(b) But plaintiff can recover, under the rule of the restaurant sit-in cases (supra, §760), if she can show that discriminatory action of a private person is compelled by state law. (90 S.Ct. 1615, 26 L.Ed.2d 161.) "For state action purposes it makes no difference ... whether the racially discriminatory act by the private party is compelled by a statutory provision or by a custom having the force of law--in either case it is the State that has commanded the result by its law. Without deciding whether less substantial involvement of a State might satisfy the state action requirement of the Fourteenth Amendment, we conclude that petitioner would show an abridgement of her equal protection right, if she proves that Kress refused her service because of a state-enforced custom of segregating the races in public restaurants." (90 S.Ct. 1615, 26 L.Ed.2d 162.) (See 84 Harv. L. Rev. 71; 8 San Diego L. Rev. 144; 4 Rotunda, §19.18; 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §72 et seq.)

In Monell v. Department of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611, infra, §830, the Court held that municipal liability could be based on custom. "[A]lthough the touchstone of the §1983 action against a government body is an allegation that official policy is responsible for a deprivation of rights protected by the Constitution, local governments, like every other §1983 'person,' by the very terms of the statute, may be sued for constitutional deprivations visited pursuant to governmental 'custom' even though such a custom has not received formal approval through the body's official decisionmaking channels." (98 S.Ct. 2036, 56 L.Ed.2d 635.) (See Board of County Commrs. of Bryan County, Oklahoma v. Brown (1997) 520 U.S. 397, 117 S.Ct. 1382, 1388, 137 L.Ed.2d 626, 639 [following Monell]; 62 So. Cal. L. Rev. 581 [Bryan County].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.18.

31 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

1. Original Civil Rights Acts.

e. Action Against Municipality.

1. Right of Action Established.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 830

[§ 830] Right of Action Established.

(1) In General. Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 81 S.Ct. 473, 5 L.Ed.2d 492, supra, §828, held that a municipal corporation was not a "person" subject to liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983. In Monell v. Department of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611, female employees of New York City alleged that they had been forced to take unpaid pregnancy leaves of absence while still medically able to continue work. Although the lower court found that their constitutional rights had been infringed under Cleveland Bd. of Education v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 94 S.Ct. 791, 39 L.Ed.2d 52, supra, §225, back pay was denied on the ground that these damages would ultimately be paid by the city, contrary to the immunity rule declared in Monroe v. Pape. Held, reversed, and on this point, Monroe v. Pape is overruled. (98 S.Ct. 2022, 56 L.Ed.2d 619.)

(a) The basic rule of liability is that local governing bodies can be sued directly under 42 U.S.C., §1983 for monetary, declaratory, or injunctive relief where "the action that is alleged to be unconstitutional implements or executes a policy statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by that body's officers." (98 S.Ct. 2035, 56 L.Ed.2d 635.)

(b) However, liability cannot be based on the doctrine of respondeat superior. "[A] local government may not be sued for an injury inflicted solely by its employees or agents. Instead, it is when execution of a government's policy or custom, whether made by its lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy, inflicts the injury that the government as an entity is responsible under §1983." (98 S.Ct. 2038, 56 L.Ed.2d 638.) (See Brandon v. Holt (1985) 469 U.S. 464, 105 S.Ct. 873, 878, 83 L.Ed.2d 878, 885 [judgment against public official in his official capacity imposes liability on public entity, provided it received notice and opportunity to respond]; Los Angeles v. Heller (1986) 475 U.S. 796, 106 S.Ct. 1571, 1573, 89 L.Ed.2d 806, 810 [in action against police officer and municipality based on officer's lack of probable cause and use of excessive force in making arrest, general verdict for officer required dismissal of complaint against municipality]; 92 Harv. L. Rev. 311 [Monell]; 44 Hastings L. J. 499 [Bifurcation of Civil Right Defendants: Undermining Monell in Police Brutality Cases]; 44 Hastings L. J. 753 [endless cycle of abuse; why 42 U.S.C., §1983 is ineffective in deterring police brutality]; 62 So. Cal. L. Rev. 539 [Monell legacy: balancing federalism concerns and municipal accountability under 42 U.S.C., §1983]; 4 Rotunda, §19.32.)

Many later cases have agreed that municipal liability is not based on respondeat superior. (See St. Louis v. Praprotnik (1988) 485 U.S. 112, 108 S.Ct. 915, 927, 99 L.Ed.2d 107, infra, §831 [restating and reaffirming Monell's rejection of respondeat superior]; Jett v. Dallas Independent School Dist. (1989) 491 U.S. 701, 109 S.Ct. 2702, 2722, 105 L.Ed.2d 598, 626, 627 [action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 is exclusive federal damages remedy for violation of 42 U.S.C., §1981 (supra, §814) by state actor; hence, municipality may not be held liable under respondeat superior theory]; Board of County Commrs. of Bryan County, Oklahoma v. Brown (1997) 520 U.S. 397, 117 S.Ct. 1382, 1388, 137 L.Ed.2d 626, 639 [following Monell]; Choate v. Orange (2000) 86 C.A.4th 312, 330, 103 C.R.2d 339 [where governmental entity indemnifies employees, and plaintiffs have already recovered full compensation from them, plaintiffs may not bring action against entity under Monell]; 103 Harv. L. Rev. 320 [Jett]; 35 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1187 [role of causation in §1983 municipal liability analysis].)

(2) No Immunity From Suit. A cause of action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 is independent from a state cause of action, even where the same conduct gives rise to both. The state cause of action may be barred by public entity immunity, but this does not mean that a city or its employees may not be liable under 42 U.S.C., §1983 for deprivation of a person's civil rights under color of law. (Berman v. Daly City (1993) 21 C.A.4th 276, 285, 286, 26 C.R.2d 493 [action by driver injured when struck by criminal suspect's car being pursued by police officer; officer's conduct, even if negligent, was not sufficiently reckless or outrageous to support action under 42 U.S.C., §1983].)

Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence & Coordination Unit (1993) 507 U.S. 163, 113 S.Ct. 1160, 122 L.Ed.2d 517, rejected the view that a federal court may apply a "heightened pleading standard" in civil rights cases alleging municipal liability under Monell. The municipality argued that a more relaxed pleading requirement would subject municipalities to expensive and time-consuming discovery in every §1983 case, "eviscerating their immunity from suit." (113 S.Ct. 1162, 122 L.Ed.2d 523.)

"This argument wrongly equates freedom from liability with immunity from suit." (113 S.Ct. 1162, 122 L.Ed.2d 523.) Unlike various government officials, municipalities do not enjoy immunity from suit, either absolute or qualified, under 42 U.S.C., §1983. A municipality can be sued under 42 U.S.C., §1983, but it cannot be held liable unless a municipal policy or custom caused the constitutional injury. (113 S.Ct. 1162, 122 L.Ed.2d 523.) "The phenomenon of litigation against municipal corporations based on claimed constitutional violations by their employees dates from our decision in Monell. ... Perhaps if Rules 8 and 9 were rewritten today, claims against municipalities under §1983 might be subjected to the added specificity requirement of Rule 9(b). But that is a result which must be obtained by the process of amending the Federal Rules, and not by judicial interpretation. In the absence of such an amendment, federal courts and litigants must rely on summary judgment and control of discovery to weed out unmeritorious claims sooner rather than later." (113 S.Ct. 1163, 122 L.Ed.2d 524.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.206

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.32.

32 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

1. Original Civil Rights Acts.

e. Action Against Municipality.

1a. (New) Superseding Intervening Cause.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 830A

[§ 830A] (New) Superseding Intervening Cause.

In Manta Management Corp. v. San Bernardino (2008) 43 C.4th 400, 75 C.R.3d 353, 181 P.3d 159, plaintiff sought monetary damages under 42 U.S.C., §1983 against defendant city for lost profits to its business during a period in which a preliminary injunction and a stay pending appeal were in effect. Defendant had sought the preliminary injunction and stay, which were issued by the superior court and the Court of Appeal, respectively. Those courts ultimately ruled that the ordinance, which restricted adult clubs to certain districts in the city and which was the legal basis for the preliminary injunction, was unconstitutional. The California Supreme Court applied the tort concept of independent intervening cause. "[W]here a court is provided with appropriate facts to adjudicate a motion for a preliminary injunction or a motion for a stay pending appeal, the courts' intervening exercise of independent judgment breaks the chain of causation" for purposes of liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983. However, this rule does not apply when the judges are pressured or materially misled by a defendant to reach an erroneous decision. Here, because there was a dispute whether material misrepresentations were made, the case would be remanded for further proceedings. (43 C.4th 403, 412.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

33 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
1. Original Civil Rights Acts.
e. Action Against Municipality.
2. Proof of Official Policy.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 831

[§ 831] In General.

In Oklahoma City v. Tuttle (1985) 471 U.S. 808, 105 S.Ct. 2427, 85 L.Ed.2d 791, the Court held that a municipal policy sufficient to impose liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983 could not be established by a single, isolated instance of misconduct by a police officer. (105 S.Ct. 2436, 2440, 85 L.Ed.2d 804, 810.) (See 13 Hastings Const. L. Q. 733.)

The question whether a single decision by a governmental official can ever establish the requisite governmental policy was explored in greater detail in Pembaur v. Cincinnati (1986) 475 U.S. 469, 106 S.Ct. 1292, 89 L.Ed.2d 452, where deputy sheriffs and city policemen, acting on instructions from the county prosecutor, smashed down a door of plaintiff's medical clinic to serve capias on two of his employees. Held, the action, which violated plaintiff's Fourth Amendment rights, was taken pursuant to county policy.

(a) "[M]unicipal liability may be imposed for a single decision by municipal policymakers under appropriate circumstances. No one has ever doubted, for instance, that a municipality may be liable under §1983 for a single decision by its properly constituted legislative body ... because even a single decision by such a body unquestionably constitutes an act of official government policy." (106 S.Ct. 1298, 89 L.Ed.2d 463.) Moreover, Monell v. Department of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611, supra, §830, "makes clear that it expressly envisioned other officials 'whose acts or edicts may fairly be said to represent official policy.' " (106 S.Ct. 1298, 89 L.Ed.2d 463.)

(b) Hence, "municipal liability under §1983 attaches where--and only where--a deliberate choice to follow a course of action is made from among various alternatives by the official or officials responsible for establishing final policy with respect to the subject in question." (106 S.Ct. 1300, 89 L.Ed.2d 465.)

(c) Here, the county prosecutor was authorized by statute and practice to make final decisions on legal questions. In ordering the officers to forcibly enter plaintiff's clinic, the prosecutor, rather than merely rendering legal advice, was establishing county policy under which the county could be held liable. (106 S.Ct. 1301, 89 L.Ed.2d 466.)

St. Louis v. Praprotnik (1988) 485 U.S. 112, 108 S.Ct. 915, 99 L.Ed.2d 107, observed that the plurality opinion in Pembaur had led to different interpretations by the Courts of Appeals, and attempted "again to clarify the issue." (108 S.Ct. 924, 99 L.Ed.2d 118.)

(a) The identification of policymaking officials is a question of state law, and is not a question of fact in the usual sense. "Without attempting to canvass the numberless factual scenarios that may come to light in litigation, we can be confident that state law (which may include valid local ordinances and regulations) will always direct a court to some official or body that has the responsibility for making law or setting policy in any given area of a local government's business." (108 S.Ct. 925, 99 L.Ed.2d 119.)

(b) The plurality in Pembaur recognized that difficulties can arise when it is contended that a municipal policymaker has delegated his or her policymaking authority to another official. "If the mere exercise of discretion by an employee could give rise to a constitutional violation, the result would be indistinguishable from respondeat superior liability. If, however, a city's unlawful policymakers could insulate the government from liability simply by delegating their policymaking authority to others, §1983 could not serve its intended purpose. It may not be possible to draw an elegant line that will resolve this conundrum, but certain principles should provide useful guidance." (108 S.Ct. 925, 99 L.Ed.2d 120.) These principles are:

(1) "First, whatever analysis is used to identify municipal policymakers, egregious attempts by local government to insulate themselves from liability for unconstitutional policies are precluded by a separate doctrine. Relying on the language of §1983, the Court has long recognized that a plaintiff may be able to prove the existence of a widespread practice that, although not authorized by written law or express municipal policy, is 'so permanent and well settled as to constitute a "custom or usage" with the force of law.' That principle, which has not been affected by Monell or subsequent cases, ensures that most deliberate municipal evasions of the Constitution will be sharply limited." (108 S.Ct. 926, 99 L.Ed.2d 120.)

(2) "Second, as the Pembaur plurality recognized, the authority to make municipal policy is necessarily the authority to make final policy. ... When an official's discretionary decisions are constrained by policies not of that official's making, those policies, rather than the subordinate's departures from them, are the act of the municipality. Similarly, when a subordinate's decision is subject to review by the municipality's authorized policymakers, they have retained the authority to measure the official's conduct for conformance with their policies. If the authorized policymakers approve a subordinate's decision and the basis for it, their ratification would be chargeable to the municipality because their decision is final." (108 S.Ct. 926, 99 L.Ed.2d 120.)

Three justices joined in a separate concurrence criticizing the plurality's theory as "unduly narrow and unrealistic" (108 S.Ct. 928, 99 L.Ed.2d 123), and one justice dissented (108 S.Ct. 937, 99 L.Ed.2d 133). (See 102 Harv. L. Rev. 320 [St. Louis v. Praprotnik]; 62 So. Cal. L. Rev. 539; 35 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1187 [role of causation in §1983 municipal liability analysis].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.206

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

In Harman v. San Francisco (2006) 136 C.A.4th 1279, 39 C.R.3d 589, the court, following Pembaur v. Cincinnati (1986) 475 U.S. 469, 106 S.Ct. 1292, 89 L.Ed.2d 452, text, p. 256, held that defendant city and county was liable for racial discrimination against a white male. Plaintiff claimed that his promotion as an airport safety officer was delayed because a provisional pool of qualified applicants made up only of white applicants was terminated. Although there was no proof linking plaintiff's complaint of racial discrimination with policies of the civil service commission, under Monell v. Department of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611, text, §830, the commission was not the exclusive source of final policymaking authority. (136 C.A.4th 1299, 1300.) Here, defendant had effectively delegated its policymaking authority to the airport employment manager who operated as final arbiter of municipal policy regarding diversity staffing and provisional appointments. (136 C.A.4th 1301, 1303.)

34 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 1. Original Civil Rights Acts. e. Action Against Municipality. 2. Proof of Official Policy. bb. Inadequate Training.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 832

[§ 832] Inadequate Training.

In Canton, Ohio v. Harris (1989) 489 U.S. 378, 109 S.Ct. 1197, 103 L.Ed.2d 412, plaintiff claimed that her due process right to medical attention while in custody was violated by virtue of the city's failure to train its police officers on when to summon medical care. Held, municipal liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983 could be imposed.

(a) "[T]he inadequacy of police training may serve as the basis for §1983 liability only where the failure to train amounts to deliberate indifference to the rights of persons with whom the police come into contact." (109 S.Ct. 1204, 103 L.Ed.2d 426.) Under this test, it must be proved that inadequate training represents city policy and that the identified deficiency is closely related to the injury. (109 S.Ct. 1205, 1206, 103 L.Ed.2d 427, 428.)

(b) This approach is consistent with the rule of Monell v. Department of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611, supra, §830, that the violation must result from a municipal policy or custom. Also, to allow liability on a lesser standard would result in de facto respondeat superior liability, which was rejected in Monell. (109 S.Ct. 1205, 1206, 103 L.Ed.2d 427, 428.) (See Irwin v. Hemet (1994) 22 C.A.4th 507, 526, 527, 27 C.R.2d 433, supra, §827 [following Canton; parents and children of jail inmate who killed himself adequately alleged deprivation of liberty interest in companionship and society between parent and child resulting from city's adoption of custom or policy not to train jailers in suicide screening and prevention]; Board of County Commrs. of Bryan County, Oklahoma v. Brown (1997) 520 U.S. 397, 117 S.Ct. 1382, 1394, 137 L.Ed.2d 626, 646 [distinguishing Canton; municipality is not liable for sheriff's isolated decision to hire deputy without adequate screening where plaintiff failed to demonstrate that sheriff's decision reflected conscious disregard for high risk that deputy would use excessive force in violation of plaintiff's federally protected right]; Melendez v. Los Angeles (1998) 63 C.A.4th 1, 73 C.R.2d 469 [actions of off-duty police officers who used excessive force while working as private security officers without police department permission or approval did not trigger municipal liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983].)

Collins v. Harker Heights, Texas (1992) 503 U.S. 115, 112 S.Ct. 1061, 117 L.Ed.2d 261, held that 42 U.S.C., §1983 does not provide a remedy for a municipal employee who is fatally injured in the course of his or her employment because the city customarily failed to train or warn its employees about known hazards in the workplace. "Even though the city's conduct may be actionable under state law, we hold that §1983 does not apply because such conduct does not violate the Due Process Clause." (112 S.Ct. 1064, 117 L.Ed.2d 268.)

The opinion discusses Canton and Oklahoma City v. Tuttle (1985) 471 U.S. 808, 105 S.Ct. 2427, 85 L.Ed.2d 791, supra, §831, explaining that "[o]ur purpose in citing these cases is to emphasize the separate character of the inquiry into the question of municipal responsibility and the question whether a constitutional violation occurs." (112 S.Ct. 1067, 117 L.Ed.2d 271.) "We are also not persuaded that the city's alleged failure to train its employees, or to warn them about known risks of harm, was an omission that can properly be characterized as arbitrary, or conscience-shocking, in a constitutional sense. Petitioner's claim is analogous to a fairly typical state law tort claim: The city breached its duty of care to her husband by failing to provide a safe work environment. Because the Due Process Clause 'does not purport to supplant traditional tort law in laying down rules of conduct to regulate liability for injuries that attend living together in society,' ... we have previously rejected claims that the Due Process Clause should be interpreted to impose federal duties that are analogous to those traditionally imposed by state tort law. ... The reasoning in those cases applies with special force to claims asserted against public employers because state law, rather than the Federal Constitution, generally governs the substance of the employment relationship." (112 S.Ct. 1070, 117 L.Ed.2d 275.) (See supra, §824.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

35 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

1. Original Civil Rights Acts.

e. Action Against Municipality.

2. Proof of Official Policy.

cc. Land Use Disputes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 833

[§ 833] Land Use Disputes.

In Stubblefield Const. Co. v. San Bernardino (1995) 32 C.A.4th 687, 38 C.R.2d 413, plaintiff developer, who was prevented from building an apartment complex, sued defendant city, its council, and former council member M for violations of substantive due process and equal protection under 42 U.S.C., §1983. The actions taken by defendants included the following: (1) annexing the property on the false promise that plaintiff would have the zoning necessary to complete the project; (2) telling plaintiff that it would be reviewed under the law in existence when it submitted a development application; (3) passing a new zoning ordinance that would require a conditional use permit from plaintiff, if the new ordinance applied to it; (4) passing an urgency ordinance that would make the new zoning ordinance applicable to plaintiff in 30 days; (5) appealing an environmental impact study, so that plaintiff could not meet the 30-day requirement; (6) passing an amendment to the review ordinance, under which proposed buildings had to be compatible with the surrounding neighborhood; and (7) denying plaintiff's request to have its project grandfathered, after a 2-year delay due to a moratorium that was imposed on all new developments as a result of an unrelated lawsuit. The trial judge entered judgment for plaintiff. Held, reversed.

(a) General rules.

(1) A cause of action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 requires (a) an action by a person acting under color of state law, and (b) conduct that deprives a person of rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the federal Constitution or laws. The term "person" includes local governments. (32 C.A.4th 704, citing Monell v. Department of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611, supra, §830.)

(2) Federal courts have been reluctant to turn land use disputes into federal civil rights claims. (32 C.A.4th 704, citing Williamson County Regional Planning Com. v. Hamilton Bank of Johnson City (1985) 473 U.S. 172, 105 S.Ct. 3108, 87 L.Ed.2d 126, and cases from the First and Second circuits.)

(b) Substantive due process.

(1) The city's argument that plaintiff had no vested right to develop its property has merit. As the court said in Avco Community Developers v. South Coast Regional Com. (1976) 17 C.3d 785, 132 C.R. 386, 553 P.2d 546: "[N]either the existence of a particular zoning nor work undertaken pursuant to governmental approvals preparatory to construction of buildings can form the basis of a vested right to build a structure which does not comply with the laws applicable at the time a building permit is issued. By zoning the property or issuing approvals for work preliminary to construction the government makes no representation to a landowner that he will be exempt from the zoning laws in effect at the subsequent time he applies for a building permit or that he may construct particular structures on the property, and thus the government cannot be estopped to enforce the laws in effect when the permit is issued." (32 C.A.4th 708.)

(2) Assuming that plaintiff did not need to have a vested right to assert substantive due process as a protection against irrational governmental action, the test is that this doctrine does not protect individuals from all governmental "actions that infringe liberty or injure property in violation of some law. Rather, substantive due process prevents 'governmental power from being used for purposes of oppression' or 'abuse of governmental power that shocks the conscience,' or 'action that is legally irrational in that it is not sufficiently keyed to any legitimate state interests.'" (32 C.A.4th 709, 710.)

(3) Under this test, plaintiff has not shown arbitrary governmental action. Specifically, the alleged vendetta of former councilman M was merely a response to the concerns of his constituents, an appropriate factor for consideration in zoning decisions. Similarly, the actions of the city council were proper. A legislative body is generally not bound by the actions of its predecessor, and it can amend ordinances applicable to property without incurring liability. The amendment to the zoning ordinance applied to all multifamily residences, the moratorium affected 40 or 50 projects north of a certain line and was not directed specifically at plaintiff, and the refusal to grandfather the project simply resulted in plaintiff being treated like everyone else. In short, there was a rational basis for defendant city's actions. (32 C.A.4th 711.)

(c) Equal protection.

(1) There was nothing arbitrary or unreasonable in the zoning actions taken here. All of defendant's actions produced classifications reasonably related to a state interest. (32 C.A.4th 712.)

(2) Plaintiff argued that its property was unique, but there is no evidence that property similar to plaintiff's was treated differently, and none of the city council's actions applied to plaintiff's project alone. The regulation of foothill property is clearly a legitimate public purpose, especially here, because the environmental questions raised by the project's opponents have never been answered. The classifications adopted by defendants were clearly related to the purpose of regulating such property. (32 C.A.4th 715.)

(3) While it may be fairly certain that some of defendant's actions, especially those of former councilman M, were taken with plaintiff's project in mind and with the intent to block that project, the motives of legislators are generally not relevant. If the legislative determination that its action will tend to serve a legitimate public purpose is at least debatable, the challenge to that action must fail as a matter of law. (32 C.A.4th 714.) In other words, the dispute is too typical of the usual disagreement between a developer and a city planning council to rise to the level of a constitutional claim, regardless of the council's motives. (32 C.A.4th 712.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

36 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 1. Original Civil Rights Acts. f. Immunities. 1. Absolute Immunity. aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 834

[§ 834] In General.

Although 42 U.S.C., §1983 makes "every person" acting under color of state law liable for depriving another of his or her federal rights, the Supreme Court has held that Congress did not intend to abrogate the common law immunities that existed at the time the statute was enacted. (See Tenney v. Brandhove (1951) 341 U.S. 367, 71 S.Ct. 783, 786, 95 L.Ed. 1019, 1024, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §165; 4 Rotunda, §19.21.) Hence, the following persons possess absolute immunity from liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983, when acting within the scope of their offices:

(1) Legislators. (See Tenney v. Brandhove, supra, 71 S.Ct. 786, 95 L.Ed. 1024 [state legislators]; Lake Country Estates v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (1979) 440 U.S. 391, 99 S.Ct. 1171, 1179, 59 L.Ed.2d 401, 412 [members of bi-state regional agency]; Supreme Court of Virginia v. Consumers Union of United States (1980) 446 U.S. 719, 100 S.Ct. 1967, 1976, 64 L.Ed.2d 641, 655 [members of state Supreme Court when enacting rules regulating legal profession]; Bogan v. Scott-Harris (1998) 523 U.S. 44, 118 S.Ct. 966, 970, 973, 140 L.Ed.2d 79, 85, 88 [extending absolute immunity to local legislators for legislative activities; thus, local legislators who enacted ordinance eliminating government office were immune, regardless of their motives]; 4 Rotunda, §19.22; 28 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1087 [Lake County Estates]; 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §165.)

(2) Judges. (See infra, §835.)

(3) Prosecutors. (See infra, §836.)

(4) Witnesses. (See Briscoe v. LaHue (1983) 460 U.S. 325, 103 S.Ct. 1108, 1113, 75 L.Ed.2d 96, 104, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §184 [perjured testimony of police officer]; 4 Rotunda, §19.26; 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §184.)

Tower v. Glover (1984) 467 U.S. 914, 104 S.Ct. 2820, 81 L.Ed.2d 758, held that public defenders had no immunity from liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983 for intentionally conspiring with state officials to secure their clients' convictions. Although lack of immunity may deter public defenders from negotiating with prosecutors, it is Congress' function to determine if §1983 liability has become too burdensome and, if so, what the appropriate remedy should be. (104 S.Ct.

2825, 2826, 81 L.Ed.2d 765, 766.) (See Polk County v. Dodson (1981) 454 U.S. 312, 102 S.Ct. 445, 453, 70 L.Ed.2d 509, 516 [in representing indigents, public defender exercises private function]; 4 Rotunda, §19.25.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.211 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.21.

37 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 1. Original Civil Rights Acts. f. Immunities. 1. Absolute Immunity. bb. Judges.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 835

[§ 835] Judges.

Judges possess absolute immunity from liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983 when acting within the scope of their office. (See Pierson v. Ray (1967) 386 U.S. 547, 87 S.Ct. 1213, 1218, 18 L.Ed.2d 288, 295, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §166; Stump v. Sparkman (1978) 435 U.S. 349, 98 S.Ct. 1099, 1108, 55 L.Ed.2d 331, 344, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §169; Greene v. Zank (1984) 158 C.A.3d 497, 506, 204 C.R. 770, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §172 [State Bar and Committee of Bar Examiners were protected by quasi-judicial immunity in action based on delay in processing applicant's preadmission investigation]; 4 Rotunda, §19.23; 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §166 et seq.; cf. Dennis v. Sparks (1980) 449 U.S. 24, 101 S.Ct. 183, 186, 66 L.Ed.2d 185, 189, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §175 [judge's immunity does not extend to private person who engages in corrupt conspiracy involving bribery of judge]; Pulliam v. Allen (1984) 466 U.S. 522, 104 S.Ct. 1970, 1978, 1982, 80 L.Ed.2d 565, 576, 580, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §170 [judicial immunity bars neither prospective injunctive relief against judicial officer nor award of attorneys' fees under 42 U.S.C., §1988 to person obtaining such relief]; Cleavinger v. Saxner (1985) 474 U.S. 193, 106 S.Ct. 496, 501, 88 L.Ed.2d 507, 515 [members of prison discipline committee are not entitled to absolute judicial immunity].)

Mireles v. Waco (1991) 502 U.S. 9, 112 S.Ct. 286, 116 L.Ed.2d 9, a per curiam opinion with three justices dissenting, summarizes the case law on judicial immunity, in an unusual fact situation. Plaintiff, a Los Angeles public defender, failed to appear at the initial call of a superior court judge's morning calendar because he was in another courtroom waiting to appear. The judge ordered police officers to bring plaintiff into his courtroom. In this action for damages under 42 U.S.C., §1983 against the judge and two police officers, the complaint alleged that the judge ordered the officers "to forcibly and with excessive force" seize him and bring him into the courtroom; that the officers removed him "by means of unreasonable force and violence"; and that the judge "knowingly and deliberately approved and ratified each of the aforesaid acts." The district court dismissed the case on the ground of judicial immunity; the Court of Appeals reversed on the ground that the alleged actions were not taken in the judge's judicial capacity; the Supreme Court, on certiorari, summarily reversed the judgment of the Court of Appeals.

(a) "A long line of this Court's precedents acknowledges that, generally, a judge is immune from a suit for money damages." (112 S.Ct. 287, 116 L.Ed.2d 13, citing the leading cases.) "Although unfairness and injustice to a litigant may result on occasion," a judicial officer must be free to exercise his or her authority without apprehension of personal consequences. (112 S.Ct. 287, 116 L.Ed.2d 13.) Judicial immunity is not overcome by allegations of bad faith or malice. (112 S.Ct. 288, 116 L.Ed.2d 14, citing Pierson v. Ray, supra, and Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 102 S.Ct. 2727, 73 L.Ed.2d 396, infra, §837.)

(b) The immunity is overcome in only two sets of circumstances: first, nonjudicial actions, i.e., actions not taken in the judge's judicial capacity; second, actions, though judicial in nature, taken in the complete absence of all jurisdiction. (112 S.Ct. 288, 116 L.Ed.2d 14.)

(c) The judge's alleged actions were taken in his judicial capacity. A judge's direction to court officers to bring a person who is in the courthouse before him is a function normally performed by a judge. (112 S.Ct. 288, 116 L.Ed.2d 14.) A judge's direction to police officers to carry out an order with excessive force is not a function normally performed by a judge. "But if only the particular act in question were to be scrutinized, then any mistake of a judge in excess of his authority would become a 'nonjudicial' act, because an improper or erroneous act cannot be said to be normally performed by a judge." Accordingly, as the language in Stump v. Sparkman (1978) 435 U.S. 349, 98 S.Ct. 1099, 55 L.Ed.2d 331, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §169, indicates, "the relevant inquiry is the 'nature' and 'function' of the act, not the 'act itself'. ... In other words, we look to the particular act's relation to a general function normally performed by a judge, in this case the function of directing police officers to bring counsel in a pending case before the court." (112 S.Ct. 288, 116 L.Ed.2d 15.)

(d) The fact that the judge's order was carried out by police officers does not "transform his action from 'judicial' to 'executive' in character." As Forrester v. White (1988) 484 U.S. 219, 108 S.Ct. 538, 98 L.Ed.2d 555, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §168, instructs, "it is 'the nature of the function performed, not the identity of the actor who performed it,' that inform[s] our immunity analysis. ... A judge's direction to an executive officer to bring counsel before the court is no more executive in character than a judge's issuance of a warrant for an executive officer to search a home." (112 S.Ct. 289, 116 L.Ed.2d 15.)

(e) The second part of the immunity inquiry is whether the actions were taken in the complete absence of all jurisdiction. "We have little trouble concluding that they were not. If Judge Mireles authorized and ratified the police officers' use of excessive force, he acted in excess of his authority. But such an action--taken in the very aid of the judge's jurisdiction over a matter before him--cannot be said to have been taken in the absence of jurisdiction." (112 S.Ct. 289, 116 L.Ed.2d 15.)

Two dissenting opinions were filed. (112 S.Ct. 289, 290, 116 L.Ed.2d 16.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.23.

38 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
1. Original Civil Rights Acts.
f. Immunities.
1. Absolute Immunity.
cc. Prosecutors.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 836

[§ 836] Prosecutors.

(1) In General. Prosecutors possess absolute immunity from liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983 when acting within the scope of their office. (See Imbler v. Pachtman (1976) 424 U.S. 409, 96 S.Ct. 984, 995, 47 L.Ed.2d 128, 144, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §181; Burns v. Reed (1991) 500 U.S. 478, 111 S.Ct. 1934, 114 L.Ed.2d 547, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §181 [state prosecuting attorney; functional approach of Imbler v. Pachtman applied]; Pitts v. Kern (1998) 17 C.4th 340, 362, 366, 70 C.R.2d 823, 949 P.2d 920, supra, §819 [district attorney represents state and is not "person" subject to liability for damages under 42 U.S.C., §1983]; Bach v. Butte (1983) 147 C.A.3d 554, 566, 195 C.R. 268, 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §882; Gensburg v. Miller (1994) 31 C.A.4th 512, 519, 37 C.R.2d 97, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §181 [employees of state and county Department of Social Services, charged under 42 U.S.C., §1983 with revoking foster home license, enjoyed absolute prosecutorial immunity]; 4 Rotunda, §19.24; 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §180 et seq.; cf. Randle v. San Francisco (1986) 186 C.A.3d 449, 458, 230 C.R. 901 [police officer in charge of plaintiff's case was not functionally equivalent to prosecutor, and hence, not entitled to absolute immunity in action based on alleged suppression of exculpatory evidence].)

(2) Distinction: Investigatory Phase. In Buckley v. Fitzsimmons (1993) 509 U.S. 259, 113 S.Ct. 2606, 125 L.Ed.2d 209, petitioner Buckley brought a civil rights action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 seeking damages from respondent prosecutors for allegedly fabricating evidence during the preliminary investigation of a crime and making false statements at a press conference announcing the return of an indictment. The question presented was whether respondents were absolutely immune from liability on either or both of these claims. Held, applying the "functional approach" of Burns v. Reed, supra, the investigating work of the prosecutors did not provide them with absolute immunity. (113 S.Ct. 2613, 2614, 2618, 125 L.Ed.2d 223, 224, 229.)

After Burns, it would be anomalous "to grant prosecutors only qualified immunity when offering legal advice to police about an unarrested suspect, but then to endow them with absolute immunity when conducting investigative work themselves in order to decide whether a suspect may be arrested. That the prosecutors later called a grand jury to consider the evidence this work produced does not retroactively transform that work from the administrative into the prosecutorial. A prosecutor may not shield his investigative work with the aegis of absolute immunity merely because, after a suspect is eventually arrested, indicted, and tried, that work may be retrospectively described as 'preparation' for a possible trial; every prosecutor might then shield himself from liability for any constitutional wrong against innocent citizens by ensuring that they go to trial. When the functions of prosecutors and detectives are the same, as they were here, the immunity that protects them is also the same." (113 S.Ct. 2617, 125 L.Ed.2d 227.)

One justice filed a concurring opinion (113 S.Ct. 2619, 125 L.Ed.2d 230), and four justices joined in an opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part (113 S.Ct. 2620, 125 L.Ed.2d 232).

(3) Distinction: Prosecutor Acting as Complaining Witness. A prosecutor who attests to facts recited in a certification for determination of probable cause supporting an arrest warrant performs the function of a complaining witness, and may be subject to liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983. (Kalina v. Fletcher (1997) 522 U.S. 118, 118 S.Ct. 502, 510, 139 L.Ed.2d 471, 482.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.24.

Bach case:

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §928.

39 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 1. Original Civil Rights Acts. f. Immunities. 2. Qualified Immunity. aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 837

[§ 837] In General.

(1) Persons Covered. Most state and local officials and employees who are not entitled to absolute immunity (supra, §834 et seq.) are entitled to qualified immunity. (See 4 Rotunda, §19.28; 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §177.) Thus, although a state official acting in his or her official capacity is not a "person" subject to liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983 (Will v. Michigan Dept. of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 109 S.Ct. 2304, 2311, 105 L.Ed.2d 45, 58), an official sued in his or her individual capacity is a "person" subject to liability under the statute (Hafer v. Melo (1991) 502 U.S. 21, 112 S.Ct. 358, 116 L.Ed.2d 301, supra, §819). (See Chavez v. Martinez (2003) 538 U.S. 760, 123 S.Ct. 1994, 2000, 2006, 155 L.Ed.2d 984, 993, 1000 [officer had qualified immunity in action alleging coercive interrogation; plaintiff's Fifth Amendment rights were not violated because plaintiff was never charged with crime and statements were never used against him in criminal proceeding]; Ogborn v. Lancaster (2002) 101 C.A.4th 448, 458, 124 C.R.2d 238 [officers who relied on inspection and abatement warrant in bulldozing home were entitled to qualified immunity]; 30 Cal. Western L. Rev. 201 [summary judgment and issues for trier of fact in cases involving qualified immunity]; 29 Hastings Const. L. Q. 613 [excessive force in carrying out court order]; on persons covered by 42 U.S.C., §1983 generally, see supra, §819.)

(2) Objective Standard. Wood v. Strickland (1975) 420 U.S. 308, 95 S.Ct. 992, 43 L.Ed.2d 214, held that the defense of qualified immunity had both an objective and a subjective component; i.e., the defense would fail either if the official knew or should have known that his or her action would violate the plaintiff's constitutional rights or if the official acted with malicious intent to do so. (95 S.Ct. 1001, 43 L.Ed.2d 221.)

However, Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 102 S.Ct. 2727, 73 L.Ed.2d 396, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §179, adopted a purely objective standard: "[G]overnment officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known." (102 S.Ct. 2738, 73 L.Ed.2d 410, noting, in footnote 30, that although present case was action against federal officials based directly on Constitution, same standard applied in actions under 42 U.S.C., §1983.) (See 53 So. Cal. L. Rev. 945 [Civil Rights Suits Against State and Local Entities and Officials: Rights of Action, Immunities, and Federalism]; 59 Proof of Facts 3d 291 [Proof of Qualified Immunity Defense in 42 U.S.C. §1983 or Bivens Actions Against Law Enforcement Officers].)

In considering a claim of qualified immunity, a court first must consider whether the facts alleged, taken in the light most favorable to the party asserting the injury, show that the officer's conduct violated a constitutional right. "If no constitutional right would have been violated were the allegations established, there is no necessity for further inquiries concerning qualified immunity. On the other hand, if a violation could be made out on a favorable view of the parties' submissions, the next sequential step is to ask whether the right was clearly established. This inquiry ... must be undertaken in light of the specific context of the case." (Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S.Ct. 2151, 2156, 150 L.Ed.2d 272, 281 [following Anderson v. Creighton (1987) 483 U.S. 635, 107 S.Ct. 3034, 97 L.Ed.2d 523, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §183; test in excessive force cases is: first, was officer's use of force reasonable under circumstances, and second, was there clearly established rule prohibiting officer from acting as he or she did]; Hope v. Pelzer (2002) 536 U.S. 730, 122 S.Ct. 2508, 2516, 153 L.Ed.2d 666, 679 [past Eighth Amendment cases gave prison guards fair notice that shackling prisoner to hitching post, shirtless in the sun for 7 hours in painful position, with limited water, and without bathroom breaks was clear violation of proscription against cruel and unusual punishment, which warranted their loss of qualified immunity defense at summary judgment stage]; Venegas v. Los Angeles (2004) 32 C.4th 820, 11 C.R.3d 692, 87 P.3d 1, supra, §819 [ruling on qualified immunity requires analysis separate from question whether constitutional violation occurred; court also must consider whether reasonable officer would believe his or her conduct was clearly unlawful; remanded for consideration of Saucier principles].)

The objective standard was applied in the following cases. (See Malley v. Briggs (1986) 475 U.S. 335, 106 S.Ct. 1092, 1096, 89 L.Ed.2d 271, 278 [police officer is immune from liability for filing complaint and affidavit that fail to establish probable cause unless no reasonable officer could have concluded that warrant should issue]; Wilson v. Layne (1999) 526 U.S. 603, 119 S.Ct. 1692, 1700, 143 L.Ed.2d 818, 831 [police were immune from liability for allowing reporters into home during attempted execution of arrest warrant under state of law in existence at time of action]; Groh v. Ramirez (2004) 540 U.S. 551, 124 S.Ct. 1284, 1293, 157 L.Ed.2d 1068, 1082 [officer who prepared and conducted search under manifestly invalid warrant was not entitled to qualified immunity for illegal search]; Elene H. v. Los Angeles (1990) 220 C.A.3d 1445, 1453, 1454, 269 C.R. 783 [under Malley and Anderson, supra, law enforcement officers investigating possible child abuse are entitled to qualified rather than absolute immunity; officers' conduct in taking injured child and his sister into protective custody was objectively reasonable and justified finding of immunity as matter of law]; Southern Calif. Rapid Transit Dist. v. Superior Court (1994) 30 C.A.4th 713, 730, 36 C.R.2d 665 [transportation official was not immune, because he should have known that retaliatory firing of employee for exercising his First Amendment rights was prohibited]; Conway v. Pasadena Humane Soc. (1996) 45 C.A.4th 163, 178, 52 C.R.2d 777 [Fourth Amendment clearly prohibits warrantless, nonconsensual entry into home absent exigent circumstances; violation of city leash law did not constitute exigency justifying entry to impound dog who was secured inside house and posed no danger; officer's unreasonable ignorance that he has violated clearly established right does not confer qualified immunity]; Martinez v. Los Angeles (1996) 47 C.A.4th 334, 343, 344, 54 C.R.2d 772 [under objective standard, officers acted reasonably in shooting man who was high on drugs or alcohol, and who, despite repeated warnings to stop, approached officers with knife while shouting that he was going to kill them]; 28 Pepperdine L. Rev. 163 [Wilson].)

