveness in the pattern and characteristics of the crimes required by the Ewoldt court to prove identity cannot be required under the present circumstances, because no one can kill the same victim more than once in a highly characteristic fashion. A broader range of evidence should be admissible to show motive, intent, and identity where the prior misconduct and charged offense involve the identical perpetrator and victim. (32 C.A.4th 1613.)

(b) The evidence of marital discord and defendant's prior assaults against the victim had a tendency to show his intent to beat, torture, and ultimately kill her. The evidence was properly admitted to show ill will and motive, and it also supported the inference that it was defendant who committed the charged offense. (32 C.A.4th 1613, 1614.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

88 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

1. Intent, Motive, and Knowledge.

aa. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 88

[§ 88] In General.

Evidence of other offenses is admissible to show criminal intent or knowledge, or motive, where they are disputed by defenses such as mistake, accident, or insanity. (See Ev.C. 1101(b), supra, §75; People v. Dabb (1948) 32 C.2d 491, 499, 197 P.2d 1 [consciousness of guilt]; People v. Raleigh (1948) 83 C.A.2d 435, 440, 189 P.2d 70 [unlawful possession of gun, denied by defendant; evidence of possession of gun on other occasions]; People v. Archerd (1970) 3 C.3d 615, 638, 91 C.R. 397, 477 P.2d 421, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §15; People v. Maler (1972) 23 C.A.3d 973, 978, 100 C.R. 650 [arson and insurance fraud case; evidence of prior fires relevant to show intent, motive, and knowledge, i.e., "familiarity with recovery"]; People v. Terry (1970) 2 C.3d 362, 396, 85 C.R. 409, 466 P.2d 961, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §109, citing the text; People v. Johnson (1991) 233 C.A.3d 425, 444, 284 C.R. 579, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §192 [prosecution for murder of woman defendant had formerly lived with; subsequent beating of wife, considered in light of defendant's simultaneous statement that what happened to victim would happen to wife, was admissible to prove motive, intent, and identity]; People v. Arias (1996) 13 C.4th 92, 130, 131, 51 C.R.2d 770, 913 P.2d 980 [motion to allow defendant to plead guilty to counts arising from one incident, so as to bar evidence of that incident in prosecution of counts arising from other incident, was properly denied; proposed stipulation would prevent prosecution from presenting material circumstantial evidence on consciousness of guilt and identity]; 1 McCormick 5th, §190; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §300; 15 A.L.R.2d 1080 [other acts of abortion]; 64 A.L.R.2d 823 [other acts of gambling].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Harrison (2005) 35 C.4th 208, 230, 25 C.R.3d 224, 106 P.3d 895 [in capital murder case, evidence of defendant's attempt to kill man to whom he had admitted both charged murders was properly admitted to show his consciousness of guilt]; People v. Walker (2006) 139 C.A.4th 782, 804, 805, 43 C.R.3d 257 [in prosecution for murder of prostitute, similarity between prior rape and beating (of another prostitute) and charged crime was sufficient for admission of prior crime on issue of identity, while lesser similarity between prior sexual assault (on another prostitute) and charged crime was sufficient for admission on issues of motive and intent; but evidence of third prior crime (rape of non-prostitute) was inadmissible, as there was little similarity to charged crime]; 1 McCormick 6th, §190.

89 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

1. Intent, Motive, and Knowledge.

bb. Criminal Intent.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 89

[§ 89] Criminal Intent.

Prior offenses are frequently admitted to show criminal intent and negative the defense of lack of such intent. (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §302; 78 A.L.R.2d 1359 [false pretenses]; 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 468, 476.) The following cases are illustrative:

People v. Wells (1949) 33 C.2d 330, 342, 202 P.2d 53 [assault on guard by defendant prisoner; prior threats and attacks on guards and other prison officials were admissible to show "malice aforethought" and to negative claim of accident or self-defense].

People v. McCaughan (1957) 49 C.2d 409, 421, 317 P.2d 974 [involuntary manslaughter of psychiatric patient by hospital technician; prior mistreatment of patient was relevant on intent].

People v. Zankich (1961) 189 C.A.2d 54, 62, 11 C.R. 115 [in murder prosecution, evidence of unprovoked batteries by defendant within 24 hours of charged killing was admissible to show absence of provocation and infliction of injury with malice].

People v. Claborn (1964) 224 C.A.2d 38, 43, 36 C.R. 132 [previous fights with police were admissible to rebut defense that charged assault on police officer was inadvertent].

People v. Terry (1970) 2 C.3d 362, 396, 85 C.R. 409, 466 P.2d 961, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §109, citing the text [to rebut defendant's claim that she first acted out of ignorance and then out of fear, evidence that she had participated in prior robbery with codefendant was admissible].

People v. Foster (1974) 36 C.A.3d 594, 599, 111 C.R. 666 [defendant, charged with selling restricted dangerous drugs, relied on entrapment defense; evidence of prior conviction of possession for sale was properly admitted to show preexisting intent].

People v. Nible (1988) 200 C.A.3d 838, 848, 247 C.R. 396 [in burglary prosecution, testimony offered by defense that defendant was intoxicated immediately after commission of offense placed intent in issue so as to allow admission of prior incidents].

People v. Hayes (1990) 52 C.3d 577, 617, 276 C.R. 874, 802 P.2d 376 [other assault and robbery were admissible to prove that defendant intended to rob murder victim when he assaulted and killed him, based on striking similarities between two groups of offenses].

People v. Memro (1995) 11 C.4th 786, 864, 47 C.R.2d 219, 905 P.2d 1305 [in prosecution for murder of three boys in which there was evidence one victim had been molested, photographs and magazines, possessed by defendant and depicting clothed and unclothed youths, were properly admitted to show defendant's intent to molest].

People v. Brandon (1995) 32 C.A.4th 1033, 1049, 38 C.R.2d 751 [because defendant's actions (threatening victim with weapon and having her move to passenger seat of her car) were otherwise ambiguous, evidence as to his previous robberies was properly admitted to show intent to rob].

People v. Singh (1995) 37 C.A.4th 1343, 1380, 44 C.R.2d 644 [in prosecution arising from fraudulently staged automobile accidents, evidence of uncharged "accidents" was admissible to negate accident or inadvertence and establish intent as to charged offenses].

People v. McCray (1997) 58 C.A.4th 159, 172, 67 C.R.2d 872 [in prosecution based on defendant's alleged stalking of his wife, defendant's past violent conduct toward wife was admissible to show his intent to place her in fear for her safety and to prove that wife was reasonably caused to be in fear].

In People v. Lint (1960) 182 C.A.2d 402, 6 C.R. 95, defendant was charged with murder of the 41/2-year-old daughter of the woman with whom he was living. The evidence included testimony of the victim's cries, thuds against the wall, and multiple injuries that could not have come from a fall down the stairs (which defendant contended was the cause of death). A neighbor testified that, 2 days before, she heard defendant quarreling with the mother, the child victim crying, and the mother saying, "Don't hit her again, Bill." Held, the testimony was relevant. (a) It contradicted defendant's theory of death by accident, because it tended to show a course of conduct or pattern of behavior. (182 C.A.2d 415, citing a number of decisions admitting beatings, fights, arguments, threats, etc., for this purpose.) (b) The prosecution's theory was murder by torture, and the evidence had a bearing on this issue. (182 C.A.2d 416.)

In People v. Denis (1990) 224 C.A.3d 563, 273 C.R. 724, R, defendant's accomplice, shot and killed J, whom defendant and R were attempting to rob while selling him drugs. Defendant's prior admission that he and R had robbed prospective drug purchasers at the same site on four or five previous occasions was admitted into evidence over defendant's objection. Held, this was proper.

(a) Because defendant testified that he had no intent to rob J, but rather that he accepted R's invitation to join in a robbery only to humor R, who was known to be unpredictably violent, defendant's intent was the central disputed issue at the trial. The evidence of the prior robberies was relevant to this issue; it can be logically inferred that a person who acts similarly in similar situations probably has the same intent in each instance. (224 C.A.3d 568.)

(b) The prior robberies were sufficiently similar to the charged offense because they were perpetrated at the same location and involved potential drug purchasers. The fact that neither defendant nor R shot anyone during the prior offenses hardly destroys the logical inference that defendant intended to rob J also. (224 C.A.3d 568.)

(c) The evidence of the prior robberies was not unduly prejudicial (see supra, §17). The trial judge could properly find that its probative value on the primary disputed issue of intent outweighed its potential for undue prejudice. And defendant, having admitted that he was a cocaine dealer, and having been impeached by evidence of multiple felony convictions, could hardly argue that, in the absence of the prior robberies evidence, the jury would have regarded him as an honest and upright citizen. (224 C.A.3d 568.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Steele (2002) 27 C.4th 1230, 1244, 1245, 120 C.R.2d 432, 47 P.3d 225 [in capital murder trial, evidence of defendant's prior murder was properly admitted on question of his mental state; under doctrine of chances, fact that defendant killed twice under similar circumstances was logically probative of whether second killing was premeditated, even if no independent evidence existed that first killing was premeditated]; People v. Yeoman (2003) 31 C.4th 93, 121, 122, 2 C.R.3d 186, 72 P.3d 1166 [in capital murder trial in which prosecution, in order to establish robbery-murder special circumstance, was required to prove that defendant harbored intent to rob victim before killing her, trial judge did not err in admitting evidence of prior robbery by defendant; "Good Samaritan" ploy used by defendant in prior offense was similar to his conduct in charged offense]; People v. Demetrulias (2006) 39 C.4th 1, 14, 45 C.R.3d 407, 137 P.3d 229 [in capital murder prosecution in which defendant was charged with entering older man's home and fatally stabbing him, and in which defendant claimed self-defense, evidence of defendant's attack on another elderly man the same evening was properly admitted to show intent (robbery) and lack of justification]; People v. Miller (2000) 81 C.A.4th 1427, 1447, 1448, 97 C.R.2d 684 [in prosecution for grand theft by false pretenses involving two elderly victims, evidence of defendants' role in three prior incidents involving elderly men was properly admitted; whether defendants harbored requisite intent to defraud one victim was disputed material issue, and prior incidents had strong tendency to prove they had intent]; People v. Zepeda (2001) 87 C.A.4th 1183, 1212, 105 C.R.2d 187, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, Supp., §348 [in murder prosecution arising from gang-related shooting, evidence that defendant had previously committed gang-related drive-by shooting was properly admitted on issues of intent and motive]; People v. Hawkins (2002) 98 C.A.4th 1428, 1443, 121 C.R.2d 627 [in prosecution arising from defendant's having taken source code from computer system of former employer, admission of evidence that defendant had also stored another company's copyrighted operating system on his computer was not error; evidence as to prior offense was relevant to intent, as it negated inference of inadvertence]; People v. Ortiz (2003) 109 C.A.4th 104, 117, 118, 134 C.R.2d 467 [in murder prosecution arising from vehicular collision, evidence of past incidents of defendant's drunk driving was properly admitted to prove wanton disregard of human life in support of implied malice finding, even though intoxication was not involved in charged offense]; People v. Burnett (2003) 110 C.A.4th 868, 880, 881, 2 C.R.3d 120 [in prosecution for animal cruelty arising from incident in which defendant reached into car that had just rear-ended him, pulled out driver's dog, and threw it into crowded roadway, trial judge did not err in tentatively ruling that, if defendant raised defense of mistake or involuntary act (based on claim that dog first bit him and held onto his hand), prosecution could present evidence of prior incident in which defendant beat dog to death]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.371 et seq.

90 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

1. Intent, Motive, and Knowledge.

cc. Knowledge.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 90

[§ 90] Knowledge.

Where knowledge is an element of the crime charged (see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §8), prior similar offenses may be admitted to establish it. (See People v. Torres (1950) 98 C.A.2d 189, 192, 219 P.2d 480 [charge of illegal possession of marijuana; evidence of prior confiscation of car for carrying it, showing guilty knowledge]; People v. Linyard (1957) 151 C.A.2d 50, 55, 311 P.2d 57 [charge of possession of narcotics; prior misdemeanor conviction to show knowledge of narcotic nature of drug possessed]; People v. Horn (1960) 187 C.A.2d 68, 75, 9 C.R. 578 [other narcotic offenses to show knowledge of narcotic character of object possessed]; People v. Cancimilla (1961) 197 C.A.2d 242, 252, 17 C.R. 498 [knowledge of narcotics]; People v. Soto (1966) 245 C.A.2d 401, 406, 53 C.R. 832 [other offenses to show knowledge of character of narcotics]; People v. McCarnes (1986) 179 C.A.3d 525, 532, 224 C.R. 846 [second degree murder prosecution arising out of drunk driving collision; defendant's four prior drunk driving convictions to establish implied malice by showing that defendant knew his conduct was dangerous]; People v. Johnson (1994) 30 C.A.4th 286, 290, 291, 36 C.R.2d 4 [following People v. McCarnes]; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §301; 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 477.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.370

91 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

1. Intent, Motive, and Knowledge.

dd. Motive.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 91

[§ 91] Motive.

Where motive is relevant (see infra, §119), it may sometimes be shown by other criminal acts. (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §306; 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 471, 476.) The following cases are illustrative:

People v. David (1939) 12 C.2d 639, 647, 86 P.2d 811 [prior acts reasonably close in time, and exhibiting deliberate plan, were properly admitted to show sane motive, where defense was insanity].

People v. Gonzales (1948) 87 C.A.2d 867, 877, 198 P.2d 81 ["evidence having a direct tendency, in view of the surrounding circumstances, to prove motive on the part of a person to commit the homicide, and thus to solve a doubt either as to the identity of the slayer, the degree of the offense, the insanity of the accused, or the justification or excusability of his act, is admissible, however discreditable it may reflect upon the defendant, and even where it may show him guilty of other crimes"].

People v. Buice (1964) 230 C.A.2d 324, 341, 40 C.R. 877, citing the text [prior quarrel with police was admissible to show motive for later assault on other officers].

People v. Lopez (1969) 1 C.A.3d 78, 85, 81 C.R. 386, infra, §119 [fight between defendant and victim's brother, and prosecution for that offense, were admissible as showing motive for later assault on victim].

People v. Zack (1986) 184 C.A.3d 409, 413, 415, 229 C.R. 317 [evidence of defendant's prior assaults on victim was admissible as proof of motive to commit murder].

People v. Gallego (1990) 52 C.3d 115, 171, 276 C.R. 679, 802 P.2d 169 [first degree murder and kidnaping prosecution; prior killings were admissible to prove motive and to disprove diminished capacity].

People v. Daniels (1991) 52 C.3d 815, 857, 277 C.R. 122, 802 P.2d 906 [first degree murder of two police officers by use of firearm; prior bank robbery, in which defendant exchanged gunfire with police and was rendered a paraplegic, was admissible to prove motive].

People v. Padilla (1995) 11 C.4th 891, 925, 47 C.R.2d 426, 906 P.2d 388 [first degree murder; defendant's prior shooting of his stepdaughter, who, he believed, together with victim of charged murder, had stolen drugs from him, was relevant to prove motive of revenge in charged offense].

People v. Kelley (1997) 52 C.A.4th 568, 578, 579, 60 C.R.2d 653, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §143 [in stalking prosecution, defendant's prior conviction of molesting stalking victim was admissible to show motive of placing victim in fear].

People v. Barnett (1998) 17 C.4th 1044, 1118, 1119, 74 C.R.2d 121, 954 P.2d 384 [in murder prosecution, evidence of prior violent struggle between defendant and victim was properly admitted for purpose of shedding light on roots of defendant's hostility toward victim and demonstrating motive for victim's torture and murder].

In People v. Pertsoni (1985) 172 C.A.3d 369, 218 C.R. 350, defendant, an Albanian, was charged with murdering a man he claimed worked for the Yugoslav secret police. To rebut defendant's claim of self-defense, the prosecution was permitted to introduce evidence that 5 years earlier, while participating in a demonstration at the Yugoslav consulate, defendant had fired four shots at a man he thought was the Yugoslav Ambassador. Held, the ruling was proper. (a) The evidence showed the extremes to which defendant's hatred of the Yugoslav Government would take him; hence, "the distinctive similarity of the victims' assumed affiliation with the Yugoslav government was sufficient to satisfy the relevancy requirement." (172 C.A.3d 374.) (b) Because defendant's commission of the murder was not disputed and his state of mind was the sole issue for the jury, the probative value of the evidence exceeded its prejudicial effect. (172 C.A.3d 375.)

In People v. Funes (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1506, 28 C.R.2d 758, defendant was charged with second degree murder and participating in a criminal street gang. Defendant moved to sever the street gang charges on the ground that evidence of gang affiliation and activity would be prejudicial on the murder charge. The trial judge denied the motion, finding that the street gang evidence would be admissible even if the street gang offense had not been charged and therefore it would come in in any event. Held, affirmed. It is proper to introduce evidence of gang affiliation and activity where that evidence is relevant to an issue of motive or intent. That evidence was clearly relevant to defendant's motive for attacking the murder victim and his intent in doing so. Even though some of the gang incidents did not directly involve defendant, they were relevant to the motive of retaliation, and they were arguably less prejudicial to defendant than those incidents in which he took an active role. (23 C.A.4th 1518, 1519.)

An illustration of how far this exception can go is furnished by People v. Sykes (1955) 44 C.2d 166, 280 P.2d 869. Defendant was charged with furnishing marijuana to B, a minor, and B testified that defendant handed her cigarettes to smoke. Over objection she also testified at length that defendant had recruited her as a prostitute. The prosecution's theory was that defendant had a plan or scheme (infra, §92) to reduce B to drug addiction so as to dominate her as a prostitute. The court, however, held the evidence admissible on the issue of motive; i.e., B did not pay for the cigarette, and the reason for giving it to her was the relationship of pimp and prostitute. (44 C.2d 170.) The dissenting opinion argued that the scheme to dominate her as a prostitute was wholly unproved, and that there was no reasonable basis for inferring this motive from pimping; the motive could have been to share the enjoyment of the cigarette.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Rogers (2006) 39 C.4th 826, 862, 48 C.R.3d 1, 141 P.3d 135 [in capital murder case, trial judge properly admitted rebuttal evidence concerning defendant's termination from sheriff's department as result of complaint made by prostitute, and his subsequent reinstatement; defendant was charged with murder of two prostitutes, and rebuttal evidence was admissible on issue of motive (that he committed charged murders to prevent victims from reporting him)]; Rufo v. Simpson (2001) 86 C.A.4th 573, 585, 586, 103 C.R.2d 492 [in wrongful death action arising from murder of defendant's former wife, prior instances of defendant's abuse of victim were properly admitted to show motive, intent, and identity; requirement of distinctive modus operandi does not apply where prior and charged acts involve same perpetrator and same victim]; People v. Butler (2005) 127 C.A.4th 49, 61, 25 C.R.3d 154 [in murder prosecution, evidence of incident occurring at party 5 days before murder, which incident involved defendant being chased by group that included youth who would become murder victim, was properly admitted to show motive for what otherwise would have appeared to be unprovoked attack by defendant on victim]; 34 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 439 [examining problems arising from use of uncharged misconduct to prove motive]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.371 et seq.

92 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

2. Common Plan or Scheme.

aa. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 92

[§ 92] In General.

(1) Nature of Exception. Other offenses may be admitted where they are similar to, and connected with, the crime charged so as to disclose a general plan or system of criminal acts. The principal purpose of this kind of evidence is to identify the defendant as the perpetrator of the crime charged. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §190; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §321 et seq.; 23 Cal. L. Rev. 530; 5 Hastings L. J. 76; 13 So. Cal. L. Rev. 511; 7 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 472, 477; 64 A.L.R.2d 823 [other acts of gambling]; 87 A.L.R.2d 891 [other fires].)

However, the mere fact that the defendant committed similar offenses does not make the exception applicable; this loose interpretation would undermine the basic exclusionary rule. The notion of "common plan" refers to a methodology or peculiar behavior pattern. (See People v. Chambers (1964) 231 C.A.2d 23, 31, 41 C.R. 551 ["the phrase is confined to the notion of modus operandi, a characteristic method or plan pursued by a defendant in the performance of repeated criminal acts"]; People v. Scheer (1998) 68 C.A.4th 1009, 1021, 80 C.R.2d 676 [in prosecution for felony hit-and-run, circumstances of defendant's prior conviction of fleeing police officers was not admissible under common scheme exception; although prior and current offenses were similar, each was spur-of-moment response to unexpected event].)

(2) Illustrations. The cases admitting evidence under this exception are exceedingly numerous. (See People v. Lisenba (1939) 14 C.2d 403, 427, 94 P.2d 569 [in prosecution for murder of defendant's wife for purpose of collecting insurance money, evidence of death, under suspicious circumstances, of defendant's previous wife, while insured in defendant's favor, was properly admitted]; People v. Houston (1963) 219 C.A.2d 187, 194, 33 C.R. 26, citing the text [similar modus operandi in robbery]; People v. Griffin (1967) 66 C.2d 459, 464, 58 C.R. 107, 426 P.2d 507 [behavior pattern: defendant became acquainted with man having common-law wife, used acquaintance for invitation to home and attack on woman in man's absence; admissible to show intent to rape victim]; People v. Kerry (1967) 249 C.A.2d 246, 252, 57 C.R. 289 [charge of indecent exposure at laundromat, defense of accidental fall of draped towel; evidence of other exposures in laundromats]; People v. Haston (1968) 69 C.2d 233, 245, 70 C.R. 419, 444 P.2d 91, infra, §94; People v. Weisberg (1968) 265 C.A.2d 476, 479, 71 C.R. 157, citing the text [prosecution of mother for murder of 7-week-old son; evidence of similar injuries to defendant's other child, showing peculiar behavior pattern]; People v. Ward (1968) 266 C.A.2d 241, 255, 72 C.R. 46, quoting the text [similar murder]; People v. Rodriguez (1970) 10 C.A.3d 18, 33, footnote 8, 88 C.R. 789 [prior thefts and charged theft committed at approximately same time of day, in same general locale, with same general sequence of events and taking of same general type of item]; People v. Lynn (1971)

16 C.A.3d 259, 267, 94 C.R. 16 [modus operandi in prior escape from custody was different from charged escape attempt, but chronology indicated that defendants jointly formulated common plan to escape]; People v. Utter (1972) 24 C.A.3d 535, 551, 101 C.R. 214 [evidence of uncharged fraudulent real estate transaction was properly admitted to show defendant's customary modus operandi: victims were elderly women, defendant used fictitious names for himself]; People v. Gillard (1997) 57 C.A.4th 136, 160, 66 C.R.2d 790 [in prosecution for workers' compensation fraud, evidence that defendant had concealed prior series of injuries when he sought benefits from prior employer was admissible to show his concealment on present occasion was not mistake but part of common scheme].) (On statutory rules for admission of defendant's prior sexual offenses or acts of domestic violence, see infra, §§97, 98.)

In People v. Grimes (1952) 113 C.A.2d 365, 372, 248 P.2d 130, defendant was convicted of burglary of a drugstore. Prior convictions of the same crime were held properly admitted. (a) Each case involved burglary of a drugstore (except one hardware store). (b) The modus operandi in gaining admission was the same: kicking or smashing a glass door. (c) Defendant's main purpose was to rifle cash registers for change. (d) He always took liquor before and after the event. (e) Each burglary indicated a similarly planned time and place. (f) A taxi was used as the means of transportation and the place for counting and changing small money into larger. (See 5 Hastings L. J. 77 [criticizing case as unduly extending the exception].)

In People v. Garnica (1981) 121 C.A.3d 727, 734, 175 C.R. 521, defendant, a member of a criminal organization, was convicted of the murder of an enemy of the organization. Evidence of a prior assault was properly admitted to show a common plan or design. (a) The two offenses occurred in the same city, 1 week apart; (b) both offenses occurred at defendant's direction and involved the same "hit man"; and (c) both offenses were committed to eliminate an enemy of the organization. The following differences were held insufficient to deprive the evidence of its substantial probative value: (a) Defendant participated in the earlier offense, but not in the charged offense; (b) the victim in the charged offense was a lone male, whereas the prior offense involved a woman and her brother; (c) the victim of the charged offense was a member of an enemy organization, whereas the victims of the prior attack were not so identified; and (d) the victim of the charged offense was shot, while the victims of the earlier attack were stabbed.

In People v. Sully (1991) 53 C.3d 1195, 283 C.R. 144, 812 P.2d 163, defendant was charged with murdering six prostitutes in his warehouse. The trial judge admitted evidence of other crimes committed by defendant on other victims consisting of (a) imprisonment and sadomasochistic acts; (b) luring a woman, Louisa, to the warehouse, forcing her to have sex with him and beating her when she tried to escape; and (c) engaging in sex with Christina, a prostitute. Held, these rulings were proper.

(a) Imprisonment and Sadomasochistic Acts. The prosecution sought to present this evidence because it included bondage and beating episodes, and one of the murder victims had undergone a similar ordeal. Defendant conceded the evidence was relevant to this murder victim, but asserted it was irrelevant to the other murder charges. However, the evidence was relevant to the issues of the identity and intent of the perpetrator of each of the six murders. Each murder occurred in defendant's warehouse, the five female victims were found nude, suggesting sexual motivation, and several of the victims were bound or physically abused. Illicit sex, cocaine and the abuse of prostitutes were common to all crimes, and thus a pattern was sufficient to support the admission of evidence of the other crimes. Moreover, the trial judge properly weighed the probative value of the evidence against its prejudicial effect (see supra, §17 et seq.). (53 C.3d 1224, 1225.)

(b) Louisa Crime. This evidence was relevant, because defendant admitted that he had killed two of the murder victims to compensate for disappointing an accomplice to the murders by not killing Louisa. Also the evidence showed both intent and modus operandi, because the principal difference between the Louisa incident and the two murders was merely the outcome that Louisa was not killed. (53 C.3d 1225, 1226.)

(c) Christina Crime. During this incident, Christina observed defendant retrieving some white rope from his truck and hiding it behind a couch in his warehouse. The murders had occurred in the warehouse, one of the victims was bound with similar rope, and more similar rope was found in defendant's van. Thus the evidence was relevant, and properly admitted, because it showed that defendant had access to white cotton rope at the warehouse. (53 C.3d 1226.)

(3) Doctrine of Chances. In People v. Erving (1998) 63 C.A.4th 652, 73 C.R.2d 815, defendant was convicted of arson and attempt to burn in a trial in which the judge admitted evidence of 40 uncharged fires that had occurred in neighborhoods where defendant lived. Held, affirmed. "Few, if any, arson fires occurred in those immediate neighborhoods before appellant lived in them and they stopped when she moved. Appellant's proximity to nearly 40 arson fires in these circumstances provides the 'signature' required for the uncharged fires to be relevant to prove her identity as the arsonist." (63 C.A.4th 661.) Moreover, it was not improper for the trial judge to rely on the "doctrine of chances" in deciding to admit this evidence, and the prosecutor properly argued the doctrine to the jury. Under the doctrine of chances, it is extremely unlikely that an innocent person would live near so many arson fires occurring so frequently in so many different neighborhoods. The jury could logically infer from the uncharged fires that defendant was the arsonist; this inference is purely objective and has nothing to do with a subjective assessment of defendant's character. (63 C.A.4th 663.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Nature of Exception. See 1 McCormick 6th, §190.

(2) Illustrations. See People v. Carter (2005) 36 C.4th 1114, 1149, 32 C.R.3d 759, 117 P.3d 476 [shared characteristics of three charged killings and two uncharged ones, as well as presence of evidence associated with each victim at events related to next victim in series of murders, indicated that when defendant committed crimes charged in current case as well as uncharged crimes, he acted pursuant to common plan to kill and steal from his victims]; People v. Earley (2004) 122 C.A.4th 542, 547, 18 C.R.3d 694 [in prosecution for possession of marijuana for sale arising out of incident in which police apprehended defendant near Dumpster and found marijuana on him, in Dumpster, and nearby, evidence that defendant had been found 1 month earlier in same location with marijuana on his person and nearby was properly admitted as showing both common plan and intent]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.372 et seq.

93 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

2. Common Plan or Scheme.

bb. Interconnected Offenses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 93

[§ 93] Interconnected Offenses.

Other offenses may be shown where several crimes are interconnected so that proof of the others tends to establish the crime charged, or proof of one necessarily involves proof of the others. (People v. Ciulla (1919) 44 C.A. 719, 722, 187 P. 46 [where defendant abducted girl for purpose of rape, evidence of abduction was admissible on trial for rape, as part of an indivisible criminal transaction]; People v. Hunt (1936) 17 C.A.2d 284, 286, 61 P.2d 1208 [committing lewd acts on child; similar acts on playmates of victim at same time and place]; People v. Lynn (1971) 16 C.A.3d 259, 268, 94 C.R. 16 [prior escape from custody was part of continuing escape plan]; see 28 Cal. L. Rev. 516.)

Thus, in People v. Jackson (1950) 36 C.2d 281, 285, 223 P.2d 236, defendant pleaded guilty to murder and prior convictions. A hearing was held to determine the degree of the crime, after the probation officer had recommended life imprisonment. The trial judge admitted evidence of defendant's confession, in which he described a prior holdup about a week before the homicide, making several references to the later homicide and the use of the same shotgun. Held, this was proper.

In People v. Carmen (1954) 43 C.2d 342, 345, 273 P.2d 521, defendant was tried for the murder of W. Evidence was offered of the prior shooting of A, a member of the same family, after a threat to kill the whole family. Held, the shooting of A was part of the same transaction in which W was killed, and was also relevant on the issue of intent in shooting W.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

94 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

2. Common Plan or Scheme.

cc. Marks Distinctive: Evidence Admissible.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 94

[§ 94] Marks Distinctive: Evidence Admissible.

"[T]he inference of identity arises when the marks common to the charged and uncharged offenses, considered singly or in combination, logically operate to set the charged and uncharged offenses apart from other crimes of the same general variety and, in so doing, tend to suggest that the perpetrator of the uncharged offenses was the perpetrator of the charged offenses." (People v. Haston (1968) 69 C.2d 233, 246, 70 C.R. 419, 444 P.2d 91.)

In the Haston case, department stores were robbed by two armed and masked men. Defendant and M were charged with the robberies, and M pleaded guilty. The evidence against defendant was an identification in a police lineup, and other offenses--two prior restaurant robberies committed by defendant and M. Defendant admitted the prior robberies, but offered an alibi on the crime charged, and M testified that defendant was not his accomplice in the crime charged. The conviction of defendant was reversed for error under Griffin v. California (1965) 380 U.S. 609, 85 S.Ct. 1229, 14 L.Ed.2d 106, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §433, but admission of the other offenses was held proper.

(a) Common marks in this case. The prior offenses and crime charged were similar in that the offenses were committed when the place was closed for business but employees were present; the robbers were two armed Caucasian men of middle height who wore handkerchiefs over their faces; they came in through the employees' entrance; they forced employees to lie face down on the floor; they did not physically injure any employee; one robber held the employees at bay, the other took money from the safe. (69 C.2d 247.)

(b) One sufficient mark. None of these was of the distinctive nature necessary to raise the inference; they are shared by many armed robberies. (69 C.2d 248.) The common mark which supported admission of the evidence was the presence of M as one of the perpetrators of the prior and charged offenses. Because defendant and his alibi witnesses and M all testified that defendant was not M's accomplice, evidence that on at least two other occasions defendant had been M's partner in similar robberies had great probative value. (69 C.2d 249.)

People v. Thornton (1974) 11 C.3d 738, 114 C.R. 467, 523 P.2d 267, summarized the Haston rule as follows: "To recapitulate, only common marks having some degree of distinctiveness tend to raise an inference of identity and thereby invest other-crimes evidence with probative value. The strength of the inference in any case depends upon two factors: (1) the degree of distinctiveness of individual shared marks, and (2) the number of minimally distinctive shared marks." (11 C.3d 756.) (See People v. Malich (1971) 15 C.A.3d 253, 266, 93 C.R. 87 [following Haston]; People v.

Alvarez (1975) 44 C.A.3d 375, 383, footnote 8, 118 C.R. 602 ["It is fair to say that all California cases on the point which antedate Haston are suspect and must be re-examined in the light of that case"]; People v. Donnell (1975) 52 C.A.3d 762, 773, 125 C.R. 310 [uncharged bank robbery was sufficiently similar to charged bank robbery to justify admission, e.g., three men in each robbery with same physical description, use of stolen getaway cars (found abandoned with ignition out), shorter robber jumped over teller's counter, men wore homemade hoods from same grey sweatshirt-like material]; People v. Rodriguez (1977) 68 C.A.3d 874, 883, 885, 886, 137 C.R. 594; People v. Haslouer (1978) 79 C.A.3d 818, 826, 145 C.R. 234; People v. Jackson (1980) 102 C.A.3d 620, 625, 162 C.R. 574; People v. Tassell (1984) 36 C.3d 77, 86, 201 C.R. 567, 679 P.2d 1 [pointing out that Haston was "a watershed decision" that overruled many cases]; People v. Medina (1995) 11 C.4th 694, 748, 47 C.R.2d 165, 906 P.2d 2 [in murder prosecution, admission of uncharged murders was justified; both charged and uncharged offenses involved robbery and murder of convenience store employee, each victim was shot in head execution-style, and ballistics reports indicated use of same handgun, later traced to defendant]; People v. Robinson (1995) 31 C.A.4th 494, 503, 37 C.R.2d 183 [following People v. Ewoldt (1994) 7 C.4th 380, 27 C.R.2d 646, 867 P.2d 757, infra, §96; in arson prosecution alleging that defendant and juvenile burned house, testimony that they burned car three nights earlier was properly admitted as establishing common "mark," but rebuttal testimony that juvenile set two previous fires alone was improperly excluded]; People v. Kipp (1998) 18 C.4th 349, 370, 371, 75 C.R.2d 716, 956 P.2d 1169 [in capital murder and rape case, common features shared by charged offense and prior rape-murder by defendant revealed highly distinctive pattern, making prior offense admissible on issue of identity; similarities were also sufficient for admissibility to show common design or plan and intent].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Kraft (2000) 23 C.4th 978, 1061, 1062, 99 C.R.2d 1, 5 P.3d 68 [in capital trial for numerous homicides, instruction on modus operandi was proper even though victims were killed under varying circumstances, where certain unique circumstances were common to two or more murders; task of determining degree of distinctiveness and number of circumstances necessary to establish defendant's identity was for jury; following People v. Thornton (1974) 11 C.3d 738, 114 C.R. 467, 523 P.2d 267, text, p. 438]; People v. Catlin (2001) 26 C.4th 81, 120, 121, 109 C.R.2d 31, 26 P.3d 357, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, Supp., §188 [in capital murder prosecution in which there was evidence that both victims (defendant's mother and fourth wife) died of paraquat poisoning, evidence that fifth wife also died of paraquat poisoning was admissible to show identity and common plan; it was also proper to use this evidence to bolster evidence indicating that paraquat was fourth wife's cause of death]; People v. Gray (2005) 37 C.4th 168, 203, 33 C.R.3d 451, 118 P.3d 496 [in capital murder case in which defendant was accused of sexually assaulting and fatally beating elderly woman, prior offense involving elderly woman and her granddaughter was properly admitted on issue of identity, where it was "eerily similar" to charged offense; evidence was not rendered inadmissible on issue of intent by fact that defendant did not kill prior victims, as he proclaimed his readiness to do so]; People v. Prince (2007) 40 C.4th 1179, 1270, 57 C.R.3d 543, 156 P.3d 1015 [in prosecution for murder of six young women, witness' testimony that defendant had followed her home at midday and stared at her as she entered her apartment was properly admitted; behavior witness described was similar to that of assailant in two of charged murders, and thus trial judge could properly conclude that it was relevant to identity and showed common scheme or plan].

95 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

e. Illustrations of Admissible Evidence.

2. Common Plan or Scheme.

dd. Marks Not Distinctive: Evidence Inadmissible.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 95

[§ 95] Marks Not Distinctive: Evidence Inadmissible.

A number of decisions have held the evidence inadmissible because the test of identity was not met. (See People v. Crawford (1969) 273 C.A.2d 868, 874, 78 C.R. 628 [evidence of subsequent robbery was improper to show modus operandi; two persons participated in charged robbery, three in subsequent crime]; People v. Zisner (1969) 275 C.A.2d 660, 668, 80 C.R. 184, citing the text [no evidence that footprint found near window of nearby residence where attempted burglary occurred matched footprint found near window of burglarized residence]; People v. Alvarez (1975) 44 C.A.3d 375, 385, 118 C.R. 602 [similarities between earlier statutory rape of 13-year-old and later forced rape of 14-year-old were simply "necessary concomitants" of the crime, rather than distinctive marks tying defendant to both crimes]; People v. Antick (1975) 15 C.3d 79, 94, 123 C.R. 475, 539 P.2d 43 [fact that charged and uncharged offenses involved removal of personal property from private residence during owner's absence "cannot seriously be asserted as a distinctive and signature-like feature"; nor was evidence introduced to show uncharged offense was committed by defendant and deceased suspect in concert, to show they were crime partners in series of burglaries]; People v. Guerrero (1976) 16 C.3d 719, 728, 129 C.R. 166, 548 P.2d 366, supra, §84 [aimless cruising and drinking beer were not distinctive earmarks of criminal behavior linking earlier rape with charged murder]; Williams v. Superior Court (1984) 36 C.3d 441, 450, 204 C.R. 700, 683 P.2d 699 [two shootings, differing in location, time, date, number of people involved, and method; factor of common gang membership was of limited probative value and involved danger of prejudice]; People v. Felix (1993) 14 C.A.4th 997, 1005, 1006, 18 C.R.2d 113 [in robbery prosecution, evidence that defendants had pleaded guilty to prior robbery they committed together was not admissible; their alleged propensity to rob in concert added too little distinctiveness to qualify as criminal signature].)

In People v. Banks (1970) 2 C.3d 127, 84 C.R. 367, 465 P.2d 263, the only possibly distinctive mark was the language used by the robber who demanded money in each crime, i.e., "Give me what you got" compared with "Give it up. ... Your money." But the person speaking was different in each offense. "Thus, even if the language used in each robbery had been identical, rather than merely similar, any inference of identity would have to depend on the doubtful proposition that one who uses certain language in one robbery tends to associate in criminal activity with other persons who use the same language." (2 C.3d 139.)

In People v. Rivera (1985) 41 C.3d 388, 221 C.R. 562, 710 P.2d 362, defendant was charged with the felony murder of a man who was stabbed to death by one of four youths he followed after they had stolen beer from a convenience store. The prosecution introduced evidence of an armed robbery conviction a year and a half before the murder to show identity, knowledge, and common scheme and design. The following nine "highly distinctive similarities" were asserted: (a) both crimes occurred on a Friday night; (b) both occurred at approximately 11:30 p.m.; (c) both involved convenience stores; (d) both stores were located in the same city; (e) both stores were on street corners; (f) both crimes involved three perpetrators; (g) both crimes involved getaway vehicles; (h) prior to both crimes, two or three people were seen outside the store; and (i) in both cases, defendant used an alibi defense. Held, admission of the evidence was reversible error.

"Taken alone or together, however, these characteristics are not sufficiently unique or distinctive so as to demonstrate a 'signature' or other indication that defendant perpetrated both crimes. Convenience stores are often on street corners and are prime targets for crimes; undoubtedly many of these offenses occur late on Friday evenings and involve a getaway car and more than one perpetrator; finally, alibi is a common defense. Moreover, the dissimilarities between the two crimes are significant: (1) the prior offense was an armed robbery, a crime against the person, whereas the charged offense was planned as a burglary, a crime against property; (2) the prior crime involved the taking of money, while the charged crime involved the taking of beer; (3) the coperpetrators in each case were different. In addition, in an attempt to reduce the prejudicial effect of the evidence, the court excluded any mention that guns were used in the prior offense, which further distinguishes it from the present crime, involving no firearm. In short, the prior offense was a robbery at gunpoint; the charged crime was a 'snatch' burglary plus a stabbing." (41 C.3d 392, 393.)

In People v. Nottingham (1985) 172 C.A.3d 484, 221 C.R. 1, defendant was charged with first degree murder under the felony-murder rule. On the theory that the murder took place in the course of an attempted rape, the prosecution introduced evidence of a rape by defendant 5 years before the murder. The asserted similarities were: (a) both victims were young women who were casual acquaintances of defendant; (b) both victims resided in the same neighborhood as defendant; (c) both attacks occurred in remote locations; (d) each victim had force applied to her neck and her clothing ripped. Held, the marks were not distinctive to the point that logically inferred identity. The ripping of clothes and application of force to the victim's neck are common in rapes, while the degree of force used in the two offenses was substantially different: the victim in the earlier attack was not beaten and was only startled, not injured, by defendant's hand on her neck, while the victim in this offense was savagely beaten and strangled to death with her blouse. (172 C.A.3d 500.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

96 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

f. Admissibility in Sex Crime Cases.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 96

[§ 96] In General.

(1) Early Cases: Traditional Exceptions Applied. Prior to People v. Tassell (1984) 36 C.3d 77, 201 C.R. 567, 679 P.2d 1, and subsequent legislative enactments (see infra, §97), the character evidence exceptions applied in other cases were generally applied in sex crimes cases as well. The illustrations are numerous:

(a) Intent or motive. (See People v. Sylvia (1960) 54 C.2d 115, 116, 4 C.R. 509, 351 P.2d 781; People v. Kelley (1967) 66 C.2d 232, 242, 57 C.R. 363, 424 P.2d 947; People v. Salazar (1983) 144 C.A.3d 799, 809, 193 C.R. 1 [because defendant in forcible rape case relied on defense of consent, his intent was in issue; hence, evidence that defendant had raped other women under similar circumstances was admissible]; but see People v. Buchel (1956) 141 C.A.2d 91, 97, 296 P.2d 113 [only other acts involving the prosecuting witness can be used]; and see 77 A.L.R.2d 841 [in prosecution for sexual offenses, evidence of other similar offenses]; 2 A.L.R.4th 330 [in rape case, evidence of defendant's rapes of other persons].)

(b) Common plan or scheme. (See People v. Cramer (1967) 67 C.2d 126, 130, 60 C.R. 230, 429 P.2d 582; People v. Covert (1967) 249 C.A.2d 81, 87, 88, 57 C.R. 220 [prosecution for incest; testimony of victim's sister as to similar acts was properly admitted]; People v. Kazee (1975) 47 C.A.3d 593, 596, 121 C.R. 221; People v. Creighton (1976) 57 C.A.3d 314, 325, 129 C.R. 249; but see People v. Thomas (1978) 20 C.3d 457, 466, 143 C.R. 215, 573 P.2d 433 [prosecution for lewd acts on daughter and stepdaughter; prior lewd acts on another daughter were too remote].)

Several cases implied that evidence of prior offenses, regardless of remoteness or lack of similarity to the charged offense, could also be used to corroborate the prosecuting witness. (See People v. Covert, supra, 249 C.A.2d 88; People v. Kazee, supra, 47 C.A.3d 596; People v. Creighton, supra, 57 C.A.3d 322.) This rule was rejected in People v. Thomas, supra, 20 C.3d 468, which held that the remoteness and similarity restrictions were crucial when evidence of prior offenses with persons other than the prosecuting witness was being introduced solely to corroborate the prosecuting witness' testimony. (See People v. Stanley (1967) 67 C.2d 812, 819, 63 C.R. 825, 433 P.2d 913 [where victim is sole witness and basic issue is his or her veracity, victim's testimony about other offenses by defendant may not be admitted].)

(2) Tassel and Ewoldt Cases. In People v. Tassel, supra, a prosecution for kidnaping, rape, and oral copulation, the trial judge admitted evidence of similar offenses against two other women to show a common design or plan and to corroborate the victim's testimony. Held, this was error. No one could rationally argue that the three sets of crimes were part of one larger plan; and, with no issue of intent or identity, any similarity in modus operandi between the charged and uncharged crimes was simply irrelevant. (36 C.3d 88.)

The "novel, restricted view of the admissibility of evidence of uncharged criminal acts to establish a common design or plan" in Tassel was rejected in People v. Ewoldt (1994) 7 C.4th 380, 401, 27 C.R.2d 646, 867 P.2d 757, which held that the exception may apply even if the charged and uncharged acts are not part of a single, continuing conception or plot. The proper view is that "evidence of a defendant's uncharged misconduct is relevant where the uncharged misconduct and the charged offense are sufficiently similar to support the inference that they are manifestations of a common design or plan." (7 C.4th 401, 402.) (See People v. Balcom (1994) 7 C.4th 414, 422, 426, 27 C.R.2d 666, 867 P.2d 777 [in rape prosecution, evidence of subsequent rape committed by defendant in another state was properly admitted under common design or plan exception, even though it was cumulative as to issue of defendant's intent; following Ewoldt].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Early Cases: Traditional Exceptions Applied.(a) Intent or motive. See 86 A.L.R.5th 59 [rapes of persons other than victim--prior offenses], 87 A.L.R.5th 181 [rapes of persons other than victim--subsequent acts], and 88 A.L.R.5th 429 [rapes of persons other than victim--offenses unspecified as to time], which together supersede 2 A.L.R.4th 330, text, p. 442. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.369.2(5)

97 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

f. Admissibility in Sex Crime Cases.

2. Evidence Code.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 97

[§ 97] Evidence Code.

(1) Amendment of Ev.C. 1101(b). In response to People v. Tassell (1984) 36 C.3d 77, 201 C.R. 567, 679 P.2d 1, supra, §96, the Legislature amended Ev.C. 1101(b) (supra, §75) in 1986 to specify that, in a prosecution for sexual crimes, the character evidence rule does not prohibit admission of a defendant's other acts on the issue of the defendant's reasonable and good faith belief in the victim's consent. (See Stats. 1986, Chap. 1432, §2.)

(2) Enactment of Ev.C. 1108. Ev.C. 1108, added in 1995, specifically allows the admission, in a prosecution for sexual crimes, of a defendant's other sexual offenses as long as the evidence is not inadmissible under Ev.C. 352 (probative value weighed against danger of undue prejudice; see supra, §17). (Ev.C. 1108(a).) (See People v. Yovanov (1999) 69 C.A.4th 392, 405, 81 C.R.2d 586 [in enacting Ev.C. 1108, "the Legislature decided evidence of uncharged sexual offenses is so uniquely probative in sex crimes prosecutions it is presumed admissible without regard to the limitations of Evidence Code section 1101"]; People v. Callahan (1999) 74 C.A.4th 356, 379, 87 C.R.2d 838 [once prosecution introduces character evidence under Ev.C. 1108(a), defendant may introduce opinion evidence, reputation evidence, or evidence of specific incidents in rebuttal].)

If evidence of this sort is to be offered by the prosecution, it must be disclosed to the defendant, including statements of witnesses or a summary of any testimony that is expected to be offered, at least 30 days before the scheduled trial date, or at a later time as allowed by the court for good cause. (Ev.C. 1108(b).) (See People v. Soto (1998) 64 C.A.4th 966, 979, 75 C.R.2d 605 [disclosure requirement was satisfied where, at preliminary hearing several months before trial, prosecutor informed defendant of his intent to introduce evidence of defendant's prior sexual conduct based on witness statements contained in deputy sheriff's report provided to defense, and defense counsel did not object].)

The statute is not intended to limit the admission or consideration of evidence under any other Evidence Code section. (Ev.C. 1108(c).) (See People v. Harris (1998) 60 C.A.4th 727, 738, 741, 70 C.R.2d 689 [in prosecution of mental health nurse for sexual offenses against patients, admission of evidence of prior offense constituted reversible error, where offense (violent rape) was very inflammatory, remote (23 years earlier), and nearly irrelevant because of its lack of similarity to charged offenses]; People v. Soto, supra, 64 C.A.4th 988 [balancing probative value versus prejudice is still applicable, but Legislature intended that courts liberally admit evidence of prior offenses]; People v. Yovanov, supra, 69 C.A.4th 406 [in prosecution for lewd acts on child, evidence of defendant's uncharged sexual misconduct was more probative than prejudicial]; People v. Callahan, supra, 74 C.A.4th 370, 371 [where defendant was charged with molesting his daughter, testimony by victim of prior molestation committed by defendant was properly admitted; testimony was brief, circumstances of prior incident were no more inflammatory than those of current incident, and jury was not left with impression that prior offense went unpunished]; 27 Pacific L. J. 761; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.50.01; see F.R. Evid., Rules 413 and 414, allowing admission of evidence of other offenses in sexual assault and child molestation cases; 110 Harv. L. Rev. 563 [criticizing Rule 413]; 38 Santa Clara L. Rev. 961 [F.R. Evid., Rules 413, 414, 415]; 49 Hastings L. J. 663 [criticizing Rule 413]; 49 Hastings L. J. 717 [discussing merits of extending approach of Rules 413, 414 to other types of crimes].)

(3) Constitutionality of Ev.C. 1108. In People v. Falsetta (1999) 21 C.4th 903, 89 C.R.2d 847, 986 P.2d 182, defendant was charged with forcible oral copulation, assault, and kidnapping involving a 16-year-old female victim. Under Ev.C. 1108, the trial judge permitted the prosecution to introduce evidence of two prior rapes to which defendant had pleaded guilty. Defendant was convicted, and the Court of Appeal rejected his due process challenge to Ev.C. 1108. Held, affirmed; the statute is constitutional.

(a) Whether or not the general exclusion of propensity evidence is considered "fundamental" from a historical perspective, the exception created by Ev.C. 1108 may nevertheless be upheld if it does not unduly offend due process principles. (21 C.4th 915.)

(b) One of the reasons for the general exclusion of propensity evidence is that the defendant should not have to bear the burden of defending against both the charged offense and other uncharged offenses. But Ev.C. 1108 does not permit a far-ranging attack on the defendant's character. It allows admission only of prior sex offenses when the current charge is a sex offense, and it requires pretrial notice, so that the defendant can prepare to rebut the proposed evidence. (21 C.4th 916.)

(c) Another reason for the general rule of exclusion is the need to avoid protracted "mini-trials" to determine the truth or falsity of the prior charges. However, Ev.C. 1108 allows the trial judge to exclude the evidence under Ev.C. 352, and one of the grounds for exclusion under that statute is "undue consumption of time." (21 C.4th 916.)

(d) A third reason for the general rule is that undue prejudice may arise if the jury learns of the defendant's other offenses. But the effect of Ev.C. 1108 is simply to remove a certain type of propensity evidence from the "prejudicial per se" category. The judge is still obligated to exercise the discretion granted under Ev.C. 352 to determine whether the probative value of the evidence outweighs its potentially prejudicial effect. (21 C.4th 917.)

(e) Admission of evidence under the statute may add to the evidence the jury is permitted to consider, but it does not reduce the prosecution's burden of proving the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. "A properly instructed jury will, as here, be given the usual instructions regarding the presumption of defendant's innocence and the prosecutor's burden of proof. Additionally ... , at the defendant's request, the jury may be told that evidence of his other sexual offenses is not sufficient by itself to prove his commission of the charged offense, that the weight and significance of the evidence, if any, is for the jury to decide, and that unless otherwise instructed, the jury may not consider this evidence for any other purpose. ... This instruction will help assure that the defendant will not be convicted of the charged offense merely because the evidence of his other offenses indicates he is a 'bad person' with a criminal disposition." (21 C.4th 920, approving CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.50.01, as revised in 1999, and the reasoning of People v. Fitch (1997) 55 C.A.4th 172, 63 C.R.2d 753, which upheld the statute against due process, equal protection, and ex post facto challenges.) (See People v. Van Winkle (1999) 75 C.A.4th 133, 142, 89 C.R.2d 28 [CALJIC, Nos. 2.50.1 and 2.50.01, which, taken together, allow jury to find by preponderance of evidence that defendant committed prior crime and to infer that he was therefore more likely to have committed current offense, do not violate due process].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Enactment of Ev.C. 1108. See People v. Abilez (2007) 41 C.4th 472, 501, 61 C.R.3d 526, 161 P.3d 58 [trial judge did not err in refusing to admit, under Ev.C. 1108, evidence of codefendant's juvenile adjudication for attempted unlawful intercourse with minor, which defendant offered to show that it was more likely that codefendant, and not defendant, sodomized victim; not only was adjudication more than 20 years old, it was not similar to current charged offenses (sodomy and murder of older woman)]; People v. Pierce (2002) 104 C.A.4th 893, 898, 128 C.R.2d 397 [assault with intent to commit rape is sexual offense within meaning of Ev.C. 1108, and thus, in prosecution for that offense, prior sexual offenses may be admitted as propensity evidence]; People v. Medina (2003) 114 C.A.4th 897, 902, 8 C.R.3d 158 [Ev.C. 1108 allows admission of other subsequent, as well as prior, sexual offenses]; People v. Wesson (2006) 138 C.A.4th 959, 967, 41 C.R.3d 883 [commission of prior sexual offense may be proved by way of court records; Ev.C. 452.5 (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §245) allows certified official records of conviction to be used to prove not only fact of conviction but also commission of underlying offense].

Limitation to prosecution for sexual crimes: Ev.C. 1108 "is properly limited to crimes in which sexual misconduct is an element of the charged offense (and of the offenses offered as evidence of the defendant's predisposition to commit the charged offense)." (People v. Walker (2006) 139 C.A.4th 782, 801, 43 C.R.3d 257 [in murder prosecution arising from killing of prostitute, defendant's three prior sexual attacks were not admissible under Ev.C. 1108; murder is not sexual offense enumerated in Ev.C. 1108(d)(1), and crime with which defendant was charged did not involve as necessary adjudicated element deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from inflicting death, injury, or pain].)

Advance disclosure requirement: Ev.C. 1108(b), as amended in 2002, provides that if evidence of a defendant's prior sexual offenses is to be offered by the prosecution, it must be disclosed to the defendant, including statements of witnesses or a summary of the substance of any testimony that is expected to be offered, in accordance with P.C. 1054.7. (See 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §§76, 79.) Admission of evidence under other Evidence Code sections: See People v. Branch (2001) 91 C.A.4th 274, 285, 109 C.R.2d 870 [in prosecution for lewd acts committed by defendant against step-great-granddaughter, trial judge's decision not to exclude, under Ev.C. 352 (text, §17), uncharged prior sexual offenses committed more than 30 years earlier by defendant against stepdaughter was proper; significant similarities between prior and charged offenses more than balanced out remoteness of prior offenses].

(New) Distinction: Character evidence requirements no longer applicable: When Ev.C. 1108 "swept away the general prohibition on character evidence set forth in section 1101, it rendered moot the exceptions to that prohibition created by section 1101, subdivision (b). Thus, in a sex crime prosecution, the 'signature test' is no longer the yardstick for admission of uncharged sexual misconduct to prove identity." (People v. Britt (2002) 104 C.A.4th 500, 506, 128 C.R.2d 290 [in prosecution for burglary and annoying or molesting child, defendant's prior sexual offenses were admissible even if traditional requirements for admission of prior misconduct to prove identity were not met].)

(2a) (New) Effect of Acquittal of Charges Arising From Other Offense. In People v. Mullens (2004) 119 C.A.4th 648, 14 C.R.3d 534, defendant was retried for lewd conduct on a child under the age of 14 years (P.C. 288(a)) after the first jury deadlocked by an 8-to-4 vote in favor of not guilty and also acquitted defendant on charges involving another child. In the second trial, evidence of defendant's conduct with the other child was admitted under Ev.C. 1108, but his request to admit evidence showing that the charges involving that conduct resulted in an acquittal was denied. The second jury found him guilty. Held, reversed; exclusion of evidence of the acquittal was error. "To give full meaning to the presumption of innocence in a case in which the prosecution is permitted to present section 1108 propensity evidence showing the defendant committed an uncharged sex crime, a trial court must grant the defense an opportunity to present evidence showing the defendant was acquitted of that alleged uncharged sex offense." (119 C.A.4th 666.) Given the history of this case, it was reasonably probable that the jury on retrial would have reached a result more favorable to defendant had the court not erroneously excluded the evidence of acquittal. (119 C.A.4th 670.)

(3) Constitutionality of Ev.C. 1108.

Pre-1999 version of CALJIC, No. 2.50.01: The 1999 revision of CALJIC, No. 2.50.01 added language specifying that evidence that the defendant committed a prior sexual offense is not itself sufficient to establish guilt. The Courts of Appeal have split as to whether the pre-1999 version of CALJIC, No. 2.50.01 unconstitutionally allowed the jury to find the defendant guilty of the current charge solely because he or she had committed prior sexual offenses. The following cases have held that it did: People v. Vichroy (1999) 76 C.A.4th 92, 99, 90 C.R.2d 105; People v. Orellano (2000) 79

C.A.4th 179, 184, 93 C.R.2d 866; People v. Frazier (2001) 89 C.A.4th 30, 35, 107 C.R.2d 100. Other cases are consistent with the holding of People v. Van Winkle (1999) 75 C.A.4th 133, 89 C.R.2d 28, text, p. 445, that, given in conjunction with other proper instructions, the unrevised version of CALJIC, No. 2.50.01 did not lead the jury to apply an unconstitutionally low standard of proof. (See People v. Regalado (2000) 78 C.A.4th 1056, 1062, 93 C.R.2d 83; People v. O'Neal (2000) 78 C.A.4th 1065, 1078, 93 C.R.2d 248; People v. Waples (2000) 79 C.A.4th 1389, 1398, 95 C.R.2d 45; People v. Jeffries (2000) 83 C.A.4th 15, 22, 98 C.R.2d 903.)

Revised instruction: See People v. Reliford (2003) 29 C.4th 1007, 1016, 130 C.R.2d 254, 62 P.3d 601, 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, Supp., §640 [dictum in People v. Falsetta (1999) 21 C.4th 903, 1013, 89 C.R.2d 847, 986 P.2d 182, text, p. 444, approving 1999 version of CALJIC, No. 2.50.01, was correct; further revision of instruction in 2002 appears to be improvement]. (New) CALCRIM, No. 1191: CALCRIM, No. 1191 [Evidence of Uncharged Sex Offense] does not violate due process any more than did CALJIC, No. 2.50.01, which was upheld in Reliford, supra. There is no material difference in the way each of these instructions allows the jury to conclude from prior conduct evidence that the defendant was disposed to commit sexual offenses and therefore likely committed the current offenses. (People v. Crompt (2007) 153 C.A.4th 476, 480, 62 C.R.3d 848.)

(4) (New) Distinction: Opinion Evidence Not Admissible. Opinion testimony regarding character is not rendered admissible by the interaction of Ev.C. 1108 and Ev.C. 1101(b). Ev.C. 1108(a) allows evidence of prior sexual offenses, and Ev.C. 1101(b) (character evidence to prove relevant fact such as intent or knowledge; see text, §75) is similarly limited to evidence of specific prior acts. Neither section purports to alter Ev.C. 1102 (text, §50) to allow an expert witness to offer an opinion about the defendant's character during the prosecution's case-in-chief. (People v. McFarland (2000) 78 C.A.4th 489, 495, 92 C.R.2d 884 [in prosecution for annoying or molesting child, trial judge erred in allowing psychiatrist to testify, based on his review of documents from defendant's prior prosecutions for lewd conduct with child, that defendant was motivated by unnatural or abnormal sexual interest in children when he touched victim].)

98 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

g. Admissibility in Domestic Violence Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 98

[§ 98] Admissibility in Domestic Violence Cases.

Ev.C. 1109, added in 1996 and modeled after the exception for other sexual offenses (see supra, §97), permits the introduction, in a prosecution for a domestic violence offense, of evidence of the defendant's commission of other domestic violence, if the evidence is not made inadmissible under Ev.C. 352 (probative value weighed against danger of undue prejudice; see supra, §17). (Ev.C. 1109(a).) "Domestic violence" has the meaning set forth in P.C. 13700. (Ev.C. 1109(d).) (See People v. Poplar (1999) 70 C.A.4th 1129, 1138, 1139, 83 C.R.2d 320 [in prosecution charging defendant with rape of his girlfriend, with whom he was living, evidence of defendant's domestic violence committed against former girlfriends was admissible, even though Ev.C. 1109 and P.C. 13700 do not specifically mention rape as act of domestic violence]; on P.C. 13700, see 11 Summary (9th), Husband and Wife, text and Supp., §§28, 36A.)

If evidence of other domestic violence is to be offered by the prosecution, it must be disclosed to the defendant, including statements of witnesses or a summary of any testimony that is expected to be offered, in compliance with P.C. 1054.7 (5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §§76, 79). (Ev.C. 1109(b).)

Evidence of acts occurring more than 10 years before the charged offense is inadmissible "unless the court determines that the admission of this evidence is in the interest of justice." (Ev.C. 1109(e).) However, Ev.C. 1109 is not intended to limit or preclude the admission or consideration of evidence under any other statute or case law. (Ev.C. 1109(c).) (See 28 Pacific L. J. 789; 69 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1463; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.50.02.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Rucker (2005) 126 C.A.4th 1107, 1117, 25 C.R.3d 62 [for purposes of Ev.C. 1109, defendant had dating relationship with her victim where they had frequent, intimate associations when victim was in town over period of approximately 9 months, he communicated his affection to her when he was out of town, and relationship was characterized by expectation of affection and sexual involvement]; People v. Zavala (2005) 130 C.A.4th 758, 770, 30 C.R.3d 398 [in prosecution in which defendant was accused of stalking his former wife, trial judge properly admitted evidence of defendant's prior violent acts toward wife, as stalking requires proof that victim reasonably feared for her safety; however, judge erred in giving jury propensity instruction under Ev.C. 1109, as stalking, which does not require victim to fear great bodily injury or death, is not crime of domestic violence within meaning of Ev.C. 1109]; People v. Cabrera (2007) 152 C.A.4th 695, 705, 61 C.R.3d 373 [in rape prosecution arising from defendant's attack on former girlfriend, testimony of two of defendant's previous girlfriends regarding domestic abuse was not made inadmissible by Ev.C. 352 and thus was properly admitted under Ev.C. 1109; testimony created strong inference that defendant had propensity to commit acts described by victim, it was not unnecessarily time-consuming, and it involved incidents that were no more inflammatory than charged offenses].

Definition of domestic violence: Ev.C. 1109(d) was amended in 2004 to provide that, subject to a hearing under Ev.C. 352 (see text, §17), which must include consideration of any corroboration and remoteness in time, "domestic violence" has the further meaning set forth in Family C. 6211 (see 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §374) if the act occurred no more than 5 years before the charged offense. (See People v. Rucker, supra, 126 C.A.4th 1118 [prior incident in which defendant pointed gun at her boyfriend constituted domestic violence; act could have been punished as assault with firearm].)

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §372.

(New) Constitutionality of statute and instruction: The California Supreme Court, in People v. Falsetta (1999) 21 C.4th 903, 89 C.R.2d 847, 986 P.2d 182, text, §97, determined that Ev.C. 1108, allowing the admission of prior sex offenses, does not violate due process. The rationale underlying that opinion applies to Ev.C. 1109 as well, "since the two statutes are virtually identical, except that one addresses prior sexual offenses while the other addresses prior domestic violence." (People v. Johnson (2000) 77 C.A.4th 410, 417, 91 C.R.2d 596; see People v. Hoover (2000) 77 C.A.4th 1020, 1027, 92 C.R.2d 208 [also relying on Falsetta to uphold statute]; People v. Brown (2000) 77 C.A.4th 1324, 1332, 1335, 92 C.R.2d 433 [Ev.C. 1109 is constitutional, and language of instruction tracking 1999 revised version of CALJIC, No. 2.50.02 did not allow jury to find defendant guilty of current charge solely because he committed prior acts of same type]; People v. Jennings (2000) 81 C.A.4th 1301, 1310, 1316, 97 C.R.2d 727 [admission of prior acts of domestic violence under Ev.C. 1109 did not violate defendant's right to equal protection, and trial judge had no sua sponte duty to give limiting instruction as to that evidence]; People v. James (2000) 81 C.A.4th 1343, 1356, 1364, 96 C.R.2d 823 [giving of pre-1999 version of CALJIC, No. 2.50.02 was erroneous as it would have allowed jury to find defendant guilty of current charge solely because he committed prior acts of same type; however, error was harmless, as it was clear jury used defendant's prior acts as corroborative circumstantial evidence supporting credibility of victim's testimony]; People v. Escobar (2000) 82 C.A.4th 1085, 1103, 1104, 98 C.R.2d 696 [any error in giving pre-1999 version of instruction was harmless beyond reasonable doubt]; People v. Younger (2000) 84 C.A.4th 1360, 1382, 101 C.R.2d 624 [giving of pre-1999 version of instruction was reversible error]; People v. Pescador (2004) 119 C.A.4th 252, 258, 14 C.R.3d 165 [inferences created by CALJIC, No. 2.50.02 do not violate due process; conclusions that defendant had propensity to commit crimes of domestic violence and was likely to commit and did commit charged offense all logically flow from proved prior acts of domestic violence].)

(New) Inapplicability of statute to charged offenses: Ev.C. 1109 expressly conditions the admissibility of propensity evidence on the trial judge's power to evaluate the evidence under Ev.C. 352. Evidence relevant to other charged offenses, however, cannot be excluded under Ev.C. 352, no matter how prejudicial it may be. Accordingly, the statute cannot have been intended to allow the use of other charged offenses to prove a defendant's disposition to commit domestic violence, and an instruction allowing such use would be erroneous. "[W]e [do not] believe the Legislature meant for juries to weigh the evidence supporting domestic violence charges under two different standards of proof--beyond a reasonable doubt on each charged offense, but preponderance of the evidence for purposes of assessing a defendant's propensity." (People v. Quintanilla (2005) 132 C.A.4th 572, 583, 33 C.R.3d 782 [trial judge committed error, although harmless, in modifying CALJIC, No. 2.50.02 to permit jury to consider charged domestic violence offenses as evidence of criminal propensity in connection with other domestic violence charges joined for trial].)

(New) Elder abuse: Ev.C. 1109 was amended in 2000 to broaden its scope to cover the abuse of elder or dependent persons. In a criminal action in which the defendant is accused of an offense of this type, evidence of the defendant's commission of previous offenses of this type is not made inadmissible by reason of the character evidence rule, provided it is not inadmissible under Ev.C. 352 (see text, §17). (Ev.C. 1109(a)(2).) However, evidence of the findings and determinations of administrative agencies regulating the conduct of health facilities licensed under Health & Saf.C. 1250 is inadmissible under Ev.C. 1109. (Ev.C. 1109(f).) "Abuse of an elder or a dependent person" means "physical or sexual abuse, neglect, financial abuse, abandonment, isolation, abduction, or other treatment that results in physical harm, pain, or mental suffering, the deprivation of care by a caregiver, or other deprivation by a custodian or provider of goods or services that are necessary to avoid physical harm or mental suffering." (Ev.C. 1109(d), as amended in 2004; see CALCRIM, No. 853 [Evidence of Uncharged Abuse of Elder or Dependent Person]; CALJIC, No. 2.50.03.)