(3) Pleading. Qualified immunity is a defense that must be pleaded by the defendant. (Gomez v. Toledo (1980) 446 U.S. 635, 100 S.Ct. 1920, 1924, 64 L.Ed.2d 572, 578; Harlow v. Fitzgerald, supra, 102 S.Ct. 2736, 73 L.Ed.2d 408, footnote 24.)

(4) Burden of Proof. Crawford-El v. Britton (1998) 523 U.S. 574, 118 S.Ct. 1584, 1595, 140 L.Ed.2d 759, 777, held that neither Harlow nor specific policy concerns warrant a heightened burden of proof for claims requiring proof of improper intent; that burden would undermine the very purpose of 42 U.S.C., §1983 to provide a remedy for federal rights violations. (See 112 Harv. L. Rev. 303 [Crawford-El].)

(5) Review. Elder v. Holloway (1994) 510 U.S. 510, 114 S.Ct. 1019, 1021, 1023, 127 L.Ed.2d 344, 348, 351, held that whether a federal right was clearly established is a question of law; hence, review of a qualified immunity disposition must be conducted in light of all relevant precedents, not merely those cited to or considered in the district court.

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.211 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Persons Covered. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.28; 35 Golden Gate L. Rev. 139 [qualified immunity in excessive force cases]. (2) Objective Standard. Conduct by an official that only violates state law will not support a claim under 42 U.S.C., §1983. (Ritschel v. Fountain Valley (2006) 137 C.A.4th 107, 116, 122, 40 C.R.3d 48 [following Saucier v. Katz (2001) 533 U.S. 194, 121 S.Ct. 2151, 150 L.Ed.2d 272], text, p. 267; plaintiff failed to show that officers' failure to comply with California's implied consent law regarding alcohol testing, or officers' use of excessive force to obtain blood sample, effectively violated his federal constitutional rights under Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments].

See Macias v. Los Angeles (2006) 144 C.A.4th 313, 320, 50 C.R.3d 364 [trial court erred in granting summary judgment on 42 U.S.C., §1983 claim based on qualified immunity; it should have been clear to reasonable officer that detaining plaintiff in his driveway for one hour with his genitals exposed while premises were searched, when plaintiff posed no security threat and house had been secured within 4 minutes, violated plaintiff's Fourth Amendment right to reasonable detention incident to search]; Wood v. Emmerson (2007) 155 C.A.4th 1506, 1515, 1523, 66 C.R.3d 847 [trial court erred in determining as matter of law that search warrant was facially invalid and that officer was not immune from suit; officer had qualified immunity because reasonably well-trained officer would not have realized that affidavit was defective and reasonably would have relied on warrant to conduct search].

40 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

1. Original Civil Rights Acts.

f. Immunities.

2. Qualified Immunity.

bb. Violation of Other Provision.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 838

[§ 838] Violation of Other Provision.

In Davis v. Scherer (1984) 468 U.S. 183, 104 S.Ct. 3012, 82 L.Ed.2d 139, involving a highway patrolman whose Fourteenth Amendment rights were violated when he was fired without a formal pretermination or a prompt post-termination hearing, the principal issue was whether defendant officials had lost their qualified immunity by failing to follow a personnel regulation requiring a complete investigation of the charge and an opportunity for the employee to respond in writing. Held, immunity was not lost. Plaintiff's position was that an official's violation of a clear statute or regulation, although not itself the basis of the action, should deprive the official of immunity for violation of other statutory or constitutional provisions. (104 S.Ct. 3019, 82 L.Ed.2d 149.) This is untenable:

(a) It would disrupt the balance between the interests in vindication of persons' constitutional rights and in the officials' effective performance of their duties by making them liable for violations of even unclearly defined constitutional rights merely because their conduct also violated some other statute or regulation. (104 S.Ct. 3020, 82 L.Ed.2d 150.)

(b) Even if the proposed rule were limited to provisions that advanced important interests, it would require extensive judicial inquiry into the nature of various statutory and administrative codes and of the officials' awareness of them, thereby making it even more difficult for officials to anticipate the possible legal consequences of their actions. (104 S.Ct. 3020, 82 L.Ed.2d 150.)

(c) It is often unsound policy to demand official compliance with statutes and regulations on pain of money damages. Many officials must be free to take swift and firm action even though faced with a plethora of voluminous and ambiguous rules. (104 S.Ct. 3021, 82 L.Ed.2d 151.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

41 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
1. Original Civil Rights Acts.
f. Immunities.
2. Qualified Immunity.
cc. Distinction: Private Defendant.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 839

[§ 839] Distinction: Private Defendant.

(1) Federal Law. In Wyatt v. Cole (1992) 504 U.S. 158, 112 S.Ct. 1827, 118 L.Ed.2d 504, C sought to dissolve his cattle partnership with W. When no agreement could be reached, C filed a state court complaint in replevin against W, accompanied by a replevin bond of $ 18,000. At that time the statute gave the judge no discretion to deny the writ, and the court ordered the sheriff to seize a number of items of W's personal property. W then brought suit in federal district court against C, C's attorney, and the sheriff, challenging the constitutionality of the statute and seeking injunctive relief and damages. The district court held that the statute denied due process; that the government officials were entitled to qualified immunity; and that C was also entitled to qualified immunity for conduct arising prior to the statute's invalidation. The Court of Appeals affirmed, and the Supreme Court granted certiorari to resolve a conflict among the Courts of Appeals over whether private defendants are, like certain governmental officials, entitled to qualified immunity. Held, judgment of Court of Appeals reversed.

(a) Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co. (1982) 457 U.S. 922, 102 S.Ct. 2744, 73 L.Ed.2d 482, held that private parties who attached a debtor's assets were subject to 42 U.S.C., §1983 liability if the attachment statute was constitutionally infirm. But Lugar left open the question whether private defendants were entitled to qualified immunity. (112 S.Ct. 1829, 1830, 118 L.Ed.2d 509, 511.)

(b) 42 U.S.C., §1983 does not on its face create immunities; however, if parties seeking immunity were shielded from tort liability when Congress enacted the Civil Rights Act, "we infer from legislative silence that Congress did not intend to abrogate such immunities when it imposed liability for actions taken under color of state law." (112 S.Ct. 1831, 118 L.Ed.2d 512.)

(c) In determining whether there was an immunity at common law that Congress intended to incorporate in the Act, "we look to the most closely analogous torts--in this case, malicious prosecution and abuse of process." (112 S.Ct. 1831, 118 L.Ed.2d 512.) Respondents argue that, because private defendants could defeat a malicious prosecution or abuse of process action if they acted without malice and with probable cause, they were entitled to immunity under Pierson v. Ray (1967) 386 U.S. 547, 87 S.Ct. 1213, 18 L.Ed.2d 288. But Pierson is of no avail here. "Even if there were sufficient common law support to conclude that respondents, like the police officers in Pierson, should be entitled to a good-faith defense, that would still not entitle them to what they sought and obtained in the courts below: the qualified immunity from suit accorded government officials." (112 S.Ct. 1832, 118 L.Ed.2d 513.)

(d) Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 102 S.Ct. 2727, 73 L.Ed.2d 396, supra, §837, altered the standard of qualified immunity adopted in prior cases.

(1) It established an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to liability, which, like an absolute immunity, is lost if the case is erroneously permitted to trial. The reasons for recognizing this immunity were based not simply on the existence of a good-faith defense at common law, but on the special policy concerns involved in suing governmental officials. "[T]he qualified immunity recognized in Harlow acts to safeguard government, and thereby to protect the public at large, not to benefit its agents." (112 S.Ct. 1833, 118 L.Ed.2d 515.)

(2) "These rationales are not transferable to private parties. Although principles of equality and fairness may suggest, as respondents argue, that private citizens who rely unsuspectingly on state laws they did not create and may have no reason to believe are invalid should have some protection from liability, as do their government counterparts, such interests are not sufficiently similar to the traditional purposes of qualified immunity to justify such an expansion. ... [E]xtending Harlow qualified immunity to private parties would have no bearing on whether public officials are able to act forcefully and decisively in their jobs or on whether qualified applicants enter public service. Moreover, unlike with government officials performing discretionary functions, the public interest will not be unduly impaired if private individuals are required to proceed to trial to resolve their legal disputes. In short, the nexus between private parties and the historic purposes of qualified immunity is simply too attenuated to justify such an extension of our doctrine of immunity." (112 S.Ct. 1833, 118 L.Ed.2d 515.)

(3) However, it may be that private defendants faced with §1983 liability under Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co. are entitled to an affirmative defense based on good faith or probable cause. It may also be that §1983 suits against private, rather than governmental, parties require plaintiffs to carry additional burdens. (112 S.Ct. 1834, 118 L.Ed.2d 515.)

Three justices joined in a dissenting opinion. (112 S.Ct. 1837, 118 L.Ed.2d 520.)

(2) California Law. In Bradley v. Medical Bd. of Calif. (1997) 56 C.A.4th 445, 65 C.R.2d 483, plaintiff physician sued the Medical Board of California, the state, and numerous individuals for violation of his federal and state constitutional due process rights. The action arose out of an undercover investigation into plaintiff's practice of prescribing dangerous drugs without medical justification, which ultimately caused plaintiff to voluntarily surrender his medical license. The trial court granted summary judgment, in part based on defendants' immunities. Held, the private citizens involved in the investigation are entitled to qualified immunity.

(a) Wyatt v. Cole decided only that qualified immunity is not available for private defendants faced with liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983 for invoking a state replevin, garnishment, or attachment statute. The Wyatt court did not "foreclose the possibility that under certain circumstances a private citizen could be entitled to an affirmative defense based on qualified immunity." (56 C.A.4th 461, quoting federal district court opinion from Maryland.)

(b) Courts have held that the particular facts justified extending qualified immunity to private citizens in post-Wyatt decisions where the citizens acted at the request of state officials who enjoyed qualified immunity themselves, and the citizens had no personal animosity towards the subject of the investigation. (56 C.A.4th 461, citing federal opinions from First and Tenth Circuits.) Here, the acts of the private defendants in assisting the board were objectively reasonable, and they had "no ax to grind" against plaintiff. The board's investigators are entitled to immunity for their part in the undercover investigation and "it would be anomalous to not extend the same protections to the private defendants." (56 C.A.4th 462.)

(c) Both before and after Wyatt, the Ninth Circuit has consistently held that private citizens are not entitled to qualified immunity in actions under 42 U.S.C., §1983. "While we commonly follow Ninth Circuit opinions as persuasive authority, in this instance we respectfully disagree with the court's apparent blanket position that qualified immunity does not shield private defendants" from liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983. (56 C.A.4th 462, footnote 14.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.211

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

42 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
1. Original Civil Rights Acts.
f. Immunities.
3. Governmental Immunity.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 840

[§ 840] Governmental Immunity.

(1) States. Congress, in enacting 42 U.S.C., §1983, did not intend to abrogate the basic rule that an action "by private parties seeking to impose a liability which must be paid from public funds in the state treasury is barred by the Eleventh Amendment." (Edelman v. Jordan (1974) 415 U.S. 651, 94 S.Ct. 1347, 1356, 1362, 39 L.Ed.2d 662, 673, 680, supra, §53; Quern v. Jordan (1979) 440 U.S. 332, 99 S.Ct. 1139, 1143, 1145, 59 L.Ed.2d 358, 363, 367; Will v. Michigan Dept. of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 109 S.Ct. 2304, 2307, 2308, 105 L.Ed.2d 45, 53 [state is not "person" and hence is immune from liability under 42 U.S.C., §1983]; 4 Rotunda, §19.31; 18 Hastings Const. L. Q. 695 [proposal to remove Eleventh Amendment immunity in §1983 actions]; 53 So. Cal. L. Rev. 945 [Civil Rights Suits Against State and Local Governmental Entities and Officials: Rights of Action, Immunities, and Federalism].)

(2) School Districts. In a case of first impression, Kirchmann v. Lake Elsinore Unified School Dist. (2000) 83 C.A.4th 1098, 1105, 100 C.R.2d 289, held that in view of California's extensive control over school districts' fiscal affairs and political status, they are instrumentalities of the state, exempt from suit under 42 U.S.C., §1983.

(3) Local Governments. In Owen v. Independence, Missouri (1980) 445 U.S. 622, 100 S.Ct. 1398, 63 L.Ed.2d 673, the Court, deciding a question reserved in Monell v. Department of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611, supra, §830, held that a municipality was not entitled to qualified immunity based on good faith of its officials. "[T]he principle of equitable loss-spreading has joined fault as a factor in distributing the costs of official misconduct." This "decision, together with prior precedents in this area, properly allocates these costs among the three principals in the scenario of the §1983 cause of action: the victim of the constitutional deprivation; the officer whose conduct caused the injury; and the public, as represented by the municipal entity. The innocent individual who is harmed by an abuse of governmental authority is assured that he will be compensated for his injury. The offending official, so long as he conducts himself in good faith, may go about his business secure in the knowledge that a qualified immunity will protect him from personal liability for damages that are more appropriately chargeable to the populace as a whole. And the public will be forced to bear only the costs of injury inflicted by the execution of a government's policy or custom, whether made by its lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy." (100 S.Ct. 1419, 63 L.Ed.2d 697.)

Three justices dissented. (See Heffington v. Stanislaus (1983) 143 C.A.3d 838, 192 C.R. 202 [review of cases applying Monell]; 94 Harv. L. Rev. 215 [Owen]; 16 U.S.F. L. Rev. 517 [Monell and Owen in the Police Injury Context]; 4 Rotunda, §19.32.)

(4) Punitive Damages Are Not Recoverable. In Newport v. Fact Concerts (1981) 453 U.S. 247, 101 S.Ct. 2748, 69 L.Ed.2d 616, plaintiffs, an organization licensed by defendant city to present musical concerts, and its promoter, sued when their license was cancelled for reasons constituting content-based censorship, and they suffered losses in a scheduled performance. The judgment, following a jury verdict, gave plaintiffs compensatory and punitive damages against the city and seven of its officials (mayor and council members). Held, the punitive damage award against the city was improper. Monell held that a local government was subject to suit as a person, but did not deal with particular immunities; the trial court here concluded that there was no reason to distinguish between individual officers and the municipality so far as the purposes of punitive damages are concerned. But the common law background and policy considerations call for a different result.

(a) The majority of jurisdictions refuse to sanction awards of punitive damages against municipalities. (101 S.Ct. 2756, 69 L.Ed.2d 627.) And nothing in the Civil Rights Act suggests that Congress intended to abolish that immunity. (101 S.Ct. 2758, 2759, 69 L.Ed.2d 630, 631.)

(b) Consideration of the objectives of punitive damages leads to the same conclusion. (1) Retribution: An award of punitive damages against a municipality punishes only the taxpayers, who took no part in the commission of the act; and a municipality can have no malice independent of that of its officials. (101 S.Ct. 2759, 2760, 69 L.Ed.2d 632, 633.) (2) Deterrence: It is far from clear that officials would be deterred from wrongdoing by the knowledge that punitive damages could be assessed on the basis of wealth of the municipality; and a more effective means of deterrence is an award against the offending individual. (101 S.Ct. 2760, 2761, 69 L.Ed.2d 633, 634.)

(c) The dangers of such an award are great. The §1983 damages remedy may now be available for violations of federal statutory as well as constitutional law, and state and local governmental entities may face liability for a wide range of abuses of authority. "To add the burden of exposure for the malicious conduct of individual government employees may create a serious risk to the financial integrity of these governmental entities." (101 S.Ct. 2761, 69 L.Ed.2d 634.)

(d) "Because absolute immunity from such damages obtained at common law and was undisturbed by the 42d Congress, and because that immunity is compatible with both the purposes of §1983 and general principles of public policy, we hold that a municipality is immune from punitive damages under 42 USC §1983." (101 S.Ct. 2762, 69 L.Ed.2d 635.) (On recovery of punitive damages in §1983 actions generally, see infra, §842.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.211 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) States. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.31.

43 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 1. Original Civil Rights Acts. g. Procedure. 1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 841

[§ 841] In General.

(1) Accrual of Claim. In Chardon v. Fernandez (1981) 454 U.S. 6, 102 S.Ct. 28, 70 L.Ed.2d 6, plaintiffs alleged that they lost their positions as administrators in the Puerto Rico Department of Education for political reasons, in violation of the First Amendment. The action was filed more than 1 year from the dates on which they received notices of their terminations, but less than 1 year from the actual dates of termination. Held, the action accrued on the date of notice and hence, was barred by Puerto Rico's 1-year statute of limitations; the crucial time is when the wrongful act occurs, not when its consequences become painful. (102 S.Ct. 29, 70 L.Ed.2d 9.) (See 4 Rotunda, §19.37.)

(2) Claim Requirement Is Inapplicable. Williams v. Horvath (1976) 16 C.3d 834, 129 C.R. 453, 548 P.2d 1125, 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §236, held that the California statutory requirement that a claim be filed before a tort action can be brought against an employee of a public entity (5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §882) does not apply to actions under 42 U.S.C., §1983. Filing a claim for damages is more than a procedural requirement, it is a condition precedent to the action. "And while it may be constitutionally permissible for the Legislature to place this substantive impediment in the path of a state cause of action, it is clear that the supremacy clause will not permit a like abrogation of the perquisites of a federal civil rights litigant." (16 C.3d 842.)

The U.S. Supreme Court, in Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 108 S.Ct. 2302, 101 L.Ed.2d 123, gave this explanation: "In enacting §1983, Congress entitled those deprived of their civil rights to recover full compensation from the governmental officials responsible for those deprivations. A state law that conditions that right of recovery upon compliance with a rule designed to minimize governmental liability, and that directs injured persons to seek redress in the first instance from the very targets of the federal legislation, is inconsistent in both purpose and effect with the remedial objectives of the federal civil rights law. Principles of federalism, as well as the Supremacy Clause, dictate that such a state law must give way to vindication of the federal right when that right is asserted in state court." (108 S.Ct. 2314, 101 L.Ed.2d 147.)

(3) Statute of Limitations. Under 42 U.S.C., §1988, state law, to the extent "not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States," is to be applied whenever a federal statute is "deficient in the provisions necessary to furnish suitable remedies." Because 42 U.S.C., §1983 is "deficient" with respect to limitation periods and tolling

policies, these matters are governed by state law. (See Board of Regents of University of New York v. Tomanio (1980) 446 U.S. 478, 100 S.Ct. 1790, 1794, 64 L.Ed.2d 440, 447; Chardon v. Fumero Soto (1983) 462 U.S. 650, 103 S.Ct. 2611, 2619, 77 L.Ed.2d 74, 80; Burnett v. Grattan (1984) 468 U.S. 42, 104 S.Ct. 2924, 2929, 82 L.Ed.2d 36, 44; Owens v. Okure (1989) 488 U.S. 235, 109 S.Ct. 573, 577, 102 L.Ed.2d 594, 606, 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §108; Newton v. Napa (1990) 217 C.A.3d 1551, 1563, 266 C.R. 682; 4 Rotunda, §19.37.) However, in 1990 Congress enacted a catch-all 4-year statute of limitations for actions arising under federal statutes enacted after December 1, 1990. (See 28 U.S.C., §1658.) This statute is applicable to claims brought under 42 U.S.C., §1981 because §1981 was amended as part of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 (see infra, §849), which qualifies as an "Act of Congress enacted" after December 1, 1990. (Jones v. R.R. Donnelley & Sons Co. (2004) 541 U.S. 369, 124 S.Ct. 1836, 1845, 158 L.Ed.2d 645, 656, 657 [28 U.S.C., §1658 applies if claim against defendant "was made possible by a post-1990 enactment"].)

Wilson v. Garcia (1985) 471 U.S. 261, 105 S.Ct. 1938, 1943, 85 L.Ed.2d 254, 261, held that the characterization of an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 for the purpose of selecting the appropriate state statute of limitations is a question of federal law. To promote uniformity and certainty, all §1983 claims should be characterized as actions for personal injuries. (105 S.Ct. 1947, 85 L.Ed.2d 266.) Otherwise, "counsel could almost always argue, with considerable force, that two or more periods of limitations should apply to each §1983 claim. Moreover, under such an approach different statutes of limitations would be applied to the various §1983 claims arising in the same State, and multiple periods of limitations would often apply to the same case. There is no reason to believe that Congress would have sanctioned this interpretation of its statute." (105 S.Ct. 1946, 85 L.Ed.2d 265.)

(4) Survival. By virtue of 42 U.S.C., §1988, state survival statutes are applicable in actions under 42 U.S.C., §1983 unless they are inconsistent with federal law. (Robertson v. Wegmann (1978) 436 U.S. 584, 98 S.Ct. 1991, 1995, 56 L.Ed.2d 554, 561 [Louisiana statute providing for survival only in favor of designated relatives, none of whom survived decedent in present case, was not inconsistent with federal law]; see Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 C.3d 159, 173, 216 C.R. 661, 703 P.2d 1, 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1013 [claim by minor who died from improper medical treatment while confined in juvenile facility survived under former Prob.C. 573 (now C.C.P. 377.20 et seq.), 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §23]; Los Angeles v. Superior Court (Schonert) (1999) 21 C.4th 292, 309, 87 C.R.2d 441, 981 P.2d 68 [following Robertson v. Wegmann; trial court erred in refusing to apply C.C.P. 377.34, California's survival statute, to estate's federal civil rights claim; survival statute is not inconsistent with or preempted by federal law]; 32 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 221 [survivorship under 42 U.S.C., §1983]; 4 Rotunda, §19.37.)

(5) Release of Claims. In Newton v. Rumery (1987) 480 U.S. 386, 107 S.Ct. 1187, 94 L.Ed.2d 405, plaintiff filed an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 after having executed a release of any such claim in return for the dismissal of a charge of tampering with a witness who had been the victim of sexual assault. In reversing and remanding for dismissal, the Court held: (a) Release-dismissal agreements are not inherently coercive because they often reflect a highly rational judgment that the benefit of escaping criminal prosecution exceeds the possibility of prevailing in a civil action. (107 S.Ct. 1193, 94 L.Ed.2d 417.) (b) They serve the public interests of protecting public officials from the burden of defending unjust claims and of allowing for the exercise of prosecutorial discretion. (107 S.Ct. 1193, 94 L.Ed.2d 418.) (c) The present agreement was voluntary on plaintiff's part, having been signed on advice of counsel, and entered into to further the legitimate prosecutorial interest of sparing the witness-victim the burden of testifying. (107 S.Ct. 1195, 94 L.Ed.2d 419.) (See 101 Harv. L. Rev. 310.)

(6) Attack on Tax System. In Fair Assessment in Real Estate Assn. v. McNary (1981) 454 U.S. 100, 102 S.Ct. 177, 70 L.Ed.2d 271, the court held that taxpayers are barred by the principle of comity from asserting actions under 42 U.S.C., §1983 in the federal courts attacking the validity of state tax systems. These "taxpayers must seek protection of their federal rights by state remedies, provided of course that those remedies are plain, adequate, and complete, and may ultimately seek review of the state decisions in this Court." (102 S.Ct. 186, 70 L.Ed.2d 283.) (See 96 Harv. L. Rev. 207.)

Under the principles applied in Fair Assessment in Real Estate, 42 U.S.C., §1983 may not be used to attack a local tax system. (General Motors Corp. v. San Francisco (1999) 69 C.A.4th 448, 460, 81 C.R.2d 544.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.231 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Accrual of Claim. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.37.

(2) Claim Requirement Is Inapplicable.

Williams case:

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §245.

California claim-filing requirement:

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §928.

(3) Statute of Limitations.Owens case:

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §58.

(4) Survival. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.37.(7) (New) Discovery Statutes. Los Angeles v. Superior Court (Gavira) (2006) 139 C.A.4th 8, 42 C.R.3d 390, held that the rule of Felder v. Casey (1988) 487 U.S. 131, 108 S.Ct. 2302, 101 L.Ed.2d 123, text, p. 275, that a plaintiff's right to recovery under 42 U.S.C., §1983 cannot be conditioned on a state notice-of-claim statute, did not apply to state statutes denying discovery of the records of medical peer review committees. Plaintiffs sued for federal civil rights violations in state court, and denying discovery of the records did not affect their substantive federal rights. (139 C.A.4th 17.)

44 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

1. Original Civil Rights Acts.

g. Procedure.

2. Damages and Attorneys' Fees.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 842

[§ 842] Damages and Attorneys' Fees.

(1) Nominal Damages. In Carey v. Piphus (1978) 435 U.S. 247, 98 S.Ct. 1042, 1054, 55 L.Ed.2d 252, 266, school pupils who had been suspended without procedural due process were entitled to recover nominal damages (not to exceed $ 1), even if the suspension was justified and no actual injury was proved. (See Memphis Community School Dist. v. Stachura (1986) 477 U.S. 299, 106 S.Ct. 2537, 2544, 91 L.Ed.2d 249, 260, footnote 11; 93 Harv. L. Rev. 966 [Carey]; 67 Cal. L. Rev. 1242 [same]; 6 Hastings Const. L. Q. 97 [same]; 4 Rotunda, §19.33.)

(2) Compensatory Damages. In Carey, the Court held that an award of compensatory damages for denial of procedural due process requires proof of actual harm; i.e., no damages will be presumed from the mere denial of the right. (98 S.Ct. 1048, 55 L.Ed.2d 259.) (See 4 Rotunda, §19.33.) And in Memphis Community School Dist., involving a denial of a substantive constitutional right, the Court followed Carey in holding that "damages based on the abstract 'value' or 'importance' of constitutional rights are not a permissible element of compensatory damages" in actions under 42 U.S.C., §1983. (106 S.Ct. 2545, 91 L.Ed.2d 261.) (See 100 Harv. L. Rev. 267.)

(3) No State Limitation on Damages. "[P]laintiffs who have been falsely arrested and imprisoned by employees of a public entity are entitled to the same damages in a section 1983 action filed in a California court as they would receive in a section 1983 action filed in federal court." (Los Angeles v. Superior Court (Valentin) (2000) 78 C.A.4th 212, 231, 92 C.R.2d 668.)

(4) Punitive Damages. Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 103 S.Ct. 1625, 75 L.Ed.2d 632, 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1595, held that punitive damages are permitted in actions under 42 U.S.C., §1983 "when the defendant's conduct is shown to be motivated by evil motive or intent, or when it involves reckless or callous indifference to the federally protected rights of others." (103 S.Ct. 1640, 75 L.Ed.2d 651.) (On immunity of municipality from assessment of punitive damages in §1983 action, see supra, §840.)

(5) Attorneys' Fees. The Civil Rights Attorney's Fee Awards Act of 1976 provides that, in federal civil rights actions, "the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs." (42 U.S.C., §1988.) (See Maher v. Gagne (1980) 448 U.S. 122, 100 S.Ct. 2570, 2574, 65

L.Ed.2d 653, 660 [statute applies to all types of §1983 actions, not just to those based on violation of Constitution or statute providing for protection of civil or equal rights]; 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §191 et seq.)

The scope and application of this statute are fully covered in 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §206 et seq. (See Smith v. Robinson (1984) 468 U.S. 992, 104 S.Ct. 3457, 3464, 82 L.Ed.2d 747, 759, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §207 [action involving one claim covered by Act and one that is not]; Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 103 S.Ct. 1933, 76 L.Ed.2d 40, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §209 [reasonable fees]; Hewitt v. Helms (1987) 482 U.S. 755, 107 S.Ct. 2672, 96 L.Ed.2d 654, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §208 [what constitutes prevailing party]; North Carolina Dept. of Trans. v. Crest Street Community Council (1986) 479 U.S. 6, 107 S.Ct. 336, 93 L.Ed.2d 188, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §213 [no award in separate independent action]; Venegas v. Mitchell (1990) 495 U.S. 82, 110 S.Ct. 1679, 109 L.Ed.2d 74, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §210 [42 U.S.C., §1988 does not invalidate contingent fee contracts requiring plaintiff to pay attorney more than statutory award against defendant]; West Virginia University Hosp. v. Casey (1991) 499 U.S. 83, 111 S.Ct. 1138, 113 L.Ed.2d 68 [fees for services rendered by experts could not be shifted to losing party]; Choate v. Orange (2000) 86 C.A.4th 312, 322, 103 C.R.2d 339, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, Supp., §208 [different standard for prevailing defendant].)

In Farrar v. Hobby (1992) 506 U.S. 103, 113 S.Ct. 566, 121 L.Ed.2d 494, the Court held that a plaintiff who receives a judgment for nominal damages is a prevailing party under 42 U.S.C., §1988, but that this technical victory does not necessarily entitle the plaintiff to attorneys' fees. Here, plaintiffs demanded $ 17 million as compensatory damages, but were awarded only nominal damages of $ 1, and were not entitled to attorneys' fees. (113 S.Ct. 574, 575, 121 L.Ed.2d 505, 506.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.269 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Nominal Damages. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.33.(5) Attorneys' Fees.

Scope and application of statute:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §242 et seq.

Smith case:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §243. Hensley case:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §314.

Hewitt case:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §244.

North Carolina Dept. of Trans. case:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §247.

Venegas case:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §314.

Choate case:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §244.

45 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 1. Original Civil Rights Acts. g. Procedure. 3. Limitations on Injunctive Relief.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 843

[§ 843] Limitations on Injunctive Relief.

In Rizzo v. Goode (1976) 423 U.S. 362, 96 S.Ct. 598, 46 L.Ed.2d 561, respondents brought a class action in the federal district court of Pennsylvania on behalf of minority citizens and Philadelphia residents in general, against petitioners, the Mayor, City Managing Director, and Police Commissioner of Philadelphia. The complaint alleged encouragement of police activity violating constitutional rights of citizens and failure to act in a manner that would prevent this activity. The district court, after hearing many witnesses, made detailed findings of fact and conclusions of law, indicating a tendency to discourage the filing of civilian complaints and to minimize the consequences of police misconduct. It therefore ordered petitioners to submit a comprehensive program for improvement of handling citizens' complaints. The program was submitted and incorporated into a final judgment. Held, reversed.

The Court found no authority to support the extension of federal equity power under 42 U.S.C., §1983 "to the fashioning of prophylactic procedures for a state agency." (96 S.Ct. 607, 46 L.Ed.2d 573.) The principles of federalism, emphasized in cases in which a federal court was asked to enjoin a state criminal prosecution, are not limited to that situation. "We think these principles likewise have applicability where injunctive relief is sought not against the judicial branch of the state government, but against those in charge of an agency of state or local governments such as respondents here." (96 S.Ct. 608, 46 L.Ed.2d 575.)

Three justices dissented. (See Alvarez v. Wiley (1977) 71 C.A.3d 599, 605, 139 C.R. 550 [wrongful death is governed by California statute and limited to claim for damages; hence, plaintiff could not enjoin county jail, under 42 U.S.C., §1983, from continuing practices that had resulted in son's death]; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 238 [Rizzo]; 29 Stanf. L. Rev. 1191 [same].)

In Los Angeles v. Lyons (1983) 461 U.S. 95, 103 S.Ct. 1660, 75 L.Ed.2d 675, defendant police officers, after stopping plaintiff for a Vehicle Code violation, applied a chokehold which rendered him unconscious and damaged his larynx. Finding that these holds were authorized even where no one was threatened with death or serious bodily harm, that the officers were insufficiently trained, and that use of the holds involved a high risk of injury or death, the trial judge entered an injunction barring their use in the absence of a threat of injury or death. Held, reversed. Plaintiff lacked standing to seek an injunction because he alleged no case or controversy as required by Article III of the U.S.

Constitution. (103 S.Ct. 1665, 75 L.Ed.2d 684.) To meet this requirement, a plaintiff must allege that the threat of injury is both real and immediate; the allegations concerning his previous injury did not show a real and immediate threat of similar police misconduct in the future. (103 S.Ct. 1667, 75 L.Ed.2d 686.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.262 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

46 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
1. Original Civil Rights Acts.
g. Procedure.
4. Effect of State Remedies.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 844

[§ 844] Effect of State Remedies.

(1) No Requirement of Exhaustion of State Remedies. In Monroe v. Pape (1961) 365 U.S. 167, 81 S.Ct. 473, 5 L.Ed.2d 492, supra, §711, the Court explained the general rule that state judicial remedies need not be exhausted prior to bringing an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983. "It is no answer that the State has a law which if enforced would give relief. The federal remedy is supplementary to the State and the state remedy need not be first sought and refused before the federal one is invoked. Hence the fact that Illinois by its constitution and laws outlaws searches and seizures is no barrier to the present suit in the federal court." (81 S.Ct. 482, 5 L.Ed.2d 502.) (See Handschuh v. Superior Court (1985) 166 C.A.3d 41, 43, 212 C.R. 296; 4 Rotunda, §19.39; 82 Harv. L. Rev. 1486 [suggesting limiting Monroe by requiring exhaustion of state remedies under specified circumstances]; cf. Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 114 S.Ct. 2364, 2372, 129 L.Ed.2d 383, 394, infra, §845 [requirement for action for damages for unlawful conviction or imprisonment].)

Patsy v. Board of Regents of Florida (1982) 457 U.S. 496, 102 S.Ct. 2557, 2568, 73 L.Ed.2d 172, 187, extended the no exhaustion of remedies rule to state administrative remedies. (See 96 Harv. L. Rev. 207.) However, under the federal Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1996 (42 U.S.C., §1997e(a)), a prisoner must exhaust available administrative remedies before bringing a federal civil rights action regarding prison conditions. (See Booth v. Churner (2001) 532 U.S. 731, 121 S.Ct. 1819, 1821, 149 L.Ed.2d 958, 962, 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, Supp., §323.)

(2) Distinction: Requirements for Ripeness of Claim. In seeking compensation for a regulatory taking, the plaintiff must first seek administrative mandamus or bring an action for inverse condemnation. Only after these avenues have failed to yield just compensation is a claim under 42 U.S.C., §1983 ripe for adjudication. (Brenner Associates v. Del Mar (1998) 69 C.A.4th 166, 188, 81 C.R.2d 324; see Galland v. Clovis (2001) 24 C.4th 1003, 103 C.R.2d 711, 16 P.3d 130, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §§595, 596 [landlords seeking damages under 42 U.S.C., §1983 for confiscatory rent regulation must first show that (a) confiscatory rent ceiling or regulation was imposed, and (b) relief via mandamus and adjustment under Kavanau v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1997) 16 C.4th 761, 66 C.R.2d 672, 941 P.2d 851, infra, §1155, is inadequate].)

(3) State Procedure Affording Procedural Due Process. The existence of a state procedure that satisfies the requirements of procedural due process bars an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983. (See Ingraham v. Wright (1977) 430 U.S. 651, 97 S.Ct. 1401, 1415, 51 L.Ed.2d 711, 733; Parratt v. Taylor (1981) 451 U.S. 527, 101 S.Ct. 1908, 1916, 68 L.Ed.2d 420, 433; Hudson v. Palmer (1984) 468 U.S. 517, 104 S.Ct. 3194, 3204, 82 L.Ed.2d 393, 407, supra, §825; 4 Rotunda, §19.39; 13 Hastings Const. L. Q. 695; cf. Handschuh v. Superior Court, supra, 166 C.A.3d 45 [Parratt v. Taylor is not applicable to violations of substantive rights; hence, availability of state action for conversion did not preclude §1983 action for unconstitutional seizure of property].)

(4) Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel. In Allen v. McCurry (1980) 449 U.S. 90, 101 S.Ct. 411, 66 L.Ed.2d 308, plaintiff's motion to suppress evidence on Fourth Amendment grounds was denied, and he was convicted of possession of heroin. Because plaintiff had not asserted a denial of a full and fair opportunity to litigate the search and seizure issue, he was barred from seeking habeas corpus by Stone v. Powell (1976) 428 U.S. 465, 96 S.Ct. 3037, 49 L.Ed.2d 1067. Hence, plaintiff sought federal court redress of the issue by bringing an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 against the officers involved. Held, the doctrine of collateral estoppel barred relitigation of the issue in the federal courts.

(a) Under 28 U.S.C., §1738 (supra, §30), a state judicial proceeding has the same full faith and credit in federal courts that it has in the courts of the state. Nothing in either the language of 42 U.S.C., §1983 or its legislative history remotely suggests any intention to contravene the common law rules of preclusion or to repeal 28 U.S.C., §1738. (101 S.Ct. 416, 66 L.Ed.2d 315.)

(b) The unavailability of habeas corpus does not require a different conclusion. There is nothing in either the Constitution or 42 U.S.C., §1983 itself guaranteeing every person asserting a federal right at least one opportunity to litigate that right in a federal court. (101 S.Ct. 419, 66 L.Ed.2d 319.) (See 4 Rotunda, §19.38.)

In Migra v. Warren City School Dist. Bd. of Education (1984) 465 U.S. 75, 104 S.Ct. 892, 79 L.Ed.2d 56, the issue was the preclusive effect of a state court judgment on plaintiff's §1983 claim, which he did not raise in the state court proceeding even though he could have done so. After obtaining a state court judgment for breach of contract and wrongful interference with his contract, plaintiff brought an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 based on violations of the First, Fourth, and Fourteenth Amendments. Held, the action was barred. In Allen, supra, the issue was actually litigated; but the holding is applicable regardless of whether an issue was, or was not, decided in the state court. (104 S.Ct. 897, 79 L.Ed.2d 63.)

In University of Tennessee v. Elliott (1986) 478 U.S. 788, 106 S.Ct. 3220, 3226, 92 L.Ed.2d 635, 646, 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §304, the Court extended preclusive effect to state administrative rulings. But McDonald v. West Branch, Michigan (1984) 466 U.S. 284, 104 S.Ct. 1799, 1802, 80 L.Ed.2d 302, 307, refused to give either res judicata or collateral estoppel effect to an unappealed arbitration award. "[A]lthough arbitration is well suited to resolving contractual disputes, it cannot provide an adequate substitute for a judicial proceeding in protecting the federal statutory and constitutional rights that §1983 is designed to safeguard." (104 S.Ct. 1803, 80 L.Ed.2d 308.) (See Brosterhous v. State Bar (1995) 12 C.4th 315, 323, 335, 48 C.R.2d 87, 906 P.2d 1242 [State Bar arbitration of claims regarding dues was not entitled to preclusive effect].)

In Briggs v. Rolling Hills Estates (1995) 40 C.A.4th 637, 47 C.R.2d 29, defendant city required plaintiff homeowners to remove a patio as a condition for approval of an addition to plaintiffs' house. Plaintiffs did not seek judicial review of the condition by means of administrative mandamus, but instead filed an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983. Held, their action was barred, not because of failure to exhaust administrative remedies, but under the doctrine of res judicata, which gives "collateral estoppel effect to the administrative agency's decision, because that decision has achieved finality due to the aggrieved party's failure to pursue the exclusive judicial remedy for reviewing administrative action." (40 C.A.4th 646.) (See McDaniel v. Board of Education (1996) 44 C.A.4th 1618, 1621, 1622, 52 C.R.2d 448 [doctrine of res judicata applies only where plaintiff has failed to seek judicial review of agency's quasi-judicial action; where challenged action (here, retaliatory refusal to consider late claim for early retirement) is quasi-legislative, plaintiff need not seek state judicial remedy before filing action under 42 U.S.C., §1983].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.209

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) No Requirement of Exhaustion of State Remedies. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.39.Booth case:

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §346.

(4) Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §19.38.University of Tennessee case:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §361.

47 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
1. Original Civil Rights Acts.
g. Procedure.
5. Effect of Other Federal Remedies.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 845

[§ 845] Effect of Other Federal Remedies.

In Preiser v. Rodriguez (1973) 411 U.S. 475, 93 S.Ct. 1827, 36 L.Ed.2d 439, the action was brought by state prisoners seeking an injunction to compel restoration of good conduct time credits. Held, habeas corpus, with the concomitant requirement of exhaustion of state remedies, was their sole remedy. "Congress has determined that habeas corpus is the appropriate remedy for state prisoners attacking the validity of the fact or length of their confinement, and that specific determination must override the general terms" of 42 U.S.C., §1983. (93 S.Ct. 1836, 36 L.Ed.2d 450.) (On effect of enforcement provisions of federal statutes, see supra, §821.)

In Wolff v. McDonnell (1974) 418 U.S. 539, 94 S.Ct. 2963, 41 L.Ed.2d 935, the Court held that Preiser precluded only those §1983 actions that sought an injunction to restore good conduct time credits. Hence, prisoners may maintain an action under 42 U.S.C., §1983 seeking (a) damages resulting from deprivation of the credits, (b) a declaratory judgment on the validity of the procedures used, and (c) an injunction enjoining the prospective enforcement of invalid prison regulations. (94 S.Ct. 2974, 41 L.Ed.2d 950.)