(New) Child abuse: Ev.C. 1109 was amended in 2005 to broaden its scope to cover child abuse. In a criminal action in which the defendant is accused of an offense of this type, evidence of the defendant's commission of previous offenses of this type is not made inadmissible by reason of the character evidence rule, provided it is not inadmissible under Ev.C. 352. Admission of the evidence is subject to a hearing under Ev.C. 352 that must specifically include "consideration of any corroboration and remoteness in time." However, "[n]othing in this paragraph prohibits or limits the admission of evidence" under Ev.C. 1101(b). (Ev.C. 1109(a)(3), added in 2005.)

99 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

1. Criminal Case: Other Offenses of Defendant.

h. Procedural Evasions of Exclusionary Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 99

[§ 99] Procedural Evasions of Exclusionary Rule.

As indicated in the preceding sections, the exceptions cover a wide range. But the recognized exceptions do not reflect all of the allowable methods of bringing a defendant's prior offenses before the jury. The following practices, though seemingly contrary to the spirit of the exclusionary rule, are proper:

(1) If a defendant has offered evidence of good character, the prosecution may, in cross-examining the defendant's character witnesses, ask about other offenses, including arrests or charges that did not even result in convictions. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §246; 78 Harv. L. Rev. 438.)

(2) An otherwise admissible statement of the defendant introduced by the prosecution may contain an admission of other crimes. Thus, in People v. Lindsey (1961) 188 C.A.2d 471, 480, 10 C.R. 488, defendant, charged with a particular robbery, claimed that his oral confession was improperly obtained by a promise of immunity from prosecution for other robberies of which he was accused. Held, testimony of the police officers as to the circumstances of the making of the confession was admissible on the issue of voluntariness, despite the reference to other crimes. (Note, however, that under the Evidence Code, the judge determines admissibility of the confession outside the presence of the jury; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §51.)

(3) In a prosecution for theft by false pretenses, the corroboration requirement (see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Property, §44) can be satisfied by evidence of the defendant's similar false representations to other persons. (See People v. Phillips (1960) 186 C.A.2d 231, 245, 8 C.R. 830.)

(4) A defendant who testifies may be impeached by proof of a prior conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §303 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

100 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

2. Criminal Cases: Offenses of Third Party.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 100

[§ 100] Criminal Cases: Offenses of Third Party.

In People v. Davis (1995) 10 C.4th 463, 41 C.R.2d 826, 896 P.2d 119, a capital murder case, defendant sought to introduce evidence of other crimes committed by a third party to support his defense of third-party culpability in the murder. The trial judge concluded that the evidence did not relate to the third party's motive, intent, or identity, and was instead character evidence made inadmissible by Ev.C. 1101. Held, this conclusion was correct.

(a) The statute is not limited in its application to evidence concerning the defendant. Under People v. Hall (1986) 41 C.3d 826, 226 C.R. 112, 718 P.2d 99, infra, §122, the standard of relevancy is the same for evidence of third-party culpability as for any other evidence: it must be capable of raising a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt, and must constitute direct or circumstantial evidence linking the third party to the actual perpetration of the crime. Hall did not abrogate Ev.C. 1101 as applied to evidence of third-party culpability; evidence of that type must still be excluded if it is offered "not to show a fact other than the third party's criminal disposition, such as motive or intent, but merely to show that the third party was the more likely perpetrator because he had a history of violence." (10 C.4th 501, citing People v. Farmer (1989) 47 C.3d 888, 254 C.R. 508, 765 P.2d 940.)

(b) Here, the evidence defendant sought to introduce did not relate to motive or intent; defendant was essentially attempting to show that the third party was more likely to have been the killer because of his history of violence. Further, there was no evidence supporting defendant's testimony that the victim knew the third party or that the third party was present when the victim was assaulted. (10 C.4th 501, 502.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Lewis (2001) 26 C.4th 334, 373, 110 C.R.2d 272, 28 P.3d 34 [in capital murder case, trial judge did not abuse discretion in excluding evidence that third party had engaged in violence in past when he was frustrated or encountered something he did not like; there was no evidence that he was frustrated or did not like victim, and prior acts were remote not only in time but also in pattern from present offense].

101 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

3. Civil Case: Other Wrongful Acts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 101

[§ 101] Civil Case: Other Wrongful Acts.

(1) In General. The same general rule of exclusion of other offenses, and most of the same exceptions (see supra, §88 et seq.) have been applied where evidence of another crime or civil wrong is offered in a civil case. (See Ev.C. 1101(b), supra, §75 [stating the rule and exceptions in terms of evidence of "a crime, civil wrong, or other act"]; F.R. Evid., Rule 404(b) ["other crimes, wrongs, or acts"]; Brokopp v. Ford Motor Co. (1977) 71 C.A.3d 841, 851, 139 C.R. 888, citing the text; 13 So. Cal. L. Rev. 511; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 402; 7 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 523 [medical practice computer profile; proof of doctor's actions in series of similar cases]; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 395 [similar facts evidence: balancing probative value against probable dangers of admission]; 1 McCormick 5th, §192; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §321 et seq.; 66 A.L.R.2d 806 [assault and battery; other assaults, etc.]; 67 A.L.R.2d 232 [other usurious transactions]; 33 A.L.R.3d 1056 [evidence that malpractice defendant previously performed unnecessary surgery]; 73 A.L.R.4th 691 [admissibility of traffic conviction in later state civil trial]; 21 Proof of Facts 3d 629 [admission of character evidence and evidence of other acts in civil cases].)

Two exceptions that do not apply are Ev.C. 1108 (sex crimes; supra, §97) and Ev.C. 1109 (domestic violence; supra, §98), which, by their terms, apply only in criminal prosecutions. (But see F.R. Evid., Rule 415 [admission of defendant's similar acts in civil action for sexual assault or child molestation].)

(2) Illustrations: Evidence Admissible. Evidence of the defendant's other wrongs has been found admissible in numerous cases. (See Scott v. Times-Mirror Co. (1919) 181 C. 345, 358, 184 P. 672 [libel action; other libels by defendant, to show malice]; Liberty Bank v. Nonnenmann (1929) 96 C.A. 478, 485, 274 P. 568 [other frauds]; Atkins Corp. v. Tourny (1936) 6 C.2d 206, 215, 57 P.2d 480 [fraud and deceit; other similar frauds, at about same time, to show fraudulent intent]; State Rubbish Collectors Assn. v. Siliznoff (1952) 38 C.2d 330, 339, 240 P.2d 282 [issue of plaintiff association's unfair methods of preventing competition from defendant nonmember; evidence of threats of association officers against other nonmembers]; Janisse v. Winston Inv. Co. (1957) 154 C.A.2d 580, 588, 317 P.2d 48 [action for relief from usurious provisions of note, defense of bona fide purchase; evidence of four other identical transactions close in time]; Morris Stulsaft Foundation v. Superior Court (1966) 245 C.A.2d 409, 420, 54 C.R. 12; Rousseau v. West Coast House Movers (1967) 256 C.A.2d 878, 887, 64 C.R. 655; Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 C.A.4th 1128, 1162, 74 C.R.2d 510 [in sexual harassment action, evidence of defendant's conduct toward women other than plaintiff was properly admitted to prove intent (malice or oppression) required to establish his liability for punitive damages].)

In Wright v. Rogers (1959) 172 C.A.2d 349, 363, 342 P.2d 447, an action was brought to annul a deed obtained by fraud in the inception (document switch). Held, it was permissible to prove by the real estate commissioner's record that at a prior time defendant had forged promissory notes and sold them to an innocent purchaser.

(3) Illustrations: Evidence Inadmissible. Where no recognized exception applies, the evidence is excluded. Thus, in Pedreira v. Pedreira (1917) 32 C.A. 711, 713, 164 P. 30, a suit by a wife for separate maintenance, it was error to permit her to testify to acts of illicit intercourse accompanied by promises to marry, 7 or 8 years before the marriage; the effect was to arouse sympathy for plaintiff and contempt for defendant. And in Larson v. Larsen (1925) 72 C.A. 169, 172, 236 P. 979, where plaintiff claimed that defendant farmer shot him while he was attempting to pick grapes in defendant's vineyard, it was improper to show that a year before defendant had shot another boy under similar circumstances. (See Beyda v. Los Angeles (1998) 65 C.A.4th 511, 521, 76 C.R.2d 547 [in sexual harassment action based on hostile work environment theory, evidence of defendants' sexual harassment of employees at location where plaintiff did not work was properly excluded, because there was no indication plaintiff was aware of these incidents].)

Evidence that otherwise comes within an exception may nevertheless be inadmissible because it fails to pass the balancing test of Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17). Thus, in Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 C.A.4th 767, 64 C.R.2d 301, 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, Supp., §765, an action by a tenant against her landlord for sexual harassment, the trial judge admitted evidence of the landlord's sexual conduct toward other female tenants without weighing the evidence's probative value against its possible prejudicial effect. Two relevant considerations were the extent to which the source of the uncharged acts evidence was independent of the charged offense evidence, and the fact that the uncharged acts had not resulted in criminal convictions or tort judgments. The failure to weigh these factors constituted reversible error. (55 C.A.4th 792.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. The scope of Ev.C. 1109 was broadened in 2000 and 2005 to cover abuse of elder and dependent adults and child abuse, as well as domestic violence. (See Supp., supra, §98.)

See 171 A.L.R. Fed 483 [F.R. Evid., Rule 404(b)]; 1 McCormick 6th, §192.(3) Illustrations: Evidence Inadmissible. Where the identity of the actor is in dispute and the uncharged misconduct fails to satisfy the "so unusual and distinctive as to be like a signature" standard enunciated in People v. Ewoldt (1994) 7 C.4th 380, 27 C.R.2d 646, 867 P.2d 757, text, §96, the uncharged conduct is not admissible on the issues of intent, motive, or lack of mistake or accident, all of which issues presume that the identity of the actor is known. "Indeed, it would make no sense to admit evidence of uncharged misconduct on the issue of intent, motive or lack of mistake or accident where the identity of the actor is not yet determined. ... If, [however], the trial court perceives there is no real issue of identity, it may admit the evidence of uncharged misconduct on such issues as intent or motive." (Hassoldt v. Patrick Media Group (2000) 84 C.A.4th 153, 166, 100 C.R.2d 662 [where identity of person who cut plaintiffs' trees was in issue and prior misconduct of defendant's employee involving tree-trimming was not unusual or distinctive, it was error to admit prior misconduct on issue of identity, and it would not have been admissible on intent, motive, or lack of mistake or accident].)

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §947.

102 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

4. Other Accidents at Same or Similar Place.

a. Rule and Purposes of Admission.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 102

[§ 102] Rule and Purposes of Admission.

Where the circumstances are similar, and the happenings are not too remote in time, other accidents may be proved to show a defective or dangerous condition, knowledge or notice of it, or to establish the cause of an accident. (McCormick v. Great Western Power Co. of Calif. (1932) 214 C. 658, 664, 8 P.2d 145, infra, §103; Hicks v. Ocean Shore R. (1941) 18 C.2d 773, 782, 117 P.2d 850; People v. Lang Trans. Corp. (1941) 43 C.A.2d 134, 141, 110 P.2d 464; Laird v. T. W. Mather (1958) 51 C.2d 210, 220, 331 P.2d 617, infra, §104; Martindale v. Mountain View (1962) 208 C.A.2d 109, 116, 25 C.R. 148, citing the text; Kopfinger v. Grand Cen. Public Market (1964) 60 C.2d 852, 860, 37 C.R. 65, 389 P.2d 529, citing the text; Ault v. International Harvester Co. (1974) 13 C.3d 113, 121, 117 C.R. 812, 528 P.2d 1148; Elsworth v. Beech Aircraft Corp. (1984) 37 C.3d 540, 555, 208 C.R. 874, 691 P.2d 630; Genrich v. California (1988) 202 C.A.3d 221, 227, 228, 248 C.R. 303, infra, §103, quoting the text; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 9 [Accidents: Prior or Subsequent Ones]; 1 McCormick 5th, §200; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §458; 61 Harv. L. Rev. 205; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §549; 46 A.L.R.2d 935 [railroad crossing accident; other failures of crossing devices]; 42 A.L.R.3d 780 [evidence of other accidents to prove hazardous nature of product]; 21 A.L.R.4th 472 [modern status of rules as to admissibility of evidence of prior accidents or injuries at same place]; on falling on store floors, see 62 A.L.R.2d 6, 20, 42, 43; 63 A.L.R.2d 591, 602, 626; 63 A.L.R.2d 694, 702; 64 A.L.R.2d 335, 345; 64 A.L.R.2d 398, 414; 64 A.L.R.2d 471, 476; as to injury or death of pedestrian at railroad crossing, see 64 A.L.R.2d 1199, 1214.)

The rule was stated in Westman v. Clifton's Brookdale (1948) 89 C.A.2d 307, 312, 200 P.2d 814, as follows: "Evidence showing that previous accidents have occurred under substantially the same general circumstances as the subsequent accident--the one in issue--tends to disclose the cause of the latter, tends to bring home to the person maintaining the place where the injury occurred knowledge of the dangerous condition of such place, and tends to establish negligence on his part." And in Gilbert v. Pessin Grocery Co. (1955) 132 C.A.2d 212, 282 P.2d 148, the court, commenting on Wigmore's analysis, said: "It will be observed that such proof may serve at least four different evidentiary functions,--as proof of (a) existence of defective or dangerous condition, (b) the cause of the subject accident, (c) knowledge or notice of the dangerous condition, (d) negligence in permitting that condition to continue. But it is not necessary that the proffered evidence of previous accidents be probative in all those respects. If it fairly raises an inference upon one phase of the case it is admissible." (132 C.A.2d 217.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §200; 15 A.L.R.6th 1 [prior accidents or injuries at same place; superseding 21 A.L.R.4th 472, text, p. 450]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.141

103 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

4. Other Accidents at Same or Similar Place.

b. Illustrations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 103

[§ 103] Illustrations.

In McCormick v. Great Western Power Co. of Calif. (1932) 214 C. 658, 665, 8 P.2d 145, plaintiffs were workmen employed in construction. While handling a steel bar they were shocked by defendant's high tension wires, which were strung about 10 feet from the building. Evidence that in another building on the same street a year before, several workmen were similarly burned, was held admissible; the jury might have inferred from it that defendant, with knowledge of the danger, was negligent in failing to insulate or remove the wires from close proximity to the structure.

In Gilbert v. Pessin Grocery Co. (1955) 132 C.A.2d 212, 218, 282 P.2d 148, plaintiff, a shopper, stumbled and fell over a 6-inch cement divider in defendant's parking lot, at night, when the area was insufficiently lighted. Held, it was error to exclude evidence of such a fall by another woman under similar conditions a few months before.

In Leighton v. Dodge (1965) 236 C.A.2d 54, 45 C.R. 820, an entirely different use of this kind of evidence was approved. Plaintiffs, driving at night on a recently installed wet asphalt road, stopped when a car in front began to spin on the pavement. Defendant, close behind, applied his brakes and skidded into a rear-end collision with plaintiffs. Defendant contended that the cause of the accident was the unusually slippery condition of the road. Plaintiffs called a highway patrol officer to testify that he had driven on the new road at high speed and stopped without difficulty. Defendant then offered evidence of three other skidding occurrences at about the same time and place. Held, the evidence was relevant and admissible for the limited purpose of showing the physical condition of the highway, to corroborate the testimony of defendant that skidding resulted from normal, nonnegligent braking. (236 C.A.2d 58.)

In Genrich v. California (1988) 202 C.A.3d 221, 231, 232, 248 C.R. 303, a personal injury action against the state by a pedestrian who was struck by a truck at an allegedly hazardous intersection, the trial judge allowed a nearby resident to testify to previous instances of "burning rubber," "fender-benders," "near misses," and "screeching tires" at the intersection. Held, admission of this evidence was proper on the question whether the state had notice of a dangerous condition at the intersection.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

104 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

4. Other Accidents at Same or Similar Place.

c. Similarity of Conditions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 104

[§ 104] Similarity of Conditions.

The evidence must relate to accidents that are similar and occur under substantially the same circumstances. (Wilkerson v. El Monte (1936) 17 C.A.2d 615, 618, 62 P.2d 790; Martindale v. Mountain View (1962) 208 C.A.2d 109, 116, 25 C.R. 148, citing the text; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §458; 1 McCormick 5th, §200; 61 Harv. L. Rev. 225; 21 A.L.R.4th 472, 484.)

But substantial similarity is enough, for no two accidents happen in precisely the same way. (See Magnuson v. Stockton (1931) 116 C.A. 532, 535, 3 P.2d 30 [evidence of previous drownings in lake held admissible to indicate dangerous condition of lake without showing exact place and manner of previous accidents]; McCormick v. Great Western Power Co. of Calif. (1932) 214 C. 658, 667, 8 P.2d 145, supra, §103; Hicks v. Ocean Shore R. (1941) 18 C.2d 773, 782, 117 P.2d 850 [evidence of accidents at one portal of a tunnel held admissible where plaintiff was injured at other portal]; Gilbert v. Pessin Grocery Co. (1955) 132 C.A.2d 212, 218, 282 P.2d 148, supra, §103; Elsworth v. Beech Aircraft Corp. (1984) 37 C.3d 540, 555, 208 C.R. 874, 691 P.2d 630 [prior accidents caused by dangerous spinning characteristics of plane manufactured by defendant with design similar to that of plane that caused present accident].)

Moreover, the requirement of similarity may vary in strictness according to the purpose for which the evidence is introduced. Thus, if offered to show a dangerous condition of a particular thing--such as a step--the other accident must be connected in some way with that thing; but if offered only to show knowledge or notice of a dangerous condition, an accident at the place--a broader area--may be shown.

This distinction is illustrated by the mistaken conclusion in Thompson v. Buffums' (1936) 17 C.A.2d 401, 62 P.2d 171, a personal injury suit. Plaintiff's shoe caught in an unfilled groove on the tenth step in defendant's stairs, and she fell. Plaintiff's counsel asked a witness whether, before that time, any other women had "fallen upon these particular stairs." Held, the question was properly excluded, for it did not limit the inquiry to the tenth step, from which plaintiff fell and which was admittedly the only step from which the lead filling was missing. "Any number of persons may have fallen on other steps of this same stairway due to other causes, and yet such evidence would not be relevant or material to show the alleged dangerous condition of the tenth step upon which appellant fell, nor would such evidence tend in any way to bring home to respondent knowledge of the alleged dangerous condition of the step here in question." (17 C.A.2d 405.)

The Thompson case was expressly disapproved on this point in Laird v. T. W. Mather (1958) 51 C.2d 210, 220, 331 P.2d 617. Plaintiff fell on a stairway where the handrail ended before the bottom step. She offered testimony of a former employee of defendant that, before the accident, he told defendant's officer he had heard of someone falling there. Held, though insufficient to show a dangerous condition in fact (because of no showing of similarity of conditions), the statement was properly received to show notice of the alleged dangerous condition. (See Hilts v. Solano (1968) 265 C.A.2d 161, 169, 71 C.R. 275; Brake v. Beech Aircraft Corp. (1986) 184 C.A.3d 930, 938, 229 C.R. 336; Genrich v. California (1988) 202 C.A.3d 221, 228, 248 C.R. 303, quoting the text.)

Westman v. Clifton's Brookdale (1948) 89 C.A.2d 307, 200 P.2d 814, illustrates another distinction. Plaintiff was injured by a fall on unlighted stairs in defendant's cafeteria. Evidence that others had fallen on the stairs was held admissible, without the necessity of showing that the same step was involved; here, unlike Thompson v. Buffums, supra, the theory of negligence was the absence of adequate illumination and a handrail.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Goebel v. Santa Barbara (2001) 92 C.A.4th 549, 557, 111 C.R.2d 901, 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, Supp., §77 [in action against city for maintenance of dangerous condition of public property (water main) that damaged plaintiffs' home, trial judge properly excluded evidence of break in water main several years earlier; there was no evidence that damage caused by earlier break resulted in landslide condition similar to that for which plaintiffs were seeking recovery]; 1 McCormick 6th, §200.

105 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

4. Other Accidents at Same or Similar Place.

d. Subsequent Accidents.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 105

[§ 105] Subsequent Accidents.

In most cases, the evidence offered is of prior accidents, and often the rule is stated in that limited form, with the corollary that subsequent accidents are irrelevant and must be excluded. Thus, in McCormick v. Great Western Power Co. of Calif. (1932) 214 C. 658, 8 P.2d 145, supra, §103, the court, after approving the admission of evidence of previous accidents, added: "Plaintiffs sought also to show that subsequent to the time plaintiffs were injured, another workman employed on this same building was injured by said wires; but we think the testimony relating thereto was properly excluded because obviously the happening of the subsequent accident could not have tended to prove that by reason thereof the company might reasonably have anticipated the injury to plaintiffs." (214 C. 668.)

Other authorities have shown, however, that this analysis is faulty. The relevancy of other accidents, whether prior or subsequent, depends on the purpose for which the evidence is offered. A subsequent accident would not be relevant on the issue of knowledge or notice of a possibly dangerous condition at the time of the injury giving rise to the action. But a subsequent accident at the same or a similar place, under the same or similar conditions, is just as relevant as a prior accident to show that the condition was in fact dangerous or defective, or that the injury was caused by the condition. (See Simmons v. Southern Pac. Trans. Co. (1976) 62 C.A.3d 341, 365, 133 C.R. 42, quoting the text [admissible where similarity shown]; 61 Harv. L. Rev. 207, note 5; 1 McCormick 5th, §200; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§252, 437.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §200.

106 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

4. Other Accidents at Same or Similar Place.

e. Absence of Similar Accidents.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 106

[§ 106] Absence of Similar Accidents.

(1) In General. Evidence of "safety history" offered by the defendant, i.e., that a particular course of conduct was pursued or a particular instrumentality was used in a certain manner without accident, would seem to be relevant on the issues of danger or safety of a condition or notice thereof. And, where the period of safe use is long or the experience is otherwise extensive, the trend is to admit this kind of negative evidence. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §200; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §448; 61 Harv. L. Rev. 213, 217, 233, 241; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §§553, 554; for opposing view, see 42 A.L.R.2d 1055; 51 A.L.R.4th 1186; 10 A.L.R.5th 371; 1956 A.S. 564.)

(2) California Law Prior to Evidence Code. Some California cases decided prior to the Evidence Code held evidence of safety history inadmissible, although an exception was recognized where the evidence was offered to meet a prima facie case under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur. (See Oakland v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1941) 47 C.A.2d 444, 448, 118 P.2d 328; Thompson v. B.F. Goodrich Co. (1941) 48 C.A.2d 723, 729, 120 P.2d 693; Murphy v. Lake (1951) 106 C.A.2d 61, 65, 234 P.2d 712; Khanoyan v. All Amer. Sports Enterprises (1964) 229 C.A.2d 785, 793, 40 C.R. 596.) However, many pre-Code decisions accepted the relevancy of such evidence without discussion. (See McKinney v. San Francisco (1952) 109 C.A.2d 844, 847, 241 P.2d 1060; Ford v. Riverside City School Dist. (1953) 121 C.A.2d 554, 562, 263 P.2d 626; Richter v. Adobe Creek Lodge (1956) 143 C.A.2d 514, 517, 299 P.2d 941; Ziegler v. Santa Cruz City High School Dist. (1959) 168 C.A.2d 277, 280, 335 P.2d 709.)

(3) California Law Under Evidence Code. Under Ev.C. 351, making all relevant evidence admissible unless otherwise provided by statute (supra, §5), it would seem clear that this evidence is admissible. (See Beauchamp v. Los Gatos Golf Course (1969) 273 C.A.2d 20, 37, 38, 77 C.R. 914 [taking this position, but observing that the trial judge may exclude it under Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17) "if there would be confusion of collateral issues"]; Benson v. Honda Motor Co. (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1337, 1345, 1348, 32 C.R.2d 322 [product liability action; trial judge properly admitted testimony by defendant's product analysis engineer of absence of similar claims]; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 8 [Accidents: Absence of Similar Ones].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 1 McCormick 6th, §200.

107 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

5. Prior and Subsequent Conditions or Acts.

a. General Principle.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 107

[§ 107] General Principle.

"Evidence of the existence of a particular condition, relationship, or status ... before and after an act in question is admissible to indicate the existence of the same status, condition or relationship at the time of the act." (Blank v. Coffin (1942) 20 C.2d 457, 463, 126 P.2d 868; see Slovick v. James I. Barnes Const. Co. (1956) 142 C.A.2d 618, 625, 298 P.2d 923, infra, §108; Roddiscraft v. Skelton Logging Co. (1963) 212 C.A.2d 784, 801, 28 C.R. 277, citing the text ["An inference that a state of affairs existed at a certain time may be reinforced by evidence that it continued to exist at a subsequent time, provided that too long a period has not elapsed and conditions have not changed"]; People v. Wong (1966) 245 C.A.2d 844, 848, 54 C.R. 273, infra, §108 [following Wigmore's analysis and Blank and Slovick cases]; People v. Guntert (1981) 126 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 9, 179 C.R. 426, citing the text; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §437; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §548; on action for fall on store stairway or floor, see 62 A.L.R.2d 6, 19, 43; 63 A.L.R.2d 591, 603; 64 A.L.R.2d 335, 345; 64 A.L.R.2d 398, 415; on exclusion of evidence of subsequent remedial acts, see infra, §163; on evidence of prior accidents of driver, see supra, §40.)

The danger of subsequent evidence is that too long an interval may have elapsed and conditions may have changed. The propriety of the inference may sometimes depend on the length of the interval and the likelihood of intervening circumstances. (See discussion of Wigmore's analysis in Slovick v. James I. Barnes Const. Co., supra, exposing the "fallacy that presumptions do not run backward"; and see Larson v. Solbakken (1963) 221 C.A.2d 410, 422, 34 C.R. 450, infra, §109; Atkins v. Bisigier (1971) 16 C.A.3d 414, 425, 94 C.R. 49 [proffered evidence rejected as remote and speculative, where at least 15 witnesses could have been questioned as to condition at time of accident].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Buell-Wilson v. Ford Motor Co. (2006) 141 C.A.4th 525, 542, 46 C.R.3d 147 [in products liability action against automobile manufacturer arising from rollover of sport utility vehicle, trial judge did not abuse discretion in admitting evidence concerning design of vehicle's predecessor; stability characteristics of two vehicles were substantially similar, and evidence was relevant both to prove cause of vehicle's stability defect and to show notice on manufacturer's part at time it was designing vehicle]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.129 et seq.

108 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

5. Prior and Subsequent Conditions or Acts.

b. Subsequent Conditions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 108

[§ 108] Subsequent Conditions.

In Slovick v. James I. Barnes Const. Co. (1956) 142 C.A.2d 618, 298 P.2d 923, defendant contractor constructed a catwalk. One week later it gave way due to faulty overlapping of planks, and plaintiff, employee of a subcontractor, was injured. On the issue whether the admittedly defective condition at the time of the accident was present at the time of construction (thus fastening liability for negligence on defendant), the court said: "The condition of such a structure is a fact which is of a continuous nature, certainly so for a period of a week or less in a building that is far from completion. It was unsafe on the day of the accident and on the second or third day before that event, and it is reasonably inferable that such was the case when it was built one week (or less) before the catastrophe." (142 C.A.2d 624.)

Other cases apply the principle to various kinds of property. (See Dow v. Sunset Tel. & Tel. Co. (1910) 157 C. 182, 188, 106 P. 587 [evidence that electric power wires and telephone wires were separated after an accident was properly admitted as tending to show dangerous condition of the premises at the time]; Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 C. 9, 16, 151 P. 286 [evidence of condition of a gas heater several days after accident was admissible to show that pilot light had been turned off]; Grossetti v. Sweasey (1917) 176 C. 793, 800, 169 P. 687 [evidence of condition of brakeshoes on streetcar before and after accident was admissible].)

In People v. Wong (1966) 245 C.A.2d 844, 54 C.R. 273, defendant was charged with burglary of a telephone booth. The prosecution introduced the following evidence: (a) At 2 a.m. defendant was observed using a metal tine to release money from the box, and had a large quantity of dimes in his possession. (b) An officer arrested him and left the area without placing a guard at the booth or posting a notice that the telephone should not be used. (c) Six hours later, at 8 a.m., the box was found "stuffed" in such a manner as to permit release of the coins by use of the tine--an instrument commonly used by "stuffers." Defendant's objection, that there was no direct evidence that the box was in the same condition at 8 a.m. as it was at 2 a.m., was properly overruled. "The circumstances of the case at bench demonstrate no reasonable probability that the phone box was stuffed during the approximate six-hour interval when it was not under observation. Or, put another way, a reasonable inference to be drawn from the facts is that the box was stuffed before and at the time of defendant's arrest." (245 C.A.2d 850.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

109 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

5. Prior and Subsequent Conditions or Acts.

c. Prior or Subsequent Acts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 109

[§ 109] Prior or Subsequent Acts.

(1) In General. In Blank v. Coffin (1942) 20 C.2d 457, 463, 126 P.2d 868, an action against a car owner for injuries resulting from another's driving with permission, evidence that the owner permitted the driver to use the car after the accident was admissible to support an inference that he had permission at the time of the accident. And in Scott v. Times-Mirror Co. (1919) 181 C. 345, 358, 184 P. 672, it was held that plaintiff seeking to prove malice in a libel action could offer evidence of other prior or subsequent libels published about him by defendant, as tending to show ill feeling against him at the date of publication of the libel in question. (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §437; 89 A.L.R.2d 177 [admissibility, on issue of testamentary capacity, of previously executed wills].)

Many other cases are decided in accordance with this principle. (See Mathews v. Dudley (1931) 212 C. 58, 60, 297 P. 544 [manner of driving truck shortly before accident admitted as indicative of a course of conduct continuing until the accident]; People v. Brazil (1931) 112 C.A. 326, 327, 296 P. 639 [prosecution for failure to support illegitimate child; evidence of intercourse between defendant and complaining witness before alleged time of conception admitted as indicating probability of intercourse at that time]; King v. Moore (1934) 220 C. 449, 457, 31 P.2d 377 [acts of parties subsequent to alleged agreement may be admitted as indicative of such agreement or its terms]; Jennings v. Arata (1948) 83 C.A.2d 143, 146, 188 P.2d 298 [evidence that 1 minute before and one-half mile away from accident defendant drove in excess of speed limit and almost struck a highway worker; following Mathews]; Estate of Fosselman (1957) 48 C.2d 179, 185, 308 P.2d 336 [incompetency of testator at time of execution of will may be proved by evidence of acts before and after that time]; Ungefug v. D'Ambrosia (1967) 250 C.A.2d 61, 64, 58 C.R. 223 [decedent struck by automobile at crossing, defense of contributory negligence--intoxication; evidence that she crossed street shortly before, staggering and apparently intoxicated]; Wilson v. Gilbert (1972) 25 C.A.3d 607, 615, 102 C.R. 31 [medical malpractice case, evidence of defendant doctor's subsequent training and change of referral procedures]; People v. Eagles (1982) 133 C.A.3d 330, 340, 183 C.R. 784 [prosecution for vehicular manslaughter with gross negligence; evidence of defendant's reckless driving and near collision during afternoon before accident was properly admitted to prove knowledge of life-threatening dangers of excessive speed, thereby establishing implied malice]; Hilliard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 C.A.3d 374, 398, 196 C.R. 117, infra, §123.)

(2) Remoteness Limitation. Larson v. Solbakken (1963) 221 C.A.2d 410, 34 C.R. 450, illustrates the remoteness limitation (supra, §24) on this kind of evidence. Defendant, in a car behind plaintiff, attempted to pass on the left. About 100 feet from the point of impact, plaintiff turned into the left lane for a left turn, and the vehicles collided. On deposition, defendant described a prior experience in attempting to pass a truck and getting back into his own lane in time. Plaintiff sought to introduce this evidence at the trial. Held, exclusion was proper. It would have been relevant on the issue of defendant's knowledge of the probable consequences of his attempt to pass, but it was not offered for that purpose. Plaintiff's theory was that the prior incident (near accident) was evidence of negligence; but the incident happened 10 days before the accident involved in the suit, and the judge had discretion to reject it as remote. (221 C.A.2d 421.)

On the other hand, in Isaacs v. Huntington Memorial Hosp. (1985) 38 C.3d 112, 211 C.R. 356, 695 P.2d 653, an action to recover for injuries sustained by plaintiff when he was shot by an unknown assailant in defendant's parking lot, the trial judge excluded evidence of incidents that occurred 4 years before, ruling that the cutoff point was 3 years. Held, the limitation was too arbitrary; remoteness goes to probative value, and the judge should determine the admissibility of an incident on the basis of relevancy and discretionary exclusion under Ev.C. 352. (38 C.3d 133.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

110 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

6. Custom or Practice of Others on Negligence Issue.

a. Admissibility and Effect.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 110

[§ 110] Admissibility and Effect.

(1) Rule and Theory. Evidence of custom or usage in a business or industry, i.e., the practice of others similarly situated or performing similar acts under similar conditions, is admissible in negligence cases on the issue of what constitutes due care or negligence under the circumstances. (Burke v. John E. Marshall (1940) 42 C.A.2d 195, 203, 108 P.2d 738; Thurman v. Clune (1942) 51 C.A.2d 505, 507, 125 P.2d 59 [evidence of methods of operation of other ice hockey rinks was admissible for defendants on issue whether they used proper safeguards]; Shurman v. Fresno Ice Rink (1949) 91 C.A.2d 469, 474, 205 P.2d 77 [following Thurman]; Miller v. Midway Fishing Tool Co. (1951) 106 C.A.2d 612, 614, 235 P.2d 630 [injury on "handling elevator" of oil derrick; evidence for defendants of customary methods of inspection]; Hargrave v. Acme Tool & Tester Co. (1954) 125 C.A.2d 34, 39, 269 P.2d 913 [defendant's failure to follow custom was admissible for plaintiff as evidence of negligence]; Hartford Acc. & Indem. Co. v. Bank of America (1963) 220 C.A.2d 545, 561, 34 C.R. 23; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §461; 8 A.L.R.2d 446 [depositor's negligence action against bank; banks' customs in handling checks]; 43 A.L.R.2d 618 [action under Federal Employers' Liability Act; rules and practices of other railroads]; 64 A.L.R.2d 1199, 1215 [action against railroad for injury or death of pedestrian at crossing; evidence of construction of other crossings]; 59 A.L.R.3d 1327 [usual business practice of notaries to identify person seeking acknowledgment].)

(2) Not Determinative of Legal Standard. The evidentiary principle should not be confused with the contrasting rule of substantive law, that custom cannot transform negligence into due care. The prevailing safety practices of a well-run industry or activity are highly probative, but not conclusive. The jury may still draw the inference of negligence, because custom of others cannot establish a legal standard of due care. "Evidence of custom is received not as proof of, or as a substitute for, the substantive law's standard of conduct, which is due care, but merely to aid the jury in determining from such evidence and all the other evidence in the case whether the particular conduct of a party does or does not measure up to the legal standard." (Miller v. Midway Fishing Tool Co., supra, 106 C.A.2d 614 [citing Wigmore]; see Haskins v. Southern Pac. Co. (1934) 3 C.A.2d 177, 183, 39 P.2d 895; Blumberg v. M. & T. (1949) 34 C.2d 226, 230, 209 P.2d 1 [woman's narrow heel caught in opening of rubber-strip mat in front of elevator; "[t]he claim that the mat in question was widely used is no legal excuse for the maintenance of a dangerous condition"]; Reagh v. San Francisco Unified School Dist. (1953) 119 C.A.2d 65, 70, 259 P.2d 43; 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §754.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Rule and Theory. See Alvarez v. California (1999) 79 C.A.4th 720, 733, 95 C.R.2d 719, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §284, citing the text [action against state alleging that lack of median barrier caused accident; testimony of state employees regarding state's custom and practice as to discretionary approval of roadway designs].

(2) Not Determinative of Legal Standard.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §897. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.111, 139

111 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

6. Custom or Practice of Others on Negligence Issue.

b. Custom Differing From Statutory Standard.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 111

[§ 111] Custom Differing From Statutory Standard.

(1) Custom Contrary to Standard. In some situations, the standard of care is not the conduct of a prudent person under the circumstances, to be determined by evidence in the particular case, but is prescribed by statute or other binding regulation. Unexcused departure from the prescribed standard is "negligence per se," i.e., negligence as a matter of law. In these situations, a custom or practice differing from the statutory standard is irrelevant, and evidence of it is inadmissible, on the issue of negligence. (Hurtel v. Albert Cohn (1936) 5 C.2d 145, 148, 52 P.2d 922; see Milton v. Los Angeles Motor Coach Co. (1942) 53 C.A.2d 566, 570, 128 P.2d 178 [alleged custom of commercial photographers to stand in middle of street to take pictures, rejected]; Ortega v. Garner (1963) 218 C.A.2d 823, 827, 32 C.R. 632, citing the text.)

In Transamerica Title Ins. Co. v. Green (1970) 11 C.A.3d 693, 89 C.R. 915, an attorney-notary public relied on the representations of his law partner that the people whose signatures he was acknowledging were Mr. and Mrs. P and Mr. and Mrs. H. Actually, the purported wives were impostors. Over objection, four attorneys practicing in San Mateo County testified that the custom and practice there was for a notary in a law office to accept the identification of an attorney's client if introduced by an attorney in the same office. Held, admission of this testimony was error. C.C. 1185 and Govt.C. 8214 establish the duties of notaries public, and evidence that notaries in the county did not comply with these requirements was irrelevant. (11 C.A.3d 703, citing the text.)

However, in Cucinella v. Weston Biscuit Co. (1954) 42 C.2d 71, 73, 265 P.2d 513, plaintiff, partly across a highway, changed her mind, started to return without looking further at traffic, and was struck by defendant's car. The posted speed limit was 25 miles per hour, but the trial judge admitted defendant's evidence that the average speed of motorists there was 30 miles per hour (the speed of defendant's car, according to his testimony). Held, this was relevant, not as an excuse for defendant's negligence, but on the issue of plaintiff's contributory negligence. The facts and circumstances at the time and place of the accident and known to the parties were "part of the res gestae," and aided the jury in passing on the question whether plaintiff acted as a reasonable person.

(2) Custom Higher Than Standard. At first glance, it might appear that, if the statutory standard precludes proof of a lower standard, it must equally preclude proof of a higher one. But this is not true, for the statutory regulation lays down a minimum, not a maximum, requirement. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §756.) Hence, the plaintiff may offer evidence of a custom or "standard practice" of higher care than the statute requires, to establish negligence of the defendant under the circumstances. (Campbell v. Fong Wan (1943) 60 C.A.2d 553, 557, 141 P.2d 43.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
(2) Custom Higher Than Standard.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §899.

112 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

7. Contracts of Others.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 112

[§ 112] Contracts of Others.

"It is the general rule that in the absence of a common plan, scheme, habit or usage, contracts between different parties have no probative value in the consideration and interpretation of other and different contracts even though one of the parties may be common to both." (Lande v. Southern Calif. Freight Lines (1948) 85 C.A.2d 416, 422, 193 P.2d 144 [evidence of similar contracts of defendant with other parties, offered on issue of interpretation of defendant's contract with plaintiff, held properly excluded]; see criticism, 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 394.)

The italicized portion of this quotation makes it clear that, pursuant to the usual test of relevancy, other contracts between a party and a stranger may sometimes be shown. A number of cases were reviewed in Moody v. Peirano (1906) 4 C.A. 411, 88 P. 380, where defendant seller denied having made a warranty. The court declared that if it could be shown "that in all his other sales from this lot of wheat defendant had warranted to the respective purchasers that it was 'White Australian' wheat, such testimony would be relevant for the purpose of showing his course of business in selling the wheat, and it would tend to create a probability that he had made the same warranty in his sale to the plaintiff. The number and frequency of the sales in which the warranty had been made, and their proximity in time to the sale made to the plaintiff, would be circumstances addressed to the discretion of the court in determining the relevancy of the testimony." (4 C.A. 419.) (See Lande v. Southern Calif. Freight Lines, supra, 85 C.A.2d 423, distinguishing Moody and similar cases as involving a common plan or usage.)

The admissibility of this kind of evidence was again affirmed in Firlotte v. Jessee (1946) 76 C.A.2d 207, 211, 172 P.2d 710. Defendant, by an oral agreement, sold plaintiffs the feed for a grazing season on 200 acres of land for $ 600. Then he grazed his own cattle there, which consumed much of the feed. In this action, defendant's position was that by the agreement he had reserved that right. Plaintiffs' witness testified that defendant had approached him prior to the agreement with plaintiffs, offering the same pasturage, for the same price, and making no statement reserving the right to graze his own cattle. Held, the evidence was admissible and tended to support the judgment for plaintiffs. (See 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 401; Brawthen v. H & R Block (1975) 52 C.A.3d 139, 148, 124 C.R. 845 [distinguishing Lande, and allowing evidence of "standard pitch" used by defendant employer to all prospective managers as common habit or usage]; 1 McCormick 5th, §198; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §377.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
 See 1 McCormick 6th, §198.

113 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

8. Experience of Others.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 113

[§ 113] Experience of Others.

In Sill Properties v. CMAG (1963) 219 C.A.2d 42, 33 C.R. 155, a leased restaurant burned down, the lessor refused to comply with his obligation to rebuild, and the lessee sued for damages. He testified that the business would earn substantial profits because of its location and the absence of any comparable restaurant there. The lessor, over objection, introduced evidence showing that the lessee's predecessors in that business had operated at a loss. Held, because the lessee relied on location and characteristics of the building to give the lease a special value, "evidence that the same kind of business over a period of years consistently lost money operating at the same location and in the particular building would be admissible as to that issue." (219 C.A.2d 54.) The lessee's contention that his predecessors were inept and inexperienced went only to the weight of the evidence. (219 C.A.2d 54.) (See Estrada v. Darling-Croze Machine Co. (1969) 275 C.A.2d 681, 684, 80 C.R. 266 [prejudicial exclusion of evidence showing what percentage of commission is customarily paid to salesperson who has left employment]; Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 C.A.3d 462, 93 C.R. 270, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §45 [medical testimony, based on experience with glue-sniffing youngsters, was properly received to show that plaintiffs, adult cushion assemblers, suffered from toluene poisoning]; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §461 et seq.)

However, the experience of others may not be sufficiently comparable to justify its proof. Thus, in Braly v. Midvalley Chemical Co. (1961) 192 C.A.2d 369, 379, 13 C.R. 366, plaintiff cotton farmers sued defendant chemical fertilizer company, alleging that the method by which defendant applied aqua ammonia fertilizer reduced the cotton yield. Plaintiffs made an offer to prove cotton crop failures of two farmers, several miles distant, who used the same method. Defense counsel objected that these farmers had brought actions, one resulting in a defense verdict and the other compromised on a nuisance value basis, and that admission of the evidence would open up issues relating to all farmers in the locality who had used this method, most of them with success. Held, rejection of the offer of proof was a proper exercise of discretion, for it was not shown that the conditions of soil, planting, etc., were sufficiently similar to make the comparison worthy of consideration. (See also Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hacienda Mobile Home Park (1975) 45 C.A.3d 519, 531, 119 C.R. 559 [evidence irrelevant where conditions not substantially similar].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

114 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

9. Other Sales To Prove Value.

a. Sales of Similar Personal Property.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 114

[§ 114] Sales of Similar Personal Property.

Evidence of sales of ordinary similar personal property in the open market is commonly introduced and admitted to prove its market value, e.g., in an action for damages for its destruction. (See Tatone v. Bing (1936) 12 C.A.2d 543, 545, 55 P.2d 933; Foreman & Clark Corp. v. Fallon (1971) 3 C.3d 875, 886, 92 C.R. 162, 479 P.2d 362, citing the text [general rule applied to show rental value of premises]; 1 McCormick 5th, §199; 22 Am.Jur.2d, Damages §955; on related methods of determining value, see U.C.C. 2724 [market quotations in trade journals or newspapers]; 60 Harv. L. Rev. 132 [governmental (OPA) ceiling prices].)

Similarly, in determining the value of shares of stock, evidence of other sales, made either on an exchange or privately, is admissible. (See Estate of Spitly (1932) 124 C.A. 642, 644, 13 P.2d 385 [current stock exchange price is not conclusive, can be challenged by evidence of manipulation]; Estate of Goodhue (1932) 127 C.A. 283, 286, 15 P.2d 771; Holman v. Stockton Savings & Loan Bank (1942) 49 C.A.2d 500, 510, 122 P.2d 120 [evidence of other sales was properly admitted where stock was unlisted and had no market value]; 21 Cal. L. Rev. 178; 6 So. Cal. L. Rev. 339; 18A Am.Jur.2d, Corporations §§451, 843.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §199. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.113 et seq., 142 et seq.

115 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

9. Other Sales To Prove Value.

b. Sales of Same Real or Personal Property.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 115

[§ 115] Sales of Same Real or Personal Property.

In Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 C.2d 744, 192 P.2d 935, a purchaser of land and growing fruit crops sought damages against the vendor for misrepresentation of the value of the property. On the issue of market value of the crops, the purchaser was allowed to show the actual price per ton obtained from the sale of those crops. Held, this was proper. Recognizing the criticism that had been directed at the former rule excluding evidence of sales of other real property (see infra, §116), the court said: "[A]uthorities elsewhere are practically unanimous in holding that evidence of other sales of the identical real property is admissible. ... There is no reason for extending the much-criticized exclusionary rule to evidence of sales of the identical property in question, whether realty or personalty." (31 C.2d 758.) (See People v. Vinson (1950) 99 C.A.2d 100, 101, 221 P.2d 161 [in condemnation suit, defendant owner's expert witness on value was properly cross-examined for knowledge of lower price paid by defendant for property 3 years before]; Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. v. McNulty (1963) 59 C.2d 333, 337, 29 C.R. 13, 379 P.2d 493 [condemnation; owner on cross-examination was properly required to testify to price he paid for the land 4 years before suit]; In re Marriage of Folb (1975) 53 C.A.3d 862, 871, 126 C.R. 306 [Bagdasarian rule also applies to real property].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

116 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

C. Similar or Related Acts or Circumstances.

9. Other Sales To Prove Value.

c. Sales of Other Real Property.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 116

[§ 116] Sales of Other Real Property.

(1) General Rule of Admissibility. On the issue of the value of a parcel of real property, the price paid for similar property in the vicinity at about the same time seems clearly relevant. This evidence is admitted by most courts, and its admissibility is supported by practically all writers. (See 1 McCormick 5th, §199; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §463; 9 Hastings L. J. 101; 31A Am.Jur.2d, Expert and Opinion Evidence §336.)

(2) Former Minority and California Rule of Exclusion. A small minority of courts still follows the older view that the introduction of evidence of this type might raise confusing side issues as to the similarity of the conditions in each of the other sales, and this was formerly the rule in California. (See Estate of Ross (1915) 171 C. 64, 66, 151 P. 1138; Merchants Trust Co. v. Hopkins (1930) 103 C.A. 473, 478, 284 P. 1072; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Southern Pac. Co. (1936) 13 C.A.2d 505, 512, 57 P.2d 575; Los Angeles v. Cole (1946) 28 C.2d 509, 516, 170 P.2d 928; Heimann v. Los Angeles (1947) 30 C.2d 746, 754, 185 P.2d 597; People v. La Macchia (1953) 41 C.2d 738, 744, 264 P.2d 15.)

The exclusionary rule did not extend to cross-examination or redirect, and its application on direct examination was subject to constant criticism by dissenting justices in condemnation cases. Thus, in the Cole and Heimann cases, supra, the dissenters argued that: (1) Relevancy of such comparison evidence is settled by common experience in the commercial world; (2) the objection of unfairness in the use, as a test of market value, of prices obtained by compromise, is one that goes merely to the weight of the evidence in the particular circumstances; and (3) the objection of confusion of issues is untenable because the same collateral issues may be (and usually are) fully developed on cross-examination. And in People v. La Macchia, supra, the dissenting justices asked: "Why is there no concern about collateral issues on cross or redirect examination and concern of phantom proportions on direct examination? The magnified risk of collateral issues must be balanced against the reality of inevitable confusion when jurors hear evidence of the greatest relevance and are then told that they cannot base the value of the property on that evidence." (41 C.2d 755.)

(3) Abrogation of Rule of Exclusion. In Los Angeles v. Faus (1957) 48 C.2d 672, 676, 312 P.2d 680, a condemnation suit, the exclusionary rule was repudiated and the evidence held admissible on both direct and cross-examination. The court also declared the safeguarding limits on admissibility in the following quotation from McCormick: "The sales of the other tracts must have been sufficiently near in time, and the other land must be located sufficiently near the land to be valued, and must be sufficiently alike in respect to character, situation, usability, and improvements, to make it clear that the two tracts are comparable in value and that the price realized for the other land may fairly be considered as shedding light on the value of the land in question. Manifestly, the trial judge in applying so vague a standard must be granted a wide discretion." (48 C.2d 678.) (On safeguarding limits, see People v. Murata (1958) 161 C.A.2d 369, 375, 326 P.2d 947; and see generally 9 Hastings L. J. 101; 5 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 151; 31 So. Cal. L. Rev. 204; 12 Stanf. L. Rev. 766; 4 Proof of Facts 649; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice in California 2d, Chap. 4; 85 A.L.R.2d 110.)

(4) Evidence Code. The Faus rule was codified by former C.C.P. 1845.5, now superseded by Ev.C. 810 et seq. The Evidence Code changed the rule by making the other sales not independently admissible, but only matters on which opinion testimony may be based. (See Ev.C. 813, 816, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §§101, 106.) Ev.C. 810 and Ev.C. 811 extended the Evidence Code rules to all actions in which the market value of real property, or of real property and tangible personal property valued as a unit, is to be ascertained. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §99.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Rule of Admissibility. See 1 McCormick 6th, §199.

117 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

D. Intent of Party.

1. Criminal Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 117

[§ 117] Criminal Cases.

The defendant's intent is relevant in most criminal prosecutions. (See 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §1 et seq.) It may be shown circumstantially by acts, declarations, or other conduct. (See People v. Van Wyke (1949) 91 C.A.2d 839, 843, 206 P.2d 53; People v. Phillips (1960) 186 C.A.2d 231, 240, 8 C.R. 830, citing the text [intent to defraud, element of crime of obtaining money by false pretenses]; People v. Corral (1964) 224 C.A.2d 300, 304, 36 C.R. 591 [burglary: "The intruder's intent to commit theft within the houses was amply shown by the secret and noiseless entry in an unusual manner at an odd hour of the night into the homes where he was not an invited guest, the thefts of property, and his sudden flight on being discovered"]; People v. Grever (1989) 211 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 5, 259 C.R. 469, citing the text [specific intent to deprive custodial parent of right to physical custody of minor; see P.C. 278.5, 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §67]; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §309 et seq.; 29A Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §1469; 64 A.L.R.2d 276, 279 [recantation as evidence of intent of accused in perjury prosecution]; 87 A.L.R.2d 926 [extent of injuries as proof of intent in battery].)

In People v. Becker (1934) 137 C.A. 349, 352, 30 P.2d 562, defendant, charged with issuance of a check with intent to defraud, was held entitled to offer evidence tending to show that he had a reasonable expectation of having money on deposit at the time the check would be presented. This was circumstantial evidence as to his lawful purpose, admissible on the issue of intent to defraud.

In People v. Vogel (1956) 46 C.2d 798, 805, 299 P.2d 850, a bigamy prosecution, evidence that defendant's first wife was generally reputed to be married to H was admissible to show defendant's honest belief that she had divorced him and that he was therefore free to marry the prosecuting witness.

In People v. Clifton (1967) 248 C.A.2d 126, 132, 56 C.R. 74, defendant was charged with assault with intent to commit rape. Evidence that, 2 hours before, he had made an indecent proposal to another woman, was held admissible as tending to show his intent in attacking the victim.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CALCRIM, No. 223 [Direct and Circumstantial Evidence: Defined (circumstantial evidence may be used to prove intent)]; CALCRIM, No. 225 [Circumstantial Evidence: Intent or Mental State].

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §193.

118 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

D. Intent of Party.

2. Civil Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 118

[§ 118] Civil Cases.

A party's intent is occasionally relevant in civil cases, and may be shown by evidence of relevant circumstances affording an inference of intent. (See Zitny v. State Bar (1966) 64 C.2d 787, 792, 51 C.R. 825, 415 P.2d 521, citing the text; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §371 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §556 et seq.)

Thus, prior or subsequent acts and declarations of a grantor or donor may be offered on the issue of intent to pass title to the property. (See Dinneen v. Younger (1943) 57 C.A.2d 200, 205, 134 P.2d 323; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §212.) (See 14 Proof of Facts 531 [use of secondary evidence after will has been lost or destroyed]; 2 Proof of Facts 2d 187 [statistical proof of racial discrimination in employment]; 4 Proof of Facts 2d 41 [grantor's intent that grantee hold realty in trust]; 10 Proof of Facts 2d 669 [testator's intent to exercise power of appointment]; 44 Proof of Facts 3d 377 [decedent's intent to change life insurance beneficiary]; 34 Hastings L. J. 553 [relevancy of statistics to prove discrimination].)

Circumstantial evidence of intent is particularly important in tax proceedings and actions for dissolution of marriage, on the issue of domicile. (See 9 Summary (9th), Taxation, §28 et seq.; 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, §22 et seq.; 11 Summary (9th), Husband and Wife, §96 et seq.; 61 Harv. L. Rev. 1235; Rest.2d, Conflict of Laws §18, Comment d [before acquiring domicile, person must intend to make that place his or her home "for the time at least," and intent must be determined in light of declarations and other conduct].)

Thus, in Kopasz v. Kopasz (1951) 107 C.A.2d 308, 237 P.2d 284, the husband, sent to Nevada military stations, obtained a Nevada divorce. The decree was held void on the following evidence showing no domicile: He did not come there voluntarily but by military order; he lived on an army base and in hotels; he never owned property, worked there as a civilian, or registered to vote; he constantly expressed dissatisfaction with living conditions there and voiced his desire to be transferred to the east; after the divorce he immediately remarried in California and resided here ever since. "Such behavior and declarations of appellant made without any apparent object to deceive those to whom they were addressed are competent evidence of his intention." (107 C.A.2d 310.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-References: 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §31 et seq.; 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §130 et seq. The discussion of domicile, formerly located in Parent and Child, has been transferred to 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Jurisdiction, Supp., §151A et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.108

119 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

E. Motive.

1. Criminal Cases.

a. Motive of Defendant.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 119

[§ 119] In General.

The defendant's motive is frequently relevant in a criminal prosecution, particularly in homicide cases, and it may be shown circumstantially. "[E]vidence having a direct tendency, in view of the surrounding circumstances, to prove motive on the part of a person to commit a homicide, and thus to solve a doubt either as to the identity of the slayer, the degree of the offense, the insanity of the accused, or the justification or excusability of his act, is admissible, however discreditable it may reflect upon the defendant, and even where it may show him guilty of other crimes." (People v. Gonzales (1948) 87 C.A.2d 867, 877, 198 P.2d 81; see People v. Wolff (1964) 61 C.2d 795, 807, 40 C.R. 271, 394 P.2d 959, infra, §125; People v. Beyea (1974) 38 C.A.3d 176, 194, 113 C.R. 254 [to show identity and motive defendants were properly identified as Hell's Angels]; People v. Dominguez (1981) 121 C.A.3d 481, 499, 175 C.R. 445 [following Beyea]; People v. Contreras (1983) 144 C.A.3d 749, 756, 192 C.R. 810 [same]; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §4; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §117 et seq.; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §385 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §558; 40A Am.Jur.2d (1999 ed.), Homicide §269; 39 A.L.R.4th 775 [evidence of gang membership].)

Thus, in a murder trial where the killing is admitted, but self-defense or accident or a sudden quarrel or heat of passion is asserted, the prosecution may show a motive or reason for intentional killing. (People v. Hall (1938) 27 C.A.2d 440, 445, 81 P.2d 248.)

In People v. Mullen (1953) 115 C.A.2d 340, 343, 252 P.2d 19, defendant convict was charged with assault on a fellow prisoner. The theory of the prosecution was that defendant had a homosexual desire for C, and that the victim, a friend of C, obstructed him. Evidence was introduced of defendant's homosexual advances toward C and threatening demands that C stop running around with the victim. Held, this evidence of antagonism and enmity was admissible on the issue of identity of the assailant. Experience shows that interference with sexual relationships creates passions of envy or jealousy; the typical situations involve a man's relationship with a woman, but the evidence is just as relevant where the relationship is homosexual.

In People v. Lopez (1969) 1 C.A.3d 78, 81 C.R. 386, a prosecution for assault with a deadly weapon, the prosecution introduced evidence that defendant had previously fought with the victim's brother, who then testified against defendant in a criminal trial based on that assault. Defendant objected to this proof of another crime. Held, no error. "Logically, the animosity which may have arisen between the two families as a result of defendant's fight with Garcia's brother and the felony prosecution which followed supplied the motive for defendant's behavior and was a meaningful link in the People's chain of incriminating evidence against him." (1 C.A.3d 85.) Because a motive ordinarily is the incentive for criminal behavior, its probative value generally exceeds its prejudicial effect. Wide latitude is permitted in admitting evidence of its existence. (1 C.A.3d 85.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. DePriest (2007) 42 C.4th 1, 44, 63 C.R.3d 896, 163 P.3d 896 [in capital murder prosecution, evidence of motive (defendant told his parole officer he wanted to move to Missouri but he had no car, money, or other source of income), together with his opportunity to meet those needs by committing charged crime, was substantial evidence of defendant's identity as perpetrator]; People v. Anderson (2007) 152 C.A.4th 919, 942, 61 C.R.3d 903 [CALCRIM, No. 370 properly guides jury in evaluating evidence of motive]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.342

120 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

E. Motive.

1. Criminal Cases.

a. Motive of Defendant.

2. Need To Obtain Money.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 120

[§ 120] Need To Obtain Money.

In a prosecution for theft or robbery, evidence of the defendant's lack of money prior to the act, or the sudden acquisition or possession of it after the act, may be relevant as tending to show motive and therefore the defendant's identity as the perpetrator. (See People v. Orloff (1944) 65 C.A.2d 614, 620, 151 P.2d 288 [stating rule but holding it inapplicable where no showing of these facts]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §152; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §392; 91 A.L.R.2d 1046.)

People v. Gorgol (1953) 122 C.A.2d 281, 304, 265 P.2d 69, applies this principle to unusual facts. The charge was robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, the victim being a taxi driver with whom defendant was riding. Defendant admitted that he held a gun and received $ 25 from the driver, but claimed that he had no need for such a sum and that it was voluntarily handed over by the latter under the mistaken belief that defendant was attempting to rob him. Held, in refutation of this defense, it was permissible to show that defendant was in financial difficulties. (See People v. Hawkins (1961) 196 C.A.2d 832, 836, 17 C.R. 66 [forgery, need for money a possible motive; defendant was properly asked about his financial condition, though it developed that his only source of income was a bookie establishment]; People v. Martin (1971) 17 C.A.3d 661, 668, 95 C.R. 250 [financial situation was admissible to show motive of sale in possession of heroin]; 1956 A.S. 564 [arson].)

Evidence of a life insurance policy or will of a decedent, under which the defendant would benefit, is admissible to show a motive for murder of the decedent, but only where it is also shown that the defendant knew of the existence of the policy or will. (See People v. Goedecke (1967) 65 C.2d 850, 860, 56 C.R. 625, 423 P.2d 777; 28 A.L.R.2d 857.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Koontz (2002) 27 C.4th 1041, 1076, 119 C.R.2d 859, 46 P.3d 335 [in prosecution for capital murder, kidnapping, and theft, trial judge did not err in allowing prosecutor to cross-examine defendant on his earnings prior to charged offenses, where defendant had testified that he had ample resources in attempt to show he had no motive for theft]; People v. Cornwell (2005) 37 C.4th 50, 96, 97, 33 C.R.3d 1, 117 P.3d 622 [in prosecution for capital murder and robbery, trial judge did not err in admitting evidence of defendant's poverty preceding charged offenses, in light of his sudden wealth following them and his possession of currency in denominations taken in charged robbery, immediately following robbery]; People v. Carrillo (2004) 119 C.A.4th 94, 104, 13 C.R.3d 878 [in prosecution for aiding and abetting robbery and assault, erroneous admission of evidence of defendant's financial problems could not be considered harmless, where case against defendant was entirely circumstantial, and she offered marginally plausible explanation of events consistent with innocence].

121 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

E. Motive.

1. Criminal Cases.
  - a. Motive of Defendant.
  3. Use of Narcotics.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 121

[§ 121] Use of Narcotics.

Evidence of an accused's narcotics addiction is admissible where the accused is charged with a drug-related crime or where obtaining narcotics was the direct object of the crime committed. (See People v. Copeland (1959) 169 C.A.2d 713, 715, 338 P.2d 1; People v. Cardenas (1982) 31 C.3d 897, 906, 184 C.R. 165, 647 P.2d 569; People v. Felix (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1385, 1392, 1394, 28 C.R.2d 860 [in burglary prosecution, evidence of defendant's heroin use was admissible to prove motive; direct connection between drug use and burglary was established by defendant's admission to detective].) But where the object of the charged offense is to obtain money or property other than narcotics, evidence of narcotic use is inadmissible. The probative value of the evidence is outweighed by the tendency to incite the jury to decide on the accused's character rather than on proof of the elements of the crime. (See People v. Cardenas, supra; People v. Holt (1984) 37 C.3d 436, 450, 208 C.R. 547, 690 P.2d 1207.) (See 2 A.L.R.4th 1298 [admissibility of evidence of accused's use of, or addiction to, drugs to show motive for theft of property other than drugs].)

In People v. Reid (1982) 133 C.A.3d 354, 184 C.R. 186, defendant, charged with robbery, contended that it was error to admit evidence that he had a drug paraphernalia "kit" and healing "track marks" on his arms. The trial judge allowed the evidence to come in on the ground that prior drug use by defendant was relevant to his motive for committing the robbery. Held, the evidence was improperly admitted. The extent and cost of the defendant's habit is an essential element; i.e., where the habit is costly, the evidence is relevant. (133 C.A.3d 363.) Here, the prosecution did not show what drugs defendant used, how often he used them, or how fresh the track marks were; thus, the link between the proffered evidence and the alleged motive was lacking. "The fact that appellant used drugs, without more, does not have a tendency to prove a motive for robbery." (133 C.A.3d 363.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

122 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

E. Motive.

1. Criminal Cases.

b. Motive of Third Person.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 122

[§ 122] Motive of Third Person.

(1) Former Rule. The motive of a third person is ordinarily not admissible unless coupled with other evidence tending to connect that person with the crime. This rule is one of necessity, carrying out the policy against extending the scope of inquiry into collateral issues and thereby prolonging trials beyond their normal period. (See People v. Mendez (1924) 193 C. 39, 52, 223 P. 65; People v. Buono (1961) 191 C.A.2d 203, 229, 12 C.R. 604; People v. Arline (1970) 13 C.A.3d 200, 204, 91 C.R. 520, supra, §21; People v. Green (1980) 27 C.3d 1, 22, 164 C.R. 1, 609 P.2d 468; People v. Blankenship (1985) 167 C.A.3d 840, 848, 213 C.R. 666.) The standard applied in these cases is that there must be "some competent and substantial proof of a probability" that a third person committed the offense; "the mere possibility that some third person did it is not enough." (People v. Buono, supra, 191 C.A.2d 228.) (See 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §587; 17 U.S.F. L. Rev. 441 [criticizing "Mendez-Arline exclusionary rule"]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §139 et seq. [criticizing limitations on use of third person evidence].)

(2) Rejection of Substantial Evidence Requirement. In People v. Hall (1986) 41 C.3d 826, 226 C.R. 112, 718 P.2d 99, a first degree murder case, defendant made an offer of proof to show that an informant responsible for defendant's arrest had a motive and opportunity to commit the crime. The trial judge, relying on People v. Arline, supra, rejected the offer. Held, this was error, though harmless in the light of all of the evidence. (41 C.3d 835.)

(a) Nature of Mendez-Arline rule. "What has come to be called the Mendez-Arline test is an exclusionary rule abstracted from case law articulating the minimum threshold for admitting evidence of third-party culpability that tends to exonerate a defendant. Simply expressed, it provides that such evidence is admissible only if it constitutes 'substantial evidence tending to directly connect that person with the actual commission of the offense.' " (41 C.3d 831, quoting People v. Green, supra.)

(b) Analysis and criticism of rule. The basis for exclusion in Arline is ambiguous. The opinion purports simply to apply Ev.C. 352, but also contains language calling for a threshold showing of substantial proof of probability of the third-party's guilt. "We believe the latter language sets too high a standard." (41 C.3d 833.) Third-party evidence need only be capable of raising a reasonable doubt of defendant's guilt. (41 C.3d 833.)

(c) Correct approach for trial courts. "We reject Arline to the extent that it creates a distinct and elevated standard for admitting this kind of exculpatory evidence. Rather than speaking in terms of a Mendez-Arline 'rule,' courts should simply treat third-party culpability evidence like any other evidence: if relevant it is admissible (§350) unless its probative value is substantially outweighed by the risk of undue delay, prejudice or confusion (§352). We recognize that an inquiry into the admissibility of such evidence and the balancing required under section 352 will always turn on the facts of the case. Yet courts must weigh those facts carefully. They should avoid a hasty conclusion such as the trial court's finding in the present case that evidence of Foust's guilt was 'incredible.' Such a determination is properly the province of the jury." (41 C.3d 834.) And the court "must focus on the actual degree of risk that the admission of relevant evidence may result in undue delay, prejudice, or confusion." (41 C.3d 834, noting Wigmore's criticism of the limitations on use of this evidence.)

(d) Discretionary exclusion of remote evidence distinguished. Defendant contended that the constitutional right to present a defense precludes any application of Ev.C. 352 to third-party culpability evidence. This is unsound: (1) "[T]he ordinary rules of evidence do not impermissibly infringe on the accused's right to present a defense. Courts retain, moreover, a traditional and intrinsic power to exercise discretion to control the admission of evidence in the interests of orderly procedure and the avoidance of prejudice." (41 C.3d 834.) (2) None of the out-of-state cases cited suggests that third-party culpability evidence be admitted no matter how remotely relevant and without considering its potential to disrupt orderly proceedings. (3) The alternate proposition that the prosecution be required to show a compelling state interest before such evidence may be excluded "similarly overlooks the policy behind section 352, which incorporates a compelling state interest, i.e., the policy in favor of an orderly trial on the merits." (41 C.3d 835.)