Preiser and Wolff were distinguished in Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 114 S.Ct. 2364, 129 L.Ed.2d 383. Here, plaintiff sought damages under 42 U.S.C., §1983 while appeal of his conviction was pending. The Court held that to recover damages for an "allegedly unconstitutional conviction or imprisonment, or for other harm caused by actions whose unlawfulness would render a conviction or sentence invalid, a §1983 plaintiff must prove that the conviction or sentence has been reversed on direct appeal, expunged by executive order, declared invalid by a state tribunal authorized to make such determination, or called into question by a federal court's issuance of a writ of habeas corpus, 28 U.S.C. §2254. A claim for damages bearing that relationship to a conviction or sentence that has not been so invalidated is not cognizable" under 42 U.S.C., §1983. (114 S.Ct. 2372, 129 L.Ed.2d 394.) (See Edwards v. Balisok (1997) 520 U.S. 641, 117 S.Ct. 1584, 1589, 137 L.Ed.2d 906, 915 [applying Heck]; Susag v. Lake Forest (2002) 94 C.A.4th 1401, 1408, 115 C.R.2d 269 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Wilkinson v. Dotson (2005) 544 U.S. 74, 125 S.Ct. 1242, 1248, 161 L.Ed.2d 253, 262 [claims by prisoners that would render invalid state procedures used to deny parole eligibility and parole suitability were cognizable under 42

U.S.C., §1983; habeas corpus exception did not apply because claims did not challenge "fact or duration" of confinement]; Truong v. Orange County Sheriff's Dept. (2005) 129 C.A.4th 1423, 1427, 1429, 29 C.R.3d 450 [following Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 114 S.Ct. 2364, 129 L.Ed.2d 383, text, p. 283; plaintiff's claims that sheriff's deputies used excessive force in violation of her civil rights were barred because claims called into question validity of plaintiff's conviction for resisting exercise of lawful duty]; 121 Harv. L. Rev. 868 [defining reach of Heck].

In Yount v. Sacramento (2008) 43 C.4th 885, 76 C.R.3d 787, 183 P.3d 471, the court both relied on and distinguished Heck. In attempting to arrest plaintiff, defendant police officer shot plaintiff by accident with his gun when he thought he was using his taser. Plaintiff pleaded no contest to resisting arrest. This conviction encompassed plaintiff's admission that he was resisting arrest up until the time he was shot. Hence, Heck foreclosed plaintiff's claims under 42 U.S.C., §1983 that he offered no resistance and that the officers had no justification to employ any force against him at the time he was shot. However, defendant conceded and the record showed that the use of deadly force in making the arrest was not justified. Thus, to the extent plaintiff's claim alleged that defendant's use of deadly force was an unjustified and excessive response to plaintiff's resistance, the claim was not barred because this claim did not implicitly question the validity of plaintiff's conviction for resisting arrest. (43 C.4th 898, 899.) Under the same reasoning, plaintiff's state law claim for battery, based on defendant's use of deadly force, was not barred. (43 C.4th 902.)

48 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Later Statutes.
a. Civil Rights Act of 1957.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 846

[§ 846] Civil Rights Act of 1957.

The Civil Rights Act of 1957 prohibits interference with the right to vote, and authorizes the Attorney General to seek injunctive relief against this interference. (42 U.S.C., §1971; see 25 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Elections §105 et seq.)

In United States v. Raines (1960) 362 U.S. 17, 80 S.Ct. 519, 4 L.Ed.2d 524, the U.S. Attorney General brought an action in the federal district court of Georgia against registrars of Terrell County, charging that, through various devices in the conduct of their offices, they had discriminated on racial grounds against Blacks who desired to register to vote. The district court held the statute unconstitutional, on speculative considerations of its possible scope. Held, reversed. The statute is justified by the Fifteenth Amendment (legislation to prevent discriminatory action by state officials). And Congress can act against these lower state officials regardless of whether higher state authority might also correct their actions, for every state official is bound by the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. (80 S.Ct. 525, 4 L.Ed.2d 532.)

Answering the argument that it is beyond the power of Congress to authorize the U.S. to sue in support of private constitutional rights, the Court said: "But there is the highest public interest in the due observance of all the constitutional guarantees, including those that bear the most directly on private rights, and we think it perfectly competent for Congress to authorize the United States to be the guardian of that public interest in a suit for injunctive relief." (80 S.Ct. 526, 4 L.Ed.2d 533.)

In United States v. Alabama (1960) 362 U.S. 602, 80 S.Ct. 924, 4 L.Ed.2d 982, the U.S. brought an action against the Board of Registrars of Macon County, Alabama, and individual members of the board, for declaratory and injunctive relief, against alleged interference with black voting rights. Before the suit was instituted, the members of the board, pursuant to Alabama law, resigned, and the district court dismissed the action on the ground that the board itself was not a suable entity and no defendant remained. Before the Supreme Court hearing, Congress amended the statute to authorize actions against the state where an official has resigned and no successor has been appointed. Held, therefore, the State of Alabama was a proper defendant.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

49 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Later Statutes.
b. Civil Rights Act of 1964.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 847

[§ 847] Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The 1964 Act covers a wide area. (See 26 Pacific L. J. 765 [Symposium on Justice Department and Civil Rights Act of 1964]; 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §§26, 223 et seq.) The Act consists of the following titles:

- (1) The right to vote in federal elections. (Title I; 42 U.S.C., §1971.)
- (2) Discrimination in public accommodations. (Title II; 42 U.S.C., §2000a et seq.; see infra, §850.)
- (3) Discrimination in publicly owned facilities. (Title III; 42 U.S.C., §2000b et seq.)
- (4) School integration. (Title IV; 42 U.S.C., §2000c et seq.; see 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §281 et seq.; on unconstitutionality of segregation and duty to desegregate, see supra, §750 et seq.)
- (5) Continuation of Civil Rights Commission. (Title V; 42 U.S.C., §1975a et seq.)
- (6) Discrimination in federally assisted programs. (Title VI; 42 U.S.C., §2000d et seq.; see infra, §852 et seq.)
- (7) Discrimination in employment and creation of Equal Opportunity Commission. (Title VII; 42 U.S.C., §2000e et seq.; see infra, §855 et seq.)
- (8) Voting and registration statistics. (Title VIII; 42 U.S.C., §2000f.)
- (9) Authority of Attorney General to intervene in actions. (Title IX; 42 U.S.C., §2000h-2, 2000h-3.)
- (10) Community Relations Service. (Title X; 42 U.S.C., §2000g et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

50 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Later Statutes.
c. Civil Rights Act of 1968.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 848

[§ 848] Civil Rights Act of 1968.

The 1968 Act covers the following:

(1) Riots and interference with federally protected activities. (Title I; 18 U.S.C., §241 et seq.; see 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §408 et seq.)

(2) Rights of Indians. (Titles II-VII; 25 U.S.C., §1301 et seq.; see 82 Harv. L. Rev. 834 [discussion of Title VII and comparison of its private enforcement provisions with those of 1964 Civil Rights Act]; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 627 [Indian rights]; 12 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1 [same].)

(3) Discrimination in the sale or rental of housing by private persons, financial institutions, or brokerage services. (Title VIII; 42 U.S.C., §3601 et seq.; infra, §851.)

(4) Intimidation in fair housing cases. (Title IX; 42 U.S.C., §3631; infra, §851.)

(5) Civil disorders. (Title X; 18 U.S.C., §231 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Rights of Indians. See 95 Cal. L. Rev. 799 [tribal sovereignty and illiberalism].

51 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Later Statutes.
d. Civil Rights Act of 1991.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 849

[§ 849] Civil Rights Act of 1991.

(1) Purposes. In the 1991 Act, Congress found that the decision in Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 109 S.Ct. 2115, 104 L.Ed.2d 733, infra, §870, "has weakened the scope and effectiveness of Federal civil rights protections." The purposes of the Act are (a) "to provide appropriate remedies for intentional discrimination and unlawful harassment in the workplace"; (b) "to codify the concepts of 'business necessity' and 'job related' enunciated" in Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S.Ct. 849, 28 L.Ed.2d 158, infra, §869, and other decisions prior to Wards Cove; (c) "to confirm statutory authority and provide statutory guidelines" for adjudicating disparate impact suits under 42 U.S.C., §2000e et seq. (infra, §855); and (d) to respond to recent Supreme Court decisions "by expanding the scope of relevant civil rights statutes in order to provide adequate protection to victims of discrimination." (42 U.S.C., §1981 note.) (See 106 Harv. L. Rev. 896; 79 Cal. L. Rev. 591 [Symposium on civil rights legislation in 1990s]; 85 Cal. L. Rev. 919 [comment on need for activists to pursue changes in Congress rather than in courts]; 29 U.S.F. L. Rev. 889 [agenda for post-civil rights era]; for discussion of which provisions of Act were in response to Supreme Court cases, see Landgraf v. USI Film Products (1994) 511 U.S. 244, 114 S.Ct. 1483, 1489, 1490, 128 L.Ed.2d 229, 243, 244.)

(2) Civil Rights Remedies. The Act amended 42 U.S.C., §1981 (supra, §814) to include not only the making and enforcement of contracts, but also the "performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship." (42 U.S.C., §1981(b).) The amendment is not retroactive. (Rivers v. Roadway Express (1994) 511 U.S. 298, 114 S.Ct. 1510, 1519, 1520, 128 L.Ed.2d 274, 289.)

(3) Proof. An unlawful employment practice is established by proof that "race, color, religion, sex, or national origin was a motivating factor for any employment practice, even though other factors also motivated the practice." (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(m).) Direct evidence of discrimination is not required for a plaintiff to obtain a mixed-motive instruction. (Desert Palace v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S.Ct. 2148, 2153, 156 L.Ed.2d 84, 93; see 117 Harv. L. Rev. 400 [Desert Palace]; 24 Proof of Facts 3d 393 [proof of damages for sexual harassment].)

(4) Disparate Impact Cases. "Disparate impact" claims involve "employment practices that are facially neutral in their treatment of different groups but that in fact fall more harshly on one group than another and cannot be justified by business necessity." (International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 97 S.Ct. 1843, 1855, 52 L.Ed.2d 396, 417, footnote 15 [proof of discriminatory motive is not required].) An unlawful employment practice based on disparate impact is established only if (a) the complaining party demonstrates the disparate impact, and the employer fails to show that the practice is job-related for the particular position and consistent with business necessity, or (b) the complaining party demonstrates an alternative employment practice, and the respondent refuses to adopt it. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(k); see 106 Harv. L. Rev. 1621 [Civil Rights Act of 1991 and less discriminatory alternatives in disparate impact legislation].)

(5) Compensatory and Punitive Damages. The Act provides for recovery of compensatory and punitive damages in cases of unlawful intentional discrimination other than disparate impact cases. (42 U.S.C., §1981a; see Landgraf v. USI Film Products, supra, 114 S.Ct. 1483, 1505, 128 L.Ed.2d 229, 262 [compensatory and punitive damages provision is not retroactive]; 108 Harv. L. Rev. 310 [Landgraf]; 150 A.L.R. Fed 601 [punitive damages]; 154 A.L.R. Fed 347 [compensatory damages].)

Kolstad v. American Dental Assn. (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 119 S.Ct. 2118, 144 L.Ed.2d 494, held that punitive damages are available under the Act where the employer engages in intentional discrimination "with malice or reckless indifference to the federally protected rights of an aggrieved individual," which means that the employer knows it may be in violation of federal law. Egregious conduct is not required. (119 S.Ct. 2124, 2126, 144 L.Ed.2d 504, 508.) "Recognizing Title VII as an effort to promote prevention as well as remediation, and observing the very principles underlying the Restatement's strict limits on vicarious liability for punitive damages, we agree that, in the punitive damages context, an employer may not be vicariously liable for discriminatory employment decisions of managerial agents where these decisions are contrary to the employer's 'good-faith efforts to comply with Title VII.' " (119 S.Ct. 2129, 144 L.Ed.2d 512.) (113 Harv. L. Rev. 359 [Kolstad].)

(6) Limitation of Challenges to Judgment. The Act prohibits challenges to employment practices that implement litigated or consent judgments or orders by persons (a) who had a reasonable opportunity to present objections to the judgment or order, or (b) whose interests were adequately represented by another person who challenged the judgment or order on the same grounds and with similar facts. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(n).)

(7) Application to Congress. Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (infra, §855) is generally applicable to employees of the legislative branch of the federal Government. (2 U.S.C., §1302.) The Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (42 U.S.C., §2000e-16a et seq.) was added to "provide procedures to protect the rights of certain government employees, with respect to their public employment, to be free of discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age, or disability." (42 U.S.C., §2000e-16a; see 42 U.S.C., §2000e-16c [defining covered employees as those serving elected officials, as specified].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Disparate Impact Cases. See 53 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 701 [Was the Disparate Impact Theory a Mistake?].(7)

Application to Congress. See 20 A.L.R. Fed 2d 481 [validity, construction, and application of Government Employee Rights Act].

52 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 3. Public Accommodations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 850

[§ 850] Public Accommodations.

"All persons shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, advantages, and accommodations of any place of public accommodation ... without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin." (42 U.S.C., §2000a(a); see 42 U.S.C., §2000a(b) [defining places of public accommodation].) Title II of the 1964 Act (42 U.S.C., §2000a et seq.) has been upheld in a number of decisions.

In Heart of Atlanta Motel v. United States (1964) 379 U.S. 241, 85 S.Ct. 348, 13 L.Ed.2d 258, plaintiff operator of a motel in Atlanta, Georgia, with most of its patronage from out-of-state guests, contended that Title II was not a valid exercise of the commerce power and that it denied due process. Held, the legislation was a valid exercise of federal power over interstate commerce.

(a) The Civil Rights Cases (1883) 109 U.S. 3, 3 S.Ct. 18, 27 L.Ed. 835, supra, §814, did not fully consider the commerce power and are not controlling. (85 S.Ct. 354, 13 L.Ed.2d 264.)

(b) The basis of congressional action here was a showing that Blacks were subjected to discrimination in obtaining transient accommodations, with the effect of discouraging travel on the part of a substantial portion of the black community. (85 S.Ct. 355, 13 L.Ed.2d 265.) The commerce power extends both to regulation of interstate movement of persons and to local activities that affect it. (85 S.Ct. 356, 358, 13 L.Ed.2d 266, 269; see infra, §§1295, 1319 et seq.)

(c) The Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause confers no right to select guests free from appropriate regulation under the commerce power. (85 S.Ct. 358, 13 L.Ed.2d 269.)

Katzenbach v. McClung (1964) 379 U.S. 294, 85 S.Ct. 377, 13 L.Ed.2d 290, involved a restaurant, located away from the interstate highway, without interstate patrons. The Act applied because a substantial portion of the food served had moved in interstate commerce. Held, this provision was valid. Congress had evidence before it that discrimination against Blacks in local restaurants inhibited their travel, and discouraged skilled and professional people from moving into areas of discrimination, with the result that existing businesses suffered and new businesses were reluctant to enter. (85 S.Ct. 381, 13 L.Ed.2d 296.)

In Hamm v. Rock Hill (1964) 379 U.S. 306, 85 S.Ct. 384, 13 L.Ed.2d 300, Blacks were convicted of trespass for sit-ins at segregated lunch counters, and their convictions were affirmed in the state appellate courts before the 1964 Act became effective. Held, nevertheless, the Act applied and abated the convictions.

Daniel v. Paul (1969) 395 U.S. 298, 89 S.Ct. 1697, 23 L.Ed.2d 318, held the Act applicable to a so-called "private club," which offered memberships freely to white persons at a nominal fee (25 cents), while refusing them to Blacks. (See 82 Harv. L. Rev. 686 [application of Title II to entertainment facilities]; 112 Harv. L. Rev. 904 [public accommodation challenge to use of Indian team names and mascots in professional sports]; 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §223 et seq.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.119 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

53 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
4. Sale or Rental of Property.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 851

[§ 851] Sale or Rental of Property.

The fair housing provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1968 (Titles VIII and IX) prohibit discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status, or national origin in the sale or rental of housing by private persons, financial institutions, and brokerage services, and proscribe interfering with or intimidating persons attempting to exercise their rights under the Act. (42 U.S.C., §3601 et seq.; see 93 Harv. L. Rev. 938 [race-conscious governmental policies to promote residential integration]; 27 Pepperdine L. Rev. 477 [limits of First Amendment immunity for actions under Fair Housing Act]; 58 So. Cal. L. Rev. 947 [In Pursuit of Racial Utopias: Fair Housing, Quotas, and Goals in the 1980's]; 26 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 103 [senior housing exemption in 1988 amendments to Fair Housing Act]; 17 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 445 [Justice Department's enforcement of Title VIII by attacking exclusionary municipal practices]; 27 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 398 [Title VIII: standard for determination of discriminatory effect]; 45 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1401 [public vs. private enforcement of civil rights in housing]; 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §380 et seq.; 23 Proof of Facts 3d 499 [discrimination on basis of handicap under Fair Housing Act].) (On standing to sue under Title VIII, see Gladstone, Realtors v. Bellwood (1979) 441 U.S. 91, 99 S.Ct. 1601, 60 L.Ed.2d 66, supra, §89; Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman (1982) 455 U.S. 363, 102 S.Ct. 1114, 71 L.Ed.2d 214.)

Under the Fair Housing Act, traditional agency principles apply to the imposition of liability on a corporation for discriminatory acts of its employees. Thus, normally a corporation is liable for an employee's unlawful acts, but its officers and owners are not. (Meyer v. Holley (2003) 537 U.S. 280, 123 S.Ct. 824, 828, 832, 154 L.Ed.2d 753, 761, 764 [owner's "right to control" is insufficient by itself to establish principal/agent or employer/employee relationship].)

An 1866 statute also prohibits discrimination on the basis of race in the purchase, lease, or sale of property. (42 U.S.C., §1982; see supra, §814.) This statute has none of the detail, and contains none of the exemptions, of the fair housing provisions of the 1968 Act. (See 42 U.S.C., §3601 et seq.; supra, §848.) Nevertheless, in Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co. (1968) 392 U.S. 409, 88 S.Ct. 2186, 20 L.Ed.2d 1189, the old statute was held effective to bar private discrimination in the sale or rental of property.

"At the very least, the freedom that Congress is empowered to secure under the Thirteenth Amendment includes the freedom to buy whatever a white man can buy, the right to live wherever a white man can live. If Congress cannot say that being a free man means at least this much, then the Thirteenth Amendment made a promise the Nation cannot keep." (88 S.Ct. 2205, 20 L.Ed.2d 1209.) (See Memphis v. Greene (1981) 451 U.S. 100, 101 S.Ct. 1584, 67 L.Ed.2d 769 [street closing through white neighborhood, which inconvenienced adjacent black neighborhood, was not violative of 42 U.S.C., §1982 or Thirteenth Amendment]; 82 Harv. L. Rev. 95 [pointing out that 42 U.S.C., §1982 may have broad effect in other situations]; 82 Harv. L. Rev. 1294 [The "New" Thirteenth Amendment]; 88 Harv. L. Rev. 1610 [damages recoverable for charging more for homes in black neighborhoods than for comparable homes in white neighborhoods]; 95 Harv. L. Rev. 310 [Memphis]; 22 Santa Clara L. Rev. 931 [same].)

Jones was followed in Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park (1969) 396 U.S. 229, 90 S.Ct. 400, 24 L.Ed.2d 386.

Defendant was a nonstock community playground facility for homeowners in Fairfax County, Virginia. Membership was open to every white person in the area, with assignable membership to his or her tenant. S, a Caucasian, owned one home and leased another to F, a Black. Defendant's board refused to approve the assignment to F and expelled S from membership. S and F sued in state court, under the 1866 statute, for injunctions and damages. The trial court denied relief. Held, reversed.

(a) Defendant was not a private social club; it was open to every white person within the area. "What we have here is a device functionally comparable to a racially restrictive covenant, the judicial enforcement of which was struck down" in Shelley v. Kraemer (1948) 334 U.S. 1, 68 S.Ct. 836, 92 L.Ed. 1161, supra, §746. (90 S.Ct. 404, 24 L.Ed.2d 392.)

(b) If the expulsion of S is upheld, S is punished for trying to vindicate rights of minorities protected by the statute; hence, Barrows v. Jackson (1953) 346 U.S. 249, 73 S.Ct. 1031, 97 L.Ed. 1586, supra, §85, applies. A white owner at times is the only effective adversary of the unlawful restriction. (90 S.Ct. 404, 24 L.Ed.2d 392.)

(c) There is no inconsistency between the administrative machinery provided in the Fair Housing Title of the 1968 Act (supra, §848) and the action recognized under the 1866 Act. (90 S.Ct. 405, 24 L.Ed.2d 393.)

(d) Jones held that although 42 U.S.C., §1982 provides no explicit method of enforcement, a federal court has power to fashion an effective equitable remedy. That remedy for the protection of a federal right is also available in a state court that has jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief. (90 S.Ct. 405, 24 L.Ed.2d 393.)

(e) Jones reserved the question of damages for violation of 42 U.S.C., §1982; but a general federal statute (42 U.S.C., §1988) makes federal standards govern damages for deprivation of a federal right. This means that "both federal and state rules on damages may be utilized, whichever better serves the policies expressed in the federal statutes." (90 S.Ct. 406, 24 L.Ed.2d 394.)

Three justices dissented, arguing that Jones was wrong in using the 100-year-old statute when new acts comprehensively cover the field; and that the present decision goes beyond Jones, fails to provide guidelines for the trial court, and is uncertain on damages in the state court. (90 S.Ct. 406, 24 L.Ed.2d 395.) (See 84 Harv. L. Rev. 82.)

In Tillman v. Wheaton-Haven Recreation Assn. (1973) 410 U.S. 431, 93 S.Ct. 1090, 35 L.Ed.2d 403, respondent association operated a community swimming pool, use of which was limited to Whites and their white guests. Membership was by family units, largely confined to those residing within a three-quarter mile radius of the pool, and limited to 325 families. When a home within the preferential area was sold, the buyer obtained a first option on the seller's membership. Petitioners, black owners within the preferred area who were denied membership, and white members whose black guest was denied admission, sought declaratory relief under the Civil Rights Acts of 1866, 1870, and 1964 (42 U.S.C., §§1982, 1981, and 2000a et seq.). Summary judgment for the association was granted on the ground that it was an exempt private club under the 1964 Act. Held, reversed. Sullivan applied, despite the fact that membership preferences, rather than shares, were linked with the property; the preferences may have affected the price paid. (93 S.Ct. 1094, 35 L.Ed.2d 408.) The association was not a private club because membership was open to everyone who was white within the preferred area, subject only to the stated maximum on family memberships. It was therefore unnecessary to consider the issue of implied limitation on the sweep of 42 U.S.C., §1982, when its application to a truly private club, within the meaning of 42 U.S.C., §2000a(e), is under consideration. (93 S.Ct. 1094, 35 L.Ed.2d

410.)

To establish a claim of discrimination under 42 U.S.C., §1982, "the plaintiff must show that (1) he or she is a member of a racial minority, (2) the plaintiff applied for and was qualified to rent or purchase certain property or housing, (3) his or her bid to rent or buy was rejected, and (4) the housing or rental opportunity remained available thereafter." Once this prima facie case is shown, the burden shifts to the defendant "to rebut the presumption of discrimination by producing evidence that the plaintiff was rejected, or someone else was preferred, for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason. The defendant need not persuade the court that it was actually motivated by the proffered reason. ... It is sufficient if the defendant's evidence raises a genuine issue of fact as to whether it discriminated against the plaintiff." (Barber v. Rancho Mortg. & Inv. Corp. (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1819, 1833, 1834, 1836, 32 C.R.2d 906 [same elements apply to actions under Equal Credit Opportunity Act (15 U.S.C., §1691 et seq.); evidence, although entirely circumstantial, supported black couple's claim of racial discrimination by mortgage lender in violation of 15 U.S.C., §1691 et seq.]; see 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 969 [implications of Communications Decency Act for fair housing on Internet].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 38 Golden Gate L. Rev. 329 [Fair Housing Act suits against roommate-matching websites]; 38 Golden Gate L. Rev. 489 [how Ninth Circuit circumvented intent of Fair Housing Act]; 93 Proof of Facts 3d 415 [housing discrimination against prospective tenant on account of race or national origin].

54 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 5. Federally Assisted Programs. a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 852

[§ 852] In General.

Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C., §2000d et seq.) prohibits discrimination in federally assisted programs: "No person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance." (42 U.S.C., §2000d.) (See Lau v. Nichols (1974) 414 U.S. 563, 94 S.Ct. 786, 790, 39 L.Ed.2d 1, 4 [under Title VI, school district must take affirmative action to ensure equal educational opportunities for non-English-speaking students of Chinese ancestry]; Hills v. Gautreaux (1976) 425 U.S. 284, 96 S.Ct. 1538, 1547, 47 L.Ed.2d 792, 803 [in action against HUD for assisting Chicago Housing Authority in selecting sites within city limits to avoid placing black families in white neighborhoods, trial judge could devise remedy that covered entire Chicago metropolitan area]; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 223 [Hills]; 76 Cal. L. Rev. 1249, 1268 [discussing Lau and politics of federal intervention in bilingual education]; 30 Hastings L. J. 137 [Title VI and Health Facilities: Forms Without Substance]; 10 Hastings Const. L. Q. 15 [Title VI and the Intent/Impact Debate: A Critical Look at "Coextensiveness"]; 19 J. Juvenile Law 158 [Bilingual Education: Should the Traditional Approach Be Abandoned in Favor of "English Immersion"?]; 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §364 et seq.)

To establish a violation of Title VI, it is necessary to establish that a primary objective of the financial assistance was to provide employment. (42 U.S.C., §2000d-3.) (On lack of right of private individual to sue to enforce disparate-impact regulations under Title VI, see infra, §854.)

Title VI funding recipients do not implicitly consent to liability for punitive damages merely by accepting federal funds. (Barnes v. Gorman (2002) 536 U.S. 181, 122 S.Ct. 2097, 2102, 153 L.Ed.2d 230, 238; see 116 Harv. L. Rev. 312 [Barnes].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.126

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

55 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
5. Federally Assisted Programs.
b. Educational Amendments: Title IX.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 853

[§ 853] Educational Amendments: Title IX.

Using language similar to Title VI, Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972 (20 U.S.C., §1681 et seq.) prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex under any educational program or activity receiving federal financial assistance. (20 U.S.C., §1681.) (See Cannon v. University of Chicago (1979) 441 U.S. 677, 99 S.Ct. 1946, 1953, 60 L.Ed.2d 560, 570 [Title IX contains implied private right of action]; North Haven Bd. of Education v. Bell (1982) 456 U.S. 512, 102 S.Ct. 1912, 1922, 72 L.Ed.2d 299, 308 [Title IX is applicable to employees of educational institutions, as well as students]; 110 Harv. L. Rev. 1627 [using Title IX to fight gender role oppression]; 20 Santa Clara L. Rev. 551 [Cannon]; 141 A.L.R. Fed 407 [action under Title IX against school or district for sexual harassment of student by student].)

It is not necessary that the institution receive direct financial assistance. If it admits students who receive federal assistance, it must comply with Title IX. (Grove City College v. Bell (1984) 465 U.S. 555, 104 S.Ct. 1211, 1217, 79 L.Ed.2d 516, 525; see 19 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 235; 19 U.S.F. L. Rev. 53.)

In Franklin v. Gwinnett County Public Schools (1992) 503 U.S. 60, 112 S.Ct. 1028, 117 L.Ed.2d 208, the question was whether the implied right of action recognized in Cannon, supra, supported a claim for monetary damages. Held, monetary damages are recoverable.

(a) "[T]he question of what remedies are available under a statute that provides a private cause of action is 'analytically distinct' from the issue of whether such a right exists in the first place. ... Thus, although we examine the text and history of a statute to determine whether Congress intended to create a right of action ... , we presume the availability of all appropriate remedies unless Congress has expressly indicated otherwise." (112 S.Ct. 1032, 117 L.Ed.2d 217.)

(b) In the years after the announcement in Cannon, two amendments to Title IX indicate that Congress was legislating with full cognizance of that decision, and that Congress did not intend to limit the remedies available. (112 S.Ct. 1036, 117 L.Ed.2d 221.) Thus, a damages remedy is available in an action to enforce Title IX. (112 S.Ct. 1038, 117 L.Ed.2d 224.)

In Gebser v. Lago Vista Independent School Dist. (1998) 524 U.S. 274, 118 S.Ct. 1989, 141 L.Ed.2d 277, a teacher employed by defendant school district made sexually suggestive comments in his classes and then initiated a sexual relationship with a middle school student. The relationship lasted almost 1 year, until police discovered the teacher and student engaging in sexual intercourse and arrested the teacher. The student and her mother subsequently sued defendant in federal court under Title IX. Held, summary judgment for defendant affirmed.

(a) Recovery of damages requires actual notice and deliberate indifference to misconduct. Title IX expressly provides for administrative enforcement, including the termination of federal funding for educational institutions that violate its provisions. (118 S.Ct. 1994, 141 L.Ed.2d 286.) The private right of action under Title IX, however, is judicially implied and there is no legislative expression of the scope of available remedies. (118 S.Ct. 1996, 141 L.Ed.2d 288.) "[I]t does not appear that Congress contemplated unlimited recovery in damages against a funding recipient where the recipient is unaware of discrimination in its programs." (118 S.Ct. 1997, 141 L.Ed.2d 289.)

(1) When Title IX was enacted in 1972, the principal civil rights statutes containing an express right of action did not provide for recovery of monetary damages at all. When Congress did provide for damages under Title VII in 1991, it carefully limited the amount available in individual cases. (118 S.Ct. 1997, 141 L.Ed.2d 289.)

(2) The express means of administrative enforcement requires actual notice to officials of the funding recipient; an agency may not initiate enforcement until it has advised the appropriate persons of the failure to comply and has allowed for voluntary compliance through remedial action. (118 S.Ct. 1998, 141 L.Ed.2d 290.) "It would be unsound ... for a statute's express system of enforcement to require notice to the recipient and an opportunity to come into voluntary compliance while a judicially implied system of enforcement permits substantial liability without regard to the recipient's knowledge or its corrective actions upon receiving notice." (118 S.Ct. 1999, 141 L.Ed.2d 291.)

(3) The implied damages remedy should be fashioned along the same lines as the express remedial scheme. An official who at least has authority to address the alleged discrimination must have actual knowledge of it and the official's response must amount to deliberate indifference before damages can be recovered. (118 S.Ct. 1999, 141 L.Ed.2d 292.)

(b) Insufficient notice. The only official alleged to have had information about the teacher's misconduct is the school principal, who had received complaints from other parents about the teacher's inappropriate remarks in class. That was insufficient to alert the principal or defendant to the possibility that the teacher was engaged in a sexual relationship with a student. (118 S.Ct. 2000, 141 L.Ed.2d 292.) Defendant's alleged failure to promulgate and publicize an effective policy and grievance procedure for sexual harassment claims, as required by its federal funding agency, does not establish actual notice and deliberate indifference, nor does it constitute discrimination under Title IX. (118 S.Ct. 2000, 141 L.Ed.2d 293.)

Four justices dissented, stating that the majority's holding is "at odds with settled principles of agency law," under which defendant is responsible for the teacher's misconduct; by delegating authority to the teacher, defendant gave him a powerful influence over plaintiff student, allowing the abuse to be repeated over a prolonged period. (118 S.Ct. 2003, 141 L.Ed.2d 297.) The dissent characterized as "inappropriate" the majority's reliance on Title IX's administrative enforcement scheme to limit the availability of a damages remedy. (118 S.Ct. 2006, 141 L.Ed.2d 300.) (See 112 Harv. L. Rev. 335 [Gebser]; 20 J. Juvenile Law 231 [same]; 197 A.L.R. Fed 289 [right of action under Title IX against school or school district for sexual harassment by teacher or other school district employee].)

In Davis v. Monroe County Bd. of Education (1999) 526 U.S. 629, 119 S.Ct. 1661, 143 L.Ed.2d 839, plaintiff brought an action for damages under Title IX alleging that her fifth-grade daughter had been the victim of sexual harassment by a male student in her class. The trial court dismissed the complaint on the ground that "student-on-student" harassment provides no basis for a private cause of action under Title IX. The Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, en banc, affirmed. Held, reversed.

(a) Recipients of federal funding who are deliberately indifferent to known acts of student-on-student sexual harassment may be liable for damages under Title IX.

(1) Title IX (20 U.S.C., §1681(a)) provides that no person in the United States may, on the basis of sex, "be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance." (119 S.Ct. 1669, 143 L.Ed.2d 851.) A funding recipient who is deliberately indifferent to known acts of harassment by one student against another may intentionally violate this provision. (119 S.Ct. 1671, 143 L.Ed.2d 854.)

(2) The following sources provided recipients of federal funding with adequate notice that they could be liable for damages under Title IX: (1) the wording of 20 U.S.C., §1681(a), which extends liability to recipients who "subject" persons to discrimination; (2) the Court's decision in Gebser, which established liability for deliberate indifference to known acts of teacher-student harassment; and (3) the common law, which has imposed liability on schools for failure to protect students from the tortious acts of third parties. (119 S.Ct. 1671, 1672, 143 L.Ed.2d 854, 855.)

(b) A funding recipient's liability is limited by several factors.

(1) The recipient is liable for its own misconduct, not that of the harasser. (119 S.Ct. 1670, 143 L.Ed.2d 852.) If a funding recipient does not engage in harassment directly, it can be liable for damages only if its deliberate indifference "subjects" its students to harassment. The recipient need not have an agency relationship with the harasser to be held responsible, but it must have some control over the alleged harassment and the authority to take remedial action. (119 S.Ct. 1672, 143 L.Ed.2d 855.)

(2) Funding recipients are deemed "deliberately indifferent" to acts of student-on-student harassment only where the recipient's response to the alleged harassment is "clearly unreasonable in light of the known circumstances." (119 S.Ct. 1674, 143 L.Ed.2d 857.)

(3) The harassment must be "so severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive" that it deprives the victim of access to the educational opportunities and benefits that the school provides. It is not necessary to show that the harassment has physically excluded the victim from an educational opportunity or benefit, but the victim must have been "effectively denied equal access." (119 S.Ct. 1675, 143 L.Ed.2d 858.)

(4) Whether gender-oriented conduct rises to the level of actionable harassment depends on the surrounding circumstances. Damages are not available for simple acts of teasing or name-calling, even when these comments target differences in gender. (119 S.Ct. 1675, 143 L.Ed.2d 859.) Private damages actions are limited to cases having "a systemic effect on educational programs or activities." (119 S.Ct. 1676, 143 L.Ed.2d 860.)

(c) It was error to dismiss the complaint here. Plaintiff alleges that her daughter was the victim of repeated acts of sexual harassment, both verbal and physical, over a 5-month period. The harassment alleged could be considered severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive; the perpetrator ultimately pleaded guilty to criminal sexual misconduct. Moreover, the complaint alleges that multiple victims sought to speak with the school principal about the harassment, and that the harassment had a concrete, negative effect on plaintiff's daughter's ability to receive an education. Finally, the complaint suggests that plaintiff may be able to show actual knowledge and deliberate indifference on defendant's part, because defendant made no effort to investigate or end the harassment. (119 S.Ct. 1676, 143 L.Ed.2d 860, 861.)

Four justices dissented, concerned that the decision will create federal control over issues of school discipline (119 S.Ct. 1683, 143 L.Ed.2d 870) and impose serious financial burdens on local school districts (119 S.Ct. 1689, 143 L.Ed.2d 877). (See National Collegiate Athletic Assn. v. Smith (1999) 525 U.S. 459, 119 S.Ct. 924, 929, 142 L.Ed.2d 929, 938 [NCAA's receipt of dues from colleges and universities receiving federal funds does not suffice to make NCAA subject to Title IX]; 113 Harv. L. Rev. 368 [school district liability for student-on-student sexual harassment]; 22 J. Juvenile Law 251 [Davis]; 28 Pepperdine L. Rev. 195 [same]; 158 A.L.R. Fed 563 [Sex Discrimination in Public Education under Title IX--Supreme Court Cases].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.126

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

In Jackson v. Birmingham Bd. of Education (2005) 544 U.S. 167, 125 S.Ct. 1497, 161 L.Ed.2d 361, plaintiff, a girls' basketball coach, was fired after he complained about sex discrimination in the high school athletic program. Plaintiff brought an action alleging that defendant school board violated Title IX by retaliating against him for protesting the discrimination against the girls' team, but the district court dismissed the action on the ground that Title IX does not cover claims of retaliation. The Court of Appeals affirmed. Held, reversed. Title IX applies to claims "where the funding recipient retaliates against an individual because he has complained about sex discrimination." (125 S.Ct. 1502, 161 L.Ed.2d 369.)

(a) "Title IX is a broadly written general prohibition on discrimination, followed by specific, narrow exceptions to that broad prohibition." (125 S.Ct. 1505, 161 L.Ed.2d 372.) Unlike Title VII of the Civil Rights Act (see text, §855), it does not specifically mention retaliation. (125 S.Ct. 1505, 161 L.Ed.2d 371.) But Congress did not include any specific discriminatory practices in the statute. The general prohibition on racial discrimination in 42 U.S.C., §1982 (see text, §814) was held to cover retaliation against those who advocate the rights of those protected by that statute in Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park (1969) 396 U.S. 229, 90 S.Ct. 400, 24 L.Ed.2d 386, text, §851. (125 S.Ct. 1505, 161 L.Ed.2d 372.) Title IX was enacted 3 years after that decision "and accordingly that decision provides a valuable context for understanding the statute." (125 S.Ct. 1506, 161 L.Ed.2d 372.) In this case, retaliation for plaintiff's advocacy of the rights of the girls' team was discrimination on the basis of sex, "just as retaliation for advocacy on behalf of a black lessee in Sullivan was discrimination on the basis of race." (125 S.Ct. 1506, 161 L.Ed.2d 373.)

(b) Title IX does not require the victim of the retaliation to be the victim of the discrimination that is the subject of the original complaint. "Where the retaliation occurs because the complainant speaks out about sex discrimination, the 'on the basis of sex' requirement is satisfied. The complainant is himself a victim of discriminatory retaliation, regardless of whether he was the subject of the original complaint." (125 S.Ct. 1507, 161 L.Ed.2d 374.)

(c) It would be difficult to achieve the objective of Title IX if persons who complain about sex discrimination do not have protection against retaliation. "[I]f retaliation were not prohibited, Title IX's enforcement scheme would unravel." Those "who witness discrimination would likely not report it, indifference claims would be short circuited, and the underlying discrimination would go unremedied." Further, Title IX's enforcement scheme "depends on individual reporting because individuals and agencies may not bring suit under the statute unless the recipient has received 'actual notice' of the discrimination. ... If recipients were able to avoid such notice by retaliating against all those who dare complain, the statute's enforcement scheme would be subverted. We should not assume that Congress left such a gap in its scheme." (125 S.Ct. 1508, 161 L.Ed.2d 375.)

(d) Legislation, like Title IX, enacted under the Spending Clause, essentially creates a contract between the states and the federal Government. The states agree to comply with conditions imposed in the legislation in return for receiving federal funds. However, under this legislation, a private damage action is not available unless the state has adequate notice that it could be liable for the proscribed conduct. "Funding recipients have been on notice that they could be subjected to private suits for intentional sex discrimination under Title IX since 1979." (125 S.Ct. 1509, 161 L.Ed.2d 376.) Title IX's private cause of action has consistently been interpreted broadly to encompass diverse forms of intentional sex discrimination. Retaliation "is easily attributable to the funding recipient, and it is always--by definition--intentional." (125 S.Ct. 1509, 161 L.Ed.2d 377.) Thus, Title IX itself supplied sufficient notice to defendant that it could not retaliate against plaintiff after he complained of sex discrimination against the girls' team. Further, the Court of Appeals cases that had considered this question at the time this case arose all had interpreted Title IX to cover retaliation. (125 S.Ct. 1510, 161 L.Ed.2d 377.)

Four justices dissented. (125 S.Ct. 1510, 161 L.Ed.2d 378.) (See 119 Harv. L. Rev. 357 [Jackson].)

56 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
5. Federally Assisted Programs.
c. Disparate Impact Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 854

[§ 854] Disparate Impact Regulations.

Alexander v. Sandoval (2001) 532 U.S. 275, 121 S.Ct. 1511, 149 L.Ed.2d 517, held that private individuals may not sue to enforce disparate-impact regulations promulgated under Title VI.