The Hall standard has been applied in numerous cases. (See People v. Sandoval (1992) 4 C.4th 155, 176, 14 C.R.2d 342, 841 P.2d 862 [citing Hall; papers found in victim's residence and containing names other than defendant's were not admissible where defense had no evidence of another person's actual motive to commit charged crimes]; People v. Cudjo (1993) 6 C.4th 585, 609, 25 C.R.2d 390, 863 P.2d 635, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §20 [citing Hall; testimony that defendant's brother had confessed to murder within hours after crime was improperly excluded]; People v. Bradford (1997) 15 C.4th 1229, 1325, 65 C.R.2d 145, 939 P.2d 259 [in murder prosecution, statements by victim concerning her previous fear of "a man," even if not made inadmissible by hearsay rule, were not required to be admitted as evidence of third-party culpability, because they were insufficient to link someone other than defendant to murder]; 22 A.L.R.5th 1 [commission of similar crimes by person other than accused]; 14 Pepperdine L. Rev. 196 [Hall].)

(3) Distinction: Motive of Third Person Imputed to Defendant. In People v. Hole (1983) 139 C.A.3d 431, 188 C.R. 693, G, owner of a market in poor financial condition, procured a fire insurance policy on the property in the sum of $ 610,000, and a month later it was destroyed by fire. Defendant H, G's nephew, and defendant C, who had worked for G, were charged with arson. The prosecution introduced evidence of financial difficulties and the insurance policy to show G's motive to burn the market. Defendants contended that, under People v. Green, supra, and similar cases, a third person's motive is inadmissible. Held, the evidence was properly admitted. (a) Green and similar cases involved attempts by the defendant to absolve himself by directing suspicion to the third person. (2) Here the evidence was of the motive of an uncharged conspirator, imputed to defendants. G's motive, coupled with strong circumstantial evidence linking defendants to G, had a tendency to prove that defendants shared the motive and burned the market at his request. Thus his motive was "derivatively" their motive. (139 C.A.3d 436.)

(4) Distinction: Motive of Third Person for Testifying. In People v. Roberts (1992) 2 C.4th 271, 6 C.R.2d 276, 826 P.2d 274, defendant, a prison inmate charged with the murder of another inmate, introduced evidence that R, a prosecution witness, had a motive to lie because he had been given benefits by the state. Over defendant's objection based on improper character evidence, R was allowed to state on rebuttal that he wanted to testify because defendant had given "the order to have me hit." Held, this was proper. R's statement was not improper character evidence. Instead, it tended to establish that his motive for testifying was his resentment of defendant rather than any inducement which the state had given him and which defendant had emphasized to impeach R's credibility. (2 C.4th 305, citing People v. Green, supra.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Rejection of Substantial Evidence Requirement. See Holmes v. South Carolina (2006) 547 U.S. 319, 126 S.Ct. 1727, 1734, 164 L.Ed.2d 503, 512 [state evidence rule under which defendant could not introduce proof of third-party guilt if prosecution introduced forensic evidence strongly supporting guilty verdict was unconstitutional]; People v. Gutierrez (2002) 28 C.4th 1083, 1136, 1137, 124 C.R.2d 373, 52 P.3d 572 [in capital murder prosecution, trial judge did not err in excluding third-party culpability evidence; although defendant testified in hearing under People v. Hall (1986) 41 C.3d 826, 226 C.R. 112, 718 P.2d 99, text, p. 469, about victim's drug dealings with another person, there was no direct or circumstantial evidence to link that person or any other third party with victim in hours before her death]; People v. Yeoman (2003) 31 C.4th 93, 140, 2 C.R.3d 186, 72 P.3d 1166 [in capital murder prosecution, trial judge did not err in excluding evidence that third party had been charged with attempted burglary of murder victim's car approximately 1 week before murder; defendant's offer of proof showed motive but no direct or circumstantial evidence linking third party to murder]; People v. Valdez (2004) 32 C.4th 73, 108, 8 C.R.3d 271, 82 P.3d 296 [defendant was not deprived of due process and fair trial rights by exclusion of testimony that investigating officer found group of individuals in alley near murder victim's house and that one member of group, who appeared nervous, had blood on shirt and boots; defendant's offer of proof was not that member was perpetrator but that investigation at crime scene was inadequate, and thus claim of third-party culpability was never made]; People v. Panah (2005) 35 C.4th 395, 481, 25 C.R.3d 672, 107 P.3d 790 [mere presence of three men in parking lot of defendant's apartment complex at time murder victim disappeared, absent any evidence, direct or circumstantial, linking them to crime, did not qualify as admissible third-party culpability evidence]; People v. Harris (2005) 37 C.4th 310, 340, 33 C.R.3d 509, 118 P.3d 545 [in prosecution for attempted murder and capital murder, evidence regarding two persons who subsequently murdered defendant's attempted murder victim was properly excluded; prosecution established that defendant committed initial murder attempt, that he was in house where capital murder took place, that same weapon was used in both incidents, and no evidence was presented indicating that other two persons were present at either event]; People v. Robinson (2005) 37 C.4th 592, 625, 36 C.R.3d 760, 124 P.3d 363 [in capital murder prosecution, trial judge did not err in refusing to admit evidence of crimes for which two third parties were arrested approximately 10 days after defendant's arrest; evidence did not directly or even circumstantially link third parties to crimes with which defendant was charged]; People v. Lewis & Oliver (2006) 39 C.4th 970, 996, 47 C.R.3d 467, 140 P.3d 775 [in capital murder prosecution, trial judge properly excluded evidence of white bag found in church after charged murders occurred there; whether substance was cocaine or innocuous white powder, mere presence of saleable quality of suspicious powder at murder scene did not tend to prove that someone other than defendants committed murder as part of "drug deal gone bad"]; People v. Prince (2007) 40 C.4th 1179, 1242, 1272, 57 C.R.3d 543, 156 P.3d 1015 [in murder prosecution, proffered third-party culpability evidence--statements by victim concerning conflicts with her boyfriend, and testimony of witness that man who watched witness at fitness center fit general description of assailant in charged crimes--was properly excluded; in neither case was there anything that would link third party directly or indirectly to charged murders]; People v. Adams (2004) 115 C.A.4th 243, 253, 9 C.R.3d 170 [in prosecution for murder, with rape and sodomy special circumstances, trial judge did not err in refusing to allow defendant to present evidence of violent nature of relationship between victim and former boyfriend, where defendant presented no direct or circumstantial evidence linking boyfriend to charged murder].

123 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

E. Motive.

2. Civil Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 123

[§ 123] Civil Cases.

As illustrated in the following cases, when a party's motive is relevant in a civil action, it is usually because malice is an element of the claim or punitive damages are being sought. (See 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §19.)

(1) Fraudulent Denial of Benefits. In Sprague v. Equifax (1985) 166 C.A.3d 1012, 213 C.R. 69, plaintiff, beneficiary under a credit disability insurance company, sued defendant insurer and defendant Equifax, a company providing investigating services to insurance companies, for conspiracy to fraudulently deny him benefits. Plaintiff sought both compensatory and punitive damages. At trial, he offered testimony concerning Equifax's business practice of obtaining adverse information about insureds for insurers. Held, the evidence was admissible. In Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 C.3d 910, 922, 148 C.R. 389, 582 P.2d 980, evidence of an insurance company's policy on settlement of claims, in the claims representatives' field manual, was admitted to show the company's intent and its conscious course of conduct toward plaintiffs. In Pistorius v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1981) 123 C.A.3d 541, 556, 176 C.R. 660, episodes of cutting off disability benefits, to see if the insureds would complain, were admitted to show motive, intent, plan, etc., in terminating benefits. Here, the evidence was relevant to show company motives in arranging for medical examinations of disabled insureds, and was also relevant to the issues of intent, motive, etc., involved in the allegation of conspiracy to fraudulently terminate benefits. (166 C.A.3d 1033, 1034.)

(2) Libel. In a libel case where the plaintiff seeks punitive damages or the defendant pleads privilege and good faith, malice of the defendant may be shown by proof of other libels published by him concerning the plaintiff. (Scott v. Times-Mirror Co. (1919) 181 C. 345, 358, 184 P. 672.) (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §403 et seq.)

(3) Malicious Prosecution. In Robinson v. McKnight (1930) 103 C.A. 718, 722, 725, 284 P. 1056, a malicious prosecution suit, plaintiff testified to long inflammatory conversations with defendants, including many self-serving hearsay charges against them and their replies. Held, this testimony was properly admitted for the limited purpose of establishing the feud between the parties, and the animus of defendants toward plaintiff, all of which could indicate that defendants' motive in prosecuting was malicious.

(4) Procuring of Will by Fraud and Undue Influence. In Morris Stulsaft Foundation v. Superior Court (1966) 245 C.A.2d 409, 419, 54 C.R. 12, a will was contested on the theory that the sole beneficiary had conspired with G, the scrivener-witness, to procure it by fraud and undue influence. The contestants, on deposition, asked G about his bankruptcy. Held, the questions were a proper means of discovering a motive of personal profit in preparing and witnessing the will, and the evidence of his bad financial condition would be relevant on that issue in the trial. (245 C.A.2d 420.)

(5) Products Liability: Punitive Damages Claim. In Hilliard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 C.A.3d 374, 196 C.R. 117, plaintiff brought a products liability action based on injuries resulting from use of the manufacturer's Dalkon Shield (intrauterine contraceptive device). To support her punitive damages claim under a conscious disregard of safety theory (see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1337 et seq.), plaintiff offered evidence of septic abortions and deaths caused to users of the device, and defendant's action in taking the device off the United States market. Held, exclusion of this evidence was error.

(a) "Evidence of death and septic abortions caused to Dalkon Shield users is relevant because it had a tendency in reason to prove that defendant was aware of the probable dangerous consequences of their plastic IUD. Evidence that defendant Robins took the Dalkon Shield off the domestic market as the result of some pressure or activity by the FDA in June 1974 is relevant if Robins was aware of the reasons of the FDA in seeking the removal of this device from the market because this evidence has a tendency in reason to prove that Robins, aware of the probable dangerous consequences of the product, wilfully and deliberately failed to avoid those consequences until pressured by the FDA." (148 C.A.3d 399.)

(b) "Evidence of any conduct by defendant, in continuing to manufacture and market the Dalkon Shield without change, in the United States, or elsewhere, aware of the probable dangerous consequences of the IUD, is evidence having a tendency in reason to prove Robins wilfully and deliberately failed to avoid these consequences. Evidence that Robins failed to adequately test the Dalkon Shield before marketing it or during marketing is evidence that Robins acted with conscious disregard for the safety of others. Evidence that Robins, aware of the state of the art in testing medical devices on animals, failed to conduct adequate animal testing is evidence that has a tendency in reason to prove that Robins acted in conscious disregard of the safety of others." (148 C.A.3d 399.)

(c) The trial judge's reliance on Ev.C. 352 was unjustified. Malice or conscious disregard was a main issue in the punitive damage part of plaintiff's case, and the rejected evidence permitted a strong inference of the existence of these elements; hence, the prejudice to defendant was substantially outweighed by the probable value of the evidence. (148 C.A.3d 400.)

(6) Transfer in Contemplation of Death. The motive of a decedent in making a transfer in contemplation of death may be relevant in a tax controversy. (See Estate of Adams (1952) 39 C.2d 309, 318, 246 P.2d 625.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §22.(5) Products Liability: Punitive Damages Claim.

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1574 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.108

124 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

F. Knowledge.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 124

[§ 124] Knowledge.

"The knowledge a person may have when material to an issue in a judicial proceeding is a fact to be proven as any other fact. It differs from physical objects and phenomena in that it is a state of mind like belief or consciousness and cannot be seen, heard, or otherwise directly observed by other persons. It may be evidenced by the affirmative statement or admission of the possessor of it. If he is silent or says he did not have that knowledge, it may be evidenced in other ways, e.g., by his conduct or by proof that the information was given him in writing and he read the document, or orally and he heard the statement made." (Oil Workers Int. Union v. Superior Court (1951) 103 C.A.2d 512, 533, 230 P.2d 71.)

The Oil Workers case was a contempt proceeding against a picket for violation of a restraining order in a labor dispute. Petitioner denied knowledge of the order. But testimony that warnings had been given to a number of men, at a time and place where he must have heard them, supported an inference that he had the requisite knowledge. (103 C.A.2d 531, 532.)

In Dowden v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1963) 223 C.A.2d 124, 35 C.R. 541, decedent employee was electrocuted while operating a harvester with a high elevator past power lines. On two prior occasions, the lack of adequate clearance caused contact with the lines, but in the workers' compensation proceeding an award for serious and wilful misconduct was refused. The decision was based on the employer's testimony of his own state of mind (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §8), that the work was "not dangerous if it were done right to my knowledge." Held, the element of actual knowledge of danger (see 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §316) was shown by the circumstantial evidence, despite the employer's vague and qualified disclaimer. That opinion, measured against his admitted knowledge of the power lines and the evidence of known mishaps and close escapes, could not support the finding in his favor. "[T]he facts may belie his declarations. Past warnings, past experiences, may arouse premonitions of peril which no sensible person may ignore. ... Circumstantial evidence may justify or even compel a finding of knowledge in the face of testimony avowing ignorance." (223 C.A.2d 132, footnote 3, citing the text.) (See Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 C.3d 756, 778, 91 C.R. 745, 478 P.2d 465 [swimming pool health inspection reports were admissible on wilful and wanton misconduct count to show defendants' knowledge of past safety violations]; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§245, 301; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §557.) (On proof of knowledge by owner of dangerous instrumentality on probable presence of children, see 33 Proof of Facts 2d 611, 625; on proof of knowledge of animal's vicious propensities, see 13 Proof of Facts 2d 473.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §319. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.109

125 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

G. Insanity and Incompetency.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 125

[§ 125] Insanity and Incompetency.

(1) Insanity. The kinds of conduct that can be proved as circumstantial evidence of insanity are too numerous to list, for, as Wigmore points out, "any and all conduct" is admissible. (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §228.)

In a criminal case, the defendant's conduct within a reasonable time before or after the act is admissible to show his or her mental condition at the time of its commission. People v. Wolff (1964) 61 C.2d 795, 40 C.R. 271, 394 P.2d 959, summarizes the holdings of prior decisions: "Among the kinds of conduct of a defendant which our courts have held to constitute evidence of legal sanity are the following: 'an ability on the part of the accused to devise and execute a deliberate plan' [David]; 'the manner in which the crime was conceived, planned and executed' [Darling]; the fact that witnesses 'observed no change in his manner and that he appeared to be normal' [Caetano]; the fact that 'the defendant walked steadily and calmly, spoke clearly and coherently and appeared to be fully conscious of what he was doing' [Van Winkle]; and the fact that shortly after committing the crime the defendant 'was cooperative and not abusive or combative' [Dennis]; that 'questions put to him ... were answered by him quickly and promptly' [Loomis]; and that 'he appeared rational, spoke coherently, was oriented as to time, place and those persons who were present' [Fraters]." (61 C.2d 805, 806.)

In this case the court said: "[T]he jury could infer that defendant had a motive for his actions (gratification of his sexual desires), that he planned the attack on his mother for some time (obtaining the axe handle from the garage several days in advance; abortive attempt to strike his mother with it on the evening before the crime), that he knew that what he was doing was wrong (initial concealment of the handle underneath his mattress; excuse offered when his mother saw him with the weapon on the evening before the crime; renewed concealment of the handle under the mattress), that he persisted in the fatal attack (pursuit of his fleeing mother into the front room; actual infliction of death by strangling rather than bludgeoning), that he was conscious of having committed a crime (prompt surrender to the police), and that he was calm and coherent (testimony of desk officer and others)." (61 C.2d 807.)

(2) Testamentary Capacity. Conduct is frequently offered to show testamentary capacity or incapacity. (See Estate of Halbert (1947) 80 C.A.2d 666, 672, 182 P.2d 266 [general insanity]; Estate of Turpin (1963) 222 C.A.2d 57, 60, 34 C.R. 812; Estate of Clegg (1978) 87 C.A.3d 594, 600, 151 C.R. 158 [same]; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §229; 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §178 et seq.)

In Estate of Wochos (1972) 23 C.A.3d 47, 99 C.R. 782, the testator was judicially declared incompetent some 6 months prior to the execution of a codicil. There was evidence showing that he suffered from progressive arteriosclerosis, that he evidenced a loss of memory and an impaired gait, and that he had filthy habits personally and in his home. On the date of execution of the codicil, he failed to inform his attorney of two other codicils that had been executed only a few months earlier. Held, the evidence was sufficient to show that the testator's condition had not changed since the judicial determination of incompetency. (23 C.A.3d 54.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Testamentary Capacity.

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §121 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.354

126 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

H. Identity of Person.

1. Fingerprints and Palmprints.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 126

[§ 126] Fingerprints and Palmprints.

Fingerprints are familiar circumstantial means of identification of a person as the perpetrator of a crime. (See People v. Jones (1931) 112 C.A. 68, 71, 296 P. 317; People v. Gardner (1969) 71 C.2d 843, 849, 79 C.R. 743, 457 P.2d 575, citing the text; People v. Kellett (1969) 1 C.A.3d 704, 713, 81 C.R. 917 [fingerprints found at burglarized premises gave probable cause to arrest defendant without warrant]; People v. Reserva (1969) 2 C.A.3d 151, 157, 82 C.R. 333 [prima facie assumption exists that fingerprints in official files are those of person from whom they were purportedly taken and under whose name they are filed]; People v. Preciado (1991) 233 C.A.3d 1244, 1246, 1247, 285 C.R. 22 [single fingerprint of defendant found on wristwatch box in burgled condominium was sufficient to support defendant's burglary conviction, where victim testified that box had never left condominium]; People v. Nguyen (1994) 23 C.A.4th 32, 39, 28 C.R.2d 140 [defendant's fingerprint found on open/closed sign of store that was robbed; fingerprint evidence "is the strongest evidence of identity, and is ordinarily sufficient alone to identify the defendant"]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §151a; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §414; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §569; 28 A.L.R.2d 1115; on fingerprint identification as subject of expert testimony, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §68.)

Palmprint evidence "is of equal force and sufficiency" with fingerprint evidence. (People v. Atwood (1963) 223 C.A.2d 316, 326, 35 C.R. 831; see People v. Buckowski (1951) 37 C.2d 629, 632, 233 P.2d 912; People v. Reserva, supra [identifiable palmprint led to more complete fingerprint identification]; People v. Powers (1984) 151 C.A.3d 905, 910, 199 C.R. 142; People v. Figueroa (1992) 2 C.A.4th 1584, 1587, 4 C.R.2d 40 [discussing and applying case law on fingerprints]; 28 A.L.R.2d 1115, 1127.) (On admissibility of partial fingerprints or palmprints, see People v. Corral (1964) 224 C.A.2d 300, 306, 36 C.R. 591.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.475.5

127 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

H. Identity of Person.

2. Footprints.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 127

[§ 127] Footprints.

"Bare footprints are as reliable an index of identity as fingerprints." (People v. Corral (1964) 224 C.A.2d 300, 305, 36 C.R. 591 [burglary; defendant's prints discovered on top of washer, justifying inference that he stood on its top, barefooted to eliminate noise, and crawled through kitchen window]; see People v. Dwyer (1938) 24 C.A.2d 639, 642, 75 P.2d 653 [burglary; footprints in soft slaked lime beneath window through which defendant entered]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §151a; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §415; 35 A.L.R.2d 856 [footprint evidence]; 45 A.L.R.4th 1178 [admissibility of bare footprint evidence]; 43 Proof of Facts 2d 217.) (On admissibility of partial prints, see People v. Corral, supra, 224 C.A.2d 306.)

The concept of a "footprint" includes bare footprints, i.e., the track made by a naked foot, and shoeprints, i.e., the mark made by footgear. Use of the word "footprint" sometimes refers to both types. (See People v. Zismer (1969) 275 C.A.2d 660, 665, 80 C.R. 184.)

People v. Zismer, supra, discusses the foundation of expert testimony. Photographs of the footprints found at the crime scene were received in evidence, together with a pair of shoes worn by defendant on the night of his arrest. The prosecution contended that the jury could reasonably determine whether the shoe and the prints were similar, without the need for opinion evidence. The trial judge agreed. Held, this was reversible error.

(a) Footprint evidence is admissible when it shows such a similarity to the defendant's shoes as to justify an inference that the tracks were made by his shoes. (275 C.A.2d 665, citing the text.) But, as pointed out by Wigmore, the inference is apt to be weak because the basic features--size, depth, contour, etc.--may not be distinctive. (275 C.A.2d 665.)

(b) Expert testimony has been introduced in virtually all California cases to show the similarities between the prints and the shoes. And, while no California case squarely holds that footprint evidence is inadmissible without expert or lay testimony connecting the tracks with the defendant's shoes, this foundation is required in many other jurisdictions. (275 C.A.2d 667.)

(c) A qualified expert should be permitted to express a direct opinion that the tracks were made by the shoes, even though this is an ultimate issue of fact to be determined by the jury. (275 C.A.2d 667, footnote 4, citing the text.)

(d) Evidence of similarity may not be necessary in some situations, e.g., where tracks lead from the scene of a crime to the defendant. In those cases, there is independent evidence linking the defendant with the tracks. "But where the fact that defendant made the tracks can only be established by a comparison of the tracks with defendant's shoes, the foundational requirements must be met." (275 C.A.2d 668.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.475.6

128 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

H. Identity of Person.

3. Telephone Call.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 128

[§ 128] Telephone Call.

(1) Person Answering Telephone Call. Admissible evidence of the identity of a person answering the telephone arises under the following circumstances: the person's number, as listed in the telephone book, is dialed, the person listed is asked for, and the person who answered identifies himself or herself as the person sought. (See Union Const. Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co. (1912) 163 C. 298, 305, 125 P. 242, supra, §68; People v. Horace (1954) 127 C.A.2d 366, 369, 273 P.2d 923, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §217; 2 McCormick 5th, §226.)

(2) Person Making Telephone Call. The contents of a telephone conversation may be considered in establishing the identity of the person who made the call. In People v. Hess (1970) 10 C.A.3d 1071, 1078, 90 C.R. 268, a prosecution witness was properly allowed to describe a telephone call he had received from a person who identified herself as "Terry Lee Hess of Jamul, California," which was defendant's name and address. Even though the witness had never met defendant, the evidence satisfied the foundational requirement because it dealt with a subject which formed the basis of forged documents that were connected to defendant. Taken together, the forgeries and the contents of the call gave rise to the strong inference that defendant had in fact placed the call. (See Maynard v. State Personnel Bd. (1977) 67 C.A.3d 233, 239, 136 C.R. 503 [identity may be established by proof of recognition of voice or by other circumstances]; 79 A.L.R.3d 79 [identification by voice or other circumstances].) (On voice identification generally, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §99.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Person Answering Telephone Call. See 2 McCormick 6th, §228.

129 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

H. Identity of Person.

4. Defendant's Possession of Stolen Articles.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 129

[§ 129] Defendant's Possession of Stolen Articles.

Possession of stolen goods tends to identify the possessor as the thief, though it may not alone be sufficient to support a conviction. (See People v. Russell (1932) 120 C.A. 622, 625, 8 P.2d 209; People v. Russell (1939) 34 C.A.2d 665, 669, 94 P.2d 400; People v. Corral (1943) 60 C.A.2d 66, 72, 140 P.2d 172; People v. Wissenfeld (1951) 36 C.2d 758, 763, 227 P.2d 833; People v. Rubio (1977) 71 C.A.3d 757, 768, 139 C.R. 750, citing the text [CALJIC, No. 2.15 on this point should not be given unless the evidence establishes defendant's possession]; People v. Anderson (1989) 210 C.A.3d 414, 422, 258 C.R. 482 [upholding constitutionality of CALJIC, No. 2.15; requirement that defendant possess recently stolen property was met despite 41/2-month interval between theft and arrest]; People v. Smithey (1999) 20 C.4th 936, 978, 86 C.R.2d 243, 978 P.2d 1171 [where there was sufficient evidence to permit jury to find beyond reasonable doubt possession of stolen property and intent to steal, giving of CALJIC, No. 2.15 was not error]; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §152 et seq.; 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Property, §135.)

Possession of ordinary money has little tendency to prove theft, but possession of identifiable money, e.g., of a type not in general circulation, may be of more substantial evidentiary value. (See People v. McClain (1931) 115 C.A. 505, 508, 1 P.2d 1085; 1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §154.)

The inference of identity based on possession may establish guilt of crimes other than theft. Thus, in People v. Taylor (1969) 2 C.A.3d 979, 83 C.R. 119, defendant originally was arrested for investigation of burglary. A search of his automobile revealed a gun belt, an empty holster, and some .22 ammunition, expended and unexpended. About 90 minutes after his arrest, in an area one block distant from where the police had questioned him, authorities found a .22 revolver which had been stolen nearly 6 months earlier. Held, defendant was properly convicted of receiving stolen property and being a former felon in possession of a concealable weapon. The evidence showed that the revolver had fired the expended cartridges found in his car, and finding of the weapon close to where he was apprehended supported the inference of possession. (2 C.A.3d 983.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CALCRIM, No. 376 [Possession of Recently Stolen Property as Evidence of a Crime]; People v. Solo'rzano (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1026, 1035, 63 C.R.3d 659 [requirement in CALCRIM, No. 376, of "supporting evidence," rather than "corroborating evidence" as in CALJIC, No. 2.15, does not render instruction constitutionally defective]; People v. O'Dell (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1569, 1573, 64 C.R.3d 116 [in prosecution for unlawful driving or taking of vehicle, instruction in language of CALCRIM, No. 376, based on defendant's having jumped from truck on encountering police officer and having yelled that he did not steal truck, did not violate defendant's right to due process or his right to have each element of offense proved beyond reasonable doubt].

(New) Distinction: Inference not appropriate to establish guilt of murder: Because of its corroboration requirement, CALJIC, No. 2.15 is a permissive, cautionary instruction that inures to a defendant's benefit when given with a theft-related offense. However, when "given with regard to murder, the court is essentially singling out the fact of possession of recently stolen property as one that, if the jury finds it, will support a murder conviction with merely slight corroborating evidence. Because we do not believe the same natural and logical inferences for the crime of murder flow from the possession of stolen property coupled with slight corroborating evidence as for theft-related offenses like receiving stolen property, robbery and burglary, we cannot approve such an extension of this theft-related principle to the general crime of murder." (People v. Barker (2001) 91 C.A.4th 1166, 1176, 111 C.R.2d 403 [in prosecution for murder and robbery, trial judge erred, although harmlessly, in altering CALJIC, No. 2.15 to apply to both crimes]; see People v. Prieto (2003) 30 C.4th 226, 248, 249, 133 C.R.2d 18, 66 P.3d 1123 [approving Barker; in capital murder prosecution, trial judge erred in failing to limit instruction to theft-related offenses, but error was harmless in light of overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt of murder and rape]; People v. Harden (2003) 110 C.A.4th 848, 856, 2 C.R.3d 105 [distinguishing Barker; in murder case in which robbery and burglary special circumstances were alleged, it was not error to give CALJIC, No. 2.15 in connection with special circumstance allegations]; People v. Snyder (2003) 112 C.A.4th 1200, 1227, 5 C.R.3d 711 [distinguishing Prieto; in prosecution for murder, robbery, burglary, and automobile theft, instruction based on CALJIC, No. 2.15 specifically describing circumstances in which jury could draw inference of defendant's guilt "of the crime of robbery and/or burglary" was proper].)

130 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

H. Identity of Person.

5. Other Circumstances.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 130

[§ 130] Other Circumstances.

The following are common types of circumstantial evidence used to establish identity:

(1) Deceased: Clothing and Bodily Characteristics. Identity of a person long dead may be established, though the features are unrecognizable, by clothing, jewelry, false teeth, and general contour and weight of the body. (People v. Peete (1921) 54 C.A. 333, 346, 202 P. 51.) (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §413; on identification of victim of homicide, see 86 A.L.R.2d 722.)

(2) Defendant: Peculiar Conduct. In People v. Adamson (1946) 27 C.2d 478, 165 P.2d 3, a woman was murdered and the top of her stocking removed. Stocking tops found in defendant's room were held admissible. "This interest in women's stocking tops is a circumstance that tends to identify defendant as the person who removed the stockings from the victim and took away the top of one." (27 C.2d 485.)

Identity of a defendant as perpetrator of a crime may also be shown circumstantially by evidence of similar or related offenses (see supra, §§75, 92), or by evidence of enmity or other facts supplying a motive (see People v. Mullen (1953) 115 C.A.2d 340, 343, 252 P.2d 19, supra, §119).

(3) Identity of Name. Former C.C.P. 1963(25) stated a presumption of "identity of person from identity of name." (See People v. Sberno (1937) 22 C.A.2d 392, 399, 71 P.2d 274.) Although the presumption was eliminated (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §102), identity of name is a circumstance from which an inference may be drawn, the strength of which will depend on how unusual the name is. (See People v. Roy (1967) 251 C.A.2d 459, 464, 59 C.R. 636, citing the text; People v. Luckett (1969) 1 C.A.3d 248, 253, 81 C.R. 539, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §378; People v. Garcia (1970) 4 C.A.3d 904, 911, 84 C.R. 624; People v. Mendoza (1986) 183 C.A.3d 390, 401, 228 C.R. 308; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §411; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §285.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

131 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

III. PARTICULAR KINDS OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

I. Ownership.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 131

[§ 131] Ownership.

Wigmore, discussing "mechanical traces," points out that brands, tags, signs, and similar marks may be circumstantial evidence of ownership. (1A Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §§150, 150a.) This theory has occasionally been invoked in California to establish the defendant's ownership of an automobile operated by a negligent driver. Proof that the car was painted with the distinctive colors, design, and name of the defendant's business supports an inference of ownership. (See Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. v. Walkup Drayage & Warehouse Co. (1945) 71 C.A.2d 795, 799, 163 P.2d 878; Smith v. Deutsch (1948) 89 C.A.2d 419, 420, 200 P.2d 802; Shehtanian v. Kenny (1958) 156 C.A.2d 576, 580, 319 P.2d 699; 8 A.L.R.3d 818, 826 [inference of agency or employment from name or color, etc., of taxicab].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

132 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

A. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 132

[§ 132] In General.

"The court in its discretion may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the probability that its admission will ... create substantial danger of undue prejudice." (Ev.C. 352.) This power is exercised to exclude relevant evidence. (See supra, §17.) "[R]elevance is not always enough. There may remain the question, is its value worth what it costs? There are several counterbalancing factors which may move the court to exclude relevant circumstantial evidence if they outweigh its probative value. In order of their importance, they are these. First, the danger that the facts offered may unduly arouse the jury's emotions of prejudice, hostility or sympathy." (Love v. Wolf (1964) 226 C.A.2d 378, 404, 38 C.R. 183, quoting McCormick.) (See People v. La Vergne (1966) 64 C.2d 265, 271, 49 C.R. 557, 411 P.2d 309; Garfield v. Russell (1967) 251 C.A.2d 275, 59 C.R. 379, infra, §137; O'Gan v. King City Joint Union High School Dist. (1970) 3 C.A.3d 641, 83 C.R. 795; Marocco v. Ford Motor Co. (1970) 7 C.A.3d 84, 91, 86 C.R. 526, citing the text; People v. Bisogni (1971) 4 C.3d 582, 588, 94 C.R. 164, 483 P.2d 780; People v. Peters (1972) 23 C.A.3d 522, 533, 101 C.R. 403 [asking whether witness frequented alleged homosexual hangout in theft case would have been more prejudicial than probative]; Carr v. Pacific Tel. Co. (1972) 26 C.A.3d 537, 544, 103 C.R. 120 [evidence of decedent's extramarital affair with teenager and bad check conviction prejudicially affected wrongful death case]; 1 McCormick 5th, §185; 1 Wigmore (Tillers Rev.) §10A; F.R. Evid., Rule 403, supra, §8.)

In a criminal case, evidence that is excludable on this ground is not just any evidence that may damage the defendant's case. All evidence that tends to prove guilt is prejudicial, but the "prejudice referred to in Evidence Code section 352 applies to evidence which uniquely tends to evoke an emotional bias against the defendant as an individual and which has very little effect on the issues." (People v. Felix (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1385, 1396, 28 C.R.2d 860.)

No complete listing is possible of the matters that might be found "unduly prejudicial" in particular cases. However, a number of categories have crystallized in the case law, and some have been codified in the Evidence Code. The important ones, discussed in the text, are:

- (1) liability insurance (infra, §133).
- (2) poverty of the plaintiff (infra, §138).
- (3) wealth of the defendant (infra, §139).
- (4) offer to settle or compromise (infra, §140).
- (5) offer to discount a claim (infra, §149).

- (6) information disclosed in mediation proceedings (infra, §152).
- (7) the defendant's settlement with another person (infra, §150).
- (8) other claims or litigation by the plaintiff (infra, §159).
- (9) compensation to the plaintiff from a collateral source (infra, §160).
- (10) subsequent precautions or repairs by the defendant (infra, §163).
- (11) gruesome or inflammatory real evidence (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §§12, 13).
- (12) offer of or withdrawn plea of guilty (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §138).
- (13) degrading collateral matter offered to impeach (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §348).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 McCormick 6th, §185; Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §6:1 et seq.; 24 A.L.R.6th 747 [party's military service or failure to serve].

133 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

B. Insurance or No Insurance.

1. General Rule: Evidence of Insurance Excluded.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 133

[§ 133] General Rule: Evidence of Insurance Excluded.

"Evidence that a person was, at the time a harm was suffered by another, insured wholly or partially against loss arising from liability for that harm is inadmissible to prove negligence or other wrongdoing." (Ev.C. 1155.) (See Model C., Rule 310; Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 411; F.R. Evid., Rule 411, infra, §134.)

The evidence is regarded as both irrelevant and prejudicial to the defendant. Hence, not only is it subject to objection and exclusion, but any attempt to inject it by question, suggestion, or argument is considered misconduct of counsel, and is often held reversible error. (See Curtis v. McAuliffe (1930) 106 C.A. 1, 9, 288 P. 675; Squires v. Riffe (1931) 211 C. 370, 373, 295 P. 517; Nichols v. Smith (1934) 136 C.A. 272, 275, 28 P.2d 693; Mahnkey v. Bolger (1950) 98 C.A.2d 628, 636, 220 P.2d 824; Menefee v. Williams (1968) 259 C.A.2d 56, 62, 66 C.R. 108, infra, §135, citing the text; Helfend v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 1, 16, 84 C.R. 173, 465 P.2d 61; Acosta v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 19, 26, 84 C.R. 184, 465 P.2d 72, citing the text; Brainard v. Cotner (1976) 59 C.A.3d 790, 794, 130 C.R. 915 [statement, "Don't worry, my insurance will take care of it," properly excluded]; but see Douglass v. Webb (1962) 209 C.A.2d 290, 299, 26 C.R. 60 [reference improper but not reversible error where first mentioned by defendants and cautionary instruction given]; and see also 11 So. Cal. L. Rev. 407; 21 So. Cal. L. Rev. 227; 4 A.L.R.2d 761 [evidence that defendant is insured]; 71 A.L.R.4th 1025 [medical malpractice cases]; 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §230.)

The unequivocal statement of this rule in the Model Code, the Uniform Rules, and the Evidence Code makes any change unlikely, but, in light of widespread knowledge regarding insurance matters, the rule has been criticized as outmoded and unrealistic. (See Causey v. Cornelius (1958) 164 C.A.2d 269, 275, 330 P.2d 468, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §230; Neumann v. Bishop (1976) 59 C.A.3d 451, 473, 130 C.R. 786, citing the text [on new trial motion, judge "considered the existence of insurance as a matter which was understood and considered by every intelligent juror"]; 1 McCormick 5th, §201; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §282a.)

In the occasional case in which the defendant is not insured, the question whether he or she may bring that fact to the attention of the jury has been considered in a few decisions in other states. (a) If the plaintiff has in some way (even though properly, as by examination of jurors) suggested that an insurance company is involved, it would seem reasonable to allow rebuttal of this damaging inference. (b) But if the plaintiff has not raised the issue, the defendant's denial of insurance coverage has been disapproved as not only irrelevant but as an improper means of seeking sympathy, much like evidence of poverty. (See 5 Stanf. L. Rev. 143; 1953 A.S. 778; F. R. Evid., Rule 411, infra, §134 [includes prohibition against evidence that person was not insured against liability]; 4 A.L.R.2d 761, 773 [evidence that defendant is not insured].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See The New Wigmore: Selected Rules of Limited Admissibility §6.1 et seq.; 1 McCormick 6th, §201.

134 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

B. Insurance or No Insurance.

2. Admissible Evidence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 134

[§ 134] Admissible Evidence.

The fact of insurance or the terms of a policy may be relevant on an issue other than the quality of the insured's conduct, and therefore may be introduced under the doctrine of limited admissibility, with a limiting instruction (supra, §30), where its probative value outweighs the possible prejudice from its admission. (See Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 411; Model C., Rule 310; 1 McCormick 5th, §201; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §282a.)

Thus, the fact of insurance may tend to prove ownership of an automobile (see Perry v. A. Paladini (1928) 89 C.A. 275, 285, 264 P. 580), or employment of a person covered by the policy (Mullanix v. Basich (1945) 67 C.A.2d 675, 682, 155 P.2d 130). (See 11 So. Cal. L. Rev. 431; 21 So. Cal. L. Rev. 239; 1 McCormick 5th, §201; 4 A.L.R.2d 776; and see also Turner v. Mannon (1965) 236 C.A.2d 134, 140, 45 C.R. 831 [defendant, to prevent possible double recovery by plaintiff, introduced evidence that defendant's insurance carrier had paid $ 1,000 of plaintiff's medical bills].)

F.R. Evid., Rule 411 states the rule and exceptions as follows: "Evidence that a person was or was not insured against liability is not admissible upon the issue whether the person acted negligently or otherwise wrongfully. This rule does not require the exclusion of evidence of insurance against liability when offered for another purpose, such as proof of agency, ownership, or control, or bias or prejudice of a witness." (See 2 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §152 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §483.)

In Brainard v. Cotner (1976) 59 C.A.3d 790, 795, 130 C.R. 915, a police report contained defendant's statement that a car accident was caused by plaintiff's act in unzipping her dress in the moving automobile. Plaintiff unsuccessfully sought to show that, when defendant was questioned privately about the statement, she said, "Well, I did it because I was fearful of my insurance." Held, the reference to insurance was admissible, because this evidence of motive would have rebutted her testimony about plaintiff's conduct.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Royal Surplus Lines Ins. Co. v. Ranger Ins. Co. (2002) 100 C.A.4th 193, 200, 122 C.R.2d 459 [in action by apartment complex owner and its liability insurer against subcontractor and its insurer, joinder of defendants would not violate Ev.C. 1155, and thus trial judge erred in sustaining demurrer of subcontractor's insurer; to meet plaintiffs' claim that it failed to procure insurance naming owner as additional insured, subcontractor would be required to offer proof of insurance]; 1 McCormick 6th, §201.

135 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

B. Insurance or No Insurance.

3. Permissible Reference.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 135

[§ 135] Permissible Reference.

Even though the fact of insurance is not relevant and cannot be independently proved, reference to it in connection with other admissible matter may be proper:

(1) It may be incidentally included in an admission. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §96; 4 A.L.R.2d 781.) However, in Menefee v. Williams (1968) 259 C.A.2d 56, 63, 66 C.R. 108, plaintiff, on a deer hunting trip, was shot, possibly by defendant, who drove him to the hospital. Plaintiff offered to prove that on the way defendant said, "Don't worry, if your insurance doesn't cover this, mine will." And later, in the hospital, plaintiff asked defendant if he had shot him, defendant said no, and plaintiff asked, "Well, why did you tell me that your insurance would cover this incident?" Defendant replied, "Must have been out of my mind when I said that." Held, the test of the incidental admission exception was not met, and the trial judge properly ruled the evidence inadmissible, for neither statement could be considered an unequivocal admission of fault.

(2) It may come in as part of the cross-examination of a witness. (See Elsey v. Domecq (1931) 114 C.A. 42, 50, 299 P. 794; Moniz v. Bettencourt (1938) 24 C.A.2d 718, 724, 76 P.2d 535; Hatfield v. Levy Bros. (1941) 18 C.2d 798, 811, 117 P.2d 841; Little v. Superior Court (1961) 55 C.2d 642, 645, 12 C.R. 481, 361 P.2d 13; 21 So. Cal. Rev. 237.)

(3) The fact that an insurance company is conducting the defense justifies questions to prospective jurors on their voir dire examination, to ascertain whether they are connected with or interested in an insurance company. (See Jones v. Bayley (1942) 49 C.A.2d 647, 659, 122 P.2d 293; Traxler v. Thompson (1970) 4 C.A.3d 278, 281, footnote 1, 84 C.R. 211; 11 So. Cal. L. Rev. 419; 21 So. Cal. L. Rev. 234; 4 A.L.R.2d 792; 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §231.)

In Hart v. Wielt (1970) 4 C.A.3d 224, 230, 84 C.R. 220, the name of defendant's insurance company was mentioned in three separate ways: On voir dire examination of the prospective jurors, in nonresponsive answers by plaintiff on his direct and cross-examination, and in a cross-examination question directed against a defense private investigator. Held, there was no prejudicial error. Although the court was "well aware of the thin line that exists in this area," it concluded that "the line was not crossed." (4 C.A.3d 232.) The trial judge had denied defendant's motions for new trial and judgment notwithstanding the verdict and had awarded costs to plaintiff. These rulings implied that no misconduct--or at least no prejudice--had occurred.

Even if a reference to insurance has been made improperly to the jury, the burden of showing prejudice remains on the party claiming it. (Dorsic v. Kurtin (1971) 19 C.A.3d 226, 235, 96 C.R. 528 [during jury deliberations court clerk erroneously sent copy of lease, with insurance provisions, to jury room; error harmless].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

136 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

B. Insurance or No Insurance.

4. Weighing Relevancy and Prejudicial Effect.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 136

[§ 136] Weighing Relevancy and Prejudicial Effect.

In Blake v. E. Thompson Petroleum Repair Co. (1985) 170 C.A.3d 823, 216 C.R. 568, plaintiff's machine shop, located next door to defendant's repair shop, suffered major damage in July 1979 from a fire and burglary allegedly the result of negligence of defendant's employee. Safeco, defendant's insurer, inquired as to plaintiff's business losses and then paid him monthly sums, which totaled $ 50,624. In December 1979, the new owner of the building in which plaintiff's shop was located offered him a new lease at a higher rent, but plaintiff rejected it because his shop was not yet fully repaired. In March 1980, plaintiff started to look for another location, and finally found one and resumed business in July 1980. He brought suit against defendant in February 1980, seeking damages for negligence causing injuries to his business, including lost business profits. On deposition, plaintiff testified that he could not resume his business after the fire because he lacked sufficient funds. Anticipating that testimony at the trial, defendant's counsel moved that defendant be allowed to show that plaintiff received regular monthly payments, but not that they came from Safeco; i.e., counsel wanted to produce evidence that plaintiff had failed to mitigate damages, without revealing the fact of insurance. The judge denied the motion, placing defendant's counsel in a dilemma: "On the one hand, in order to prevent the jury from discovering that Thompson was insured, counsel would have had to forego the presentation of evidence showing that Blake had received any payments, and thus forego or significantly weaken his defense that Blake had failed to mitigate his own damages. On the other hand, in order to present evidence of nonmitigation, counsel would have had to bring up the fact of Thompson's insurance. Counsel chose the latter course." (170 C.A.3d 830.)

The jury brought in a verdict for plaintiff for $ 120,722.51, offset by the insurer's payments of $ 50,624, and defendant appealed from the judgment. The appellate court reversed the judgment for error in refusing defendant's proposed instruction that would have limited plaintiff's claim of lost profits to those lost during the time reasonably necessary to repair. But the opinion also explored the possible procedures to be used on retrial to solve the problem posed by evidence of insurance.

(a) Evidence of a defendant's insurance is ordinarily excluded as irrelevant and prejudicial (170 C.A.3d 830, citing the text), and evidence of a plaintiff's insurance is ordinarily excluded under the collateral source rule (infra, §160). However, insurance coverage may be coupled with other relevant evidence (see supra, §135); and in that case, the judge must determine, under Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17), whether the probative value of the other evidence outweighs the prejudicial effect of the mention of insurance. (170 C.A.3d 831.)

(b) An insurer has the duty "in good faith to effectuate prompt, fair and equitable settlement of claims in which liability has become reasonably clear" (Ins.C. 790.03(h)(5); see 11 Summary (9th), Equity, §94); and an advance or partial payment by a liability insurer cannot be construed as an admission of liability (Ins.C. 11583; infra, §142). (170

C.A.3d 831.)

(c) These rules bring the problem into sharper focus: "Evidence of the payments made to Blake was relevant to show (1) that Blake had received partial compensation for his alleged damages ... ; (2) that Blake had the financial wherewithal to defray the cost of repairing his equipment and relocating his shop; and (3) that Blake may intentionally have delayed the regeneration of his business. Thompson had the burden of producing such evidence ... Neither Thompson nor its insurer could be pilloried in court because the payments were made ... Thompson had no right to show merely (i.e., without more) the fact that Blake had received payments, because such evidence would lead the jury to speculate (a) that Blake was a very rich man, or (b) that Blake had wealthy friends or relatives, or (c) even worse, that Blake himself was insured." (170 C.A.3d 832.)

(d) Two possible solutions may be suggested: (1) Instruct the jury that the payments came from defendant itself, thus "sanitizing" the evidence by avoiding any mention of insurance; but this would mislead the jury. (2) Bifurcate the trial, so as to try the issue of damages separately; and, if bifurcation is requested, it must be granted. In that event, the jury could be instructed at the outset of the damages trial "(1) that payments were made to Blake by Thompson's insurance carrier; and (2) that the law imposes a duty on the carrier to investigate and attempt to adjust Blake's claim. Such an instruction would minimize the prejudice to either side, and would conform to the letter and spirit of Insurance Code section 11583." (170 C.A.3d 833.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: The discussion of Ins.C. 790.03(h)(5), formerly located in Equity, has been transferred to 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §252 et seq.

137 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

B. Insurance or No Insurance.

5. Plaintiff's Accident Insurance.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 137

[§ 137] Plaintiff's Accident Insurance.

In Garfield v. Russell (1967) 251 C.A.2d 275, 59 C.R. 379, plaintiff, injured in an automobile accident, made a strong showing of liability, but verdict and judgment went for defendant. On appeal she urged misconduct of defendant's counsel in deliberately bringing before the jury, on her cross-examination, the facts that she had three accident policies, each company paying her medical expenses, and that an insurance company representative had questioned the reasonableness of the charges. Held, judgment reversed.

(a) Under the collateral source rule (see infra, §160; 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1388 et seq.), the insurance payments did not reduce the amount recoverable; hence, the evidence was not relevant on the issue of damages. But it did tend to show an improper motive in seeking medical aid and tended to impeach her as a witness.

(b) Although there was this proper ground for admission of the evidence, its prejudicial effect was great, and in this kind of situation the trial judge should consider whether its probative value is outweighed by its objectionable effects under Ev.C. 352 (supra, §17). (251 C.A.2d 279.)

(c) The court rejected plaintiff's argument that evidence of compensation from a collateral source should always be deemed prejudicial as a matter of law. Just as a defendant's liability insurance is sometimes relevant and may be shown by the plaintiff (see supra, §134), so plaintiff's accident insurance may be shown in a proper case, despite the incidental prejudice. "[W]hat reason is there for a different rule when the shoe is on the other foot?" (251 C.A.2d 279.) (See Helfend v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 1, 16, 84 C.R. 173, 465 P.2d 61; Acosta v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 19, 26, 84 C.R. 184, 465 P.2d 72; Hrnjak v. Graymar (1971) 4 C.3d 725, 731, 94 C.R. 623, 484 P.2d 599, infra, §161.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1631 et seq.

138 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

C. Poverty of Plaintiff.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 138

[§ 138] Poverty of Plaintiff.

(1) In General. In an action for damages, a showing of poverty of the plaintiff is highly prejudicial, and where evidence of this type is deliberately introduced it is usually held reversible error. (See Steinberger v. California Elec. Garage Co. (1917) 176 C. 386, 390, 168 P. 570; Ensign v. Southern Pac. Co. (1924) 193 C. 311, 321, 223 P. 953 [wrongful death; widow testified that decedent had no money to obtain certain medical treatment, though this issue was not raised]; Smellie v. Southern Pac. Co. (1933) 128 C.A. 567, 578, 18 P.2d 97 [wrongful death; son testified that children had to work to support mother]; Nakamura v. Los Angeles Gas & Elec. Corp. (1934) 137 C.A. 487, 489, 30 P.2d 1022 [personal injuries; plaintiff's counsel drew answers from her disclosing fact that she was separated from her husband and supporting herself from her own earnings]; Hart v. Wielt (1970) 4 C.A.3d 224, 234, 84 C.R. 220, citing the text; 21 A.L.R.3d 936 [prejudicial effect of evidence as to poverty of landowner in eminent domain proceeding].)

(2) Admission for Limited Purpose. However, where the evidence comes in incidentally as part of some proper line of questioning, the doctrine of limited admissibility (supra, §30) justifies its admission for the limited purpose. Thus, in Packard v. Moore (1937) 9 C.2d 571, 576, 71 P.2d 922, a personal injury action, defendant's counsel, seeking to discredit plaintiff's doctor by showing his interest, asked, "Of course, you expect to be paid for the time you have given since?" The witness denied this, and, by permission of the court, added, "I can explain why I do not expect to be paid. Miss Packard is a penniless girl and she has no money to fight this through the higher court." Held, it was proper to allow the witness to explain his answer, so as to rebut any unfavorable inferences that might have been drawn from the question. (See Muller v. Hale (1902) 138 C. 163, 167, 71 P. 81 [plaintiff, on cross-examination, admitted that she had received no medical treatment since leaving hospital; on redirect she was allowed to explain why: no funds]; Hughes v. Quackenbush (1934) 1 C.A.2d 349, 358, 37 P.2d 99 [evidence incidental to questioning as to nature of work and extent of disability].)

(3) Poverty or Family Distress as Relevant to Mental Suffering. Unsuccessful attempts have been made to justify the introduction of evidence of the plaintiff's poverty or family distress in a personal injury suit, on the theory that it tends to show the extent of mental suffering, and is therefore relevant and material. Despite some probative value, this evidence is excluded because of its prejudicial effect and the confusing extraneous issues raised. (Steinberger v. California Elec. Garage Co., supra.) In Dillon v. Wallace (1957) 148 C.A.2d 447, 306 P.2d 1044, evidence was received, over defendants' objection, that plaintiff had an invalid husband who died while she was recovering, and that the last times she saw her husband were when taken in an ambulance to his hospital and on a stretcher to his funeral. Held, this was prejudicial error: "[E]vidence of the family situation of the injured party ... may not be admitted to show the effect on the mental anguish suffered by the injured person by reason of his disability." (148 C.A.2d 454.) (See 37 A.L.R.3d 1082 [family circumstances, including financial dependence, in personal injury actions].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.107

139 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

D. Wealth.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 139

[§ 139] Wealth.

(1) General Rule of Exclusion. Evidence of a defendant's wealth is ordinarily irrelevant to any issue of liability or damages, and a deliberate attempt to suggest it may be prejudicial misconduct. (See Weaver v. Shell Oil Co. (1933) 129 C.A. 232, 234, 18 P.2d 736 [argument in wrongful death case that defendant "is a great big, rich corporation ... and it can afford to take care of them"]; 21 A.L.R.3d 936 [prejudicial effect of evidence as to wealth of condemnor in eminent domain proceeding].)

(2) Exceptions. There are, however, some situations in which this evidence may be relevant. Thus, in Miller v. Magill (1933) 130 C.A. 414, 417, 20 P.2d 58, defendant, a longtime employee of plaintiff, had the latter's agent cable her a request for money to start a business, and plaintiff replied, "Pay Joe--hope he is successful." In this action, plaintiff claimed she lent the money, and defendant claimed it was a gift. Defendant was allowed to prove the fact that, prior to her marriage, plaintiff had little means, and that she inherited a large estate from her husband. This was upheld, on the theory that the disclosure of the comparative financial positions of the parties would aid the jury in deciding the issue of loan or gift.

The principal exception is an action in which punitive damages are sought. Evidence of the defendant's financial condition is a prerequisite to a punitive damages award, and the burden is on the plaintiff to introduce that evidence. (Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 C.3d 105, 284 C.R. 318, 813 P.2d 1348, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §1377A.) (On discovery of financial information and protective orders, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §§16, 17; on discretion of trial judge to admit evidence of financial worth when civil penalties are sought, see People v. Superior Court (Kardon) (1973) 35 C.A.3d 710, 712, 713, 111 C.R. 14.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Exceptions. Adams v. Murakami:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1619. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.107

140 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

1. Rule and Theory of Exclusion.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 140

[§ 140] Rule and Theory of Exclusion.

(1) General Rule. An offer to settle or compromise a claim by paying a sum of money or giving other consideration is not admissible to prove liability on the part of the offeror. It has been persuasively argued that a settlement offer is an admission by conduct, furnishing an inference that the offeror concedes liability (particularly where the defendant offers nearly the whole amount demanded). The other view is that offers of this type are often motivated solely by a desire of the defendant to "buy peace," i.e., to avoid litigation. Neither courts nor writers are agreed on whether the evidence is relevant. But, irrespective of relevancy, the public policy in favor of settlement of disputes makes it inadvisable to penalize the person who seeks settlement by allowing the rejected offer to be used as an admission. Hence, the offer itself, and the negotiations relating to it, are excluded. (Ev.C. 1152(a); see Armstrong v. Kline (1944) 64 C.A.2d 704, 715, 149 P.2d 445; Potter v. Pacific Coast Lumber Co. of Calif. (1951) 37 C.2d 592, 600, 234 P.2d 16; cf. Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 C.A.3d 1009, 1023, 271 C.R. 30, quoting the text [in libel action against women's organization that had published newsletter identifying plaintiff as perpetrator of assault, Ev.C. 1152(a) did not preclude admission of assault victim's letter of apology, written to plaintiff as part of settlement and introduced not to establish victim's liability, but on issue of truth of newsletter account]; and see Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 408; Model C., Rule 309; 2 McCormick 5th, §266; 4 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§1061, 1062; 39 Hastings L. J. 955 [Protecting the Confidentiality of Settlement Negotiations].)

Ev.C. 1152(a) broadened the scope of former C.C.P. 2078 in several respects (infra, §142 et seq.). But it eliminated any implication from the former statute that an offer introduced without objection cannot be considered. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1152; on sufficiency of incompetent evidence admitted without objection, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §393.)

(2) Distinction: Judgment Debtor's Examination. The rule of Ev.C. 1152 applies to trials; information disclosed at settlement negotiations occurring after a judgment has been entered is admissible at a judgment debtor's examination under C.C.P. 708.110 (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §268). (Young v. Keele (1987) 188 C.A.3d 1090, 1093, 233 C.R. 850, 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §276.)

(3) Offer for Civil Compromise of Property Crime. Ev.C. 1153.5 makes evidence of an offer for civil resolution of a crime against property pursuant to C.C.P. 33, or admissions made in the course of negotiations for the offer, inadmissible in any action. (See 2 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, §§34.40, 34.41.)

(4) Federal Rule. F.R. Evid., Rule 408 reads as follows: "Evidence of (1) furnishing or offering or promising to furnish, or (2) accepting or offering or promising to accept, a valuable consideration in compromising or attempting to compromise a claim which was disputed as to either validity or amount, is not admissible to prove liability for or invalidity of the claim or its amount. Evidence of conduct or statements made in compromise negotiations is likewise not admissible. This rule does not require the exclusion of any evidence otherwise discoverable merely because it is presented in the course of compromise negotiations. This rule also does not require exclusion when the evidence is offered for another purpose, such as proving bias or prejudice of a witness, negating a contention of undue delay, or proving an effort to obstruct a criminal investigation or prosecution." (See 2 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §134 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §507 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Rule. See Ev.C. 1160 (inadmissibility of expressions of sympathy), 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, Supp., §96; The New Wigmore: Selected Rules of Limited Admissibility §3.1 et seq.; 2 McCormick 6th, §266.(4) Federal Rule. F.R. Evid., Rule 408 was revised in 2006 and now reads:

"(a) Prohibited uses. Evidence of the following is not admissible on behalf of any party, when offered to prove liability for, invalidity of, or amount of a claim that was disputed as to validity or amount, or to impeach through a prior inconsistent statement or contradiction:"

"(1) furnishing or offering or promising to furnish--or accepting or offering or promising to accept--a valuable consideration in compromising or attempting to compromise the claim; and"

"(2) conduct or statements made in compromise negotiations regarding the claim, except when offered in a criminal case and the negotiations related to a claim by a public office or agency in the exercise of regulatory, investigative, or enforcement authority."

"(b) Permitted uses. This rule does not require exclusion if the evidence is offered for purposes not prohibited by subdivision (a). Examples of permissible purposes include proving a witness's bias or prejudice; negating a contention of undue delay; and proving an effort to obstruct a criminal investigation or prosecution."

See 40 Santa Clara L. Rev. 547 [admissibility of settlement communications under F.R. Evid., Rule 408]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.212 et seq.

141 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

2. Rule Applies in Discovery Proceeding.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 141

[§ 141] Rule Applies in Discovery Proceeding.

In Covell v. Superior Court (1984) 159 C.A.3d 39, 205 C.R. 371, D brought an action against C, judgment was entered in favor of C, and C filed a suit against D for malicious prosecution. D then took C's deposition, and sought to inquire about any settlement offers C or his counsel had made in the earlier action. Held, the inquiry was improper.

(a) To the extent that D sought discovery of these offers to establish the validity of his claim in the earlier action, Ev.C. 1152 would make any such evidence inadmissible. (159 C.A.3d 43.)

(b) D contended, however, that the evidence was not sought to prove C's liability in the earlier action, but only to prove that the action was not without probable cause or initiated with malice; i.e., a settlement offer by C would show that he recognized the validity of D's claim. But no such inference may reasonably be drawn, for a defendant will often attempt to buy peace for economic reasons. (159 C.A.3d 43.)

(c) More importantly, the issue in the malicious prosecution action was not C's frame of mind as to the earlier suit; it was D's frame of mind and whether he believed that he had probable cause or acted with malice. C's state of mind was neither relevant to the subject matter of the malicious prosecution suit, nor reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence. (159 C.A.3d 43.) (On balancing right to privacy of settlement against party's need to discover relevant information, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §20.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Volkswagen of America v. Superior Court (2006) 139 C.A.4th 1481, 1490, 1494, 43 C.R.3d 723 [in asbestos exposure action against automobile manufacturer, trial judge erred in denying defendant's discovery of documents submitted to bankruptcy trusts by plaintiff's attorney in support of claims for compensation for asbestos-related injuries; even if documents were inadmissible as offers to compromise, they could lead to admissible evidence; distinguishing Covell v. Superior Court (1984) 159 C.A.3d 39, 205 C.R. 371, text, p. 491].

142 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

3. Scope of Rule.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 142

[§ 142] In General.

(1) Offer of Services or Money. "Evidence that a person has, in compromise or from humanitarian motives, furnished or offered or promised to furnish money or any other thing, act, or service to another who has sustained or will sustain or claims that he or she has sustained or will sustain loss or damage ... is inadmissible to prove his or her liability for the loss or damage or any part of it." (Ev.C. 1152(a).)

Aid from "humanitarian motives" includes such acts as calling an ambulance, paying a doctor bill, repairing or restoring property, etc., with no thought of liability or compromise. (See Oldenburg v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1957) 152 C.A.2d 733, 749, 314 P.2d 33 [plaintiff fell in front of defendant's store, defendant paid the doctor and ambulance bill for an emergency call].) In the Oldenburg case the court recalled the parable of the Good Samaritan, and also pointed out that the policy involved was the same as that excluding evidence of subsequent precautions (infra, §163): To allow this to be shown would tend to deter one who has injured another from giving aid. (See People v. Muniz (1989) 213 C.A.3d 1508, 1516, 262 C.R. 743 [statute is not applicable to criminal cases].)

(2) Advance or Partial Payment of Damages. No admission of liability of any person or the person's insurer results from an advance or partial payment of damages, made as an accommodation to an injured person or to the heirs or dependents of a deceased person. (Ins.C. 11583; see 65 A.L.R.3d 932 [payment of, or offer to pay, medical expenses of injured party].) F.R. Evid., Rule 409 is similar: "Evidence of furnishing or offering or promising to pay medical, hospital, or similar expenses occasioned by an injury is not admissible to prove liability for the injury." (See 2 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §139 et seq.; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §480 et seq.)

(3) Offer To Allow Judgment To Be Taken. If a party offers to allow judgment to be taken against him or her in accordance with the terms of a written offer served on another party, and the proposal is rejected, evidence of the offer is inadmissible. (C.C.P. 998(b)(2); see 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §76.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Offer of Services or Money. See Hasler v. Howard (2004) 120 C.A.4th 1023, 1026, 16 C.R.3d 217 [in fraud action by real estate seller against broker, trial judge properly excluded evidence that seller offered to compromise claim for amount of broker's commission; broker wished to show that return of her commission was element of plaintiff's damages claim, which would make her eligible as prevailing party for attorneys' fees under listing agreement, but this would be using evidence to establish liability, i.e., for attorneys' fees, in violation of Ev.C. 1152].

143 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

3. Scope of Rule.

b. Conduct or Statements in Negotiation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 143

[§ 143] Conduct or Statements in Negotiation.

It was formerly the rule in California that, despite inadmissibility of the offer itself, an admission of the defendant made in the course of the negotiations could be introduced. (See Scott v. Sciaroni (1924) 66 C.A. 577, 583, 226 P. 827 [admission of doctor that he "left the radium on too long" and that it was his fault]; California Home Extension Assn. v. Hilborn (1951) 37 C.2d 459, 465, 235 P.2d 369; People v. Lagiss (1958) 160 C.A.2d 28, 33, 324 P.2d 926; People v. Forster (1962) 58 C.2d 257, 263, 23 C.R. 582, 373 P.2d 630 [stating test]; People v. Glen Arms Estate (1964) 230 C.A.2d 841, 863, 41 C.R. 303 [applying Forster test and holding evidence properly excluded]; and see 2 McCormick 5th, §266.)

The Forster rule was criticized by the Law Revision Commission as placing a premium on the form of the statement and inhibiting the "complete candor between the parties that is most conducive to settlement." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1152.) Accordingly, Ev.C. 1152(a) abolished the rule by making inadmissible not only the offer, etc., but also "any conduct or statements made in negotiation thereof." (See San Joaquin v. Galletti (1967) 252 C.A.2d 840, 843, 61 C.R. 62, quoting the text; Warner Const. Corp. v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 C.3d 285, 296, 85 C.R. 444, 466 P.2d 996 [unlimited admission of settlement correspondence was error, but harmless under the circumstances]; 15 A.L.R.3d 13.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Tower Acton Holdings v. Los Angeles County Waterworks Dist. No. 37 (2002) 105 C.A.4th 590, 602, 129 C.R.2d 640 [enforcement of agreement not to use evidence from settlement negotiations in subsequent litigation is not against public policy]; Caira v. Offner (2005) 126 C.A.4th 12, 34, 24 C.R.3d 233 [in consolidated actions involving dispute among siblings over ownership of family company and its subsidiary, trial judge properly excluded e-mail sent by one sibling to other three concerning desirability of repurchasing shares that had been sold to third party; at time e-mail was sent, there were already ongoing attempts to resolve disputes regarding company, and message was sent with purpose of rekindling faltering negotiations]; 2 McCormick 6th, §266.

144 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

4. Exceptions and Distinctions.

a. Evidence Code Exceptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 144

[§ 144] Evidence Code Exceptions.

Ev.C. 1152 states several obvious exceptions to the rule making an offer to settle or compromise inadmissible (supra, §140):

(1) Action for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing. If an offer to compromise is admitted in an action for (a) breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing; or (b) violation of Ins.C. 790.03(h) (unfair claims settlement practices; see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, 1159 et seq.), evidence relating to other offers to compromise "the same or substantially the same claimed loss or damage" is admissible for the same purpose as the initial evidence regarding settlement. (Ev.C. 1152(b)) [further providing that evidence of settlement offers is not otherwise admissible in motion for new trial, in any proceeding involving additur or remittitur, or on appeal]; see 19 Pacific L. J. 610.)

(2) Part Payment Without Disputing Claim. Evidence of "[p]artial satisfaction of an asserted claim or demand without questioning its validity" is admissible to prove the validity of the claim. (Ev.C. 1152(c)(1).)

(3) Revival of Debt. Evidence of a debtor's payment or promise to pay all or a part of a preexisting debt is admissible to prove the creation of a new duty on the debtor's part or a revival of the preexisting duty. (Ev.C. 1152(c)(2).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Action for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing.

Cross-Reference: The discussion of unfair claims settlement practices, formerly located in Torts, has been transferred to 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §252.

145 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

4. Exceptions and Distinctions.

b. Independent Negotiations or Statements.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 145

[§ 145] Independent Negotiations or Statements.

(1) Negotiations Involving Unrelated Claim. In Fieldson Associates v. Whitecliff Laboratories (1969) 276 C.A.2d 770, 81 C.R. 332, the principal issue was whether a written purchase order referring to 100,000 units of coffee makers was intended to be a binding commitment. When the principals testified differently on their interpretations of the contract, the trial judge, over objection, allowed into evidence a collection of letters that had passed between them after transmittal of the purchase order. While no letter referred to lost profits based on a 100,000 unit purchase, which was the gist of the cross-complaint, several letters did contain offers of compromise. Held, the evidence was admissible.

The letters were not used to prove either liability for, or invalidity of, the claim about which the offer of compromise was made. They were received to show the invalidity of a different claim. (276 C.A.2d 772.) "The contents of the negotiations concerning the other claim were of no significance; the fact that there were negotiations at all was significant only as showing that the parties were in communication without appellant having asserted a claim which it would have been natural to mention. The admissibility of such evidence for the limited purpose described above could have had no tendency to inhibit candid discussion or deter either party from attempting to effect a compromise." (276 C.A.2d 773.)