(a) It is a given that private individuals may sue to enforce 42 U.S.C., §2000d, and obtain both injunctive relief and damages. (121 S.Ct. 1516, 149 L.Ed.2d 524.) And it is not disputed that the statute "prohibits only intentional discrimination." (121 S.Ct. 1516, 149 L.Ed.2d 524.) Further, regulations promulgated under 42 U.S.C., §2000d-1 "may validly proscribe activities that have a disparate impact on racial groups," even though these activities are permissible under 42 U.S.C., §2000d. (121 S.Ct. 1517, 149 L.Ed.2d 525.) However, the question remains whether 42 U.S.C., §2000d-1 confers a private right of action to enforce the disparate-impact regulations. If not, a failure to comply with those regulations that is not also a failure to comply with 42 U.S.C., §2000d is not actionable. (121 S.Ct. 1516, 149 L.Ed.2d 524.) The holdings in Cannon v. University of Chicago (1979) 441 U.S. 677, 99 S.Ct. 1946, 60 L.Ed.2d 560, and Guardians Assn. v. Civil Service Com. of New York (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 103 S.Ct. 3221, 77 L.Ed.2d 866, do not answer this question. Cannon assumed that the University of Chicago had intentionally discriminated, and Guardians held "that private individuals could not recover compensatory damages under Title VI except for intentional discrimination." (121 S.Ct. 1518, 149 L.Ed.2d 526.)

(b) Federal agencies are authorized by 42 U.S.C., §2000d-1 to effectuate 42 U.S.C., §2000d by issuing rules and regulations. The "rights-creating" language so critical to the Court's analysis in Cannon is completely missing from 42 U.S.C., §2000d-1. The section "empowers agencies to enforce their regulations either by terminating funding to the 'particular program, or part thereof,' that has violated the regulation or 'by any other means authorized by law,' 42 U.S.C., §2000d-1. No enforcement action may be taken, however, 'until the department has advised the appropriate person ... of the failure to comply ... and has determined that compliance cannot be secured by voluntary means.'" (121 S.Ct. 1521, 149 L.Ed.2d 530.) These and other elaborate restrictions on agency enforcement "tend to contradict a Congressional intent to create privately enforceable rights" through 42 U.S.C., §2000d-1 itself. (121 S.Ct. 1521, 149 L.Ed.2d 531.)

In a strongly worded dissent, four justices stated that the majority "badly misconstrues" Cannon. The fact that the "Court has never said in so many words that a private right of action exists to enforce the disparate-impact regulations ... does not absolve the Court of the responsibility to canvass our prior opinions for guidance. ... This Court has already considered the question presented today and concluded that a private right of action exists." (121 S.Ct. 1524, 149 L.Ed.2d 534.) (See 115 Harv. L. Rev. 497 [Alexander v. Sandoval]; 116 Harv. L. Rev. 1774 [judicial challenges and administrative possibilities after Sandoval]; 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1 [extending disparate-impact analysis to Title IX litigation]; 33 Stanf. L. Rev. 737 [Disparate Impact Suits under Title IX].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.126

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

57 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 6. Discrimination in Employment. a. In General. 1. Statutory Prohibition.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 855

[§ 855] Statutory Prohibition.

(1) In General. Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C., §2000e et seq.), it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer, employment agency, union, or joint labor-management committee to discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(a)-(d).) (See New York City Transit Authority v. Beazer (1979) 440 U.S. 568, 99 S.Ct. 1355, 1365, 1368, 59 L.Ed.2d 587, 602, 605 [city transit authority's refusal to hire methadone users was not violative of either Title VII or Equal Protection Clause]; Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 106 S.Ct. 2399, 2409, 91 L.Ed.2d 49, 63, infra, §864 [Court of Appeals "was wrong to entirely disregard agency principles and impose absolute liability on employers for the acts of their supervisors, regardless of the circumstances"]; on regulation of employment generally, see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §314 et seq.)

In Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 94 S.Ct. 334, 340, 38 L.Ed.2d 287, 294, the Court held that "national origin" refers to the place of birth and the place from which one's ancestors came; it does not cover alienage. Rejecting a claim of discrimination raised by a resident alien who was a citizen of Mexico, the Court made this distinction: "Certainly it would be unlawful for an employer to discriminate against aliens because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin—for example, by hiring aliens of Anglo-Saxon background but refusing to hire those of Mexican or Spanish ancestry. Aliens are protected from illegal discrimination under the Act, but nothing in the Act makes it illegal to discriminate on the basis of citizenship or alienage." (94 S.Ct. 340, 38 L.Ed.2d 295.) (See 2 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1052.)

As originally enacted, Title VII did not apply to governmental units. However, the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972 amended Title VII to include state and local governments as employers (42 U.S.C., §2000e(a), (b)), and added a new provision prohibiting discrimination in federal employment (42 U.S.C., §2000e-16). (See Brown v. General Services Administration (1976) 425 U.S. 820, 96 S.Ct. 1961, 48 L.Ed.2d 402 [exclusive remedy for discrimination in federal employment]; Chandler v. Rousebush (1976) 425 U.S. 840, 96 S.Ct. 1949, 48 L.Ed.2d 416 [right of federal employees to trial de novo]; Fitzpatrick v. Bitzer (1976) 427 U.S. 445, 96 S.Ct. 2666, 49 L.Ed.2d 614, supra, §43 [award of money damages to private individual in action against state]; 8 U.S.F. L. Rev. 718 [Federal Government as Employer: Double Standard]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §69 et seq.)

Discrimination with respect to government contractors is prohibited by executive order. (See 84 Harv. L. Rev. 1275; 60 Cal. L. Rev. 1196; 52 So. Cal. L. Rev. 767; 52 So. Cal. L. Rev. 973; 16 U.S.F. L. Rev. 491; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §92 et seq.; 44 A.L.R.3d 1283 [requirement of pledge against racial discrimination in hiring under construction contract].)

Title VII does not require employers to grant preferential treatment in order to correct employee imbalances with respect to race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(j).)

(2) Retaliation Against Former Employee. Title VII makes it unlawful for an "employer to discriminate against any of his employees or applicants for employment" who have availed themselves of Title VII protections, or assisted others in doing so. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-3(a).) The statute applies to former employees. The term "employees" is ambiguous, but the section expressly protects employees from retaliation for filing a "charge" under Title VII, and a "charge" alleging unlawful discharge would necessarily be brought by a former employee. Further, excluding former employees "would undermine the effectiveness of Title VII by allowing the threat of postemployment retaliation to deter victims of discrimination from complaining to EEOC, and would provide a perverse incentive for employers to fire employees who might bring Title VII claims." (Robinson v. Shell Oil Co. (1997) 519 U.S. 337, 117 S.Ct. 843, 848, 136 L.Ed.2d 808, 816.) (See 149 A.L.R. Fed 431 [who has "participated" in investigation, proceeding, or hearing and is thereby protected from retaliation under Title VII].)

(3) No Extraterritorial Application. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. v. Arabian Amer. Oil Co. (1991) 499 U.S. 244, 111 S.Ct. 1227, 113 L.Ed.2d 274, held that Title VII does not apply extraterritorially to regulate the employment practices of U.S. employers who employ U.S. citizens abroad.

(a) Congress has the authority to enforce its laws beyond the territorial boundaries of the U.S.; but whether it has in fact exercised that authority in a particular case is a matter of statutory construction. (111 S.Ct. 1230, 113 L.Ed.2d 281.)

(b) "It is a long-standing principle of American Law 'that legislation of Congress, unless a contrary intent appears, is meant to apply only within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.' ... This 'canon of construction ... is a valid approach whereby unexpressed congressional intent may be ascertained.' ... It serves to protect against unintended clashes between our laws and those of other nations which could result in international discord." (111 S.Ct. 1230, 113 L.Ed.2d 282.) Therefore, unless there is "the affirmative intention of the Congress clearly expressed," it must be presumed that the congressional act is primarily concerned with domestic conditions. (111 S.Ct. 1230, 113 L.Ed.2d 282.)

(c) The language relied on by petitioners to show an intent to give the statute extraterritorial operation is ambiguous, and is insufficient to overcome the presumption. (111 S.Ct. 1231, 113 L.Ed.2d 283.) "Congress' awareness of the need to make a clear statement that a statute applies overseas is amply demonstrated by the numerous occasions on which it has expressly legislated the extraterritorial application of a statute." (111 S.Ct. 1235, 113 L.Ed.2d 288.) "Congress, should it wish to do so, may similarly amend Title VII and in doing so will be able to calibrate its provisions in a way that we cannot." (111 S.Ct. 1236, 113 L.Ed.2d 289.) (See 105 Harv L. Rev. 369.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.141 et seq.; 331 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Arbaugh v. Y&H Corp. (2006) 546 U.S. 500, 126 S.Ct. 1235, 1245, 163 L.Ed.2d 1097, 1110 [15-employee threshold in 42 U.S.C., §2000e(b) for application of liability under Title VII is not jurisdictional; instead, employee numerosity requirement relates to substantive adequacy of plaintiff's Title VII claim, and thus it could not be raised defensively for first time after entry of judgment]; 40 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 793 [Arbaugh].(2a) (New Retaliation Against Employee. In Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S.Ct. 2405, 165 L.Ed.2d 345, the court answered the questions (a) whether the anti-retaliation provision of Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act only covers employer activities that affect the terms and conditions of employment, and (b) how harmful the adverse activities must be to fall within its scope. Plaintiff, the only woman working in defendant's maintenance yard, complained that her immediate supervisor was making disparaging, insulting, and inappropriate remarks to her. Defendant suspended the supervisor and ordered him to attend a sexual harassment class, but also removed plaintiff from her primary job as a forklift operator, reassigning her to standard track laborer tasks. Defendant explained that a "more senior man" should have the "less arduous and cleaner" forklift job. Plaintiff filed complaints with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) claiming gender-based discrimination and retaliation. She filed an additional retaliation charge after being suspended without pay for insubordination, even though she was ultimately reinstated and awarded back pay as part of an internal grievance procedure. The Court of Appeals affirmed the District Court's judgment in plaintiff's favor, although members of the court differed regarding the proper standard to apply. Held, affirmed.

(a) The anti-retaliation provision is not limited to actions and harms that are related to employment or that occur at the workplace. (126 S.Ct. 2409, 165 L.Ed.2d 353.) Although the language of Title VII's anti-discrimination provision, 42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(a), protects an individual only from employment-related discrimination, the words of the anti-retaliation provision do not so provide. The two provisions also differ in purpose. The anti-discrimination provision "seeks to prevent injury to individuals based on who they are, i.e., their status. The anti-retaliation provision seeks to prevent harm to individuals based on what they do, i.e., their conduct." (126 S.Ct. 2412, 165 L.Ed.2d 356, 357.) Confining the protections of the statute "to employment-related actions would not deter the many forms that effective retaliation can take," and thus would not maintain unfettered access to its remedial provisions. (126 S.Ct. 2412, 165 L.Ed.2d 357.) "Title VII depends for its enforcement upon the cooperation of employees who are willing to file complaints and act as witnesses. ... Interpreting the anti-retaliation provision to provide broad protection from retaliation helps assure the cooperation upon which accomplishment of the Act's primary objective depends." (126 S.Ct. 2414, 165 L.Ed.2d 359.)

(b) The anti-retaliation provision covers only those "employer actions that would have been materially adverse to a reasonable employee or job applicant," which in this case, "means that the employer's actions must be harmful to the point that they could well dissuade a reasonable worker from making or supporting a charge of discrimination." (126 S.Ct. 2409, 165 L.Ed.2d 353.) Thus, although context does matter, normally petty slights, minor annoyances, and a simple lack of good manners would not create sufficient deterrence to support a charge of retaliation. (126 S.Ct. 2415, 165 L.Ed.2d 360.) This "standard is tied to the challenged retaliatory act, not the underlying conduct that forms the basis of the Title VII complaint." (126 S.Ct. 2416, 165 L.Ed.2d 361.)

(c) There was sufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict that defendant retaliated against plaintiff by reassigning her to standard track labor. The fact that plaintiff's forklift and track labor duties fell within the same job description did not protect defendant from a claim of retaliation. The EEOC has consistently found that retaliatory work assignments are a classic and widely recognized form of forbidden retaliation. Whether a particular reassignment would be considered materially adverse to a reasonable person in plaintiff's position depends on the circumstances of the particular case. Here, there was considerable evidence that plaintiff's track labor duties were dirtier and more arduous, and that the forklift position had more prestige and was considered a better job. (126 S.Ct. 2416, 2417, 165 L.Ed.2d 361, 362.)

(d) There was sufficient evidence to support the jury's finding that defendant retaliated against plaintiff by suspending her without pay for 37 days. The fact that plaintiff's suspension was ultimately reversed and that she was reimbursed back pay did not preclude a finding that the suspension was materially adverse. Title VII was amended in 1991 to permit victims of intentional discrimination to recover compensatory and punitive damages. That congressional judgment would be undermined by permitting employers to avoid liability in these circumstances. Plaintiff and her family were forced to live for 37 days without income, without knowing when she could return to work, during the Christmas holidays. She became depressed and obtained medical treatment for her emotional distress. "A reasonable employee facing the choice between retaining her job (and paycheck) and filing a discrimination complaint might well choose the former. That is to say, an indefinite suspension without pay could well act as a deterrent, even if the suspended employee eventually receives backpay." (126 S.Ct. 2417, 165 L.Ed.2d 362.)

One justice concurred in the judgment. (126 S.Ct. 2418, 165 L.Ed.2d 363.) (See 41 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 683 [Burlington Northern].)

58 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
a. In General.
2. Texts and Commentary.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 856

[§ 856] Texts and Commentary.

Commentary on employment discrimination and Title VII is extensive. (For commentary relating to enforcement of Title VII, see infra, §858.)

(1) Texts and Practice Works. See 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §1 et seq.; 149 A.L.R. Fed 405 [what constitutes religious harassment in employment under Civil Rights Act]; 160 A.L.R. Fed 441 [treating separate entities as one for determining number of employees required for coverage under Act]; 172 A.L.R. Fed 465 [requirement of replacement by nonprotected individual to establish prima facie employment discrimination]; 174 A.L.R. Fed 611 [liability of hospital under Title VII for refusing or revoking staff privileges of physician or nurse]; 57 Proof of Facts 3d 75 [Contingent Workers' Protection Under Federal Anti-Discrimination Statutes].

(2) Law Reviews. See 92 Harv. L. Rev. 757 [effect of past discriminatory acts]; 93 Harv. L. Rev. 702 [union liability for employer's discrimination]; 95 Harv. L. Rev. 947 [application of Title VII to jobs in high places]; 99 Harv. L. Rev. 655 [wage discrimination under Title VII]; 104 Harv. L. Rev. 749 [Invisible Man: Black and Male under Title VII]; 104 Harv. L. Rev. 1157 [discrimination in "general ability" job testing]; 108 Harv L. Rev. 1085 [arguing that employment antidiscrimination laws are mistake]; 109 Harv L. Rev. 1571 [developments in employment discrimination law]; 117 Harv. L. Rev. 1215 [effect of zero or negligible number of women or minorities working in particular job]; 81 Cal. L. Rev. 1241 et seq. [inaugural issue of Asian Law Journal]; 81 Cal. L. Rev. 1325 [accent discrimination as unlawful employment practice, and call for use of standardized test for assessment of comprehensibility of nonnative speakers]; 85 Cal. L. Rev. 261 [English-only rules in workplace]; 26 Golden Gate L. Rev. 413 [interaction of race and gender in Title VII claims]; 10 Hastings Const. L. Q. 20 [Disproportionate Impact Standard Under Title VII]; 26 Hastings L. J. 1408 [discrimination against ex-prisoners]; 21 Hastings Const. L. Q. 275 [application of Title VII to religious employers]; 31 Hastings L. J. 929 [continuing violation theory]; 43 Hastings L. J. 57 [fallacy of "pretext-plus" rule in employment discrimination cases]; 10 La Raza L. J. 1347 [English-only rules in workplace]; 37 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 153 [usefulness of statistical evidence when implementing pay equity adjustments]; 37 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 169 [First Amendment protection for whistle-blowing employee]; 31 San Diego L. Rev. 1 [symposium on Title VII]; 26 Santa Clara L. Rev. 667 [Child Care as an Employee Fringe Benefit: May An Employer Discriminate?]; 60 So. Cal. L. Rev. 734 [basing disparate treatment analysis on motive rather than intent]; 66 So. Cal. L. Rev. 709 [Law and Macroeconomics: Employment Discrimination Litigation Over the Business Cycle]; 77 So. Cal. L. Rev. 307 [constructive discharge]; 36 Stanf. L. Rev. 1299 [Regression Analysis in Title VII Cases: Minimum Standards, Comparable Worth, and Other Issues Where Law and Statistics Meet]; 43 Stanf. L. Rev. 241 [discrimination against "other" minorities as proof of discrimination in employment under federal law]; 43 Stanf. L. Rev. 983 [changing nature of employment discrimination litigation]; 47 Stanf. L. Rev. 1161 [cognitive bias approach to discrimination and equal employment opportunity]; 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 2195 [Cultural Rights and the Immutability Requirement in Disparate Impact Doctrine]; 18 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 721 [similarity of congressional and judicial lawmaking under Title VII]; 31 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 305 [disparate impact theory and demise of bottom line principle]; 25 U.S.F. L. Rev. 1 [critical analysis of recent Supreme Court decisions]; 30 West L.A. L. Rev. 94 [Facially Neutral Employment Criteria and Title VII: Competing Frameworks and Notions of Harm]; 37 U.S.F. L. Rev. 627 [guide to representing parties in EEOC mediations].

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Texts and Practice Works. See 24 A.L.R. Fed 2d 587 [Requirement that Workers Speak English in Workplace as Violative of Federal Constitutional and Statutory Law].

(2) Law Reviews. See 27 California Lawyer 36 (August 2007) [Banning Off-Duty Smoking]; 93 Cal. L. Rev. 623 [Work Culture and Discrimination]; 93 Cal. L. Rev. 1455 [maintaining work environments free of harassment and discrimination by nonemployees]; 95 Cal. L. Rev. 627 [effect of employment discrimination on private lives of employees]; 95 Cal. L. Rev. 669 [competitive conduct standard for assessing when disparate impacts are unjustified]; 59 Hastings L. J. 643 [unifying disparate treatment]; 59 Hastings L. J. 1235 [Why Binomial Distributions Do Not Work as Proof of Employment Discrimination]; 33 Pepperdine L. Rev. 385 [eliminating disparate treatment of third-party harassment]; 48 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1069 [Controlling the Cat's Paw: Circuit Split Concerning the Level of Control a Biased Subordinate Must Exert Over the Formal Decisionmaker's Choice To Terminate]; 60 Stanf. L. Rev. 73 [job security protections and equal employment opportunity in conflict]; 52 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1393 [NAACP, labor litigation, and making of civil rights in 1940s]; 39 U.S.F. L. Rev. 413 [Partners Without Power: Protecting Law Firm Partners from Discrimination]; 41 U.S.F. L. Rev. 171 [growing trend of family responsibilities discrimination].

59 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
a. In General.
3. Exceptions and Exemptions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 857

[§ 857] Exceptions and Exemptions.

(1) Exceptions. The following practices are not unlawful employment practices under Title VII:

(a) To discriminate on the basis of religion, sex, or national origin where these factors are a "bona fide occupational qualification reasonably necessary to the normal operation of that particular business or enterprise." (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(e); see 57 So. Cal. L. Rev. 335 [biases of customers in foreign country as bona fide occupational qualification].)

(b) For a religious educational institution to hire persons of a particular religion. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(e); see 9 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 124; 60 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1375.)

(c) To take action with respect to members of the Communist Party or a Communist-action or Communist-front organization. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(f).)

(d) To discriminate against persons who fail to meet national security requirements. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(g).)

(e) To differentiate in compensation or other conditions of employment pursuant to a bona fide seniority or merit system, or to the location of the employment, if the differentiation is not the result of an intention to discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h); on seniority systems, see infra, §878.)

(f) To utilize a professionally developed ability test, if the test is not designed to discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex or national origin. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h).)

(g) To differentiate in compensation on the basis of sex, where the differentiation is authorized by 29 U.S.C., §206(d) (seniority or merit system). (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h).)

(2) Exemptions. Title VII does not apply to the employment of aliens outside a state, to the employment of persons of a particular religion by a religious institution (42 U.S.C., §2000e-1), or to the preferential treatment of Indians living on or near a reservation by businesses so located (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(i)).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Exceptions. See 121 Harv. L. Rev. 1776 [ministerial exception to Title VII]. (2) Exemptions. See 95 Cal. L. Rev. 799 [tribal sovereignty and illiberalism].

60 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
a. In General.
4. Enforcement.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 858

[§ 858] In General.

(1) Statutory Procedure. Title VII and the guidelines promulgated by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) establish an elaborate procedure for dealing with charges of unfair employment practices. (See 45B Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §§1080 et seq., 1822 et seq.) The principal steps are:

- (a) Filing of a charge by an aggrieved party or a member of the EEOC. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(b).)
- (b) Investigation of the charge by the EEOC and determination of its validity. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(b).)
- (c) Conciliation efforts by the EEOC to eliminate the unlawful practice. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(b).)
- (d) Filing of a civil action by the EEOC or the Attorney General (where the charge is against a governmental unit), or the aggrieved party. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(f).)
- (e) Proceedings to compel compliance with the court's order. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(i).) (See Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 95 S.Ct. 1716, 44 L.Ed.2d 295 [statute of limitations on action]; United States Postal Service Bd. of Governors v. Aikens (1983) 460 U.S. 711, 103 S.Ct. 1478, 1481, 75 L.Ed.2d 403, 409, footnote 3 [trial judge erred in requiring Title VII plaintiff to offer direct proof of discriminatory intent; as in any lawsuit, plaintiff may prove case by direct or circumstantial evidence]; Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. v. Shell Oil Co. (1984) 466 U.S. 54, 104 S.Ct. 1621, 1633, 80 L.Ed.2d 41, 59 [in pattern of discrimination cases, charge should disclose persons discriminated against, positions from which they had been excluded, methods of discrimination, and period during which it occurred]; Roman v. Los Angeles (2000) 85 C.A.4th 316, 326, 102 C.R.2d 13 [state right-to-sue notice does not satisfy EEOC requirement of obtaining right-to-sue notice]; National R.R. Passenger Corp. v. Morgan (2002) 536 U.S. 101, 122 S.Ct. 2061, 2073, 2074, 153 L.Ed.2d 106, 122, 124 [statute only covers discrete acts of discrimination or retaliation occurring within statutory time period; however, for purposes of assessing liability on hostile environment claim, continuing acts may be considered as long as some act contributing to hostile environment took place within statutory time period]; 116 Harv. L. Rev. 352 [National R.R. Passenger]; 91 Hastings L. J. 1417 [same].)

(2) Effect of Arbitration Award. The question whether an arbitration award bars an action under Title VII was answered in Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 94 S.Ct. 1011, 39 L.Ed.2d 147. The federal policies "can best be accommodated by permitting an employee to pursue fully both his remedy under the grievance-arbitration clause of a collective-bargaining agreement and his cause of action under Title VII." (94 S.Ct. 1025, 39 L.Ed.2d 165.) (See 32 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 881 [debate surrounding compulsory arbitration of employment disputes and Title VII claims]; 27 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1 [Compulsory Employment Arbitration and the EEOC]; 47 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1885 [Compulsory Arbitration Agreements Worth Saving: Reforming Arbitration To Accommodate Title VII Protections]; 152 A.L.R. Fed 75 [Enforceability of Arbitration Clauses in Collective Bargaining Agreements as Regards Claims Under Federal Civil Rights Statutes].)

(3) Pleading Standard. An employment discrimination complaint need not contain the "specific facts establishing a prima facie case of discrimination under the framework" outlined in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668, infra, §870. Under F.R. Civ. P., Rule 8(a)(2), a complaint must include only "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." (Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A. (2002) 534 U.S. 506, 122 S.Ct. 992, 995, 998, 152 L.Ed.2d 1, 6, 9, 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, Supp., §882.)

(4) Verification Requirement. An EEOC regulation permitting a later oath to relate back to a charge filed within the required time limits is valid. Although the Civil Rights Act requires a charge to be under oath (see 42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(b)) and filed within a specific time (see 42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(e)), these provisions do not combine to require that the verification be completed within the time set for filing the charge. (Edelman v. Lynchburg College (2002) 535 U.S. 106, 122 S.Ct. 1145, 1149, 152 L.Ed.2d 188, 197.)

(5) EEOC Notification Letter. Under 42 U.S.C., §2000e-16(c), an employee or applicant who is aggrieved by the EEOC's disposition of his or her complaint may file an action against the federal Government within 90 days of "receipt of notice" of the EEOC's final action. (See Irwin v. Department of Veterans Affairs (1990) 498 U.S. 89, 111 S.Ct. 453, 456, 458, 112 L.Ed.2d 435, 442, 444 [notification letter is "received" on receipt by either claimant or his or her attorney; failure to file action within prescribed period may be excused under equitable tolling doctrine, but excusable neglect is insufficient to invoke doctrine].)

(6) Texts and Commentary. Commentary on enforcement of Title VII is extensive. (See 80 Harv. L. Rev. 387 [Beyond the Prima Facie Case: Statistical Proof and Rebuttal]; 99 Harv. L. Rev. 619 [certifying classes in Title VII actions]; 10 Golden Gate L. Rev. 963 ["offer of judgment" rule]; 28 Hastings L. J. 877 [investigation and conciliation of charges; employers' rights]; 18 Santa Clara L. Rev. 115 [consent decrees]; 24 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 511 [road map of Title VII's procedures and remedies]; 39 Stanf. L. Rev. 851 [numerical remedies]; 18 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 749 [equitable modification of Title VII's time limits]; 22 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1288 [Scope of Inquiry and Class Action Under Title VII]; 45 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1401 [public vs. private enforcement of civil rights in employment]; 11 West L.A. L. Rev. 69 [filing of administrative complaint and statute of limitations]; 103 A.L.R.5th 557 [Pursuit of Nonjudicial Remedy for Employment Discrimination as Amounting to Election Against Judicial Remedy]; 63 Am.Jur. Trials 127 [defending employment discrimination cases]; 63 Am.Jur. Trials 257 [Defendant Class Actions in Title VII Cases].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.361 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Statutory Procedure. In 2009, Congress amended 42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(e) to nullify the Supreme Court's holding in Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 550 U.S. 618, 127 S.Ct. 2162, 167 L.Ed.2d 982. Ledbetter held that the time for filing a sex discrimination charge begins to run when the discriminatory act occurs. Hence, the time to file charges relating to the ongoing effects of allegedly discriminatory pay raises began to run when the pay-setting decisions were made. Each decision was a discrete act for purposes of the statute, and paychecks that were issued during the 180-day period prior to filing an EEOC charge did not provide a basis for overcoming the prior failure to file a charge. (127 S.Ct. 2169, 167 L.Ed.2d 993.) (See 43 Cal. Western L. Rev. 497 [National R.R. Passenger Corp. and its effect on post-filing discrete acts in employment discrimination cases]; 38 Golden Gate L. Rev. 249 [Supreme Court's limitation on employee's ability to challenge discriminatory pay under Title VII]; 121 Harv. L. Rev. 355 [Ledbetter].)

42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(e) specifies that for purposes of discrimination in compensation based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, an unlawful employment practice occurs (a) when a discriminatory compensation decision or practice is adopted, (b) when an individual becomes subject to a discriminatory compensation decision or practice, or (c) when an individual is affected by application of a discriminatory compensation decision or practice, including each time wages, benefits, or other compensation is paid, resulting in whole or in part from the decision or practice. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(e)(3)(A).) In addition to relief authorized by 42 U.S.C., §1981a, liability may accrue and an aggrieved person may obtain relief as provided in 42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(g)(1) (see text, §859). This remedy includes "recovery of back pay for up to two years preceding the filing of the charge, where the unlawful employment practices that have occurred during the charge filing period are similar or related to unlawful employment practices with regard to discrimination in compensation that occurred outside the time for filing a charge." (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(e)(3)(B).) The amendment takes effect as if enacted on May 28, 2007, and applies to all claims of discrimination in compensation under Title VII.(3) Pleading Standard.

Swierkiewicz case:

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §928.

(6) Texts and Commentary. See 13 A.L.R. Fed 2d 633 [tolling time period for bringing Title VII action based on personal status or circumstances]; 16 A.L.R. Fed 2d 507 [tolling time period for bringing Title VII charge with EEOC based on filings and administrative and court proceedings]; 20 A.L.R. Fed 2d 343 [general principles for tolling time period for filing Title VII charge with EEOC]; 21 A.L.R. Fed 2d 65 [general principles for tolling time period for bringing Title VII action]; 24 A.L.R. Fed 2d 263 [tolling of time period for bringing Title VII action based on neglect or misconduct of third party]; 25 A.L.R. Fed 2d 571 [tolling of time period for filing Title VII charge with EEOC based on personal status or circumstances]; 28 A.L.R. Fed 2d 73 [tolling of time period for filing Title VII charge with EEOC based on neglect or misconduct]; 29 A.L.R. Fed 2d 415 [tolling of time period for bringing Title VII action based on filings and administrative and court proceedings]; 97 Proof of Facts 3d 81 [litigating employment discrimination class action].

61 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
a. In General.
4. Enforcement.
bb. Remedies, Costs, and Attorneys' Fees.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 859

[§ 859] Remedies, Costs, and Attorneys' Fees.

(1) In General. On finding that the defendant intentionally engaged in the charged unlawful employment practice, the trial judge may enjoin the practice and order appropriate affirmative action, including the reinstatement or hiring of employees, with or without back pay. (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(g).) (See Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 95 S.Ct. 2362, 45 L.Ed.2d 280 [lack of bad faith by defendant is insufficient ground for denial of back pay award]; 41 Hastings L. J. 1301 [back pay remedy].)

(2) Power of EEOC To Award Compensatory Damages. The language, purposes, and history of the Title VII extension and the 1991 Civil Rights Act "convince us that Congress has authorized the EEOC to award compensatory damages in Federal Government employment discrimination cases." (West v. Gibson (1999) 527 U.S. 212, 119 S.Ct. 1906, 1909, 144 L.Ed.2d 196, 203; on damages under 1991 Civil Rights Act, see supra, §849.)

(3) Attorneys' Fees and Costs. Title VII provides for the award of attorneys' fees to the prevailing party as part of costs. The EEOC and the United States are liable for costs "the same as a private person." (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(k); see Christiansburg Garment Co. v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. (1978) 434 U.S. 412, 98 S.Ct. 694, 700, 54 L.Ed.2d 648, 656 [attorneys' fees may be awarded to prevailing defendant only when plaintiff's action is shown to be frivolous]; Library of Congress v. Shaw (1986) 478 U.S. 310, 106 S.Ct. 2957, 2963, 92 L.Ed.2d 250, 259 [§2000e-5(k), making U.S. liable for attorneys' fees and costs "the same as a private person," was not waiver of sovereign immunity from award of interest thereon]; Independent Federation of Flight Attendants v. Zipes (1989) 491 U.S. 754, 109 S.Ct. 2732, 2736, 105 L.Ed.2d 639, 648 [attorneys' fees under §2000e-5(k) are recoverable against losing intervenor only if intervenor's action is frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation]; 19 Santa Clara L. Rev. 487 [Christiansburg]; 140 A.L.R. Fed 301 [factors in employment discrimination cases justifying increase in attorneys' fees].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.391 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

62 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

6. Discrimination in Employment.

a. In General.

4. Enforcement.

cc. Effect of After-Acquired Evidence of Wrongdoing.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 860

[§ 860] Effect of After-Acquired Evidence of Wrongdoing.

In McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S.Ct. 879, 130 L.Ed.2d 852, the issue was whether an employee discharged in violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (infra, §873) "is barred from all relief when, after her discharge, the employer discovers evidence of wrongdoing that, in any event, would have led to the employee's termination on lawful and legitimate grounds." (115 S.Ct. 882, 130 L.Ed.2d 858.) Held, this evidence does not bar all relief, but it may limit the amount and type of relief.

(a) The ADEA and Title VII share common substantive features and a common purpose: elimination of discrimination in the workplace. The Act's remedial measures are designed both to deter discrimination and to compensate employees for injuries caused by the discrimination. A private litigant who seeks redress for injuries vindicates both these objectives, and it would not accord with the statutory scheme if after-acquired evidence of wrongdoing barred all relief for an earlier violation of the Act. (115 S.Ct. 884, 130 L.Ed.2d 861.)

(b) However, after-acquired evidence of the employee's wrongdoing may bear on the specific remedy to be ordered. (115 S.Ct. 885, 130 L.Ed.2d 862.) "In determining appropriate remedial action, the employee's wrongdoing becomes relevant not to punish the employee, or out of concern 'for the relative moral worth of the parties,' ... but to take due account of the lawful prerogatives of the employer in the usual course of its business and the corresponding equities that it has arising from the employee's wrongdoing." (115 S.Ct. 886, 130 L.Ed.2d 863.)

(c) The proper boundaries of remedial relief will vary from case to case. "[A]s a general rule in cases of this type, neither reinstatement nor front pay is an appropriate remedy. It would be both inequitable and pointless to order the reinstatement of someone the employer would have terminated, and will terminate, in any event and upon lawful grounds." (115 S.Ct. 886, 130 L.Ed.2d 863.)

(d) The proper measure of back pay presents a more difficult problem. The statutory goals of deterrence and compensation must be remembered. However, "[o]nce an employer learns about employee wrongdoing that would lead to a legitimate discharge, we cannot require the employer to ignore the information, even if it is acquired during the course of discovery in a suit against the employer and even if the information might have gone undiscovered absent the suit. The beginning point in the trial court's formulation of a remedy should be calculation of back pay from the date of the unlawful discharge to the date the new information was discovered. In determining the appropriate order for relief, the court can consider taking into further account extraordinary equitable circumstances that affect the legitimate interests of either party." (115 S.Ct. 886, 130 L.Ed.2d 864.)

(e) "Where an employer seeks to rely upon after-acquired evidence of wrongdoing, it must first establish that the wrongdoing was of such severity that the employee in fact would have been terminated on those grounds alone if the employer had known of it at the time of the discharge." (115 S.Ct. 886, 130 L.Ed.2d 864.)

(f) Although employers might routinely engage in discovery into an employee's background or performance to resist claims under the Act, the authority of the courts to award attorneys' fees and to impose sanctions will deter abuses. (115 S.Ct. 887, 130 L.Ed.2d 864.) (See Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods (1998) 65 C.A.4th 833, 849, 77 C.R.2d 12, infra, §927 [after-acquired evidence doctrine did not bar claim for sexual harassment by illegal alien; discussing McKennon]; 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 365 [criticizing after-acquired evidence defense]; 45 Stanf. L. Rev. 175 [after-acquired evidence defense]; on admissibility under Fair Employment and Housing Act of after-acquired medical evidence supporting termination decision based on plaintiff's inability to perform job, see infra, §936.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

63 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 6. Discrimination in Employment. b. Sex Discrimination. 1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 861

[§ 861] In General.

(1) Rejection of General Assumptions. Title VII and the guidelines promulgated by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission reject general assumptions about employment characteristics of women, and call for an individual inquiry into a particular woman's qualifications or a clearly justifiable classification with respect to a particular job category. (See Sail'er Inn v. Kirby (1971) 5 C.3d 1, 14, 95 C.R. 329, 485 P.2d 529, supra, §765.) (On discrimination against homosexuals, see supra, §798; on discrimination based on pregnancy, see infra, §§863, 877.)

Illustrative cases are numerous. (See Long v. State Personnel Bd. (1974) 41 C.A.3d 1000, 1016, 116 C.R. 562, supra, §766; Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 97 S.Ct. 2720, 2030, 53 L.Ed.2d 786, 802 [height and weight requirement for prison guards was not shown to be job-related; however, regulation allowing men only to fill "contact positions" in male prisons was justified as bona fide occupational qualification]; Hishon v. King & Spalding (1984) 467 U.S. 69, 104 S.Ct. 2229, 2234, 81 L.Ed.2d 59, 66 [allegations established that partnership consideration was, under Title VII, a term, condition, or privilege of plaintiff's employment with defendant law firm; hence, consideration must be without regard to sex]; Watson v. Fort Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 108 S.Ct. 2777, 101 L.Ed.2d 827 [disparate impact analysis and evidentiary standards]; 95 Harv. L. Rev. 487 [Dothard]; 98 Harv. L. Rev. 227 [Hishon]; 102 Harv. L. Rev. 308 [Watson].)

In Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 98 S.Ct. 1370, 55 L.Ed.2d 657, petitioner, administering its retirement program, required its female employees to make larger contributions to the pension fund than its male employees. Held, the requirement violated both the language and policy of Title VII.

(a) Myths and habitual assumptions about a woman's ability to perform certain kinds of work are no longer acceptable reasons for refusal to employ or lesser compensation. The different treatment here, however, is based on the fact that women, as a class, live longer than men, although individual women may not live as long as individual men. The issue is therefore whether discrimination under Title VII is to be determined by comparison of class characteristics or individual characteristics. (98 S.Ct. 1375, 55 L.Ed.2d 665.)

(b) The statute's language clearly refers to the individual. "It precludes treatment of individuals as simply components of a racial, religious, sexual, or national class. ... Even a true generalization about the class is an insufficient reason for disqualifying an individual to whom the generalization does not apply." (98 S.Ct. 1375, 55 L.Ed.2d 665.)

(c) It is true that unless women are assessed an extra charge, they will be subsidized to some extent by the male employees. But fairness to classes affected by the statute is a matter of policy for the Legislature, and Congress has decided that classifications based on sex, like those based on national origin or race, are unlawful. There is no reason to believe that Congress intended a different rule for group insurance coverage. When insurance risks are grouped, the better risks always subsidize the poorer. (98 S.Ct. 1376, 55 L.Ed.2d 666.) (See Arizona Governing Committee for Tax Deferred Annuity & Deferred Comp. Plans v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 103 S.Ct. 3492, 3503, 77 L.Ed.2d 1236, 1250 [retirement plans paying women lower monthly benefits than men making same contributions violate Title VII; retroactive application of decision denied]; Florida v. Long (1988) 487 U.S. 223, 108 S.Ct. 2354, 101 L.Ed.2d 206 [nonretroactivity of Norris]; 92 Harv. L. Rev. 299 [Manhart].)

(2) Texts and Commentary. Commentary on sex discrimination is extensive. (See 103 Harv. L. Rev. 1750 [Judicial Interpretations of Sex Segregation in the Workplace in Title VII Cases Raising the Lack of Interest Argument]; 9 Golden Gate L. Rev. 481 [Sex Discrimination in Academia]; 10 Golden Gate L. Rev. 1087 [Remedies for Sex-Discriminatory Health and Safety Conditions]; 28 Golden Gate L. Rev. 115 [hybrid sex and age discrimination claims by women]; 41 Hastings L. J. 471 [Sex Stereotyping and the Promotion of Women to Positions of Power]; 45 Hastings L. J. 667 [difference between sexual favoritism and sex discrimination]; 49 Hastings L. J. 105 [Horizontal Jurisprudence and Sex Discrimination]; 25 Pepperdine L. Rev. 819 [is sexual favoritism a form of sex discrimination]; 53 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1747 [Evidentiary Burdens Under Title VII and Section 1983 Compared]; 19 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 761 [physical abilities tests as discriminatory against women]; 20 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 501 [sex discrimination in faculty employment]; 35 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1005 [conflicting Title VII approaches to sex discrimination and sexual orientation]; 29 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 199 [no-spouse rules and American working woman]; 42 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1631 [arguing that glass ceiling prevents female attorneys from reaching partnership and that judicial remedies are inadequate to redress problem]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §135 et seq.; 170 A.L.R. Fed 219 [Title VII Sex Discrimination in Employment--Supreme Court Cases]; 39 Proof of Facts 3d 55 [proof of sex discrimination in job assignment or transfer].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.158 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Texts and Commentary. See 95 Cal. L. Rev. 561 [transgender employees and Title VII]; 42 U.S.F. L. Rev. 849 [enforcing femininity].

64 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 6. Discrimination in Employment. b. Sex Discrimination. 2. Burden of Proof.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 862

[§ 862] Burden of Proof.

In Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 109 S.Ct. 1775, 104 L.Ed.2d 268, plaintiff was passed over for partnership by defendant, an accounting partnership, after several partners made remarks in evaluations that were critical of plaintiff's personality and that reflected sex stereotyping. In her suit, both the district court and the Court of Appeals found unlawful discrimination and held that, once discriminatory motive has been shown, an employer has the burden of proving by clear and convincing evidence that it would have made the same decision in the absence of discrimination. Held, reversed.

A plurality opinion of four justices concluded that the statute, in prohibiting discrimination "because of ... sex" (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(a)(1), (a)(2)), does not require that gender be the only factor in the employment decision; rather, decisions based on a mixture of legitimate and illegitimate considerations are also condemned. (109 S.Ct. 1785, 104 L.Ed.2d 282.) Once the plaintiff has shown that sex-based considerations played a part, the burden shifts to the employer, who may avoid liability only by proving that it would have made the same decision even if it had not considered gender. (109 S.Ct. 1786, 1787, 104 L.Ed.2d 283, 284.) However, proof by a preponderance of the evidence is sufficient to meet this burden. (109 S.Ct. 1792, 104 L.Ed.2d 289.)