(2) Statements Independent of Compromise Offer. In Moving Picture Machine Operators Union v. Glasgow Theaters (1970) 6 C.A.3d 395, 86 C.R. 33, defendant motion picture theater operator sent a letter to plaintiff labor union during negotiations about pension rights. The letter stated that "Mr. Glasgow admits he owes as follows" and that "defendants are prepared to pay this amount in full satisfaction of the matter sued upon in your complaint." Held, the letter was admissible; it disclosed "an apparent intent to admit liability in the stated sum and to make no other concessions." (6 C.A.3d 405.) Although the court quoted from Ev.C. 1152, it cited People v. Forster (1962) 58 C.2d 257, 23 C.R. 582, 373 P.2d 630, supra, §143, as authority for allowing admission of the evidence. (6 C.A.3d 402.)

(a) The rule excluding offers of compromise does not apply to statements of fact independent of an offer of compromise, e.g., evidence relative to an accord and satisfaction. (6 C.A.3d 402.) And "the statements of a party against whom a claim is made, that he is willing to settle the claim, when not connected with an offer of compromise, may be proved as an admission against interest." (6 C.A.3d 402.)

(b) The intention of the party is dispositive. (6 C.A.3d 402.) "[I]f the intention is apparent to admit liability and to secure relief against a liability recognized as such, or if the party making the proposal apparently intended to make no concessions but to exact all that he deemed himself entitled to, the proposal is an ordinary admission against interest and not an attempt to compromise. Such an admission against interest is not subject to the rule which excludes offers of compromise." (6 C.A.3d 405.) (See Truestone v. Simi West Industrial Park II (1984) 163 C.A.3d 715, 725, 209 C.R. 757, citing the text [offer admitted to show account stated].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.213(4)

146 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

4. Exceptions and Distinctions.

c. Statements Showing Good Faith.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 146

[§ 146] Statements Showing Good Faith.

In Warner Const. Corp. v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 C.3d 285, 85 C.R. 444, 466 P.2d 996, supra, §31, an action for breach of warranty and fraud, plaintiff contractor sought to introduce its correspondence with defendant municipality about the need for additional expense to construct a retaining wall. Despite the city's objection that they were part of settlement negotiations, the trial judge admitted them. Held, the unlimited admission of the exhibits was harmless error, for they could have been admitted for a limited purpose.

(a) The principle of "practical construction" of a contract (1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §689) applies only to acts performed before a dispute has arisen. Whatever is said in negotiations after the date when the parties began disagreeing may not be admitted. (2 C.3d 296.) There are no valid grounds for distinction between contracts that specifically contemplate amendments and those that do not. The purpose of Ev.C. 1152--to promote candor in settlement negotiations--applies equally in both instances. (2 C.3d 297.)

(b) The correspondence, however, could have shown that during a delay period plaintiff, in good faith and pursuant to the contractual procedure, had engaged in negotiations in the reasonable hope that an agreement could be reached and the work resumed. (2 C.3d 297.) The evidence of negotiations might also have been admissible to rebut a claim that plaintiff failed to mitigate damages or, if defendant questioned the exhaustion of contractual remedies, to prove exhaustion. (2 C.3d 297, footnote 12.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Shade Foods v. Innovative Products Sales & Marketing (2000) 78 C.A.4th 847, 914, 915, 93 C.R.2d 364 [in action alleging that liability insurer breached covenant of good faith and fair dealing, trial judge properly admitted evidence of insurer's settlement discussions with food manufacturer (an additional insured under policy), as relevant to insurer's defense that it accepted settlement offer].

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §749.

147 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

4. Exceptions and Distinctions.

d. Statements Showing Bad Motive.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 147

[§ 147] Statements Showing Bad Motive.

Oren Royal Oaks Venture v. Greenberg, Bernhard, Weiss & Karma (1986) 42 C.3d 1157, 232 C.R. 567, 728 P.2d 1202, involved a claim that the privilege for statements made in the course of a judicial proceeding (former C.C. 47(2), now C.C. 47(b)) precludes the evidentiary use of statements made during negotiating sessions in an action for abuse of process.

Plaintiff O planned a residential development on property adjoining the home of defendant S in the city of Encino. S filed an administrative mandamus proceeding under CEQA challenging the sufficiency of the environmental impact report, and the trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the city. S then retained the law firm of defendant G, which took an appeal from the summary judgment, and also by mandamus obtained a stay order to prevent plaintiff from making further alterations on the property pending the appeal. While the appeal was pending, plaintiff filed this action for abuse of process against S and G, alleging that their sole purpose in the administrative mandamus proceedings was not to protect the environment, but to obtain the payment of money. In this respect the complaint alleged that defendants had offered to dismiss the CEQA action in return for plaintiff's payment of money or conveyance of a designated lot to S. Defendant G moved for summary judgment, relying on the decision in Asia Inv. Co. v. Borowski (1982) 133 C.A.3d 832, 842, 184 C.R. 317; plaintiff relied on Spellens v. Spellens (1957) 49 C.2d 210, 230, 317 P.2d 613. The trial judge, noting the uncertainty engendered by these apparently conflicting decisions, granted summary judgment for defendant. Held, affirmed, but only because the allegations of the complaint were insufficient to state a cause of action for abuse of process; C.C. 47(2) did not preclude plaintiff "from making evidentiary use of defendants' statements during negotiations to prove the intent with which defendants' conduct was undertaken." (42 C.3d 1168.)

(a) In Asia Inv. Co., supra, plaintiff developer sued defendant B to resolve a dispute over ownership of a house; and while this "house case" was pending, B filed an action alleging that the developer and governmental entity had failed to comply with CEQA requirements in connection with the entire development. B's counsel allegedly told the developer's counsel that the developer really ought to settle the house case because if B won the CEQA action it would "blow" the developer's whole subdivision. The court held that the lawyer's comment was essentially a settlement proposal, and therefore "a privileged statement" under former C.C. 47(2). (42 C.3d 1165, 1166.)

(b) Asia Inv. Co. and the other abuse of process cases are distinguishable. Block v. Sacramento Clinical Labs (1982) 131 C.A.3d 386, 182 C.R. 438, 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §505, points out that the privileges of C.C. 47 operate as limitations on liability, and are unlike evidentiary privileges, which function by exclusion of evidence. (42 C.3d 1168.)

"Accordingly, when allegations of misconduct properly put an individual's intent at issue in a civil action, statements made during the course of a judicial proceeding may be used for evidentiary purposes in determining whether the individual acted with the requisite intent." (42 C.3d 1168, citing White v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1985) 40 C.3d 870, 887, 221 C.R. 509, 710 P.2d 309, and Spellens v. Spellens, supra.) Hence, C.C. 47(2) did not preclude the introduction of the statement allegedly made in the present case. (42 C.3d 1168.)

Three justices, concurring in the judgment, nevertheless thought that Asia Inv. Co. was correct in holding that the statements made in the course of settlement negotiations were inadmissible under former C.C. 47(2).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §568.

148 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

E. Offer To Settle or Compromise.

4. Exceptions and Distinctions.

e. Miscellaneous Exceptions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 148

[§ 148] Miscellaneous Exceptions.

Some authorities suggest other distinctions; e.g., an offer to pay a lesser sum in settlement of an undisputed claim should be admissible (see 2 McCormick 5th, §266); an accepted offer should be admissible if the offeror later repudiates (see 2 McCormick 5th, §266; 26 A.L.R.2d 858); and an offer to pay money to prevent a criminal prosecution is an implied admission (see People v. Moore (1945) 70 C.A.2d 158, 162, 160 P.2d 857; 4 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1061, p. 46).

In Farrington v. A. Teichert & Son (1943) 59 C.A.2d 468, 474, 139 P.2d 80, plaintiff sued defendant for conversion of gravel. Defendant proved that plaintiff agreed to let defendant continue removing material by paying its reasonable value, and that the value was not agreed upon. Held, this was admissible; it was not an objectionable offer to compromise, but was relevant to show defendant's liability only in quantum meruit and not for conversion.

In Home Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 46 C.A.4th 1286, 1293, 54 C.R.2d 292, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §20, a breach of contract action by plaintiff insured against its insurers, defendant, an excess insurer that refused to settle, had the right to discover the amounts of settlements between plaintiff and its other insurers.

Another exception was recognized in Conderback v. Standard Oil Co. of Calif. (1966) 239 C.A.2d 664, 683, 48 C.R. 901: Settlement discussions are admissible on the issue whether there was an accord and satisfaction, with a limiting instruction on the purpose for which the evidence may be considered.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Evidence of either party's conduct in the prelitigation procedures established by C.C. 910 et seq. for construction defect actions (see 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1162 et seq.) may be introduced in a subsequent enforcement action, with the exception of any mediation, and any repair efforts by the builder "shall not be considered settlement communications or offers of settlement and are not inadmissible in evidence on such a basis." (C.C. 934, added in 2002.)

See 2 McCormick 6th, §266.

149 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE
F. Offer To Discount Claim.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 149

[§ 149] Offer To Discount Claim.

An offer by a creditor to accept a lesser amount than due on a claim is just as much an offer to compromise as an offer by the debtor to pay a lesser amount (supra, §140), and the same policy calls for exclusion of the offer. (See Anderson v. Yousem (1960) 177 C.A.2d 135, 144, 1 C.R. 889.) Accordingly, Ev.C. 1154, based on Uniform Rules of Evidence, Rule 53 (but adding the language on negotiations), provides: "Evidence that a person has accepted or offered or promised to accept a sum of money or any other thing, act, or service in satisfaction of a claim, as well as any conduct or statements made in negotiation thereof, is inadmissible to prove the invalidity of the claim or any part of it."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

150 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

G. Defendant's Settlement With Another Person.

1. General Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 150

[§ 150] General Rule.

In Brown v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1947) 79 C.A.2d 613, 180 P.2d 424, the rule excluding compromise offers or settlements (supra, §140) was applied to the similarly objectionable showing of settlement with a different person. Plaintiff was injured in an accident involving defendant railway's train and defendant C's automobile, and defendant C was also injured by defendant railway's train. The railway set up the affirmative defense of C's negligence as the proximate cause. At the trial, C's counsel asked him: "Did the Pacific Electric Railway make a settlement with you for the injuries you sustained?" Over objection of defendant railway, C was allowed to show that it had paid $ 771.37 for damages to C's car. Held, this was reversible error. Plaintiff argued on appeal that the evidence did not come within the exclusionary provisions of former C.C.P. 2078 because (a) it was not an offer of compromise but a completed settlement, and (b) the transaction was not between plaintiff and the railway. The court held, however, that the statutory language was not the sole basis of exclusion, and that by the weight of authority the same rules of policy applied here. "Evidence of a compromise settlement by the defendant of a claim which originated in the very tort alleged by the plaintiff is inherently harmful in the trial of an action for personal injuries. ... Proof of the settlement made by the corporation ... contains no evidence of the admission of the corporation's negligence. It shows no more than the diligence of appellant to buy its peace with the party whose claim was modest and whose automobile had actually been struck by the train." (79 C.A.2d 615, 616.) (See 21 So. Cal. L. Rev. 414; Citti v. Bava (1928) 204 C. 136, 138, 266 P. 954 [personal injuries sustained by A and plaintiff; evidence that defendant settled with A was not admissible in plaintiff's action against defendant]; Curtis v. McAuliffe (1930) 106 C.A. 1, 8, 288 P. 675 [same]; 2 McCormick 5th, §266; 20 A.L.R.2d 304.)

A challenge of the rule was unsuccessfully attempted in Price v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1958) 164 C.A.2d 400, 330 P.2d 933. The distinguishing fact relied on was that the other settlement was made after 11 days of trial, by stipulation for judgment in favor of plaintiffs in the amounts of $ 110,000 and $ 15,000. The majority opinion held the evidence inadmissible on the authority of the Brown case. The dissenting justice thought the Brown decision was not controlling: "That case involved an extrajudicial, out-of-court compromise settlement of a modest claim. Here we have a solemn, formal, judicial stipulation of liability which necessarily included an admission of negligence. The Santa Fe did not agree to a judgment against it for $ 125,000 merely to buy its peace." (164 C.A.2d 414.)

Ev.C. 1152 (supra, §142) applies to an offer "to another who has sustained or claims to have sustained loss or damage." This language sufficiently covers the third-party settlement in the Brown case, supra. (See Ins.C. 11582 [settlement of a claim by automobile liability insurer shall not be construed as an admission of liability by the insured or the insurer "with respect to any other claim arising from the same accident or event"].)

Ev.C. 1152 bars the evidence only when it is offered to prove liability. Where the third person whose claim was settled by the defendant appears as a witness for the defendant, the payment may be inquired into on cross-examination to show bias or prejudice. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §272.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 McCormick 6th, §266.

151 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

G. Defendant's Settlement With Another Person.

2. Distinction: Reduction of Judgment.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 151

[§ 151] Distinction: Reduction of Judgment.

In Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 C.A.3d 173, 85 C.R. 659, plaintiff unsuccessfully sought to exclude evidence that he had already received a $ 75,000 settlement from one defendant. Plaintiff stated that the court could deduct the settlement amount from any verdict received, and argued that the jury might consider it unfair for a corporate defendant to be released for $ 75,000 while an individual defendant was being sued for over a million dollars. Held, judgment reversed; the judge could have required a clear stipulation as to procedure or accepted plaintiff's admission of settlement and directed an appropriate reduction of amount before entering judgment. "There can be no question that it was a great advantage to the defense to be able to let the jury know that appellant's injuries were not wholly uncompensated. But that advantage is not one which a party is entitled to enjoy in the absence of any issue in the determination of which the evidence will be relevant and proper for the jury to hear. The situation is closely analogous to an admission of liability by a defendant. Such an admission precludes the introduction of evidence of liability unless it is relevant to some distinct issue remaining in the case." (6 C.A.3d 178.) (See Shepard v. Walley (1972) 28 C.A.3d 1079, 1082, 105 C.R. 387 [following Albrecht]; Self v. General Motors Corp. (1974) 42 C.A.3d 1, 13, 116 C.R. 575 ["where the fact of settlement is undisputed and the fact of liability is disputed, that information may confuse the jury and prejudice the cause of the remaining litigants, and its use is frowned upon"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

152 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

H. Information Disclosed in Mediation Proceeding.

1. Purpose and Nature of Protection.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 152

[§ 152] Purpose and Nature of Protection.

(1) Recommendation and Enactment. The California Law Revision Commission made a study of the need for legislation to make mediation of disputes a more useful alternative to a court or jury trial. The Commission concluded that comprehensive legislation governing mediation would not be desirable. "Many different techniques of mediation are now in use or are being developed. Legislation might limit this experimentation and preclude the development of new or improved mediation techniques." (18 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, Appendix III, pp. 245, 246.)

The Commission therefore recommended enactment of a narrow statute that would protect information disclosed in a mediation from later disclosure in a judicial proceeding, supplementing the similar protection in Ev.C. 1152 (supra, §140) for offers to settle or compromise. (18 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 245.) The proposed statute, former Ev.C. 1152.5, was enacted in 1985. Former Ev.C. 1152.5 was repealed in 1997 and replaced by Ev.C. 1115 et seq., a more comprehensive statute. (On general rule of confidentiality, see infra, §153; on types of statements and agreements that may be disclosed, see infra, §155; on termination of mediation, see infra, §156; on nonstatutory protection under constitutional right of privacy, see infra, §158.)

(2) Definitions. The following definitions apply:

(a) "Mediation." Mediation is the "process in which a neutral person or persons facilitate communication between the disputants to assist them in reaching a mutually acceptable agreement." (Ev.C. 1115(a); the Law Revision Commission Comment notes that a proceeding may be a "mediation" for purposes of the statute, even though it is denominated differently.)

(b) "Mediator." A mediator is a neutral person who conducts mediation, and includes any person designated by a mediator to assist in the mediation or communicate with the participants in preparation for it. (Ev.C. 1115(b).)

(c) "Mediation Consultation." Mediation consultation is "a communication between a person and a mediator for the purpose of initiating, considering, or reconvening a mediation or retaining the mediator." (Ev.C. 1115(c).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Recommendation and Enactment. See 41 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1093 [proposing changes to mediation confidentiality legislation to ensure that finalized agreements can be enforced]; 26 California Lawyer 42 (September 2006) [controversies surrounding California's mediation confidentiality statutes].

153 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

H. Information Disclosed in Mediation Proceeding.

2. Scope of Protection and Remedies for Violations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 153

[§ 153] Scope of Protection and Remedies for Violations.

(1) General Rule of Confidentiality. Except as otherwise allowed in Ev.C. 1115 et seq., no evidence of statements or admissions made "for the purpose of, in the course of, or pursuant to, a mediation or a mediation consultation is admissible or subject to discovery, and disclosure of the evidence shall not be compelled, in any arbitration, administrative adjudication, civil action, or other noncriminal proceeding in which, pursuant to law, testimony can be compelled to be given." (Ev. C. 1119(a).) Writings prepared for, or in the course of, mediation are subject to the same protection. (Ev.C. 1119(b).) "All communications, negotiations, or settlement discussions by and between participants in the course of a mediation or a mediation consultation shall remain confidential." (Ev.C. 1119(c).) Neither the mediator nor anyone else may submit to a court or other adjudicative body, and the court or other body may not accept, a report or any other kind of finding concerning a mediation (except a report that is mandated by court rule or other law and that states only whether an agreement was reached), unless all parties to the mediation expressly agree in writing, or orally in accordance with Ev.C. 1118 (infra, §156), to the disclosure. (Ev.C. 1121.) Statements and writings that qualify for protection while mediation is in progress continue to be protected even after the mediation ends. (Ev.C. 1126; on termination of mediation, see infra, §156.)

Despite this broad rule of confidentiality, evidence that is otherwise admissible or subject to discovery outside the mediation context does not become inadmissible or protected from disclosure simply because it is introduced or used in a mediation or consultation. (Ev.C. 1120(a).) Further, the statute does not limit (a) the admissibility of an agreement to mediate; (b) the effect of an agreement not to take a default or an agreement to extend the time within which to act or refrain from acting in a pending civil action; or (c) disclosure of the mere fact that a mediator has served, is serving, will serve, or was contacted about serving as a mediator. (Ev.C. 1120(b).)

(2) Remedies for Violation of Confidentiality Rule. If a person subpoenas or seeks to compel a mediator to testify or produce a writing, and the material sought is ultimately ruled to be inadmissible or protected from disclosure under Ev.C. 1115 et seq., the mediator may be awarded reasonable attorneys' fees and costs against the person seeking disclosure. (Ev.C. 1127.) A reference to mediation during a subsequent civil trial is an irregularity within the meaning of the new trial statute (C.C.P. 657; see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attack on Judgment in Trial Court, §25), and a reference to mediation in any other subsequent noncriminal proceeding is grounds for vacating or modifying the decision in the proceeding, and granting a new or further hearing, if the reference materially affected the substantial rights of the party requesting relief. (Ev.C. 1128; see Law Revision Commission Comment ["An appropriate situation for invoking this section is where a party urges the trier of fact to draw an adverse inference from an adversary's refusal to disclose mediation communications."].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Rule of Confidentiality. See 35 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 33 [conflicts arising from goals of protecting confidentiality and enforcing mediated agreements].

In Rojas v. Superior Court (2004) 33 C.4th 407, 15 C.R.3d 643, 93 P.3d 260, tenants in an apartment complex sued the complex owner, alleging that defective construction had caused microbes to infest the complex, resulting in health problems for plaintiffs. The owner had previously sued a contractor concerning the same problems. That litigation had settled as a result of mediation. Plaintiffs requested, and eventually moved to compel production of discovery exchanged between the parties in the earlier litigation; physical evidence of the condition of the buildings in question, including photographs, samples, and reports; written notes of observations made during inspections and witness interviews; and writings evidencing experts' opinions and conclusions. The material requested was found undiscoverable, for the most part, because of the mediation privilege of Ev.C. 1119(b). The Court of Appeal granted plaintiffs' request for writ relief. In determining what material was discoverable, the court applied principles associated with the work product privilege. Thus, it concluded that (a) raw test data, photographs, and witness statements were nonderivative materials that were not protected by the statute; (b) material reflecting only an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research was absolutely protected; and (c) derivative materials such as amalgamations of factual information, and attorney thoughts, impressions, and conclusions, were discoverable only on a showing of good cause, which involved balancing the need for the materials and the purposes served by mediation confidentiality. Held, reversed.

(a) Under Ev.C. 1119, photographs and written witness statements are writings and are not subject to discovery if they were prepared for the purpose of, or in the course of, mediation. While physical objects--such as samples collected at the apartment complex--are not writings and thus are unprotected, recorded analyses of those samples qualify as writings and may not be discovered. (33 C.4th 416.) This interpretation does not render Ev.C. 1120(a) (text, p. 502) surplusage. That subdivision provides that evidence otherwise admissible or subject to discovery outside of mediation does not become protected simply because it is used or introduced in mediation. Read together, the two statutes establish that a party cannot secure protection for a writing, including a photograph, witness statement, or analysis of a test sample, that was not prepared for the purpose of mediation, simply by using or introducing it in the mediation. Ev.C. 1120 prevents parties from using mediation as a pretext to shield materials from disclosure. (33 C.4th 417.)

(b) As to derivative materials, the statute embodying the work product privilege (C.C.P. 2018) contains a good cause exception. The Legislature placed several narrowly drawn exceptions to Ev.C. 1119 in Ev.C. 1122 et seq. (text, §155), but a good cause exception is not among them. There is no evidence of a legislative intent supporting the existence of an exception that the Legislature had the ability to include but did not. If courts begin to apply the good cause test to material otherwise subject to mediation confidentiality, parties will be less willing to mediate. (33 C.4th 424.) (See 53 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1549 [resolving questions left unanswered by Rojas].)

In Doe 1 v. Superior Court (2005) 132 C.A.4th 1160, 34 C.R.3d 248, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles was defendant in numerous lawsuits alleging that various priests had committed acts of childhood sexual molestation against plaintiffs. The Los Angeles Archdiocese offered to prepare written summaries of its personnel and other files concerning certain of the priests. Once prepared, the summaries, which the Archdiocese called "proffers," and the information from which they were derived, were turned over to the court. The Archdiocese also made clear its intention to release the proffers publicly. The priests moved for a protective order, raising both privacy and privilege issues, and also claiming that mediation confidentiality applied. The trial judge denied the motion. Held, reversed.

(a) The proffers were prepared for mediation and settlement purposes. The objective was to allow the Archdiocese, in some instances, to concede that it had notice of a priest's sexual proclivities before the alleged misconduct took place. Although some of the meetings for which the proffers were prepared were called "settlement conferences," it is clear that mediation was occurring. "If counsel wish to avoid the effect of the mediation confidentiality rules, they should make clear at the outset that something other than a mediation is intended." (132 C.A.4th 1166.)

(b) The exception of Ev.C. 1122(a)(2) (text, §155) is inapplicable. Under that provision, one party, in this case the Archdiocese, could consent to disclosure of the proffers, as long as the party did not disclose anything that was said or done or admitted in the course of the mediation. However, the proffers concede that the Archdiocese had notice as to certain of the priests, and this amounts to an admission. As to the other priests, the proffers, in effect, reveal the Archdiocese's mediation stance. (132 C.A.4th 1167, 1168.)

(c) The exception of Ev.C. 1122(a)(1) (text, §155) is likewise inapplicable. That provision requires the consent of all mediation participants, and the priests, who resist disclosure, appear to have had some representation during mediation. (132 C.A.4th 1169.)

(d) The argument that the refusal to release the proffers functions as a prior restraint of free speech rests on the premise that the information was obtained independently of the discovery process. In re Marriage of Candiotti (1995) 34 C.A.4th 718, 40 C.R.2d 299, held that materials obtained through discovery could be restrained but those obtained elsewhere could not be. Here the material was obtained by a process "not substantively different" from formal discovery. (132 C.A.4th 1172.) However, "nothing in our decision today limits the Archdiocese from releasing information contained in the underlying personnel or other files that it has maintained. Our holding deals with only the specific written proffers developed through mediation." (132 C.A.4th 1173.) (1a) (New) No Exception to General Rule Where Sanctions Sought. In Foxgate Homeowners' Assn. v. Bramalea Calif. (2001) 26 C.4th 1, 108 C.R.2d 642, 25 P.3d 1117, plaintiff homeowners association brought an action for construction defects against defendant developer. Plaintiff filed a motion for sanctions against defendant and its attorney for failing to participate in good faith in court-ordered mediation and to comply with an order of the mediator, and it attached to its motion the report of the mediator and a declaration by plaintiff's counsel reciting statements made during mediation. The trial judge granted the sanctions motion. The Court of Appeal reversed, concluding that a mediator may reveal material necessary to place sanctionable conduct in context, including communications made during mediation, but that, here, the mediator's report included more information than was necessary. Held, judgment of the Court of Appeal affirmed, but only because it reversed the trial judge's ruling. Ev.C. 1119, text, p. 501, and Ev.C. 1121, text, p. 502, unambiguously and unqualifiedly bar disclosure of communications made during mediation in the absence of an express statutory exception. "[W]e do not agree with the Court of Appeal that the court may fashion an exception for bad faith in mediation because failure to authorize reporting of such conduct during mediation may lead to 'an absurd result' or fail to carry out the legislative policy of encouraging mediation. The Legislature has decided that the policy of encouraging mediation by ensuring confidentiality is promoted by avoiding the threat that frank expression of viewpoints by the parties during mediation may subject a participant to a motion for imposition of sanctions by another party or the mediator who might assert that those views constitute a bad faith failure to participate in mediation. Therefore, even were the court free to ignore the plain language of the confidentiality statutes, there is no justification for doing so here." (26 C.4th 17.) If, on remand, plaintiff wishes to pursue the sanctions motion, the trial judge may consider only plaintiff's assertion and evidence offered in support of the assertion that defendant engaged in conduct warranting sanctions. "No evidence of communications made during the mediation may be admitted or considered." (26 C.4th 18.)

(1b) (New) No Implied Waiver. In Eisendrath v. Superior Court (2003) 109 C.A.4th 351, 134 C.R.2d 716, plaintiff former husband filed a motion to correct a spousal support agreement that had been reached through mediation. In opposing the motion, defendant former wife sought to depose the mediator. Plaintiff then requested a protective order to bar discovery and evidence regarding mediation communications, except for certain conversations between the parties that formed the basis of plaintiff's motion to correct the support agreement. Finding that plaintiff had impliedly waived his confidentiality rights, the trial judge denied the protective order and decided to hold an in camera hearing on the mediator's potential testimony to determine whether it should be admitted. Held, the order was improper in both respects.

(a) Ev.C. 1122 specifies the means by which mediation confidentiality may be expressly waived. The implied waiver provisions on which the trial judge relied (Ev.C. 910 et seq.) are applicable only to the privileges to which they explicitly refer, and mediation confidentiality is not among them. Nothing in Ev.C. 910 et seq. evidences any legislative intent to extend the principles of implied waiver to mediation confidentiality. (109 C.A.4th 362, 363.)

(b) A finding that plaintiff did not impliedly waive his confidentiality rights does not give him an unfair advantage. His attack on the support agreement rests largely on evidence of his conversations with defendant, but these conversations too come within the ambit of mediation confidentiality. Although the conversations were held outside the presence of the mediator, the confidentiality rule established by Ev.C. 1119 "encompasses communications by participants before the end of mediation that are materially related to the purpose of the mediation, regardless of whether these communications are made in the mediator's presence." (109 C.A.4th 364.) Thus, evidence of the conversations is inadmissible absent suitable express waivers from both parties. This conclusion gives defendant a substantial measure of control over plaintiff's ability to present evidence supporting his motion, but "this result does not disturb our interpretation of the statutory scheme in question. ... [W]e assume that the Legislature considered these limitations on the presentation of evidence when it enacted the statutory scheme." (109 C.A.4th 365.)

(c) Under Ev.C. 703.5, the mediator himself is incompetent to testify, and thus it was error to order an in camera hearing to determine whether his testimony should be allowed. The two cases approving an in camera hearing for this purpose involved issues different from those present here. (109 C.A.4th 366, citing Rinaker v. Superior Court (1998) 62 C.A.4th 155, 74 C.R.2d 464, text, §154, and a federal case relying on Rinaker.) (See In re Marriage of Kieturakis (2006) 138 C.A.4th 56, 78, 93, 41 C.R.3d 119, 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, Supp., §243 [discussing same federal case at length, casting doubt on portion of its holding creating nonstatutory exception to confidentiality, but determining that any error in trial judge's reliance on that case was harmless].)

(1c) (New) No Exception To Show Perjury or Inconsistent Statements. In Wimsatt v. Superior Court (2007) 152 C.A.4th 137, 61 C.R.3d 200, a legal malpractice action arising from defendants' representation of plaintiff in a personal injury case, the trial judge denied defendants' motion for a protective order as to briefs and e-mails relating to mediation of the personal injury case, and as to a communication by defendant attorney to the personal injury defendants in which plaintiff's settlement demand was purportedly lowered. Held, writ of mandate issued; the briefs and e-mails were protected by the mediation confidentiality statutes, although the communication concerning the settlement demand was not.

(a) The mediation briefs were exactly the type of writing that the statutes were designed to protect from disclosure. (152 C.A.4th 158.) The e-mails quoted from the briefs, and mediation participants cannot be allowed to evade the protection of the statutes by transmitting otherwise confidential material by electronic means. (152 C.A.4th 159.) However, defendants did not carry their burden of showing that the settlement communication was "anything other than expected negotiation posturing that occurs in most civil litigation. ... All conversations between the parties are not protected by mediation confidentiality simply because the conversations might have occurred temporally before a scheduled mediation." (152 C.A.4th 160, 161.)

(b) The trial judge's ruling stemmed from plaintiff's argument that defendant attorney's deposition testimony was perjurious because it was inconsistent with other statements made by him. The judge believed he could create an exception to mediation confidentiality that would thwart attempts to shield perjury and inconsistent statements. The Supreme Court, however, has clearly and unequivocally stated that the courts may not craft exceptions to mediation confidentiality, and this precedent must be followed. (152 C.A.4th 163, citing Foxgate, supra.)

(c) "The stringent result we reach here means that when clients ... participate in mediation they are, in effect, relinquishing all claims for new and independent torts arising from mediation, including legal malpractice causes of action against their own counsel. Certainly clients, who have a fiduciary relationship with their lawyers, do not understand that this result is a by-product of an agreement to mediate. We believe that the purpose of mediation is not enhanced by such a result because wrongs will go unpunished and the administration of justice is not served." (152 C.A.4th 163.) "Given the number of cases in which the fair and equitable administration of justice has been thwarted, perhaps it is time for the Legislature to reconsider California's broad and expansive mediation confidentiality statutes and to craft ones that would permit countervailing public policies be considered." (152 C.A.4th 164.) Further, in light of the harsh and inequitable results that may occur, the parties and their attorneys should be warned of the unintended consequences of agreeing to mediate a dispute. If they do not intend to be bound by the confidentiality statutes, they should make it clear at the outset that something other than a mediation is intended. (152 C.A.4th 164, citing Doe 1, supra.)

154 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

H. Information Disclosed in Mediation Proceeding.

3. Proceedings Covered.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 154

[§ 154] Proceedings Covered.

(1) In General. Ev.C. 1115 et seq. apply to a mediation as defined in Ev.C. 1115(a) (supra, §152), but do not apply to family law conciliation proceedings under Family C. 1800 et seq., custody and visitation mediation under Family C. 3160 et seq., or a settlement conference under C.R.C., Rule 222 (see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §60). (Ev.C. 1117.) With respect to the investigation and mediation of labor disputes (see 2 Summary (9th), Agency and Employment, §298), Ev.C. 1115 et seq. are applicable to a mediation conducted by the California State Mediation and Conciliation Service and any person conducting the mediation. (Lab.C. 65.)

(2) Delinquency Proceedings. In Rinaker v. Superior Court (1998) 62 C.A.4th 155, 74 C.R.2d 464, a juvenile delinquency proceeding arising from an incident in which two minors allegedly threw rocks at a car, the minors moved to compel a mediator to testify concerning statements made by the car's owner during a confidential mediation of a civil harassment action arising out of the same incident. In the statements, the car owner allegedly admitted that he had not actually seen the persons who threw the rocks. The trial judge granted the motion, rejecting the mediator's argument that the statements were protected from disclosure by Ev.C. 1119 (supra, §153). Held, it was error to grant the motion without weighing the competing interests involved.

(a) The statute prohibits disclosure in a "civil action," and juvenile delinquency proceedings are civil in nature, not criminal. (62 C.A.4th 164.)

(b) Nevertheless, due process of law entitles juveniles to certain fundamental protections in proceedings that may result in confinement or other sanctions, whether the proceedings are labelled "criminal" or "civil." A juvenile delinquency proceeding falls into this category. Thus, due process may force the public policy served by the confidentiality provisions to yield when necessary to protect a juvenile's constitutional right to effective cross-examination and impeachment of an adverse witness. (62 C.A.4th 167.)

(c) Under the circumstances, the constitutional right of privacy is not an obstacle to disclosure. To be entitled to constitutional protection, a privacy interest must be based on a "reasonable expectation of privacy." However, it has long been established that, when balanced against the competing goals of preventing perjury and preserving the integrity of the truth-seeking process of trial in a juvenile delinquency proceeding, the interest in promoting settlements (in this case through confidential mediation) must yield to the constitutional right of effective impeachment. Thus, neither the car owner nor the mediator could have had a reasonable expectation that any statements made by the car owner during confidential mediation concerning the rock-throwing incident would remain private if (1) they were inconsistent with other statements he made, and (2) he were called as a witness to testify against the minors in a delinquency proceeding. (62 C.A.4th 167, 168.)

(d) The minors did not waive their right to compel the car owner's testimony by agreeing to maintain the confidentiality of the mediation proceedings. "The party claiming that a fundamental right has been waived has the burden to prove the waiver by clear and convincing evidence which does not leave the matter to speculation; doubtful cases will be decided against waiver. ... Without knowing that Torres would make inconsistent statements during mediation concerning their alleged involvement in the rock-throwing incident, the minors had no knowledge of facts giving rise to their constitutional right to effective impeachment during the subsequent juvenile delinquency proceeding." (62 C.A.4th 168, 169.) Thus, they could not have knowingly and intelligently chosen to waive their right to use any such statements. (62 C.A.4th 169.)

(e) Although the minors' due process rights may require disclosure in this case, the trial judge "should have conducted an in camera hearing to weigh the public's interest in maintaining the confidentiality of mediation against the minors' constitutionally based claim of need for the testimony, and to determine whether the minors have established that the mediator's testimony is necessary to vindicate their right of confrontation. ... [R]equiring an in camera hearing maintains the confidentiality of the mediation process while the juvenile court considers factors bearing upon whether the minors' constitutional right of effective impeachment compels breach of the confidential mediation process." (62 C.A.4th 161.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. C.R.C., Rule 222 was renumbered C.R.C., Rule 3.1380 in 2006, and Ev.C. 1117 was amended in 2007 to reflect that change.

See Saeta v. Superior Court (2004) 117 C.A.4th 261, 271, 11 C.R.3d 610 [in wrongful termination action, Ev.C. 1119 did not prevent trial judge from requiring testimony of retired judge who had acted as member of termination review board that reviewed plaintiff's termination after she exercised hearing right under employment contract; review proceeding was not mediation within meaning of Ev.C. 1115(a)].

Cross-Reference: 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §323.

155 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

H. Information Disclosed in Mediation Proceeding.

4. Exceptions and Distinctions.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 155

[§ 155] Exceptions and Distinctions.

(1) Disclosure of Communication or Writing. Under Ev.C. 1122, a communication or writing made or prepared in the mediation context may be disclosed if either of the following conditions is satisfied:

(a) All persons who conducted or participated in the mediation expressly agree to the disclosure in writing, or orally under Ev.C. 1118 (see infra, §156). The Law Revision Commission Comment notes that the agreement must be express, not implied. "For example, parties cannot be deemed to have agreed in advance to disclosure merely because they agreed to participate in a particular dispute resolution program."

(b) The communication, document, or writing was prepared by or on behalf of fewer than all the participants, those participants expressly agree to the disclosure in writing, or orally under Ev.C. 1118, to the disclosure, and the communication, document, or writing does not disclose anything said or done or any admission made in the course of the mediation.

(2) Disclosure of Written Settlement Agreement. Under Ev.C. 1123, a written settlement agreement prepared in the mediation context may be disclosed if it is signed by the settling parties and, additionally, one of the following conditions is satisfied:

(a) The agreement states that it is admissible or subject to disclosure.

(b) The agreement provides that it is enforceable or binding.

(c) All parties to the agreement expressly agree to the disclosure in writing, or orally under Ev.C. 1118 (infra, §156).

(d) The agreement is used to show fraud, duress, or illegality that is relevant to an issue in dispute.

(3) Disclosure of Oral Agreement. Under Ev.C. 1124, an oral agreement made in the mediation context may be disclosed if any of the following conditions is satisfied:

(a) The agreement is "in accordance with Section 1118." (See infra, §156.)

(b) The agreement fulfills the requirements of Ev.C. 1118, except for the requirement that the parties state that the agreement is enforceable or binding, and all parties expressly agree to the disclosure in writing or orally under Ev.C.

1118.

(c) The agreement fulfills the requirements of Ev.C. 1118, except for the requirement that the parties state that the agreement is enforceable or binding, and the agreement is used to show fraud, duress, or illegality that is relevant to an issue in dispute.

The Law Revision Commission Comment notes that, except for the disclosures it specifically allows, Ev.C. 1124 was intended to codify the approach of Ryan v. Garcia (1994) 27 C.A.4th 1006, 33 C.R.2d 158, which found oral statements regarding settlement inadmissible, and to reject the contrary approach of Regents of Univ. of Calif. v. Sumner (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1209, 50 C.R.2d 200.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Disclosure of Written Settlement Agreement. In Stewart v. Preston Pipeline (2005) 134 C.A.4th 1565, 36 C.R.3d 901, an action arising from a traffic accident, the parties engaged in mediation, and at the end of the process a settlement agreement was signed by plaintiff, plaintiff's attorney, and defendants' attorney. The agreement recited that the parties intended the settlement to be enforceable and exempt from certain confidentiality provisions of the Evidence Code. Plaintiff refused to accept the settlement check, defendants brought motions to enforce the settlement and for summary judgment, and the trial judge entered judgment in defendants' favor. Held, affirmed.

(a) The settlement agreement was admissible, notwithstanding the general rule of mediation confidentiality (Ev.C. 1119), because it met at least two of the statutory exceptions: (1) the agreement provided that it was admissible or used "words to that effect" (Ev.C. 1123(a)), and (2) by stating that it was a full and final settlement of claims and that the parties intended it to be enforceable under C.C.P. 664.6, the agreement provided that it was enforceable or binding (Ev.C. 1123(b)). (134 C.A.4th 1577, 1578.)

(b) In arguing that the waiver of confidentiality contained in the agreement was invalid because it was not signed personally by both parties, plaintiff relied on Levy v. Superior Court (1995) 10 C.4th 578, 41 C.R.2d 878, 896 P.2d 171, 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §97, but Levy is distinguishable for three reasons. First, it was decided under C.C.P. 664.6, not under the mediation statutes. Second, in Levy, it was the nonsignatory party who challenged his attorney's authority to sign the stipulation for an out-of-court settlement; here, neither defendants nor their insurer challenges defense counsel's authority to sign. Third, in Levy, the client's right affected by his attorney's stipulation (settlement of a dispute) was substantial; by contrast, a stipulation waiving mediation confidentiality must be deemed one that does not impact the substantial rights of the party. "To hold otherwise would exalt form over substance and would allow mediation confidentiality to nullify otherwise valid settlements agreed upon through mediation." (134 C.A.4th 1583.)

(c) Plaintiff also relied on Levy to argue that even if the settlement agreement can be admitted, it is unenforceable. However, Levy merely found that lack of the plaintiff's personal signature prevented enforcement under C.C.P. 664.6. Here, the trial judge properly determined that the agreement did not meet the requirements of C.C.P. 664.6, but additionally found that the agreement could be considered in connection with defendants' alternative motion for summary judgment. (134 C.A.4th 1585.) As there was no triable issue of material fact concerning either mutual consent or plaintiff's entitlement to rescind, summary judgment for defendants was proper. (134 C.A.4th 1589.)

In Fair v. Bakhtiari (2006) 40 C.4th 189, 51 C.R.3d 871, 147 P.3d 653, plaintiff brought an action alleging that defendants wrongfully excluded him from real estate syndications, denied him compensation, misappropriated profits, and that one of the defendants physically assaulted him. The parties engaged in mediation, producing a handwritten memorandum, signed by the mediator and the parties, that included an arbitration clause ("Any and all disputes subject to JAMS ... arbitration rules"). The parties informed the court that they had settled, but when they were unable to finalize the settlement, plaintiff demanded arbitration under the clause in the mediation memorandum. Defendants resisted, and the trial judge denied plaintiff's motion to compel arbitration, finding that the memorandum could not be admitted under Ev.C. 1123(b), and that without it there was insufficient demonstration of an agreement to arbitrate. The Court of Appeal reversed, finding that the arbitration clause in the memorandum satisfied the admissibility requirements of Ev.C. 1123(b). Held, judgment of the Court of Appeal reversed. To satisfy Ev.C. 1123(b), "a settlement agreement must include a statement that it is 'enforceable' or 'binding,' or a declaration in other terms with the same meaning. The statute leaves room for various formulations. However, arbitration clauses, forum selection clauses, choice of law provisions, terms contemplating remedies for breach, and similar commonly employed enforcement provisions typically negotiated in settlement discussions do not qualify an agreement for admission" under the statute. (40 C.4th 199, 200.) Defendants' postmediation conduct, as characterized by plaintiff, may well be consistent with a belief on their part that an enforceable settlement was intended, but "we do not believe the Legislature contemplated that in order to rule on the admissibility of a settlement agreement under section 1123(b), the court would examine extrinsic evidence to resolve competing claims over the parties' intent. ... [T]he statute is designed to produce documents that clearly reflect the parties' agreement that the settlement terms are 'enforceable or binding.' " (40 C.4th 198.)

156 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

H. Information Disclosed in Mediation Proceeding.

5. Termination of Mediation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 156

[§ 156] Termination of Mediation.

Under Ev.C. 1125(a), any one of the following events terminates a mediation:

- (1) The parties execute a written settlement agreement fully resolving the dispute.
- (2) The parties reach an oral agreement "in accordance with Section 1118" that fully resolves the dispute. Ev.C. 1118 requires the agreement to have been recorded by a court reporter or by a reliable means of sound recording; the record must state the agreement's terms, that all parties agree to them, and that the agreement is enforceable or binding; and the recording must be reduced to a writing and signed within 72 hours after the recording.
- (3) The mediator gives the participants a signed writing stating that the mediation is terminated.
- (4) A party gives the mediator and other participants a written statement that the mediation is terminated. If more than two parties were involved, the remaining participants may continue to mediate, or the mediation may be terminated by one of the other events specified in Ev.C. 1125.
- (5) For 10 calendar days, there is no communication between the mediator and any of the parties regarding the dispute. The 10-day period may be shortened or extended by agreement.

In the case of mediation that partially resolves a dispute, mediation ends either when the parties execute a written settlement agreement partially resolving the dispute, or when they reach an oral agreement "in accordance with Section 1118" partially resolving the dispute. (Ev.C. 1125(b).)

Ev.C. 1125 does not preclude a party from ending a mediation without reaching an agreement, and it does not otherwise affect a party's power to terminate the mediation. (Ev.C. 1125(c).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

157 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

H. Information Disclosed in Mediation Proceeding.

6. No Disqualification of Mediation Attorney From Related Case.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 157

[§ 157] No Disqualification of Mediation Attorney From Related Case.

In Barajas v. Oren Realty & Dev. Co. (1997) 57 C.A.4th 209, 67 C.R.2d 62, after an attorney represented a bank in successful mediation of its claim against the builder of an apartment house damaged in an earthquake, he participated as cocounsel for tenants of the apartment house in their action against the same builder. The trial judge disqualified him, reasoning that the confidentiality concerns of former Ev.C. 1152.5 (see supra, §152) mandated that an attorney who represents a plaintiff in a mediation be disqualified from representing a different plaintiff in a related case against the same defendant. Held, disqualification order reversed.

(a) The trial judge concluded that disqualification was statutorily mandated in order to encourage mediation. It is true that this interpretation of the statute might encourage defendants to be forthcoming during mediation, but it would also discourage plaintiffs from agreeing to mediate in the first place. The net effect would probably be to inhibit agreements to mediate, because both sides must agree. (57 C.A.4th 213.)

(b) Mediation would be even more strongly discouraged if the disqualification rule were applied to the same case once mediation proved unsuccessful, because attorneys representing a party in mediation ordinarily continue to handle the case through trial and beyond. Yet the logic underlying a disqualification requirement in related cases would apply with even greater force to the same case, because an attorney participating in the unsuccessful mediation has information relating to the very case being litigated. (57 C.A.4th 215.)

(c) The statute itself does not explicitly impose the trial judge's disqualification rule. "If the Legislature had intended an interpretation so in conflict with the goal of encouraging voluntary mediation, but nevertheless deemed it necessary (as the trial court theorized) to promote candor once mediation was chosen, there would likely be some indication of such conflicting intents in the language or history of the statute. Nowhere is there any indication that the Legislature ever contemplated such an interpretation." (57 C.A.4th 218.)

(d) Finally, the trial judge's interpretation would represent a significant change from preexisting mediation practice. At the time the statute was enacted, it was common practice for a mediator to obtain permission before disclosing confidential information to the opposing party. Thus, a party could restrict the disclosure of confidential information either by not making the disclosure itself, or by not authorizing the mediator to do so. Further, it was common practice for the same counsel who represented a party in unsuccessful mediation to continue the representation when the case went to trial. It is unlikely the Legislature would have replaced these practices with a new mediation-disqualification rule without expressly so stating. "An attorney may therefore participate in mediation without exposing himself or herself to disqualification in other cases." (57 C.A.4th 218, 219.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

158 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

H. Information Disclosed in Mediation Proceeding.

7. Nonstatutory Protection.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 158

[§ 158] Nonstatutory Protection.

In Garstang v. Superior Court (1995) 39 C.A.4th 526, 46 C.R.2d 84, plaintiff, a university employee, brought an action for slander and intentional infliction of emotional distress based on rumors circulating in her workplace that she had been promoted in exchange for sexual favors. In depositions, plaintiff questioned three university employees about university ombudsman sessions that had been conducted concerning the rumors. The employees refused to answer the questions on the ground that statements made before an ombudsman are privileged. The trial judge denied plaintiff's motion to compel further responses. Held, writ relief denied; the ruling was proper.

(a) Even assuming that a university ombudsman session constitutes a mediation, the mediation privilege of former Ev.C. 1152.5 is inapplicable here because none of the parties participating in the sessions executed the writing then required by former Ev.C. 1152.5(c). (39 C.A.4th 531, 532.)

(b) Although the deponents can claim no statutory privilege, the right of privacy set forth in Cal. Const., Art. I, §1 (see 7 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, §454) affords them a qualified protection that may be abridged only when there is a compelling and opposing state interest. One compelling interest of this type is the need to ascertain the truth in connection with legal claims. (39 C.A.4th 532.)

(c) If plaintiff is denied an opportunity to depose the employees as to what was said in the ombudsman sessions, her ability to ascertain the truth in connection with her lawsuit may be impaired. "We are of the opinion, however, that a proper balancing of the competing values would here necessarily weigh in favor of the right of privacy of those individuals participating in the ombudsman sessions since the communications related to the private affairs of various Caltech employees, and were maintained in confidence by the institution." (39 C.A.4th 533, 534.) The employees participated in the sessions believing that their communications would not be disclosed. Confidentiality is essential to maintenance of the relationship between the ombudsman's office and the university's employees and management, and that relationship is worthy of societal support. The harm caused by the disruption of this confidential relationship--loss of the effectiveness of a program that resolves many problems informally and more quickly than other more formal procedures--would be greater than any benefit accruing to plaintiff by disclosure. (39 C.A.4th 535.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 7 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §575.

159 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

I. Other Claims or Litigation by Plaintiff.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 159

[§ 159] Other Claims or Litigation by Plaintiff.

Evidence of repeated claims or lawsuits by the plaintiff might be relevant as showing the plaintiff's tendency to seek extravagant or unwarranted compensation and therefore as casting doubt on the legitimacy of the claim in litigation. But it involves the danger of both undue prejudice and time-wasting confusion of issues, and is accordingly held inadmissible. (See Lowenthal v. Mortimer (1954) 125 C.A.2d 636, 643, 270 P.2d 942; Coleman v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 141 C.A.2d 121, 133, 296 P.2d 386; 1 McCormick 5th, §196; 3A Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §963; 69 A.L.R.2d 593 [cross-examination of personal injury plaintiff as to previous injuries, claims, or actions].)

In Lowenthal v. Mortimer, an automobile accident case, plaintiffs sought damages for emotional distress. Defendant's counsel, cross-examining plaintiff, inquired about 15 lawsuits involving herself and her husband within a period of 9 years prior to the suit. Substantially all were commercial suits (they operated a cafeteria and delicatessen). Defendant's theory was that this evidence would tend to show a reason for their irritability not attributable to the accident. Held, admission of this evidence was reversible error. Evidence of previous accidents is inadmissible on the issue of the driver's negligence on the occasion in question, and wholly unrelated commercial litigation is irrelevant and equally improper. It could have no other effect than to prejudice the jury against plaintiffs, for litigiousness in the eyes of most people reflects more upon character than upon impairment of health. The court commented on the danger of such cross-examination as follows:

(a) "Illustrative of collateral issues that might be raised if the 15 other lawsuits could properly be introduced is an exposition to a lay jury of the nature of plaintiffs' business operations and the lease problems, collection difficulties, and contract interpretations of a commercial enterprise that result in litigation. To negative any inference of unreasonable contentiousness, plaintiffs would be entitled to attempt an adequate explanation." (125 C.A.2d 643.)

(b) "If we were to hold that a businessman is to be penalized in a personal injury case because of precedent commercial litigation, we would be jeopardizing the rights of a trial lawyer who may be injured in an accident, or a physician who may have sued to collect on accounts, or insurance company and title company and collection agency representatives and numerous others who are frequently subjected to the vagaries of legal proceedings." (125 C.A.2d 643.)

(c) "Then, too, were other lawsuits allowed in evidence to show a reason for irritability, we would be flinging the gates wide open to discussion of the 1,001 other environmental aggravations that contribute to human nervousness in this modern complex society. That may come about in our jurisprudence some day, but when it does, trials will be interminable." (125 C.A.2d 643.)

This rule does not apply, however, where the evidence of a prior claim or suit has a relevant purpose in the case on trial. Thus, in Brown v. Affonso (1960) 185 C.A.2d 235, 238, 8 C.R. 156, plaintiff sued for damages for head injuries received in 1957. Defendant, cross-examining her doctor, asked about his reports and testimony relating to prior accidents in 1954 and 1956, seeking to show that the injuries claimed in the present case were identical to those claimed in the previous cases. Held, the questions were proper, for the evidence was relevant on this issue. (See 69 A.L.R.2d 593, 609.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 1 McCormick 6th, §196.

160 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

J. Compensation to Plaintiff From Collateral Source.

1. General Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 160

[§ 160] General Rule.

(1) Evidence Inadmissible. If a plaintiff, after satisfaction of a judgment for substantial damages against one joint or concurrent tortfeasor, seeks additional recovery from another, the rule against double recovery allows proof of the first recovery in mitigation of damages. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1322.) And the same is true where the defendant or the defendant's insurer pays the plaintiff's medical expenses. This amount is deducted from the recovery. (See Dodds v. Bucknum (1963) 214 C.A.2d 206, 213, 29 C.R. 393, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1386.) But where the benefits are received by the plaintiff from third persons, e.g., the plaintiff's own disability insurer or employer, or a public agency making pension payments, the "collateral source rule" applies and no deduction is made. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1388 et seq.)

Accordingly, in the joint or concurrent tortfeasor cases, evidence of a prior recovery or settlement is admissible. (Steele v. Hash (1963) 212 C.A.2d 1, 3, 27 C.R. 853.) But in a collateral source case, evidence of the benefits received is not admissible. (See Savoia v. Moorehead (1948) 83 C.A.2d 147, 152, 188 P.2d 260; Morse v. Southern Pac. Trans. Co. (1976) 63 C.A.3d 128, 133, 135, 133 C.R. 577; Philip Chang & Sons Associates v. La Casa Novato (1986) 177 C.A.3d 159, 165, 173, 222 C.R. 800; Eichel v. New York Cen. R. Co. (1963) 375 U.S. 253, 84 S.Ct. 316, 317, 11 L.Ed.2d 307, 309 [disability pension payments]; 69 A.L.R.4th 131 [workers' compensation benefits].)

In California, there is no specific statutory exclusion of this evidence. "Nevertheless, a pervasive public policy has been judicially expressed and California remains a firm proponent of the 'collateral source rule.' This doctrine provides that if an injured party received some compensation for his injuries from a source wholly independent of the tortfeasor, such payment should not be deducted from the damages which the plaintiff would otherwise collect from the tortfeasor." (Hrnjak v. Graymar (1971) 4 C.3d 725, 729, 94 C.R. 623, 484 P.2d 599.) (For the express statutory exception in the Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act, C.C. 3333.1, see 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §787.)

(2) Distinction: Evidence Admissible To Explain Insurer's Refusal To Pay Benefits. An insurer is subject to liability in tort if it unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of its insured's claim. There is no tort, however, if the insurer refuses to pay policy benefits with proper cause. Notwithstanding the collateral source rule, therefore, an insurer may present evidence of other insurance in order to establish that it was justified in not paying policy benefits. (Kardly v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1995) 31 C.A.4th 1746, 1752, 37 C.R.2d 612 [in action against insurer for bad faith refusal to settle, trial judge erred in excluding evidence that plaintiffs had other insurance, where evidence was offered to show that defendant's refusal to pay was proper in that plaintiffs allegedly decided to pursue claim only against other insurer].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Evidence Inadmissible. See Lund v. San Joaquin Valley R. (2003) 31 C.4th 1, 11, 1 C.R.3d 412, 71 P.3d 770

[collateral source rule applies where plaintiff seeks to introduce evidence that benefits from collateral source are not available; thus, except in unusual circumstances, jury in action under Federal Employers Liability Act (2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §118) should not be told of injured employee's ineligibility for workers' compensation benefits].

Rule against double recovery:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1550.

Dodds v. Bucknum:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1629.

Collateral source rule:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1631 et seq.

Express statutory exception:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §956. West's Key Number Digest, Damages k.59

161 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

J. Compensation to Plaintiff From Collateral Source.

2. Attempts To Circumvent Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 161

[§ 161] Attempts To Circumvent Rule.

Eichel v. New York Cen. R. Co. (1963) 375 U.S. 253, 84 S.Ct. 316, 11 L.Ed.2d 307, was an unsuccessful attempt to circumvent the rule by invoking the limited admissibility doctrine (supra, §30). Defendant contended that evidence of disability pension payments to an injured railroad worker was admissible on the issue of the extent and duration of his disability, as indicative of a motive for not going back to work (i.e., malingering). Held, "the likelihood of misuse by the jury clearly outweighs the value of this evidence." (84 S.Ct. 317, 11 L.Ed.2d 309.)

In Legg v. United Benefit Life Ins. Co. (1951) 103 C.A.2d 228, 229, 229 P.2d 454, plaintiff, injured in a streetcar accident, sued on a health and accident policy, seeking $ 100 per month for total disability. Defendant contested the nature and extent of her injuries, and over objection asked whether she had settled with the transit company and for how much ($ 1,000). Held, the question was obviously prejudicial in suggesting to the jury that she was trying to collect twice for the same accident, and that, if there had been a disability, it must have ended at the time of the settlement. Nor was the evidence admissible for any legitimate purpose. It was not proper impeachment, for she had not denied any settlement; the answer sought and obtained was not an admission, because it did not admit or acknowledge any material fact. The issue against the transit company would have been liability as well as injuries; hence, the fact of settlement or the amount received would not tend to prove the extent of her injuries, the sole issue in this case.

In Hrnjak v. Graymar (1971) 4 C.3d 725, 729, 94 C.R. 623, 484 P.2d 599, supra, §160, the trial judge "apparently assumed" that defendants were entitled to prove receipt of collateral insurance benefits on the issue of plaintiff's motive to malingering. (4 C.3d 732.) Held, this failure to weigh the probative value and prejudicial impact was error. "[T]he court must examine all the relevant facts in the case, e.g., the amount of plaintiff's out-of-pocket medical expenses, his past and future earning capacity, the seriousness of his injuries and their prognosis, the length of his absence from work, etc., and then be satisfied that the evidence of collateral source receipts establishes a strong inference that plaintiff was motivated by the insurance receipts rather than by the actual disabling extent of his injuries. If defendants fail to make an adequate showing, the prejudicial impact of the collateral source evidence will render it inadmissible under Evidence Code section 352. Such determination should be made outside the presence of the jury." (4 C.3d 733.) (See Helfend v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 1, 17, 84 C.R. 173, 465 P.2d 61 [judge properly refused to allow evidence where defense counsel made no attempt to inquire, out of jury's presence, as to facts that would permit assessment of prejudicial effect]; Acosta v. Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. (1970) 2 C.3d 19, 26, 84 C.R. 184, 465 P.2d 72, citing the text [defendant refused to accept opportunity to develop possible relationship between insurance coverage and malingering so trial judge, out of jury's presence, could assess possible prejudice]; 47 A.L.R.3d 234.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

162 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

K. Wrongful Death: Spouse's Remarriage.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 162

[§ 162] Wrongful Death: Spouse's Remarriage.

In an action for wrongful death of a spouse, the surviving spouse may recover damages for the pecuniary loss of benefits, including the value of future personal services or earnings for the life expectancy of the deceased spouse. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1423 et seq.) If the surviving spouse remarries, it is possible that the pecuniary loss will be lessened, and remarriage could therefore be relevant to show mitigation of damages. However, for a number of reasons, evidence of remarriage is excluded, and the pecuniary loss is determined by conditions existing at the time of death. (See 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §1425; Benwell v. Dean (1967) 249 C.A.2d 345, 356, 57 C.R. 394.)

In Cavallaro v. Michelin Tire Corp. (1979) 96 C.A.3d 95, 157 C.R. 602, defendant challenged this rule by invoking Ev.C. 351, which abolishes all limitations on admissibility of relevant evidence except those based on statute or constitutional provision (see supra, §5). Held, the rule was unaffected by the enactment of Ev.C. 351.

(a) Relevancy. Expressions in some opinions treat evidence of remarriage as irrelevant. But this is not the true basis of the exclusionary rule. The evidence would logically tend to prove that the surviving spouse did not suffer the full economic loss claimed for the life expectancy of the deceased spouse. (96 C.A.3d 108.)

(b) Public policy and practical considerations. (1) The principal basis for the rule is the same as that underlying other aspects of the collateral source rule (see supra, §160). A tortfeasor should not be permitted to reduce the amount he or she is required to pay because of benefits received by the injured person from a collateral source (here from the new spouse). (2) Another reason for the rule is that the mitigating effect of remarriage is speculative, and might necessitate trial of innumerable differences and similarities between the deceased spouse and the new spouse. (96 C.A.3d 108.)

(c) Statute inapplicable. Because the long-standing exclusionary rule is not based on irrelevancy, it is unaffected by Ev.C. 351, for the Law Revision Commission Comment on Ev.C. 351 discloses no intention to alter exclusionary rules based on public policy. (96 C.A.3d 109, discussing Kaplan v. Superior Court (1971) 6 C.3d 150, 98 C.R. 649, 491 P.2d 1; see supra, §7.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Surviving spouse's recovery of damages:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1690 et seq.

Exclusion of evidence of remarriage:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1692.

163 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

L. Subsequent Precautions or Repairs by Defendant.

1. Negligence Cases.

a. Rule and Theory of Exclusion.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 163

[§ 163] Rule and Theory of Exclusion.

In a negligence case, the question at issue is whether the defendant exercised due care at the time of the injury to the plaintiff, in the light of existing knowledge or notice of the circumstances. When an accident occurs, new knowledge is gained of possible risks, and the defendant may, to avoid future harm, make repairs or improvements or practice additional safety measures. Those subsequent precautions taken in the light of knowledge later acquired may not be relevant on the issue of negligence at the earlier time; and, even if relevancy is conceded, the effect of allowing the evidence would be to discourage persons from engaging in this highly beneficial activity. Accordingly, either on grounds of irrelevancy or public policy, the evidence is excluded on the issue of negligence. (Helling v. Schindler (1904) 145 C. 303, 312, 78 P. 710; Gorman v. Sacramento (1928) 92 C.A. 656, 665, 268 P. 1083; Pierce v. J.C. Penney Co. (1959) 167 C.A.2d 3, 6, 334 P.2d 117, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §240; Houser v. Floyd (1963) 220 C.A.2d 778, 787, 34 C.R. 96; Westbrooks v. Gordon H. Ball (1967) 248 C.A.2d 209, 216, 56 C.R. 422, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §240; see 9 Hastings L. J. 316; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 421 [Evidence of Subsequent Repairs: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow]; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §283; 29 Am.Jur.2d (1994 ed.), Evidence §463 et seq.; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 52 [Subsequent Repairs or Other Remedial Conduct]; 15 A.L.R.5th 119 [admissibility of repairs, change of conditions, or precautions taken after accident]; 30 Proof of Facts 3d 307 [evidence of subsequent remedial measures in civil cases].)

Ev.C. 1151 codifies this rule: "When, after the occurrence of an event, remedial or precautionary measures are taken, which, if taken previously, would have tended to make the event less likely to occur, evidence of such subsequent measures is inadmissible to prove negligence or culpable conduct in connection with the event." (See Govt.C. 830.5(b) [same rule in action against governmental agency].)

F.R. Evid., Rule 407 states the rule and its limited admissibility exception (infra, §164) as follows: "When, after an injury or harm allegedly caused by an event, measures are taken that, if taken previously, would have made the injury or harm less likely to occur, evidence of the subsequent measures is not admissible to prove negligence, culpable conduct, a defect in a product, a defect in a product's design, or a need for a warning or instruction. This rule does not require the exclusion of evidence of subsequent measures when offered for another purpose, such as proving ownership, control, or feasibility of precautionary measures, if controverted, or impeachment." (See 2 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §127 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Fox v. Kramer (2000) 22 C.4th 531, 548, 93 C.R.2d 497, 994 P.2d 343, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, Supp., §505 [although nondiscoverable under hospital peer review committee privilege, Department of Health Services investigator's report, based on committee records, concerning incident that gave rise to medical malpractice action did not come within rule excluding evidence of subsequent remedial measures]; The New Wigmore: Selected Rules of Limited Admissibility §2.1 et seq.; 158 A.L.R. Fed 609 [admissibility under F.R. Evid., Rule 407]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.219.10 et seq.

164 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

L. Subsequent Precautions or Repairs by Defendant.

1. Negligence Cases.

b. Limited Admissibility Exception.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 164

[§ 164] Limited Admissibility Exception.

Where evidence of subsequent precautions or repairs is independently relevant on some issue other than negligence, the policy objection is overcome by the limited admissibility doctrine (supra, §30). Thus, where the issue is whether a defendant was the owner, possessor, or person in control of property involved in the injury, the defendant's subsequent repairs (which would scarcely be made by a stranger) may be shown to meet any denial of control. (See Alcaraz v. Vece (1997) 14 C.4th 1149, 1168, 60 C.R.2d 448, 929 P.2d 1239, quoting the text; 2 McCormick 5th, §267; F.R. Evid., Rule 407, supra, §163.)

Where evidence of subsequent conditions is admissible as indicating the probable condition at the time of the accident, or in cross-examination of witnesses on their observation of the scene or the basis of their opinions as to safety of the conditions, the fact of subsequent changes may sometimes be brought out. (See Wagner v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1930) 210 C. 526, 531, 292 P. 645, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §239; Hatfield v. Levy Bros. (1941) 18 C.2d 798, 809, 117 P.2d 841; Daggett v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1957) 48 C.2d 655, 661, 313 P.2d 557, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §239; 9 Hastings L. J. 316; 18 Hastings L. J. 677; 64 A.L.R.2d 1199, 1214 [injury or death of pedestrian at railroad crossing; repairs after accident]; 15 A.L.R.5th 119 [repairs, changes, or precautions taken after accident]; 30 Proof of Facts 3d 307.)

In Baldwin Contracting Co. v. Winston Steel Works (1965) 236 C.A.2d 565, 46 C.R. 421, a worker was injured when he fell after contact with high tension wires. He recovered judgment against plaintiff general contractor. Plaintiff then brought this action for indemnity against defendant subcontractors on the theory that the injury was caused by their active negligence. To defeat the right of indemnity by proof that plaintiff was also actively negligent (see 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §96), defendants offered evidence that, after the accident, plaintiff installed a wooden protective barricade in about an hour. Held, the evidence was admissible. It would have been objectionable in the first action on the issue of plaintiff's liability to the worker. But plaintiff's liability to the injured person was already established by the first judgment; and, on the issue in the second case--active negligence--the evidence was relevant and admissible on two theories: (a) Because plaintiff had the only carpenters on the job it had the duty to provide a needed barricade; (b) the prompt erection of such a barricade showed the feasibility of eliminating the cause of the accident. (236 C.A.2d 573.)

In Wilson v. Gilbert (1972) 25 C.A.3d 607, 102 C.R. 31, plaintiff's leg was amputated after an unsuccessful arterial graft by defendant, a general surgeon with no experience in vascular surgery. Prior to the operation, defendant did not perform an arteriogram to check for clotting in the artery. In a pretrial deposition, defendant attributed the failure of the operation to clotting, but at trial, he testified that it could have been caused by arterial spasm. Over objection, defendant was required to testify that after this incident he had taken a course on arteriograms. Also over objection, deposition testimony that he now referred similar cases to vascular surgeons was admitted. Held, the evidence objected to was admissible, either as relating to plaintiff's probable condition when under defendant's treatment, or as tending to impeach defendant's testimony. (25 C.A.3d 615, citing the text.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Alpert v. Villa Romano Homeowners Assn. (2000) 81 C.A.4th 1320, 1341, 96 C.R.2d 364 [in action arising from plaintiff's fall on sidewalk adjacent to condominium complex, minutes of postaccident homeowners association board meeting that included discussion of bids to repair sidewalk were admissible to show that association was aware of sidewalk's condition prior to accident and that association was in control of cause of defect as well as its repair]; 2 McCormick 6th, §267. Proof of plaintiff's active negligence:

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §116.

165 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

L. Subsequent Precautions or Repairs by Defendant.

2. Strict Products Liability Actions.

a. General Rule of Admissibility.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 165

[§ 165] General Rule of Admissibility.

The exclusionary rule of Ev.C. 1151 (supra, §163) does not apply to an action based on strict liability. In Ault v. International Harvester Co. (1974) 13 C.3d 113, 117 C.R. 812, 528 P.2d 1148, plaintiff was injured when the Scout motor vehicle in which he was a passenger plunged 500 feet to the bottom of a canyon. Because both plaintiff and the driver developed retrograde amnesia following the accident, the key evidence was a broken gearbox. Plaintiff contended that the break occurred while the Scout was on the highway, causing it to go out of control; defendant contended that driver negligence or a roadway collapse caused the accident and that the gearbox broke on impact as the vehicle hurtled down into the canyon. Included in plaintiff's evidence was a showing that 3 years after the accident, defendant substituted malleable iron for aluminum 380 in the manufacture of the gearbox. Held, the evidence was properly admitted.

(a) The language and legislative history of Ev.C. 1151 demonstrate that the statute was designed for cases involving negligence or culpable conduct on defendant's part, rather than to circumstances where a manufacturer is alleged to be strictly liable for placing a defective product on the market. Defendant's argument that a "morally" blameworthy manufacturer is guilty of such culpable conduct as to bring it within the statute is not persuasive. "[I]f the Legislature had intended to encompass cases involving strict liability within the ambit of section 1151, it would have used an expression less related to and consistent with affirmative fault than 'culpable conduct'--a term which, under defendant's theory, would embrace a moral rather than a legal duty." (13 C.3d 118.)

(b) The statutory object--to encourage negligent persons to make repairs (see supra, §163)--would not be aided by extending the exclusionary rule to strict liability actions. "The contemporary corporate mass producer of goods, the normal products liability defendant, manufactures tens of thousands of units of goods; it is manifestly unrealistic to suggest that such a producer will forego making improvements in its product, and risk innumerable additional lawsuits and the attendant adverse effect upon its public image, simply because evidence of adoption of such improvement may be admitted in an action founded on strict liability for recovery on an injury that preceded the improvement. In the products liability area, the exclusionary rule of section 1151 does not affect the primary conduct of the mass producer of goods, but serves merely as a shield against potential liability. In short, the purpose of section 1151 is not applicable to a strict liability case and hence its exclusionary rule should not be gratuitously extended to that field." (13 C.3d 120.) (See Aguiar v. Crompton & Knowles Corp. (1986) 183 C.A.3d 1032, 1038, 1039, 228 C.R. 768 [despite Ault holding, trial judge still has discretion to apply Ev.C. 352 and exclude evidence as remote, cumulative, or time consuming]; 74 A.L.R.3d 1001 [evidence of subsequent repairs in products liability case]; 84 A.L.R.3d 1220 [admissibility of manufacturer's recall letter]; 19 Cal. Western L. Rev. 450 [admission of evidence of subsequent repairs in actions based on shipowner's absolute liability for injuries resulting from unseaworthiness]; 39 Hastings L. J. 1171 [Admissibility of Remedial Measures Evidence in Products Liability Actions: Towards a Balancing Test]; 39 Santa Clara L. Rev. 615 [arguing for application of California law where product liability case is filed in federal court under diversity jurisdiction]; 1982 A.S. 170.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.219.30-

166 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

L. Subsequent Precautions or Repairs by Defendant.

2. Strict Products Liability Actions.

b. Failure To Make Changes.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 166

[§ 166] Failure To Make Changes.

In Hilliard v. A. H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 C.A.3d 374, 196 C.R. 117, supra, §123, the court said: "The policy purpose of Evidence Code section 1151 is to exclude evidence of affirmative remedial or precautionary conduct. The policy consideration was not to exclude evidence of the failure to make changes in a defective product or the failure to withdraw a dangerous product from the market. Admitting evidence of no product change or of no withdrawal from the market, on the issue of punitive damages, is consistent with the public policy consideration of Evidence Code section 1151. ... Such conduct is admissible evidence on the punitive damage issue in order to provide meaningful consumer protection against the manufacture and distribution of dangerous, defective products." (148 C.A.3d 401.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

167 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

L. Subsequent Precautions or Repairs by Defendant.

2. Strict Products Liability Actions.

c. Subsequent Warning.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 167

[§ 167] Subsequent Warning.

In Schelbauer v. Butler Mfg. Co. (1984) 35 C.3d 442, 198 C.R. 155, 673 P.2d 743, the issue was whether a postaccident warning alerting consumers to take safety precautions in using a product is admissible in a strict liability action against a manufacturer. The court, following the approach of Ault v. International Harvester Co. (1974) 13 C.3d 113, 117 C.R. 812, 528 P.2d 1148, supra, §165, and citing a federal court of appeals decision and several state court decisions, held that the evidence was admissible: "The rationale of Ault applies as clearly to postaccident warnings as it does to subsequent product repairs or improvements. Accordingly, the exclusionary rule of section 1151 was never intended to preclude admission of postaccident warning evidence in a strict liability action." (35 C.3d 452.) (See West v. Johnson & Johnson Products (1985) 174 C.A.3d 831, 855, 220 C.R. 437 [action by tampon user who contracted toxic shock syndrome; warning inserted in tampon box by defendant manufacturer at request of Food and Drug Administration after plaintiff recovered from illness was admissible]; 38 A.L.R.4th 583.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

168 of 168 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER IV - Circumstantial Evidence

IV. EVIDENCE INVOLVING UNDUE PREJUDICE

L. Subsequent Precautions or Repairs by Defendant.

2. Strict Products Liability Actions.

d. Remedial Measure by Nonparty.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Circum Evid § 168

[§ 168] Remedial Measure by Nonparty.

In Magnante v. Pettibone-Wood Mfg. Co. (1986) 183 C.A.3d 764, 228 C.R. 420, plaintiff, employed by K, suffered injury when a truss boom attachment disconnected from a high lift truck and struck him. Plaintiff sued defendant manufacturer of the truck and attachment, and offered evidence that K, after the accident, had made modifications in the truss boom. Defendant argued that to allow this kind of evidence would expose every manufacturer to a suit alleging design defect "when someone else rigs up a post accident repair or modification." Held, the evidence was admissible. Even in jurisdictions excluding subsequent repairs or modifications by the defendant in strict liability actions, changes by third parties are admitted. The exclusionary rule is based on the policy that owners would be discouraged in making repairs (see supra, §163); this consideration is absent where "imposition of liability is not sought against the person taking the remedial action." (183 C.A.3d 768.) (See 64 A.L.R.5th 119 [subsequent remedial action by third party].)

Magnante was distinguished in Santilli v. Otis Elevator Co. (1989) 215 C.A.3d 210, 263 C.R. 496. Plaintiff, injured at work while using a freight elevator, sued defendant elevator manufacturer on strict liability grounds. Plaintiff did not sue his employer, as his exclusive remedy was a compensation claim. Following the accident, plaintiff's employer posted warnings and took other measures in an attempt to prevent future accidents. The trial judge excluded evidence of those remedial measures. Held, exclusion was proper.

(a) If defendant manufacturer had taken the remedial measures, evidence of those measures would have been admissible. Here, however, the employer took the measures, and its lien against a judgment in favor of plaintiff in plaintiff's suit against defendant would be reduced by the employer's percentage share of its responsibility for plaintiff's injuries. Thus, the jury was required to determine the percentage of the employer's responsibility for the injury, notwithstanding that the employer was not a party. Accordingly, admitting evidence of the employer's remedial measures would have deterred the employer from taking those measures. "The rationale behind the statute extends equally to the situation in which a nonparty will be adversely affected by a jury's determination of its negligence. We therefore conclude that where, as here, a jury is asked to determine if a nonparty was negligent, and there is no strict liability theory asserted against that nonparty, and where the jury's determination will have a direct effect on the amount of damages which that entity will be required to pay, section 1151 precludes the use at trial of evidence of remedial measures taken by the nonparty." (215 C.A.3d 214.)

(b) In Magnante, evidence of remedial measures taken by the employer was introduced for the purpose of showing that the product at issue was defective, not to demonstrate that the employer had any responsibility for the accident. Here the evidence related to whether the elevator's potential for injury could have been reduced by any action by the employer. Further, Magnante did not state that the employee had obtained workers' compensation benefits from the employer, or that the jury was required to determine the employer's negligence. (215 C.A.3d 214.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

1 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

A. Traditional Rule of Exclusion.

1. Nature of Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 1

[§ 1] Nature of Rule.

An opinion is an inference from facts observed. One of the fundamental theories of the law of evidence, expressed in the opinion rule, is that witnesses must ordinarily testify to facts, leaving inferences or conclusions to the jury or court. (See Northern Calif. Power Co. v. Waller (1917) 174 C. 377, 384, 163 P. 214; Waizman v. Black (1929) 101 C.A. 610, 613, 281 P. 1087; Moore v. Norwood (1940) 41 C.A.2d 359, 366, 106 P.2d 939; Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Romero (1954) 128 C.A.2d 331, 336, 275 P.2d 83; People v. Williams (1992) 3 C.A.4th 1326, 1332, 5 C.R.2d 130, citing the text; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 430; 1 McCormick 5th, §11; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1917; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §5; 1 Jefferson, California Evidence Benchbook 3d, Chap. 29; 3 Wharton, Crim. Evidence (14th ed.), §543 et seq.; F.R. Evid., Rule 701 et seq.; 3 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §342 et seq.; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 233 [study of federal and California rules]; infra, §§4, 30, 89, 90.)

The opinion rule, which often rejects testimony of a competent witness because of the form in which the testimony is given, is distinct from the knowledge rule, which lays down a requirement of competency of witnesses. A witness is not competent to testify on a matter--either as to facts or opinions--if the witness lacks personal knowledge of it. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §§46, 47.)

The opinion rule is applied not only to testimony of a witness on the stand (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §173), but to hearsay statements of a person not on the stand (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §8). But the rule has been subjected to much criticism (see infra, §2), and has undergone so much relaxation in liberal jurisdictions that opinions are now received in a great many situations in which they are necessary or useful. (See infra, §3 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 1 McCormick 6th, §11.

2 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

A. Traditional Rule of Exclusion.

2. Criticism and Reforms.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 2

[§ 2] Criticism and Reforms.

Some writers and courts have denounced the opinion rule as historically inaccurate and practically unwise. They make the obvious point that the distinction between "fact" and "opinion" is merely one of degree, difficult for counsel, court, and witnesses to draw during the course of an examination. The result, according to the critics, is often to produce interruptions and haggling over the form of questions and answers which confuse the witness, distort the story, and unduly delay the trial. (See Model C., Int. Note, p. 198, and Comment on Rule 401; 1 McCormick 5th, §11; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§1919, 1929; Healy v. Visalia & Tulare R. Co. (1894) 101 C. 585, 589, 36 P. 125, infra, §3; People v. Otis (1959) 174 C.A.2d 119, 127, 344 P.2d 342, quoting the text; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 430.)

The Model C., Rule 401 proposed a radical change in the opinion rule by allowing a witness to give inferences unless the judge finds that the testimony does not meet accepted standards for admissibility of opinions. Under this view, admission of opinions would be the normal procedure and exclusion would usually depend on some affirmative showing that they should not be received.

The original Uniform Rules of Evidence sought the same objective of loosening the opinion rule, but did not make the complete shift of burdens proposed by the Model Code. They followed the traditional approach of requiring testimony as to facts unless the judge found that opinions were proper. (See 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 356, 358; 1953 A.S. 793.) Rule 701 of the present Uniform Rules is in accord. (See 13B (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 281.)

Progressive courts supported this discretionary approach, and the Evidence Code established it as California law. (See infra, §4.) The Federal Rules of Evidence also follow this approach. (See F.R. Evid., Rule 701 et seq.; 3 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §342 et seq.; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 233; infra, §§4, 26, 30, 90.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 135 [Unif. Rules, Rule 701]; 1 McCormick 6th, §11.

3 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

B. Modern Rule of Admissibility.

1. Where Opinions Are Necessary.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 3

[§ 3] Where Opinions Are Necessary.

If the facts cannot be accurately or adequately stated, and what the witness knows can be testified to only in the form of an opinion, testimony in that form may be admitted. (See Healy v. Visalia & Tulare R. Co. (1894) 101 C. 585, 589, 36 P. 125; Holland v. Zollner (1894) 102 C. 633, 638, 36 P. 930 ["The paucity of language, and the incompetency of witnesses to describe graphically the photograph left upon the mind by observed facts, renders every effort to convey to a jury an adequate conception of the ultimate fact futile except by announcing the conclusion in their own minds"]; Manney v. Housing Authority of Richmond (1947) 79 C.A.2d 453, 459, 180 P.2d 69 ["The opinions of nonexpert witnesses are admitted as a matter of practical necessity when the matters which they have observed are too complex or too subtle to enable them accurately to convey them to court or jury in any other manner"]; People v. Deacon (1953) 117 C.A.2d 206, 210, 255 P.2d 98; Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 C.A.3d 173, 181, 85 C.R. 659, infra, §22, citing the text; People v. Sergill (1982) 138 C.A.3d 34, 40, 187 C.R. 497 ["A lay witness may testify in the form of an opinion only when he cannot adequately describe his observations without using opinion wording"]; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 430; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §26 et seq.) (On witness testifying to best recollection or thought, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §174.)

In Healy v. Visalia & Tulare R. Co., supra, an action for injuries resulting from a railroad car leaving its track, the witness, a passenger, was asked: "Under the circumstances, was it possible for an ordinary person, sitting in the position Mrs. Healy was sitting in, to stand the force of the jars and still retain her seat upon the car?" Held, this was proper. The court said: "The border line between fact and opinion is often very indistinct, and the statement of a fact is frequently only an opinion of the witness. Impressions or sensations caused by external objects are not susceptible of exact reproduction or description in words, nor do they affect every individual alike, and the judgment or opinion of the witnesses by whom they have been experienced is the only mode by which they can be presented to a jury. ... The position of the plaintiff on the car, as well as his own position thereon, the jumping of the car from the track, the effect produced upon himself, the sensation which he experienced thereby, were all facts which it was competent to show by his testimony. ... The strength or force of this concussion was also a fact which it was proper to bring before the jury, and as it was not capable of exact measurement by any recognized standard, it was competent for the witness to state its strength or force according to the opinion or judgment which he formed at the time that he felt it. His judgment or opinion of its effect upon an ordinary person would be the most efficient mode of enabling the jury to fully appreciate it. ... Such testimony is competent upon the same principle that permits evidence showing the strength or force of a blow, the distance at which a sound can be heard, or the direction from which it comes, the speed of a horse, the degree of cold or heat, or of light or darkness. In any such instance a witness who had a personal experience or knowledge of the sensation is competent to testify, although his answer is only his opinion of the matter." (101 C. 590.)

In Holland v. Zollner, supra, the court observed that the exception is said to apply to "questions of identity, handwriting, quantity, value, weight, measure, time, distance, velocity, form, size, age, strength, heat, cold, sickness, and health; questions also concerning various mental and moral aspects of humanity, such as disposition and temper, anger, fear, excitement, intoxication, veracity, general character, etc." And the opinion adds this graphic illustration: "A witness may describe a person as having gray hair, a wrinkled face, an uncertain gait, and by such other facts as indicate advanced years, and a jury, from such statement, could determine nothing as to his exact age, beyond the conclusion that he was an old man; yet the witness who has detailed all the facts of which he was capable can give an opinion as to the age of the man he has described, which is almost exactly the truth." And further: "We identify men. We cannot tell how, because expressions of the face, gestures, motions, and even form, are beyond the power of accurate description. Love, hatred, sorrow, joy, and various other mental and moral operations, find outward expression, as clear to the observer as any fact coming to his observation, but he can only give expression to the fact by giving what to him is the ultimate fact, and which, for want of a more accurate expression, we call opinion." (102 C. 638.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CALCRIM, No. 333 [Opinion Testimony of Lay Witness]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.448 et seq.; Evidence k.470 et seq.

4 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

B. Modern Rule of Admissibility.

2. Where Opinions Are Helpful.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 4

[§ 4] Where Opinions Are Helpful.

The modern tendency of the courts is to relax the "necessity" test and allow opinions where they are "helpful" in understanding testimony. This was the approach of the Uniform Rules of Evidence, and it was substantially restated in Ev.C. 800:

"If a witness is not testifying as an expert, his testimony in the form of an opinion is limited to such an opinion as is permitted by law, including but not limited to an opinion that is:"

"(a) Rationally based on the perception of the witness; and"

"(b) Helpful to a clear understanding of his testimony."

The reference to "such an opinion as is permitted by law" makes applicable rules of admissibility established by case law, such as a person's opinion on the value of his or her own property or services, regardless of whether the conditions of the statute are met. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 800.) (See Law Rev. Com. Comment at beginning of Evidence Code, Division 7, pointing out that "opinion" is used to include "all opinions, inferences, conclusions, and other subjective statements made by a witness"; People v. Moreno (1973) 32 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 7, 108 C.R. 338, citing the text [eyewitness may state observations as to whether defendant provoked affray with police officer]; Chatman v. Alameda County Flood Control & Water Conservation Control Dist. (1986) 183 C.A.3d 424, 429, 228 C.R. 257 [statute "merely requires that witnesses express themselves at the lowest possible level of abstraction" when details observed are "too complex or too subtle for concrete description, the witness may state his general impression"]; 9 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 233 [liberal approach in California and federal courts]; see also 13B (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 281 [Unif. Rule 701].)

In Osborn v. Mission Ready Mix (1990) 224 C.A.3d 104, 273 C.R. 457, an action for injuries sustained in a fall at a construction site on defendant's property, plaintiff was required on cross-examination to answer the question whether the condition of the site was "open and obvious." Held, this was proper; given the complex facts involved, plaintiff's opinion was helpful. "Here, whether the nature of the potential danger was obvious or not was a matter which could best be described to the jury by way of opinion testimony. A recitation of the size of the area, the depth and quality of the dirt, the size of the concrete pieces and whether and in what proportion they were totally exposed, completely hidden, or partially embedded in the dirt could be made, but, in our opinion, such facts alone would not make the obviousness of the risk involved so palpable to the jury that its means of forming an opinion would be practically equal to those of the witness." (224 C.A.3d 113.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 701 is similar: "If the witness is not testifying as an expert, the witness' testimony in the form of opinions or inferences is limited to those opinions or inferences which are (a) rationally based on the perception of the witness and (b) helpful to a clear understanding of the witness' testimony or the determination of a fact in issue." (See 3 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §342 et seq.; 63B Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), Products Liability §1848.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 135 [Unif. Rules, Rule 701].

F.R. Evid., Rule 701 was amended in 2000 to specify that the lay witness' opinion may not be based on scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge. The amended rule reads: "If the witness is not testifying as an expert, the witness' testimony in the form of opinions or inferences is limited to those opinions or inferences which are (a) rationally based on the perception of the witness, (b) helpful to a clear understanding of the witness' testimony or the determination of a fact in issue, and (c) not based on scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge within the scope of Rule 702." (On F.R. Evid., Rule 702, see text, §26.)

5 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

1. Identity of Person.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 5

[§ 5] In General.

Identity of a person is a typical area in which opinions are necessary and acceptable. (See In re Corey (1964) 230 C.A.2d 813, 826, 41 C.R. 379; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1977; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §278; 86 A.L.R.2d 727 [identification of homicide victim].)

The following are common methods:

(1) Testimony of witness who saw the person. (See In re Corey, supra, 230 C.A.2d 826; on dangers involved in eyewitness identification and necessity of cautionary instruction, see 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 552; 23 A.L.R.4th 1089; 35 Proof of Facts 3d 1; infra, §70.)

(2) Physical characteristics or marks. A witness may identify a person by such characteristics as size, general build, clothing, tattoo marks, hair color, manner of moving, etc. (See People v. Coley (1943) 61 C.A.2d 810, 813, 143 P.2d 755; People v. Lindsay (1964) 227 C.A.2d 482, 494, 38 C.R. 755, citing the text [not necessary that witness see the person's face]; In re Corey, supra, 230 C.A.2d 826, citing the text [taxi driver identified juvenile robber by hair color, "silhouette," receding hairline, snuffing of nose and wriggling of upper lip].)

(3) Voice. "It is universally recognized that the voice, as well as the physical appearance of a person, is a means by which identification is made possible, there being no more similarity in the voices of different people than there is in their physical appearance. A definite impression of the one is made upon the mind through the medium of the sense of hearing, while the impression of the other is made on the mind through the sense of sight." (Connell v. Clark (1948) 88 C.A.2d 941, 947, 200 P.2d 26.) (See also People v. Lorraine (1938) 28 C.A.2d 50, 54, 81 P.2d 1004 [authentication of telephone conversation by recognition of voice]; People v. Lindsay, supra, 227 C.A.2d 494, citing the text; People v. Osuna (1969) 70 C.2d 759, 764, 76 C.R. 462, 452 P.2d 678; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §660; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §2155; 70 A.L.R.2d 995; 23 Proof of Facts 3d 315, 408 [audio recordings].)

(4) Sound of footsteps. Recognition of this sound may establish identity. (See People v. Glab (1936) 15 C.A.2d 120, 123, 59 P.2d 195.)

An identification need not be made in positive terms; a witness may testify that an accused "resembles" or "looks like" the person who committed the crime. (People v. Waller (1939) 14 C.2d 693, 700, 96 P.2d 344; People v. Deal (1940) 42 C.A.2d 33, 36, 108 P.2d 103; People v. Harris (1948) 87 C.A.2d 818, 824, 198 P.2d 60 ["It is not essential that the witness be free from doubt as to one's identity. He may testify that in his belief, opinion or judgment the accused is the person who perpetrated the crime. The want of positiveness goes only to the weight of the testimony"]; In re Corey, supra, 230 C.A.2d 826.) Thus, in People v. Harris, supra, the witness said: "I didn't exactly recognize him. I say he resembled him." Held, the evidence was sufficient despite the fact that the witness, due to his "ignorance of semantics," used "recognize" to indicate certainty, and "resemble" to mean less than certainty. (See also People v. Abner (1962) 209 C.A.2d 484, 491, 25 C.R. 882, citing the text ["I think that he's over there. ... The one in the green jacket. ... I had a very quick glance at him, but he was very similar"]; People v. Gonzales (1968) 68 C.2d 467, 472, 67 C.R. 551, 439 P.2d 655, citing the text [clothing and specified characteristics appeared to be those of defendant, although witness did not see facial characteristics].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §4:37 et seq. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.448(6), 453; Evidence k.471(12), 475

6 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

1. Identity of Person.
- b. Photographs Taken at Crime Scene.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 6

[§ 6] Photographs Taken at Crime Scene.

One who identifies a suspect need not have been a witness to the crime. A person who is otherwise familiar with the suspect's appearance may base an identification on a photograph or film made during the commission of the crime.

Thus, in People v. Perry (1976) 60 C.A.3d 608, 131 C.R. 629, the robbery of a cashier's office was photographed by a concealed surveillance camera. The cashier could not identify defendant from the film or a lineup, but defendant's parole officer and a police officer gave their opinions that the person in the picture was defendant on the basis of defendant's features, particularly an abnormal right eye. Defendant contended that a lay person's opinion must be based on perception (Ev.C. 800(a)), and that the witnesses did not perceive the crime. Held, the evidence was admissible. The witnesses based their identification opinions upon their prior contacts with defendant, their awareness of his physical characteristics on the day of the robbery, and their perception of the film taken of the events. Thus, the opinions were sufficiently based on personal knowledge to permit their introduction. (60 C.A.3d 613.)

The court also rejected the contention that the evidence improperly invaded the jury's province, pointing to the analogy of nonexpert opinions on the identity of handwriting (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §11). "The same rationale which permits such evidence based upon personal knowledge applies to evidence of the identity of a pictorially depicted subject when such evidence is based upon personal knowledge of the person's physical characteristics at the time of the film depiction." (60 C.A.3d 614.)

People v. Perry, supra, was analyzed and followed in People v. Mixon (1982) 129 C.A.3d 118, 180 C.R. 772, in which a surveillance camera photographed two men who robbed a service station, and two police officers identified defendant from the photographs. Held, their testimony was admissible.

(a) The prosecution established an adequate personal knowledge foundation in a hearing outside the jury's presence: The officers had ample prior contact with defendant and had the requisite personal knowledge of his appearance. (129 C.A.3d 129.)

(b) The requirement that the testimony aid the trier of fact in determining the identity issue was also satisfied: The photograph was not a clear depiction of the subject, and defendant had changed his appearance before trial; the officers had seen him in a variety of contexts both indoors and outdoors, and could aid the jury in identifying the person in the unclear surveillance picture. (129 C.A.3d 131.)

(c) The contention that the prejudice in use of the testimony outweighed its probative value (Ev.C. 352, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §17) was based on the concern expressed in federal cases where lay identification testimony comes from law enforcement officials: that the defendant is presented as a person subject to a certain degree of police scrutiny. (129 C.A.3d 129.) This danger of prejudice is dissipated, however, where the foundational facts supporting the officers' knowledge are established--as here--outside the jury's presence. (129 C.A.3d 132, 133.) On this point, the court added the following clarifying comment:

"This opinion should not be interpreted to stand for the proposition that if nonlaw enforcement testimony is available, law enforcement identification testimony must be excluded. The trial courts, in weighing possible prejudice, must determine if the nonlaw enforcement testimony available is 'adequate.' The prosecution should not be forced to rely on testimony that is weak simply because it comes from an individual not involved in law enforcement. The trial judge maintains the discretion to determine if the prejudicial effect of the officer's testimony substantially outweighs its probative value ... , and such a discretionary ruling will be overturned only if there is a clear abuse of discretion." (129 C.A.3d 134.)

The Perry and Mixon cases, supra, were followed in People v. Ingle (1986) 178 C.A.3d 505, 223 C.R. 723, where the quality of a videotape recording of a robbery was insufficient to establish conclusively defendant's identity as the perpetrator. The victim was permitted to give opinion testimony, based on her personal observations and perceptions during the robbery, that the person portrayed on the videotape was defendant. Held, the evidence was properly admitted. The victim had an adequate opportunity to view defendant's physical features during the robbery. Thus, her testimony satisfied the requirements of Perry and Mixon that (a) the witness testify from personal knowledge of the defendant's appearance at or before the time the videotape was taken; and (b) the testimony aid the trier of fact in determining the identity issue. (178 C.A.3d 514.) (On use of photographs as basis of eyewitness identification, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §408.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 74 A.L.R.5th 643 [interpretation of surveillance photograph or videotape].

7 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

2. Sanity.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 7

[§ 7] Sanity.

Certain qualified lay witnesses may state opinions as to a person's sanity. (Ev.C. 870, restating former C.C.P. 1870(10).) The statute sets forth the two established categories, and adds a catch-all:

(1) Subscribing Witness. The subscribing witness to a writing signed by a person may give an opinion as to "the sanity of such person at the time the writing was signed." (Ev.C. 870(b); see Estate of Holloway (1925) 195 C. 711, 733, 235 P. 1012; Estate of McDonough (1926) 200 C. 57, 62, 251 P. 916; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1936; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §164 et seq.; 17 A.L.R.3d 503 [necessity of foundation for attesting witness' opinion as to testator's mental condition].)

(2) Intimate Acquaintance. An opinion on sanity may be given by a witness who is "an intimate acquaintance of the person whose sanity is in question." (Ev.C. 870(a); see 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§1933, 1938.) The purpose of the special requirement of intimacy is to limit the witnesses to those qualified by sufficient opportunity to observe and become familiar with the person's temperament and habits of mind, and casual acquaintances are not qualified. Hence, where a person testifying had merely called upon the alleged incompetent five times, for business reasons, he was not a proper witness. (Atkins Corp. v. Tourny (1936) 6 C.2d 206, 209, 57 P.2d 480.) On the other hand, two old friends of a testatrix, who had discussed her business affairs with her, were held to be qualified. (Estate of Rich (1947) 79 C.A.2d 22, 27, 179 P.2d 373.) (See also People v. Vaughn (1910) 14 C.A. 201, 206, 111 P. 620; Estate of Clegg (1978) 87 C.A.3d 594, 601, 151 C.R. 158 [letter written by longtime acquaintance of decedent indicating that after suffering blow to head, decedent "hardly knew what was going on"]; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 430; 18 Stanf. L. Rev. 1137; 40 A.L.R.2d 15 [requisite foundational showing].)

(3) Any Person Qualified. Ev.C. 870(c) adds a third type of witness on sanity: a person qualified under Ev.C. 800 or 801 to testify in the form of an opinion. This merely incorporates by reference the general rules permitting a lay witness to give opinions when they are helpful (supra, §4) and an expert to testify on a matter within the expert's special knowledge, etc. (infra, §28 et seq.).

Two distinctions should be noted:

First, the opinion must be limited to the question of sanity. Thus, it was held objectionable (too strictly, it would seem) to ask a trained nurse who attended a grantor during illness whether the latter was "capable of reasoning upon a business proposition." (In re Hill (1936) 13 C.A.2d 326, 329, 57 P.2d 155; see also Estate of Martin (1915) 170 C. 657, 667, 151 P. 138.) And most courts reject opinions of lay witnesses in will contests on the issue of undue influence. (See

7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1937; 79 Am.Jur.2d, Wills §449; 29 Cal. L. Rev. 430.)

Second, where the evidence is offered not as an opinion on mental sanity but merely to show rational or irrational appearance, the witness need not have the qualifications prescribed by Ev.C. 870. (See Pfingst v. Goetting (1950) 96 C.A.2d 293, 304, 215 P.2d 93, infra, §11.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.448(10), 456; Evidence k.471(14), 478 et seq.

8 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

3. Party's Own Intent, Motive, or Knowledge.

a. Civil Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 8

[§ 8] Civil Cases.

Intent, motive, or knowledge, when relevant, may be proved by circumstantial evidence (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §117 et seq.), by declarations (1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §204 et seq.), or by testimony of a person as to his or her own intent or motive. "The state of mind of a person, like the state or condition of the body, is a fact to be proved like any other fact when it is relevant to an issue in the case, and the person himself may testify directly thereto." (Cope v. Davison (1947) 30 C.2d 193, 200, 180 P.2d 873.) (See also Johnston v. Benton (1925) 73 C.A. 565, 569, 239 P. 60 ["Whenever the question of the intention of a person is at issue, it may be proved by the direct testimony of such person"]; Kusmark v. Montgomery Ward & Co. (1967) 249 C.A.2d 585, 591, 57 C.R. 678; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §581; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §362.) Testimony of this sort by a party may, however, be less persuasive than strong circumstantial evidence to the contrary. (See Dowden v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1963) 223 C.A.2d 124, 134, 35 C.R. 541, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §124.)

The following are illustrations:

(1) A grantor may testify to the grantor's own intention or lack of intention to pass legal title in handing over a deed. (See Howell v. Mays (1930) 107 C.A. 751, 753, 290 P. 898; Coffey v. Cooper (1960) 185 C.A.2d 464, 468, 8 C.R. 358; 4 Summary (9th), Real Property, §173.)

(2) On the issue of mistake in signing an instrument, the plaintiff may testify as to his or her belief and intent. Thus, in Walton v. Bank of California (1963) 218 C.A.2d 527, 32 C.R. 856, plaintiff trustor sought to rescind her inter vivos trust for unilateral mistake as to its tax consequences. She was asked: "Would you have signed the trust agreement ... if you had known that you would have to pay gift tax because you signed it?" Held, the question was proper, for its purpose was to establish her belief that she was not making a gift involving payment of taxes. (218 C.A.2d 544.)

(3) In a tort action for fraud and deceit, reliance on the defendant's false representation or concealment is an issue to which the plaintiff may testify. (Peskin v. Squires (1957) 156 C.A.2d 240, 249, 319 P.2d 405; see 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §711.)

(4) In an action for malicious prosecution or defamation, the defendant may testify to having acted without malice. (Fleet v. Tichenor (1909) 156 C. 343, 348, 104 P. 458 [slander]; Schubkegel v. Gordino (1943) 56 C.A.2d 667, 674, 133 P.2d 475 [malicious prosecution]; see 5 Summary (9th), Torts, §§429, 519.)

(5) Where a person's residence or domicile is in issue, the purpose or intent with which the person left one place of abode for another may be relevant and is a proper subject of the person's opinion testimony. (Johnston v. Benton, supra, 73 C.A. 569 [residence; testimony on motion for change of venue]; see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §736 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Grantor's intention to pass title:

Cross-Reference: 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §294.

(3) Reliance on false representation or concealment:

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §808 et seq.

(4) Malicious prosecution or defamation:

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §§511, 592. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.471(9), 472(7)

9 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

- C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.
- 3. Party's Own Intent, Motive, or Knowledge.
  - b. Criminal Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 9

[§ 9] Criminal Cases.

In a prosecution for a crime requiring specific intent, the defendant may testify as to lack of such intent. (People v. Morley (1928) 89 C.A. 451, 457, 265 P. 276; People v. Becker (1934) 137 C.A. 349, 352, 30 P.2d 562; see 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §581; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Elements, §6.)

Thus, in People v. Wepplo (1947) 78 C.A.2d Supp. 959, 178 P.2d 853, a prosecution for "willfully and lewdly" selling an obscene book, it was held error to exclude the question, directed at defendant by his own counsel, whether defendant had any lewd intent in making the sale. The court also suggested, without expressly holding, that it might be proper on that same issue to admit evidence that defendant had read and relied upon book reviews which commended the book without disclosing its obscene nature. (78 C.A.2d Supp. 966.)

In People v. Gaines (1951) 106 C.A.2d 176, 180, 234 P.2d 702, defendant, charged with issuing a check without funds, was prevented from testifying that he expected a third person to put money in the bank, hence, did not intend to defraud. Held, this was reversible error. (106 C.A.2d 180.)

In People v. Taber (1936) 13 C.A.2d 27, 55 P.2d 1189, a trial for arson, the question was whether there was sufficient corroboration of the testimony of R, an alleged accomplice. The prosecution stressed the fact that, after the crime was committed, defendant gave R money and hired an attorney for him. Held, it was reversible error to refuse to permit defendant to testify that he did these things under a threat of blackmail by R, for the testimony went directly to the motive of defendant in doing certain things which were relied upon as corroborating the evidence of the accomplice. (13 C.A.2d 33.)

A similar rule applies where a defendant is charged with a crime of violence, such as assault, and claims self-defense. After prima facie proof of facts showing reasonable cause to apprehend death or great bodily harm, the defendant may testify as to his or her own mental reaction--fear. (People v. Sonier (1952) 113 C.A.2d 277, 278, 248 P.2d 155.) In the foregoing decision, the court, quoting a Pennsylvania case, said: "He alone, of all the witnesses called by him, could testify as to whether he really thought he was in peril of his life or of great bodily harm, and no testimony could have been more competent than his own as to his belief that he was in such danger." (113 C.A.2d 278.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.448(3), 449.2

10 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

4. Measure of Speed, Distance, Size, etc.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 10

[§ 10] Measure of Speed, Distance, Size, etc.

(1) Speed. The speed of an automobile, streetcar, or train may be stated as "unusual" or "very fast" or "much faster" than another, or "faster than the ordinary rate." (Dawson v. San Diego Elec. Ry. Co. (1927) 82 C.A. 141, 151, 255 P. 215; see also Johnsen v. Oakland, San Leandro & Haywards Elec. Ry. (1900) 127 C. 608, 611, 60 P. 170 [streetcar was going very fast]; Schwenger v. Gaither (1948) 87 C.A.2d 913, 914, 198 P.2d 108 [automobile going 40 miles per hour]; Rash v. San Francisco (1962) 200 C.A.2d 199, 204, 19 C.R. 266; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §117; 83 A.L.R.2d 1329 [admissibility of train speed prior to grade-crossing accident, and competency of witness to testify thereto]; 92 A.L.R.2d 1391 [motor vehicle]; 29 A.L.R.3d 248 [expert and nonexpert opinions]; 11 Proof of Facts 1.)

An opinion of this type may even be given by a witness who did not see but merely heard a streetcar pass. (Bennett v. Central Calif. Traction Co. (1931) 115 C.A. 1, 7, 1 P.2d 47.) (See 33 A.L.R.3d 1405 [speed of motor vehicle based only on sounds heard by nonexpert].)

The lack of recent case law concerning lay opinion as to speed reflects the fact that today, where speed is an issue, the parties are likely to employ experts. (See infra, §§59, 60.)

(2) Distance. Distance may be stated as an opinion; e.g., the testimony of an 11-year-old girl that a car was "pretty close." "It is common knowledge that distance is frequently described by a witness by reference to objects in the court room." (Dean v. Feld (1946) 77 C.A.2d 327, 330, 175 P.2d 278.) (See also Raymond v. Glover (1898) 122 C. 471, 476, 55 P. 398 [witness properly allowed to state that he was within hearing distance of another].)

(3) Other Subjects. An opinion as to size is also proper. (See People v. Helm (1907) 152 C. 532, 546, 93 P. 99 [bicycle tracks about an inch wide].) And the same is true of weight, time, direction, position, etc. (See Healy v. Visalia & Tulare R. Co. (1894) 101 C. 585, 589, 36 P. 125, infra, §34; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1977.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.448(9), 461; Evidence k.471(21) et seq., 474(8), 474(9)

11 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

5. Appearance or Demeanor.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 11

[§ 11] Appearance or Demeanor.

(1) Rational or Irrational Appearance. In Holland v. Zollner (1894) 102 C. 633, 36 P. 930, on the issue of competency of an elderly grantor, a witness testified to circumstances of irrational behavior (disgusting eating habits, irritability, wild expressions, etc.), and then was asked: "What was the appearance of this man at that time with reference to his being rational or irrational?" Held, objection was properly overruled, and the answer "irrational" was competent evidence. The witness was not "an intimate acquaintance" and therefore could not testify to mental sanity (see supra, §7). But the question was nevertheless proper: "To say that a man acts rational or irrational is but to describe an outward manifestation drawn from observed facts. It is the last analysis, the ultimate fact, deduced from evidentiary facts coming under observation, but so transitory and evanescent as to be like drunkenness, easy of detection, and difficult of explanation. ... The conclusion is reached not as a sequence of knowledge in reference to occult mental conditions, but as a result of observed facts patent to all, concerning which the non-expert is as competent to judge as the trained specialist." (102 C. 639.)

The California cases on this point were extensively reviewed in Pfingst v. Goetting (1950) 96 C.A.2d 293, 215 P.2d 93, where evidence was offered to show that an elderly woman grantor was competent to make a gift. Such questions as "In your judgment, at that time could she understand what was explained to her?" were held proper. The court observed that direct questions on sanity or competency ("In your judgment ... was she competent to conduct her property and business affairs?") were too broad where the witness was not an intimate acquaintance (see supra, §7), but that questions as to the conversation, actions, alertness, and conduct during the transaction were appropriate. "Respondents were certainly entitled to show, if they could, that decedent when she made these transfers appeared to be rational and to act on her own volition, as a free agent and without pressure, to know what she was doing, and to comprehend the legal effects and consequences of her acts." (96 C.A.2d 304.)

(2) Demeanor. In People v. Deacon (1953) 117 C.A.2d 206, 255 P.2d 98, a prosecution for murder on the theory of an angry killing, the witness testified to the "spirit or tenor of voices" that he heard in a room directly above his own. He stated that the voices denoted "anger." Held, this was proper. "Anger, like speed or sobriety, must be described as a conclusion. ... How 'anger' could be evidenced other than by characterizing it as such is difficult to see. Anger is the fact, not the voices that evidence the anger. Every attempt at analyzing the voices heard would reproduce the same objection here made, if it were a good one." (117 C.A.2d 210.) (See People v. Medina (1990) 51 C.3d 870, 887, 274 C.R. 849, 799 P.2d 1282 [at competency hearing, deputy sheriff could testify that defendant appeared "very responsive" and "very descriptive" during discussion of need for protective custody while incarcerated]; People v. Harris (1969) 270 C.A.2d 863, 872, 76 C.R. 130, citing the text [witness testified that it looked as if defendant was trying to break up a fight; error to sustain objection]; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1974.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Demeanor. See People v. Chatman (2006) 38 C.4th 344, 397, 42 C.R.3d 621, 133 P.3d 534 [in penalty phase of capital murder trial, trial judge properly overruled objection to testimony by prosecution witness that, in prior incident, defendant seemed to be enjoying kicking school custodian; although lay witness may not give opinion about another's state of mind, witness may testify about objective behavior and describe behavior as being consistent with state of mind]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.448(11), 455; Evidence k.471(13), 477 et seq.

12 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

6. Intoxication.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 12

[§ 12] Intoxication.

A witness who has observed the actions of a person may testify that the person was or was not intoxicated. (People v. Smith (1949) 94 C.A.2d Supp. 975, 977, 210 P.2d 98; see 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1974; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §209; 9 Proof of Facts 3d 459, 485; for discussion whether lay opinion as to drug-induced intoxication is admissible, see People v. Williams (1988) 44 C.3d 883, 914, 245 C.R.2d 336, 751 P.2d 395; 21 A.L.R.4th 905.)

Thus, in People v. Ravey (1954) 122 C.A.2d 699, 265 P.2d 154, a police officer had arrested defendant for driving while drunk. He testified that, during his years as an officer, he had observed many persons under the influence of intoxicating liquor, observed defendant on the day in question, formed an opinion, and that "he was drunk." Held, the evidence was admissible, not because the officer was an expert, but because opinion evidence of intoxication is not limited to expert testimony. (122 C.A.2d 702.) (See also People v. Garcia (1972) 27 C.A.3d 639, 643, footnote 3, 104 C.R. 69, citing the text [defendant's wife was erroneously restricted to testimony that shortly after the homicide, defendant's breath smelled of liquor, that he walked "like wabbly," spoke slurringly and thought incoherently; she should have been allowed to testify from personal observation that her husband was drunk].)

It has been held, however, that a conviction for serving intoxicating liquor to a person "obviously intoxicated" cannot be based on opinion evidence that the person was, because this is the ultimate issue for the jury. (People v. Johnson (1947) 81 C.A.2d Supp. 973, 975, 185 P.2d 105; see infra, §93.) On such a charge, circumstantial evidence--the facts of "outward manifestations" of intoxication--must be shown. (See People v. Smith, supra, 94 C.A.2d Supp. 977, 978 [customer's clothing disarranged, eyes bloodshot, face flushed, speech thick, balance poor, continual argument with another patron].) And a police officer who is not an expert cannot give an opinion on a defendant's blood-alcohol level based on a scientific test. (See infra, §25.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Navarette (2003) 30 C.4th 458, 493, 133 C.R.2d 89, 66 P.3d 1182 [in capital murder case, trial judge did not err in refusing to admit testimony of two witnesses to effect that defendant appeared to be under influence of cocaine on day preceding charged murders; lay opinion regarding drug intoxication is admissible where foundation is established, but both these witnesses stated they had not previously seen persons intoxicated on drugs]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.457

13 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

7. Health, Illness, or Injury.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 13

[§ 13] Health, Illness, or Injury.

A person may testify to having had a particular disease or injury, but the facts must be within the person's knowledge. Thus, in Frederick v. Federal Life Ins. Co. (1936) 13 C.A.2d 585, 57 P.2d 235, defendant insurance company denied liability on a health policy on the ground of fraudulent concealment of gonorrhea, and introduced declarations of plaintiff tending to support its defense. On rebuttal, plaintiff was asked: "Have you at any time in your life had a disease commonly known as gonorrhea?" Held, it was reversible error to sustain defendant's objection to the question. The court referred to cases permitting persons to testify that they had suffered a broken breastbone, fractured ribs, abscesses, and falling of the womb. (13 C.A.2d 589.) (See also 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1975.)

A witness may also give an opinion, based on having observed facts perceptible to the senses, of the health or disease of another. (Robinson v. Exempt Fire Co. of San Francisco (1894) 103 C. 1, 5, 36 P. 955 ["was he, or was he not, apparently well?"; objection was erroneously sustained]; In re Marriage of Teegarden (1986) 181 C.A.3d 401, 409, 226 C.R. 417, quoting the text; see also 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §203.)

The same is true of suffering from injury. In Kline v. Santa Barbara Consol. Ry. Co. (1907) 150 C. 741, 90 P. 125, an action for damages for injuries sustained by a woman streetcar passenger, a bystander testified that she was unable to stand and suffered intensely, and her daughter and a nurse gave similar testimony covering some days thereafter. The court said: "It does not require an expert to tell whether a person suffers. The appearance of a person who suffers severely is sufficient to manifest his condition to any one of ordinary intelligence and experience. These witnesses had all observed her, had heard her groans and complaints, and were competent to give an opinion as to her suffering." (150 C. 750.) (See also Capelouto v. Kaiser Foundation Hosp. (1972) 7 C.3d 889, 895, 103 C.R. 856, 500 P.2d 880 [expert testimony not needed to prove child's pain and suffering].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.455; Evidence k.471(13), 477 et seq.

14 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

8. Age and Parentage.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 14

[§ 14] Age and Parentage.

In People v. Caldwell (1921) 55 C.A. 280, 203 P. 440, a prosecution for statutory rape, the adoptive parents of the prosecutrix, who had adopted her when a little girl some 9 years before, testified that she was more than 2 years under 18. Held: (a) Any witness who can describe a person (not present in court) may give an opinion on minority or majority of that person. (b) Where the issue is exact age, the witness is usually required to have had an acquaintance of some duration before the opinion is received. All tests were met here: "It is next to impossible that they did not know her actual age at the time of the adoption, although the knowledge might be hearsay when tested by the rules of evidence. It is next to impossible, granting for the moment that her age at the period of the adoption was unknown to them, that they did not know her approximate age at the time they testified." (55 C.A. 297.) (See also 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1974; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §387; 45 Proof of Facts 2d 659.)

In Estate of Ganes (1931) 114 C.A. 17, 299 P. 550, an applicant for letters of administration testified that she knew of her own knowledge that she was the natural child of the decedent. Held, a child may competently testify to the fact of his or her parentage. (114 C.A. 19.)

Similarly, testimony as to one's own age is allowable. (People v. Lew (1947) 78 C.A.2d 175, 179, 177 P.2d 60; 45 Proof of Facts 2d 644.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.454; Evidence k.476

15 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

9. Ownership and Possession.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 15

[§ 15] Ownership and Possession.

Ownership is usually regarded as a matter of permissible opinion on which a lay witness may testify. (See Skinner v. Los Angeles (1936) 5 C.2d 317, 318, 54 P.2d 446; Strauss v. Dubuque Fire & Marine Ins. Co. of Dubuque, Iowa (1933) 132 C.A. 283, 294, 22 P.2d 582; Mendocino v. Barnard (1943) 57 C.A.2d 450, 451, 134 P.2d 814; Truck Ins. Exchange v. Torres (1961) 193 C.A.2d 483, 487, 14 C.R. 408, citing the text; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1960; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §139; 20 Proof of Facts 2d 321, 350 [status of property as separate, rather than community, property].)

Thus, in Strauss v. Dubuque Fire & Marine Ins. Co., supra, an action on a fire insurance policy, the defense was that a corporation and not plaintiff insured was the sole owner. Defendants asked plaintiff, "And that corporation owned the property that was destroyed in the fire, didn't it?" Held, the question was properly allowed. (132 C.A. 294.)

In Nolan v. Nolan (1909) 155 C. 476, 101 P. 520, plaintiff was asked: "Is this note not your own property?" (Answer, yes.) And his daughter was asked: "Did you ever own it?" (Answer, no.) "Do you know who owns it?" (Answer, "My father does.") Held, it was within the trial judge's discretion to permit the questions and answers. (155 C. 480.) (But see Winslow v. Glendale Light & Power Co. (1913) 164 C. 688, 689, 130 P. 427, infra, §20 [dictum: where ownership is in dispute, to permit witness to say he owns property is to allow statement of conclusion that should be drawn by trier of fact].)

The same is true of possession. (See Nathan v. Dierssen (1905) 146 C. 63, 66, 79 P. 739; People v. Lockhart (1962) 200 C.A.2d 862, 874, 19 C.R. 719, quoting the text [occupation or possession: "I believe he was living there"]; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1960.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.471(26), 471(27), 472(6)

16 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

10. Value of Services.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 16

[§ 16] Value of Services.

A party suing for compensation may testify to the value of the party's own services. (Rosenow v. Wiener (1909) 11 C.A. 294, 295, 104 P. 839 [bookkeeper and salesperson]; Coogan Finance Corp. v. Beatcher (1932) 120 C.A. 278, 280, 7 P.2d 695 [manager of automobile finance company]; Eltolad Music v. April Music (1983) 139 C.A.3d 697, 709, 188 C.R. 858 [promoter of popular music artists and compositions]; see 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §339 et seq.; 3 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §715; 5 A.L.R.3d 947.) This is true even though the basis of the plaintiff's opinion is mainly information acquired by consulting others. (Coogan Finance Corp. v. Beatcher, supra.)

Other nonexpert witnesses may give evidence of the value of ordinary services as to which there is no "market value" or prevailing wage scale. (Warder v. Hutchison (1924) 69 C.A. 291, 299, 231 P. 563 [testimony of neighbors on value of board, lodging, and washing furnished to decedent].) Thus, in a suit for wrongful death of his wife, plaintiff husband was asked by his attorney what in his opinion it would cost him to replace his wife in the home as a housekeeper, and he said "between $ 225 and $ 250 a month." Held, this was admissible. (Burke v. San Francisco (1952) 111 C.A.2d 314, 317, 244 P.2d 708.)

In Donahue v. Ziv Television Programs (1966) 245 C.A.2d 593, 54 C.R. 130, plaintiffs sued for breach of an alleged implied contract to pay for an idea for a TV screenplay. One plaintiff, who had been in the entertainment industry for 20 years and had made many films, gave his opinion of the value of the submission at $ 1 million. Held, he was competent to testify to the value of the idea, "or, perhaps more accurately, to the value of his services in disclosing it." (245 C.A.2d 609.) (See also Donahue v. United Artists Corp. (1969) 2 C.A.3d 794, 802, 83 C.R. 131 [coowner of idea for TV series also experienced in television production].)

Indeed, the judge or jury may, without any opinion evidence at all, estimate the value of ordinary services of a type within general knowledge. (Nylund v. Madsen (1928) 94 C.A. 441, 444, 271 P. 374 [jury; housekeeper]; Estate of Reinhertz (1947) 82 C.A.2d 156, 160, 185 P.2d 858 [probate judge properly allowed executor $ 1 per hour and, later, 75 cents per hour for essential services though three witnesses for appellant testified that a handyman could have done the work at 50 cents per hour].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.460; Evidence k.471(20), 474(17)

17 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

11. Negligence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 17

[§ 17] Negligence.

In Easton v. Strassburger (1984) 152 C.A.3d 90, 199 C.R. 383, plaintiff purchaser of a residence recovered damages from defendant, the vendor's real estate broker, for negligent failure to discover and disclose defects in the property (built on fill and subject to massive earth movements). On appeal, defendant contended that the judgment should be reversed because no expert testimony was received on the critical issues of standard of care applicable to defendant and defendant's failure to meet the standard. Held, no such testimony was necessary.

The court pointed out that expert testimony is not required where a question is resolvable by common knowledge. This rule, most fully developed in the medical malpractice cases (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §136 et seq.), applies here: Defendant's agents knew of the fill and the settlement problems frequently associated with such soil, and were also aware of such indications as an uneven floor and the use of netting to repair an earlier slide. "It does not require an expert to explain to the jury the relationship between uneven floors and the possibility of unstable soil, or the relationship between past slide activity and the likelihood or possibility of future slide activity." (152 C.A.3d 106.) (See Mast v. Magpusao (1986) 180 C.A.3d 775, 779, 780, 225 C.R. 689 [common knowledge exception precluded need for expert testimony even if rest home operator was guilty of "professional negligence" in failing to protect plaintiff from aggressive resident]; on inadmissibility of nonexpert opinion where common knowledge requirement is not satisfied, see infra, §22; on necessity of expert testimony to show standard of care in negligence action against insurance agent or broker, see 52 A.L.R.4th 1232.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.472(4), 481 et seq.

18 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

12. Value of Property Owned.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 18

[§ 18] Value of Property Owned.

An opinion on value of another's property is received only from one familiar with property values in the area, i.e., an expert. (See infra, §65.) But the owner of real or personal property may testify to its value without showing any special qualifications. (Willard v. Valley Gas & Fuel Co. (1915) 171 C. 9, 14, 151 P. 286; Golding v. R.K.O. Pictures (1950) 35 C.2d 690, 701, 221 P.2d 95 [infringement of literary property]; Schroeder v. Auto Driveaway Co. (1974) 11 C.3d 908, 921, 114 C.R. 622, 523 P.2d 662, citing the text ["The opinion of an owner of personal property is in itself competent evidence of the value of that property, and sufficient to support a judgment based on that value"]; Holmes v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1947) 78 C.A.2d 43, 53, 177 P.2d 32 [negligent destruction of personal property; testimony that its reasonable market value was between $ 12,000 and $ 15,000]; Chatterton v. Boone (1947) 81 C.A.2d 943, 948, 185 P.2d 610 [conversion; evidence of cost of property, together with extent of use and condition]; Wade v. Markwell & Co. (1953) 118 C.A.2d 410, 431, 258 P.2d 497 [same]; People v. Henderson (1965) 238 C.A.2d 566, 567, 48 C.R. 114 [grand theft; victim, having purchased watch for $ 1,800 and ring for $ 1,200, was properly allowed to testify that this was their value]; see 3 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§714, 716; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §319 et seq.; 60 A.L.R.2d 1307 [for purposes of gift tax].)

Condemnation cases furnish the most common illustrations of this kind of permissible layperson's opinion. (See Long Beach City High School Dist. of Los Angeles v. Stewart (1947) 30 C.2d 763, 772, 185 P.2d 585; People v. La Macchia (1953) 41 C.2d 738, 746, 264 P.2d 15 [owner competent "upon a showing that he has resided thereon for a number of years"].) However, the law on this subject has been codified for both expert and lay opinions in a separate article of the Evidence Code (see infra, §98 et seq.), and was extended in 1980 to noncondemnation cases (infra, §99). (For the new enlarged definition of "owner of property," see Ev.C. 813, infra, §102.)

The owner's opinion must, of course, have a proper basis: "[A]n owner is bound by the same rules of admissibility as is any other witness." (Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. v. Goehring (1970) 13 C.A.3d 58, 65, 91 C.R. 375 [owner was improperly allowed to testify about decrease in market value caused by loss of "right" that was not legally enforceable]; Contra Costa Water Dist. v. Bar-C Properties (1992) 5 C.A.4th 652, 661, 7 C.R.2d 91, 8 Summary (9th), Constitutional Law, Supp., §1018 [subdivision owners whose opinion was based on inadmissible method of valuation, i.e., the "economic analysis" approach, were properly precluded from testifying].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Proper basis for owner's opinion:

Cross-Reference: 8 Summary (10th), Constitutional Law, §1230. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.460;

Evidence k.471(20), 474(18), 474(19)

19 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

C. Proper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

13. Other Subjects.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 19

[§ 19] Other Subjects.

(1) Aggressor in Affray. (See People v. Moreno (1973) 32 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 7, 108 C.R. 338 [eyewitness to confrontation between defendant and police officers could state his observations as to who was precipitating or "provoking" an affray].)

(2) Alcoholic Beverages. In Oxman v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control of Calif. (1957) 153 C.A.2d 740, 315 P.2d 484, appellant's liquor license was revoked for violation of the statute prohibiting use of female entertainers ("B-girls") to solicit alcoholic beverages from patrons. The testimony of one of the girls that she knew how champagne tasted, and that she had ordered and received "champagne cocktails" was held admissible. "[A] person who has tasted alcoholic beverages before may testify as to the nature of the drink." (153 C.A.2d 749.)

(3) Cause of Injury. In McNeil v. Yellow Cab Co. (1978) 85 C.A.3d 116, 147 C.R. 733, the question whether the failure of a taxicab company to provide visible seat belts in its cabs caused plaintiff's claimed injuries was held a matter of common knowledge not requiring expert testimony. (85 C.A.3d 118.)

(4) Character. Opinion evidence of character is admissible. (Ev.C. 1100, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §§46, 55, 58.)

(5) Defamation: Damage to Reputation. (See Weller v. American Broadcasting Cos. (1991) 232 C.A.3d 991, 1008, 1009, 283 C.R. 644, 5 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §549 [silver expert could offer lay opinion about implied meaning of allegedly defamatory television broadcasts about silver dealer, where opinion was not offered to prove that implied facts were understood as defamatory, but to explain basis of expert's opinion that such facts damaged dealer's reputation].)

(6) Defamation: Identity of Person Defamed. Where defamatory words are ambiguous as to the person to whom they relate, the opinions or "understanding" of those who have knowledge of the parties and circumstances may be offered to identify the person. (Russell v. Kelly (1872) 44 C. 641, 644; see 41 Cal. L. Rev. 146; 95 A.L.R.2d 239.)

(7) Handwriting. The opinion of an ordinary witness as to a person's handwriting, of which the witness has knowledge, is admissible. (Ev.C. 1416, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §11.)

(8) Lack of Sexual Deviancy. In People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, defendant was convicted of molesting the 9-year-old daughter of a woman he was dating. He unsuccessfully sought to present lay opinions that he was not sexually deviant. The opinion of a male witness, a friend of defendant's, was based on his observation of defendant's assertedly normal sexual conduct with adult women; the testimony of female witnesses, who had dated defendant, was premised on their normal personal sexual experiences with defendant and their observation of defendant's conduct with their daughters. Defendant was also prevented from offering testimony by the two females that defendant had a reputation for "normalcy in his sexual tastes" and was of "high moral character." (53 C.3d 1310.) Held, although any error was harmless, the following should not have been excluded: (a) the testimony of the two female witnesses, to the extent it was based on their personal observation of defendant's behavior with their daughters (53 C.3d 1309); (b) defendant's reputation for "normalcy"--the rule that lay opinion must be based on personal observation does not apply to reputation evidence (53 C.3d 1310, 1311); and (c) testimony as to defendant's "high moral character"--evidence of this sort is routinely admitted in trials for sex offenses (53 C.3d 1311).

(9) Narcotics. In a prosecution for furnishing narcotics to another, the person to whom the narcotics were furnished may testify to the nature of the substance, on a showing of prior use. (People v. Chrisman (1967) 256 C.A.2d 425, 434, 64 C.R. 733.) (See also 95 A.L.R.3d 978 [competency of addict or user to identify material as narcotic or controlled substance].)

(10) Obviousness of Dangerous Condition. (See Osborn v. Mission Ready Mix (1990) 224 C.A.3d 104, 112, 273 C.R. 457, supra, §4 [plaintiff could be required to state whether condition of construction site where he fell was "open and obvious"].)

(11) Performance of Contract. In Kreuzberger v. Wingfield (1892) 96 C. 251, 31 P. 109, a witness, having testified to the terms of a contract, was asked whether his work was "according to the contract." Held, under the circumstances, the question called for facts, i.e., whether he had furnished the work and materials which, as he had just testified, were specified in the contract. (96 C. 256.)

(12) Sound. In People v. Chin Hane (1895) 108 C. 597, 41 P. 697, a murder case, the prosecution contended that shots which killed the deceased were fired from inside a house. The witness, who was near the scene and heard the shots, was allowed to testify that they sounded as though fired from inside the building. (108 C. 602.) (See also People v. Glab (1936) 15 C.A.2d 120, 123, 59 P.2d 195 [sound of footsteps]; People v. Deacon (1953) 117 C.A.2d 206, 210, 255 P.2d 98, supra, §11 [angry voices].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(5) Defamation: Damage to Reputation.

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §620.(11a) (New) Shoeprints. See People v. Maglaya (2003) 112 C.A.4th 1604, 1609, 6 C.R.3d 155 [police officer who investigated attempted burglary scene was properly allowed to offer lay testimony as to similarities between pictures of shoeprints found at scene and soles of tennis shoes found in defendant's bedroom].

(11b) (New) Sidewalk Defect. See Caloroso v. Hathaway (2004) 122 C.A.4th 922, 928, 19 C.R.3d 254 [in personal injury action by pedestrian who tripped over crack in sidewalk in front of defendant's residence, trial judge did not abuse discretion in determining that no expert testimony was needed to determine whether crack, which created difference in elevation of less than half-inch, was dangerous].

20 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

D. Improper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

1. Employment, Agency, Authority, or Control.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 20

[§ 20] Employment, Agency, Authority, or Control.

In Winslow v. Glendale Light & Power Co. (1913) 164 C. 688, 130 P. 427, where the issue was agency or independent contract, a witness was asked, "By whom were you employed and for whom were you working?" He answered, "For the Glendale Light & Power Company." Other testimony showed that his actual negotiations were with S, the alleged independent contractor. Held, the answer was a mere conclusion, and the question was improper. "In such a case the rule limits the testimony of the witness to a statement of the person by whom he was employed, the nature, terms, and surrounding circumstances of his employment. From these, with such other evidence as the case presents, must the conclusion be drawn as to who in fact was the responsible employer." (164 C. 690.) (See also Parker v. Otis (1900) 130 C. 322, 331, 62 P. 571, 574 ["Did you delegate authority to your sister to act as your agent ... ?"].) However, in Majors v. Connor (1912) 162 C. 131, 121 P. 371, the witness was asked, "Under whose control did you do the work?" Held, this was proper, being equivalent to "Who gave the orders?" (162 C. 135.) (On proof of agency generally, see 3 Am.Jur.2d (1986 ed.), Agency §359 et seq.)

In People v. Ware (1924) 67 C.A. 81, 226 P. 956, a prosecution for criminal syndicalism, the state's witness was asked, "[B]y whom was the Central Labor Council controlled at that time?" His answer ("by members of the Industrial Workers of the World," defendants' organization) was described by the court as a "glaring violation" of the opinion rule. (67 C.A. 91.) But in Kaltschmidt v. Weber (1904) 145 C. 596, 79 P. 272, on the issue of community or separate character of plaintiff's earnings, her husband was asked, "Who has had the management and control of your wife's earnings during the past fifteen years?" Held, the court erred in sustaining an objection that eliminated all evidence on this crucial issue; the question did not call for a conclusion, "at least not to such an extent as to make it objectionable for that reason." (145 C. 599.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.471(30) et seq.

21 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

D. Improper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

2. Contract or Understanding.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 21

[§ 21] Contract or Understanding.

In Nevills v. Moore Mining Co. (1902) 135 C. 561, 67 P. 1054, the issue was whether an express contract had been made. Testimony of plaintiff that "I had an agreement," and "They understood I was to get a salary," was held inadmissible. (135 C. 563.) And in Hanson v. Sherman (1914) 25 C.A. 169, 143 P. 73, on the question whether stock was legally issued to defendant or received merely as security for a loan, the witness' statement that it "was issued ... as a bonus for a loan" was held an inadmissible conclusion based on undisclosed facts. (25 C.A. 173.) (See also Crusoe v. Clark (1899) 127 C. 341, 344, 59 P. 700 [asking whether other persons "understood" something or "expected" something]; Evinger v. MacDougall (1938) 28 C.A.2d 175, 180, 82 P.2d 194 ["Did you have any agreement" with another as to interest in a building and loan association passbook]; Froomer v. Drollinger (1962) 201 C.A.2d 90, 98, 19 C.R. 891 [agent, not party to lease, was asked "what was your understanding" in regard to use of an area]; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1962 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Morrow v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2007) 149 C.A.4th 1424, 1444, 57 C.R.3d 885 [in action for defamation and invasion of privacy by school principal against school administrators, declaration by school employee submitted by plaintiff in opposition to defendants' SLAPP suit motion (C.C.P. 425.16; see 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §963) was inadmissible in part because it included improper lay opinion as to meaning and legal effect of applicable collective bargaining agreement]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.471(28)

22 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

D. Improper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

3. Standard of Care.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 22

[§ 22] Standard of Care.

A nonexpert opinion on what constitutes due care or negligence is inadmissible unless the conduct involved is within the common knowledge of laypersons. (See Osborn v. Mission Ready Mix (1990) 224 C.A.3d 104, 113, 273 C.R. 457 [plaintiff, a cement truck driver, could not be required to state whether construction site where he fell was in a reasonable condition]; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §§348, 396; supra, §17.)

Thus, in Albrecht v. Broughton (1970) 6 C.A.3d 173, 85 C.R. 659, defense counsel was allowed, over objection, to ask several witnesses who had viewed an accident scene immediately after a collision whether they would have turned their lights on if they had been driving that morning. Held, this was error. "The nonscientific terms in which illumination must be described are, if anything, less precise than terms referring to speed, distance or size. The average person has some experience with estimating feet, inches, or even miles per hour, but 'foot candles' do not come within the same range of experience; an estimate of illumination necessarily has some conclusionary aspect. But the conclusionary aspect of such testimony ought to be kept under reasonable limits. Here, both witnesses were able, in other parts of their testimony, to give their recollections of the illumination at the scene of the accident in terms more concrete than whether the witness would, if driving, have been using headlights. The questions complained of thus had the predominant effect not of producing otherwise unavailable information on the conditions of illumination but of bringing before the jury the opinions of the witnesses bearing on the standard of care applicable to both parties to the accident. Under those circumstances, appellant's objections should have been sustained." (6 C.A.3d 181.)

In Miller v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1973) 8 C.3d 689, 106 C.R. 1, 505 P.2d 193, the trial judge required plaintiffs to produce expert testimony to support their claim that the builder of their flood-demolished home failed to use the proper standard of care. When they did not do so, the judge granted a nonsuit in the builder's favor. Held, judgment affirmed. "[W]e are satisfied that it was not for nonexpert minds to determine whether Noble Manors failed to exercise due care in the construction of the home. Building homes is a complicated activity. The average layman has neither training nor experience in the construction industry and ordinarily cannot determine whether a particular building has been built with the requisite skill and in accordance with the standards prescribed by law or prevailing in the industry. In the instant case, the issue as to whether or not the Miller home had been negligently constructed involved a multitude of subsidiary questions bearing not only upon the erection of the structure itself but also upon the location of the house on the particular lot, the elevation of the lot, the influence of the surrounding terrain, the possibility of run-offs and floods, and the existence of the debris dam. These were not questions which the jury could have resolved from their common experience and the trial judge properly concluded that the issue of the allegedly negligent construction of the Miller residence was one within the knowledge of experts only." (8 C.3d 702.)