One justice generally concurred in the plurality's analysis, but disagreed with the apparent requirement that the employer meet its burden by objective evidence. (109 S.Ct. 1795, 1796, 104 L.Ed.2d 293, 294.) Another justice, while agreeing that the facts of the case required shifting of the burden of persuasion to the employer, argued that this was proper only when the plaintiff has presented direct evidence of substantial reliance on an illegal factor and the employer is thus responsible for the uncertainty as to causation. (109 S.Ct. 1796, 104 L.Ed.2d 295.)

Three justices dissented, arguing that the burden of persuasion should remain on the plaintiff at all times and that the burden-shifting rule was confusing and of limited benefit to plaintiffs. (109 S.Ct. 1806, 104 L.Ed.2d 306.) (See Texas Dept. of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 101 S.Ct. 1089, 1095, 67 L.Ed.2d 207, 215 [allocation of burden and order of presentation of proof are governed by McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668, infra, §870]; Carter v. CB Richard Ellis (2004) 122 C.A.4th 1313, 1322, 19 C.R.3d 519 [administrative managers are not protected group, and evidence that, at most, established disparate impact of new policies on them failed to present prima facie case of disparate impact sex and age discrimination]; 103 Harv. L. Rev. 340 [Price Waterhouse]; 41 Hastings L. J. 471 [same]; 46 Stanf. L. Rev. 959 [direct evidence requirements in mixed-motive cases after Price Waterhouse]; on burden of proof in disparate impact cases, see 42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(k).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

65 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

6. Discrimination in Employment.

b. Sex Discrimination.

3. Gender-Based Fetal Protection Policy.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 863

[§ 863] Gender-Based Fetal Protection Policy.

International Union, United Auto., Aerospace & Agricultural Implement Workers of America, UAW v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 111 S.Ct. 1196, 113 L.Ed.2d 158, poses the question: "May an employer exclude a fertile female employee from certain jobs because of its concern for the health of the fetus the woman might conceive?" (111 S.Ct. 1199, 113 L.Ed.2d 168.) Defendant manufactures batteries, using lead in the manufacturing process, and thus entailing the risk of harm to any fetus carried by a female employee. The company adopted a policy excluding from these jobs women who are pregnant or are capable of bearing children. Petitioners, the Auto Workers Union and several individual plaintiffs, filed a class action challenging the policy as sex discrimination in violation of Title VII. Held, the policy was facially discriminatory, and the employer did not establish the defense of sex as a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ).

(a) The bias in the policy is obvious: Fertile men, but not fertile women, are given a choice whether they wish to risk their reproductive health for a particular job. (111 S.Ct. 1202, 113 L.Ed.2d 172.) "[T]he absence of a malevolent motive does not convert a facially discriminatory policy into a neutral policy with a discriminatory effect. Whether an employment practice involves disparate treatment through explicit facial discrimination does not depend on why the employer discriminates but rather on the explicit terms of the discrimination." (111 S.Ct. 1203, 113 L.Ed.2d 173.)

(b) Under 42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(e), an employer may discriminate in certain instances where religion, sex, or national origin "is a bona fide occupational qualification reasonably necessary to the normal operation of that particular business or enterprise." (111 S.Ct. 1204, 113 L.Ed.2d 174; see supra, §857.) The BFOQ defense is read narrowly, and the most telling term is "occupational": "this indicates that these objective, verifiable requirements must concern job-related skills and aptitudes." (111 S.Ct. 1204, 113 L.Ed.2d 175.) The so-called safety exception is limited to instances in which sex or pregnancy actually interferes with the employee's ability to perform the job. (111 S.Ct. 1206, 113 L.Ed.2d 176.) Defendant cannot establish a BFOQ. "Fertile women, as far as appears in the record, participate in the manufacture of batteries as efficiently as anyone else. ... Decisions about the welfare of future children must be left to the parents who conceive, bear, support, and raise them rather than to the employers who hire those parents." (111 S.Ct. 1207, 113 L.Ed.2d 178.)

(c) The concern about an employer's tort liability does not justify the discrimination. "Without negligence, it would be difficult for a court to find liability on the part of the employer. If, under general tort principles, Title VII bans sex-specific fetal-protection policies, the employer fully informs the woman of the risks, and the employer has not acted negligently, the basis for holding an employer liable seems remote at best." (111 S.Ct. 1208, 113 L.Ed.2d 179.) (See 105 Harv. L. Rev. 379; 45 Stanf. L. Rev. 453 [Employer Liability After Johnson Controls]; on pregnancy discrimination under federal law, see infra, §877; for challenge to fetal protection policy under California law, see Johnson Controls v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1990) 218 C.A.3d 517, 267 C.R. 158, infra, §926.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

66 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
b. Sex Discrimination.
4. Sexual Harassment.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 864

[§ 864] In General.

Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 106 S.Ct. 2399, 91 L.Ed.2d 49, held that sexual harassment may constitute a violation of Title VII.

(a) The prohibition against discrimination with respect to "compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(a)(1)) encompasses all aspects of the work environment. Hence, sexual harassment that creates a hostile environment is a violation of Title VII, even though it involves no tangible loss of an economic character. (106 S.Ct. 2404, 91 L.Ed.2d 58.)

(b) The fact that the victim's sex-related conduct was "voluntary," in that she was not forced to participate against her will, is no defense. The correct inquiry is whether she indicated by her conduct that the sexual advances were unwelcome, not whether her actual participation in sexual intercourse was voluntary. (106 S.Ct. 2406, 91 L.Ed.2d 60.)

(c) At the trial judge's discretion, evidence of the victim's sexually provocative speech or dress may be admitted on the issue of whether she found particular sexual advances to be unwelcome. (106 S.Ct. 2407, 91 L.Ed.2d 61.) (See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 C.A.3d 590, 612, 614, 262 C.R. 842 [under Meritor, sexual harassment must be sufficiently severe or pervasive to create abusive working environment; isolated instances do not give rise to cause of action]; 97 Harv. L. Rev. 1449 [Meritor]; 100 Harv. L. Rev. 276 [same]; 14 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 25 [same]; 25 San Diego L. Rev. 125 [same]; 41 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 118 [same]; 18 U.S.F. L. Rev. 333 [same].)

Meritor was reaffirmed, and its application explained, in Harris v. Forklift Systems (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295.

(a) The Meritor standard "takes a middle path between making actionable any conduct that is merely offensive and requiring the conduct to cause a tangible psychological injury." (114 S.Ct. 370, 126 L.Ed.2d 302.)

(b) "But Title VII comes into play before the harassing conduct leads to a nervous breakdown. A discriminatorily abusive work environment, even one that does not seriously affect employees' psychological well-being, can and often will detract from employees' job performance, discourage employees from remaining on the job, or keep them from advancing in their careers. Moreover, even without regard to these tangible effects, the very fact that the discriminatory conduct was so severe or pervasive that it created a work environment abusive to employees because of their race, gender, religion, or national origin, offends Title VII's broad rule of workplace equality. The appalling conduct alleged in Meritor, and the reference in that case to environments 'so heavily polluted with discrimination as to destroy completely the emotional and psychological stability of minority group workers,' ... merely present some especially egregious examples of harassment. They do not mark the boundary of what is actionable." (114 S.Ct. 370, 126 L.Ed.2d 302.)

(c) "This is not, and by its nature cannot be, a mathematically precise test. We need not answer today all the potential questions it raises. ... But we can say that whether an environment is 'hostile' or 'abusive' can be determined only by looking at all the circumstances. These may include the frequency of the discriminatory conduct; its severity; whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance; and whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance. The effect on the employee's psychological well-being is, of course, relevant to determining whether the plaintiff actually found the environment abusive. But while psychological harm, like any other relevant factor, may be taken into account, no single factor is required." (114 S.Ct. 371, 126 L.Ed.2d 302.) (See 108 Harv. L. Rev. 321 [Harris]; 32 San Diego L. Rev. 321 [same]; 22 Western State L. Rev. 111 [same]; on liability for sexual harassment under California law, see infra, §927 [generally]; §928 [liability of supervisors]; §929 [sexual harassment of job applicants]; §896 [sexual harassment occurring in professional relationship].)

Commentary on sexual harassment is extensive. (See 45B Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §822 et seq.; 111 Harv. L. Rev. 445 [Treating Sexual Harassment With Respect]; 83 Cal. L. Rev. 637 [balancing right to political speech with right to workplace free of sexual harassment]; 18 California Lawyer 73 (November 1998) [Investigating Sexual Harassment]; 34 Cal. Western L. Rev. 53 [Social Sexual Conduct at Work: How Do Workers Know When It Is Harassment and When It Is Not?]; 34 Cal. Western L. Rev. 457 [study of factors affecting employee perceptions and consequences of sexual harassment]; 34 Golden Gate L. Rev. 127 [customizing reasonable woman standard to fit emotionally and financially disabled plaintiffs as outside scope of Civil Rights Act]; 33 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 133 [noncognizable harassing conduct in Title VII hostile work environment claims]; 75 So. Cal. L. Rev. 791 [gap between what judges and reasonable people believe is sexually harassing]; 22 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 53 [pornography in workplace]; 24 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 303 [critical analysis of two-pronged perspective for viewing hostile environment in sexual harassment cases]; 27 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 265 [balancing sexual harassment policies and reasonableness in primary and secondary classrooms]; 30 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 253 [use and abuse of "but for" analysis in sexual harassment law under Title VII]; 43 Stanf. L. Rev. 813 [Sex at Work]; 49 Stanf. L. Rev. 691 [sexual harassment as sex discrimination under Title VII]; 47 Stanf. L. Rev. 565 [argument that hostile work environment should be conceived as form of disparate treatment to reflect Congress' mandate]; 50 Stanf. L. Rev. 523 [applying Title IX to student-to-student peer sexual harassment]; 51 Stanf. L. Rev. 161 [implementing new theory in sexual harassment law]; 19 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 215 [sexual harassment, fair housing, and expanding statutory remedies into common law framework]; 24 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 125 [employee sexual harassment training by legal profession]; 28 U.S.F. L. Rev. 715 [sexual harassment of attorneys by clients]; 37 U.S.F. L. Rev. 467 [vulnerability of unsuspecting employers to hostile environment claims]; 31 West L.A. L. Rev. 135 [hostile work environment v. free speech]; 145 A.L.R. Fed 459 [conduct of plaintiff as defense]; 163 A.L.R. Fed 445 [liability of employer under Title VII for sexual harassment of employee by customer or client]; 52 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [Proof of Employer Liability for Sexual Harassment Claims Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964]; 56 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [Proof of Employer Negligence in Hiring and Supervision of Employee With Propensity Toward Workplace Sexual Harassment]; 73 Am.Jur. Trials 1 [Sexual Harassment Damages and Remedies].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.167

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 33 Pepperdine L. Rev. 385 [eliminating disparate treatment of third-party sexual harassment].

67 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

6. Discrimination in Employment.

b. Sex Discrimination.

4. Sexual Harassment.

bb. Same-Gender Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 865

[§ 865] Same-Gender Discrimination.

In Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 118 S.Ct. 998, 140 L.Ed.2d 201, plaintiff, a male, was employed as a roustabout on defendant's offshore oil platform. Plaintiff alleged that on several occasions, several members of the eight-man crew forcibly subjected him to sex-related, humiliating actions in front of the rest of the crew, physically assaulted him, and threatened him with rape. After plaintiff's complaints to his supervisors produced no remedial action, plaintiff resigned to avoid further sexual harassment and verbal abuse. In plaintiff's subsequent action alleging discrimination in employment because of his sex, the district court granted summary judgment for defendant, reasoning that plaintiff had no cause of action under Title VII for harassment by other males. Held, reversed.

(a) Nothing in Title VII necessarily bars a sex discrimination claim merely because the plaintiff and the defendant, or the person acting on the defendant's behalf, are of the same sex. Although male-on-male sexual harassment was not the principal evil that concerned Congress when it enacted Title VII, statutory prohibitions often go beyond the principal evil to cover reasonably comparable evils. Sexual harassment of any kind that meets the statutory requirements is included within Title VII's prohibition against discrimination. (118 S.Ct. 1002, 140 L.Ed.2d 207.)

(b) Recognizing liability for same-sex harassment will not transform Title VII into a "general civility code" for the American workplace as long as careful attention is paid to the statute's requirements. Title VII prohibits discrimination because of sex. The critical issue is whether members of one sex are exposed to disadvantageous conditions of employment to which members of the other sex are not exposed. (118 S.Ct. 1002, 140 L.Ed.2d 207.) Although a plaintiff need not prove that the harassing conduct was motivated by sexual desire, he or she must always prove that the conduct constituted discrimination. (118 S.Ct. 1002, 140 L.Ed.2d 208.) Furthermore, the statute prohibits only behavior so objectively offensive, severe, and pervasive as to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create a hostile work environment. Using common sense and an appropriate sensitivity to social context, courts and juries will be able to distinguish between simple teasing and conduct that a reasonable person would find hostile and abusive. (118 S.Ct. 1003, 140 L.Ed.2d 208.) (See 112 Harv. L. Rev. 325 [Oncale]; 26 Pepperdine L. Rev. 261 [standing requirements in transferred impact sexual harassment cases]; 36 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1147 [same-gender sexual harassment as sex discrimination under Title VII]; 40 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1 [Oncale]; 43 Santa Clara L. Rev. 249 [line of demarcation between sex and sexual orientation discrimination]; 71 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1341 [same]; 61 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [Employer Liability for Same-Sex Harassment]; on discrimination based on sexual orientation, see supra, §798; on liability for same-gender sexual harassment under Fair Employment and Housing Act, see infra, §930.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

68 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
b. Sex Discrimination.
4. Sexual Harassment.
cc. Vicarious Liability.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 866

[§ 866] Vicarious Liability.

In Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S.Ct. 2257, 141 L.Ed.2d 633, plaintiff was a salesperson employed by defendant for over a year. Several months after resigning from her job, plaintiff sued defendant for damages under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C., §2000e et seq.), alleging that during her employment she was subjected to constant sexual harassment by her supervisor. Although plaintiff received a promotion during that time, her supervisor allegedly had threatened to deny her tangible job benefits if she denied him sexual liberties and had repeatedly made boorish and offensive remarks and gestures. The trial judge found that the supervisor's alleged behavior was severe and pervasive enough to create a hostile work environment, but that defendant neither knew nor should have known about it. The judge granted summary judgment for defendant, which was reversed by the Court of Appeals. Held, reversal of summary judgment affirmed.

(a) Vicarious liability.

(1) Sexual harassment cases under Title VII based on threats that have been fulfilled are referred to as "quid pro quo" cases, and have been distinguished from those involving bothersome attentions or sexual remarks that are sufficiently severe or pervasive to create a "hostile work environment." (118 S.Ct. 2264, 141 L.Ed.2d 646.) These terms are relevant to the threshold question whether a plaintiff can prove discrimination in violation of Title VII, but they are not controlling on the issue of vicarious liability. Instead, Title VII should be interpreted using agency principles. (118 S.Ct. 2265, 141 L.Ed.2d 648.)

(2) Under Rest.2d, Agency §219(1), a central principle of agency law is that a master is subject to liability for the torts a servant commits while acting in the scope of employment. However, sexual harassment by a supervisor is generally not within the scope of employment; it usually is not motivated by a purpose to serve the employer. (118 S.Ct. 2266, 141 L.Ed.2d 649.)

(3) In limited circumstances, agency principles impose liability on employers even when employees commit torts outside the scope of employment. (118 S.Ct. 2267, 141 L.Ed.2d 650.) For example, an employer may be liable where its own negligence is a cause of the harassment. Here, however, plaintiff seeks to invoke the more stringent standard of vicarious liability. (118 S.Ct. 2267, 141 L.Ed.2d 651.)

(4) Under Rest.2d, Agency §219(2)(d), vicarious liability may apply when the servant "was aided in accomplishing the tort by the existence of the agency relation." (118 S.Ct. 2267, 141 L.Ed.2d 651.) Whatever the exact contours of this standard may be, its requirements will always be met "when a supervisor takes a tangible employment action against the subordinate." (118 S.Ct. 2267, 141 L.Ed.2d 652.) A significant change in employment status, such as hiring, firing, failing to promote, reassignment with significantly different responsibilities, or a decision causing a significant change in benefits, is a tangible employment action. (118 S.Ct. 2268, 141 L.Ed.2d 652.) Moreover, the "aided in the agency relation" standard imposes liability on an employer whose supervisory employee creates an actionable hostile environment, even when no tangible employment action occurs. (118 S.Ct. 2269, 141 L.Ed.2d 654.)

(b) Affirmative defense. In the absence of a tangible employment action, the employer may raise an affirmative defense to vicarious liability. The affirmative defense is comprised of the following two necessary elements: (1) that the employer exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any sexually harassing behavior, and (2) that the employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or to avoid harm otherwise. No affirmative defense is available, however, when the supervisor's harassment culminates in a tangible employment action. (118 S.Ct. 2270, 141 L.Ed.2d 655.) Plaintiff here should have an adequate opportunity to prove defendant's liability. Although she has not alleged a tangible employment action by the supervisor, which would deprive defendant of the affirmative defense, this is not dispositive. Defendant is still subject to liability for the supervisor's activity, but should have an opportunity to assert and prove the affirmative defense. (118 S.Ct. 2270, 141 L.Ed.2d 655.)

Two justices dissented, stating that the standard of employer liability under Title VII should be the same whether a sexually or racially hostile environment is alleged: An employer should be liable if, and only if, the employee proves that the employer was negligent in permitting the supervisor's conduct to occur. (118 S.Ct. 2271, 141 L.Ed.2d 656.) (See 27 Pepperdine L. Rev. 175 [Ellerth].)

In Faragher v. Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S.Ct. 2275, 141 L.Ed.2d 662, a companion case to Ellerth, plaintiff was an ocean lifeguard employed by defendant city for about 5 years. After resigning, plaintiff sued defendant for nominal damages under Title VII, alleging that during her employment, two of her supervisors had created a sexually hostile environment by repeatedly subjecting the female lifeguards to offensive touching and lewd and offensive remarks. Following a bench trial, the court found that the conduct of plaintiff's supervisors constituted an abusive working environment and that defendant was liable for that conduct. The court awarded plaintiff $ 1 in nominal damages. The Court of Appeals reversed. Held, reversed, using the same reasoning as Ellerth.

Defendant here could not be found to have exercised reasonable care to prevent the supervisors' harassing conduct. Defendant entirely failed to disseminate its policy against sexual harassment among the beach employees, and its officials made no attempt to keep track of the conduct of beach supervisors. Furthermore, defendant's policy did not assure that the harassing supervisors could be bypassed in registering complaints. (118 S.Ct. 2293, 141 L.Ed.2d 689.)

Two justices dissented, stating that an employer should not be vicariously liable if a supervisor creates a hostile work environment, and that the case should be remanded to consider whether defendant was negligent. (118 S.Ct. 2294, 141 L.Ed.2d 691.) (See 112 Harv. L. Rev. 313 [Ellerth and Faragher]; 112 Harv. L. Rev. 1977 [Notice in Hostile Environment Discrimination Law]; 29 Golden Gate L. Rev. 235 [agency principles in Title VII sexual harassment cases]; 36 San Diego L. Rev. 41 [Ellerth and Faragher]; 28 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 45 [employer liability for hostile environment sexual harassment by supervisor]; 21 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 103 [Ellerth and Faragher]; 35 U.S.F. L. Rev. 623 [same]; 157 A.L.R. Fed 1 [when is supervisor's hostile environment sexual harassment imputable to employer]; 170 A.L.R. Fed 219 [Title VII Sex Discrimination in Employment--Supreme Court Cases]; 195 A.L.R. Fed 463 [who is supervisor for purposes of imputing liability to employer]; 196 A.L.R. Fed 437 [when is coworker's hostile environment sexual harassment imputable to governmental employer]; on liability of supervisors under Fair Employment and Housing Act, see infra, §919.)

In Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 542 U.S. 129, 124 S.Ct. 2342, 159 L.Ed.2d 204, the Court recognized for the first time the availability of a constructive discharge claim under Title VII. (124 S.Ct. 2352, 159 L.Ed.2d 217.) Plaintiff quit her employment after being subjected to severe and pervasive sexual harassment by her supervisors. Hence, her hostile work environment claim was not based on a "tangible employment action," as required to avoid the Ellerth/Faragher affirmative defense to vicarious liability. The trial court held that plaintiff's claim was untenable as a matter of law because she did not avail herself of defendant's internal procedure for reporting sexual harassment. The Court of Appeals held that (1) plaintiff had stated a claim for constructive discharge due to a hostile environment, and (2) "a constructive discharge, when proved, constitutes a tangible employment action," which "renders an employer strictly liable and precludes employer recourse to the affirmative action defense." Held, remanded.

"[A]n employer does not have recourse to the Ellerth/Faragher affirmative defense when a supervisor's official act precipitates the constructive discharge," but the Court of Appeals erred in declaring that the affirmative defense is never available in constructive discharge cases. (124 S.Ct. 2351, 2357, 159 L.Ed.2d 216, 223.) The presence or absence of an "official act" by a supervisor marks the path that "constructive discharge claims based on harassing conduct must follow." (124 S.Ct. 2356, 159 L.Ed.2d 222.) (See 77 So. Cal. L. Rev. 307 [constructive discharge].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 39 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 529 [alternative approach to holding employer strictly liable for supervisory sexual extortion]; 198 A.L.R. Fed 1 [when to impute coworker's hostile environment sexual harassment to employer--manufacturing, wholesale, and retail industry--nongovernmental employment]; 5 A.L.R. Fed 2d 341 [same: service industry].

69 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
b. Sex Discrimination.
5. Comparable Worth.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 867

[§ 867] Comparable Worth.

The contention that Title VII requires that different jobs of comparable worth receive equal compensation has not yet been directly considered by the Supreme Court; but Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 101 S.Ct. 2242, 68 L.Ed.2d 751, removed an impediment to the acceptance of this contention by holding that the prohibition against sex-based wage discrimination is not limited to cases involving unequal pay for equal work.

In Gunther, female county jail guards, who admittedly had less responsibility than their male counterparts (and hence did not perform equal work), claimed that part of the differential in their compensation was due to intentional sex discrimination. Their contention was based on the fact that, although a county evaluation of the positions determined that female guards should be paid 95% as much as male guards, they were, in fact, paid only 70% as much. The county's position was based on the Bennett Amendment to Title VII (42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h)), which permits differentials in pay based on sex if authorized by the Equal Pay Act (29 U.S.C., §206(d)). That Act prohibits differentials for "equal work on jobs the performance of which requires equal skill, effort and responsibility, and which are performed under similar working conditions," unless based on seniority, merit, quality or quantity of production, or a factor other than sex. Specifically, the county argued that the Bennett Amendment incorporated the entire Equal Pay Act, thereby limiting Title VII's application to cases satisfying the Act's "equal work" standard.

The Court concluded that both the language and legislative history of the Bennett Amendment, as well as the remedial purposes of Title VII, establish the congressional intent to incorporate only the Equal Pay Act's affirmative defenses. Hence, unless one of the affirmative defenses is applicable, a Title VII action exists for intentional sex-based wage discrimination even though no member of the opposite sex is receiving higher pay for the same work. (101 S.Ct. 2254, 68 L.Ed.2d 759.) (See 95 Harv. L. Rev. 300 [Gunther]; 99 Harv. L. Rev. 1728 [same]; 71 Cal. L. Rev. 730 [comparable work, disparate impact, and market rate salary problem]; 16 Pacific L. J. 833 [Gunther]; 16 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 151 [same]; 21 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 305 [same]; 22 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 717 [Comparable Worth: An Impermissible Form of Affirmative Action?]; 18 San Diego L. Rev. 685 [Gunther]; 23 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 225 [comparable worth as remedy for gender-based wage discrimination]; 34 Stanf. L. Rev. 1083 [Gunther]; 18 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 449 [same]; 16 U.S.F. L. Rev. 357 [same]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §§657, 658; 26 Proof of Facts 3d 269 [proof of violation of Equal Pay Act].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.161

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 38 Golden Gate L. Rev. 249 [Supreme Court's limitation on employee's ability to challenge discriminatory pay under Title VII]; 19 A.L.R. Fed 2d 639 [Admissibility of Law and Expert Testimony in Actions Alleging Violations of Equal Pay Act].

70 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
b. Sex Discrimination.
6. Discrimination Against Men.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 868

[§ 868] Discrimination Against Men.

In Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 103 S.Ct. 2622, 77 L.Ed.2d 89, a company health insurance plan, with one exception, provided for identical hospitalization coverage for male and female employees and their spouses. The exception involved a limitation on coverage for pregnant spouses of male employees that did not apply to other hospital confinement, including that for pregnant employees. Held, this constituted sex discrimination under Title VII.

(a) Title VII's prohibition applies to male as well as female employees. (103 S.Ct. 2632, 77 L.Ed.2d 101.) Hence, a plan that provided complete hospitalization for spouses of female employees, but did not cover the spouses of male employees when they had broken bones, would constitute sex discrimination against male employees. The same is true where, as here, the less inclusive coverage for the spouses of male employees relates to pregnancy, because the net result is that married male employees receive a benefit package for their dependents that is less inclusive than that provided for married female employees. (103 S.Ct. 2634, 77 L.Ed.2d 103.)

(b) There is no merit to the contention that, because Title VII applies only to discrimination in employment, it does not extend to discrimination against pregnant spouses. "The Pregnancy Discrimination Act has now made clear that, for all Title VII purposes, discrimination based on a woman's pregnancy is, on its face, discrimination because of her sex. And since the sex of the spouse is always the opposite of the sex of the employee, it follows inexorably that discrimination against female spouses in the provisions of fringe benefits is also discrimination against male employees." (103 S.Ct. 2634, 77 L.Ed.2d 103.) (See 97 Harv. L. Rev. 252 [Newport News]; 153 A.L.R. Fed 609 [reverse or majority gender discrimination against males--public employment cases]; 162 A.L.R. Fed 273 [reverse or majority gender discrimination against males--private employment cases].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

71 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 6. Discrimination in Employment. c. Racial Discrimination. 1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 869

[§ 869] In General.

(1) Procedures Neutral on Their Face. In Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S.Ct. 849, 28 L.Ed.2d 158, defendant, with a past record of discriminating against Blacks, adopted a policy of requiring a high school diploma and passage of an intelligence test for eligibility to desirable departments. Held, the tests, not job-related, violated the Act, despite plaintiff's failure to show a subjective intent to discriminate.

(a) The object of Congress was to achieve equality of employment. Hence, procedures neutral on their face or in terms of intent cannot be maintained if they operate to preserve discriminatory practices. "The Act proscribes not only overt discrimination but also practices that are fair in form, but discriminatory in operation. The touchstone is business necessity. If an employment practice which operates to exclude Negroes cannot be shown to be related to job performance, the practice is prohibited." (91 S.Ct. 853, 28 L.Ed.2d 164.)

(b) The statute authorizes use of an ability test not intended or used to discriminate because of race. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has interpreted this to permit only the use of job-related tests, and this interpretation is sound. "Congress has not commanded that the less qualified be preferred over the better qualified simply because of minority origins. Far from discouraging job qualifications as such, Congress has made such qualifications the controlling factor, so that race, religion, nationality, and sex become irrelevant. What Congress has commanded is that any tests used must measure the person for the job and not the person in the abstract." (91 S.Ct. 856, 28 L.Ed.2d 167.) (See Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 95 S.Ct. 2362, 2376, 2378, 45 L.Ed.2d 280, 304, 307 [following Griggs; testing program resulting in discrimination against Blacks]; Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 96 S.Ct. 2040, 48 L.Ed.2d 597 [test of verbal ability and reading capacity was related to performance in police training program; further validation was unnecessary]; Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 102 S.Ct. 2525, 73 L.Ed.2d 130 ["bottom line" theory of defense, i.e., there is no discrimination if "bottom line" of promotional process was racial balance, does not preclude proof of prima facie case of employment test's disparate impact]; Goodman v. Lukens Steel Co. (1987) 482 U.S. 656, 107 S.Ct. 2617, 2625, 96 L.Ed.2d 572, 579 [union's intentional failure to assert racially based grievances was violative of Title VII and 42 U.S.C., §1981 (supra, §814), even if motivation was to help minorities].)

(2) Texts and Commentary. Griggs and cases following it have been the subject of considerable commentary. (See 89 Harv. L. Rev. 225 [Albemarle]; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 114 [Davis]; 91 Harv. L. Rev. 793 [Differential Pass-Fail Rates in Employment Testing]; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 114 [Davis]; 96 Harv. L. Rev. 278 [Teal]; 117 Harv. L. Rev. 493 [equal protection and disparate impact]; 27 Hastings Const. L. Q. 89 [Neutrality of the Equal Protection Clause]; 26 Hastings L. J. 1377 [Diplomas, Degrees, and Discrimination]; 27 Hastings L. J. 1239 [Albemarle]; 34 Golden Gate L. Rev. 37 [expert testimony and "subtle discrimination" in workplace]; 20 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 375 [disparate impact theory as applicable to subjective selection procedures]; 34 McGeorge L. Rev. 877 [discrimination in hiring of National Football League head coaches]; 25 San Diego L. Rev. 63 [application of Griggs to subjective employment practices]; 25 San Diego L. Rev. 881 [Racial Subordination Through Formal Equal Opportunity]; 17 Santa Clara L. Rev. 777 [Griggs]; 41 Stanf. L. Rev. 1105; 43 Stanf. L. Rev. 241 [discrimination against "other" minorities as proof of discrimination in employment under federal law]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §§123 et seq., 288 et seq.; 165 A.L.R. Fed 143 [Can "At-Will" Employee Bring Action for Racial Discrimination Under 42 U.S.C., §1981?]; 182 A.L.R. Fed 61 [Supreme Court cases on Title VII race or national origin discrimination].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.142; Constitutional Law k.214 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Texts and Commentary. See 38 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 573 [Indirect Employer Liability: The Ninth Circuit Limits Liability for Racial Discrimination]; 53 U.C.L.A. L. Rev 701 [Was the Disparate Impact Theory a Mistake?].

72 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 6. Discrimination in Employment. c. Racial Discrimination. 2. Proof of Prima Facie Case.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 870

[§ 870] Proof of Prima Facie Case.

The complaining party may invoke the conciliation powers of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and, if unsuccessful there, may bring an action in federal court. (See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668; 84 Harv. L. Rev. 1195; supra, §858.) But that party has the burden of establishing a prima facie case of discrimination. "This may be done by showing (i) that he belongs to a racial minority; (ii) that he applied and was qualified for a job for which the employer was seeking applicants; (iii) that, despite his qualifications, he was rejected; and (iv) that, after his rejection, the position remained open and the employer continued to seek applicants for persons of complainant's qualifications." If he meets this burden, the employer must then articulate a "legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason" for this rejection. (McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, supra, 93 S.Ct. 1824, 36 L.Ed.2d 677.) (See Furnco Const. Corp. v. Waters (1978) 438 U.S. 567, 98 S.Ct. 2943, 2951, 57 L.Ed.2d 957, 968 [prima facie showing under McDonnell Douglas, and employer's proof of no discriminatory motive].)

In Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 109 S.Ct. 2115, 104 L.Ed.2d 733, nonwhite workers at Alaskan canneries filed a Title VII action claiming racial discrimination. Plaintiffs relied on evidence that unskilled "cannery jobs" on the line were filled predominantly by nonwhites, while skilled "noncannery jobs" were filled predominantly by whites. Held, this evidence was insufficient to establish a prima facie "disparate impact" case. The Court made the following points:

(a) When relying on statistics, the racial composition of persons holding the jobs in question must be compared to the racial composition of qualified persons in the labor market. (109 S.Ct. 2121, 104 L.Ed.2d 747.)

(b) Racial imbalance in one segment of an employer's work force does not by itself establish a prima facie case of disparate impact with respect to other segments. (109 S.Ct. 2122, 104 L.Ed.2d 749.)

(c) To establish a prima facie case of disparate impact, plaintiffs must prove not only underrepresentation in the jobs involved, but also causation by the employer's particular hiring practices; i.e., they must show "that each challenged practice has a significantly disparate impact on employment opportunities for whites and nonwhites." (109 S.Ct. 2125, 104 L.Ed.2d 751.)

(d) If a prima facie case is established, the burden of producing evidence shifts to the employer to show a business justification. The burden of persuasion, however, remains on the plaintiff. (109 S.Ct. 2125, 2126, 104 L.Ed.2d 752, 753.)

(e) If the employer proves a business justification, plaintiff can still prevail by showing that other selection practices are available that would be equally effective in achieving the employer's goals and would have less racial impact. (109 S.Ct. 2126, 2127, 104 L.Ed.2d 753, 754.)

Four justices dissented, calling the decision a retreat from the goal of eliminating racial discrimination in employment. (109 S.Ct. 2127, 2136, 104 L.Ed.2d 754, 755.) (See 103 Harv. L. Rev. 340 [Wards Cove]; 26 Cal. Western L. Rev. 449 [same]; 23 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1483 [same].)

The Civil Rights Act of 1991 was enacted in response to Wards Cove. (See supra, §849.) (See Los Angeles County Dept. of Parks & Recreation v. Civil Service Com. (1992) 8 C.A.4th 273, 280, 10 C.R.2d 150 [discussing showing required under McDonnell Douglas and Texas Dept. of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 101 S.Ct. 1089, 67 L.Ed.2d 207]; 43 Hastings L. J. 57 [fallacy of "pretext-plus" rule in employment discrimination cases].)

Clark v. Claremont University Center (1992) 6 C.A.4th 639, 662, 8 C.R.2d 151, applied the McDonnell Douglas test, affirming a judgment for compensatory and punitive damages in favor of a university professor denied tenure after a faculty departmental review. The court added this comment: "Many employment discrimination cases do not survive to trial because evidence of the employer's improper motive is so difficult to obtain. This case is unusual, not because of Clark's claims, but because of Clark's strong evidence of improper motive. Our own computer-assisted research of tenure denial cases across the nation revealed none involving university professors who made such blatant remarks as in this case." (6 C.A.4th 670.)

In St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S.Ct. 2742, 125 L.Ed.2d 407, the Supreme Court, in a 5-4 opinion, restated and explained the McDonnell Douglas approach, and distinguished Texas Dept. of Community Affairs v. Burdine, supra. The issue before the Court was whether the trier of fact's rejection of the employer's asserted reasons for its actions mandates a finding for the plaintiff. (113 S.Ct. 2746, 125 L.Ed.2d 414.)

(a) Although the McDonnell Douglas presumption places on the defendant the burden of producing an explanation to rebut the prima facie case, the ultimate burden of proof remains on the plaintiff, who must persuade the trier of fact that the defendant intentionally discriminated against the plaintiff. (113 S.Ct. 2747, 125 L.Ed.2d 416; for the distinction between the two burdens, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §1 et seq.)

(b) The district court made a finding, not challenged by plaintiff, that defendant employers sustained their burden of production by introducing evidence of two legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for their actions. At this point the shifted burden of production became irrelevant, and plaintiff had the opportunity to demonstrate, through presentation of his own case and cross-examination of defendants' witnesses, that the proffered reasons were not the true reasons for the employment decision. (113 S.Ct. 2747, 125 L.Ed.2d 416.)

(c) "In the nature of things, the determination that a defendant has met its burden of production (and has thus rebutted any legal presumption of intentional discrimination) can involve no credibility assessment. For the burden-of-production determination necessarily precedes the credibility-assessment stage." (113 S.Ct. 2748, 125 L.Ed.2d 417.) "The fact finder's disbelief of the reasons put forward by the defendant (particularly if disbelief is accompanied by a suspicion of mendacity) may, together with the elements of the prima facie case, suffice to show intentional discrimination. ... But the Court of Appeals' holding that rejection of the defendant's proffered reasons compels judgment for the plaintiff disregards the fundamental principle of Rule 301 that a presumption does not shift the burden of proof." (113 S.Ct. 2749, 125 L.Ed.2d 418.)

(d) "We have no authority to impose liability upon an employer for alleged discriminatory employment practices unless an appropriate fact finder determines, according to proper procedures, that the employer has unlawfully

discriminated. We may, according to traditional practice, establish certain modes and orders of proof, including an initial rebuttable presumption of the sort we described earlier in this opinion, which we believe McDonnell Douglas represents. But nothing in law would permit us to substitute for the required finding that the employer's action was the product of unlawful discrimination, the much different (and much lesser) finding that the employer's explanation of its action was not believable. The dissent's position amounts to precisely this, unless what is required to establish the McDonnell Douglas prima facie case is a degree of proof so high that it would, in the absence of rebuttal, require a directed verdict for the plaintiff. ... Quite obviously, however, what is required to establish the McDonnell Douglas prima facie case is infinitely less than what a directed verdict demands. The dissent is thus left with a position that has no support in the statute, no support in the reason of the matter, no support in any holding of this Court (that is not even contended), and support, if at all, only in the dicta of this Court's opinion." (113 S.Ct. 2751, 125 L.Ed.2d 421.)

Four justices joined in a dissenting opinion, relying in great part on Burdine, and charging that the majority, after two decades of stable law in the Supreme Court, departed from settled precedent and substituted a scheme of proof "that promises to be unfair and unworkable." (113 S.Ct. 2757, 125 L.Ed.2d 428.) The author of the dissenting opinion says in conclusion: "Whether Melvin Hicks wins or loses on remand, many plaintiffs in a like position will surely lose under the scheme adopted by the Court today, unless they possess both prescience and resources beyond what this Court has previously required Title VII litigants to employ." (113 S.Ct. 2766, 125 L.Ed.2d 439.) (See Green v. Rancho Santa Margarita Mortg. Co. (1994) 28 C.A.4th 686, 694, 695, 33 C.R.2d 706, infra, §907 [discussing Hicks]; 107 Harv. L. Rev. 342 [Hicks]; 87 Cal L. Rev. 983 [making sense of McDonnell Douglas: circumstantial evidence and proof of disparate treatment under Title VII]; 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 385 [Hicks]; 28 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 261 [discussing evidentiary requirements after Hicks]; 48 Proof of Facts 3d 75 [racial discrimination in employment promotion decisions under Title VII].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.142

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

73 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
c. Racial Discrimination.
3. Discrimination Against Whites.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 871

[§ 871] Discrimination Against Whites.

In McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Trans. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 96 S.Ct. 2574, 49 L.Ed.2d 493, petitioners, white employees of defendant, alleged that they were discharged for misappropriating cargo from a ship, but that a black employee, charged with the same offense, was not discharged. Held, a cause of action was stated: Title VII prohibits discrimination against Whites on the same standards as those applicable to Blacks. (96 S.Ct. 2578, 49 L.Ed.2d 501.) (See 90 Harv. L. Rev. 415, 440.)

Although under current classifications Arabs are Whites, the court in St. Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 107 S.Ct. 2022, 95 L.Ed.2d 582, held that denial of tenure to a college professor who was a U.S. citizen born in Iraq constituted racial discrimination under 42 U.S.C., §1981 (supra, §814), if it was based on his Arabian ancestry. "Based on the history of §1981, we have little trouble in concluding that Congress intended to protect from discrimination identifiable classes of persons who are subjected to intentional discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics. Such discrimination is racial discrimination that Congress intended §1981 to forbid, whether or not it would be classified as racial in terms of modern scientific theory." (107 S.Ct. 2028, 95 L.Ed.2d 592.) However, the discrimination must be based "on the fact that he was born an Arab, rather than solely on the place or nation of origin, or his religion." (107 S.Ct. 2028, 95 L.Ed.2d 592.) (See Shaare Tefila Congregation v. Cobb (1987) 481 U.S. 615, 107 S.Ct. 2019, 2021, 95 L.Ed.2d 594, 597 [applying St. Francis College; discrimination against Jews is racial discrimination under 42 U.S.C., §1982, supra, §814]; Sandhu v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 26 C.A.4th 846, 31 C.R.2d 617, infra, §924; Pepperdine L. Rev. 77 [St. Francis College]; 150 A.L.R. Fed 1 [private employment cases on reverse or majority race or national origin discrimination]; 168 A.L.R. Fed 1 [public employment cases on reverse discrimination].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

74 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
c. Racial Discrimination.
4. Harassment by Employer.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 872

[§ 872] Harassment by Employer.

In Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 109 S.Ct. 2363, 105 L.Ed.2d 132, a black woman sued her employer of 10 years under 42 U.S.C., §1981 (supra, §814), claiming racial harassment by her supervisor, as well as discrimination in failing to promote her and eventually discharging her. Held, the racial harassment claim is not actionable under 42 U.S.C., §1981.