The same is true of care required of a legal specialist. In Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 C.A.3d 802, 121 C.R. 194, plaintiffs sought advice from defendant, an attorney specialist in maritime law, about acquiring title to a vessel free of liens and mortgages. The title documents which the attorney examined contained a statement, "As amended by section 27 of the Merchant Marine Act of June 5th, 1920, as amended, this vessel shall not engage in the coastwise trade." (That statute prohibited use of a vessel in coastwise trade if, at some time in its history, it had been owned by an alien.) When the attorney asked the purpose for which the vessel would be used, plaintiffs answered, "Pleasure," although they planned to offer cruises for skin divers in Southern California waters. The attorney then arranged for transfer of title, removal of an existing mortgage and provisions for an indemnity against liens. Soon after the vessel went into operation, however, the Coast Guard cited plaintiffs for violating the Merchant Marine Act because the vessel had once been owned by a Mexican national. At the trial (where the issue of the attorney's knowledge was disputed), plaintiffs contended that, irrespective of his lack of knowledge as to intended purpose, he had the duty of notifying plaintiffs of the legal effect of the restriction which appeared in the title documents. But plaintiffs offered no expert testimony relevant to their claim that the attorney failed to show due care. Judgment was granted for the attorney. Held, affirmed. "In some circumstances, the failure of attorney performance may be so clear that a trier of fact may find professional negligence unaided by the testimony of experts. Where, however, the malpractice action is brought against an attorney holding himself out as a legal specialist and the claim against him is related to his expertise as such, then only a person knowledgeable in the specialty can define the applicable duty of care and opine whether it was met. ... Without expert testimony that a reasonably prudent specialist in admiralty law would, under the facts as the trial court found them, have acted differently than did respondent, there is no basis to attach legal fault to his conduct." (47 C.A.3d 810.) (See also Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 C.A.3d 1125, 1147, 217 C.R. 89 [defendant's "numerous, blatant and egregious violations of attorney responsibility," as established by Rules of Professional Conduct, were not breaches of legal technicalities for which expert testimony was required, but where standards of competence in specialized field of tax law were at issue, expert testimony was necessary]; 14 A.L.R.4th 170 [admissibility and necessity of expert evidence as to standards of practice and negligence in legal malpractice action].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.471(17), 472(4), 474(6), 481

23 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

D. Improper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

4. Veracity of Statements by Another.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 23

[§ 23] Veracity of Statements by Another.

In People v. Sergill (1982) 138 C.A.3d 34, 187 C.R. 497, defendant was charged with a violation of P.C. 288a, on evidence of oral copulation with his 8-year-old niece. The child testified to the acts and defendant denied them. Defendant called the two police officers who had investigated the matter to testify to discrepancies between the child's report to the police and her testimony. Then, on cross-examination of one officer, the prosecutor asked whether he had formed an opinion as to whether the child was telling the truth, and what that opinion was. The officer, over objection, answered that, in his opinion, the girl was being truthful, and explained that as a result of dealings with many children he could usually determine with a high degree of accuracy whether their statements were true. Held, admission of this evidence was reversible error.

(a) The testimony was not admissible reputation evidence as to a witness' character for honesty and veracity (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §44); the officers did not know the child and could not testify to her reputation. (138 C.A.3d 39.) Nor was it admissible as expert opinion: No authority suggests that the veracity of those who report crimes to the police is a proper subject of expert testimony; and, even if it were, the fact that the officers had taken numerous reports during their careers would not qualify them as experts in judging truthfulness. (138 C.A.3d 39.)

(b) The testimony was not admissible as a lay opinion under Ev.C. 800(b): The officers had described their interviews with the child in concrete detail, and their opinions were not helpful to a clear understanding of their testimony. (138 C.A.3d 40.) Nor was it relevant as tending to affect the credibility of the witness: It did not fall within any of the categories listed in Ev.C. 780 (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §259), for "the officers' opinions on the child's truthfulness during their limited contacts with her did not have a reasonable tendency to prove or disprove her credibility and were therefore not relevant." (138 C.A.3d 40.)

In People v. Melton (1988) 44 C.3d 713, 244 C.R. 867, 750 P.2d 741, the court generalized the rule of People v. Sergill, supra, as follows:

"Lay opinion about the veracity of particular statements by another is inadmissible on that issue. ... With limited exceptions, the fact finder, not the witnesses, must draw the ultimate inferences from the evidence. Qualified experts may express opinions on issues beyond common understanding, but lay views on veracity do not meet the standards for admission of expert testimony. A lay witness is occasionally permitted to express an ultimate opinion based on his perception, but only where 'helpful to a clear understanding of his testimony' ... , i.e., where the concrete observations on which the opinion is based cannot otherwise be conveyed. ... Finally, a lay opinion about the veracity of particular statements does not constitute properly founded character or reputation evidence ... , nor does it bear on any of the other matters listed by statute as most commonly affecting credibility. ... Thus, such an opinion has no 'tendency in reason' to disprove the veracity of the statements." (44 C.3d 744.) (See also People v. Smith (1989) 214 C.A.3d 904, 915, 263 C.R. 155, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §188, [deputy sheriff should not have been allowed to testify that he believed victim's dying declaration; quoting Melton].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Brown (2001) 96 C.A.4th Supp. 1, 33, 117 C.R.2d 738 [in domestic violence prosecution, trial judge did not err in admitting testimony of two police officers that they found victim credible, for limited purpose of determining whether police conduct was reasonable; distinguishing People v. Sergill (1982) 138 C.A.3d 34, 187 C.R. 497, text, p. 552].

24 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

D. Improper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

5. Mental Retardation.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 24

[§ 24] Mental Retardation.

Welf.C. 6500 provides for commitment of a mentally retarded person to a state hospital. (See 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §41.) In re Krall (1984) 151 C.A.3d 792, 199 C.R. 91, points out that the statute requires evidence that the person has "(1) significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning, (2) that this functioning exists concurrently with deficits in adaptive behavior, and (3) that both of these deficits appeared in the developmental period." Because none of these factors has a meaning commonly understood by people of reasonable intelligence, they are not proper subjects for lay opinion. And legislative recognition of the necessity for expert diagnosis and opinion is found in several code sections. (151 C.A.3d 797.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

25 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

I. OPINION OF LAY WITNESS

D. Improper Subjects of Nonexpert Opinion.

6. Intoxication Test.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 25

[§ 25] Intoxication Test.

A lay witness may give an opinion, based on the witness' own perception, that a person was intoxicated. (See supra, §12.) To the extent that the lay opinion is based on a scientific test, however, there are limits on the scope of the testimony.

Thus, in People v. Loomis (1984) 156 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 203 C.R. 767, a police officer with long experience on a drinking driver detail had on many occasions administered a "lateral gaze nystagmus" test to drivers stopped on suspicion of drunken driving. The test involves a request to the driver to concentrate on an object held by the officer slightly above his eye level, following which the object is moved toward the outside of the driver's field of vision. "The officer then observes the onset of an involuntary oscillation of the eyeball, and measures the angle of onset of the oscillation in relation to the center point. The officer then calculates the blood-alcohol level based upon the angle of onset of the oscillation." (156 C.A.3d Supp. 4.) On this occasion, the officer stopped a suspect, administered the test, estimated the blood-alcohol level as between .15 and .16, and made the arrest. At the trial, the officer testified as a lay witness, giving his opinion based on the test. Held, conviction reversed. (a) The fact of oscillation of the driver's pupil was something the officer perceived with his senses, but the opinion that such oscillation indicated a particular level was not. (b) Even if the officer had qualified as an expert, the opinion would not have been admissible: The "lateral gaze nystagmus test" did not meet the criteria of People v. Kelly (1976) 17 C.3d 24, 130 C.R. 144, 549 P.2d 1240 (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42), for no showing was made of the general acceptance of the test in the scientific community. (156 C.A.3d Supp. 7.) (On subsequent determination that this test meets Kelly requirements, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §48; on admissibility of nystagmus test results generally, see 60 A.L.R.4th 1129.)

The Loomis case was distinguished in People v. Ojeda (1990) 225 C.A.3d 404, 275 C.R. 472, where the officer who stopped defendant and administered a nystagmus (HGN) test to him was allowed at trial to describe what he observed while administering the test and to express his opinion, based on his training and experience, that defendant was under the influence of alcohol. Held, this was proper. The officer in Loomis purported to know defendant's exact blood-alcohol level; the officer in this case did not. "We do not hold that HGN is a reliable indicator of alcohol intoxication. ... We hold only that an officer with sufficient experience may testify, based on his or her own experience with the relationship between HGN and alcohol intoxication, to an opinion that a subject was or was not under the influence." (225 C.A.3d 409.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.457; Evidence k.478(3)

26 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

1. Modern Law.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 26

[§ 26] Modern Law.

Expert evidence, i.e., the testimony of a person with special knowledge (see infra, §38), has become increasingly important in modern litigation. (See generally 1 McCormick 5th, §§13 et seq., 202 et seq.; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §555 et seq.; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1933 et seq.; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §32 et seq.; 2 Am.Jur. Trials 293, 357, 585; C.J.E.R., Judges Benchbook, Civil Proceedings: Trial §8.69 et seq.; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §1.1 et seq.; C.E.B., Effective Introduction of Evidence 2d, Chap. 24 [Expert Witnesses]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.40 et seq.; 22 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 93 [use and misuse of expert testimony in summary judgment proceedings]; 29 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 413 [expert testimony by telephone]; on rule that experts may not testify as to issues of law, see infra, §97.) The rules and practices, however, have been under strong critical attack. The principal evils are said to be (1) the partisan expert chosen and compensated by the party; (2) the method of eliciting opinions by means of the hypothetical question (3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §194); (3) the exclusion of useful opinions on an "ultimate issue" because they invade the province of the jury (infra, §88); and (4) the reluctance to give conclusiveness or special weight to certain kinds of expert evidence not properly open to dispute (infra, §85).

A number of reforms in the law and practice are embodied in the Evidence Code. (See Ev.C. 801 et seq.) (See also 1 McCormick 5th, §§16, 17; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1929.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 702 reads as follows: "If scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education, may testify thereto in the form of an opinion or otherwise." (See 3 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §348 et seq.; 49 Hastings L. J. 1143 [arguing that expert testimony should be subject to sufficiency standard of F.R. Evid., Rule 104(b) (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §48)].)

Some aspects of the subject of experts and expert testimony are covered in other chapters of this work. (On experimental and scientific evidence generally, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §35 et seq.; on compelling attendance and compensation of expert, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Witnesses, §21 et seq.; on qualification and direct examination, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §189 et seq.; on cross-examination, see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §250 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CACI, No. 219 et seq. [expert witness testimony]; Simons, Cal. Evidence Manual, §4:1 et seq.; 1 McCormick 6th, §§13 et seq., 202 et seq.; 37 U.S.F. L. Rev. 411 [comparing California and federal approaches to admission of expert testimony]. F.R. Evid., Rule 702 was amended in 2000 to specify that a witness may provide an expert opinion only if the testimony is based on sufficient facts or data, the testimony is the product of reliable principles and methods, and the witness has applied the principles and methods reliably to the facts of the case.

See 36 San Diego L. Rev. 1043 [admission of bioethics testimony under F.R. Evid., Rule 702]; 177 A.L.R. Fed 77, 103 [United States Supreme Court cases on admissibility of expert evidence]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.468 et seq.; Evidence k.505 et seq.

27 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

2. Expert Testimony as to Facts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 27

[§ 27] Expert Testimony as to Facts.

Expert testimony as to facts may be necessary where the facts from which conclusions are to be drawn are peculiarly within the expert's knowledge and are not a matter of common knowledge as to which an ordinary witness may competently testify. (See 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §76 et seq.)

Thus, in Long v. John Breuner Co. (1918) 36 C.A. 630, 172 P. 1132, plaintiff fell on an incline in front of defendant's store. Architects and building contractors were permitted to testify that the grade was 35% to 50%, and that this was 16 times the standard grade of approaches to public buildings. Held, this was proper testimony of facts, and the conclusion--whether there was negligence--was properly left to the jury. (36 C.A. 636.)

Likewise, in People v. Gaines (1934) 1 C.2d 110, 34 P.2d 146, a handwriting expert sought to testify as to facts showing similarities between certain writings, but declared that through lack of time he had not reached a definite conclusion as to identity. Held, it was error (though not prejudicial in the particular case) to prevent his testifying to the facts. (See 1 C.2d 115.) (See 22 Cal. L. Rev. 571.)

Of course, questioning the expert on the basis of assumed facts, i.e., eliciting an opinion by means of hypothetical questions, is a proper and traditional means of conducting expert witness examination. (See 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §194 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

28 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

a. Subject of Opinion.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 28

[§ 28] Subject of Opinion.

Even though facts may be within the knowledge or understanding of the jury, the conclusions to be drawn from them may depend on knowledge or skill possessed only by an expert. In this situation, expert testimony in the form of an opinion is received. (See People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 1153, 1154, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, infra, §58; Fonts v. Southern Pac. Co. (1916) 30 C.A. 633, 639, 159 P. 215; Manney v. Housing Authority of Richmond (1947) 79 C.A.2d 453, 459, 180 P.2d 69; Zelayeta v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1951) 104 C.A.2d 716, 724, 232 P.2d 572; Natural Soda Products Co. v. Los Angeles (1952) 109 C.A.2d 440, 443, 240 P.2d 993; Wells Truckways v. Cebrian (1954) 122 C.A.2d 666, 677, 265 P.2d 557; People v. Torres (1995) 33 C.A.4th 37, 45, 39 C.R.2d 103; 13B (Part 1A) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 354 [Unif. Rule 702]; 1 McCormick 5th, §13; 38 A.L.R.2d 13; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §75; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §2.1 et seq.; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.40; for illustrations, see infra, §45 et seq.)

One significant distinction between expert and nonexpert opinions is explained in Manney v. Housing Authority of Richmond, supra: "For a non-expert to be competent to give an opinion ... he must be testifying about facts that he has personally observed; but the expert in any case proper for the reception of expert testimony may give his opinion, although he did not personally observe the facts, basing his opinion upon the facts testified to by other witnesses put to him in the form of hypothetical questions. ... If the case is one for expert testimony this is so not because the expert has witnessed the facts, but because he is qualified by reason of his special knowledge to form an opinion on the facts while the ordinary juror is not." (79 C.A.2d 459, 460.) (See also George v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (1949) 33 C.2d 834, 844, 205 P.2d 1037.)

Thus in Rosenberg v. Goldstein (1966) 247 C.A.2d 25, 55 C.R. 306, plaintiff, a guest of defendant's tenant, tripped when her foot became wedged under a sprinkler head on a lawn. Plaintiff called S, a licensed contractor with long experience in installation of sprinkler systems, to testify to the cause of such a dangerous condition in lawns (improper gardening practice of cutting away grass) and the remedy (raising the flange). Objection to his testimony was sustained on the ground that he had not seen defendant's lawn and sprinkler system. Held, this was reversible error. (247 C.A.2d 30.)

However, the value of an expert's opinion depends on the truth of the facts assumed. (See Richard v. Scott (1978) 79 C.A.3d 57, 63, 64, 144 C.R. 672, citing the text [factual assumptions made in arriving at opinion on speed of vehicle lacked evidentiary support]; Hyatt v. Sierra Boat Co. (1978) 79 C.A.3d 325, 338, 145 C.R. 47 [same; "an expert's assumption of facts contrary to the proof destroys the opinion"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 13A U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 140 [Unif. Rules, Rule 702]; CACI, No. 219 [evaluation of expert testimony]; 1 McCormick 6th, §13.

29 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

b. Test: Assist Trier of Fact.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 29

[§ 29] Test: Assist Trier of Fact.

(1) In General. A somewhat academic debate has taken place over the question whether expert opinion is accepted only where necessary (because a lay witness could not draw the inference), or where it would be desirable (as where a lay witness might be able to draw the inference but an expert opinion would be far more helpful). The California courts have not imposed a strict test of necessity. "Professor Wigmore has said the criterion for receiving opinion evidence from a qualified witness is: '... Can a jury from this person receive appreciable help?' " (People v. Hopper (1956) 145 C.A.2d 180, 191, 302 P.2d 94.) "[T]he decisive consideration in determining the admissibility of expert opinion evidence is whether the subject of inquiry is one of such common knowledge that men of ordinary education could reach a conclusion as intelligently as the witness or whether, on the other hand, the matter is sufficiently beyond common experience that the opinion of an expert would assist the trier of fact." (People v. Cole (1956) 47 C.2d 99, 103, 301 P.2d 854.) (See also People v. Clay (1964) 227 C.A.2d 87, 94, 38 C.R. 431; 2 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 363; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1923.)

(2) Evidence Code and Federal Rules. Ev.C. 801(a), superseding former C.C.P. 1870(9), codified the established rule with the liberal test of helpfulness: An expert's opinion is admissible when "[r]elated to a subject that is sufficiently beyond common experience that the opinion of an expert would assist the trier of fact." (See People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 1154, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, infra, §58 [Ev.C. 801(a) requires exclusion of evidence only when it would add nothing to jury's common fund of information].) F.R. Evid., Rule 702 is similar. (See supra, §26.)

(3) Testimony Admissible. In New v. Consolidated Rock Products Co. (1985) 171 C.A.3d 681, 217 C.R. 522, the witness R was a traffic safety engineer with expertise on the subject of driver reaction to highway warning signs. He was permitted to testify that drivers, including motorcyclists, driving 25 miles an hour or more, would not be able to read more than three words on a sign; hence, where the sign read "No Trespassing Quarry Property This Property May Be Used At Any Time For Excavation," the driver would not have read beyond the word "Quarry." Held, the ruling was proper. The testimony was not "within the ken of a lay juror insofar as it pertained to the capacity of an operator of a vehicle traveling at a speed of 25 miles an hour or more to perceive various posted warnings on signs containing more than three words." (171 C.A.3d 692.) (See also People v. Champion (1995) 9 C.4th 879, 924, 925, 39 C.R.2d 547, 891 P.2d 93 [street gang expert allowed to testify as to gang terminology used by defendants in tape-recorded conversation]; Weller v. American Broadcasting Cos. (1991) 232 C.A.3d 991, 1007, 1008, 283 C.R. 644, 5 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §549A [opinion of linguistics professor would assist jury in determining whether average viewer understood television broadcasts as implying defamatory acts]; People v. Harvey (1991) 233 C.A.3d 1206, 1226, 285 C.R. 158, 1

Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §49, citing the text [police agent's opinion in narcotics case regarding significance of drug transactions and roles and levels of culpability of each defendant]; People v. Gamez (1991) 235 C.A.3d 957, 965, 286 C.R. 894 [police officers allowed to testify as to criminal gang activities].)

(4) Testimony Inadmissible. In Westbrooks v. California (1985) 173 C.A.3d 1203, 219 C.R. 674, a wrongful death action against the state arising out of the collapse of a bridge, defendant offered expert testimony to the effect that no dangerous condition existed since the county had set up flares and had placed its deputy sheriffs in position to warn approaching motorists. Held, the proffered testimony was an improper subject of expert opinion: Whether a dangerous condition existed under the facts presented was a matter within the common experience of lay jurors. (173 C.A.3d 1209, 1210.)

In People v. Johnson (1993) 19 C.A.4th 778, 23 C.R.2d 703, defendants were accused of killing a prison guard, and the prosecution witnesses included prison inmates. Defendants sought to introduce the testimony of a sociologist and a former inmate, who was an "expert liar," as to the tendency of prison inmates to lie. Held, the trial judge properly excluded this evidence. The notion that prison inmates may lie is not outside the common understanding of jurors, and no expert testimony was needed by the jurors to assist them in ascertaining the relevant facts. A defendant may attack the credibility of inmate witnesses, but should do so with impeaching evidence relating to the particular witness in question. "Evidence of a generalized tendency of some groups of witnesses to lie, unrelated to the credibility of the specific witnesses in issue, is irrelevant and not the subject of legitimate scientific evidence from expert witnesses." (19 C.A.4th 786.) (See also People v. Torres (1995) 33 C.A.4th 37, 45, 39 C.R.2d 103 [police officer should not have been asked whether crime was committed and whether defendant was guilty; this invaded province of jury, which was as competent as witness to weigh evidence and decide guilt]; Loth v. Truck-A-Way Corp. (1998) 60 C.A.4th 757, 767, 70 C.R.2d 571, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §1411 [in personal injury action, admission of expert testimony on "hedonic damages" was error; loss of enjoyment of life is not subject sufficiently beyond common experience that expert opinion would assist trier of fact].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Evidence Code and Federal Rules. See Everett v. Superior Court (2002) 104 C.A.4th 388, 393, 128 C.R.2d 418 [in civil rights action, statistical evidence showing that African Americans were more likely to be removed from amusement park for line cutting than other groups did not require expert testimony; simple comparison of percentages is not subject "sufficiently beyond common experience that the opinion of an expert would assist the trier of fact" within meaning of Ev.C. 801].

(3) Testimony Admissible. See People v. Smith (2005) 35 C.4th 334, 363, 25 C.R.3d 554, 107 P.3d 229 [in prosecution for capital murder and sodomy, prosecution expert was properly allowed to testify to children's reactions to sadistic molestation; experience of child victims of violent sexual assaults is sufficiently beyond common experience that expert assistance is required]; People v. Robinson (2005) 37 C.4th 592, 631, 36 C.R.3d 760, 124 P.3d 363 [in capital murder case, testimony of forensic pathologist was properly admitted on probable respective positions of shooter and victim, as this would assist jurors in determining whether killing was premeditated and deliberate and in assessing testimony of prosecution witnesses concerning defendant's statements about how crime was carried out].

Weller v. American Broadcasting Cos.:

Cross-Reference: 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §620. (4) Testimony Inadmissible. See People v. Smith (2003) 30 C.4th 581, 628, 134 C.R.2d 1, 68 P.3d 302 [in penalty phase of capital murder trial in which defendant's tape-recorded confession was played for jury, exclusion of expert testimony as to credibility of defendant's statements of remorse was proper, as jury could judge credibility for itself]; People v. Coffman & Marlow (2004) 34 C.4th 1, 83, 17 C.R.3d 710, 96 P.3d 30 [in capital murder case, trial judge erred, although under circumstances error was harmless, in allowing expert witness (psychologist and expert on battered women's syndrome) to testify that, in her opinion, when codefendant testified regarding defendant's abuse of her, codefendant was telling truth]; People v. Son (2000) 79 C.A.4th 224, 241, 93 C.R.2d 871, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, Supp., §62 [defendant's admission that his confession was false and was made only because detective promised that defendant would serve no more than 1 year in custody was matter easily understood by layperson; thus, expert testimony as to other potential reasons for false confessions was unnecessary and was properly excluded]; Kotla v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (2004) 115 C.A.4th 283, 293, 8 C.R.3d 898 [in wrongful termination action alleging that defendant laboratory fired plaintiff for impermissible retaliatory reasons, trial judge erred in allowing plaintiff's expert, who had degree in industrial psychology, to testify that certain predischARGE events were indicators of defendant's retaliatory motive; testimony did not assist jury in fact-finding and created unacceptable risk that jurors paid unwarranted deference to expert's purported expertise]; People v. Ramos (2004) 121 C.A.4th 1194, 1206, 1207, 18 C.R.3d 167 [in attempted murder prosecution in which defendant's confession to detective was admitted, trial judge did not abuse discretion in excluding expert testimony on police interrogation techniques and false confessions; defense's cross-examination of detective, as well as testimony of other witnesses that detective threatened them and attempted to coerce statements from them and defendant, could be evaluated without expert assistance]; on admissibility of expert testimony as to credibility of confessions generally, see 73 A.L.R.5th 581.

Loth v. Truck-A-Way Corp.:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1673.

(New) Medical malpractice: In a medical malpractice action, expert testimony offered by the plaintiff will not assist the jury on the issue of causation unless the expert provides a reasoned explanation illuminating why the facts have convinced the expert, and therefore should convince the jury, that it is more probable than not that the negligent act was the cause-in-fact of the plaintiff's injury. An expert opinion that there is some theoretical possibility that the negligent act could have been a cause-in-fact of the injury is insufficient to establish causation. (Jennings v. Palomar Pomerado Health Systems (2003) 114 C.A.4th 1108, 1118, 1120, 8 C.R.3d 363 [in action alleging that defendant doctors negligently left retractor in plaintiff's abdominal cavity, thus causing him to develop infection after surgery, opinion of plaintiff's expert witness as to cause was properly excluded on ground that it was conclusory and failed to provide reasoned explanation connecting infection to location where retractor was left or reconciling his theory of migration route of infection with contradictory evidence]; see Bushling v. Fremont Med. Center (2004) 117 C.A.4th 493, 510, 11 C.R.3d 653 [in medical malpractice action, trial judge, in ruling on defendants' summary judgment motion, properly concluded that opinion of plaintiff's experts that plaintiff's injury was caused by defendants' negligence was of no evidentiary value and would not assist jury; opinion assumed that plaintiff was dropped, his arm was improperly positioned during surgery, or it was stretched, but there was no evidence to support these assumptions; relying on Jennings]; on subjects of expert testimony in medical malpractice case, see text, §§45, 46.)West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.469.1

30 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

c. Bases of Opinions: In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 30

[§ 30] Bases of Opinions: In General.

The opinion of an expert must not only be on a proper subject (supra, §28) but must be based on reliable "matter" ("facts, data, and such matters as a witness' knowledge, experience, and other intangibles upon which an opinion may be based"; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C., Div. 7). What are reliable matters depends on the particular subject, and no statutory listing is possible. The Evidence Code prescribes minimum requisites for all cases, leaving particular rules to be formulated, as in the past, by judicial decisions. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 801.)

Ev.C. 801(b), the governing provision, makes an expert's opinion admissible if "[b]ased on matter (including his special knowledge, skill, experience, training, and education) perceived by or personally known to the witness or made known to him at or before the hearing, whether or not admissible, that is of a type that reasonably may be relied upon by an expert in forming an opinion upon the subject to which his testimony relates, unless an expert is precluded by law from using such matter as a basis for his opinion." (See infra, §31 et seq.; and see generally People v. Collins (1968) 68 C.2d 319, 328, 66 C.R. 497, 438 P.2d 33, infra, §78, citing the text; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Zuckerman (1987) 189 C.A.3d 1113, 1134, 234 C.R. 630, quoting the text; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §75; 6 Am.Jur. Trials 109 [basis of medical testimony]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §4.1 et seq.)

In Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Zuckerman, supra, the court said: "The value of opinion evidence rests not in the conclusion reached but in the factors considered and the reasoning employed. ... Where an expert bases his conclusion upon assumptions which are not supported by the record, upon matters which are not reasonably relied upon by other experts, or upon factors which are speculative, remote or conjectural, then his conclusion has no evidentiary value. ... When a trial court has accepted an expert's ultimate conclusion without critical consideration of his reasoning, and it appears the conclusion was based upon improper or unwarranted matters, then the judgment must be reversed for lack of substantial evidence." (189 C.A.3d 1136, citing In re Marriage of Hewitson (1983) 142 C.A.3d 874, 191 C.R. 392.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 703 states: "The facts or data in the particular case upon which an expert bases an opinion or inference may be those perceived by or made known to the expert at or before the hearing. If of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subject, the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence." (See 3 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §354 et seq.; 51 So. Cal. L. Rev. 129 [psychiatric opinions under Rule 703].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

F.R. Evid., Rule 703, as amended in 2000, additionally provides that "[f]acts or data that are otherwise inadmissible shall not be disclosed to the jury by the proponent of the opinion or inference unless the court determines that their probative value in assisting the jury to evaluate the expert's opinion substantially outweighs their prejudicial effect." West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.486 et seq.; Evidence k.555 et seq.

31 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

d. Reliable Information.

1. Statutory Rule and Qualification.

aa. Type Reasonably Relied Upon.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 31

[§ 31] Type Reasonably Relied Upon.

(1) General Rule. When the opinion is not based on matter perceived by or personally known to the witness, but depends on information furnished by others, the opinion will be of little value unless the source is reliable. The statutory requisite is a general one: The information must be "of a type that reasonably may be relied upon" by the expert in forming an opinion on the subject. (Ev.C. 801(b); see Kelley v. Trunk (1998) 66 C.A.4th 519, 524, 78 C.R.2d 122 [in medical malpractice action, summary judgment for defendant doctor, based on defendant's expert witness declaration, was not proper: "The required foundational showing that the opinion rest on matters of a type experts reasonably rely on is not made where, as here, the expert does not disclose what he relied on in forming his opinion"]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §4.2.)

The matters need not be admissible. Both this provision in Ev.C. 801(b) and F.R. Evid., Rule 703 (supra, §30) express, somewhat more broadly, a view previously recognized by California courts: Many types of information that could not be directly produced as competent evidence are nevertheless commonly used by experts in forming their opinions. (See People v. Gardeley (1996) 14 C.4th 605, 618, 620, 59 C.R.2d 356, 927 P.2d 713, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §24, citing the text [police detective was properly allowed to testify, based on conversations with defendants and other gang members and his investigation of numerous gang crimes, as to whether conduct at issue was "gang-related activity" and whether gang in question was "criminal street gang" within meaning of Street Terrorism Enforcement and Prevention Act (P.C. 186.20 et seq.)]; Board of Trustees of Placerville Union School Dist. v. Porini (1968) 263 C.A.2d 784, 792, 70 C.R. 73; Genrich v. California (1988) 202 C.A.3d 221, 229, 248 C.R. 303; Korsak v. Atlas Hotels (1992) 2 C.A.4th 1516, 1524, 3 C.R.2d 833, quoting the text; People v. Valdez (1997) 58 C.A.4th 494, 509, 68 C.R.2d 135 [police officer was properly allowed to rely on hearsay in formulating opinions that were used to prove gang enhancement allegation; following Gardeley].)

(2) Illustrations. In Arellano v. Moreno (1973) 33 C.A.3d 877, 109 C.R. 421, plaintiff was helping his friend D push D's stalled car into the street when defendant drove on the scene and injured plaintiff. The investigating officer, basing his opinion on what D and defendant had pointed out to him, testified that the point of impact was on defendant's side of the street, i.e., defendant had not crossed over the center line. Held, the testimony was properly admitted; judgment for defendant affirmed. "[T]he location of the point of impact used by the officer was apparently agreed to by the owners of both cars involved in the accident immediately after its occurrence. It, therefore, would appear to be, at worst, reasonably reliable hearsay and, accordingly, under Evidence Code section 801, subdivision (b), a proper basis for the officer's expert opinion." (33 C.A.3d 886, citing the text.)

In Board of Trustees v. Porini, supra, plaintiff school district brought a proceeding to dismiss a teacher for mental disability. Dr. S, a psychiatrist, testified that she suffered from schizophrenia, and based his diagnosis in part on materials sent to him by the school authorities, including a tape recording and letters not introduced in evidence. The court found no California authority approving expert testimony based on information received from lay third persons, and saw dangers in declaring a blanket rule of admissibility. "A case-by-case determination italicizing the Evidence Code section 801 test of 'reasonable reliability' seems as definitive as a reviewing court should attempt to become." (263 C.A.3d 794.) (See also Board of Education v. Haas (1978) 82 C.A.3d 278, 282, 147 C.R. 88 [quoting Porini and approving admission of psychiatrist's opinion based in part on material in teacher's personnel file].)

In Genrich v. California, supra, an action by a pedestrian struck by a motorist at an allegedly hazardous intersection, plaintiff's expert testified that the intersection was in a dangerous condition because of prior accidents. In formulating his opinion, he relied in part on SWITRS, a computerized accident data retrieval system which stores data pertaining to accidents on state highways; and he testified that the SWITRS accident history from 1975 to 1985 disclosed 244 accidents. The defense objected that this testimony allowed the witness to "parade" before the jury "details" of the many accidents without the required showing of similar conditions (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §104). Held, judgment for plaintiff affirmed. The raw accident data would be inadmissible hearsay if offered for the truth of the matter asserted, but it was proper for the expert to identify the report and its contents as a basis for his opinion. (202 C.A.3d 229.) No details were given; and, while a limiting instruction on the purpose of admission of the evidence would have been proper, none was requested. (202 C.A.3d 230.)

(3) Distinction: Hearsay Contents. Although the opinion testimony may be based on hearsay, the expert may generally not testify to the content of the hearsay. (Continental Airlines v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 C.A.3d 388, 414, 264 C.R. 779.) But where the jury cannot properly evaluate the expert's opinion without considering the hearsay on which it is based, the trial judge may protect a criminal defendant's interest in avoiding the substantive use of unreliable hearsay by instructing the jury that the evidence goes only to the basis for the expert's opinion and not to its truth. (People v. Montiel (1993) 5 C.4th 877, 919, 21 C.R.2d 705, 855 P.2d 1277 [trial judge erred in failing to tie limiting instruction specifically to drug history given by defendant to prosecution drug expert (a psychiatrist) and testified to by expert as basis for opinion; but because hearsay was defendant's own judicial statement, it fell within exception for party admissions]; see 89 A.L.R.4th 456 [admissibility of expert's testimony, as to basis of opinion, concerning matters otherwise excludable as hearsay]; on rejection of unreliable hearsay, see infra, §36.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Rule. See Hanson v. Grode (1999) 76 C.A.4th 601, 608, footnote 6, 90 C.R.2d 396 [disagreeing with Kelley v. Trunk (1998) 66 C.A.4th 519, 78 C.R.2d 122, text, p. 561, to extent it "suggests that even on summary judgment, an expert's declaration must set forth in excruciating detail the factual basis of the opinions stated therein"]; People v. Killebrew (2002) 103 C.A.4th 644, 652, 126 C.R.2d 876 [distinguishing People v. Gardeley (1996) 14 C.4th 605, 59 C.R.2d 356, 927 P.2d 713, text, p. 561; in prosecution for conspiracy to possess handgun by active street gang member, trial judge erred, after expert witness testified about local gangs, in allowing expert to further testify that when one gang member possesses gun, every other member present knows of gun and will constructively possess it]; Johnson v. Superior Court (2006) 143 C.A.4th 297, 307, 49 C.R.3d 52 [in medical malpractice action arising from treatment of plaintiff for prostate cancer, summary judgment for defendants was not proper; declaration by defendants' expert witness said only that what was planned before operation and what was done at time radiation seeds were implanted were within standard of care; relying on Kelley v. Trunk]; In re Alexander L. (2007) 149 C.A.4th 605, 612, 57 C.R.3d 226 [distinguishing Gardeley, supra; gang expert's testimony lacked proper foundation, where he testified that he knew that gang in question had been involved in certain crimes, but no specifics were elicited about circumstances of these crimes, or where, when, or how expert had obtained information]; 25 California Lawyer 39 (July 2005) [uncertainties regarding proper test to apply in determining whether expert's opinion has adequate foundation]; 31 Hastings Const. L.

Q. 385 [criticizing Gardeley].

The seemingly conflicting holdings in Kelley and Hanson, both medical malpractice cases, can be reconciled. Kelley involved the sufficiency of the declaration of the defendant's expert supporting the defendant's summary judgment motion. When moving for summary judgment, the defendant bears the burden of persuasion that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that he or she is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Thus the Kelley court was considering the burden of production to make a prima facie showing of the nonexistence of any genuine issue of material fact. To meet that burden, the declaration of the defendant's expert had to be detailed and with foundation. By contrast, Hanson involved the sufficiency of the declaration of the plaintiff's expert in opposition to the defendant's summary judgment motion. In that situation, the declaration submitted by the plaintiff did not have to be detailed, was entitled to all favorable inferences, and was deemed sufficient to defeat the summary judgment motion. The overall rule is that, when considering the declarations of the parties' experts, the declarations for the plaintiff's experts must be liberally construed and any doubts as to the propriety of granting the defendant's summary judgment motion must be resolved in favor of the plaintiff. (Powell v. Kleinman (2007) 151 C.A.4th 112, 125, 126, 59 C.R.3d 618 [declarations of plaintiff's expert, although lacking reasoned explanation in some respects, raised triable issues of fact concerning breach and causation, and thus summary judgment for defendant was improper].)(2) Illustrations. See Westrec Marina Management v. Jardine Ins. Brokers Orange County (2000) 85 C.A.4th 1042, 1051, 102 C.R.2d 673 [in marina managers' action against insurance brokers alleging that brokers wrongfully impeded managers' ability to offer insurance to their clients, opinion of managers' expert regarding profits lost during period when no coverage was available was properly excluded; proof as to anticipated profits dependent on future events must be based on reliable statistical information and data to analyze market, and proffered testimony did not meet this standard]; People v. Clauser/Wells Partnership (2002) 95 C.A.4th 1066, 1085, 116 C.R.2d 240 [in eminent domain action, trial judge abused his discretion in excluding, due to insufficient evidentiary foundation, testimony of plaintiff's expert as to value of defendant's auto salvage inventory; absent any precisely prescribed method for valuing such inventory, expert's conversations with unidentified distributors and dealers provided sufficient foundation, and lack of specificity would have affected only testimony's weight]; Lockheed Litigation Cases (2004) 115 C.A.4th 558, 564, 10 C.R.3d 34 [in action against two oil companies for damages for wrongful death allegedly caused by exposure to toxic chemicals, trial judge properly excluded, as lacking reasonable basis, declaration by plaintiff's expert which was based on 1989 study that showed that painters exposed to more than 130 listed substances contracted cancer at greater rate than national average, but that did not indicate whether persons exposed to only five chemicals supplied by defendants did so]; People v. Thomas (2005) 130 C.A.4th 1202, 1210, 30 C.R.3d 582 [Crawford v. Washington (2004) 541 U.S. 36, 124 S.Ct. 1354, 158 L.Ed.2d 177, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, Supp., §21, holding that out-of-court statements that are testimonial in nature are inadmissible unless declarant is unavailable and accused has had prior opportunity to cross-examine declarant, does not undermine established rule that experts can testify to their opinions on relevant matters and relate information and sources on which they rely in forming those opinions]; People v. Hallquist (2005) 133 C.A.4th 291, 295, 34 C.R.3d 621 [in prosecution for driving under influence of alcohol, trial judge did not err in admitting testimony of highway patrol officer as to maintenance and accuracy of preliminary alcohol screening device that had been used to test defendant's blood-alcohol level, notwithstanding that officer relied on hearsay statement on label of test solution container to effect that content was .10% alcohol]; Stephen v. Ford Motor Co. (2005) 134 C.A.4th 1363, 1371, 37 C.R.3d 9 [in products liability action against vehicle manufacturer and tire manufacturer, testimony of plaintiff's tire expert was properly excluded; expert did not examine plaintiff's tire, relying instead on supposedly similar tire failures and amateur photographs taken by insurance adjuster and plaintiff's boyfriend]; Geffcken v. D'Andrea (2006) 137 C.A.4th 1298, 1311, 41 C.R.3d 80 [in action alleging that defendants caused plaintiffs to be exposed to mold mycotoxins at their residence or workplace, trial judge did not err in excluding testimony of plaintiffs' expert on ground that there was no reasonable basis for his opinion that exposure to mycotoxins had caused plaintiffs' ailments; in view of absence of reliable evidence that plaintiffs had been exposed at locations in question, expert's opinions were speculative and conjectural]; People v. Cooper (2007) 148 C.A.4th 731, 746, 56 C.R.3d 6 [in elder abuse prosecution, trial judge erred in excluding testimony of prosecution expert on ground that her opinions were based in part on testimonial interviews that were inadmissible under Crawford v. Washington; relying on People v. Thomas, supra]; People v. Ramirez (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1422, 1426, 64 C.R.3d 96 [hearsay relied on by gang expert was not testimonial within meaning of Crawford]. Correction: Page 562, last full paragraph, 10th line, "263 C.A.3d 794" should be "263 C.A.2d 794".

32 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

d. Reliable Information.

1. Statutory Rule and Qualification.

bb. Unless Precluded by Law.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 32

[§ 32] Unless Precluded by Law.

The qualification of Ev.C. 801 ("unless an expert is precluded by law from using such matter"; supra, §30) incorporates the limitations of judicial decisions as well as statutes. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 801; see In re Marriage of Hewitson (1983) 142 C.A.3d 874, 886, 191 C.R. 392 [use of "comparable company method" in determining market value of closely held stock was "precluded by law" because prior judicial decision had determined that that method was unreliable]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §4.11.)

In Spencer v. G.A. MacDonald Const. Co. (1976) 63 C.A.3d 836, 134 C.R. 78, plaintiff, employee of a subcontractor, sued defendant general contractor for injuries suffered in a fall from a scaffold. He offered expert opinions based on alleged violations of Construction Safety Orders, and sought to cross-examine defendant's expert witnesses by invoking the same violations. The trial judge ruled against him, citing Lab.C. 6304.5, which limits the application of the statutes to proceedings between employer and employee and adds that no part of the statutes "shall have any application to, nor be considered in, nor be admissible into, evidence in any personal injury or wrongful death action." (See 2 Summary (9th), Workers' Compensation, §95.) Held, the ruling was correct. Ev.C. 801(b) allows an expert to base an opinion on reliable matter even though it is not admissible in evidence (see supra, §31); but the qualification applies here. Lab.C. 6304.5 makes it clear that the evidence of the violation of safety orders is not only inadmissible but also cannot be considered. Hence, it would not have been proper for plaintiff's experts to base their opinions on the violations, and it would have been equally improper to permit cross-examination of defendant's experts on those violations. (63 C.A.3d 857, 858, 859.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

On 1999 amendments to Lab.C. 6304.5, making safety orders admissible, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §116.

Cross-Reference: 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §102.

33 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

d. Reliable Information.

2. Opinions of Doctors and Mental Health Professionals.

aa. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 33

[§ 33] In General.

The kinds of information most frequently relied on by doctors and mental health professionals in forming their opinions come within the reliable information rule. (See C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §6.25 et seq.) Under the proper circumstances, each of the following sources of information is considered reliable:

(1) Information From Others. A doctor may base an opinion on a diagnosis or examination made by another doctor. (See Christiansen v. Hollings (1941) 44 C.A.2d 332, 347, 112 P.2d 723; Hope v. Arrowhead & Puritas Waters (1959) 174 C.A.2d 222, 230, 344 P.2d 428; Kelley v. Bailey (1961) 189 C.A.2d 728, 737, 11 C.R. 448; People v. Campos (1995) 32 C.A.4th 304, 308, 38 C.R.2d 113 [psychiatrist was properly allowed to testify that she relied on other medical evaluations in forming her opinion that defendant met mentally disordered offender criteria, but other evaluations were hearsay and she should not have been allowed to reveal their contents]; 35 So. Cal. L. Rev. 194; 1 McCormick 5th, §15; 6 Am.Jur. Trials 147.)

(2) Statements by Patient. "[A] physician may take into consideration a patient's declarations as to his condition, if they are necessary to enable him in connection with his own observations to form an opinion as to the patient's past or present physical or mental condition." (People v. Wilson (1944) 25 C.2d 341, 348, 153 P.2d 720; see also People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 1155, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, infra, §58 [psychologist was entitled to base opinion on observations of, and statements made by, patient during routine psychological interview]; 35 So. Cal. L. Rev. 193 ["rule is recognized in most jurisdictions ... including California"; citing Wigmore and Wilson case, supra]; 52 Cal. L. Rev. 549 [psychiatrist's use of defendant's statements].)

(3) Study of Medical Works. Published material may also be considered in reaching an opinion. (See infra, §34.)

(4) Standardized Tests. A psychologist or psychiatrist may rely on standardized written personality tests. (See People v. Stoll, supra, 49 C.3d 1154.)

(5) Probation Report. In a mentally disordered offender proceeding (see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §638), "a qualified mental health professional may refer to and consider the underlying probation report in expressing an opinion that the prisoner is a mentally disordered offender," including the criterion or element that the underlying offense is one involving "force or violence." (People v. Miller (1994) 25 C.A.4th 913, 917, 31 C.R.2d 423, quoting the text.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Information From Others. See 1 McCormick 6th, §15.(5) Probation Report. See People v. Martin (2005) 127 C.A.4th 970, 976, 977, 26 C.R.3d 174, following People v. Miller (1994) 25 C.A.4th 913, 31 C.R.2d 423, text, p. 565; cf. People v. Dodd (2005) 133 C.A.4th 1564, 1570, 1571, 35 C.R.3d 692 [distinguishing Miller; trial judge erred in finding that statutory criteria for mentally disordered offender commitment had been proven notwithstanding that experts' diagnoses were based on parole report that defendant molested young girl; parole report did not contain factual information giving it reliability comparable to that of probation report]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.486(5); Evidence k.555.10

34 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

d. Reliable Information.

2. Opinions of Doctors and Mental Health Professionals.

bb. Reliance on Medical Works.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 34

[§ 34] Reliance on Medical Works.

The physician's testimony may be based on a study of medical texts. (See Healy v. Visalia & Tulare R. Co. (1894) 101 C. 585, 591, 36 P. 125 [answer referring to "cases on record"]; Brown v. Colm (1974) 11 C.3d 639, 644, 114 C.R. 128, 522 P.2d 688; Mann v. Cracchiolo (1985) 38 C.3d 18, 37, 210 C.R. 762, 694 P.2d 1134 [quoting Brown v. Colm, supra]; Forrest v. Fink (1925) 71 C.A. 34, 40, 234 P. 860 [answer based on statistics concerning certain types of injury]; 12 So. Cal. L. Rev. 424.)

The Healy case, supra, points out that an expert's opinion is based "not merely upon the empirical knowledge which he has gained through his own practice, but also that which he has acquired in the study of his profession, and from his intercourse with other members of the same profession. As an expert it was competent for him to give the grounds upon which he based his opinion, as well as the opinion itself, and the fact that his opinion was based upon information derived from his reading did not make it incompetent for him to so state. ... This is entirely different from reading medical or scientific books to the jury, or seeking to influence them by opinions or theories contained in such books. The witness was only asked to give his own opinion ... which must be assumed to have been a conclusion reached by him after a judicious comparison of all that he had read or learned upon the subject." (101 C. 592.)

In Brown v. Colm, supra, plaintiff called Dr. B as an expert witness to testify about the prevailing standard of care for using stainless steel sutures to repair recto-vaginal fistulas in the year 1949, 10 years before Dr. B had engaged in active medical practice. The basis of Dr. B's claimed expertise was his knowledge of the standards after 1959 and his exhaustive study of virtually all available medical literature to show that the same standards had also prevailed in 1949. Defendant's objection, that Dr. B lacked occupational experience or practical knowledge of the 1949 standards, was sustained. Held, this was error.

(a) "[W]e have been unable to find any persuasive authority relating occupational experience exclusively to the precise time of the alleged malpractice. We hold that an invariable rule which would require in all cases that an expert must have acquired a personal, working knowledge of the standard of care at the precise time when the alleged malpractice occurred would be untenable." (11 C.3d 644.)

(b) Because there was little likelihood that plaintiff could have secured an expert witness to testify to the standard of care prevailing in a similar community for a rare operation performed 23 years earlier, the pragmatic result of excluding Dr. B's testimony was to insulate defendant from responsibility for his alleged negligence. (11 C.3d 644.)

(c) Even if a doctor who practiced in 1949 would testify, medical literature, when evaluated by an expert who had acquired later practical experience, may be a more reliable guide to the 1949 standard. (11 C.3d 645.)

Cross-examination showing the reasons for the opinion and the evaluation of written material on which the expert relied are more than adequate to protect a defendant's interests. (11 C.3d 646.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Bui (2001) 86 C.A.4th 1187, 1196, 103 C.R.2d 908 [in prosecution for vehicular manslaughter resulting from driving under influence of methamphetamine, forensic toxicologist's opinion that methamphetamine use in greater than therapeutic doses causes impaired driving was properly based on scientific literature, statistical data, and epidemiological study].

35 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

d. Reliable Information.

3. Opinions by Other Experts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 35

[§ 35] Opinions by Other Experts.

Many cases illustrate reliance on reliable information by experts other than doctors. The following are examples:

(1) Valuation expert's reliance on market reports and similar data. (See Glantz v. Freedman (1929) 100 C.A. 611, 614, 280 P. 704; Hammond Lumber Co. v. Los Angeles (1930) 104 C.A. 235, 248, 285 P. 896.)

(2) Electrical engineer's reliance on rules of former Industrial Accident Commission in testifying on standard of care observed by such engineers in guarding electrical conductors. (See Young v. Bates Valve Bag Corp. (1942) 52 C.A.2d 86, 96, 125 P.2d 840.)

(3) Accident reconstruction expert's reliance on pilots' training records in concluding that accident resulted from their confusion over landing procedures. (See Buckwalter v. Airline Training Center (1982) 134 C.A.3d 547, 554, 184 C.R. 659.)

(4) Criminal justice specialist's reliance on conversations with scrap dealers in formulating opinion on whether defendant dealer used due care in ascertaining sellers' authority. (See People v. Cramblit (1978) 84 C.A.3d 437, 448, 148 C.R. 440, quoting the text.)

(5) Architect's reliance in part on a cost estimator for mathematical computations, in testimony on the cost of construction of a home. (See Appel v. Burman (1984) 159 C.A.3d 1209, 1217, 206 C.R. 259.)

(6) Plant pathologist's reliance on field tests, general experience, crop yield data, and deposition testimony, in addition to consultations with other experts, in concluding that pesticide had not caused economic burn damage to plaintiff's crop. (See Mosesian v. Pennwalt Corp. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 851, 857, 863, 867, 236 C.R. 778, citing the text.)

(7) Insurance expert's reliance on technical trade publication regarding workers' compensation insurance in an employer's action against the State Compensation Insurance Fund for bad faith and unfair business practices. (Notrica v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1999) 70 C.A.4th 911, 932, 83 C.R.2d 89, 11 Summary (9th), Equity, Supp., §95A.)

Mosesian v. Pennwalt Corp., supra, makes an obvious distinction. During the course of his direct examination, the primary expert (the plant pathologist) revealed the content of what the other experts had told him. Held, this was error (but harmless in light of the judge's admonition and other evidence). The court said: "[I]f an expert does rely in part upon the opinions of others, the expert may be cross-examined as to the content of those opinions. It is improper, however, to solicit the information on direct examination if the statements are inadmissible. ... The defendants in this action improperly solicited hearsay statements from Dr. Whaley on direct examination." (191 C.A.3d 864.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(7) Insurance expert's reliance on technical trade publication:

Cross-Reference: 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §124.

Solicitation of hearsay: See People v. Vanegas (2004) 115 C.A.4th 592, 597, 9 C.R.3d 398, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against the Person, Supp., §202 [in prosecution arising from fatal vehicular accident, trial judge properly refused to allow defense to ask its accident reconstruction expert witness about contents of report by another expert on which he relied in forming his opinion as to defendant's speed at time of accident; opinion in report was slightly more favorable to defendant than witness' own opinion, and contents of report would have been viewed by jury as proof of defendant's speed, rather than as basis for witness' opinion].

36 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

3. Opinion of Expert.

e. Unreliable Hearsay.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 36

[§ 36] Unreliable Hearsay.

Where the basis of the opinion is unreliable hearsay, the courts will reject it. (See Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. G.W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co. (1968) 69 C.2d 33, 43, 69 C.R. 561, 442 P.2d 641, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §15 [mechanical engineer; opinion that turbine repair costs were reasonable based on invoices, bills, and receipts for repair]; Luque v. McLean (1972) 8 C.3d 136, 148, 104 C.R. 443, 501 P.2d 1163, citing the text [trial judge's exclusion of magazine articles during expert's direct testimony was proper because articles were not professional technical literature to be relied on by experts]; Isaacs v. Huntington Memorial Hosp. (1985) 38 C.3d 112, 133, 211 C.R. 356, 695 P.2d 653 [trial judge erred in admitting expert's testimony as to city's crime rate, where it was based on information received from a "contact at a police department"]; Ribble v. Cook (1952) 111 C.A.2d 903, 906, 245 P.2d 593 [traffic officer's opinion as to point of impact of collision, based on what witnesses told him]; Behr v. Santa Cruz (1959) 172 C.A.2d 697, 705, 342 P.2d 987 [fire ranger's official report on cause of fire which he had not witnessed, based on statements of others]; Mason v. Mason (1960) 186 C.A.2d 209, 215, 8 C.R. 784 [court-appointed auditors: report based on out-of-court statements of escrow and loan officers]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §4.6 et seq.)

The same is true where the witness, instead of stating an opinion based on information received from other persons, recites the hearsay statements of those persons. Thus, in Frampton v. Hartzell (1960) 179 C.A.2d 771, 4 C.R. 427, plaintiff claimed that she had become insane as a result of an injury sustained in an automobile accident. Hospital doctors had held a staff meeting on her case, and she called Dr. T and asked him about the result of the meeting. He testified that it was the opinion of himself and all but one of the others that the accident was a contributing factor to her mental illness. Held, it was error to admit this over objection. (179 C.A.2d 773.)

In Furtado v. Montebello Unified School Dist. (1962) 206 C.A.2d 72, 23 C.R. 476, a personal injury action, plaintiff's doctor was asked on direct examination about a certain kind of pathology, and answered giving the details of several individual case histories which he had read in medical journals. Held, distinguishing Healy v. Visalia & Tulare R. Co. (1894) 101 C. 585, 36 P. 125, supra, §34, this was error. (206 C.A.2d 80.) (See also Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Romero (1954) 128 C.A.2d 331, 335, 336, 275 P.2d 83 [fire investigator, on stand ostensibly to give opinion as to cause of fire, recited statements made by a third person that defendant had been smoking in bed].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Pollock (2004) 32 C.4th 1153, 1172, 13 C.R.3d 34, 89 P.3d 353 [in capital murder prosecution, trial judge did not err in refusing to allow defense expert to explain how drug binge cycle he had described would apply to defendant immediately before, during, and after charged murder; opinion would necessarily be based in large part on defendant's hearsay statements to expert during interview 4 years after crime occurred].

37 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

A. In General.

4. Erroneous Exclusion of Expert Testimony.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 37

[§ 37] Erroneous Exclusion of Expert Testimony.

Exclusion of admissible expert testimony may be reversible error. (See Lunghi v. Clark Equipment Co. (1984) 153 C.A.3d 485, 490, 200 C.R. 387; Lofleidir Icelandic Airlines v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1984) 158 C.A.3d 83, 96, 204 C.R. 358; People v. Cegers (1992) 7 C.A.4th 988, 1001, 9 C.R.2d 297 [in prosecution for assault, exclusion of expert testimony relating to sleep disorders that allegedly influenced defendant's behavior required reversal, as it was reasonably probable, absent the error, that defendant would not have been found guilty]; on the test for reversible error in exclusion of evidence, see 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §439; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §549.)

In Lunghi v. Clark Equipment Co., supra, an action for wrongful death based on an alleged design defect in a machine, plaintiffs' expert testified that there was a design defect, and defendants' expert testified to the contrary. Plaintiffs also sought to introduce favorable testimony of S, an expert that defendants originally had intended to call, whose deposition had been taken by plaintiffs. The judge refused to admit this evidence (apparently on the mistaken theory that it was protected as attorney's work product). Held, this was reversible error. With the testifying experts in disagreement, the jury would have given heavy weight to the opinions favorable to plaintiffs of an expert who had been retained by defendants. (153 C.A.3d 490, 491.)

In Lofleidir Icelandic Airlines v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., supra, plaintiff commercial airline brought an action against defendant manufacturer of its plane for damages arising out of a crash. At the trial, plaintiff called M as an expert witness, and the trial judge refused to allow him to testify on the ground that he had been employed by the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) at the time the NTSB had investigated the accident, and that his testimony was therefore prohibited by statute and regulations. Held, exclusion of the testimony was reversible error. (a) The statute prohibited only the testimony of an employee; M was not a current employee. (158 C.A.3d 90, 91.) (b) The regulations precluded use of the NTSB reports concerning the cause of an accident, but did not prohibit M from testifying to facts based on his independent investigation after he had left the NTSB and had been retained by plaintiff. (158 C.A.3d 92, 93.) (c) Exclusion of M's testimony on a particular design defect deprived plaintiff of the only expert opinion it offered on that issue. (158 C.A.3d 96.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

38 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

B. Who Are Experts.

1. Expertness Relative.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 38

[§ 38] In General.

"A person is qualified to testify as an expert if he has special knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education sufficient to qualify him as an expert on the subject to which his testimony relates." (Ev.C. 720(a), superseding former C.C.P. 1870(9) in part.)

F.R. Evid., Rule 702 is similar: A witness may qualify as an expert "by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education." (See 3 Mueller & Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence 2d, §348.)

In other words, there is no rigid classification of expert and nonexpert witnesses, and experts need not necessarily be professionals. Expertness is relative to the subject, and any person who has special knowledge, skill, or experience in any occupation, trade, or craft may be qualified as an expert in his or her field. (See Estate of Toomes (1880) 54 C. 509, 514; Miller v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1973) 8 C.3d 689, 701, 106 C.R. 1, 505 P.2d 193, supra, §22 [whether witness is qualified as expert on specific topic is issue within trial judge's broad discretion]; Estate of Gore (1953) 119 C.A.2d 796, 799, 260 P.2d 859, infra, §39; People v. Smith (1956) 142 C.A.2d 287, 293, 298 P.2d 540 ["A university degree, earned by scientific pursuits ... is not indispensable"]; People v. King (1968) 266 C.A.2d 437, 443, 72 C.R. 478, citing the text; People v. Stuller (1970) 10 C.A.3d 582, 597, 89 C.R. 158 [university degree not indispensable to expertise as fingerprint technician]; Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank (1992) 5 C.A.4th 234, 274, 7 C.R.2d 101 [work in particular field is not absolute prerequisite to qualification as expert in that field]; 1 McCormick 5th, §13; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1923; 1965 A.S. 561; 1967 A.S. 112; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §55 et seq.; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §3.1 et seq.; 2 Am.Jur. Trials 293, 585; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 2.40; see also infra, §39 et seq.)

A party may be his or her own expert. In Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39 C.2d 12, 244 P.2d 395, an automobile collision case, plaintiff had been in the oil-trucking business for 8 years, previously for two oil companies and lately for himself; he showed knowledge of reasonable charges for towing and repairing tractors and trailers, and of reasonable rental value of such equipment. Held, he could testify as an expert on those items, against the objection that he was not engaged in the business of repairing or towing damaged vehicles. (39 C.2d 20.) (See also Donahue v. United Artists Corp. (1969) 2 C.A.3d 794, 803, 83 C.R. 131 [coowner of television property (scripts, story outlines, etc.), with experience in appraising such property, was competent to testify to its value]; Douglas v. Ostermeier (1991) 1 C.A.4th 729, 737, 2 C.R.2d 594 [in fraud action against auto dealership, plaintiff, a licensed real estate broker, was properly allowed to give expert opinion as to value of defendant's property, which was relevant to issue of punitive damages].)

There are a number of lists and compilations that may be consulted in selecting expert witnesses. (See 2 Am.Jur. Trials 293 [directory of scientific and technical experts]; 2 Am.Jur. Trials 357 [directory of medical experts].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Brown (2001) 96 C.A.4th Supp. 1, 37, 117 C.R.2d 738, citing the text [in domestic violence prosecution, clinical director of domestic violence intervention project was properly allowed to testify regarding battered women's syndrome, even though she did not have clinical psychology license]; CACI, No. 219 [qualifications of expert]; 1 McCormick 6th, §13. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.477 et seq.; Evidence k.535 et seq.

39 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

B. Who Are Experts.

1. Expertness Relative.

b. Qualified Professional Expert.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 39

[§ 39] Qualified Professional Expert.

In Vallejo & Northern R. Co. v. Reed Orchard Co. (1915) 169 C. 545, 147 P. 238, a civil engineer gave his opinion as to the amount of certain products that probably would be shipped over a new railroad when it was constructed. Held, this was proper. The court pointed out that it is not a person's reputation for superior sagacity, judgment, and reasoning power that makes him an expert; it is rather that his professional pursuit, peculiar skill, and knowledge in some department of science enable him to draw an inference that ordinary persons could not draw. (169 C. 570.) (See 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§560, 561.)

In Estate of Gore (1953) 119 C.A.2d 796, 260 P.2d 859, a will contest, Dr. L, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, examined decedent for a civil aeronautics license 4 days after execution of the will. The doctor's sole contact with decedent was during this single 30-minute period. The proponent asked for his opinion on whether decedent was "sane or insane," and the doctor was permitted to answer, "To me he was absolutely sane, just as sane as I am." Held, this was proper; the evidence related to matters within the knowledge and observation of every physician and surgeon. A medical certificate is given only after intensive education in a wide variety of subjects, and "[w]e think such a person, particularly in view of the years of hospital and private practice experience this doctor had, is qualified to observe a person and form and give in evidence an opinion concerning that person's sanity. He need not specialize in psychiatry to do so." (119 C.A.2d 800.)

In People v. Chavez (1985) 39 C.3d 823, 218 C.R. 49, 705 P.2d 372, defendant, charged with murder, relied on the defense of diminished capacity, brought on by drinking and smoking marijuana for 10 hours. Prosecution witness Dr. M testified over objection that a person who performed the acts ascribed to defendant (pointing gun at victim, demanding his valuables, and, after victim delivered them and tried to drive away, shooting victim in the head) would have the requisite intent to commit robbery regardless of whether he had been drinking or was drunk. On appeal, defendant challenged Dr. M's qualification as an expert on that subject. Held, the trial judge acted within his discretion in admitting the testimony, on a showing that Dr. M had extensive experience in forensic pathology, had analyzed results of many postmortem blood-alcohol tests and related them to the circumstances surrounding death, and knew of the medical literature dealing with alcohol and behavior. (39 C.3d 829.) The court, however, observed that "the matter is not entirely free from doubt," and two justices thought that Dr. M was not an expert on the issue, but that admission of his testimony was harmless error. (39 C.3d 829, 834.)

In Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank (1992) 5 C.A.4th 234, 7 C.R.2d 101, an action against a blood bank by the parents of a child who contracted AIDS from blood supplied by defendant, the trial judge allowed plaintiff's expert, a doctor, to testify as to surrogate testing and questioning of donors, even though he had never worked for a nonprofit blood bank. Held, this was proper. The witness does not have to work in a particular field in order to qualify as an expert in that field. Members of a profession are naturally reluctant to testify against each other, and "an overly strict standard of qualification could make it inordinately difficult to secure a qualified expert." (5 C.A.4th 274, citing Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 C.A.3d 1432, 286 C.R. 243, infra, §40.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

40 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

B. Who Are Experts.

1. Expertness Relative.

c. Attorney Expert on Legal Malpractice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 40

[§ 40] Attorney Expert on Legal Malpractice.

In Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 C.A.3d 1432, 286 C.R. 243, clients of a law firm alleged malpractice in the firm's failure to warn of the risks involved in a transaction, and offered expert testimony of an attorney with extensive experience in savings and loan law. Held, he was qualified under Ev.C. 720(a) (supra, §38), and it was error to disqualify him for lack of experience in the particular kind of transaction. Noting the total absence of California authority interpreting Ev.C. 720 in the context of legal malpractice, the court held that the use of medical malpractice standards is both logical and appropriate.

(a) "Members of a profession, especially those members who specialize in a particular field, such as savings and loan law, will naturally be reluctant to testify against one another. Respect for fellow specialists, understanding of the complexities of the specialty and the margin for error, and fear of retaliation are motivations which could lead any professional to refuse to take the stand against a colleague. Such motivations are not unique to physicians and it requires no stretch of the imagination to believe an attorney who specializes in a field of law would be reluctant to testify against fellow specialists in that same field." (234 C.A.3d 1439.)

(b) A broad standard of qualifications is as appropriate in the legal malpractice context as it is in the medical malpractice context. "This case serves as an example. Not every attorney who specializes in savings and loan law has the opportunity to process applications through the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. ... But many attorneys, specializing in the savings and loan field, will be familiar with the Board's standards regarding change of control from having dealt with the Board in other matters." (234 C.A.3d 1440.)

(c) Private study of a subject and contact with other professionals in the field may qualify an attorney expert just as it may qualify a physician expert. "[A]n attorney who has studied the field of savings and loan law and has contacted other professionals for additional exposure to the subject is qualified to provide expert testimony on the subject. Actually having processed one particular form may not be necessary." (234 C.A.3d 1441.)

(d) The current standard in determining qualifications of a doctor witness is a liberal one. (234 C.A.3d 1441, 1442, quoting the text.) In general, the law favors permitting experts to testify in malpractice cases if they demonstrate sufficient knowledge of the subject that their opinions will be helpful to the jury. "If a witness has passed this threshold, the question of the degree of the witness' knowledge goes to the weight of the testimony rather than to its admissibility." (234 C.A.3d 1443.) (See C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §6.24.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

41 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

B. Who Are Experts.

1. Expertness Relative.

d. Qualified Nonprofessional Experts.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 41

[§ 41] Qualified Nonprofessional Experts.

In People v. Alexander (1963) 212 C.A.2d 84, 27 C.R. 720, a condemnation suit, defendants' witness was the operator of a motel in the area who had extensively investigated locations in seeking sites for his own business. Held, it was error to reject his testimony on the highest and best use to which the land could be put. (212 C.A.2d 91.)

In Naples Restaurant v. Coberly Ford (1968) 259 C.A.2d 881, 66 C.R. 835, plaintiff sued defendant dealer for damages for fraud and breach of contract in selling him, as new, a used Thunderbird that had been stolen and repaired. Defendant's general manager testified that the car was worth more than plaintiff paid for it. Plaintiff called his expert, an automobile salesman of long experience, who had previously sold Fords but was now selling Chryslers, one series of which was competitive with the Thunderbird. The trial judge sustained objections on the ground that he was not qualified to give an opinion on the value of a Thunderbird. Held, this was error. (a) The witness had the necessary experience and capacity to understand and report. (b) As to the witness' observation and knowledge, the trial judge took too narrow a view of the class of articles on which the witness could give an opinion as an expert on value. Anyone actively engaged in the business of selling passenger automobiles is likely to have an informed opinion on the value of his own and comparable makes. (259 C.A.2d 884.)

In Hyman v. Gordon (1973) 35 C.A.3d 769, 111 C.R. 262, an explosion occurred when plaintiff knocked over a gasoline-filled can in his friend's garage and the escaping gasoline flowed near a gas-fired water heater. Alleging personal injuries, plaintiff sued the builder of the home on theories of negligence and strict liability. At the trial, the judge refused to allow plaintiff's expert, a former fireman, to testify that in his opinion the home's design constituted a fire hazard because of the water heater placement. Held, exclusion was prejudicial error. Although the witness was not a plumbing or building expert, plaintiff was not attacking the internal construction of the water heater. Because the design allegedly constituted a fire hazard, the witness should have been allowed to testify. He was "well qualified to offer what information he possessed concerning fire hazards and the properties of gasoline in relation to allegedly defective house design, subjects beyond the common knowledge of most jurors." (35 C.A.3d 774.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

42 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

B. Who Are Experts.

1. Expertness Relative.

e. Person Testifying for First Time.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 42

[§ 42] Person Testifying for First Time.

"A court should not exclude one from testifying because he has never testified before. If this were the practice of all courts, there would be no experts. On the other hand, the court should not disregard the factor entirely. When a proposed expert has not been qualified before, the court should take a closer look at his qualifications; however, primary reliance should not be placed on the fact that this will be his first time on the witness stand. To do so would deprive the court and the parties of valuable testimony of qualified experts." (McCleery v. Bakersfield (1985) 170 C.A.3d 1059, 1066, 216 C.R. 852.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

43 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

B. Who Are Experts.

1. Expertness Relative.

f. Unqualified Persons.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 43

[§ 43] Unqualified Persons.

(1) In General. People v. Chambers (1958) 162 C.A.2d 215, 328 P.2d 236, illustrates a reasonable limitation on the recognition of nonprofessional experts. Defendant's fingerprint "expert" had taken a course in criminology at a state college, but never had any practical experience in criminology or with fingerprints, and at the time of trial was a junior high school counselor. Held, he was not qualified. (162 C.A.2d 219.)

In People v. Murray (1967) 247 C.A.2d 730, 56 C.R. 21, defendant advanced the defense of involuntary intoxication, from consumption of a mixture of liquor and "goofballs." He called M, a jail inmate, to testify to the effect of such a mixture. Held, citing the text, the judge could properly reject this layperson as an expert on a subject requiring a sophisticated knowledge of pharmacology, toxicology, and psychology. (247 C.A.2d 735.)

(2) Professional Not Expert on Particular Subject. A professional may not be an expert on the particular subject to which the testimony is directed. (See Miller v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1973) 8 C.3d 689, 700, 106 C.R. 1, 505 P.2d 193 [mechanical engineer with training in hydraulics and hydrology properly held not qualified to testify about reasonable construction practices on hillside area]; People v. Hogan (1982) 31 C.3d 815, 852, 183 C.R. 817, 647 P.2d 93; Putensen v. Clay Adams (1970) 12 C.A.3d 1062, 1080, 91 C.R. 319 [surgeon was not qualified to testify to chemical composition, tensile strength, or material construction of tube that kinked during surgery and so could not testify as to alleged defect in tubing walls]; Salasguevara v. Wyeth Laboratories (1990) 222 C.A.3d 379, 386, 271 C.R. 780 [no showing that treating physician had necessary training or experience to give opinion on whether administration of DPT vaccine caused plaintiff's injuries]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §3.2.)

In People v. Hogan, supra, defendant was charged with first degree murder of a woman and her 4-year-old son, and with assault with intent to commit murder on her infant son. Kyle, a criminalist, testified as a prosecution witness on the source of the blood stains on defendant's pants and shoes at the time of his arrest. He gave the opinion that certain stains were "splatters" caused by blood flying through the air following impact rather than by mere contact with a bloody object. Held, the expert was not qualified to testify on that particular subject.

(a) He had read a book about flight patterns of blood, and had observed bloodstains at many crime scenes, and was qualified to testify that the stains were blood and about the bloodtyping of the stains. (31 C.3d 852, 853.)

(b) He was not, however, qualified to testify as an expert on whether blood was deposited by flying drops or by surface-to-surface contact: He had no formal education or training in the field, had never performed any laboratory analyses to make such determinations, and had no reference standards to study or compare with the evidence in this case. (31 C.3d 852, 853, and footnote 21.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See People v. Holloway (2004) 33 C.4th 96, 146, 14 C.R.3d 212, 91 P.3d 164 [in penalty phase of capital murder prosecution, trial judge did not abuse discretion in excluding opinion of deputy sheriff, who testified to defendant's good behavior in county jail, as to whether defendant would adjust well to life in state prison under life sentence; there was no showing that deputy had experience or other source of expertise concerning inmates' adjustment to prison life under life sentence].

44 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

B. Who Are Experts.

2. Types of Expert Witnesses.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 44

[§ 44] Types of Expert Witnesses.

The following are illustrative of the concept of expertness as relative and the rule that any person--professional or nonprofessional--with special knowledge, skill, or experience in an occupation, trade, or craft may be qualified as an expert (see supra, §38).

(1) Attorneys. (See Wright v. Williams (1975) 47 C.A.3d 802, 810, 121 C.R. 194 [in malpractice action against marine law specialist, judgment for defendant was proper where plaintiffs failed to offer expert testimony on standard of care]; Jeffer, Mangels & Butler v. Glickman (1991) 234 C.A.3d 1432, 286 C.R. 243, supra, §40.)

(2) Chemists, Physicists, and Laboratory Technicians. (See People v. Cooper (1991) 53 C.3d 771, 813, 814, 281 C.R. 90, 809 P.2d 865 [forensic serologist was expert on both electrophoretic testing of dried blood stains and on saliva secretion testing]; People v. Ashmus (1991) 54 C.3d 932, 972, 2 C.R.2d 112, 820 P.2d 214, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §15 [forensic serologist was expert on electrophoretic testing of dried semen stains]; Cloud v. Market Street Ry. Co. (1946) 74 C.A.2d 92, 99, 168 P.2d 191 [graduate chemist and toxicologist of coroner's office, on effect of particular percentages of alcohol in bloodstream on ability of person to walk]; People v. Taylor (1957) 152 C.A.2d 29, 32, 312 P.2d 731 [criminalist in police department crime laboratory, on blood test for intoxication]; Poggetto v. Owen (1960) 187 C.A.2d 128, 132, 9 C.R. 395 [physicist; expert in light refraction]; People v. Palmer (1978) 80 C.A.3d 239, 254, 145 C.R. 466 [criminalist using scanning electron microscope for gunshot residue analysis]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §§6.40, 6.48, 6.53; 70 A.L.R.2d 1029 [chemist; effect of poison on human body]; on fingerprint and ballistics experts, see infra, §§67, 68; on experts in chemical and physical tests, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §41 et seq.)

(3) Doctors. (See Sinz v. Owens (1949) 33 C.2d 749, 753, 205 P.2d 3; Huffman v. Lindquist (1951) 37 C.2d 465, 478, 234 P.2d 34; Estate of Gore (1953) 119 C.A.2d 796, 799, 260 P.2d 859; People v. Hines (1954) 128 C.A.2d 421, 423, 275 P.2d 585; People v. Rehman (1967) 253 C.A.2d 119, 162, 61 C.R. 65; Cline v. Lund (1973) 31 C.A.3d 755, 765, 107 C.R. 629; Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank (1992) 5 C.A.4th 234, 270, 273, 7 C.R.2d 101, infra, §46; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §6.25 et seq.; 9 Stanf. L. Rev. 733 [medical malpractice cases]; 16 Proof of Facts 2d 87 [time of death]; infra, §45 et seq.; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §191.)

(4) Engineers. (See Vallejo & Northern R. Co. v. Reed Orchard Co. (1915) 169 C. 545, 570, 147 P.2d 238, supra, §39 [civil engineer]; Richfield Oil Corp. v. Crawford (1952) 39 C.2d 729, 741, 249 P.2d 600 [surveyors and civil engineers, on surveying methods]; Blinkinsop v. Weber (1948) 85 C.A.2d 276, 283, 193 P.2d 96 [civil engineer, on whether steps were built in accordance with standard construction and architectural practice]; Jones v. Johnston Testers (1955) 132 C.A.2d 162, 170, 281 P.2d 602 [mechanical and industrial engineer who was safety engineer for insurance company, on danger of worn mechanism]; Varas v. Barco Mfg. Co. (1962) 205 C.A.2d 246, 253, 260, 22 C.R. 737 [chemical engineer, on escape of gasoline from machine]; Troensegaard v. Silvercrest Industries (1985) 175 C.A.3d 218, 225, 220 C.R. 712 [certified industrial hygienist, on source of unpleasant odor in mobilehome]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §6.9 et seq.; 5 Proof of Facts 732 [highway construction engineer]; 15 Proof of Facts 557 [fire protection engineer]; 33 Proof of Facts 2d 504 [mechanical engineer]; 6 Am.Jur. Trials 555.)

(5) Law Enforcement Officers. (See People v. Newman (1944) 24 C.2d 168, 174, 148 P.2d 4 [officer, familiar with racetrack gambling in locality, on bookmakers' betting markers and other memoranda]; People v. Haeussler (1953) 41 C.2d 252, 261, 260 P.2d 8 [highway patrol officer on point of impact, from inspection of skid and gouge marks and location of oil, glass, and other debris]; Kastner v. Los Angeles Metropolitan Transit Authority (1965) 63 C.2d 52, 57, 45 C.R. 129, 403 P.2d 385 [traffic officer with experience in investigating accidents, opinion on point of impact]; Wells Truckways v. Cebrian (1954) 122 C.A.2d 666, 676, 265 P.2d 557 [experienced highway patrol officer on cause of collision]; Risley v. Lenwell (1954) 129 C.A.2d 608, 631, 277 P.2d 897 [highway patrol officer on proper methods of loading truck]; People v. Smith (1956) 142 C.A.2d 287, 292, 298 P.2d 540 [officer holding position of laboratory technician for 16 years, with some university training in chemistry, could testify that brown splotches on defendant's clothing were blood, and that fibers on his clothing matched others found at scene of crime]; People v. Flynn (1958) 166 C.A.2d 501, 509, 333 P.2d 37 [officer familiar with marijuana from experience with addicts]; People v. Smith (1967) 253 C.A.2d 711, 718, 61 C.R. 557 [officer with experience in narcotics, on whether person was under influence of drugs]; People v. Cruz (1968) 260 C.A.2d 55, 59, 66 C.R. 772 [officer with practical experience and academic study of narcotics, on whether injections of heroin 8 months previously would show scars]; People v. Parks (1968) 263 C.A.2d 490, 495, 69 C.R. 368 [officer experienced with firearms, student of guns and ballistics, on ballistics]; Hart v. Wiet (1970) 4 C.A.3d 224, 228, 84 C.R. 220 [highway patrol officer on reasonable speed when road conditions were ideal and when road was wet, with snow alongside]; People v. Cramblit (1978) 84 C.A.3d 437, 447, 148 C.R. 440, citing the text; McCleery v. Bakersfield (1985) 170 C.A.3d 1059, 216 C.R. 852, infra, §74; People v. Ojeda (1990) 225 C.A.3d 404, 408, 275 C.R. 472, supra, §25 [sheriff's deputy on whether, based on administration of horizontal gaze nystagmus test, defendant was under influence of alcohol]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §6.34; 28 So. Cal. L. Rev. 420 [opinion on point of impact].)

(6) Mechanics and Other Craftspersons. (See Giraudi v. Electric Imp. Co. of San Jose (1895) 107 C. 120, 126, 40 P. 108 [electrician, on safe method of locating wires near a metallic roof]; Gaumnitz v. Indemnity Ins. Co. of North America (1934) 2 C.A.2d 134, 138, 37 P.2d 712 [auto mechanic or salesman may identify machine as truck, sedan, coupe, etc.]; Wallace v. Speier (1943) 60 C.A.2d 387, 392, 140 P.2d 900 [plumber, on frequency of inspection and life of hot water faucet assembly]; People v. Haeussler, supra, 41 C.2d 261 [speedometer mechanic, on impact breaking speedometer and fixing needle at certain point]; Warren v. Pacific Intermountain Express Co. (1960) 183 C.A.2d 155, 164, 6 C.R. 824 [garage owner]; 1946 A.S. 1168 [aviation mechanic may testify as to what part of plane structurally failed first].)

(7) Mental Health Professionals and Social Workers. (See People v. Davis (1965) 62 C.2d 791, 800, 44 C.R. 454, 402 P.2d 142 [psychologist]; People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 1153, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, infra, §58 [same]; People v. Harlan (1990) 222 C.A.3d 439, 448, 271 C.R. 653 [clinical social worker with master's degree, specialized training in treatment of sexual abuse, and extensive experience in working with sexually abused children, was expert on reactions of child molestation victims]; C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §6.29 et seq.; 1 A.L.R.4th 837 [social worker on issues of child custody].)

(8) Other Experts. (See People v. Ellis (1922) 188 C. 682, 696, 206 P. 753 ["expert shot," experienced in firearms, on course of bullet through body]; Pfingsten v. Westenhaver (1952) 39 C.2d 12, 20, 244 P.2d 395, supra, §38 [person in trucking business, on rental value of tractors and trailers]; Fonts v. Southern Pac. Co. (1916) 30 C.A. 633, 638, 159 P. 215 [drayman on method of unloading boxcar]; People v. Hopper (1956) 145 C.A.2d 180, 190, 302 P.2d 94 [licensed mortician and deputy coroner, on whether abrasions found on body were such as would have resulted from fall from a moving car]; Oakes v. Chapman (1958) 158 C.A.2d 78, 82, 322 P.2d 241 [golf professional; but held not qualified here to answer particular question]; Naples Restaurant v. Coberly Ford (1968) 259 C.A.2d 881, 884, 66 C.R. 835, supra, §41 [automobile salesman]; Hyman v. Gordon (1973) 35 C.A.3d 769, 774, 111 C.R. 262, supra, §41 [firefighter, on defective design of water heater as constituting fire hazard]; People v. Craig (1978) 86 C.A.3d 905, 916, 150 C.R. 676 [dog trainer on dog's ability to follow human trail]; People v. Malgren (1983) 139 C.A.3d 234, 238, 188 C.R. 569, infra, §77 [same]; 34 Proof of Facts 2d 547 [accountant]; 35 Proof of Facts 2d 650 [veterinarian]; 33 Proof of Facts 3d 98 [architect]; 18 A.L.R.3d 1221 [person handling bloodhound on trailing by dog]; on examiners of questioned documents, see infra, §66 and 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Documentary Evidence, §10.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Chemists, Physicists, and Laboratory Technicians. See People v. Combs (2004) 34 C.4th 821, 848, 22 C.R.3d 61, 101 P.3d 1007 [criminalist with bachelor of science degree in chemistry, with work experience in coroner's officer in serology section, on blood spatter evidence].(5) Law Enforcement Officers. See People v. Hoyos (2007) 41 C.4th 872, 909, 63 C.R.3d 1, 162 P.3d 528 [deputy sheriff who had bachelor's degree in police science and additional education in crime scene reconstruction and bloodstain patterns, and who had testified in courts throughout state on blood spatter evidence, was qualified to testify in capital murder trial on crime reconstruction using blood spatter analysis].(8) Other Experts. See Los Altos El Granada Investors v. Capitola (2006) 139 C.A.4th 629, 638, 657, 43 C.R.3d 434 [urban planner and attorney who had acted as consultant for numerous rent control jurisdictions, on what was appropriate base year for determining whether mobilehome park owner received fair return]; 24 A.L.R.6th 549 [nurses].

45 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

1. Medical Evidence.

a. Civil Cases.

1. Injury or Disability.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 45

[§ 45] Injury or Disability.

In a personal injury case, a medical expert may give an opinion on whether a certain kind of agency, means, or instrument might have produced a particular injury or disability, or on the nature and extent of an injury or disability. (See Perkins v. Sunset Tel. & Tel. Co. (1909) 155 C. 712, 715, 103 P. 190; Dow v. Oroville (1913) 22 C.A. 215, 226, 134 P. 197; Hagy v. Allied Chemical & Dye Corp. (1953) 122 C.A.2d 361, 368, 265 P.2d 86 [whether sulphuric acid fumes would aggravate a dormant cancer]; 66 A.L.R.2d 1082 [opinion evidence as to cause of disease, death, or injury]; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §211 et seq.; 6 Am.Jur. Trials 1; on pain and suffering, see 11 A.L.R.3d 1249; 5 Am.Jur. Trials 921; 6 Am.Jur. Trials 555; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §264 et seq.; on emotional distress, see Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1993) 6 C.4th 965, 997, 25 C.R.2d 550, 863 P.2d 795, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §857A [fear of cancer]; 23 Am.Jur. Trials 479.)

In Ruiz v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (1971) 15 C.A.3d 462, 93 C.R. 270, plaintiffs were cushion assemblers who suffered damage to the nerves controlling the muscles of their extremities. Defendant manufacturer denied their contention that chemicals in specially developed glue had caused toluene poisoning which resulted in the observable symptoms. Over objection, plaintiffs introduced evidence from an internist who had examined over 1,000 juvenile hall inmates for the immediate physical and psychological effects of glue sniffing, i.e., toluene poisoning. Held, this evidence was admissible.

The witness, who was the only person having done extensive research on the effects of toluene poisoning on human beings, could testify that the common possession of two symptoms--numbness and tremors of the extremities--indicated that plaintiffs, like the juveniles, suffered from toluene poisoning. Despite arguments that the conditions of inhalation were different, the witness was specifically asked about the differences in age, concentration inhaled, and duration of inhalation. He answered that the differences were not controlling and that, instead, "whether a person became sick from exposure to toluene depended primarily on that person's susceptibility to the poisoning." (15 C.A.3d 468.)

Where the issue is future disability or other consequences, the legal test is whether they are reasonably certain to occur, and the jury is instructed that the evidence must meet this test. (See Potter v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., supra, 6 C.4th 1009 [medical monitoring costs]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 14.10.1 [same].) But the testimony of a medical witness is admissible where the witness testifies to the likelihood or probability of such consequences (as distinguished from mere conjecture), even though the witness does not or cannot express an opinion as to reasonable certainty. "As a rule, the physician whose opinion is most reliable is loath to give an opinion as to what consequences will or will not follow as a result of an injury in a certain case, but at the same time willing, as here, to state the result of his own professional experience and observations in treating cases where like injuries have occurred, and as a result of that experience say that we might or might not expect like results to follow in this case." (Cordiner v. Los Angeles Traction Co. (1907) 5 C.A. 400, 404, 91 P. 436; see also Bauman v. San Francisco (1940) 42 C.A.2d 144, 164, 108 P.2d 989; Hagy v. Allied Chemical & Dye Corp., supra, 122 C.A.2d 374; 75 A.L.R.3d 9 [admissibility as affected by expression in terms of probability or possibility]; 89 A.L.R.3d 783 [evidence as to employability, on issue of disability in health and accident insurance and workers' compensation cases].)

American Jurisprudence Proof of Facts (cited herein as Proof of Facts, Proof of Facts 2d, and Proof of Facts 3d) contains an exhaustive coverage of nearly every subject of personal injury recovery, with detailed illustrations of medical testimony on the nature, cause, and extent of injuries and disabilities. The material is arranged alphabetically under topical headings descriptive of the kind of injury, and a softcover multi-volume general index provides guidance to topics in all three series.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1036. Future disability: See CACI, No. 3903B [medical monitoring costs]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.528 et seq.

46 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

1. Medical Evidence.

a. Civil Cases.

2. Disease and Professional Negligence.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 46

[§ 46] Disease and Professional Negligence.

(1) Disease. The three series of American Jurisprudence Proof of Facts (see supra, §45) cover in great detail the methods of proving the existence, nature, cause, and extent of diseases. (See also 66 A.L.R.2d 1082.)

(2) Malpractice. In a malpractice case, a qualified doctor may testify as to what type of diagnosis or treatment of an injury or illness is in accord with the prevailing standards of good medical practice in the locality. (See Sinz v. Owens (1949) 33 C.2d 749, 753, 205 P.2d 3; Moore v. Belt (1949) 34 C.2d 525, 532, 212 P.2d 509 [discussing extent to which general practitioner may testify in matter involving medical specialty]; Brown v. Colm (1974) 11 C.3d 639, 643, 644, 114 C.R. 128, 522 P.2d 688 [physician as expert on standard of care prevailing before physician was admitted to practice]; Landeros v. Flood (1976) 17 C.3d 399, 409, 131 C.R. 69, 551 P.2d 389, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §793 [expert opinion testimony required to establish standard of care for newly recognized diagnosis of battered child syndrome (see infra, §50)]; Jambazian v. Borden (1994) 25 C.A.4th 836, 849, 30 C.R.2d 768 [in informed consent case, expert opinion evidence was required to defeat defendant doctor's summary judgment motion]; 77 Harv. L. Rev. 333 [role of res ipsa loquitur (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §114 et seq.) in relieving plaintiff of expert testimony burden]; 70 Am.Jur. Trials 101 [anesthesiology]; 31 A.L.R.3d 1163 [general practitioner as expert on medical specialty]; 36 A.L.R.3d 440 [expert on local hospital standards]; 18 Proof of Facts 187 [obstetrical malpractice]; 25 Proof of Facts 333 [obstetrical malpractice: use of inhalation anesthesia]; 10 Proof of Facts 2d 282 [misdiagnosis of appendicitis]; 12 Proof of Facts 2d 634, 642 [physician's negligent failure to x-ray]; 26 Proof of Facts 2d 220 [postoperative care]; 36 Proof of Facts 2d 680, 687 [negligent injection or infusion]; 34 Proof of Facts 3d 146 [jaw surgery by dentist]; 35 Proof of Facts 3d 98 [wisdom tooth extraction]; 40 Proof of Facts 3d 96 [unnecessary hysterectomy]; 51 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [failure to diagnose diabetes]; BAJI (8th ed.), No. 6.30; infra, §86; 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §191 et seq.)

(3) Blood Bank's Negligence. Whether a blood bank took reasonable steps to avoid contamination of blood is a question involving fulfillment of a professional standard of care. Hence, expert testimony is required to establish a prima facie case of negligence. (Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank (1992) 5 C.A.4th 234, 270, 273, 7 C.R.2d 101, 6 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §§774, 968, citing Landeros case, supra.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Malpractice. See 73 Am.Jur. Trials 119 [oncology]; 75 Am.Jur. Trials 55 [diagnostic radiology]; 54 Proof of Facts

3d 1 [diagnosis and treatment of arthritis]; 55 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [malpractice by chiropractor]; 56 Proof of Facts 3d 177 [diagnosis and treatment of Parkinson's disease]; 57 Proof of Facts 3d 381 [tonsillectomy].

Landeros v. Flood:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §972.

(3) Blood Bank's Negligence. See 55 Proof of Facts 3d 89 [negligence in transfusion of blood and blood products].

Osborn v. Irwin Memorial Blood Bank:

Cross-Reference: 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1188.

47 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

1. Medical Evidence.
- b. Criminal Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 47

[§ 47] Criminal Cases.

In People v. Cole (1956) 47 C.2d 99, 301 P.2d 854, a murder case, defendant claimed that the victim had shot herself. The autopsy surgeon testified for the prosecution that, from the location and course of the bullet and the obesity of the victim, the wound was probably not self-inflicted. Recognizing the split of authority, the court followed the line of cases holding admissible expert medical testimony as to whether a wound could have been self-inflicted. (47 C.2d 103.) (See also People v. Ellis (1922) 188 C. 682, 694, 206 P. 753 [course of bullet through body]; People v. Smith (1938) 25 C.A.2d 241, 245, 77 P.2d 277 [same]; People v. Hopper (1956) 145 C.A.2d 180, 191, 302 P.2d 94 [probability that abrasions on body of deceased were received in fall from defendant's car]; People v. Mayfield (1997) 14 C.4th 668, 765, 766, 60 C.R.2d 1, 928 P.2d 485 [testimony by autopsy surgeon that fatal gunshot wound could not have been inflicted during course of struggle for weapon, as contended by murder defendant]; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §§243 et seq., 263; 3 Wharton, Crim. Evidence (14th ed.), §§577, 578; 56 A.L.R.2d 1447 [opinion evidence in homicide case as to whether death was self-inflicted]; 65 A.L.R.3d 283 [medical testimony in homicide case on cause of death]; 71 A.L.R.3d 1265 [testimony by coroner or mortician on cause of death].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

48 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 48

[§ 48] In General.

With increasing frequency, medical or mental health professionals are called on to testify regarding the characteristics typically exhibited by those who have undergone a specific type of traumatic experience--most often, rape, child molestation, or battering. The characteristics may be physical or mental or both, and the purpose for which the evidence is sought to be introduced varies. In a criminal case, it may be used by the defense, e.g., to support a homicide defendant's claim that she acted in self-defense after experiencing years of battering. (See infra, §51.) It may also be used by the prosecution to rebut a claim that the victim's behavior following the alleged crime was inconsistent with the crime having occurred. (See infra, §54.) In a libel action, the evidence may be used to explain why a woman, identified by defendant in its newsletter as a rape victim, might have withdrawn her rape accusation. (See Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 C.A.3d 1009, 271 C.R. 30, infra, §52.)

The requirement of general acceptance in the scientific community, imposed by People v. Kelly (1976) 17 C.3d 24, 130 C.R. 144, 549 P.2d 1240, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42, may be applicable depending on what tests the expert witness relies (see In re Amber B. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 682, 691, 236 C.R. 623, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §108 [dependency case; use of anatomically correct dolls was new scientific method subject to Kelly requirements) or for what purpose the syndrome evidence is offered (see People v. Bledsoe (1984) 36 C.3d 236, 251, 203 C.R. 450, 681 P.2d 291, infra, §52 [use of rape trauma syndrome to determine whether victim was in fact raped was novel application not satisfying Kelly]). (On syndrome evidence generally, see C.E.B., Expert Witness Guide 2d, §4.24 et seq.; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §195 et seq.; 1994 A.S. 581, 599 [battered child and similar syndromes]; 24 Pacific L. J. 1449 [problems raised by psychological syndrome testimony].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.474.4 et seq.

49 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

b. Credibility Exception.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 49

[§ 49] Credibility Exception.

Even where the syndrome evidence is inadmissible to prove that the incident in question occurred (see infra, §§52, 53), it may often be admitted, with proper limiting instructions, to support the victim's credibility, once that credibility is seriously attacked. (See People v. Bledsoe (1984) 36 C.3d 236, 247, 203 C.R. 450, 681 P.2d 291, infra, §52 [where defendant claims rape victim's delay in reporting rape is inconsistent with rape having occurred, "expert testimony on rape trauma syndrome may play a particularly useful role by disabusing the jury of some widely held misconceptions about rape and rape victims"]; People v. Gilbert (1992) 5 C.A.4th 1372, 1386, 7 C.R.2d 660 [expert testimony on posttraumatic syndrome affecting sexually abused children was proper where it was "fastidiously tailored to meet credibility issues defense counsel had raised"]; but see People v. Roscoe (1985) 168 C.A.3d 1093, 1100, 215 C.R. 45, infra, §53 [rehabilitation testimony by expert is limited to discussion of victims as class and "does not extend to discussion and diagnosis of the witness in the case at hand"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

50 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

c. Battered Child or Battered Woman.

1. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 50

[§ 50] In General.

In People v. Jackson (1971) 18 C.A.3d 504, 95 C.R. 919, a prosecution for child beating, the trial judge allowed a medical doctor to give his conclusions about the "battered child syndrome." The criteria the witness used included a seriously injured child under 3 years of age who had received bone injuries at different times and also suffered from soft tissue injury and subdural hematomas, who had been neglected and whose injuries were inconsistent with his supposed history. Held, the expert medical testimony was properly received. The doctor's opinion did not indicate that any particular person had done anything but showed only that a child found with these injuries had not suffered them by accidental means. "This conclusion is based upon an extensive study of the subject by medical science. The additional finding that the injuries were probably occasioned by someone who is ostensibly caring for the child is simply a conclusion based upon logic and reason. Only someone regularly 'caring' for the child has the continuing opportunity to inflict these types of injuries; an isolated contact with a vicious stranger would not result in this pattern of successive injuries stretching through several months." (18 C.A.3d 507.) (See People v. Morgan (1997) 58 C.A.4th 1210, 1213, 68 C.R.2d 772 [where victim of alleged domestic battery recanted at trial, expert testimony on battered woman syndrome was properly admitted to bolster her earlier assertions that defendant beat her]; 98 A.L.R.3d 306 [admissibility of expert testimony on battered child syndrome]; 57 A.L.R.5th 315 [use of domestic-violence syndrome evidence to assist jury in evaluating victim's testimony or behavior]; 20 Cal. Western L. Rev. 485 [battered woman syndrome]; 34 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 175 [intrafamily sexual abuse]; on use of evidence of battering as defense in criminal prosecution, see infra, §51; on distinguishable "battering parent" syndrome (concurrent characteristics typically shared by parents prone to commit child abuse), see 43 A.L.R.4th 1203.)

Expert testimony on battered woman syndrome is admissible only if it is relevant, and it is irrelevant unless there is a sufficient factual basis for a finding that the victim is a battered woman. The syndrome is a series of characteristics that appear in women who have been abused physically and psychologically over a period of time. A single violent incident, without evidence of other physical or psychological abuse, is not sufficient to establish that a woman suffers from the syndrome. (People v. Gomez (1999) 72 C.A.4th 405, 415, 417, 85 C.R.2d 101 [battered woman testimony was improperly admitted where, other than evidence of current offense, there was no evidence indicating that defendant abused or behaved violently toward victim, that defendant fit profile of batterer, or that victim and defendant were engaged in "battering" relationship].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Gadlin (2000) 78 C.A.4th 587, 593, 92 C.R.2d 890 [in prosecution arising from defendant's knife attack on girlfriend, expert testimony on battered women's syndrome was sufficiently relevant where relationship in question was "troubled," lasted 21/2 years, and included two episodes of armed assault; distinguishing People v. Gomez (1999) 72 C.A.4th 405, 85 C.R.2d 101, text, p. 584]; People v. Williams (2000) 78 C.A.4th 1118, 1129, 93 C.R.2d 356 [nothing in statute suggests batterer should "get one free episode of domestic violence before admission of evidence to explain why a victim of domestic violence may make inconsistent statements about what occurred and why such a victim may return to the perpetrator"; disagreeing with Gomez]; CAL- CRIM, No. 850 [Testimony on Intimate Partner Battering and Its Effects: Credibility of Complaining Witness].

Gomez was disapproved in People v. Brown (2004) 33 C.4th 892, 16 C.R.3d 447, 94 P.3d 574. Defendant was charged with domestic violence offenses, and the prosecutor offered testimony from an expert witness to explain that domestic violence victims often later deny or minimize the assailant's conduct. Defense counsel objected that the testimony was not admissible under Ev.C. 1107 (text, §51) because the prosecution, having offered proof of only one prior battering, had not shown that the victim was a battered woman within the meaning of the statute. The trial judge admitted the testimony, and defendant was convicted. Held, affirmed. The issue whether Ev.C. 1107 requires more than one incident of prior battering need not be addressed, as the testimony was admissible under Ev.C. 801 (text, §29), which allows the admission of expert testimony on any subject sufficiently beyond common experience that the opinion of an expert would assist the trier of fact. (33 C.4th 905.) This kind of evidence cannot be admitted to prove the occurrence of the charged crime. There must be independent evidence of domestic violence; otherwise, the expert testimony would lack foundation. Here, that foundation was supplied by the victim's testimony in court and by her earlier statement to the investigating officer. "Once there is evidence from which the trier of fact could find the charges true, evidence relating to the credibility of the witnesses becomes relevant and admissible." (33 C.4th 908.) West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.474.4(3), 474.4(4)

51 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

c. Battered Child or Battered Woman.

2. As Defense in Criminal Case.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 51

[§ 51] As Defense in Criminal Case.

(1) Evidence Code. Ev.C. 1107, added in 1991, addresses the admissibility of battered woman evidence in a criminal prosecution; its main significance is to approve the use of such evidence by a defendant to support her claim of self-defense. The statute codifies the holding in People v. Aris (1989) 215 C.A.3d 1178, 264 C.R. 167, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §70, that expert testimony regarding the battered woman syndrome is admissible to show how a particular criminal defendant's circumstances may have led to a genuine belief that serious bodily harm was imminent. (See 23 Pacific L. J. 655; on overruling of Aris case on related question whether battered woman testimony is admissible on reasonableness of defendant's belief that harm was imminent, see People v. Humphrey (1996) 13 C.4th 1073, 56 C.R.2d 142, 921 P.2d 1, infra, this section; on doctrine of imperfect self-defense in homicide or assault prosecution, see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §77; for argument that male defendants should be able to take advantage of statute as well, see 22 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 239; 70 So. Cal. L. Rev. 337; on use of battered child evidence on issue of self-defense, see 1985 A.S. 832; 22 A.L.R.5th 787; 26 Pacific L. J. 831; 16 J. Juvenile Law 91; 25 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 429.)

(a) Scope of statute. Both the defense and the prosecution may introduce expert testimony regarding the battered woman syndrome in a criminal proceeding, "including the physical, emotional, or mental effects upon the beliefs, perceptions, or behavior of victims of domestic violence, except when offered against a criminal defendant to prove the occurrence of the act or acts of abuse which form the basis of the charge." (Ev.C. 1107(a).)

(b) Legislative intent. The statute is intended as a rule of evidence only and no substantive change affecting the Penal Code is intended. (Ev.C. 1107(d).) Also, Ev.C. 1107 is not intended to preclude the admissibility of evidence of battered woman syndrome under other statutory or case law. (Stats. 1991, Chap. 812, §2.)

(c) Foundation. Expert testimony about the syndrome must be relevant and properly qualified to be admissible; however, such testimony is not to be considered a new scientific technique the reliability of which must be proven (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42). (Ev.C. 1107(b).)

(d) Definitions. "Abuse" and "domestic violence" are defined for purposes of the statute as provided in Family C. 6203, 6211 (see 11 Summary (9th), Husband and Wife, Supp., §36A). (Ev.C. 1107(c).)

(e) Relation between Ev.C. 1107 and rule prohibiting testimony as to actual mental state. "While syndrome testimony has been held admissible to explain how the defendant's asserted subjective perception of a need to defend herself 'would reasonably follow from the defendant's experience as a battered woman' ... , an expert is not permitted to testify as to the expert's opinion that the defendant actually perceived that she was in danger and needed to defend herself. ... [I]t would be a dramatic departure for the Legislature to permit use of battered women's syndrome evidence to predict the actual state of mind of a particular individual at a given moment. Given the clear conflict of such a rule with the rule set forth in Penal Code section 29, as well as the scientifically controversial nature of such an undertaking," it would be surprising for the Legislature to decide so important a public policy matter in a silent or obscure manner. "Accordingly, we conclude section 1107(a) merely codifies existing rules concerning use of battered women's syndrome testimony." (People v. Erickson (1997) 57 C.A.4th 1391, 1400, 1401, 67 C.R.2d 740 [in murder prosecution, trial judge properly excluded expert testimony that battered woman syndrome caused defendant to believe her life was in danger at time she killed victim]; on P.C. 29, see infra, §94.)

(2) Case Law. In People v. Humphrey, supra, defendant was charged with murdering the man with whom she had been living. She testified that the victim had been beating her, and that she shot him only because she believed he was going to grab the gun from her and shoot her first. To bolster her claim of self-defense, she presented expert testimony regarding the battered woman syndrome. Although to win acquittal on the basis of self-defense, defendant had to establish both her subjective belief in the need to defend herself and the objective reasonableness of that belief, the trial judge instructed the jurors that they could consider the expert testimony only on the subjective belief issue. After asking for clarification of the terms "subjectively honest and objectively unreasonable," the jury found defendant guilty of voluntary manslaughter. (13 C.4th 1081.) Held, the instruction was erroneous.

(a) By enacting Ev.C. 1107(a), the Legislature has determined that expert testimony regarding the battered woman syndrome is admissible if the proponent of the evidence establishes both its relevancy and the proper qualifications of the expert witness. Because there is no dispute as to the qualifications of defendant's witness, the question at hand is to what extent defendant established the relevancy of the witness' testimony. (13 C.4th 1082.)

(b) Evidence of the victim's behavior toward defendant was admittedly relevant on the issue of the reasonableness of her belief in the need to defend herself. Any purported distinction between this type of evidence and expert testimony as to the effects of this behavior on defendant is untenable, as far as relevancy is concerned. If, under the present circumstances, a defendant is to effectively present the situation as perceived by her and to show the reasonableness of her fear, she should have the option of giving the jury a professional explanation of the battering syndrome and its effects on the woman victim. (13 C.4th 1086, 1089, disapproving holdings to the contrary in People v. Aris, supra, and People v. Day (1992) 2 C.A.4th 405, 2 C.R.2d 916.)

(c) The expert testimony was also relevant to bolster defendant's credibility. For example, the prosecution urged the jury not to believe defendant's testimony that the victim had shot at her on the night preceding the killing, and argued that if defendant had really believed she had been shot at, she would have left the victim. The expert evidence could counter any "common sense" conclusion that if defendant had experienced so much violence at the hands of the victim, she would have left him much earlier. (13 C.4th 1087.)

(d) Not all of the expert testimony presented was relevant to both prongs of perfect self-defense. Thus, under similar circumstances, the following limiting instruction may be appropriate on request: "[I]n assessing reasonableness, the question is whether a reasonable person in the defendant's circumstances would have perceived a threat of imminent injury or death, and not whether killing the abuser was reasonable in the sense of being an understandable response to ongoing abuse; and ... therefore, in making that assessment, [you] may not consider evidence merely showing that an abused person's use of force against the abuser is understandable." (13 C.4th 1088.) Where it is the prosecution that offers the battered woman syndrome evidence, it may also be appropriate to give an instruction regarding the prohibition in Ev.C. 1107(a) against using this evidence to prove the occurrence of the act or acts of abuse forming the basis of the criminal charge. (13 C.4th 1088, footnote 5.)

(e) The jury's request for clarification suggests that the question of unreasonable self-defense was critical. "The jury likely concluded that defendant actually believed in the need to defend, but her belief was unreasonable. If so, guilt or innocence hinged on the precise issue--objective reasonableness--on which the court told the jury not to consider the battered women's syndrome evidence." Thus, there is a reasonable probability that the erroneous instruction affected the verdict adversely to defendant, and the conviction must be reversed. (13 C.4th 1089, 1090.)

A concurring justice, with whom two other justices agreed, questioned whether expert testimony on the battered woman syndrome is generally relevant on the issue of reasonableness; but she stated that, under these particular facts, it "could assist the jury in determining whether a reasonable person in defendant's situation would have perceived from the totality of the circumstances imminent peril of serious bodily injury or death." (13 C.4th 1102.) (See 32 U.S.F. L. Rev. 225 [Humphrey]; 27 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 155 [same]; 58 A.L.R.5th 749 [admissibility of battered woman syndrome evidence on issue of self-defense].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Evidence Code. Ev.C. 1107(e) was added in 2000 to give the statute a short title: "the Expert Witness Testimony on Battered Women's Experiences Section of the Evidence Code."

Ev.C. 1107(e) was amended in 2004 to change the title of the statute to the "Expert Witness Testimony on Intimate Partner Battering and Its Effects Section of the Evidence Code." In accordance with this change, the statute was amended throughout to refer to intimate partner battering and its effects, rather than battered women's syndrome. However, the change was not intended to "impact any existing decisional law regarding this section." (Ev.C. 1107(f), added in 2004.)

See CALCRIM, No. 851 [Testimony on Intimate Partner Battering and Its Effects: Offered by the Defense]; 24 J. Juvenile Law 101 [admissibility of battering evidence on mens rea of battered woman charged with failing to protect child from abuse]; 31 Pepperdine L. Rev. 709 [expressing skepticism as to whether battering problem can be reduced by means of legislation].(a) Scope of statute. That portion of Ev.C. 1107(a) quoted in the text was amended in 2000 to read: "including the nature and effect of physical, emotional, or mental abuse on the beliefs, perceptions, or behavior of victims of domestic violence, except when offered against a criminal defendant to prove the occurrence of the act or acts of abuse which form the basis of the criminal charge."

(d) Definitions. Ev.C. 1107(c) was amended in 2000 to add P.C. 242, 243(e), 262, 273.5, 273.6, 422, and 653m to those statutes providing the relevant definitions.

Cross-Reference: 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §374.(1a) (New) Penal Code. In a homicide prosecution, exclusion of evidence relating to intimate partner battering and its effect within the meaning of Ev.C. 1107, based on abuse committed on the defendant by the victim, may constitute grounds for habeas corpus relief. (P.C. 1473.5, added in 2001 and amended in 2004; see 36 McGeorge L. Rev. 905; 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Writs, Supp., §36A.)

(2) Case Law. See People v. Coffman & Marlow (2004) 34 C.4th 1, 100, 17 C.R.3d 710, 96 P.3d 30 [in capital murder prosecution of two defendants, instructions properly informed jury that it could consider evidence of battered women's syndrome in determining whether female defendant had formed mental state or specific intent required for charged offenses; additional proposed instruction was properly refused as argumentative in that it directed jury to draw inferences favorable to female defendant from specific evidence on disputed question of fact]; People v. Jaspas (2002) 98 C.A.4th 99, 109, 110, 119 C.R.2d 470 [in prosecution in which defendant was accused of fatally shooting her boyfriend, instruction based on CALJIC, No. 9.35.1, which referred to "actual and reasonable belief of defendant," had potential of misleading jury into believing it could not consider battered women's syndrome evidence on question of imperfect self-defense (see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §77); however, in light of other instructions, any error was harmless]; People v. Romero (2007) 149 C.A.4th 29, 44, 56 C.R.3d 678 [in murder prosecution in which defendant claimed self-defense, his proposed instructions on battered person's syndrome were defective, and properly rejected, as incorrectly suggesting that jury consider whether reasonable battered person was justified in killing victim; People v. Humphrey (1996) 13 C.4th 1073, 56 C.R.2d 142, 921 P.2d 1, text, p. 586, made clear that reasonable person standard applies]; on separate admissibility of expert testimony regarding battered women's syndrome under Ev.C. 801, see People v. Brown (2004) 33 C.4th 892, 16 C.R.3d 447, 94 P.3d 574, Supp., supra, §50.

52 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

d. Rape Trauma Syndrome.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 52

[§ 52] Rape Trauma Syndrome.

(1) Evidence Inadmissible. In People v. Bledsoe (1984) 36 C.3d 236, 203 C.R. 450, 681 P.2d 291, defendant was charged with the forcible rape of M, a 14-year-old girl. The prosecution introduced testimony of the victim and several friends, and also called W, a rape counselor, who had treated M after the incident. She testified at length concerning "rape trauma syndrome," "the umbrella terminology for what a rape victim experiences," and then gave her opinion that M was suffering from it. The jury found defendant guilty. Held, the testimony was erroneously admitted, but, in view of the strong case, the error was harmless.

(a) Rape trauma syndrome evidence has been admitted to rebut an inference inconsistent with the claim of rape, e.g., where there is delay in reporting the sexual assault. "[I]n such a context expert testimony on rape trauma syndrome may play a particularly useful role by disabusing the jury of some widely held misconceptions about rape and rape victims, so that it may evaluate the evidence free of the constraints of popular myths." (36 C.3d 247.)

(b) In this case, however, the evidence was introduced as a means of proving--from the alleged victim's postincident trauma--that a rape had in fact occurred. Three states have dealt with the propriety of using the testimony for such a purpose; two have found it inadmissible and one admissible. (36 C.3d 248.)

(c) The battered child syndrome cases are distinguishable. (1) They fall within the scope of decisions permitting an expert medical witness to give an opinion on the basis of the expert's deduction from the appearance of the injury itself. (36 C.3d 249, citing the text.) (2) There is, however, a fundamental difference between rape trauma syndrome and both the battered child syndrome and other methods of proof that have met the reliability standard of proof imposed on scientific evidence (see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42): "Unlike fingerprints, blood tests, lie detector tests, voiceprints or the battered child syndrome, rape trauma syndrome was not devised to determine the 'truth' or 'accuracy' of a particular past event--i.e., whether, in fact, a rape in the legal sense occurred--but rather was developed by professional rape counselors as a therapeutic tool, to help identify, predict and treat emotional problems experienced by the counselors' clients or patients." (36 C.3d 249.)

(d) "Thus, as a rule, rape counselors do not probe inconsistencies in their clients' descriptions of the facts of the incident, nor do they conduct independent investigations to determine whether other evidence corroborates or contradicts their clients' renditions. Because their function is to help their clients deal with the trauma they are experiencing, the historical accuracy of the clients' descriptions of the details of the traumatizing events is not vital to their task. To our knowledge, all of the studies that have been conducted in this field to date have analyzed data that have been gathered through this counseling process and, as far as we are aware, none of the studies has attempted independently to verify the 'truth' of the clients' recollections or to determine the legal implication of the clients' factual accounts." (36 C.3d 250.)

(e) Hence, "we conclude that expert testimony that a complaining witness suffers from rape trauma syndrome is not admissible to prove that the victim was raped." (36 C.3d 251.) This does not mean that evidence of the emotional and psychological trauma is inadmissible; here, a number of witnesses described the severe emotional distress that M exhibited after the attack, and such evidence was properly received. But lay jurors are fully competent to consider such evidence in determining whether a rape occurred; and to permit an expert to suggest that, because the complainant exhibits these symptoms she was raped, unfairly prejudices the defendant "by creating an aura of special reliability and trustworthiness." (36 C.3d 251.) (See People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 1160, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, infra, §58 [discussing Bledsoe]; 1985 A.S. 835 [same]; 39 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 251 [criticizing Bledsoe]; 49 Hastings L. J. 1511 [balancing use of rape trauma syndrome testimony with rights of accused]; 42 A.L.R.4th 879 [admissibility of rape trauma syndrome evidence in criminal trial]; 1986 A.S. 730 [same].)

(2) Evidence Admissible. In Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 C.A.3d 1009, 271 C.R. 30, a libel action was brought against a women's organization for publishing in its newsletter that plaintiff had raped Karen. The court held that rape trauma syndrome evidence was admissible to explain why Karen, as part of a settlement of her cross-complaint for assault and battery, wrote a letter of apology, acknowledging that she had neither been raped by plaintiff nor had sexual relations with him. "[W]e believe that the implication most jurors would naturally draw from the letter was that Karen was withdrawing all allegations of nonconsensual sexual activity. Given that such behavior is at odds with a claim of sexual assault and assuming that SCWAR can establish that this conduct is in fact one aspect of rape trauma syndrome, we conclude that the evidence would be admissible for this purpose." (221 C.A.3d 1026.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Evidence Admissible. See CALCRIM, No. 1192 [Testimony on Rape Trauma Syndrome]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.474.4(2)

53 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

e. Child Sexual Abuse.

1. Evidence Inadmissible.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 53

[§ 53] Evidence Inadmissible.

People v. Bledsoe (1984) 36 C.3d 236, 203 C.R. 450, 681 P.2d 291, supra, §52, recognized the propriety of psychological evidence to support the credibility of a witness who is the alleged victim of a sex crime. "[E]vidence on rape trauma syndrome" has been introduced to provide the jury with "recent findings of professional research on the subject of a victim's reaction to sexual assault." (36 C.3d 247.) In People v. Roscoe (1985) 168 C.A.3d 1093, 215 C.R. 45, the court considered the limitations on the admissibility of such evidence in the context of a prosecution for child molestation.

Defendant was charged with oral copulation and sodomy with a minor, and the victim, a 15-year-old boy, testified to numerous sexual acts. Dr. C, on the basis of many sessions with the victim, testified that tests corroborated his clinical findings that the boy was a victim of child molestation. Held, admission of this testimony was error, though not reversible in this case.

(a) The Bledsoe language suggests that the opinion testimony must be based on the literature in the field and the general professional experience of the witness, not upon an analysis and evaluation of the facts in the case being tried. "Thus, for example, a victim whose credibility is attacked for initially denying that he had been molested could be rehabilitated by expert testimony that such denials are more likely than not in molestation cases. The testimony would not be that this particular child was a victim of molestation, causing him to react in a certain way, but rather that as a class, victims of molestation typically make poor witnesses, and are reluctant to disclose or discuss the sordid episodes." (168 C.A.3d 1099.)

(b) "Credibility questions arise whenever the defendant denies the victim's story, explicitly or implicitly suggesting misrecollection or fabrication. If, in every such case, the jury could be informed that a doctor had diagnosed the complainant, based upon the specific facts in the case, as a child molest victim (or rape victim, or whatever), then the protection against misuse of psychologists' testimony erected by Bledsoe would be largely dismantled." (168 C.A.3d 1099.) The conclusion that the particular witness is credible rests on the premise that molestation had occurred, and that the defendant is guilty. (168 C.A.3d 1099.)

The court concludes that "the expert testimony authorized by Bledsoe to permit rehabilitation of a complainant's credibility is limited to discussion of victims as a class, supported by references to literature and experience (such as an expert normally relies upon) and does not extend to discussion and diagnosis of the witness in the case at hand." (168

C.A.3d 1100.)

In People v. Bowker (1988) 203 C.A.3d 385, 249 C.R. 886, the court examined the problem of admissibility of expert testimony on child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome (CSAAS) and concluded that the expert's testimony in this case exceeded the permissible limits without the necessary safeguards (although the error was held harmless).

(a) In People v. Bledsoe, supra, the court applied the requirement of general acceptance in the scientific community, imposed by People v. Kelly (1976) 17 C.3d 24, 130 C.R. 144, 549 P.2d 1240, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42, to exclude expert psychological testimony based on the "rape-trauma syndrome." (203 C.A.3d 391.) Relying on Bledsoe, many Court of Appeal decisions have held that the Kelly rule similarly precludes an expert from testifying on the basis of CSAAS that a particular victim's report of alleged abuse is credible because the victim manifests certain defined characteristics that are generally exhibited by abused children. (203 C.A.3d 391.)

(b) "The issue we must confront, therefore, is whether Dr. Murphy's testimony runs afoul of the general Bledsoe-based rule prohibiting expert reference to CSAAS for the purpose of demonstrating abuse, or whether it falls within the Bledsoe exception which permits such testimony for the limited purpose of disabusing the jury of misconceptions as to how child victims react to abuse." (203 C.A.3d 392.) The prosecution contended that the sole effect of Bledsoe as applied to CSAAS evidence is to prohibit experts from testifying that the particular victim was abused, and that the same testimony is admissible, under People v. Roscoe, supra, if the expert's remarks are confined to the class of abuse victims in general. "In our view, however, this argument misconstrues the rationale underlying Bledsoe and reads Roscoe far too broadly. The Supreme Court cannot have intended the Bledsoe exception to give with one hand what had been previously taken away by the other." (203 C.A.3d 393.)

(c) "Fundamentally, Bledsoe must be read to reject the use of CSAAS evidence as a predictor of child abuse. It is one thing to say that child abuse victims often exhibit a certain characteristic or that a particular behavior is not inconsistent with a child having been molested. It is quite another to conclude that where a child meets certain criteria, we can predict with a reasonable degree of certainty that he or she has been abused. The former may be appropriate in some circumstances, the latter clearly is not." (203 C.A.3d 393.) The impropriety is also present when the expert "gives 'general' testimony describing the components of the syndrome in such a way as to allow the jury to apply the syndrome to the facts of the case and conclude the child was sexually abused." (203 C.A.3d 393.) "In fact, there may be more danger where the application is left to the jury because the juror's education and training may not have sensitized them to the dangers of drawing predictive conclusions." (203 C.A.3d 393.)

(d) To apply the Bledsoe exception without the danger that the information will be misapplied by the jury, two limitations must be observed:

First, the evidence must be tailored to the purpose for which it is being received, and at a minimum must be targeted to a specific "myth" or "misconception" suggested by the evidence. "For instance, where a child delays a significant period of time before reporting an incident or pattern of abuse, an expert could testify that such delayed reporting is not inconsistent with the secretive environment often created by an abuser who occupies a position of trust. Where an alleged victim recants his story in whole or in part, a psychologist could testify on the basis of past research that such behavior is not an uncommon response for an abused child who is seeking to remove himself or herself from the pressure created by police investigations and subsequent court proceedings. In the typical criminal case, however, it is the People's burden to identify the myth or misconception the evidence is designed to rebut. Where there is no danger of jury confusion, there is simply no need for the expert testimony." (203 C.A.3d 394.)

Second, the jury must be instructed that the expert's testimony is not intended and should not be used to determine whether the victim's molestation claim is true. "The jurors must understand that CSAAS research approaches the issue from a perspective opposite to that of the jury. CSAAS assumes a molestation has occurred and seeks to describe and explain common reactions of children to the experience. ... The evidence is admissible solely for the purpose of showing that the victim's reactions as demonstrated by the evidence are not inconsistent with having been molested." (203 C.A.3d 394.)

(e) In this case, the evidence, introduced in the prosecution's case-in-chief, far exceeded the permissible limits of the Bledsoe exception. "Dr. Murphy's testimony accounted for nearly 70 pages of reporter's transcript and was replete with comments designed to elicit sympathy for child abuse victims and solicitations that children should be believed. Murphy in effect said regardless how inconsistent a child's accounts of abuse are, abused children give inconsistent accounts and are credible nonetheless. Moreover, the picture painted by Murphy happened to be the two children in the case. His comment, 'Why are they taking me away from my mom?' directly coincided with the fact that as a result of the investigation Tonya and Byron were removed from their mother's home and placed in foster care. He expressed how frightening it was 'for a child to come into this courtroom, and I know they have to, and tell their story.' " (203 C.A.3d 394.) Also, by delineating each stage of the CSAAS theory, "Murphy constructed a 'scientific' framework into which the jury could pigeonhole the facts of the case. Thus, even though he was precluded from using CSAAS as a predictor of child abuse, the jury was free to superimpose those children on the same theory and conclude abuse had occurred." (203 C.A.3d 394.)

A concurring justice, agreeing with affirmance of the judgment, nevertheless strongly criticized the majority's restrictions on the use of CSAAS testimony, and argued that the Bledsoe opinion should be differently interpreted. (203 C.A.3d 399, 400.) Evidence of this type has been rejected in numerous other cases. (See In re Cheryl H. (1984) 153 C.A.3d 1098, 1121, 200 C.R. 789 [psychiatrist's testimony was not admissible to show that father was perpetrator of sexual abuse]; Seering v. Department of Social Services (1987) 194 C.A.3d 298, 313, 239 C.R. 422 [admission was error, because requirements of People v. Kelly, supra, were not met]; In re Sara M. (1987) 194 C.A.3d 585, 591, 592, 239 C.R. 605 [child dependency proceeding; evidence was improperly admitted in petitioner's case-in-chief to show that molestation occurred]; People v. Bothuel (1988) 205 C.A.3d 581, 587, 252 C.R. 596 [following People v. Bowker, supra]; People v. Bergschneider (1989) 211 C.A.3d 144, 158, 259 C.R. 219 [although psychologist's testimony was somewhat overbroad under Bowker, error was harmless]; and see 22 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1130 [discussing Bowker]; 25 Proof of Facts 3d 189 [corroboration of child's sexual abuse allegations with behavioral evidence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Wells (2004) 118 C.A.4th 179, 189, 12 C.R.3d 762 [in prosecution for sexual molestation of two minors, trial judge did not err in excluding opinion of defense expert concerning usual reactions of children who have suffered trauma due to rape; testimony was not relevant to correct any common myth or misconception about behavior of molested children and amounted to little more than expert's opinion as to one victim's credibility]; 85 A.L.R.5th 595 [expert testimony on child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome in criminal case]; 87 A.L.R.5th 693 [expert testimony as to proper techniques for interviewing children].

54 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

e. Child Sexual Abuse.

2. Evidence Admissible.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 54

[§ 54] Evidence Admissible.

In People v. Gray (1986) 187 C.A.3d 213, 231 C.R. 658, a prosecution for lewd and lascivious conduct upon a child, a prosecution psychologist testified about child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome (CSAAS). The syndrome is not a diagnosis or test, but merely a description of experiences and behavioral traits common to child sexual abuse victims: specifically, secrecy, helplessness, entrapment and accommodation, delayed reporting and inconsistency, and retraction. Held, the testimony was admissible. It was not offered to prove that the victim had in fact been molested, but to rebut a defense claim that the victim's delay in reporting the alleged molestation, and her failure to disclose all incidents when she finally did inform an adult, was inconsistent with the victim's claim of molestation. (187 C.A.3d 218.) The reliability standard of People v. Kelly (1976) 17 C.3d 24, 130 C.R. 144, 549 P.2d 1240, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42, was inapplicable, because the testimony did not concern a new scientific method of proving that a molestation had occurred. (187 C.A.3d 219.)

People v. Luna (1988) 204 C.A.3d 726, 250 C.R. 878, added a new twist to the facts of People v. Gray, supra: The doctor who examined the victim, and testified concerning the nature of her injuries, was the same expert who testified on CSAAS. The trial judge imposed the following conditions on the testimony: The prosecution must first complete the doctor's testimony concerning the victim, and not return to that subject on direct examination; and it must explain to the jury that the testimony regarding the syndrome related to victims in general, rather than to this particular victim. Held, the testimony was properly admitted.

The court said: "The People should not be precluded from calling one of the foremost experts in the area to testify regarding the child abuse accommodation syndrome merely because he also examined the victim, so long as his testimony is sufficiently separated so the jury is not confused and is able to distinguish the two types of testimony. Although the trial court ordered appropriate safeguards to ensure the separation of the testimony, a further measure which could be utilized in future cases ... would be to allow the expert to testify on one subject, complete with cross-examination, and then allow the expert to testify on the other subject." (204 C.A.3d 737.)

In People v. McAlpin (1991) 53 C.3d 1289, 283 C.R. 382, 812 P.2d 563, defendant was charged with molesting the 9-year-old daughter of a woman he was dating. He was arrested after the victim reported the incident to authorities at her school, who notified police; her mother never reported the molestation. At trial, a prosecution expert on child molestation investigations testified that it was not unusual for a parent to refrain from reporting a known molestation of his or her child. Held, this testimony was properly admitted.

The defense sought on cross-examination to impeach the credibility of the victim's mother, who was called by the prosecution to corroborate the victim's testimony that the molestation had occurred. The defense strongly implied that the mother's behavior in engaging in sexual intercourse with defendant after the incident, and in failing to report the offense, was inconsistent with that of a mother who believed her daughter had been molested. As with expert testimony on rape trauma syndrome (see supra, §52) and on child molestation (People v. Gray, supra), expert testimony here was admissible, not to prove that the offense occurred, but to rehabilitate the mother's credibility by suggesting other reasons for her conduct: a sense of shame or failure as a parent, or a psychological refusal to accept that the molestation had occurred. (53 C.3d 1300, citing People v. Bledsoe (1984) 36 C.3d 236, 203 C.R. 450, 681 P.2d 291, supra, §52.)

The rationale of People v. Gray, supra, has been applied in numerous subsequent cases. (See People v. Sanchez (1989) 208 C.A.3d 721, 733, 256 C.R. 446 [CSAAS testimony to dispel misconceptions was appropriate during prosecution's case-in-chief after cross-examination of victim presented credibility issue]; People v. Stark (1989) 213 C.A.3d 107, 115, 261 C.R. 479 [evidence was admissible to rehabilitate victim's testimony]; People v. Harlan (1990) 222 C.A.3d 439, 449, 271 C.R. 653 [prosecutor explicitly identified misconceptions about victims' behavior, i.e., delayed disclosure and inconsistent statements, that expert's testimony was intended to rebut]; People v. Gilbert (1992) 5 C.A.4th 1372, 1383, 1384, 7 C.R.2d 660 [prosecution's predicate for expert's testimony was "defense counsel's vigorous credibility-oriented cross-examination" of victims]; People v. Patino (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1737, 1745, 1747, 32 C.R.2d 345 [CSAAS evidence was properly admitted even though introduced as part of prosecution's case-in-chief, because victim's credibility was at issue; admission did not violate defendant's confrontation or cross-examination rights]; and see 17 Pacific L. J. 1361 [admissibility of CSAAS evidence]; 20 Pepperdine L. Rev. 317 [McAlpin]; 25 Proof of Facts 3d 189 [corroboration of child's sexual abuse allegations with behavioral evidence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See In re S.C. (2006) 138 C.A.4th 396, 418, 41 C.R.3d 453 [in dependency proceeding, trial judge did not err in admitting expert testimony on child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome; evidence was admissible and relevant because at one point minor had briefly recanted her complaint of being sexually abused by her stepfather].

55 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

2. Syndrome Evidence.

e. Child Sexual Abuse.

3. Sua Sponte Instruction.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 55

[§ 55] Sua Sponte Instruction.

In People v. Housley (1992) 6 C.A.4th 947, 8 C.R.2d 431, the court pointed out that testimony regarding child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome (CSAAS) may be "unusually susceptible of being misunderstood and misapplied by a jury, perhaps because the expert commonly is asked to offer an opinion on whether the victim's behavior was typical of abuse victims, an issue closely related to the ultimate question of whether abuse actually occurred. ... Such testimony, especially from one recognized as an expert in the field of child abuse, easily could be misconstrued by the jury as corroboration for the victim's claims; where the case boils down to the victim's word against the word of the accused, such evidence could unfairly tip the balance in favor of the prosecution." (6 C.A.4th 958.) An instruction similar to that described in People v. Bowker (1988) 203 C.A.3d 385, 394, 249 C.R. 886, supra, §53, "would clearly define the proper use of such evidence and would prevent the jury from accepting the expert testimony as proof of the molestation. Furthermore, requiring such an instruction would avoid potentially erroneous convictions occasioned by counsel's inadvertent or incompetent failure to request a limiting admonition. Finally, there is no point in requiring that jurors be instructed concerning the proper weight to be accorded expert testimony (Pen. Code, §1127b) when they are not advised of the proper use of this testimony." (6 C.A.4th 958.)

"We thus conclude that because of the potential for misuse of CSAAS evidence, and the potential for great prejudice to the defendant in the event such evidence is misused, it is appropriate to impose upon the courts a duty to render a sua sponte instruction limiting the use of such evidence. Accordingly, in all cases in which an expert is called to testify regarding CSAAS we hold the jury must sua sponte be instructed that (1) such evidence is admissible solely for the purpose of showing the victim's reactions as demonstrated by the evidence are not inconsistent with having been molested; and (2) the expert's testimony is not intended and should not be used to determine whether the victim's molestation claim is true." (6 C.A.4th 958, 959.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See CALCRIM, No. 1193 [Testimony on Child Sexual Abuse Accommodation Syndrome].

56 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

3. Mental Condition.

a. Civil Cases.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 56

[§ 56] Civil Cases.

(1) Wills: Testamentary Capacity. Medical evidence on the issue of insanity or incompetency is frequently used in probate proceedings in which the competency of the testator is challenged. (See Estate of Blake (1902) 136 C. 306, 308, 68 P. 827; Estate of Gore (1953) 119 C.A.2d 796, 799, 260 P.2d 859, supra, §39; Estate of Clegg (1978) 87 C.A.3d 594, 601, 151 C.R. 158 [testator's physician opined that, due to senile dementia, testator lacked testamentary capacity]; 18 Stanf. L. Rev. 1139; 66 Harv. L. Rev. 1116 [psychiatric assistance in determination of testamentary capacity]; 40 Proof of Facts 2d 339 [lack of testamentary capacity because of insane delusion]; 38 Proof of Facts 3d 227 [mentally retarded testator]; 78 A.L.R.2d 919 [qualification of psychologist to testify as to mental condition or competency]; 12 Summary (9th), Wills and Probate, §178 et seq.; on whether handwriting expert can give opinion on insanity, based on examination of testator's writing, see 10 So. Cal. L. Rev. 96.)

(2) Contractual Capacity. A psychiatrist may also give an opinion as to the capacity of a patient to enter into a contract. (See Mills v. Kopf (1963) 216 C.A.2d 780, 784, 31 C.R. 80, infra, §87; 1 Summary (9th), Contracts, §358 et seq.)

(3) Dependency or Family Law Proceedings. Family C. 7827(c) provides that the testimony of two experts is required in a proceeding to free a child from parental custody and control on the ground of the parent's mental disability. (See 10 Summary (9th), Parent and Child, Supp., §448P; 24 Pacific L. J. 1465 [use of mental health experts in child dependency proceedings].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Wills: Testamentary Capacity. See 62 Proof of Facts 3d 197 [proof of incompetency; superseding 40 Proof of Facts 2d 339, text, p. 596].

Cross-Reference: 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate, §121 et seq.

(2) Contractual Capacity.

Cross-Reference: 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §52 et seq. (3) Dependency or Family Law Proceedings.

Cross-Reference: 10 Summary (10th), Parent and Child, §324. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.510

57 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

3. Mental Condition.

b. Criminal Cases.

1. Subjects of Psychiatric Testimony.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 57

[§ 57] Subjects of Psychiatric Testimony.

Doctors specializing in psychiatry are called upon to give opinions on a number of issues:

(1) Sanity of defendant. (See P.C. 1027; People v. Drew (1978) 22 C.3d 333, 341, 149 C.R. 275, 583 P.2d 1318 [discussion of psychiatric theories on insanity in connection with rejection of M'Naghten rule of insanity; on reinstatement of M'Naghten test by Proposition 8, see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §14]; People v. Smithey (1999) 20 C.4th 936, 965, 86 C.R.2d 243, 978 P.2d 1171 [in capital murder trial, after defense experts testified as to defendant's amphetamine psychosis syndrome and amnesia, trial judge properly allowed rebuttal testimony from psychiatrist who opined that forensic psychiatry is unreliable; rebuttal did not deny defendant right to present psychiatric defense but merely went to weight to be given defense experts' opinions]; 52 Cal. L. Rev. 543; 62 Cal. L. Rev. 693 [psychiatric experts: "Flipping Coins in the Courtroom"]; 73 Cal. L. Rev. 411 ["Legal and Psychiatric Concepts and the Use of Psychiatric Evidence in Criminal Trials"]; 24 Pacific L. J. No. 3 [Colloquium: Psychology and the Law]; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §176 et seq.; 41 Proof of Facts 2d 615 [proving defendant insane at time of offense]; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Defenses, §7 [insanity defense]; 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §669 [insanity trial]; infra, §87.)

(2) Other mental state of defendant. (See People v. Gorshen (1959) 51 C.2d 716, 722, 336 P.2d 492, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against the Person, §169 [malice aforethought in murder]; People v. Steele (1965) 237 C.A.2d 182, 187, 46 C.R. 704 [malice aforethought and premeditation in murder]; People v. Hayes (1985) 172 C.A.3d 517, 521, 218 C.R. 362 [same]; People v. McCowan (1986) 182 C.A.3d 1, 13, 14, 227 C.R. 23, infra, §94; People v. Vu (1991) 227 C.A.3d 810, 813, 278 C.R. 153 [effects of defendant's stress and expectancy on his belief in need for self-defense]; 16 A.L.R.4th 666 [specific intent]; 42 A.L.R.4th 937 [defendant's propensity toward sexual deviation]; 70 A.L.R.5th 491 [defendant's susceptibility to inducement for purpose of establishing entrapment]; 5 Proof of Facts 2d 189 [intoxication and specific intent]; infra, §87; on P.C. 29, which prohibits expert who is testifying as to defendant's mental illness from testifying as to whether defendant had required mental state, see infra, §94; see also F.R. Evid., Rule 704(b), infra, §90.)