(a) 42 U.S.C., §1981 is limited by its terms to the making and enforcement of contracts. It prohibits racial discrimination in entering contracts and protects the right of access to the legal process to enforce contracts. It does not, however, extend to the performance of a contract after its formation. (109 S.Ct. 2372, 2373, 105 L.Ed.2d 150, 151.)

(b) Petitioner claims that she was subjected to various forms of racial harassment by her supervisor. However, with the possible exception of the refusal to promote her, all the challenged conduct involved the conditions of her employment after formation of the contract. "This type of conduct, reprehensible though it be if true, is not actionable under §1981, which covers only conduct at the initial formation of the contract and conduct which impairs the right to enforce contract obligations through legal process. Rather, such conduct is actionable under the more expansive reach of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964." (109 S.Ct. 2374, 105 L.Ed.2d 152.)

(c) Applying 42 U.S.C., §1981 to postformation conduct would also undermine Title VII's procedure for conciliation and resolution of discrimination claims. (109 S.Ct. 2375, 105 L.Ed.2d 153.) "By reading §1981 not as a general proscription of racial discrimination in all aspects of contract relations, but as limited to the enumerated rights within its express protection, specifically the right to make and enforce contracts, we may preserve the integrity of Title VII's procedures without sacrificing any significant coverage of the civil rights laws." (109 S.Ct. 2375, 105 L.Ed.2d 154.)

(d) The discriminatory promotion claim is actionable under 42 U.S.C., §1981 only if the change in position would involve a new and distinct employment relationship. (109 S.Ct. 2377, 105 L.Ed.2d 156.)

(e) The disparate treatment approach of Title VII (supra, §870) applies to proof of discrimination under 42 U.S.C.,

§1981. Hence, petitioner need not prove that she was better qualified than the white employee who was chosen. Rather, she can establish a prima facie case by showing that she was qualified but was rejected, and that the employer either continued to seek applicants or filled the position with a white employee. The employer must then present evidence of a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for his actions. (109 S.Ct. 2378, 105 L.Ed.2d 157; see supra, §870.)

Four justices dissented, arguing that persistent racial harassment is sufficient to prove discrimination in the making of contracts within the meaning of 42 U.S.C., §1981. (109 S.Ct. 2379, 2395, 105 L.Ed.2d 158, 178.) (See 103 Harv. L. Rev. 330 [Patterson]; 76 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1437 [racial jokes, social context, and reasonable person]; 156 A.L.R. Fed 1 [racial harassment in employment violative of Title VII of Civil Rights Act].)

In response to Patterson, the contract provision of 42 U.S.C., §1981 was amended as part of the Civil Rights Act of 1991. (See supra, §849.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.145

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

75 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation. 6. Discrimination in Employment. d. Age Discrimination. 1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 873

[§ 873] In General.

(1) Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) (29 U.S.C., §621 et seq.), patterned after Title VII (see supra, §855 et seq.), makes it unlawful to discharge, refuse to hire, or otherwise discriminate against a person who is at least 40 years of age, because of the person's age. (29 U.S.C., §§623, 631(a).) (See Trans World Airlines v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 105 S.Ct. 613, 621, 83 L.Ed.2d 523, 532 [airline policy of denying age-disqualified captains' automatic transfer to position of flight engineer, while granting transfer to captains disqualified for other reasons, violated Act]; McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S.Ct. 879, 130 L.Ed.2d 852, supra, §860 [effect of after-acquired evidence of employee's wrongdoing]; Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Schleier (1995) 515 U.S. 323, 115 S.Ct. 2159, 132 L.Ed.2d 294 [proceeds from settlement under ADEA are not excludable from gross income under 26 U.S.C., §104(a)(2)]; Caldwell v. Paramount Unified School Dist. (1995) 41 C.A.4th 189, 195, 48 C.R.2d 448 [applying McDonnell Douglas test (supra, §870) to age discrimination claim]; O'Mary v. Mitsubishi Electronics America (1997) 59 C.A.4th 563, 581, 69 C.R.2d 389 ["seniority" is not to be simplistically equated with "age" in age discrimination suit]; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 380 [Trans World Airlines]; 109 Harv. L. Rev. 319 [Schleier]; on comparable California statute, see infra, §932; 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §§342, 343.)

However, the ADEA does not prohibit discriminatory preference for an older employee over a younger one. (General Dynamics Land Systems v. Cline (2004) 540 U.S. 581, 124 S.Ct. 1236, 1242, 157 L.Ed.2d 1094, 1106 [language and history of Act show that it was enacted to protect older workers].)

Age may be considered where it is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ). (29 U.S.C., §623(f)(1); see Western Air Lines v. Criswell (1985) 472 U.S. 400, 105 S.Ct. 2743, 2753, 86 L.Ed.2d 321, 335 [BFOQ defense rejected as justification for airline's requirement that flight engineers retire at age 60].) And employers may observe bona fide seniority systems and employee retirement and pension plans, so long as these systems and plans do not require involuntary retirement because of age. (29 U.S.C., §623(f)(2).) (See Public Employees Retirement System of Ohio v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 109 S.Ct. 2854, 2865, 2867, 106 L.Ed.2d 134, 153, 156 [retirement plan exemption includes all provisions of employee benefit plan unless it is subterfuge for discrimination; EEOC regulation limiting exemption to distinctions justified by cost was invalid]; 176 A.L.R. Fed 115 ["bona fide benefit plan" exception to ADEA as applied to early retirement incentive plans]; 177 A.L.R. Fed 415 ["bona fide seniority system" exception to ADEA].)

Compulsory retirement is authorized for particular employees. (See 29 U.S.C., §623(j) [state or local firefighters or law enforcement officers], 29 U.S.C., §631(c)(1) [bona fide executives or high policymaking positions]; Gregory v. Ashcroft (1991) 501 U.S. 452, 111 S.Ct. 2395, 115 L.Ed.2d 410, supra, §5 [Missouri Constitution's requirement that judges (other than municipal judges) retire at age 70 does not violate either ADEA or Equal Protection Clause of federal Constitution]; 105 Harv. L. Rev. 196 [Gregory v. Ashcroft]; 105 Harv. L. Rev. 889 [legality of mandatory retirement of tenured faculty under ADEA]; 5 San Fernando Valley L. Rev. 303 [constitutionality of mandatory retirement age]; 53 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1679 [mandatory retirement of law firm partners]; 41 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 903 [Gregory v. Ashcroft]; 81 A.L.R.3d 811 [mandatory retirement of public officers and employees based on age]; on mandatory retirement generally, see supra, §802.)

(2) Discrimination in Favor of Another Class Member. A plaintiff alleging age discrimination need not show that he or she was replaced by someone outside the age group protected by the ADEA to make out a prima facie case under the framework established by McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668, supra, §870. (See O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S.Ct. 1307, 1310, 134 L.Ed.2d 433, 438 [fact that one person in protected class has lost out to another person in protected class is irrelevant, as long as person has lost out because of his or her age].) (See 28 West L.A. L. Rev. 411 [O'Connor].)

(3) Procedure Where State Remedy Is Available. Under 29 U.S.C., §633(b), in a state that has a law prohibiting age discrimination in employment, no suit may be brought under the federal Act before the expiration of 60 days after commencement of the state proceedings. The purpose of the provision, like that in Title VII (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(c)), is to screen from the federal courts discrimination complaints that might be settled in state proceedings. However, the aggrieved party may comply with the requirement by merely filing a signed statement of facts with the proper state authority, and this may be done even though the statute of limitations has run on a proceeding for relief under the state statute. (Oscar Mayer & Co. v. Evans (1979) 441 U.S. 750, 99 S.Ct. 2066, 2073, 2076, 60 L.Ed.2d 609, 618, 621.) (See 12 U.S.F. L. Rev. 283 [ADEA and Preemption: A Case for Broader State Laws].)

(4) Claim Subject to Compulsory Arbitration Under Agreement. A claim under the Act can be subjected to compulsory arbitration pursuant to an arbitration agreement in a securities registration application. (Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 111 S.Ct. 1647, 114 L.Ed.2d 26; 104 Harv. L. Rev. 568 [arbitration of claims under ADEA]; 54 Stanf. L. Rev. 1321 [antidiscrimination policy in post-Gilmer world].)

(5) Standards for Liability. In Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S.Ct. 1701, 123 L.Ed.2d 338, the Court explained the distinction between the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of discrimination (113 S.Ct. 1705, 123 L.Ed.2d 346), and then said: "Disparate treatment, thus defined, captures the essence of what Congress sought to prohibit in the ADEA. It is the very essence of age discrimination for an older employee to be fired because the employer believes that productivity and competence decline with old age." (113 S.Ct. 1706, 123 L.Ed.2d 347.)

The opinion also reaffirmed the definition of "willful" in Trans World Airlines, supra, that the employer either knew or showed reckless disregard for whether its conduct was prohibited by the statute. "Once a 'willful' violation has been shown, the employee need not additionally demonstrate that the employer's conduct was outrageous, or provide direct evidence of the employer's motivation, or prove that age was the predominant rather than a determinative factor in the employment decision." (113 S.Ct. 1710, 123 L.Ed.2d 351.) (See 34 Stanf. L. Rev. 837 [disparate impact doctrine]; 165 A.L.R. Fed 1 [what constitutes willful violation under ADEA entitling victim to liquidated damages].)

In Smith v. Jackson (2005) ___ U.S. ___, 125 S.Ct. 1536, 161 L.Ed.2d 410, defendant city, in an effort to attract and retain qualified police officers, adopted a pay plan that gave larger percentage raises to those officers with less than 5 years of tenure. Most older officers had more than 5 years on the job. The district court granted summary judgment to defendant on claims of "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" age discrimination by a group of older officers. The Court of Appeals held that the ruling on the disparate treatment claim was premature, but it affirmed dismissal of the disparate impact claim on the ground that disparate impact discrimination claims are categorically unavailable under the ADEA. Held, affirmed by a court divided in its reasoning. Although nothing in Hazen Paper Co., the language of the ADEA, or EEOC regulations precludes a disparate impact age discrimination claim, plaintiffs here failed to establish a valid claim.

(a) Although recovery under a disparate impact theory is authorized both under Title VII (see supra, §855) and the ADEA, the scope of disparate impact liability under the ADEA is narrower. The ADEA permits an employer to take "otherwise prohibited" actions "where the differentiation is based on reasonable factors other than age" (the RFOA provision). This provision "is consistent with the fact that age, unlike race or other classifications protected by Title VII, not uncommonly has relevance to an individual's capacity to engage in certain types of employment. ... Congress recognized that this is not always the case, and that society may perceive those differences to be larger or more consequential than they are in fact." Certain circumstances affect older workers as a group more strongly than younger workers. Thus, "certain employment criteria that are routinely used may be reasonable despite their adverse impact on older workers as a group. Moreover, intentional discrimination on the basis of age has not occurred at the same levels as discrimination against those protected by Title VII. While the ADEA reflects Congress' intent to give older workers employment opportunities whenever possible, the RFOA provision reflects this historical difference." (125 S.Ct. 1545, 161 L.Ed.2d 422.)

(b) Here, plaintiffs failed to isolate and identify the specific employment practice within defendant's pay plan that had an adverse impact on older workers. Further, defendant's decision to grant larger percentage raises to lower echelon employees to bring salaries in line with those of surrounding police forces "was a decision based on a 'reasonable factor other than age' that responded to the City's legitimate goal of retaining police officers." (125 S.Ct. 1546, 161 L.Ed.2d 423.)

One justice concurred in part and concurred in the judgment, wishing to defer the question of disparate impact to the EEOC, which authorizes disparate impact claims. (125 S.Ct. 1546, 161 L.Ed.2d 423.) Three justices concurred in the judgment, while stating that Congress never intended to authorize disparate impact age discrimination claims, and that liability under the ADEA requires proof of discriminatory intent. (125 S.Ct. 1548, 161 L.Ed.2d 426.) One justice did not participate in the decision.

(6) Release or Waiver of Claim. The Older Workers Benefit Protection Act (OWBPA) (29 U.S.C., §626) imposes specific requirements for releases covering ADEA claims, and an employee may not waive an ADEA claim unless the employer complies with the OWBPA. (Oubre v. Entergy Operations (1998) 522 U.S. 422, 118 S.Ct. 838, 841, 139 L.Ed.2d 849, 855 [employee was not barred from pursuing action under ADEA by accepting money from employer under severance agreement, and then refusing to give it back, where employer failed to comply with release requirements of OWBPA].)

(7) Texts and Commentary. Age discrimination has been the subject of much commentary. (See 32 Hastings L. J. 1111 [symposium]; 33 Hastings L. J. 457 [punitive damages under ADEA]; 42 Hastings L. J. 683 [Symposium: "Legal Issues Relating to the Elderly"]; 64 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1677 [bibliography on gerontology and the law, 1986-1990]; 76 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1409 [interpretation of ADEA to allow older workers to be fired based on cost concerns]; 18 U.S.F. L. Rev. 187 [front pay as remedy under ADEA]; 51 A.L.R.5th 1 [application of state law to age discrimination in employment]; 155 A.L.R. Fed 283 [what constitutes direct evidence of age discrimination]; 175 A.L.R. Fed 359 [award of "front pay" (compensation for future economic loss) under ADEA]; 180 A.L.R. Fed 325 [Supreme Court cases on ADEA]; 184 A.L.R. Fed 1 [application of exemption for "bona fide employee benefit plan" to plans other than for early retirement]; 186 A.L.R. Fed 1 [disparate impact claims under ADEA]; 44 Proof of Facts 3d 79 [discrimination under ADEA]; 75 Am.Jur. Trials 363 [action under ADEA]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §160 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Age Discrimination in Employment Act. See 118 Harv. L. Rev. 436 [General Dynamics Land Systems v. Cline].

For purposes of discrimination in compensation based on age, an unlawful employment practice occurs (a) when a discriminatory compensation decision or practice is adopted, (b) when an individual becomes subject to a discriminatory compensation decision or practice, or (c) when an individual is affected by the application of a discriminatory compensation decision or practice, including each time wages, benefits, or other compensation is paid, resulting in whole or in part from the decision or practice. (29 U.S.C., §626(d)(3), added in 2009, effective as if enacted on May 28, 2007.) (3a) (New) What Is "Charge" That Starts Enforcement Mechanism of ADEA. When an employee files a "charge" with the EEOC alleging age discrimination, the ADEA's enforcement mechanism is set in motion and a 60-day waiting period before filing an action begins, during which time the EEOC notifies the charged party and initiates a conciliation process. (See 29 U.S.C., §626(d).) In Federal Express Corp. v. Holowecki (2008) 552 U.S. ___, 128 S.Ct. 1147, 170 L.Ed.2d 10, the Court upheld an agency determination that a "charge" for this purpose is a document that can reasonably be interpreted as requesting agency action and appropriate relief on the employee's behalf. (128 S.Ct. 1159, 170 L.Ed.2d 24.) Hence, the Court held that filing of intake questionnaire in which plaintiff consented to having her identity disclosed to her employer, along with a detailed affidavit concluding with a request that the agency force her employer to end its age discrimination plan, was a request for the agency to act, and could properly be construed as a "charge" under 29 U.S.C., §626(d). (128 S.Ct. 1160, 170 L.Ed.2d 24, 25.) (See 25 A.L.R. Fed 2d 145 [sufficiency of form of notice to EEOC charging violation of ADEA].)

(5) Standards for Liability. "Where an employer adopts a pension plan that includes age as a factor, and that employer then treats employees differently based on pension status, a plaintiff, to state a disparate treatment claim under the ADEA, must adduce sufficient evidence to show that the differential treatment was 'actually motivated' by age, not pension status." (Kentucky Retirement Systems v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. (2008) 554 U.S. ___, 128 S.Ct. 2361, 2366, 2370, 171 L.Ed.2d 322, 330, 334 [following Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S.Ct. 1701, 123 L.Ed.2d 338, text, p. 330; state system that imputed varying additional years of service to hazardous position workers who took disability retirement when they were younger than age 55, but that did not add years when workers became disabled after reaching 55, did not violate ADEA; disparity in benefits turned on pension eligibility (employment for 5 years plus reaching age 55 or employment for 20 years) and not on stereotypes about older workers that ADEA sought to eradicate].)

The exemption for employer actions "otherwise prohibited" by the ADEA but "based on reasonable factors other than age," stated in 29 U.S.C., §626(f)(1), is an affirmative defense to a disparate impact claim of age discrimination. Hence, the employer must produce the evidence raising the defense and persuade the fact-finder of its merit. (Meacham v. Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory (2008) 554 U.S. ___, 128 S.Ct. 2395, 2401, 2403, 2404, 171 L.Ed.2d 283, 291, 293, 294 [following reasoning of Smith v. Jackson (2005) 544 U.S. 228, 125 S.Ct. 1536, 161 L.Ed.2d 410, text, p. 331; defense of "reasonable factors other than age" in disparate impact action is not focused on asserted fact that nonage factor was at work, which is assumed, but on whether factor relied on was "reasonable" one for employer to be using; reasonableness is justification categorically distinct from factual condition "because of age" and not necessarily correlated with it; business necessity test has no place in ADEA disparate impact cases].)

See 119 Harv. L. Rev. 337 [Smith v. Jackson]. Citation: Smith v. Jackson (2005) 544 U.S. 228, 125 S.Ct. 1536, 161 L.Ed.2d 410.(7) Texts and Commentary. See 55 Hastings L. J. 1399 [rehabilitate ADEA by resuscitating "reasonable factors other than age" defense and disparate impact theory]; 5 A.L.R. Fed 2d 243 [liquidated damages for wilful violation]; 27 A.L.R. Fed 2d 367 [sufficiency of contents of notice to EEOC charging violation of ADEA].

76 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
d. Age Discrimination.
2. Government Employers.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 874

[§ 874] Government Employers.

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act is applicable to the federal Government. (See 29 U.S.C., §633a(a) [specifying federal agencies affected by ADEA]; 2 U.S.C., §1302 [ADEA is applicable to employees of legislative branch of federal Government]; cf. 29 U.S.C., §630(b) [term "employer" does not include U.S. or corporation wholly owned by U.S. Government].) In 1974, its provisions were extended to state and local governments (see 29 U.S.C., §630(b)), but the extension has been held to violate the states' sovereign immunity. (Kimel v. Florida Bd. of Regents (2000) 528 U.S. 62, 120 S.Ct. 631, 643, 650, 145 L.Ed.2d 522, 547, supra, §49.) (See 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §§70, 160 et seq.; for case upholding 1974 extension, see Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. v. Wyoming (1983) 460 U.S. 226, 103 S.Ct. 1054, 75 L.Ed.2d 18 [involuntary retirement of game wardens]; 97 Harv. L. Rev. 199 [Wyoming].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(New) Retaliation: Despite the absence of a specific provision in 29 U.S.C., §633a(a) prohibiting retaliation in the federal sector, the statute protects federal employees who complain about age discrimination. (Gomez-Perez v. Potter (2008) 553 U.S. ___, 128 S.Ct. 1931, 1937, 1941, 170 L.Ed.2d 887, 896, 900 [following reasoning of Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park (1969) 396 U.S. 229, 90 S.Ct. 400, 24 L.Ed.2d 386, text, §851, and Jackson v. Birmingham Bd. of Education (2005) 544 U.S. 167, 125 S.Ct. 1497, 161 L.Ed.2d 361, Supp., supra, §853; retaliation for complaining about age discrimination constitutes "discrimination based on age"].)

77 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
d. Age Discrimination.
3. Sufficiency of Evidence.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 875

[§ 875] Sufficiency of Evidence.

In Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 120 S.Ct. 2097, 147 L.Ed.2d 105, a discharged employee sued his employer, alleging age discrimination under the ADEA. At trial, defendant contended that plaintiff was fired for failure to maintain accurate attendance records in the department under his supervision. Plaintiff attempted to demonstrate that this explanation was a pretext for age discrimination, introducing evidence that he had accurately recorded the attendance and hours of the employees he supervised, and that defendant's director of manufacturing had demonstrated age-based animus in his dealings with plaintiff. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff. The Court of Appeals reversed. Although recognizing that plaintiff may well have offered sufficient evidence for the jury to have found that defendant's explanation was pretextual, this did not mean that plaintiff had presented sufficient evidence to show that he had been fired because of his age. In finding the evidence insufficient, the court weighed the evidence of discrimination introduced by plaintiff against other circumstances surrounding his discharge. Held, reversed, in a unanimous holding.

(a) Certiorari was granted to resolve a conflict among the federal Courts of Appeals on whether a plaintiff's prima facie case of employment discrimination (as defined in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668, supra, §870), combined with sufficient evidence for a reasonable fact finder to reject the employer's nondiscriminatory explanation for its action, is adequate to sustain a finding of liability for intentional discrimination. (120 S.Ct. 2104, 147 L.Ed.2d 115.)

(b) "When a plaintiff alleges disparate treatment, 'liability depends on whether the protected trait (under the ADEA, age) actually motivated the employer's decision.' " (120 S.Ct. 2105, 147 L.Ed.2d 116, quoting Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S.Ct. 1701, 123 L.Ed.2d 338, supra, §873.) The Courts of Appeals, including the Fifth Circuit in this case, have employed some variant of the framework articulated in McDonnell Douglas to analyze ADEA claims based principally on circumstantial evidence. This Court has not squarely addressed whether the McDonnell Douglas framework, developed to assess claims brought under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, also applies to ADEA actions. Because the parties do not dispute the issue, this Court assumes that the McDonnell Douglas framework is fully applicable here. (120 S.Ct. 2105, 147 L.Ed.2d 116.)

(c) McDonnell Douglas and subsequent decisions have established an allocation of the burden of production and an order for the presentation of proof in discriminatory treatment cases. "First, the plaintiff must establish a prima facie case of discrimination. ... It is undisputed that plaintiff satisfied this burden here: (i) at the time he was fired, he was a member of the class protected by the ADEA" (individuals at least 40 years of age), "(ii) he was otherwise qualified for the position ... , (iii) he was discharged" by defendant, and (iv) defendant hired a replacement or replacements to fill his position. The burden therefore shifted to defendant to produce "evidence that the plaintiff was rejected, or someone else was preferred, for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason." Defendant "met this burden by offering admissible evidence sufficient for the trier of fact to conclude that ... [plaintiff] was fired because of his failure to maintain accurate attendance records." The evidentiary burden then shifted back to plaintiff. (120 S.Ct. 2106, 147 L.Ed.2d 116.)

(d) "Although intermediate evidentiary burdens shift back and forth under this framework, '[t]he ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that the defendant intentionally discriminated against the plaintiff remains at all times with the plaintiff.' ... And in attempting to satisfy this burden, the plaintiff--once the employer produces sufficient evidence to support a nondiscriminatory explanation for its decision--must be afforded the 'opportunity to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the legitimate reasons offered by the defendant were not its true reasons, but were a pretext for discrimination.' " Moreover, although the presumption of discrimination disappears "once the defendant meets its burden of production, ... the trier of fact may still consider the evidence establishing the plaintiff's prima facie case 'and inferences properly drawn therefrom on the issue of whether the employer's explanation is pretextual.' " (120 S.Ct. 2106, 147 L.Ed.2d 117, quoting Texas Dept. of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 101 S.Ct. 1089, 67 L.Ed.2d 207.)

(e) Here, plaintiff established a prima facie case and made a substantial showing that defendant's legitimate, nondiscriminatory explanation, i.e., plaintiff's shoddy recordkeeping, was false. He offered evidence showing that he had properly maintained the attendance records in question and that evidence cast doubt on whether he was responsible for any failure to discipline late and absent employees. (120 S.Ct. 2107, 147 L.Ed.2d 118.) In holding that the evidence was insufficient to sustain the jury's verdict, the Court of Appeals ignored this evidence, as well as the evidence supporting plaintiff's prima facie case, and instead confined its review of the evidence favoring plaintiff to that showing that defendant's director had directed derogatory, age-based comments at plaintiff and had singled him out for harsher treatment than younger employees. "It is therefore apparent that the court believed that only this additional evidence of discrimination was relevant to whether the jury's verdict should stand." In so reasoning, the court "misconceived the evidentiary burden borne by plaintiffs who attempt to prove intentional discrimination through indirect evidence." (120 S.Ct. 2107, 147 L.Ed.2d 119.)

(f) In St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 511, 113 S.Ct. 2742, 125 L.Ed.2d 407, supra, §870, this Court "held that the factfinder's rejection of the employer's legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its action does not compel judgment for the plaintiff. ... The ultimate question is whether the employer intentionally discriminated, and proof that 'the employer's proffered reason is unpersuasive, or even obviously contrived, does not necessarily establish that the plaintiff's proffered reason ... is correct.' In other words, '[i]t is not enough ... to disbelieve the employer; the factfinder must believe the plaintiff's explanation of intentional discrimination.' " (120 S.Ct. 2108, 147 L.Ed.2d 119.)

(g) It "is permissible for the trier of fact to infer the ultimate fact of discrimination from the falsity of the employer's explanation. ... Proof that the employer's explanation is unworthy of credence is simply one form of circumstantial evidence that is probative of intentional discrimination, and it may be quite persuasive. ... In appropriate circumstances, the trier of fact can reasonably infer from the falsity of the explanation that the employer is dissembling to cover up a discriminatory purpose. ... Moreover, once the employer's justification has been eliminated, discrimination may well be the most likely alternative explanation, especially since the employer is in the best position to put forth the actual reason for its decision. ... Thus, a plaintiff's prima facie case, combined with sufficient evidence to find that the employer's asserted justification is false, may permit the trier of fact to conclude that the employer unlawfully discriminated." (120 S.Ct. 2108, 147 L.Ed.2d 119.)

(h) This showing by a plaintiff will not always be adequate to sustain liability. Certainly there will be instances where, although the plaintiff has established a prima facie case and introduced sufficient evidence to reject the employer's explanation, no rational fact finder could conclude that discrimination had occurred, e.g., if the record conclusively revealed some other, nondiscriminatory reason for the employer's decision. "To hold otherwise would be effectively to insulate an entire category of employment discrimination cases from review ... , and ... trial courts should not 'treat discrimination differently from other ultimate questions of fact.' " (120 S.Ct. 2109, 147 L.Ed.2d 120, quoting St. Mary's Honor Center.) "Whether judgment as a matter of law is appropriate in any particular case will depend on a number of factors. Those include the strength of the plaintiff's prima facie case, the probative value of the proof that the employer's explanation is false, and any other evidence that supports the employer's case and that properly may be considered on a motion for judgment as a matter of law." (120 S.Ct. 2109, 147 L.Ed.2d 120.) This Court need not--and could not--resolve all such circumstances here. Here, it suffices to say that, because a prima facie case and sufficient evidence to reject the employer's explanation may permit a finding of liability, the Court of Appeals erred in determining that a plaintiff must always introduce additional, independent evidence of discrimination. (120 S.Ct. 2109, 147 L.Ed.2d 120.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

78 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
e. Religious Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 876

[§ 876] Religious Discrimination.

The prohibition against religious discrimination (supra, §855) was implemented by a 1972 amendment to Title VII requiring employers to "reasonably accommodate" the religious beliefs of their employees. (42 U.S.C., §2000e(j).)

In Trans World Airlines v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 97 S.Ct. 2264, 53 L.Ed.2d 113, an employee with low seniority was required to work on Saturdays, in violation of his religious beliefs. Held, the employer's obligation did not require disregarding a seniority system established through collective bargaining. "It would be anomalous to conclude that by 'reasonable accommodation' Congress meant that an employer must deny the shift and job preference of some employees, as well as deprive them of their contractual rights, in order to accommodate or prefer the religious needs of others." (97 S.Ct. 2275, 53 L.Ed.2d 129.) (See 91 Harv. L. Rev. 265 [Hardison]; cf. Rankins v. Commission on Professional Competence of Ducor Union School Dist. (1979) 24 C.3d 167, 175, 154 C.R. 907, 593 P.2d 852, supra, §551 [reasonable accommodation required by California's constitutional prohibition against disqualification from employment because of creed].)

In Ansonia Bd. of Education v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 107 S.Ct. 367, 93 L.Ed.2d 305, a school policy required employees to take unpaid leave for holy day observances in excess of the 3 days of paid leave allowed by the pertinent collective bargaining agreement. The Court held that 42 U.S.C., §2000e(j) is satisfied once the employer establishes that it has provided a reasonable accommodation for its employees' religious needs; there is no further requirement to show that any alternative accommodation offered by an employee would result in undue hardship. (107 S.Ct. 372, 93 L.Ed.2d 315.) In remanding for further factual findings, the Court observed that the policy in question would generally be a reasonable one, but that it would become unreasonable if the facts showed that paid leave was provided for all purposes except religious ones. (107 S.Ct. 373, 93 L.Ed.2d 316.) (See 19 California Lawyer 76 (August 1999) [religious proselytizing; free speech or harassment]; 15 Hastings Const. L. Q. 523; 30 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1 [Religious Discrimination, Public Funding, and Constitutional Values]; 42 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1 [employer's ambiguous duty to accommodate religious proselytizing]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §§124 et seq., 265, 270.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.151

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

79 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
f. Pregnancy Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 877

[§ 877] Pregnancy Discrimination.

(1) Background. In General Elec. Co. v. Gilbert (1976) 429 U.S. 125, 97 S.Ct. 401, 50 L.Ed.2d 343, an employer provided a disability plan for employees that paid weekly nonoccupational sickness and accident benefits, but excluded disabilities arising from pregnancy. Held, the plan did not violate Title VII. After observing that decisions construing the Equal Protection Clause were a useful starting point in interpreting the meaning of the term "discrimination" in Title VII, the Court relied on the holding in Geduldig v. Aiello (1974) 417 U.S. 484, 94 S.Ct. 2485, 41 L.Ed.2d 256, that unless a design to effect an invidious discrimination is shown, the exclusion of pregnancy disabilities was not an unconstitutional discrimination based on sex, but rather was simply the permissible exclusion of one physical condition from the list of compensable disabilities. (97 S.Ct. 407, 50 L.Ed.2d 353.) (See Nashville Gas Co. v. Satty (1977) 434 U.S. 136, 98 S.Ct. 347, 352, 54 L.Ed.2d 356, 364 [employer's policy of denying accumulated seniority to female employees after pregnancy leave; Gilbert was controlling]; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 241 [Gilbert].)

(2) Pregnancy Discrimination Act. This Act, enacted in 1978 as an amendment to Title VII, specifies that the terms "because of sex" and "on the basis of sex" include discrimination based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, and requires all women so affected to "be treated the same for all employment-related purposes, including receipt of benefits under fringe benefit programs, as other persons not so affected but similar in their ability or inability to work." (42 U.S.C., §2000e(k).) (See 27 Golden Gate L. Rev. 223 [Employer Discrimination on the Basis of Pregnancy: Righting the Power Imbalance]; 25 Santa Clara L. Rev. 435 [men's right to infant-care leave under Pregnancy Discrimination Act]; 60 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1345; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §135 et seq.; on validity of gender-based fetal protection policies under federal law, see supra, §863, and under state law, see infra, §926.)

Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 103 S.Ct. 2622, 77 L.Ed.2d 89, supra, §868, held that the Act overturned the specific holding in Gilbert, and also rejected its test of discrimination. (103 S.Ct. 2626, 77 L.Ed.2d 97.) (See 97 Harv. L. Rev. 252.)

(3) Preferential Treatment of Pregnancy. California Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S.Ct. 683, 93 L.Ed.2d 613, held that former Govt.C. 12945(b)(2) (now Govt.C. 12945(a)), requiring unpaid pregnancy leaves of up to 4 months and reinstatement in the same or a similar position, was not inconsistent with the purposes of the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, and hence, was not preempted thereby.

(a) The second clause of the federal Act, requiring pregnancy and similar disabilities to be treated the same, does not invalidate the preferential treatment accorded pregnancy by the California statute. "Rather than imposing a limitation on the remedial purpose of the PDA, we believe that the second clause was intended to overrule the holding in Gilbert and to illustrate how discrimination against pregnancy is to be remedied." (107 S.Ct. 691, 93 L.Ed.2d 626.) In other words, Congress intended the Act to be " 'a floor beneath which pregnancy disability benefits may not drop--not a ceiling above which they may not rise.' " (107 S.Ct. 692, 93 L.Ed.2d 626.)

(b) The legislative history contains statements that the Act does not require preferential treatment for pregnancy; but this does not support the argument that it was intended to prohibit this treatment. The issue of preferential treatment was simply not raised, although both the Senate and House Reports suggest that state laws granting preferential treatment would continue to have effect under the Act. (107 S.Ct. 692, 93 L.Ed.2d 627.)

(c) The California statute is consistent with Title VII's basic goal of achieving equality of employment opportunities for all workers. By "taking pregnancy into account," it allows women, as well as men, to have families without fear of losing their jobs. (107 S.Ct. 694, 93 L.Ed.2d 629.) (See 101 Harv. L. Rev. 320; 19 Pacific L. J. 335.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.162

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Background. See 58 Stanf. L. Rev. 1871 [Rehnquist's new approach to pregnancy discrimination].

80 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
6. Discrimination in Employment.
g. Seniority Systems.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 878

[§ 878] Seniority Systems.

(1) In General. Under 42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h), differentiation in compensation or other terms and conditions of employment pursuant to a bona fide seniority system is permitted, unless the differentiation is the result of an intention to discriminate. (See California Brewers Assn. v. Bryant (1980) 444 U.S. 598, 100 S.Ct. 814, 63 L.Ed.2d 55 [requirement that employees work 45 weeks in calendar year to attain permanent status was part of "seniority system" under 42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h)]; Pullman-Standard Div. of Pullman v. Swint (1982) 456 U.S. 273, 102 S.Ct. 1781, 72 L.Ed.2d 66 [trial judge's finding that differential impact of seniority system was not result of intent to discriminate was finding of fact that could not be rejected unless "clearly erroneous" under F.R. Civ. P., Rule 52(a)]; American Tobacco Co. v. Patterson (1982) 456 U.S. 63, 102 S.Ct. 1534, 71 L.Ed.2d 748 [42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h) is applicable to seniority systems adopted after Title VII's effective date, as well as to those adopted before]; Firefighters Local Union No. 1784 v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 104 S.Ct. 2576, 2585, 81 L.Ed.2d 483, 495 [injunction against "last hired, first fired" provision of seniority system, to save Blacks' jobs, could not be justified as enforcement or modification of consent decree covering hiring and promotion of Blacks, but not layoffs]; 96 Harv. L. Rev. 278 [Patterson]; 98 Harv. L. Rev. 267 [Stotts]; 14 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 791 [California Brewers]; 23 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 177 [Fair Employment in a Depressed Economy: The Layoff Problem]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §606 et seq.)

(2) Retroactive Seniority as Remedy. The issue whether a seniority system perpetuating past discrimination violates Title VII was settled in Franks v. Bowman Trans. Co. (1976) 424 U.S. 747, 96 S.Ct. 1251, 47 L.Ed.2d 444. The Court held that where an employer's seniority system was used for determining layoffs, recalls, job assignments, and other benefits, full relief under the remedial provisions (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(g)) called for an award of seniority retroactive to the date of the discrimination. "Without an award of seniority dating from the time when he was discriminatorily refused employment, an individual who applies for and obtains employment ... will never obtain his rightful place in the hierarchy of seniority according to which these various employment benefits are distributed. He will perpetually remain subordinate to persons who, but for the illegal discrimination, would have been in respect to entitlement to these benefits his inferiors." (96 S.Ct. 1267, 47 L.Ed.2d 463.) (See Zipes v. Trans World Airlines (1982) 455 U.S. 385, 102 S.Ct. 1127, 71 L.Ed.2d 234 [retroactive seniority contrary to collective bargaining agreement could be awarded over objection of union which itself had not been found guilty of discrimination]; Ford Motor Co. v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. (1982) 458 U.S. 219, 102 S.Ct. 3057, 73 L.Ed.2d 721 [employer charged with discrimination may toll liability for back pay by unconditionally offering claimant job previously denied without also offering retroactive seniority; claimant may obtain this seniority should he or she ultimately prevail]; 5 San Fernando Valley L. Rev. 389 [Franks].)

Franks dealt with post-Act discrimination. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 97 S.Ct. 1843, 52 L.Ed.2d 396, involved both pre-Act and post-Act discrimination. The Court held that under 42 U.S.C., §2000e-2(h), a bona fide seniority system is not invalid merely because it perpetuates pre-Act discrimination, but no person is entitled to retroactive seniority to a date prior to the Act's effective date. (97 S.Ct. 1870, 52 L.Ed.2d 428.) (See 91 Harv. L. Rev. 250 [International Brotherhood].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.149

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

81 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
7. Discrimination by Private School.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 879

[§ 879] Discrimination by Private School.

In Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 96 S.Ct. 2586, 49 L.Ed.2d 415, black children filed actions against the proprietors of private schools in Virginia that followed a policy of excluding qualified children solely because they were black. Held, plaintiffs were entitled to equitable and compensatory relief.

(a) The issues. This case does not involve the right of a private social organization to restrict membership on racial or other grounds; the right of a private school to limit its student body to boys or girls, or to adherents of a particular religious faith; or the right of private sectarian schools to practice racial exclusion on religious grounds. The two issues are (1) whether 42 U.S.C., §1981 (supra, §814) prohibits private, commercially operated, nonsectarian schools from denying admission to prospective students because they are black, and (2) if so, whether the law is constitutional as so applied. (96 S.Ct. 2592, 49 L.Ed.2d 423.)

(b) Applicability of 42 U.S.C., §1981. Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co. (1968) 392 U.S. 409, 88 S.Ct. 2186, 20 L.Ed.2d 1189, supra, §851, and Tillman v. Wheaton-Haven Recreation Assn. (1973) 410 U.S. 431, 93 S.Ct. 1090, 35 L.Ed.2d 403, supra, §851, held that 42 U.S.C., 1981 prohibits racial discrimination in the making and enforcement of private contracts. (96 S.Ct. 2593, 49 L.Ed.2d 423.) "Just as in Jones a Negro's §1 right to purchase property on equal terms with whites was violated when a private person refused to sell to the prospective purchaser solely because he was a Negro, so also a Negro's §1 right to 'make and enforce contracts' is violated if a private offeror refuses to extend to a Negro, solely because he is a Negro, the same opportunity to enter into contracts as he extends to white offerees." (96 S.Ct. 2594, 49 L.Ed.2d 424.)

(c) Constitutionality of 42 U.S.C., 1981 as applied. Three constitutional challenges were made:

(1) The application of 42 U.S.C., §1981 violates the constitutionally protected right of freedom of association, recognized in National Assn. for Advancement of Colored People v. Alabama (1958) 357 U.S. 449, 78 S.Ct. 1163, 2 L.Ed.2d 1488, supra, §379, and similar cases. "[I]t may be assumed that parents have a First Amendment right to send their children to educational institutions that promote the belief that racial segregation is desirable, and that the children have an equal right to attend such institutions. But it does not follow that the practice of excluding racial minorities from such institutions is also protected." (96 S.Ct. 2596, 49 L.Ed.2d 428.)

(2) The application of 42 U.S.C., §1981 violates the parent's right to direct the education of his or her children (see Meyer v. Nebraska (1923) 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625, 67 L.Ed. 1042, infra, §1071, Pierce v. Society of Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary (1925) 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070, supra, §519, Wisconsin v. Yoder (1972) 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15, supra, §519). "No challenge is made to the petitioners' right to operate their private schools or the right of parents to send their children to a particular private school rather than a public school. Nor do these cases involve a challenge to the subject matter which is taught at any private school." They "remain presumptively free to inculcate whatever values and standards they deem desirable. Meyer and its progeny entitle them to no more." (96 S.Ct. 2597, 49 L.Ed.2d 429.)

(3) The application of 42 U.S.C., §1981 violates the constitutional right of privacy (see supra, §558 et seq.). The parental interests involved are related to protected procreative rights (supra, §560 et seq.); i.e., a person's decision whether to bear a child and a parent's decision concerning the manner of his or her education are exercises of familial rights. "But it does not follow that because government is largely or even entirely precluded from regulating the child-bearing decision, it is similarly restricted by the Constitution from regulating the implementation of parental decisions concerning a child's education." (96 S.Ct. 2598, 49 L.Ed.2d 429.) There is no constitutional right to provide children with private school education unfettered by reasonable governmental regulation (see Wisconsin v. Yoder, supra), and 42 U.S.C., §1981, applied here, is an exercise of federal legislative power under §2 of the Thirteenth Amendment fully consistent with Meyer, Pierce, and cases following them. The prohibition of racial discrimination in contracts for private educational services furthers goals closely analogous to those served by the elimination of racial discrimination in the making of private employment contracts. (96 S.Ct. 2598, 49 L.Ed.2d 430.)

Two justices concurred with reluctance, and two dissented, arguing that the legislative history did not support the conclusion reached. (96 S.Ct. 2602, 2603, 2605, 49 L.Ed.2d 434, 436, 437.) (See 90 Harv. L. Rev. 412 [Runyon]; 91 Harv. L. Rev. 879.)

In Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 109 S.Ct. 2363, 105 L.Ed.2d 132, supra, §872, the Court, finding "no special justification" (109 S.Ct. 2370, 105 L.Ed.2d 148) for overruling Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 96 S.Ct. 2586, 49 L.Ed.2d 415, reaffirmed the rule that 42 U.S.C., §1981 prohibits racial discrimination in the making and enforcement of private contracts. (109 S.Ct. 2370, 105 L.Ed.2d 147.) (See 103 Harv. L. Rev. 330; 41 Hastings L. J. 1135.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.127.1; Constitutional Law k.220(8)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

82 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
a. Rehabilitation Act.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 880

[§ 880] Rehabilitation Act.

(1) Purpose. The purpose of the statute (29 U.S.C., § 701 et seq.) is "to empower individuals with disabilities to maximize employment, economic self-sufficiency, independence, and inclusion and integration into society." (29 U.S.C., § 701(b).)

(2) Discrimination Prohibited. The prohibition against discrimination is contained in §504 of the Act: "No otherwise qualified individual with a disability in the United States ... shall, solely by reason of her or his disability, be excluded from the participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance or under any program or activity conducted by any Executive agency or by the United States Postal Service." (29 U.S.C., §794; see Consolidated Rail Corp. v. Darrone (1984) 465 U.S. 624, 104 S.Ct. 1248, 1253, 79 L.Ed.2d 568, 575 [limitation in Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964, supra, §852, requiring that primary purpose of financial assistance be to promote employment, is inapplicable to actions under §504]; Bowen v. American Hosp. Assn. (1986) 476 U.S. 610, 106 S.Ct. 2101, 2115, 2118, 90 L.Ed.2d 584, 600, 604 [regulations governing provision of health care to disabled infants was invalid in absence of evidence that hospitals' failure either to provide care or to report parents' refusal to consent to care was on basis of disability]; United States Dept. of Trans. v. Paralyzed Veterans of America (1986) 477 U.S. 597, 106 S.Ct. 2705, 2710, 2714, 91 L.Ed.2d 494, 502, 507 [federal financial assistance to airport operators and federally provided air traffic control system did not constitute financial assistance to air carriers under §504]; Fry v. Saenz (2002) 98 C.A.4th 256, 261, 120 C.R.2d 30 [state program that terminated aid to disabled children at age 18 when those children were not expected to graduate from high school or vocational programs before reaching 19 years of age, but did not terminate aid for nondisabled children expected to graduate by 19 years of age, unlawfully discriminated against disabled children under ADA and Rehabilitation Act]; 100 Harv. L. Rev. 285 [Bowen].) (On duty to take affirmative action in hiring disabled, see 29 U.S.C., §791(b) [federal agencies], 29 U.S.C., §793 [federal contractors].)

In Martin v. Los Angeles (1984) 162 C.A.3d 559, 561, 209 C.R. 301, wheelchair access to a police station built before the enactment of the Act was provided through a rear door accessible from an upper level parking lot. The door was kept locked, but an officer could be summoned by a clearly marked buzzer. Access to the parking lot was by a 51-foot ramp with a slope of 8.1%, which was within the permissible standards. Held, access was adequate for preexisting buildings.

(a) Under applicable federal regulations, the architectural standards specified by the American National Standards Institute apply only to construction or alterations started after the effective date of the regulations. Hence, those standards are not controlling here. (162 C.A.3d 563.)

(b) For preexisting buildings, the regulations mandate only that each program, when viewed in its entirety, be accessible. There is no requirement for each facility to be barrier-free, unless that access is the only feasible way to provide program accessibility. (162 C.A.3d 565.)

(c) In the absence of evidence that plaintiff or any other disabled person had been denied access to the police station in question or had been denied the benefit of a program conducted there, the access provided gave plaintiff ample opportunity to participate in the programs and activities conducted at the station, e.g., participating in neighborhood watch meetings, making reports, registering guns and seeking information. (162 C.A.3d 567.)

(3) Individual With Disability. Disability means (a) "a physical or mental impairment that constitutes or results in a substantial impediment to employment" or (b) "a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities." (29 U.S.C., §705(9).) (See School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 107 S.Ct. 1123, 1128, 1130, 94 L.Ed.2d 307, 317, 320 [teacher suffering from tuberculosis was disabled]; 100 Harv. L. Rev. 2035 [appearance as disability]; 16 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 527; 29 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 947 [§504 as applicable to victims of weight discrimination]; 22 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 653 [discussing whether Act's definition of handicapped applies to person with HIV infection]; 16 U.S.F. L. Rev. 653 [who is disabled under Act]; 22 U.S.F. L. Rev. 317 [arguing that Act applies to AIDS patients].)

(4) Damages. Congress has not waived the federal Government's sovereign immunity against monetary damages for violation of 29 U.S.C., §794(a). (Lane v. Pena (1996) 518 U.S. 187, 116 S.Ct. 2092, 2096, 2097, 135 L.Ed.2d 486, 492, 493.)

Punitive damages may not be awarded in actions under the Rehabilitation Act. (Barnes v. Gorman (2002) 536 U.S. 181, 122 S.Ct. 2097, 2103, 153 L.Ed.2d 230, 239.)

(5) Commentary. Many commentators have written about the rights of disabled persons under the Act. (See 97 Harv. L. Rev. 997 [employment discrimination against disabled and §504]; 21 California Lawyer 66 (May 2001) [Disabled Tenants]; 34 Hastings L. J. 491 [§504 as guaranteeing access to mass transportation]; 13 Pacific L. J. 1117 [§504 as guaranteeing wheelchair participation in road races]; 143 A.L.R. Fed 567 [validity of rules or laws limiting participation in interscholastic sports to those below specified age]; 160 A.L.R. Fed 297 [who is recipient of, and what constitutes program or activity receiving, federal financial assistance under Act]; 163 A.L.R. Fed 285 [rights of prisoners under Rehabilitation Act]; 166 A.L.R. Fed 503 [What Constitutes Reasonable Accommodation Under Federal Statutes Protecting Rights of Disabled Individual, as Regards Educational Program or School Rules as Applied to Learning Disabled Student].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Discrimination Prohibited. The 2009 amendment to Title VII regarding claims of discrimination in compensation (see Supp., supra, §858), apply as well to claims of discrimination in compensation brought under 29 U.S.C., §§791 and 794. (See Pub. L. 111-2, 123 Stat. 5; 42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(e).)(5) Commentary. See 8 A.L.R. Fed 2d 375 [recovery of attorneys' fees under Act].

83 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
b. Individuals With Disabilities Education Act.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 881

[§ 881] Individuals With Disabilities Education Act.

This Act (20 U.S.C., §1400 et seq.) provides for federal assistance to states that have satisfied specified conditions, including having in effect a policy assuring all handicapped children the right to a free appropriate public education. (20 U.S.C., §1412.) (See Los Angeles v. Smith (1999) 74 C.A.4th 500, 519, 88 C.R.2d 159 [county was not entitled to reimbursement from mother of severely emotionally disturbed child from time individualized education program was prepared; Act preempts state statutes adopted pursuant to Social Security Act requiring counties to seek reimbursement for funds expended in support of needy children]; 20 Cal. Western L. Rev. 132 [availability of equal educational opportunities for disabled children]; 23 J. Juvenile Law 65 [where are advocates for rights of disabled school children]; 5 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 147 [Symposium on Special Education Law]; 153 A.L.R. Fed 1 [who is prevailing party for purposes of obtaining attorney's fees under Act].)

"Free appropriate public education" refers to (a) special education, i.e., specially designed instruction, including instruction in physical education, in the classroom, at home, and in hospitals, to meet the special needs of handicapped children (20 U.S.C., §1401(25)), and (b) related services, i.e., transportation and supportive services as required to assist handicapped children to benefit from special education (20 U.S.C., §1401(22)). (20 U.S.C., §1401(8).) (See Irving Independent School Dist. v. Tatro (1984) 468 U.S. 883, 104 S.Ct. 3371, 3377, 82 L.Ed.2d 664, 672 [kidney patient was entitled to catheterization by school personnel as "related service"]; Cedar Rapids Community School Dist. v. Garret F. (1999) 526 U.S. 66, 119 S.Ct. 992, 997, 143 L.Ed.2d 154, 162 [following Tatro; providing ventilator dependent child with continuous care was "related service" required by Act]; 28 Pepperdine L. Rev. 143 [Cedar Rapids]; 36 San Diego L. Rev. 137 [reasonable accommodation of law students with disabilities in clinical placements]; 152 A.L.R. Fed 485 [obligation of public educational agencies under Act to pay tuition for students unilaterally placed in private schools]; 161 A.L.R. Fed 1 [services that must be provided by federally assisted schools under IDEA]; 189 A.L.R. Fed 297 [application of "least restrictive environment" provision of IDEA].)

The Act contains a "stay-put" provision, directing that a disabled child must remain in his or her current educational placement pending completion of judicial review of decisions with which the parents disagree. Honig v. Doe (1988) 484 U.S. 305, 108 S.Ct. 592, 98 L.Ed.2d 686, held that this provision prohibited school authorities from unilaterally excluding disabled children for dangerous or disruptive conduct growing out of their disabilities. Congress made no emergency exception for dangerous students, and the Court cannot create one. (108 S.Ct. 604, 605.) (See 17 J. Juvenile Law 94 [discussing need to include dangerousness exception to "stay put" provision of Act].)

The language of the Act does not show an unmistakably clear congressional intent to abrogate the states' Eleventh Amendment immunity. Hence, an action for monetary damages for violation of the Act may not be brought against a state in federal court. (Dellmuth v. Muth (1989) 491 U.S. 223, 109 S.Ct. 2397, 2402, 105 L.Ed.2d 181, 190.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.173 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

The burden of proof in a hearing on the propriety of a child's individualized education program is on the party seeking relief. (Schaffer v. Weast (2005) 546 U.S. 49, 126 S.Ct. 528, 535, 163 L.Ed.2d 387, 397; see 58 Stanf. L. Rev. 1563 [looking beyond IDEA after Schaffer].)

Parents have independent, enforceable rights under the IDEA. These rights are not limited to matters that relate to procedure and cost recovery. Hence, parents are aggrieved parties under the IDEA, entitled to prosecute claims in federal court on their own behalf, with or without counsel. (Winkelman v. Parma City School Dist. (2007) 550 U.S. 516, 127 S.Ct. 1994, 1999, 2004, 2006, 167 L.Ed.2d 904, 915, 920, 923; see 121 Harv. L. Rev. 365 [Winkelman]; 16 A.L.R. Fed 2d 467 [right of parents to proceed pro se in actions under IDEA].)

See Benjamin G. v. California Special Education Hearing Office (2005) 131 C.A.4th 875, 879, 32 C.R.3d 366 [under both IDEA and California statutes, parents have right to have their expert observe proposed placement before attending administrative hearing at which placement will be determined]; 57 Hastings L. J. 1189 [educational needs of incarcerated youth]; 5 Pepperdine Dispute Resolution L. J. 137 [new amendments of IDEA]; 45 San Diego L. Rev. 251 [how denial of expert witness fees will adversely impact children with autism]; 34 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 551 [discrimination and developmental delays]; 57 Stanf. L. Rev. 2135 [accommodation of students with learning disabilities on SAT]; 3 A.L.R. Fed 2d 441 [recovery of witness and consultant fees under IDEA]; 13 A.L.R. Fed 2d 321 [construction and application of IDEA--Supreme Court cases]; 23 A.L.R. Fed 2d 553 [statute of limitations in actions for attorneys' fees brought under IDEA]; 27 A.L.R. Fed 2d 341 [jurisdiction of court to award attorneys' fees as part of costs under IDEA]; 93 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [parents' or students' proof in action for educational services or tuition reimbursement under the special education laws]; 99 Proof of Facts 3d 237 [School District's Proof that Services Offered to Student with Disabilities Met Statutory Standards].

84 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).
1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 882

[§ 882] In General.

(1) Purpose and Activities Covered. The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) (42 U.S.C., §12101 et seq.) was enacted "to provide a clear and comprehensive national mandate for the elimination of discrimination against individuals with disabilities" and "to provide clear, strong, consistent, enforceable standards addressing" discrimination. (42 U.S.C., §12101(b)(1), (b)(2).)

Disability is defined as "a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities" of a person, "a record of such an impairment," or "being regarded as having such an impairment." (42 U.S.C., §12102(2).) (See Real v. Compton (1999) 73 C.A.4th 1407, 1419, 87 C.R.2d 531 [fact that plaintiff police officer was terminated from defendant law enforcement agency due to inability to perform patrol duties was not sufficient to demonstrate that he was perceived as substantially limited in major life activity of working]; 52 Stanf. L. Rev. 171 [Not Disabled Enough: The ADA's "Major Life Activity" Definition of Disability].)

The Act requires equal opportunity for persons with disabilities in the following areas:

- (a) Employment. (See 42 U.S.C., §12111 et seq.; infra, §885.)
- (b) Participation in services provided by governmental units and other public entities. (See 42 U.S.C., §12131 et seq.; infra, §884.)
- (c) Public transportation. (See 42 U.S.C., §12141 et seq.)
- (d) Public accommodations. (See 42 U.S.C., §12181 et seq.; infra, §887.)

The Act contains broad prohibitions against discrimination on the basis of disability (42 U.S.C., §12112(a) [employment], 42 U.S.C., §12132 [public entities], 42 U.S.C., §12182(a) [places of public accommodation]) and also requires public transportation systems to take specified steps to make their facilities accessible to persons with disabilities (42 U.S.C., §12142 et seq. [public entities], 42 U.S.C., §12184 [private entities]). (See Pennsylvania Dept. of Corrections v. Yeskey (1998) 524 U.S. 206, 118 S.Ct. 1952, 1954, 141 L.Ed.2d 215, 219 [ADA is applicable to state prisoners]; Ventura County Ry. Co. v. Hadley Auto Transport (1995) 38 C.A.4th 878, 880, 45 C.R.2d 362 [subrogation action by workers' compensation carrier against railroad that caused injury to employee and that attempted to mitigate damages by cross-complaining against employer under ADA, alleging that employer discriminated against employee by refusing to rehire him after his injury; railroad lacked standing under ADA]; Jackson v. Los Angeles (1997) 60 C.A.4th 171, 178, 70 C.R.2d 96 [plaintiff was precluded from showing that he was "qualified worker with disability" under ADA where work restrictions were imposed on plaintiff pursuant to workers' compensation award]; In re Diamond H. (2000) 82 C.A.4th 1127, 1139, 98 C.R.2d 715 [ADA may not be used to attack court order denying reunification services to disabled person].)

The ADA recognizes both disparate treatment and disparate impact claims. (Raytheon Co. v. Hernandez (2003) 540 U.S. 44, 124 S.Ct. 513, 519, 157 L.Ed.2d 357, 366 [court should not consider discriminatory impact of employment policy where plaintiff only pursues disparate treatment claim].)

(2) Covered Employers. The Act applies to employers with a workforce of "15 or more employees for each working day in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year." (42 U.S.C., §12111(5).) Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells (2003) 538 U.S. 440, 123 S.Ct. 1673, 155 L.Ed.2d 615, held that in determining whether physicians in a professional corporation who actively engage in medical practice as shareholders and directors should be counted as employees for purposes of coverage under the Act depends on the amount of control they exercise. The Court approved the EEOC's guidelines for determining whether a shareholder director is an employee, including (a) whether the organization can hire and fire the shareholder, (b) the extent to which the organization supervises his or her work, (c) whether the shareholder reports to someone higher in the organization, (d) the extent to which the shareholder is able to influence the organization, (e) the availability of any written agreements stating the parties' positions, and (f) whether the shareholder shares in profits, losses, and liabilities. (123 S.Ct. 1679, 155 L.Ed.2d 625.)

(3) Remedies. The remedies provided by the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (supra, §847 et seq.) and by the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (supra, §880) are available for enforcement of the ADA. (42 U.S.C., §12117 [employment; Civil Rights Act remedies], 42 U.S.C., §12133 [provision of public services; Rehabilitation Act remedies], 42 U.S.C., §12188 [public accommodations; Civil Rights Act remedies].) However, punitive damages are not recoverable under Title VI or the Rehabilitation Act (see supra, §§852, 880), and may not be awarded in actions under the ADA. (Barnes v. Gorman (2002) 536 U.S. 181, 122 S.Ct. 2097, 2103, 153 L.Ed.2d 230, 239; see 116 Harv. L. Rev. 312 [Barnes].)

States are immune from private damages actions under the ADA. (Board of Trustees of University of Alabama v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 121 S.Ct. 955, 148 L.Ed.2d 866, supra, §50.)

(4) Liability of Supervisors. A supervisor is not individually liable for ADA discrimination. (Le Bourgeois v. Fireplace Mfrs. (1998) 68 C.A.4th 1049, 1054, 80 C.R.2d 660 [applying reasoning of Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 C.4th 640, 76 C.R.2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333, infra, §919, which held that supervisors are not liable for discrimination under FEHA].)

(5) Defense of Risk to Worker's Health. An EEOC regulation permitting an employer to screen out a potential worker with a disability whose health would be endangered by the job is valid under the ADA. (Chevron U.S.A. v. Echazabal (2002) 536 U.S. 73, 122 S.Ct. 2045, 2049, 153 L.Ed.2d 82, 89 [regulation is not precluded by fact that ADA only specifically mentions defense of threat to health of others].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.173 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Purpose and Activities Covered. See Madden v. Del Taco (2007) 150 C.A.4th 294, 303, 58 C.R.3d 313 [allowing concrete trash container to block wheelchair access to restaurant was prima facie violation of ADA]; Coronado v. Cobblestone Village Community Rentals, L.P. (2008) 163 C.A.4th 831, 850, 77 C.R.3d 883 [common area of residential apartment complex that is not open to public is not public accommodation under ADA]; Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's LLC (2008) 165 C.A.4th 571, 594, 81 C.R.3d 144 [retail store was not required to remove architectural barriers to disabled where reconfiguration would result in significant loss of sales, but store's failure to make facilities available through alternative methods such as customer assistance violated ADA; fact that new and remodeled stores outside area provided access to disabled did not excuse lack of access to existing stores].

The 2009 amendment to Title VII regarding claims of discrimination in compensation (see Supp., supra, §858), apply as well to claims of discrimination in compensation brought under 42 U.S.C., §§12111 et seq. and 794. (See Pub. L. 111-2, 123 Stat. 5; 42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(e).)(2) Covered Employers. See Spector v. Norwegian Cruise Line Ltd. (2005) 545 U.S. 119, 125 S.Ct. 2169, 2175, 2180, 162 L.Ed.2d 97, 105, 111 [as general matter, ADA applies to foreign-flag cruise ships in U.S. waters, but removal of barriers may not be "readily achievable" because ADA provisions may conflict with International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea and other legal obligations governing foreign cruise ships].(3) Remedies. Although the ADA provides for abrogation of state sovereign immunity for private suits claiming a violation of the Act, it has been held to apply to the states only to the extent that it is appropriate legislation under Section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment. (See Board of Trustees of University of Alabama v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 121 S.Ct. 955, 148 L.Ed.2d 866, text, §50 [state was immune from action seeking special accommodations]; Tennessee v. Lane (2004) 541 U.S. 509, 124 S.Ct. 1978, 158 L.Ed.2d 820, Supp., supra, §44A [state was not immune from action under Title II for denial of access to courts].) Thus, a state is not immune from a private damage action under Title II of the ADA that is based on conduct that actually violates the Fourteenth Amendment. (United States v. Georgia (2006) 546 U.S. 151, 126 S.Ct. 877, 882, 163 L.Ed.2d 650, 659 [on remand, court must decide whether state's treatment of paraplegic inmate violated Title II, to what extent alleged misconduct also violated Fourteenth Amendment, and if conduct violated Title II but not Fourteenth Amendment, whether ADA's purported abrogation of sovereign immunity as to that class of conduct is nevertheless valid].)

85 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).
2. Texts and Commentary.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 883

[§ 883] Texts and Commentary.

Law review commentary on the ADA is extensive. (See 109 Harv L. Rev. 1602 [ADA and employment discrimination; developments in the law]; 85 Cal. L. Rev. 701 [ADA and employment discrimination on basis of psychiatric disability]; 88 Cal. L. Rev. 607 [liability of insurance companies under ADA]; 90 Cal. L. Rev. 1981 [arguing that ADA must cover "nonmitigating" plaintiffs]; 39 Cal. Western L. Rev. 349 [architectural barriers under ADA]; 47 Hastings L. J. 871 [duty of health care providers to supply sign language interpreters for deaf patients]; 48 Hastings L. J. 75 [voluntary disabilities and the ADA]; 52 Hastings L. J. 749 [solutions for employees with diabetes claiming disability discrimination]; 52 Hastings L. J. 1037 [ADA and public transit for disabled]; 54 Hastings L. J. 243 [outdoor accessibility requirements on holders of conservation easements]; 34 Golden Gate L. Rev. 1 [disability discrimination and the movies]; 30 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 977 [effect of ADA on federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies]; 31 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 775 [Symposium on Mental Disability Law]; 31 Pepperdine L. Rev. 773 [whether "interacting with others" is major life activity under ADA]; 44 Santa Clara L. Rev. 55 [discrimination through overly protective rules]; 74 So. Cal. L. Rev. 399 [cancer and ADA]; 52 Stanf. L. Rev. 1829 [diabetes and ADA]; 50 Stanf. L. Rev. 469 [legal implications of flagging nonstandard test scores under ADA and Rehabilitation Act]; 23 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 97 [defining psychiatric disabilities as physical disabilities]; 33 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 95 [Fakers, Nuts, and Federalism: Common Law in the Shadow of the ADA]; 34 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 849 [ADA, workplace, and myth of "dangerously mentally ill"]; 40 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1341 [Cripples, Overcomers, and Civil Rights: Tracing the Evolution of Federal Legislation and Social Policy for People With Disabilities]; 47 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1135 [distinguishing speculative and substantial risk in presymptomatic job applicant: ADA direct threat defense]; 47 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1279 [The Disability Term: Dignity, Default, and Negative Capability]; 50 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 17 [disability discrimination in assisted reproductive technologies]; 50 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 903 [Is the ADA Efficient?]; 38 U.S.F. L. Rev. 831 [do disabled have right to best seats in movie theaters?].)

Commentary on the ADA in other texts is also extensive. (See 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §178 et seq.; 49 Am.Jur. Trials 171 [defense of claim brought under ADA]; 74 Am.Jur. Trials 255 [discrimination based on dyslexia]; 20 Proof of Facts 3d 361 [employment discrimination in violation of ADA]; 33 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [disability under ADA]; 38 Proof of Facts 3d 129 [employment discrimination based on repetitive strain injury under ADA]; 42 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [proof that employer did not discriminate against employee or applicant under ADA]; 48 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [mental disability under ADA]; 49 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [Discrimination in Provision of Medical Services on Basis of Disability]; 141 A.L.R. Fed 603 [substantial limitation on major life activity of working for purposes of ADA]; 143 A.L.R. Fed 567 [validity rules or laws limiting participation in interscholastic sports to those below specified age]; 146 A.L.R. Fed 1 [who is "qualified individual" under ADA provisions defining, and extending protection against employment discrimination to qualified individual with disability (42 U.S.C., §§12111(8), 12112(a))]; 148 A.L.R. Fed 305 ["impairment" under ADA]; 159 A.L.R. Fed 89 [medical examinations and inquiries under ADA]; 160 A.L.R. Fed 637 [when are public entities required to provide services, programs, or activities to disabled under ADA]; 162 A.L.R. Fed 603 [actions under ADA to remedy harassment or hostile work environment]; 163 A.L.R. Fed 285 [rights of prisoners under ADA]; 163 A.L.R. Fed 339 [when does public entity discriminate against disabled in provision of services, programs, or activities]; 164 A.L.R. Fed 433 [what constitutes employment discrimination by public entity under ADA]; 169 A.L.R. Fed 439 [exhaustion of administrative remedies as prerequisite to action under Title I of ADA]; 172 A.L.R. Fed 465 [requirement of replacement by nonprotected individual to establish prima facie employment discrimination under ADA]; 173 A.L.R. Fed 639 [ADA actions--Supreme Court cases]; 182 A.L.R. Fed 609 [constructive discharge under ADA]; 192 A.L.R. Fed 483 [what constitutes substantial limitation on major life activity of taking care of oneself]; 194 A.L.R. Fed 455 [substantial limitation on breathing]; 195 A.L.R. Fed 407 [substantial limitation on speaking].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Law review commentary: See 121 Harv. L. Rev. 1114 [law of mental illness]; 81 So. Cal. L. Rev. 111 [applying Title III of ADA to businesses behind commercial websites]; 58 Stanf. L. Rev. 859 [removing certification bar to disability-based employment discrimination class actions]; 27 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 421 [inconsistent treatment of fibromyalgia under ADA]; 54 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1 [limited civil rights remedies and abusive ADA litigation].

Other texts: See 198 A.L.R. Fed 209 [what constitutes substantial limitation on major life activity of eating]; 199 A.L.R. Fed 481 [what diseases or conditions constitute substantial limitation on major life activity of walking]; 2 A.L.R. Fed 2d 347 [what constitutes substantial limitation on major life activity of interacting with others]; 4 A.L.R. Fed 2d 569 [what injuries or impairments constitute substantial limitation on major life activity]; 6 A.L.R. Fed 2d 453 [use of "last chance" or "return to work" agreements under ADA]; 7 A.L.R. Fed 2d 447 [construction and application of association section of ADA]; 112 A.L.R. Fed 2d 423 [what constitutes substantial limitation on major life activity of sleeping for purposes of ADA]; 23 A.L.R. Fed 2d 197 [what constitutes substantial limitation on major life activity of lifting for purposes of ADA]; 99 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [Proof of Chronic Fatigue Syndrome and Fibromyalgia].

86 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).
3. Integration Mandate.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 884

[§ 884] Integration Mandate.

In implementing the proscription against discrimination in the provision of public services (see 42 U.S.C., §12132), the Attorney General mandated that public entities must administer services "in the most integrated setting appropriate to the needs of qualified individuals with disabilities." (28 C.F.R., §35.130(d).) In Olmstead v. L.C. (1999) 527 U.S. 581, 119 S.Ct. 2176, 2185, 144 L.Ed.2d 540, 556, plaintiffs, institutionalized for mental disabilities, claimed that the state's denial of community-based placement violated Article II of the ADA. Held, undue institutionalization qualifies as discrimination based on disability. States must "provide community-based treatment for persons with mental disabilities when the State's treatment professionals determine that such placement is appropriate, the affected persons do not oppose such treatment, and the placement can be reasonably accommodated, taking into account the resources available to the State and the needs of others with mental disabilities." (119 S.Ct. 2190, 144 L.Ed.2d 562.)

One justice concurred in part and concurred in the judgment, and two justices concurred in the judgment. (119 S.Ct. 2190, 144 L.Ed.2d 562.) Three justices dissented, believing that "temporary exclusion from community placement does not amount to 'discrimination' in the traditional sense" and that plaintiffs failed to show discrimination "by reason of" their disabilities. (119 S.Ct. 2194, 144 L.Ed.2d 567.) (See 113 Harv. L. Rev. 326 [Olmstead].)

Olmstead was interpreted in Black v. Department of Mental Health (2000) 83 C.A.4th 739, 100 C.R.2d 39, an action involving a mental patient who died due to inadequate care after being transferred to a private facility from a state mental hospital that was closing. "[W]hen the Olmstead court said the ADA does not condone transferring to community placement an institutionalized disabled person who will not benefit from such a placement, we do not believe it was either holding or signaling that a medically inappropriate transfer from institutionalization to community placement is, by itself, a violation of the integration mandate. It was, instead, merely identifying the outer limits of a state's duties under the integration mandate" of Title II. (83 C.A.4th 754.) Here, plaintiff's action is based on allegations that the state provided "inappropriate care due to a lack of other alternatives. While it might have been medically improper to do so, the state did not violate the integration mandate." (83 C.A.4th 755.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

87 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.

c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).

4. Reasonable Accommodation Requirement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 885

[§ 885] Reasonable Accommodation Requirement.

(1) In General. The ADA requires an employer to make a reasonable accommodation to the known disabilities of a qualified employee, unless the accommodation would work an undue hardship on the employer. (See 42 U.S.C., §12112(b)(5)(A); for definition of "reasonable accommodation," see 42 U.S.C., §12111(9).) (See Brundage v. Hahn (1997) 57 C.A.4th 228, 236, 238, 66 C.R.2d 830 [employer who did not know of disability at time of plaintiff's termination for abandonment of job could not be liable for discrimination "because of" disability; denial of reinstatement was not discriminatory act and reinstatement was not required as "reasonable accommodation"]; San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. Gallagher (1998) 62 C.A.4th 501, 505, 507, 73 C.R.2d 30 [disagreeing with federal cases; activity analogous to zoning, such as port district's allocation of sites for long-term anchorages, is subject to ADA; however, accommodation requirement does not permit disabled plaintiff to anchor anywhere plaintiff chooses]; Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems Corp. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 119 S.Ct. 1597, 1602, 1603, 143 L.Ed.2d 966, 974, 977 [pursuit and receipt of SSDI benefits does not automatically estop recipient from pursuing ADA claim, and courts should not apply negative presumption to claim; however, recipient must explain why his or her SSDI contention is consistent with ADA claim that he or she could perform essential functions of previous job at least with "reasonable accommodation"]; PGA Tour v. Martin (2001) 532 U.S. 661, 121 S.Ct. 1879, 1890, 1893, 149 L.Ed.2d 904, 920, 923 [ADA applies to professional golf tournaments; disabled golfer should not be denied use of golf cart, although other participants must walk, when it does not "fundamentally alter" nature of tournament]; 115 Harv. L. Rev. 487 [PGA Tour v. Martin]; 32 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 151 [same].)

(2) Effect of Seniority System on Reasonable Accommodation Requirement. "Reasonable accommodation" may include a "reassignment to a vacant position." (See 42 U.S.C., §12111(9)(B).) In US Airways v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S.Ct. 1516, 152 L.Ed.2d 589, the question was whether the ADA required defendant employer "to reassign a disabled employee to a position as a 'reasonable accommodation' even though another employee is entitled to hold the position under the employer's bona fide and established seniority system." (122 S.Ct. 1520, 152 L.Ed.2d 599.) Held, in most cases the seniority system will prevail.

The "typical seniority system provides important employee benefits by creating, and fulfilling, employee expectations of fair, uniform treatment" including job security and predictable advancement. (122 S.Ct. 1524, 152

L.Ed.2d 604.) "[T]o require the typical employer to show more than the existence of a seniority system might well undermine the employees' expectations of consistent, uniform treatment." (122 S.Ct. 1524, 152 L.Ed.2d 604.) However, although the employer's showing of a violation of the rules of a seniority system by itself ordinarily will be sufficient, the employee remains free to show that, despite the seniority system, circumstances warrant finding that the requested accommodation is reasonable under the particular facts of the case. Those facts might include the employer's frequent departures from the seniority system. (122 S.Ct. 1525, 152 L.Ed.2d 604.)

Four justices dissented in two separate opinions. (122 S.Ct. 1528, 1532, 152 L.Ed.2d 608, 613.) (See 116 Harv. L. Rev. 342 [US Airways].)

(3) Commentary. The reasonable accommodation requirement has been the subject of considerable commentary. (See 111 Harv. L. Rev. 1560 [accommodating learning disabilities under ADA]; 33 Golden Gate L. Rev. 71 [future effects of reasonable accommodation requirement on golf courses]; 64 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1607 [reasonable accommodation and prohibition of employment discrimination under ADA]; 33 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 51 [employer and employee rights and obligations during interactive process]; 53 Stanf. L. Rev. 223 [Accommodation Mandates]; 35 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1175 [three faces of reasonable accommodation]; 142 A.L.R. Fed 311 [When Does Job Restructuring Constitute Reasonable Accommodation of Qualified Disabled Employee or Applicant?]; 166 A.L.R. Fed 503 [What Constitutes Reasonable Accommodation Under Federal Statutes Protecting Rights of Disabled Individual, as Regards Educational Program or School Rules as Applied to Learning Disabled Student].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Commentary. See 28 California Lawyer 39 (May 2008) [Accommodating Lawyers with Disabilities]; 35 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1 [assessing employer's reasonable accommodation obligation in "record of disability" cases].

88 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.

c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).

4A. (New) Retaliation and Harassment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 885A

[§ 885A] (New) Retaliation and Harassment.

In Wilson v. Murillo (2008) 163 C.A.4th 1124, 78 C.R.3d 214, defendant restaurant owner denied service to plaintiff and another wheelchair-bound companion. Plaintiff was a known activist for disabled persons who had complained about accessibility problems for the disabled after earlier visits, causing defendant to spend thousands of dollars in bringing the restaurant into compliance with applicable law. Defendant asked plaintiff and his companion to leave and showed them a sign reserving her right to refuse service to anyone. When plaintiff refused to leave, the bartender was ordered to remove their food and drinks and another employee began taking pictures of them. Defendant called the police, who refused to eject plaintiff. Plaintiff left the restaurant after the police left. As plaintiff and his companion rolled their wheelchairs toward their cars, a waitress and the employee who had been taking pictures inside came out and began taunting them while the waitress took more pictures. Plaintiff filed suit against defendant, alleging violations of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (see text, §898 et seq.) and the Disabled Persons Act (see text, §957 et seq.), which both incorporate violations of the ADA. The trial court granted defendant's summary judgment motion, finding that defendant's conduct did not rise to the level necessary for recovery under either statute. Held, reversed.

(a) Prima facie case of retaliation. 42 U.S.C., §12203(a) prohibits discrimination because an individual has opposed an act or practice made unlawful under the ADA. To establish a prima facie case of retaliation under the ADA, a plaintiff must prove that (1) he or she was engaged in protected activity, (2) the alleged retaliator knew that the plaintiff was involved in the protected activity, (3) an adverse decision or course of action was taken against the plaintiff, and (4) a causal connection exists between the protected activity and the adverse action. (163 C.A.4th 1133.) The question here was whether plaintiff presented sufficient evidence to satisfy the "adverse action" requirement. (163 C.A.4th 1134.)

(b) Different standard used in public accommodation cases. An "adverse action" in an employment setting would require a plaintiff to prove that an alleged retaliatory action had a detrimental and substantial effect on the plaintiff. However, "the dissimilar nature of the relationship between an employer and an employee from that between a restaurant owner and patron militates against using an employment definition of 'adverse action' for purposes of establishing a prima facie retaliation claim in a public accommodation setting." (163 C.A.4th 1135.) Although the adversity in an ADA retaliation action must be material, it need not be traumatic. The correct standard requires analyzing whether a reasonable person in plaintiff's position would believe that the conduct allegedly taken against him or her was materially adverse. (163 C.A.4th 1136.) Here, if plaintiff's claims are found to be true, they are sufficient to allow a fact-finder, using both objective and subjective tests, to conclude that plaintiff was subjected to materially adverse acts of retaliation by defendant. (163 C.A.4th 1137.)

(c) Harassment. 42 U.S.C., §12203(b) prohibits coercion, intimidation, threats, or interference with an individual in the exercise or enjoyment of a right granted in the ADA. In other words, 42 U.S.C., §12203(b) prohibits harassment against those who are simply exercising their ADA rights, as opposed to 42 U.S.C., §12203(a), which prohibits retaliation. (163 C.A.4th 1138.) Hence, 42 U.S.C., §12203(b) covers a broader range of conduct and motivations than mere retaliation for reporting violations of government regulations. Plaintiff here produced sufficient evidence of material and intentional adverse acts that interfered with his full and equal use of a place of public accommodation to raise a triable issue of fact with respect to defendant's liability under the statute. (163 C.A.4th 1138, 1139.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

89 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.

c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).

5. Effect of Arbitration Agreement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 886

[§ 886] Effect of Arbitration Agreement.

The question presented in Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. v. Waffle House (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S.Ct. 754, 151 L.Ed.2d 755, was whether an agreement between an employer and an employee to arbitrate employment-related disputes bars the EEOC "from pursuing victim-specific judicial relief, such as backpay, reinstatement, and damages, in an enforcement action" alleging violation of the ADA. (122 S.Ct. 758, 151 L.Ed.2d 761.) The Court of Appeals held that, although the EEOC could bring an enforcement action because it was not a party to the contract, it could not seek victim-specific relief in court because of the arbitration agreement and the policies expressed in the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA); hence, the EEOC's remedies were limited to injunctive relief. Held, reversed.

(a) When enforcing the ADA, the EEOC has the same powers as it does when enforcing Title VII of the Civil Rights Act. (122 S.Ct. 759, 151 L.Ed.2d 763.) Title VII permits the recovery of damages by a "complaining party." This includes both private plaintiffs and the EEOC. (122 S.Ct. 760, 151 L.Ed.2d 764.) "There is no language in the statute ... suggesting that the existence of an arbitration agreement between private parties materially changes the EEOC's statutory function or the remedies that are otherwise available." (122 S.Ct. 761, 151 L.Ed.2d 765.)

(b) Although federal policy favors arbitration agreements, the contract language "defines the scope of disputes subject to arbitration." Nothing in the FAA compels arbitration by parties not covered in the contract. "The FAA does not mention enforcement by public agencies; it ensures the enforcement of private agreements to arbitrate, but otherwise does not purport to place any restriction on a nonparty's choice of judicial forum." (122 S.Ct. 762, 151 L.Ed.2d 766.)

(c) The EEOC does not need the complainant's consent to file suit. Once a charge is filed with the EEOC, it "has exclusive jurisdiction over the claim for 180 days. During that time, the employee must obtain a right-to-sue letter from the agency before prosecuting the claim. If, however, the EEOC files suit on its own, the employee has no independent cause of action, although the employee may intervene in the EEOC's suit." It is the province of the EEOC, and not of the court "to determine whether public resources should be committed to the recovery of victim-specific relief. And if the agency makes that determination, the statutory text unambiguously authorizes it to proceed in a judicial forum." (122 S.Ct. 763, 151 L.Ed.2d 767.)

Three justices dissented, stating that the majority opinion conflicts with both the FAA "and the basic principle that the EEOC must take a victim of discrimination as it finds him." The EEOC may not "do on behalf of an employee that which an employee has agreed not to do for himself." (122 S.Ct. 766, 151 L.Ed.2d 771.) (See 116 Harv. L. Rev. 382 [Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. v. Waffle House]; 72 So. Cal. L. Rev. 929 [binding arbitration under ADA].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

90 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).
6. HIV as Disability.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 887

[§ 887] HIV as Disability.

In Bragdon v. Abbott (1998) 524 U.S. 624, 118 S.Ct. 2196, 141 L.Ed.2d 540, plaintiff, infected with human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), had a dental examination that revealed a cavity. Defendant dentist informed her that he had a policy against filling cavities of HIV-infected patients in his office. He offered to fill her cavity at a hospital at no extra charge for the dental services, although she would have to pay for the use of the hospital facilities. Plaintiff brought suit under 42 U.S.C., §12182(a), which prohibits disability discrimination in the enjoyment of services in a place of public accommodation, including the professional office of a health care provider. The district court ruled that plaintiff's HIV infection satisfied the definition of a disability. Held, affirmed.

(a) HIV infection constitutes a disability under the ADA. A person who has a physical impairment that substantially limits one or more of the person's major life activities has a disability under the ADA. (118 S.Ct. 2201, 141 L.Ed.2d 553, citing 42 U.S.C., §12102(2).)

(1) HIV constitutes a physical impairment. Under regulations of the Department of Health and Human Services, a physical impairment includes a physiological disorder or condition affecting the hemic and lymphatic systems, among others. (118 S.Ct. 2202, 141 L.Ed.2d 554.) HIV falls well within this definition. HIV initially concentrates in the blood, causing a sudden and serious decline in the number of CD4+ cells (white blood cells that play a critical role in the body's immune system), accompanied by mononucleosis-like symptoms. (118 S.Ct. 2203, 141 L.Ed.2d 555.) After 2 to 3 weeks these symptoms abate, and the disease enters the next phase, which lasts from 7 to 11 years, during which it migrates from the circulatory system into the lymph nodes. Although this is sometimes referred to as the asymptomatic phase, clinical features, including dermatological disorders, oral lesions, and bacterial infections, persist. The CD4+ count continues to drop 5% to 10% per year. When the CD4+ count drops below 10 cells/mm3, death soon follows. Due to the immediacy with which the virus begins to damage the infected person's white blood cells and the severity of the disease, it is a physical impairment from the moment of infection. (118 S.Ct. 2204, 141 L.Ed.2d 556.)