(3) Future dangerousness of defendant. In People v. Murtishaw (1981) 29 C.3d 733, 175 C.R. 738, 631 P.2d 446, the court held that, in the penalty phase of a capital case, it was reversible error to permit testimony forecasting that the defendant would commit violent and possibly homicidal acts in prison. (29 C.3d 767.) The opinion discussed and took judicial notice of studies and commentaries showing the unreliability of attempts to predict dangerous behavior. (29 C.3d 768 et seq.) The court pointed out, however, that in a number of cases, such testimony has been admitted where the trier of fact is required by statute to determine whether a person is "dangerous." (29 C.3d 772.) And an additional qualification was set forth:

"We acknowledge that despite the recognized general unreliability of psychiatric predictions concerning future violence, it may be possible for a party in a particular case to show that a reliable prediction is possible. A more reliable forecast, for example, might be possible if the psychiatrist had established a close, long-term relationship with defendant that gives him a greater understanding of defendant's behavior than can usually be attained in brief, often adversary, pretrial interviews. A reliable prediction might also be conceivable if the defendant had exhibited a long-continued pattern of criminal violence such that any knowledgeable psychiatrist would anticipate future violence. Thus, we do not adopt an absolute rule barring such predictions at the penalty phase of a capital trial." (29 C.3d 774.)

The dissenting justice in Murtishaw pointed to a number of cases holding that possible dangerousness or potential for future violence is admissible whenever such a condition is relevant to the issues. (29 C.3d 778.) And he cited Jurek v. Texas (1976) 428 U.S. 262, 96 S.Ct. 2950, 49 L.Ed.2d 929, which upheld the admission of such testimony by nonexpert witnesses. (29 C.3d 777.) (On admissibility of nonexpert evidence as to future dangerousness, see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §479.)

In Barefoot v. Estelle (1983) 463 U.S. 880, 103 S.Ct. 3383, 77 L.Ed.2d 1090, the Court, citing Jurek, said: "If the jury may make up its mind about future dangerousness unaided by psychiatric testimony, jurors should not be barred from hearing the view of the State's psychiatrists along with opposing views of the defendant's doctors." (103 S.Ct. 3397, 77 L.Ed.2d 1107.)

In a proceeding to commit a defendant as a sexually violent predator, two mental health experts must evaluate the defendant in order to determine the likelihood that he or she will reoffend. Their testimony is admissible, and is not subject to the requirement that a scientific method or technique have gained general acceptance in the scientific community. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §43.) That requirement "applies to cases involving novel devices or processes, not to expert medical testimony, such as a psychiatrist's prediction of future dangerousness or a diagnosis of mental illness." (People v. Ward (1999) 71 C.A.4th 368, 373, 83 C.R.2d 828, distinguishing People v. Bledsoe (1984) 36 C.3d 236, 203 C.R. 450, 681 P.2d 291, supra, §52, which involved the use of testimony regarding rape trauma syndrome to prove that the rape actually occurred.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Other mental state of defendant. See 82 A.L.R.5th 591 [reliability of mentally defective accused's confession]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.474

58 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

3. Mental Condition.

b. Criminal Cases.

2. Opinion of Psychologist.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 58

[§ 58] Opinion of Psychologist.

(1) In General. Earlier cases were uncertain on whether a properly qualified psychologist, without a medical degree, could offer an expert opinion on a defendant's mental condition. (See People v. Davis (1965) 62 C.2d 791, 800, 44 C.R. 454, 402 P.2d 142; People v. Spigno (1957) 156 C.A.2d 279, 288, 319 P.2d 458; 78 A.L.R.2d 919.) In People v. Davis, a murder prosecution in which the defense theory was that "a temporary functional psychosis" rendered defendant incapable of premeditation, the trial judge rejected defendant's witness, a psychologist, on the ground that only a medical doctor was qualified to testify on the issue. The judgment was reversed, but for guidance of the parties on retrial, the court declared that W was qualified, and that the trial judge's ruling was error: "The alleged disability did not involve a matter of mental illness completely within the realm of a physician. A functional disorder is by definition nonorganic and without a biological cause." (62 C.2d 801.)

The necessity of qualifying the particular witness still remains: "Many practicing psychologists are not concerned with problems of abnormal psychology and are not familiar with the clinical branch of their field. A certain level of training and experience is also necessary; one with only an undergraduate interest in psychology who has since pursued other fields would certainly not be qualified to give an expert opinion. ... Moreover, not all questions relating to legal sanity can be answered by a psychologist. ... The interpretation of an electroencephalogram or the physiological effect of drugs, for example, may be beyond the ken of a psychologist without medical training. Whether a psychologist qualifies as an expert on sanity in a particular case depends on the facts of that case, the questions propounded to the witness, and his peculiar qualifications." (62 C.2d 801.) (See also People v. Pennington (1967) 66 C.2d 508, 519, 58 C.R. 374, 426 P.2d 942 [certified psychologist on staff of state hospital qualified; Davis case followed]; People v. Turner (1994) 8 C.4th 137, 195, 32 C.R.2d 762, 878 P.2d 521, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §50 [proposed testimony of psychologist that defendant was "follower" and thus less likely than companion to be actual killer was properly excluded as irrelevant and more prejudicial than probative]; on testimony of psychologist as to eyewitness identification issues, see infra, §72.)

(2) Penal Code: Opinion as to Sanity. P.C. 1027, as amended in 1978, permits appointment of a psychologist to examine a defendant who pleads insanity; but he or she must be licensed and have "a doctoral degree in psychology and at least 5 years of postgraduate experience in the diagnosis and treatment of emotional and mental disorders." (See 10 Pacific L. J. 101.)

(3) Applicability of Kelly Rule. In People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, defendant

Grafton was one of several defendants charged with committing lewd and lascivious acts upon children. She sought to introduce a psychologist's testimony that, based on an interview with her and his professional interpretation of standardized written personality tests she self-administered at his direction--the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory (MMPI), and the Millon Clinical Multiaxial Inventory (MCMI)--she displayed no signs of "deviance" or "abnormality." The trial judge excluded the testimony as failing to meet the requirement of People v. Kelly (1976) 17 C.3d 24, 130 C.R. 144, 549 P.2d 1240, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42, that the technique at issue have gained general acceptance in the scientific community. Held, conviction reversed.

(a) The proffered testimony is relevant character evidence, bearing on the defense claim that the charged acts did not occur. Ev.C. 1102, which codified the rule of People v. Jones (1954) 42 C.2d 219, 266 P.2d 38 (see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §55), allows an accused to present expert opinion testimony of this kind to indicate a nondisposition to commit the charged sex offense. (49 C.3d 1153.)

(b) The evidence meets the requirement of Ev.C. 801(a) (see supra, §29) that an opinion assist the jury. Without the psychologist's testimony the jury would be unaware of personality traits that are inconsistent with the homosexual, incestuous, and group-sex acts with which defendant was charged. (49 C.3d 1153, 1154.)

(c) The fact that the psychologist's testimony was based in part on standardized written personality tests and an interview does not violate the requirement of Ev.C. 801(b) that an expert's opinion be based on reliable information. (See supra, §30 et seq.) "No precise legal rules dictate the proper basis for an expert's journey into a patient's mind to make judgments about his behavior. In effect, however, California courts have deferred to a qualified expert's decision to rely on 'standardized' psychological tests such as the MMPI to reach an opinion on mental state at the time acts were committed. ... Such deference is no less appropriate here. Indeed, voir dire testimony indicated that qualified professionals routinely use raw material from the MMPI and MCMI as a basis for assessing personality, and drawing behavioral conclusions therefrom." (49 C.3d 1154.)

(d) The testimony is not subject to the Kelly rule for the admissibility of "new scientific techniques." (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42 et seq.) It raises none of the concerns addressed by that rule; the methods employed are not new to psychology or the law and carry no misleading aura of scientific infallibility; and, analogous defense expert opinion has been routinely admitted by California courts with no suggestion that Kelly applies. (49 C.3d 1157.) "[N]o reasonable juror would mistake an expert's reliance on standardized tests as a source of infallible 'truth' on issues of personality, predisposition, or criminal guilt." (49 C.3d 1159.) More importantly, the standardized tests are obviously a springboard for a more normative and subjective diagnostic process that is "a learned professional art, rather than the purported exact 'science' with which Kelly/Frye is concerned." (49 C.3d 1159.)

Two justices joined in a strong dissent, arguing that the standardized tests should be subjected to the Kelly rule and expressing concern about the potential consequences of the majority's holding: "I foresee complicated and time consuming 'mini-trials' devoted not to the factual issue of guilt or innocence of the accused, but focusing instead on his 'personality profile' and its correlation with the profile displayed by the average child molester, robber, arsonist, or whomever." (49 C.3d 1169.) (See also People v. Rowland (1992) 4 C.4th 238, 266, 14 C.R.2d 377, 841 P.2d 897 ["In People v. Stoll ... , we broadly held that 'absent some special feature which effectively blindsides the jury, expert opinion testimony is not subject to Kelly/Frye.'"]; People v. Ruiz (1990) 222 C.A.3d 1241, 1245, 272 C.R. 368 [under Stoll case, supra, expert could opine that defendant did not fit profile of pedophile, if it was first established that scientific community had developed such a profile]; People v. Cegers (1992) 7 C.A.4th 988, 999, 9 C.R.2d 297 [psychologist's testimony as to defendant's sleep disorders should not have been excluded; it was "simply the testimony of an expert who had examined a subject and whose diagnosis might have been helpful in determining the mental state of the subject"]; 17 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1124 [Stoll]; 33 U.S.F. L. Rev. 379 [same]; but see People v. Parnell (1993) 16 C.A.4th 862, 869, 870, 20 C.R.2d 302 [where psychologist had viewed videotapes of defendant making statements under hypnosis to another psychotherapist, he could testify about posttraumatic stress disorder generally, but not to defendant's mental state based on hypnotized statements, because there was no showing that this use of hypnotized statements had gained scientific acceptance].)

(4) Credibility of Victim-Witness. In a prosecution for sexual offenses against a mentally retarded victim, a psychologist's testimony on the victim's mental condition may be introduced in the prosecution's case-in-chief in order to support the victim's credibility. Although the normal use of such testimony would be for rehabilitation, the prosecution does not have to wait to see if the defense will try to capitalize on the victim's "halting responses and inconsistencies." (People v. Herring (1993) 20 C.A.4th 1066, 1072, 1073, 25 C.R.2d 213, 5 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Criminal Trial, §571; see also People v. Stark (1989) 213 C.A.3d 107, 114, 261 C.R. 479 [in prosecution for forcible sexual contact with child, psychologist could testify as to victim's learning disability, which affected his ability to put events in chronological order, as this would assist jury in assessing victim's testimony]; 28 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1345 [testimony on repressed memory in child sexual abuse case].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 72 A.L.R.5th 529 [testimony of nonmedical psychologist as to mental condition or competency].(3) Applicability of Kelly Rule. See People v. Therrian (2003) 113 C.A.4th 609, 615, 6 C.R.3d 415 [opinions of psychologist and psychiatrist in sexually violent predator proceeding as to whether defendant was likely to engage in predatory and sexually violent criminal behavior in future were not subject to Kelly test, even though they relied in part on Static-99 test; following People v. Stoll (1989) 49 C.3d 1136, 265 C.R. 111, 783 P.2d 698, text, p. 600]; 34 Golden Gate L. Rev. 349 [use of MMPI-2 test in murder trials].

59 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

4. Automobile Accidents.

a. In General.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 59

[§ 59] In General.

Highway patrol officers, garage owners, automobile mechanics, and others with similar special experience may testify on various matters at issue in automobile accident cases. (Visueta v. General Motors Corp. (1991) 234 C.A.3d 1609, 1616, 286 C.R. 402, quoting the text.) The following are illustrations:

(1) Point of impact. (See People v. Haeussler (1953) 41 C.2d 252, 261, 260 P.2d 8 [speedometer mechanic on impact breaking needle]; Kastner v. Los Angeles Metropolitan Transit Authority (1965) 63 C.2d 52, 57, 45 C.R. 129, 403 P.2d 385; Zelayeta v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1951) 104 C.A.2d 716, 727, 232 P.2d 572; Wells Truckways v. Cebrian (1954) 122 C.A.2d 666, 674, 265 P.2d 557; 66 A.L.R.2d 1048; supra, §44.)

(2) Speed from skid marks. In Linde v. Emmick (1936) 16 C.A.2d 676, 61 P.2d 338, the court raised, though it did not expressly decide, the point of admissibility of expert opinion on speed, from skid marks. Two experts were permitted to testify that, if a car of the type involved, similarly equipped and occupied, skidded on dry, level concrete pavement for 150 feet after application of the brakes, its speed was 65 or 75 miles per hour. The court pointed out that the weight of authority allows such opinions, but held the particular hypothetical question erroneous in its assumed facts. (16 C.A.2d 685.) (See Jobe v. Harold Livestock Com. Co. (1952) 113 C.A.2d 269, 272, 247 P.2d 951 [brief statement upholding admissibility]; Ungefug v. D'Ambrosia (1967) 250 C.A.2d 61, 65, 58 C.R. 223 [testimony based on chart objectionable where special conditions not taken into account]; 23 A.L.R.2d 141; 29 A.L.R.3d 248 [expert and nonexpert testimony].)

(3) Fraudulent staging of accident. (See People v. Singh (1995) 37 C.A.4th 1343, 1377, 44 C.R.2d 644 [three police officers were qualified to testify, even though two of them did not personally investigate accidents in question].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) (New) Seat belt use. See Lara v. Nevitt (2004) 123 C.A.4th 454, 459, 460, 19 C.R.3d 865 [in personal injury action arising from accident in which plaintiff, passenger in truck, was thrown from sleeping berth after truck was hit by defendant's car, trial judge did not err in allowing orthopedic surgeon to testify that plaintiff would have been less likely to have been injured if he had used passenger restraint system, but no expert testimony was required as to degree of aggravation of injuries caused by failure to use system]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.514 et seq.

60 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

4. Automobile Accidents.

b. Reconstruction of Accident.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 60

[§ 60] Reconstruction of Accident.

A garage owner, with experience handling wrecks and repairs, may give an opinion as to the probable cause of a collision. Thus, after an examination of a truck and another car on the highway where he was called for a tow, a garage owner was allowed to testify as to whether it was possible for the collision to have occurred by the kind of blow asserted by plaintiffs. (Warren v. Pacific Intermountain Express Co. (1960) 183 C.A.2d 155, 165, 6 C.R. 824, citing the text.) And a brake expert may testify to the improper adjustment of brakes, based on the length and nature of skid marks. (Vedder v. Bireley (1928) 92 C.A. 52, 57, 267 P. 724.) (See also Hughes v. Kilgore (1965) 233 C.A.2d 541, 542, 43 C.R. 820 [angle of car at time of impact]; 3 Proof of Facts 14 [brakes]; 22 Proof of Facts 2d 214, 220 [police officer's testimony as to whether headlights were in operation or defective]; 9 Proof of Facts 3d 115 [accident reconstruction].)

Expert evidence is sometimes rejected in automobile accident cases where the circumstances involve too many varying and uncertain factors to warrant any opinion. (See Fishman v. Silva (1931) 116 C.A. 1, 8, 2 P.2d 473 [testimony of garage mechanic who regularly towed wrecks off the highway, as to probable course of colliding cars after impact]; Johnston v. Peairs (1931) 117 C.A. 208, 213, 3 P.2d 617 [testimony of automobile mechanic, based upon observation after accident, as to manner in which it occurred, relative speed of the cars, etc.]; Rudat v. Carithers (1934) 137 C.A. 92, 93, 30 P.2d 435 [hypothetical question to "alleged physicist" on nature and effect of forces at moment of collision of cars].) In Burch v. Valley Motor Lines (1947) 78 C.A.2d 834, 179 P.2d 47, the Fishman, Johnston, Rudat and similar cases were classified as unsuccessful attempts "to reconstruct what had happened, by persons who were not eyewitnesses and with nothing on which to base their opinions but the position of the cars after they had come to rest." (78 C.A.2d 844.)

In Box v. California Date Growers Assn. (1976) 57 C.A.3d 266, 129 C.R. 146, plaintiff's accident reconstruction expert was permitted to testify as to the path and trajectory of plaintiff's motorcycle after impact with defendant's truck. Held, admission of the testimony was proper.

(a) Johnston v. Peairs, supra, and Fishman v. Silva, supra, held that the probable course a vehicle follows after impact is not a proper subject for expert opinion. However, the purported experts in those cases were a garage mechanic and a tow-truck operator, and it is unlikely that those witnesses would be permitted to render an opinion on the same question today. By contrast, plaintiff's expert was highly qualified. (57 C.A.3d 274.)

(b) "The object of accident reconstruction is to reach satisfactory--not infallible--conclusions as to the operational factors and dynamic situation contributing to the collision. It is as impossible to reconstruct an accident with absolute accuracy as for a witness to relate precisely what occurred. Nevertheless, expert reconstruction often is more accurate than statements of witnesses." (57 C.A.3d 274.)

(c) Although indefinite factors may enter into the determination of a vehicle's course after impact, they affect the weight, not admissibility, of an expert's opinion if a proper foundation has been laid. Here, the expert based his opinion on a sufficient consideration of the following factors: the distance traveled by the motorcycle after the collision; the point of rest of the plaintiff's body; the type of damage to the left front fender of the pickup truck; an examination of the same make and model of motorcycle; and an inspection of the accident scene. (57 C.A.3d 275.) (See also Williams v. Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft (1986) 180 C.A.3d 1244, 1263, 1264, 226 C.R. 306 [mechanical engineer with experience in accident reconstruction was properly allowed to testify as to movement of allegedly defective steering mechanism in relation to plaintiff's body].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

61 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

5. Mechanical Condition, Defect, or Similar Cause.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 61

[§ 61] Mechanical Condition, Defect, or Similar Cause.

(1) In General. An engineer or other competent person may give an opinion as to the cause of the breaking of a structure or mechanical device, or as to the defective condition of machines or appliances. (See Burch v. Valley Motor Lines (1947) 78 C.A.2d 834, 840, 179 P.2d 47, infra, §92 [extensive review of authorities]; Dyas v. Southern Pac. Co. (1903) 140 C. 296, 303, 73 P. 972 [cause of fracture of pivot on derrick, and sufficiency of counterbalance]; Lemley v. Doak Gas Engine Co. (1919) 40 C.A. 146, 151, 180 P. 671 [machinist on cause of breaking of flywheel]; Risley v. Lenwell (1954) 129 C.A.2d 608, 630, 277 P.2d 897 [whether logging truck was properly equipped and loaded]; Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equipment (1960) 184 C.A.2d 724, 739, 7 C.R. 879, infra, §92; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §§342, 343; 46 Am.Jur. Trials 631 [use of biomechanical experts in products liability litigation]; 62 A.L.R.2d 1426 [safety of condition, place, or appliance]; 4 A.L.R.4th 651 [opinion that product is or is not defective, dangerous, or unreasonably dangerous]; 8 Proof of Facts 127 [metal failures]; 6 Proof of Facts 2d 425 [product's failure to meet manufacturer specifications or standards]; 16 Proof of Facts 2d 447 [bicycle design]; 33 Proof of Facts 2d 447 [power lawn mower].)

In Ault v. International Harvester Co. (1974) 13 C.3d 113, 117 C.R. 812, 528 P.2d 1148, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §165, plaintiff contended that a gear box on a Scout vehicle broke because the aluminum 380 from which it was made had suffered metal fatigue. At the trial, plaintiff's expert witnesses testified to failures of aluminum 380 in other accidents. Defendant objected that no showing was made of substantial similarity between the other accidents and the disputed accident and that defendant, in effect, had to try three separate lawsuits to prove that in every case the gear box broke on impact. Held, the evidence was properly admitted. The expert witnesses had been retained in other litigation to analyze the properties of the gear boxes, and concluded that metal fatigue had caused the failures. At the present trial, they testified about the tests they performed and said that the physical properties of all three gear boxes were similar and that the present failure was also due to metal fatigue. "[A]lthough the purpose of the testimony was to indicate that all three accidents occurred because of the failure of the gear box, the focus was not on the accidents themselves but upon the inherent similarity in the physical and mechanical properties of the three gear boxes, all of which purportedly contained similar defects. Since there was no dispute that all three instruments were manufactured out of aluminum 380, we cannot conclude that the evidence was erroneously admitted." (13 C.3d 122.)

(2) Floor, Steps, or Entrance. The defective condition of the floor, steps, or entrance to a building is a frequent subject of expert evidence. (See Long v. John Breuner Co. (1918) 36 C.A. 630, 633, 636, 172 P. 1132 [excessive grade or slope of apron leading from store entrance to sidewalk]; McStay v. Citizens Nat. Trust & Savings Bank of Los Angeles (1935) 5 C.A.2d 595, 601, 43 P.2d 560 [steps without guard or handrail]; Massing v. Babcock (1944) 64 C.A.2d 752, 755, 149 P.2d 293 [cement sidewalk at entrance to building, slippery because smoothly troweled without abrasives or perforations]; 28 Proof of Facts 2d 167, 253 [slippery floors].)

(3) Cause of Fire. A purported rule that expert evidence is not admissible to show the cause of a fire was examined and repudiated in Manney v. Housing Authority of Richmond (1947) 79 C.A.2d 453, 180 P.2d 69. The court pointed out that there is no rule peculiar to opinions in cases of fire, flood, or other catastrophes, and that such evidence is excluded only where the matter is within the common experience of ordinary persons. (79 C.A.2d 458.) (See also George v. Bekins Van & Storage Co. (1949) 33 C.2d 834, 843, 205 P.2d 1037 [expert evidence admissible as to cause of warehouse fire]; Hyman v. Gordon (1973) 35 C.A.3d 769, 774, 111 C.R. 262, supra, §41; People v. Sundlee (1977) 70 C.A.3d 477, 484, 138 C.R. 834 [member of State Division of Forestry surveillance team could testify as arson expert that fire had been ignited by flammable liquid, even though he found no residue, taste, or smell]; 88 A.L.R.2d 230; 27 Proof of Facts 2d 1 [fire's point of origin].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

62 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

6. Operating Standards and Practices.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 62

[§ 62] Operating Standards and Practices.

Engineers and other experts may give testimony as to the recognized and accepted standards in their profession, trade, or business, on the issue of whether those standards have been met or violated. (See Vallejo & Northern R. Co. v. Reed Orchard Co. (1915) 169 C. 545, 570, 147 P. 238, supra, §39 [operation of railroad in new area]; Richfield Oil Corp. v. Crawford (1952) 39 C.2d 729, 741, 249 P.2d 600 [surveyors on proper method of surveying a line]; Alber v. Owens (1967) 66 C.2d 790, 800, 59 C.R. 117, 427 P.2d 781 [construction safety practices, and whether lack of railings on construction balcony conformed to custom]; Fonts v. Southern Pac. Co. (1916) 30 C.A. 633, 638, 159 P. 215 [experienced drayman on proper and safe method of unloading 1,500 lb. shaft from boxcar]; Long v. John Breuner Co. (1918) 36 C.A. 630, 636, 172 P. 1132 [architects and building contractors on approved grade of approaches to public buildings]; McStay v. Citizens Nat. Trust & Savings Bank of Los Angeles (1935) 5 C.A.2d 595, 601, 43 P.2d 560 [architect and safety engineer on safety requirement of guard or handrail on steps]; Young v. Bates Valve Bag Corp. (1942) 52 C.A.2d 86, 96, 125 P.2d 840 [electrical engineer on standard requiring guards to be placed around electrical conductors]; Wallace v. Speier (1943) 60 C.A.2d 387, 392, 140 P.2d 900 [plumbers on life of plumbing fixtures and frequency of inspection required]; Natural Soda Products Co. v. Los Angeles (1952) 109 C.A.2d 440, 443, 240 P.2d 993 [civil engineers with experience in water problems, on proper engineering practice in operation of aqueduct]; Eger v. May Dept. Stores (1953) 120 C.A.2d 554, 558, 261 P.2d 281 [frequency of cleaning and inspection necessary for safe operation of self-service parking lot of department store]; Reynolds v. Natural Gas Equipment (1960) 184 C.A.2d 724, 739, 7 C.R. 879, infra, §92; Skelly v. Richman (1970) 10 C.A.3d 844, 866, 89 C.R. 556 [action for inducing client to breach contingent fee agreement; customs of legal profession in settling cases]; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §§350, 396; on legal malpractice, see infra, §86.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.515, 516

63 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

7. Practices of Criminals.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 63

[§ 63] Practices of Criminals.

The cases generally approve the use of expert testimony of qualified law enforcement officers on the modus operandi of criminals engaging in various kinds of criminal activity. (See People v. Newman (1944) 24 C.2d 168, 174, 148 P.2d 4 [meaning of signs, symbols, letters and numbers appearing in bookmakers' betting markers and other memoranda]; People v. Jenkins (1975) 13 C.3d 749, 755, 119 C.R. 705, 532 P.2d 857 [tools found in trunk of defendants' car were type commonly used to commit burglaries]; People v. Champion (1995) 9 C.4th 879, 924, 925, 39 C.R.2d 547, 891 P.2d 93 [meaning of words used by members of street gang]; People v. Clay (1964) 227 C.A.2d 87, 95, 38 C.R. 431 [till tapping]; People v. Arguello (1966) 244 C.A.2d 413, 417, 53 C.R. 245, infra, §89; People v. Crooks (1967) 250 C.A.2d 788, 789, 59 C.R. 39 [the "creeper"--practice of two prostitutes working together, one keeping victim in bathroom while the other secretly takes valuables from his clothes; following Clay]; People v. Hardy (1969) 271 C.A.2d 322, 327, 76 C.R. 557 [till tapping]; Anaya v. Turk (1984) 151 C.A.3d 1092, 1105, 199 C.R. 187 [modus operandi of drug dealers, using baby laxative as cutting agent for narcotics]; People v. Lopez (1994) 21 C.A.4th 1551, 1555, 1556, 26 C.R.2d 741 [organization of methamphetamine manufacturing rings]; People v. Singh (1995) 37 C.A.4th 1343, 1378, 44 C.R.2d 644 [fraudulent staging of automobile accidents]; People v. Manriquez (1999) 72 C.A.4th 1486, 1492, 86 C.R.2d 69 [street gangs do not usually commit drive-by shootings with nonmembers in car]; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §403; 31 A.L.R.4th 798 [expert testimony on modus operandi]; 83 A.L.R.4th 629 [whether drugs were possessed with intent to distribute]; 83 A.L.R.4th 660 [whether particular knife was, or could have been, weapon used in crime]; 69 A.L.R.5th 425 [drug courier profile testimony].)

In People v. Clay, supra, defendants C and D robbed a market in the following manner: C asked the checker for snuff or cigarette papers, compelling him to turn away from the register, whereupon D grabbed money from the till. Held, it was proper for an expert to testify on the procedure used in this crime of "till tapping." (227 C.A.2d 93.)

In narcotics cases involving marijuana and heroin, an experienced officer may give the opinion that drugs are held for purposes of sale, basing it on such matters as quantity, packaging, and the normal use of an individual. But where the drug is one that can be lawfully purchased by prescription, e.g., methedrine, "there is no reason to believe that he will have any substantial experience with the numerous citizens who lawfully purchase the drugs for their own use as medicine for illness." (People v. Hunt (1971) 4 C.3d 231, 237, 93 C.R. 197, 481 P.2d 205.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Ochoa (2001) 26 C.4th 398, 438, 110 C.R.2d 324, 28 P.3d 78 [detective's testimony in capital murder case as to significance of defendant's gang-related tattoos]; People v. Ward (2005) 36 C.4th 186, 210, 30 C.R.3d 464,

114 P.3d 717 [in capital murder case, testimony of two gang experts as to defendant's motivation for entering rival gang territory and his likely reaction to language or actions he perceived as gang challenges]; People v. Gonzalez (2006) 38 C.4th 932, 946, 44 C.R.3d 237, 135 P.3d 649 [in capital murder trial, no error resulted from admission of expert testimony of police sergeant on gang culture and psychology; in answering hypothetical questions about witness intimidation, he did not improperly express opinion on whether particular witnesses had been intimidated]; People v. Zepeda (2001) 87 C.A.4th 1183, 1208, 105 C.R.2d 187, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, Supp., §348 [testimony by police officer who was expert on gangs as to why someone would go to particular location, ask individual where he was from, and then shoot him]; People v. Duran (2002) 97 C.A.4th 1448, 1465, 119 C.R.2d 272 [testimony by police officer, based on conversations with gang members, personal investigation of crimes committed by gang members, and information obtained from colleagues, to establish gang's primary activities for purpose of street gang enhancement statute (see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §24)]; People v. Killebrew (2002) 103 C.A.4th 644, 657, 658, 126 C.R.2d 876 [distinguishing Ochoa and Zepeda; in prosecution for conspiracy to possess handgun by active street gang member, expert should not have been allowed to testify that when one gang member possesses gun, every other member present knows of gun and will constructively possess it; this was improper opinion on ultimate issue]; People v. Martinez (2003) 113 C.A.4th 400, 413, 7 C.R.3d 49 [testimony by gang expert that gang member who "rats" on another member can be beaten or killed, and on concept of "paybacks"; testimony was relevant to motive and intent, and would have helped jurors understand why some witnesses changed their stories after their initial statements to police]; People v. Gonzalez (2005) 126 C.A.4th 1539, 1549, 1551, 25 C.R.3d 124 [distinguishing Killebrew; in prosecution in which defendant was charged with stabbing fellow prisoner, trial judge did not err in allowing prosecution's gang expert to testify as to motives of jailhouse gang members in general]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.474.5

64 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

8. Value of Services.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 64

[§ 64] Value of Services.

The value of technical or skilled services may be proved by opinions of a qualified expert. (See Laiblin v. San Joaquin Agricultural Corp. (1923) 60 C.A. 516, 532, 213 P. 529 [construction of levees, etc., under contract]; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §§339, 340; 12 A.L.R.3d 1386 [medical services]; 13 Proof of Facts 199 [housewife's services]; on opinion of lay witness on value of ordinary services, see supra, §16.)

The value of legal services is frequently shown by the expert testimony of experienced lawyers of high standing. (See Treadwell v. Nickel (1924) 194 C. 243, 263, 228 P. 25; Kurland v. Simmons (1954) 126 C.A.2d 79, 81, 271 P.2d 553; California v. Westover Co. (1956) 140 C.A.2d 447, 453, 295 P.2d 96; Martino v. Denevi (1986) 182 C.A.3d 553, 558, 559, 227 C.R. 354; 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §229.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.476.4; Evidence k.523

65 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

9. Value of Property.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 65

[§ 65] Value of Property.

(1) In General. A property owner may testify to the value of the owner's own property without any special qualifications. (See supra, §18.) But ordinarily value is proved by the expert opinion evidence of a witness having knowledge of values. (See Los Angeles v. Deacon (1932) 119 C.A. 491, 493, 7 P.2d 378; Joint Highway Dist. No. 9 v. Ocean Shore R. Co. (1933) 128 C.A. 743, 750, 18 P.2d 413; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §334 et seq.; 16 A.L.R.2d 1113 [probable profits if land is devoted to particular agricultural purpose]; 60 A.L.R.2d 1308 [for purpose of gift tax]; 1 A.L.R.3d 1006 [value of dog]; 59 Am.Jur. Trials 155 [business appraiser as expert witness]; 2 Proof of Facts 631 [book value]; 5 Proof of Facts 505 [value of good will]; 2 Proof of Facts 2d 1 [stock of closely held corporation]; 5 Proof of Facts 2d 411 [market value of single-family residence]; infra, §98 et seq.)

(2) Qualifications of Expert. The expert is usually a professional appraiser or real estate broker. But, as in other situations, skill and experience, rather than professional status, are determinative: "If a witness, by reason of his skill, learning, or technical training, understands the adaptability of the lands in question for a particular purpose, and the demand for land for such purpose, he may state the market value of the land, although he may be entirely unacquainted with the other elements which would be considered by different buyers competing for the same property. On the other hand, if the witness has knowledge of the market value of the lands, even though he possesses no technical skill, training, or ability, he may state the market value." (Stockton v. Ellingwood (1929) 96 C.A. 708, 716, 275 P. 228; see also Los Angeles City High School Dist. v. Rodriguez (1955) 135 C.A.2d 760, 768, 287 P.2d 871 ["It is sufficient that the witness has some peculiar means of forming an intelligent judgment as to value beyond that which is presumed to be possessed by men generally. ... Owners of land in the vicinity, familiar with the character of the land in question frequently have a better idea of land values than strangers who are engaged in the business of selling land"]; Los Angeles v. Frew (1956) 139 C.A.2d 859, 867, 294 P.2d 1073; People v. Arthofer (1966) 245 C.A.2d 454, 463, 54 C.R. 878; San Bernardino County Flood Control Dist. v. Sweet (1967) 255 C.A.2d 889, 898, 63 C.R. 640 [witness with knowledge and experience on land value, though not real estate appraiser or broker, qualified]; Naples Restaurant v. Coberly Ford (1968) 259 C.A.2d 881, 884, 66 C.R. 835, supra, §41 [automobile salesman qualified to give opinion on value of car]; In re Marriage of Hokanson (1998) 68 C.A.4th 987, 995, 80 C.R.2d 699 [marital dissolution proceeding; no error in allowing expert testimony on value of family home by real estate agent who had extensive experience selling homes in same area, was familiar with home in question, and was consistently one of top salespersons in her office].)

Mere ownership of adjacent land does not of itself qualify a witness. (See Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. v. Jarvis (1959) 51 C.2d 799, 804, 336 P.2d 530; Sooy v. Kunde (1947) 80 C.A.2d 347, 354, 181 P.2d 758 [value of farm land; witness, a neighboring rancher familiar with three prior sales but without special knowledge of values];

People v. Murray (1959) 172 C.A.2d 219, 231, 342 P.2d 485.) Likewise, former ownership of the same property does not entitle one to testify to its present value, unless the former owner can "demonstrate such familiarity with the land, its uses, and its value as to satisfy the trial judge of his competency." (Everts v. Matteson (1945) 68 C.A.2d 577, 581, 157 P.2d 651.)

(3) Market Value of Real or Tangible Personal Property. The Legislature elaborately codified the special rules on valuation in condemnation cases (Ev.C. 810 et seq.) and, in 1980, made these rules applicable to all actions in which the market value of real property or tangible personal property is in issue (Ev.C. 810(a)). (See infra, §98 et seq.; 60 Am.Jur. Trials 447 [landowner's evidence in eminent domain proceeding].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.476.4; Evidence k.524, 525

66 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

10. Handwriting and Typewriting.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 66

[§ 66] Handwriting and Typewriting.

(1) Handwriting and Questioned Documents. "Handwriting identification is based upon the principle that every person's handwriting is distinctive. ... The possibility that one person could imitate the handwriting of another and successfully deceive an expert document examiner is very remote." (People v. Graves (1966) 64 C.2d 208, 211, 49 C.R. 386, 411 P.2d 114, footnote 2.) (See also Estate of Newell (1925) 75 C.A. 554, 559, 243 P. 33 [banker with 23 years' experience, though not a professional examiner, held qualified]; People v. Horowitz (1945) 70 C.A.2d 675, 689, 161 P.2d 833; People v. Norwoods (1950) 100 C.A.2d 281, 285, 223 P.2d 490; People v. Bullock (1958) 166 C.A.2d 494, 497, 333 P.2d 88; Estate of Zalud (1972) 27 C.A.3d 945, 952, 104 C.R. 329 [expert testimony that signature on will was by someone other than decedent]; People v. Tai (1995) 37 C.A.4th 990, 998, 44 C.R.2d 253 [in prosecution for credit card offenses, expert testimony that defendant disguised his handwriting on exemplar was admissible evidence of consciousness of guilt and did not implicate privilege against self-incrimination]; 1 McCormick 5th, §§207, 221; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§1998, 2008 et seq., 2023 et seq.; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §153; 11 A.L.R.3d 1015 [illegible document]; 1955 A.S. 1216; 20 Proof of Facts 335 [questioned documents bibliography]; 50 Proof of Facts 2d 321 [ancient documents]; 15 Proof of Facts 3d 595 [identification of handwriting]; 24 Proof of Facts 3d 667 [handprinting and numerals]; 25 Proof of Facts 3d 637 [illegible signatures and writing in litigation]; 27 Proof of Facts 3d 489 [forensic identification of handwriting]; 9 Am.Jur. Trials 619.)

(2) Typewriting. Evidence as to the identity of typewriting may also be admitted. (See People v. Cline (1934) 138 C.A. 184, 194, 31 P.2d 1095; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §158; 20 Proof of Facts 265; 36 A.L.R.4th 598 [evidence as to linguistics or typing style (forensic linguistics) as basis of identification of typist or author]; Law Rev. Com. Comment to Ev.C. 1418 ["[E]xperts can now compare typewriting specimens and other forms of writing as accurately as they could compare handwriting specimens in 1872".])

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Handwriting and Questioned Documents. See 183 A.L.R. Fed 333 [admissibility of expert testimony on handwriting in federal criminal case]; 1 McCormick 6th, §207; 2 McCormick 6th, §221. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.511

67 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

11. Ballistics.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 67

[§ 67] Ballistics.

In its narrower sense of identification of bullets and cartridge cases to determine whether a gun was used in the commission of a crime, ballistics is a familiar field of scientific evidence. (See People v. Trujillo (1948) 32 C.2d 105, 109, 194 P.2d 681; People v. Palmer (1978) 80 C.A.3d 239, 250, 254, 145 C.R. 466 [use of scanning electron microscope for gunshot residue]; 53 Harv. L. Rev. 295; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §417a; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §303 et seq.; 26 A.L.R.2d 892 [identity of gun from which bullet or cartridge was fired]; 31 A.L.R.4th 486 [testimony that bullet could or might have come from particular gun]; 29 Proof of Facts 65 [firearms identification].)

Experts in the use of firearms, as well as surgeons with experience in gunshot wounds, may also give opinions as to the course of a bullet through the body of a victim. (People v. Ellis (1922) 188 C. 682, 694, 206 P. 753; People v. Cole (1956) 47 C.2d 99, 103, 301 P.2d 854, supra, §47; People v. Parks (1968) 263 C.A.2d 490, 495, 69 C.R. 368 [bullet causing death came from high-powered rifle, pursued certain course]; cf. People v. Fierro (1991) 1 C.4th 173, 224, 3 C.R.2d 426, 821 P.2d 1302 [in murder trial, retired deputy sheriff could properly testify as ballistics expert, based on his previous experience examining spent projectiles, but could not give medical testimony about nature of victim's injuries or bullet trajectory, because he had no training or experience in these areas].) (See also Long v. California-Western States Life Ins. Co. (1955) 43 C.2d 871, 882, 279 P.2d 43 [testimony on wounds that might result from tripping and falling with a gun].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 60 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [firearms forensics--firearms identification at trial; superseding 29 Proof of Facts 65, text, p. 611]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.476.1

68 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

12. Fingerprints and Footprints.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 68

[§ 68] Fingerprints and Footprints.

(1) Fingerprints. Scientific fingerprint identification is made possible by the difference in ridge patterns of the inner surface of the finger joints. The techniques and admissibility have long been established. (See People v. Jones (1931) 112 C.A. 68, 71, 296 P. 317; People v. Riser (1956) 47 C.2d 566, 579, 589, 305 P.2d 1; People v. Ang (1962) 204 C.A.2d 553, 555, 22 C.R. 455; 53 Harv. L. Rev. 295; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §§414, 414a; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §279 et seq.; 28 A.L.R.2d 1115; 36 Proof of Facts 2d 285.)

(2) Footprints. "Evidence of footprints is admissible where they bear such similarity to those of the shoes worn by a defendant as to justify an inference that the tracks were made by his shoes." (People v. Zismer (1969) 275 C.A.2d 660, 665, 80 C.R. 184, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Circumstantial Evidence, §127, citing the text; see People v. Farmer (1989) 47 C.3d 888, 910, 912, 254 C.R. 508, 765 P.2d 940 [comparison of photos of footprints found at murder scene with imprint left by shoes defendant was wearing when arrested]; 2 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §415; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1977; 31A Am.Jur.2d (1989 ed.), Expert and Opinion Evidence §287 et seq.; 45 A.L.R.4th 1178 [admissibility of bare footprint evidence].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Fingerprints. See 37 Golden Gate L. Rev. 39 [prevalence and causes of wrongful conviction by fingerprint evidence]; 110 A.L.R.5th 213 [use of fingerprint evidence obtained by chemical, laser, and digitally enhanced imaging processes]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.475.5, 475.6

69 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

13. Teeth Marks on Victim.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 69

[§ 69] Teeth Marks on Victim.

In People v. Marx (1975) 54 C.A.3d 100, 126 C.R. 350, an elderly strangulation victim was found with "an elliptical laceration of the nose," which the coroner believed consisted of teeth marks. A dentist made impressions of defendant's upper and lower teeth; following this, the victim's body was exhumed and impressions were made of the wound on her nose. Defendant objected to the expert dental testimony on the ground that there was insufficient evidence of a match between defendant's dentition and the victim's wounds to enable the experts to identify defendant and to eliminate other persons as suspect. Held, the testimony was admissible.

(a) The science--or art--of identifying persons through their teeth is well established. "While the field is relatively new and experts do not agree on the exact number of similarities necessary to make a positive identification, the prosecution experts stressed the obvious point that it is not the number of similarities, but their quality which is most helpful. Further, this being a case involving identification by bite marks, rather than by comparing a dentition with two-dimensional X-rays and charts, the experts were able to use a virtually unprecedented three-dimensional approach." (54 C.A.3d 107.)

(b) What is attacked is the experts' asserted ability to prove identity from similarities between bite marks and the dentition of a suspect. But here, the trial judge (sitting without a jury) was shown models, photographs, X-rays and slides of the victim's wounds and defendant's teeth. The judge could see the extent to which the wounds changed in appearance between the time of autopsy and the time the body was exhumed and also the conformance between the purported bite marks and the irregularities in defendant's teeth. "Thus the basic data on which the experts based their conclusions were verifiable by the court. Further, in making their painstaking comparisons and reaching their conclusions, the experts did not rely on untested methods, unproven hypotheses, intuition or revelation. Rather, they applied scientifically and professionally established techniques--X-rays, models, microscopy, photography--to the solution of a particular problem which, though novel, was well within the capability of those techniques." (54 C.A.3d 111.) (See also People v. Slone (1978) 76 C.A.3d 611, 619, 625, 143 C.R. 61 [bite-mark identification evidence met test of acceptance of scientific technique laid down in People v. Kelly (1976) 17 C.3d 24, 130 C.R. 144, 549 P.2d 1240, 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42; following Marx] 77 A.L.R.3d 1122 [identity through bite marks]; 51 So. Cal. L. Rev. 309 [same]; 25 Proof of Facts 765.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 75 Proof of Facts 3d 317 [proof of identity of bite marks; superseding 25 Proof of Facts 765, text, p. 613]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.475.7

70 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

14. Eyewitness Identification.

a. Substantial Corroboration Rule.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 70

[§ 70] Substantial Corroboration Rule.

"We address here a contention that is increasingly heard in the courts of California and our sister jurisdictions, i.e., that it may be an abuse of discretion to exclude the testimony of a psychologist who is a qualified expert witness on psychological factors shown by the evidence that may affect the accuracy of an eyewitness identification of the defendant." (People v. McDonald (1984) 37 C.3d 351, 355, 208 C.R. 236, 690 P.2d 709.)

Defendant, a black male, was charged with murder committed during an attempt to rob the victim. The jury verdict was guilty with special circumstances (P.C. 190.2(a)(17)(i)), and the death penalty was imposed. The only evidence offered by the prosecution to connect defendant with the crime was the testimony of seven eyewitnesses. Their testimony, however, was not positive, and was contradicted by six defense alibi witnesses. Defendant's counsel, prior to trial, moved for an order to permit Dr. S, a distinguished practicing psychologist, to testify on the psychological factors that may affect the accuracy of eyewitness identification:

(a) Perception, which may be affected by "the observer's state of mind, his expectations, his focus of attention at the time, the suddenness of the incident, the stressfulness of the situation, and differences in the race and/or age of the observer and the observed." (37 C.3d 361.)

(b) Memory, which "is both a selective and a constructive process, in which old elements fade and are lost while new elements--subsequent information or suggestions--are unconsciously interwoven into the overall recollection until the subject cannot distinguish one from the other." (37 C.3d 361.)

(c) Retrieval, which may be affected by "the subject's expectations, his suggestibility, the phrasing of the questions asked of him, and even the size and type of the photographs he is shown." (37 C.3d 362.)

Dr. S also intended to point out various psychological factors that could have affected identification in the present case (e.g., shooting on a busy street corner some distance away from witnesses, and the "cross-racial factor"), and to explain to the jury that empirical research has undermined a number of widespread lay beliefs about the psychology of eyewitness identification (e.g., that the accuracy of a witness' recollection increases with his certainty, and that accuracy is also improved by stress). (37 C.3d 362.)

On objection by the prosecutor, defense counsel made it clear that Dr. S would not give an opinion on the credibility of any particular witness. Nevertheless, the trial judge, relying on People v. Johnson (1974) 38 C.A.3d 1, 7, 112 C.R. 834, and decisions following it (e.g., People v. Guzman (1975) 47 C.A.3d 380, 385, 121 C.R. 69), excluded the evidence as an invasion of the province of the jury. (37 C.3d 363.) Held, conviction reversed.

(a) Dangers of eyewitness identification. In United States v. Wade (1967) 388 U.S. 218, 87 S.Ct. 1926, 18 L.Ed.2d 1149, the Court referred to "the vagaries of eyewitness identification" and "the high incidence of miscarriage of justice" caused by mistaken identifications. (37 C.3d 363.) Other federal court decisions have expressed similar concerns; in one case, the judge "called on the courts to face up to the reliability problems of eyewitness identification, to inform themselves of the results of scientific studies of those problems, and to allow juries access to that information in aid of their factfinding tasks." (37 C.3d 364.)

(b) Judicial opposition to expert testimony. "[A]ppellate decisions almost unanimously hold that rulings excluding such evidence do not constitute an abuse of discretion." (37 C.3d 365.) But the opinion in People v. Johnson, supra, is an unsatisfactory treatment of the subject:

First, the court says that the Evidence Code does not give a party the right to impeach a witness by calling another witness to testify as to the former's capacity. This argument misses the point, for the experts in Johnson and in the present case were not called to testify as to the capacity of a particular witness. (37 C.3d 366.)

Second, the court says that Ev.C. 801(a) limits expert testimony to subjects beyond the range of common experience. However, the statute refers only to expert opinion; it does not apply to expert testimony as to facts. And much of the proposed testimony would have related to matters of fact: the contents of studies reported in professional literature, their methodology, their data, and their findings. (37 C.3d 366.)

Third, the statute does not limit expert testimony as broadly as the Johnson court declared: It limits testimony to such subjects "sufficiently beyond common experience that the opinion of an expert would assist the trier of fact." Hence, even if the jury has some knowledge of the matter, the expert opinion is admissible whenever it would assist the jury. (37 C.3d 367.)

(c) Application of test to present case. Dr. S would have testified to results of studies not widely known or not fully appreciated by lay persons (including the pitfalls of cross-racial identification). (37 C.3d 368, 369.) "We conclude that although jurors may not be totally unaware of the foregoing psychological factors bearing on eyewitness identification, the body of information now available on these matters is 'sufficiently beyond common experience' that in appropriate cases expert opinion thereon could at least 'assist the trier of fact.'" (37 C.3d 369.)

(d) Impeachment by psychiatric testimony distinguished. People v. Johnson, supra, citing Ballard v. Superior Court (1966) 64 C.2d 159, 49 C.R. 302, 410 P.2d 838, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §263, states the familiar objection to such impeachment; but the Ballard rule is irrelevant, for no attempt was to be made to attack the truth-telling ability of any witness. (37 C.3d 370.)

(e) Invasion of province of jury. The Johnson court also declared that to admit expert psychological evidence on eyewitness identification would usurp the function of the jury, because the evidence would embrace the ultimate issue. The answers to this assertion are: (1) The proffered testimony does not tell the jury that any particular witness is or is not truthful or accurate. (2) The jury's function is not usurped because the jurors remain free to reject the expert's opinion (P.C. 1127b). (3) California has abandoned the "ultimate issue" rule, and follows the modern view that an expert opinion is not inadmissible merely because it coincides with an ultimate issue of fact. (37 C.3d 370, 371.) (See infra, §89.)

(f) Scientific acceptance of this type of testimony. The trial judge relied on the rule of People v. Kelly (1976) 17 C.3d 24, 130 C.R. 144, 549 P.2d 1240 (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §42), that evidence based on a new scientific method of proof is admissible only on a showing that the procedure has been generally accepted as reliable in the scientific community in which it developed. But this rule has been invoked primarily in cases involving novel devices or processes, i.e., cases involving scientific evidence. (37 C.3d 372, 373.)

"We have never applied the Kelly-Frye rule to expert medical testimony, even when the witness is a psychiatrist and the subject matter is as esoteric as the reconstruction of a past state of mind or the prediction of future dangerousness, or even the diagnosis of an unusual form of mental illness not listed in the diagnostic manual of the American Psychiatric Association." (37 C.3d 373.) "We see no reason to require a greater foundation when the witness is a qualified psychologist who will simply explain to the jury how certain aspects of everyday experience shown by the record can affect human perception and memory, and through them, the accuracy of eyewitness identification testimony." (37 C.3d 373.)

(g) Discretion of court abused. An Arizona decision (Arizona v. Chapple (1983) 135 Ariz. 281, 660 P.2d 1208) illustrates the kind of case in which the exclusion of expert testimony on psychological factors affecting eyewitness identification is a prejudicial abuse of discretion. (37 C.3d 374, 375.) The present case is similar: The record establishes that Dr. S's testimony would have been of significant assistance to the jury. "Because no other evidence connected defendant with the crime, the crucial factor in the case was the accuracy of the eyewitness identifications." ... "[I]n the testimony of each of the witnesses who identified defendant in the courtroom there were elements that could have raised reasonable doubts as to the accuracy of the identification. These elements included the suddenness and unexpectedness of the event, discontinuity and other difficulty of observation, fear and other stress at the time of perception, overestimation of the duration of the event, 'feedback' factors following the event, failure or uncertainty of several witnesses in selecting defendant's photograph from police displays, and, particularly important, apparent cross-racial identification discrepancies." (37 C.3d 375.) There was therefore reversible error under the probability-of-prejudice test (see 6 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Reversible Error, §7). (37 C.3d 376.)

The court concludes: "We expect that such evidence will not often be needed, and in the usual case the appellate court will continue to defer to the trial court's discretion in this matter. Yet deference is not abdication. When an eyewitness identification of the defendant is a key element of the prosecution's case but is not substantially corroborated by evidence giving it independent reliability, and the defendant offers qualified expert testimony on specific psychological factors shown by the record that could have affected the accuracy of the identification but are not likely to be fully known to or understood by the jury, it will ordinarily be error to exclude that testimony." (37 C.3d 377.)

The opinion adds a practice point: "Because the admissibility of expert testimony on eyewitness identification thus turns on the nature and quality of the prosecution's case, the motion to admit such testimony will most appropriately be made and ruled on after that case has been presented to the jury." (37 C.3d 377, footnote 25.) (See People v. Wright (1988) 45 C.3d 1126, 1141, 248 C.R. 600, 755 P.2d 1049 [approving CALJIC, No. 2.92]; 73 Cal. L. Rev. 1402 [exhaustive discussion of McDonald and general law]; 23 A.L.R.4th 1089 [necessity of cautionary instruction on factors to be considered]; 46 A.L.R.4th 1047 [admissibility of expert testimony on reliability of eyewitness testimony]; 35 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [use of expert testimony to challenge eyewitness identification]; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 2.92 [factors to consider in proving identification by eyewitness testimony].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. Goodwillie (2007) 147 C.A.4th 695, 724, 54 C.R.3d 601 [trial judge did not err in refusing to allow defendant to present testimony of eyewitness identification expert in attempt to raise reasonable doubt as to witnesses' identification of defendant as perpetrator; there were at least four witnesses who positively identified defendant, and there was substantial corroborating evidence, including defendant's own admissions]; 92 Proof of Facts 3d 379 [reliability of eyewitness and earwitness testimony]. West's Key Number Digest, Criminal Law k.474.3(2)

71 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
 Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

14. Eyewitness Identification.

b. Illustrations.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 71

[§ 71] Illustrations.

(1) Expert Testimony Not Required. In People v. Plasencia (1985) 168 C.A.3d 546, 223 C.R. 786, defendant, charged with robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, set up an alibi defense, and then sought to introduce testimony of Dr. R, a qualified psychologist, on the possible errors in eyewitness identification. The trial judge rejected the proffered evidence on the ground that the subject matter was too conjectural and speculative to support an opinion. The Court of Appeal, on direction of the Supreme Court to consider the case in light of People v. McDonald (1984) 37 C.3d 351, 208 C.R. 236, 690 P.2d 709, supra, §70, concluded that McDonald was distinguishable and that the judge's ruling was not an abuse of discretion. In McDonald, the prosecution's case was based solely on the eyewitness testimony; here, there was other evidence. (168 C.A.3d 555.) (See also People v. Sanders (1995) 11 C.4th 475, 508, 509, 46 C.R.2d 751, 905 P.2d 420 [exclusion of expert testimony was not error; eyewitness testimony was strong and unequivocal and was corroborated by independent evidence of crime and conspiracy leading to it].)

(2) Expert Testimony Required. In People v. Walker (1986) 185 C.A.3d 155, 229 C.R. 591, defendant was charged with one count of attempted robbery and three counts of robbery. He admitted committing one of the robberies, but denied the other charges. The four victims (all of whom had their purses either taken or demanded at knifepoint) and two other eyewitnesses positively identified defendant as the perpetrator. The trial judge refused to admit the expert testimony of defendant's psychologist concerning factors bearing on the reliability of eyewitness identifications. Held, this was error, though harmless.

(a) The independently reliable evidence sufficient to satisfy the substantial corroboration requirement of People v. McDonald, supra, must be something other than the inference drawn from defendant's commission of other similar crimes. Here, the robbery that defendant admitted committing was similar to the other crimes in that (1) the crimes occurred within a period of less than 2 hours; (2) all victims were women; (3) the perpetrator was a young black male wearing essentially the same clothing; (4) the robber threatened each victim with a knife and used similar language; and (5) a vehicle was used as a means of escape. However, a "typical" purse snatcher might operate similarly, and thus, the "shared marks" were of such common occurrence that the "modus operandi" could not be viewed as signatorially unique. (185 C.A.3d 165, 166.) "Where the inference is merely suggestive--as it is here--and reasonable persons could still disagree on the defendant's identity, a defendant cannot be denied the opportunity to present evidence on an issue crucial to his defense." (185 C.A.3d 165.)

(b) McDonald required reversal because it was a much more closely balanced case. Here, a substantial body of circumstantial evidence linked defendant to the crimes, and the defendant's own testimony was unbelievable.

Accordingly, it was not reasonably probable that the jury would have reached a different result had the expert been permitted to testify. (185 C.A.3d 166.) (See also People v. Sanders (1990) 51 C.3d 471, 506, 273 C.R. 537, 797 P.2d 561 [exclusion of expert testimony held harmless error where there was "some corroboration" of eyewitness identification].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Expert Testimony Not Required. See People v. Jones (2003) 30 C.4th 1084, 1112, 135 C.R.2d 370, 70 P.3d 359 [relying on People v. McDonald (1984) 37 C.3d 351, 208 C.R. 236, 690 P.2d 709, text, p. 617; witness' identification of defendant was corroborated by testimony of five others].

72 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

14. Eyewitness Identification.

c. Lineups.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 72

[§ 72] Lineups.

In People v. Sandoval (1994) 30 C.A.4th 1288, 36 C.R.2d 646, a robbery and attempted murder case, two lineups including defendant were conducted and videotaped prior to trial, and the videotapes were played for the jury. The trial judge excluded a clinical psychologist's proposed testimony that the lineups were unfair in that "(1) some of the persons in the first lineup were not viable alternative choices and (2) the videotape of the second lineup, which had been seen by the victims of the shoe store robbery (of which Sandoval was acquitted), showed Sandoval in the background for an inordinate time." (30 C.A.4th 1297.) Held, the ruling was proper. Neither of the prongs of the test stated in People v. McDonald (1984) 37 C.3d 351, 208 C.R. 236, 690 P.2d 709, supra, §70, for assigning error was met: the identity of defendant as the perpetrator was fully corroborated, and the "similarity in appearance of members of a lineup, relevant to the weight to be accorded an identification, is completely within the task of the trier of fact to resolve." In fact, the witness was no more expert than any juror. (30 C.A.4th 1298.) (See People v. Brandon (1995) 32 C.A.4th 1033, 1053, 38 C.R.2d 751 [portion of expert's testimony relating to mock lineup experiment and how it affected case was properly excluded as it dealt with fair selection of persons in lineup, a matter likely to be fully understood by jury; quoting McDonald].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

73 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

15. Business Usage or Trade Practice.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 73

[§ 73] Business Usage or Trade Practice.

A few cases contain expressions to the effect that custom or usage must be established as a fact, by proof of instances, and not by opinions. (See Peterson v. Permanente Steamship Corp. (1954) 129 C.A.2d 579, 590, 277 P.2d 495; Dutcher v. Santa Rosa High School Dist. (1957) 156 C.A.2d 256, 263, 319 P.2d 14; Wise v. Reeve Electronics (1960) 183 C.A.2d 4, 9, 6 C.R. 587.)

The better view, however, is that expert evidence is admissible on the existence of a particular custom, usage, or mercantile practice. (See Ecco-Phoenix Elec. Corp. v. Howard J. White (1969) 1 C.3d 266, 271, 81 C.R. 849, 461 P.2d 33 [custom and usage in electrical contracting business]; Anaheim Builders Supply v. Lincoln Nat. Life Ins. Co. (1965) 233 C.A.2d 400, 412, 43 C.R. 494; Balfour, Guthrie & Co., Ltd. v. Gourmet Farms (1980) 108 C.A.3d 181, 187, 166 C.R. 422 [custom and usage in grain brokerage industry, to interpret contract's pricing mechanism]; 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1954.) Thus, in the Anaheim case, an action to recover on a life insurance policy, the defense was false representations and concealment by the insured. Defendant called several experts to testify to the usages of companies in rejecting risks, and to give the opinion that defendant would not have issued the policy if the insured had truthfully answered the medical questions asked. The court held, on the authority of brief remarks in two prior Supreme Court decisions, that this was proper. (233 C.A.2d 412, 413.)

In Conolley v. Bull (1968) 258 C.A.2d 183, 65 C.R. 689, although the expert admitted that he did not know the exact percentage of housing developers who would consult a soil engineer after becoming aware of a nearby slide area, he was allowed to give the opinion that the average competent and experienced developer would do so in these circumstances. (258 C.A.2d 191, citing the text.) (On opinion evidence as to recognized standards in various professions, trades, and businesses, see supra, §62.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See PM Group v. Stewart (2007) 154 C.A.4th 55, 63, 64 C.R.3d 227 [in action by concert promoter and two subpromoters against singer, his company, manager, attorney, and agent, opinions of entertainment attorney, offered by plaintiffs, as to customs and practices in music concert business were generally admissible; even if some of his opinions invaded province of jury, there was no reversible error, as opinions were countered by several experts testifying for defendants]. West's Key Number Digest, Evidence k.515, 516

74 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

16. Police Officer's Conduct.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 74

[§ 74] Police Officer's Conduct.

In McCleery v. Bakersfield (1985) 170 C.A.3d 1059, 216 C.R. 852, police officers Mahan and Mudryk responded to a call reporting that a man with a gun was disturbing the peace. The caller pointed to M, who walked toward Mahan and made a motion to his waistband; Mahan, mistaking M's shiny belt buckle for a weapon, yelled "Stop" and at the same time shot M, fatally wounding him. In this wrongful death action against Mahan and the city, the testimony of Mahan and Mudryk was in some respects inconsistent, and defendants sought to offer Higbie as an expert witness to support the defenses of self-defense and no negligence. Held, the expert evidence would have been admissible, but was properly excluded for lack of an offer of proof (see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §401 et seq.).

(a) Proposed testimony. Higbie, a police lieutenant for 16 years, had investigated 1,000 officer-involved shootings, had investigatory, supervisory, and instructional experience in this field, and for the past several years had been in charge of the officer-related shooting division of the Los Angeles Police Department. His testimony would have included explanation of inconsistencies in the testimony of Mahan and Mudryk, statistical information relative to years in service of officers involved in shootings, statistical information relative to location of handguns on suspects involved in officer-related shootings, and opinions on the use of deadly force by Mahan and on the conduct of Mudryk. Defense counsel asserted that the witness would testify that inconsistencies in police officers' testimony as to distance, who was present, and how many shots were fired, are not unusual. (170 C.A.3d 1062, 1063.)

(b) Admissibility of testimony. The trial judge ruled that the testimony would be inadmissible because it would go to the ultimate issue. This ruling was contrary to the holdings in People v. McDonald (1984) 37 C.3d 351, 208 C.R. 236, 690 P.2d 709, supra, §70, People v. Bledsoe (1984) 36 C.3d 236, 203 C.R. 450, 681 P.2d 291, supra, §52, and People v. Roscoe (1985) 168 C.A.3d 1093, 215 C.R. 45, supra, §53.

(1) "[T]he trial court's conclusions that Higbie's opinion was going to involve 'the sole question' before the jury; that Higbie's testimony, that inconsistent statements after shootings are not unusual, would cause the jurors to ignore the instruction (CALJIC, No. 2.20) that they could consider inconsistencies in judging the credibility of a witness; and that Higbie's opinion on whether Mahan 'acted in self-defense or properly within the law' involved the 'ultimate issue' in the case, are at the very least questionable grounds for refusing to admit the testimony." (170 C.A.3d 1070.)

(2) "It is possible that Higbie could have demonstrated sufficient expertise to permit him to advise the jury as to the factors that may affect an officer's reaction when involved in a shooting, and to explain to the jury the potential effects of these factors on the officer's recollection. It is even possible that Higbie might have qualified to express an opinion on an 'ultimate issue' in the case." (170 C.A.3d 1070.) "[T]he sole purpose of his testimony (like that of the experts in McDonald, Bledsoe and Roscoe) would be to explain the effects of a stress-causing event on one's perceptions and recollections. The jurors would retain both the power and the duty to weigh all the testimony and to judge the credibility of the witnesses, including Higbie." (170 C.A.3d 1070.)

(3) The facts presented a close question on the issues of negligence and self-defense. Plaintiff's counsel questioned the two officers at length about inconsistencies in various statements and testimony, and in argument, hinted at a police coverup. The expert's testimony might have imparted a higher degree of credibility to the testimony of the officers. (170 C.A.3d 1072.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

75 of 117 DOCUMENTS

Witkin California Evidence, Fourth Edition
Copyright © 2008 by B.E. Witkin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER V - Opinion Evidence

II. EXPERT EVIDENCE

C. Subjects of Expert Testimony.

17. Other Subjects.

1 Witkin Cal. Evid. Opinion Evid § 75

[§ 75] Other Subjects.

The fields of expert evidence are relatively unlimited, and in practice, the topics of expert and scientific evidence (2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §1) tend to overlap. To the examples in the preceding sections (§45 et seq.), the following may be added:

- (1) Accountant's malpractice. (See 16 Proof of Facts 2d 641.)
- (2) Air pollution. (See 37 Proof of Facts 3d 501.)
- (3) Animal diseases. (See 49 A.L.R.2d 932.)
- (4) Architect's malpractice. (See 19 Am.Jur. Trials 231.)
- (5) Attorney malpractice. (See Lysick v. Walcom (1968) 258 C.A.2d 136, 155, 65 C.R. 406; Starr v. Mooslin (1971) 14 C.A.3d 988, 996, 92 C.R. 583; 14 A.L.R.4th 170; 16 Proof of Facts 2d 549; 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §311 et seq.; infra, §86.)
- (6) "Blood spatter" interpretation. (See 9 A.L.R.5th 369.)
- (7) Chemical and other scientific tests. (See Melaleuca v. Clark (1998) 66 C.A.4th 1344, 1356, 78 C.R.2d 627, 5 Summary (9th), Torts, Supp., §573 [either party in defamation action may use expert testimony on truth or falsity of statement at issue, where statement concerns chemical or biological makeup of particular material]; 52 Am.Jur. Trials 473 [use of experts in actions arising from use and mishandling of toxic chemicals]; 39 Proof of Facts 3d 539 [proof of contamination in toxic tort cases]; 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §41.)
- (8) Clothing item belonged to or was worn by particular individual. (See 71 A.L.R.4th 1148.)
- (9) Coin collection's value. (See 5 Proof of Facts 3d 577.)
- (10) Concrete failures. (See 19 Proof of Facts 455.)
- (11) Driver's capacity to perceive posted warning sign. (See New v. Consolidated Rock Products Co. (1985) 171 C.A.3d 681, 687, 692, 217 C.R. 522, supra, §29.)

- (12) Electronic mail: recovery and reconstruction. (See 41 Proof of Facts 3d 1.)
- (13) Environmental litigation. (See 50 Am.Jur. Trials 471.)
- (14) Fingernail comparison. This is similar to comparison of teeth marks (supra, §69) to show identity. (See 40 A.L.R.4th 575.)
- (15) Life expectancy. (See 7 Proof of Facts 215.)
- (16) Literary or musical plagiarism. (See Rich v. Paramount Pictures (1955) 130 C.A.2d 775, 778, 279 P.2d 782; 4 Summary (9th), Personal Property, §36.)
- (17) Meteorological conditions. (See 5 Proof of Facts 3d 191.)
- (18) Motion pictures and X-ray pictures. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Demonstrative, Experimental, and Scientific Evidence, §20 et seq.)
- (19) Products liability: adequacy of warning. (See Jackson v. Deft (1990) 223 C.A.3d 1305, 1320, 273 C.R. 214 [insufficient showing that psychologist specializing in the "area of human factors" was qualified to give opinion on adequacy of warning labels on paint containers]; 26 A.L.R.4th 377; 6 Summary (9th), Torts, §951 et seq.)
- (20) Sexual harassment. (See 35 Santa Clara L. Rev. 651 [reasonable woman standard]; 51 Stanf. L. Rev. 357 [educative role of expert testimony].)
- (21) Solvency and insolvency. (See 7 Wigmore (Chadbourn Rev.) §1959; 6 Proof of Facts 367.)
- (22) Water pollution. (See 18 Am.Jur. Trials 495.)
- (23) Witness unavailability due to physical or mental trauma resulting from alleged crime. (See 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Hearsay, §22.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