(2) HIV places a substantial limit on a major life activity. Plaintiff claims that her ability to reproduce is a major life activity that has been substantially limited by her HIV infection. The regulations provide an illustrative list of major life activities, which includes caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, learning, and working, among others.

Reproduction cannot be regarded as less important than working and learning, being, as it is, central to the life process itself. Defendant did not advance any credible basis for confining major life activities to those that are public, economic, or have a daily dimension. (118 S.Ct. 2205, 141 L.Ed.2d 557, 558.) A woman infected with HIV who attempts to conceive imposes on the man a significant risk of infection and also risks infecting her child during gestation and childbirth. Although these difficulties may or may not be insurmountable, they do impose a significant limitation on a woman's ability to reproduce. (118 S.Ct. 2206, 141 L.Ed.2d 558.)

(b) Result confirmed by agency interpretation. The ADA's definition of disability is drawn almost verbatim from the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (now 29 U.S.C., §705(9); supra, §880) and the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C., §3602(h)(1)). Judicial and administrative interpretations of the Rehabilitation Act, including a comprehensive and significant opinion issued in 1988 by the Office of Legal Counsel (OLC) of the Department of Justice, have uniformly found statutory coverage for persons with asymptomatic HIV. And the implementing regulations issued by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) construed the definition to include infection with HIV. (118 S.Ct. 2208, 141 L.Ed.2d 561.) Every indication is that Congress intended to give the positions of the OLC and HUD its active endorsement in enacting the ADA. Moreover, the Justice Department, in implementing the public accommodation provisions of Title III of the ADA, has concluded that nonsymptomatic HIV is a physical impairment under the ADA. Other agencies authorized to administer various sections of the ADA, including the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the Attorney General, and the Department of Transportation, have also concluded that HIV is a physical impairment under the Act. (118 S.Ct. 2209, 141 L.Ed.2d 562, 563.)

Four justices, dissenting in part, disagreed with the conclusion that reproduction is a major life activity under the Act on the same order as those listed in the regulations. These justices further opined that the Act requires an individualized determination and that plaintiff failed to present any evidence that reproduction was a major life activity to her, i.e., that in the absence of HIV she would have had or was even considering having children. Three of these justices further argued that the HIV infection did not substantially impair plaintiff's ability to reproduce. (118 S.Ct. 2214 et seq., 141 L.Ed.2d 569 et seq.) (See 112 Harv. L. Rev. 283 [Bragdon]; 27 Pepperdine L. Rev. 323 [same]; 26 Proof of Facts 3d 341 [proof of discriminatory termination of HIV-positive employee].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.175

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

91 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.
8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).
7. Visual Impairment as Disability.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 888

[§ 888] Visual Impairment as Disability.

In Albertson's v. Kirkingburg (1999) 527 U.S. 555, 119 S.Ct. 2162, 2173, 144 L.Ed.2d 518, 537, plaintiff, who had monocular vision, lost his truck driving job after failing a visual acuity test mandated by the Department of Transportation (DOT). Although plaintiff obtained a waiver under an experimental DOT certification program based on an applicant's past driving record and experience, defendant refused to rehire him. Held, the ADA did not require defendant to accept the waiver, which did not modify the substantive content of the general acuity regulation. The ADA "requires monocular individuals, like others claiming the Act's protection, to prove a disability by offering evidence that the extent of the limitation in terms of their own experience, as in loss of depth perception and visual field, is substantial." (119 S.Ct. 2169, 144 L.Ed.2d 531.)

In Sutton v. United Airlines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S.Ct. 2139, 144 L.Ed.2d 450, plaintiffs, twin sisters, applied to defendant airline for employment as commercial airline pilots. Each plaintiff had vision that was 20/20 or better with corrective lenses, and 20/200 or worse without them. Defendant informed plaintiffs that they did not meet defendant's minimum vision requirement of uncorrected visual acuity of 20/100 or better, and defendant rejected plaintiffs for employment on that basis. Plaintiffs sued under the ADA, alleging that defendant had discriminated against them on the basis of their disability or because defendant regarded plaintiffs as having a disability. The district court dismissed plaintiffs' complaint for failure to state a claim, and the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed. Held, affirmed.

(a) Because their visual impairment is fully correctable, plaintiffs are not disabled under the ADA.

(1) If a person is taking measures to correct for or mitigate a physical or mental impairment, the effects of those measures must be considered when determining whether the person is "substantially limited" in a major life activity. The phrase "substantially limited" appears in the ADA in the present indicative verb form and thus is properly read to require that a person be presently, not potentially or hypothetically, substantially limited in order to demonstrate a disability. (119 S.Ct. 2146, 144 L.Ed.2d 462.)

(2) The definition of disability also requires that disabilities be evaluated with respect to an individual. Judging persons in their uncorrected or unmitigated state runs directly counter to this mandated individualized inquiry, and could lead to the anomalous result of determining disability without considering severe, negative side effects suffered by an individual from the use of mitigating measures. (119 S.Ct. 2147, 144 L.Ed.2d 463.)

(3) In enacting the ADA, Congress found that "some 43,000,000 Americans have one or more physical or mental disabilities." (119 S.Ct. 2147, 144 L.Ed.2d 463.) "Had Congress intended to include all persons with corrected physical limitations among those covered by the Act, it undoubtedly would have cited a much higher number of disabled persons in the findings." (119 S.Ct. 2149, 144 L.Ed.2d 465.)

(b) Plaintiffs failed to allege properly that defendant "regarded" them as having a disability under the ADA. Plaintiffs contend that defendant mistakenly believes that plaintiffs' vision impairments "substantially limit them in the major life activity of working." (119 S.Ct. 2150, 144 L.Ed.2d 467.) However, when the major life activity under consideration is "working," plaintiffs must at least allege that they are unable to work in a broad class of jobs. Plaintiffs allege only that defendant regards their poor vision as precluding them from holding positions as a "global airline pilot," which is a single job. A number of other positions using plaintiffs' skills, such as regional pilot and pilot instructor, are available to them. (119 S.Ct. 2151, 144 L.Ed.2d 468.) Plaintiffs have not alleged and cannot demonstrate that defendant's vision requirement reflects a belief that plaintiffs' vision substantially limits them. (119 S.Ct. 2152, 144 L.Ed.2d 469.)

Two justices dissented, arguing that, to be faithful to the remedial purpose of the ADA, the Act should be given a generous, rather than a miserly, construction. (119 S.Ct. 2152, 144 L.Ed.2d 470.) The threshold question whether an individual is disabled should focus on the individual's past or present physical condition, without regard to mitigation that has resulted from rehabilitation, self-improvement, prosthesis, or medication. This is the approach adopted by eight of the nine federal Courts of Appeals to address the issue and by all three of the agencies charged with enforcing the ADA. (119 S.Ct. 2153, 144 L.Ed.2d 470.) Here, a narrow reading of the term "disability" is not necessary to avoid forcing defendant to hire pilots who could endanger their passengers' lives; the ADA requires a disabled person claiming discrimination to prove that an employer took action "because of" the person's impairment and that the person can perform the essential functions of the job, and the Act allows the employer to avoid liability by showing that its requirements are "job-related and consistent with business necessity" or that failure to meet the requirements poses a health or safety hazard. (119 S.Ct. 2156, 144 L.Ed.2d 475.) Nor is a narrow reading necessary to avoid a "tidal wave of lawsuits"; the impairment here, for instance, would be a matter of complete indifference to most employers. (119 S.Ct. 2159, 144 L.Ed.2d 480.) (See Diffey v. Riverside County Sheriff's Dept. (2000) 84 C.A.4th 1031, 1039, 101 C.R.2d 353 [color blindness is not disability because it does not limit major life activity; color vision is valid job requirement for deputy sheriff; following Sutton]; 113 Harv. L. Rev. 337 [Sutton]; 36 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1339 [discussing federal case on whether reading is major life activity]; 31 McGeorge L. Rev. 1129 [Sutton]; 28 Pepperdine L. Rev. 257 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

92 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

D. Federal Civil Rights Legislation.

8. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.

c. Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).

8. Inability To Perform Manual Tasks as Substantial Impairment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 889

[§ 889] Inability To Perform Manual Tasks as Substantial Impairment.

In Toyota Motor Mfg., Kentucky v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S.Ct. 681, 151 L.Ed.2d 615, plaintiff claimed to be disabled from carpal tunnel syndrome and other related impairments caused by her work on defendant's assembly line. Plaintiff sued under the ADA for defendant's failure to make reasonable accommodation for her condition. The district court granted summary judgment for defendant, finding that plaintiff's impairments did not substantially limit any of her major life activities. The Court of Appeals reversed, finding that plaintiff was substantially limited in the major life activity of performing manual tasks, and granted her partial summary judgment on the issue whether she was disabled under the ADA. Held, reversed and remanded.

(a) The parties do not dispute that plaintiff's medical conditions amount to physical impairments. The relevant question is whether the Court of Appeals correctly analyzed whether these impairments substantially limited plaintiff "in the major life activity of performing manual tasks." (122 S.Ct. 691, 151 L.Ed.2d 630.) To be so limited, an individual must have an impairment that "prevents or severely restricts" activities of central importance to most people's daily lives. The impact of the impairment must also be permanent or long-term. (122 S.Ct. 691, 151 L.Ed.2d 631.)

(b) The Court of Appeals erred in suggesting that plaintiff must show (1) her manual disability involves a "class" of manual activities, and (2) those activities affect her ability to perform tasks at work. (122 S.Ct. 692, 151 L.Ed.2d 632.) "When addressing the major life activity of performing manual tasks, the central inquiry must be whether the claimant is unable to perform the variety of tasks central to most people's daily lives, not whether the claimant is unable to perform the tasks associated with her specific job." Otherwise, the restriction in Sutton v. United Airlines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S.Ct. 2139, 144 L.Ed.2d 450, supra, §888, on claims of disability based on a substantial limitation in working (that plaintiff must allege inability to perform a broad class of jobs) "will be rendered meaningless because an inability to perform a specific job always can be recast as an ability to perform a 'class' of tasks associated with that specific job." (122 S.Ct. 693, 151 L.Ed.2d 633.) Further, the ADA definition of "disability" also applies to portions of the Act dealing with public transportation and accommodations. This demonstrates that the ADA is intended to cover individuals with disabling impairments "regardless of whether the individuals have any connection to a workplace." (122 S.Ct. 693, 151 L.Ed.2d 633.)

(c) "[T]he manual tasks unique to any particular job are not necessarily important parts of most people's lives. As a result, occupation-specific tasks may have only limited relevance to the manual task inquiry." (122 S.Ct. 693, 151 L.Ed.2d 633.) "[H]ousehold chores, bathing, and brushing one's teeth are among the types of manual tasks of central importance to people's daily lives." The Court should have focused on these types of activities as part of its assessment "whether respondent was substantially limited in performing manual tasks." (122 S.Ct. 693, 151 L.Ed.2d 634.) (See 31 Pepperdine L. Rev. 575.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 200 A.L.R. Fed 55 [what constitutes substantial limitation on major life activity of performing manual tasks].

93 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
1. In General.

a. Nature and Scope of Civil Rights Legislation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 890

[§ 890] Nature and Scope of Civil Rights Legislation.

(1) In General. States may enact legislation protecting civil rights from private as well as official discrimination. (See Railway Mail Assn. v. Corsi (1945) 326 U.S. 88, 65 S.Ct. 1483, 89 L.Ed. 2072, 2076 [upholding New York statute prohibiting racial and religious discrimination by labor organizations]; 15 Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Civil Rights §12 et seq.; on application of state public accommodations law to privately sponsored parade as violation of sponsors' First Amendment rights, see Hurley v. Irish-American Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Group of Boston (1995) 515 U.S. 557, 115 S.Ct. 2338, 132 L.Ed.2d 487, supra, §390.)

(2) Discrimination by Private Club. In New York State Club Assn. v. New York (1988) 487 U.S. 1, 108 S.Ct. 2225, 101 L.Ed.2d 1, the Court rejected a facial challenge to a New York City law forbidding discrimination in private clubs that have more than 400 members, provide regular meal service, and receive payments from nonmembers for furtherance of business.

(a) Under the decisions in the Rotary Club of Duarte v. Board of Directors (1986) 178 C.A.3d 1035, 224 C.R. 213, infra, §902, and Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 104 S.Ct. 3244, 82 L.Ed.2d 462, supra, §389, at least some of the large clubs are sufficiently nonprivate that the law constitutionally may be applied to them. (108 S.Ct. 2233, 101 L.Ed.2d 15.) The law does not necessarily infringe on individual member's rights of expressive association; it prevents the use of race, sex, and other specified characteristics but does not prevent exclusion of persons who do not share a club's view. (108 S.Ct. 2234, 101 L.Ed.2d 16.)

(b) The exemption of benevolent and religious corporations does not violate the Equal Protection Clause; the city could reasonably conclude that these clubs are unique and that business activity is not prevalent in them, and this view has not been shown to be erroneous. (108 S.Ct. 2236, 101 L.Ed.2d 18, 19.) (See 104 Harv. L. Rev. 1835 [discrimination by private clubs: First Amendment protection for nonexpressive associations]; 20 Cal. Western L. Rev. 511 [exclusion or expulsion from association or club]; 16 Hastings Const. L. Q. 623 [New York State Club]; 20 Pepperdine L. Rev. 643 [Sanctioned Discrimination or Justified Protection of Right to Associate?]; 19 U.S.F. L. Rev. 413 [exclusion or expulsion from association or club]; 38 A.L.R.4th 628 [same].)

(3) California Statutory Framework. California's primary civil rights statutes are the Unruh Civil Rights Act (see infra, §898 et seq.) and the Fair Employment and Housing Act (see infra, §915 et seq.). Other statutes apply in particular contexts, including the following:

- (a) Insurance. (See infra, §891.)
- (b) Public programs and activities. (See infra, §892.)
- (c) Schools and education. (See infra, §893.)
- (d) Housing finance discrimination. (See infra, §894.)
- (e) Disabled persons. (See infra, §957 et seq.)
- (f) Public safety officers. (See infra, §960 et seq.)
- (g) Hate crimes, intimidation, and threats of violence. (See infra, §895.)
- (h) Sexual harassment in business and professional relationships. (See infra, §896.)
- (i) Other discrimination statutes. (See infra, §897.)

(4) Texts and Commentary. Many articles have commented on state civil rights legislation. (See 108 Harv. L. Rev. 763 [note on Alaska case holding that housing antidiscrimination laws protecting unmarried couples do not violate free exercise rights of religious landlord]; 42 Hastings L. J. 1415 [protecting unmarried couples from marital status discrimination]; 16 Pacific L. J. 1047 [exclusion or access in public accommodations]; 47 Stanf. L. Rev. 161 [historical review of African American lawyers and their importance in shaping civil rights law]; 85 A.L.R.3d 351 [damages under state or local civil rights provisions]; 90 A.L.R.3d 158 [state equal rights constitutional provisions forbidding determination of rights based on sex]; 74 A.L.R.4th 746 [award of "front pay" under state job discrimination statutes]; 81 A.L.R.4th 205 [state civil rights legislation prohibiting sex discrimination in housing]; 81 A.L.R.4th 144 [discrimination "because of" handicap under state statutes prohibiting job discrimination on account of handicap]; 12 A.L.R.5th 508 [right to jury trial in action under state civil rights law]; 81 A.L.R.5th 367 [punitive damages under state employment discrimination law].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.102 et seq.; Constitutional Law k.82

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

94 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
1. In General.
b. Insurance.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 891

[§ 891] Insurance.

(1) In General. Unfair discrimination is prohibited between individuals of the same class and equal life expectancies in the rates charged, in the dividends or other benefits payable, and in any other terms and conditions of life insurance contracts. (Ins.C. 790.03(f).) Discrimination is also prohibited in the issuance and pricing of life and disability insurance on the basis of various factors, not including sex (Ins.C. 10140), and against an applicant who is or has been a victim of domestic violence (Ins.C. 10144.3 [life insurers]; Ins.C. 10144.2 [disability insurers]; Ins.C. 676.9 [residential, liability, and commercial risk insurers]). (See Wilson v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1996) 46 C.A.4th 1213, 1218, 54 C.R.2d 419 [Fair Employment and Housing Commission lacked jurisdiction to determine whether insurer's underwriting decisions, such as refusal to insure pilots over 60, violated Unruh Civil Rights Act, because these decisions are governed by Insurance Commissioner under Ins.C. 1850.4 et seq.]; 29 McGeorge L. Rev. 677 [ensuring that victims of domestic abuse are not discriminated against].)

(2) Property Damage or Liability Insurance. Discrimination is prohibited in accepting, issuing, or cancelling property damage or liability insurance on the basis of "marital status, sex, race, color, religion, national origin, or ancestry." (See Ins.C. 679.70 et seq..)

(3) Motor Vehicle Insurance. The Rosenthal Auto Insurance Nondiscrimination Law prohibits discrimination in accepting, issuing, or cancelling motor vehicle liability insurance on the basis of race, language, color, religion, national origin, ancestry, or geographic area. (Ins.C. 11628.) "Language," for this purpose, means the inability to speak, read, write, or comprehend English. (Ins.C. 11628(a).)

Discrimination also is prohibited in accepting, issuing, or cancelling insurance solely on the basis of occupation. (Ins.C. 11628(c).) However, insurers may consider occupation in setting rates, and may charge a deviated rate to any classification of risks involving a specific occupation if the rate meets the limitations imposed by Ins.C. 1850 et seq. and is based on actuarial data supporting the deviation. (Ins.C. 11628(c).) And an insurer may limit the issuance of its insurance to persons who engage in or were engaged in military service. (Ins.C. 11628(f).) Insurance also may be refused or cancelled if it is for a commercial vehicle or if the action is based on consideration of the vehicle's size, weight, design, or intended use. (Ins.C. 11628(d).)

Insurers must provide a written explanation to applicants who are denied coverage, if it is requested within 30 days of rejection of the application. (See Ins.C. 657.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. Ins.C. 10140, as amended in 2005, now also prohibits discrimination based on sex, except where a price differential is supported by "objective, valid, and up-to-date statistical and actuarial data or sound underwriting practices." (3) Motor Vehicle Insurance. Ins.C. 11628 was amended in 2008 to prohibit discrimination based on the characteristics listed in C.C. 51(b) and (e), including language and geographic area.

95 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
1. In General.
c. Public Programs and Activities.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 892

[§ 892] Public Programs and Activities.

No person "shall, on the basis of race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, color, or disability, be unlawfully denied full and equal access to the benefits of, or be unlawfully subjected to discrimination under, any program or activity that is conducted, operated, or administered by the state or by any state agency, is funded directly by the state, or receives any financial assistance from the state." (Govt.C. 11135.) If the head of the state agency that administers the program or activity involved determines that there is probable cause to believe a violation has occurred, a hearing must be conducted, pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act, to determine the issue. (Govt.C. 11136.) The statute must be interpreted in a manner that will not frustrate its purpose and that will not adversely affect lawful programs that benefit the disabled, the aged, minorities, and women. (Govt.C. 11139; on affirmative action programs, see infra, §965 et seq.) (See Govt.C. 11137 [action to curtail state funding]; Govt.C. 11138 [adoption of rules and regulations]; Govt.C. 11139.5 [standards must be established to ensure consistent enforcement]; Govt.C. 50260 et seq. [authorizing establishment of local human relations commissions to foster mutual respect and understanding among community racial, religious, and nationality groups]; Govt.C. 53080 [prohibiting sex-based discrimination in community youth athletics programs and in allocation of recreation facilities and resources]; on rights of disabled persons under California law generally, see infra, §957 et seq.)

The statute provides for enforcement by civil action for equitable relief, in addition to other rights and remedies. (Govt.C. 11139 [prohibitions and sanctions of statute are cumulative to other lawful prohibitions and sanctions]; see Arriaga v. Loma Linda University (1992) 10 C.A.4th 1556, 13 C.R.2d 619 [holding, under former version of statute, that there was no right of private action].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Govt.C. 11135, as amended in 2006, further proscribes discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. As used in the statute, "sex" and "sexual orientation" have the same meanings as those terms are defined in Govt.C. 12926(p) and (q). (Govt.C. 11135(e), added in 2006; see text, §§925, 931.) Govt.C. 11135 also applies to a perception that a person has, or is associated with another person who has one of the listed characteristics. (Govt.C. 11135(f), added in 2006.)

Govt.C. 50260, as amended in 2008, further provides for commissions designed to foster peaceful relations among residents with the characteristics listed in Govt.C. 11135.

See Blumhorst v. Jewish Family Services of Los Angeles (2005) 126 C.A.4th 993, 1003, 24 C.R.3d 474 [Govt.C. 11135 and 11139 do not provide relaxed concept of standing; thus, male "tester" who had not suffered injury from denial of services by domestic violence shelters lacked standing to sue under statutes].

96 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
1. In General.
d. Schools and Education.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 893

[§ 893] Schools and Education.

(1) Elementary and Secondary Schools. It is state policy "that elementary and secondary school classes and courses, including nonacademic and elective classes and courses be conducted, without regard to the sex of the pupils enrolled in such classes and courses." (See Educ.C. 221.5(a).) Accordingly, a pupil cannot be prohibited on the basis of sex from enrolling in any class or course (except sex education), and pupils of one sex cannot be compelled to enroll in a particular class or course unless it is also required of pupils of the opposite sex. (Educ.C. 221.5(b), (c).) Counseling must not be different for the sexes (Educ.C. 221.5(d)), and "[p]articipation in a particular physical education activity or sport, if required of pupils of one sex, shall be available to pupils of each sex" (Educ.C. 221.5(e)). (See Educ.C. 221.7 [prohibition of sex discrimination in school-sponsored athletic program]; 86 Cal. L. Rev. 617 [protecting students from peer sexual orientation harassment]; 58 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1425 [equality in school sports].)

Further, it is state policy "to afford all persons, regardless of their sex, ethnic group identification, race, national origin, religion, or mental or physical disability," or on any actual or perceived characteristic listed in the definition of hate crimes in P.C. 422.55(a) (see infra, §895), "equal rights and opportunities in the educational institutions of the state." (Educ.C. 200.) Discrimination is prohibited in programs or activities conducted by educational institutions receiving and benefiting from state financial assistance or enrolling students who receive that assistance. (Educ.C. 220.) Harassment and other discrimination on the basis of sex includes, but is not limited to, (a) discrimination in any academic, extracurricular, research, occupational training, or other program or activity; (b) discrimination with respect to eligibility for financial aid; (c) exclusion from participation in, or denial of the equivalent opportunity in, athletic programs; (d) discrimination in employment opportunities; and (e) discrimination on the basis of potential parental, family, or marital status, or on the basis of pregnancy or related conditions. (Educ.C. 230; see Educ.C. 212.5 ["sexual harassment" defined]; 33 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 95 [protecting students from sexual harassment by teachers].) These provisions do not apply to certain religious educational institutions (Educ.C. 220.5) or to specified organizations, e.g., Y.M.C.A., Boy Scouts, Boys State Conference, etc. (Educ.C. 223, 224). Nor do the provisions preclude father-son or mother-daughter activities (Educ.C. 225), or prohibit the maintenance of comparable separate toilet facilities, locker rooms, or living facilities. (Educ.C. 231).

The Bilingual-Bicultural Education Act of 1976 (Educ.C. 52160 et seq.) requires public school districts, other than community colleges, to provide education to pupils of limited-English-speaking ability in their primary language while teaching them English.

(2) Postsecondary Educational Institutions. The Sex Equity in Education Act (Educ.C. 66250 et seq.) prohibits sexual harassment and discrimination on the basis of sex, ethnic group identification, race, national origin, religion, color, or mental or physical disability, or on any basis contained in the prohibition of hate crimes listed in P.C. 422.6(a), in postsecondary educational institutions receiving, or benefiting from, state financial assistance, or that enroll students who receive state student financial aid. (Educ.C. 66251, 66252, 66270.) Each postsecondary educational institution must "undertake educational activities to counter discriminatory incidents on school grounds and ... to minimize and eliminate a hostile environment on school grounds that impairs the access of students to equal educational opportunity." (Educ.C. 66252(f).) Further, each postsecondary educational institution must provide assurance to the agency administering state financial assistance or financial aid that each program or activity conducted by the institution is in compliance both with the Act and other state law prohibiting sex discrimination. (Educ.C. 66290.) The Act may be enforced through a civil action. (Educ.C. 66292.4.) It does not apply to certain religious educational institutions (Educ.C. 66270.5), educational institutions for training military or merchant marines (Educ.C. 66272), public institutions that traditionally and continually have admitted only students of one sex (Educ.C. 66278), and to tax-exempt social fraternities and sororities at postsecondary educational institutions (Educ.C. 66272).

(3) Written Policy on Sexual Harassment. Each educational institution must have a written policy on sexual harassment. (Educ.C. 231.5(b).) The policy must include information on where to obtain specific rules and procedures for reporting sexual harassment and for pursuing available remedies. (Educ.C. 231.5(c).) A copy of the policy must be posted in a prominent location (Educ.C. 231.5(d)) and must be included in any publication that sets forth the comprehensive rules, regulations, procedures, and standards of conduct of the institution (Educ.C. 231.5(g)). In addition, copies must be provided to new students (Educ.C. 231.5(e)) and to faculty and staff (Educ.C. 231.5(f)). (See Educ.C. 48980(g) [school district's notification to parents must include copy of policy on sexual harassment established under Educ.C. 231.5].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.127.1, 128

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Elementary and Secondary Schools. See 34 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 551 [discrimination and developmental delays].

Educ.C. 200 and 220, as amended in 2007, now list the protected characteristics as "disability, gender, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation," in addition to those characteristics contained in the definition of hate crimes. Educ.C. 220.5 was renumbered in 2007 as Educ.C. 221. Educ.C. 219, added in 2007, further provides coverage for a person who is perceived to have, or is associated with a person who has, one of the protected characteristics.

In 2007, the Legislature adopted the Safe Place to Learn Act, Educ.C. 234 et seq. The Act requires the Department of Education to monitor adherence by local educational agencies of state-mandated antidiscrimination and antiharassment policies. Local agencies must adopt policies that prohibit discrimination and harassment based on the characteristics listed in Educ.C. 220 and P.C. 422.55, and ensure that complainants are protected from retaliation. (Educ.C. 234.1.)

In Donovan v. Poway Unified School Dist. (2008) 167 C.A.4th 567, 579, 84 C.R.3d 285, two high school students brought an action for money damages against defendant school district, superintendent, principal, and assistant principal for peer sexual orientation harassment under Educ.C. 220. The jury returned a verdict against the district under Educ.C. 220 and against the principal and assistant principal under the Equal Protection Clause of the U.S. Constitution, and awarded money damages. Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) Money damages are available. Money damages are available in a private enforcement action under Educ.C. 220. The term "civil law remedies" used in Educ.C. 262.3 includes money damages. (167 C.A.4th 591.) This interpretation ensures that state law is consistent with the remedies available under Title IX, on which Educ.C. 220 is based. (167 C.A.4th 596.)

(b) Elements of claim for money damages for discrimination in educational setting. Educ.C. 220 is silent regarding the elements a plaintiff must prove to state a cause of action. (167 C.A.4th 596.) However, legislative history shows that when Educ.C. 200 and 220 were originally enacted, they were modeled on Title IX and developing federal law. There is no evidence that the Legislature based these statutes on the FEHA and its statutory framework. (167 C.A.4th 597.) Hence, using Title IX and its body of case law as a guideline, to prevail in an action for peer sexual orientation harassment under Educ.C. 220, a student must show that (1) he or she suffered "severe, pervasive and offensive" harassment that effectively deprived the student of the right of equal access to educational benefits and opportunities; (2) the school district had actual knowledge of the harassment; and (3) the school district acted with "deliberate indifference" in the face of that knowledge. (167 C.A.4th 579, 598, 603.)

(c) No liability under doctrine of respondeat superior or constructive notice. The FEHA imposes liability on an employer for the wrongful acts of a third party based on the doctrine of respondeat superior or constructive notice. (167 C.A.4th 604.) However, there is nothing in the Education Code's antidiscrimination provisions suggesting that the Legislature intended to impose liability for damages under Educ.C. 220 against a funding recipient based on those principles. The claim involved here does not involve discrimination based on an official policy of the district, but is instead the result of peer sexual harassment and defendants' response to it. "[N]egligence principles should not apply to impose liability under a statutory scheme when administrative enforcement of that scheme contemplates actual notice to the funding recipient, with an opportunity to take corrective action before a private action may lie." Hence, liability for money damages under Educ.C. 220 "is based on a funding recipient's own misconduct, determined by its own deliberate indifference to known acts of harassment." (167 C.A.4th 605.)

(d) Use of wrong standard in jury instructions. Although the trial court erred in applying the elements of liability from the FEHA and not from Title IX, when it instructed the jury under Educ.C. 220, the error was harmless. Given the specific jury findings, supported by substantial evidence, regarding "severe, pervasive and offensive" harassment, "actual notice," and "deliberate indifference" in regard to plaintiffs' equal protection claims, it was not reasonably probable that defendants would have obtained a more favorable result in the absence of the error. (167 C.A.4th 608, 618, 619.) Further, defendant school principal was an appropriate person to act on behalf of the district to address the harassment. Thus, the jury's findings imposing liability against the principal, although in the context of an equal protection violation, also supported liability of the district under Educ.C. 220 for its own deliberate indifference to the harassment. (167 C.A.4th 609.) (2) Postsecondary Educational Institutions. Govt.C. 11135, prohibiting discrimination in programs and activities funded by the state (see text, §892), applies to the California State University. (Govt.C. 11135(a), as amended in 2005.) (On California Athletes' Bill of Rights, enacted in 2005, see Educ.C. 270 et seq.)

Educ.C. 66250 was amended in 2007 to rename the Act as the Equity in Higher Education Act. Educ.C. 66251 and 66270 were also amended in 2007 regarding the list of protected characteristics; the statutes now provide for equal rights and opportunities "regardless of disability, gender, nationality, race or ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation," in addition to other characteristics listed in P.C 422.6. Educ.C. 66270 also protects characteristics listed in Govt.C 11135. Educ.C. 66270.5 was renumbered in 2007 as Educ.C. 66271.

97 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
1. In General.
e. Housing Finance.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 894

[§ 894] Housing Finance.

(1) Background and Purposes. "Redlining" consists of the refusal of lending institutions to finance the purchase or improvement of buildings in certain areas. (See 8 Pacific L. J. 699; 10 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 243.) The Housing Financial Discrimination Act of 1977, now designated the Holden Act (Health & Saf.C. 35800 et seq.), prohibits the practice. (See 9 Pacific L. J. 623.) (For definitions, see Health & Saf.C. 35805.)

The Act is expressly declared to be an exercise of the police power (Health & Saf.C. 35803), based on legislative findings (Health & Saf.C. 35801). Its purposes are declared as follows:

(a) "To prevent discrimination in the provision of financial assistance for financing or refinancing the purchase, construction, rehabilitation, or improvement of housing accommodations because of conditions, characteristics, or trends in the neighborhood or geographic area surrounding the security property." (Health & Saf.C. 35802(a).)

(b) "To encourage increased lending in neighborhoods or geographic areas in which conventional residential mortgage financing has been unavailable." (Health & Saf.C. 35802(b).)

(c) "To increase the availability of housing accommodations to credit-worthy persons." (Health & Saf.C. 35802(c).)

(d) "To ensure the supply of decent, safe housing." (Health & Saf.C. 35802(d).)

(e) "To prevent the abandonment and decay of neighborhoods and geographic areas." (Health & Saf.C. 35802(e).)

The Act is administered by the Secretary of the Business and Transportation Agency, who is granted the usual rule-making powers. (Health & Saf.C. 35814 et seq.) Cumulative remedies are provided (Health & Saf.C. 35831), and the Act is to be liberally construed to effectuate its purposes (Health & Saf.C. 35832).

(2) Prohibitions. The Act prohibits (a) discrimination based on the location of a housing accommodation (Health & Saf.C. 35810); (b) discrimination based on "race, color, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, or ancestry" (Health & Saf.C. 35811); and (c) consideration of the "racial, ethnic, religious, or national origin composition of the neighborhood or geographical area surrounding a housing accommodation or whether or not such composition is undergoing ... or is expected to undergo change." (Health & Saf.C. 35812).

The Act does not, however, (a) require financing where it is "clearly evident" that the property would create "an imminent threat to the health and safety of the occupant"; or (b) prevent consideration of the fair market value of the property that would secure the proposed loan. (Health & Saf.C. 35813.)

(3) Complaint Resolution. When an applicant seeks financial assistance, he or she must be notified of the provisions of the Act, and where a complaint may be filed (with the Secretary; Health & Saf.C. 35820). (Health & Saf.C. 35830.) The Secretary must "immediately" attempt to eliminate the alleged unlawful practice by "conference, conciliation, or persuasion." (Health & Saf.C. 35821.) Within 30 days after the complaint is filed, the Secretary must serve and file his or her findings. (Health & Saf.C. 35822.) If the Secretary finds that the Act has been violated, he or she must order the financial institution to cease and desist from its practice and to take one of the following steps: (a) provide the financial assistance applied for on nondiscriminatory terms; or (b) pay $ 1,000 if financial relief would not be effective. The Secretary may also require a report of the manner of compliance. (Health & Saf.C. 35822.)

(4) Administrative Review. The Secretary's decision is final unless the complainant or the financial institution files a written request for a formal administrative hearing within 10 days of receipt of the decision. (Health & Saf.C. 35823.) The Secretary must file a copy of the request with the Office of Administrative Hearings, and a hearing must be held under the Administrative Procedure Act within 20 days thereafter. (Health & Saf.C. 35823.) If the Secretary ruled in favor of the complainant, the Secretary must represent the complainant at the hearing. (Health & Saf.C. 35823.)

The decision must be made within 45 days of receipt of the request; it must be in accordance with the provisions of Health & Saf.C. 35822, and is binding on the Secretary. (Health & Saf.C. 35823.)

(5) Judicial Review. Either party may seek judicial review by administrative mandamus pursuant to C.C.P. 1094.5 (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §262 et seq.). In this proceeding, the court may exercise its independent judgment on the evidence in the record, and may consider evidence improperly excluded, and "other relevant evidence ... which the court finds the offering party could not, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, have produced at the administrative hearing." (Health & Saf.C. 35823.) The court may also grant attorneys' fees to a prevailing complainant, without regard to which party sought judicial review. (Health & Saf.C. 35823.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Prohibitions. Health & Saf.C. 35811, as amended in 2006, now prohibits discrimination on any basis listed in Govt.C. 12955(a) or (d). (Health & Saf.C. 35811(a); see text, §947.) An exception is made with respect to familial status for housing for older persons and senior citizens. (Health & Saf.C. 35811(b).) (5) Judicial Review.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Extraordinary Writs, §263 et seq.

98 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

1. In General.

f. Hate Crimes, Intimidation, and Threats of Violence.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 895

[§ 895] Hate Crimes, Intimidation, and Threats of Violence.

(1) In General. The Ralph Civil Rights Act (C.C. 51.7) recognizes the right of persons to be free from violence, intimidation, or threats based on discrimination. (See 32 McGeorge L. Rev. 546 [detering hate crimes and enforcing state and federal constitutional rights]; 16 Pacific L. J. 735; 19 Pacific L. J. 551; 1 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §3:1 et seq. [text and forms for actions under Act]; 57 Proof of Facts 3d 1 [Hate Crimes and Liability for Bias-Motivated Acts].)

(2) Freedom From Violence, Intimidation, or Threat. "All persons within the jurisdiction of this state have the right to be free from any violence, or intimidation by threat of violence, committed against their persons or property because of their race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, political affiliation, sex, sexual orientation, age, disability, or position in a labor dispute, or because another person perceives them to have one or more of those characteristics." (C.C. 51.7(a) [this identification of particular bases of discrimination is illustrative rather than restrictive].) The statute is expressly inapplicable to "statements concerning positions in a labor dispute which are made during otherwise lawful labor picketing." (C.C. 51.7(a).) "Sexual orientation" includes "heterosexuality, homosexuality, or bisexuality." (C.C. 51.7(b).) (See BAJI, No. 7.93 [violent civil rights violations]; CACI, No. 3023 [essential factual elements].)

(3) Damages for Prohibited Violence. The statute authorizes a private action for actual damages, punitive damages, a civil penalty of $ 25,000, and attorneys' fees, for each violation of C.C. 51.7. (C.C. 52(b); see Govt.C. 12970(e) [civil penalty under FEHA of up to $ 25,000 for violation of C.C. 51.7]; Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority v. Superior Court (2004) 123 C.A.4th 261, 267, 20 C.R.3d 92 [civil penalty under C.C. 52(b) is not imposed primarily for sake of example and punishment, and thus is not prohibited by Govt.C. 818, which prohibits recovery of those damages against public agency]; BAJI, No. 7.94 [punitive damages]; CACI, Nos. 3026 [damages], 3027 [civil penalty]; on action for damages under C.C. 52, see infra, §914.)

(4) Interference With Enjoyment of Legal Rights. The Tom Bane Civil Rights Act (C.C. 52.1) authorizes the Attorney General, district or city attorneys, or individuals whose legal rights have been interfered with by threats, intimidation, or coercion, to bring a civil action for injunctive and other appropriate equitable relief. (C.C. 52.1(a), (b); see 1 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §3:16 et seq.) In addition, an aggrieved person may bring an action for damages under C.C. 52, and may be awarded reasonable attorneys' fees. (C.C. 52.1(b), (h).) When the action is brought by the Attorney General or a district or city attorney, the defendant is subject to a civil penalty of $ 25,000. If the penalty is requested, it is assessed individually against each person who has violated the statute and is awarded to each individual whose rights have been violated. (C.C. 52.1(a); see 33 McGeorge L. Rev. 187 [statutory penalty].)

Violation of a temporary restraining order or a preliminary or permanent injunction is punishable either by prosecution under P.C. 422.77 (see infra, this section) or by a proceeding for contempt under C.C.P. 1209 et seq. (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §332 et seq.). (C.C. 52.1(i); see C.C. 52.1(d) [requiring notice for violation to be crime].)

C.C. 52.1 does not require a showing of actual intent to discriminate so long as acts were accompanied by requisite threats, intimidation, or coercion. (Venegas v. Los Angeles (2004) 32 C.4th 820, 841, 11 C.R.3d 692, 87 P.3d 1.)

Speech alone is not sufficient to support an action under C.C. 52.1(a) or 52.1(b), except on a showing (a) "that the speech itself threatens violence against a specific person or group of persons"; (b) "that the person or group of persons against whom the threat is directed reasonably fears that, because of the speech, violence will be committed against them or their property"; and (c) "that the person threatening violence had the apparent ability to carry out the threat." (C.C. 52.1(j).)

No order issued in a proceeding under C.C. 52.1(a) or 52.1(b) may restrict the content of a person's speech. An order restricting the time, place, or manner of a person's speech may do so "only to the extent reasonably necessary to protect the peaceable exercise or enjoyment of constitutional or statutory rights, consistent with the constitutional rights of the person sought to be enjoined." (C.C. 52.1(k).)

C.C. 52.1 provides for a personal cause of action for the actual victim of a hate crime; it does not provide a cause of action for wrongful death. Hence, the parents of a black person killed by a white police officer lacked standing to bring an action under C.C. 52.1. (Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. v. Superior Court (1995) 38 C.A.4th 141, 142, 144, 44 C.R.2d 887; see Boccatto v. Hermosa Beach (1994) 29 C.A.4th 1797, 1808, 1809, 35 C.R.2d 282 [to state cause of action under C.C. 52.1, plaintiff must allege that interference with his or her rights was due to plaintiff's membership in one of protected classes specified in C.C. 51.7].)

Although state action per se is not required for a recovery under C.C. 52.1, the statute does require an attempted or completed act or interference with a legal right. Because only the government or its agents can violate a person's right against unreasonable search and seizure, there can be no recovery under the statute where the unreasonable search and seizure is performed by private actors. (Jones v. Kmart Corp. (1998) 17 C.4th 329, 333, 70 C.R.2d 844, 949 P.2d 941.)

(5) Penal Code Provisions. A "hate crime" is a criminal act committed, in whole or in part, because of the victim's actual or perceived disability, gender, nationality, race, ethnicity, religion, sexual orientation, or association with a person or group with one of these actual or perceived characteristics. (P.C. 422.55(a).) "No person, whether or not acting under color of law, shall by force or threat of force willfully injure, intimidate, interfere with, oppress, or threaten any other person in the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege secured to him or her" under state or federal law based on "the actual or perceived characteristics of the victim" listed in P.C. 422.55(a). (P.C. 422.6(a).) Similarly, no person "shall knowingly deface, damage, or destroy the real or personal property of any other person for the purpose of intimidating or interfering with the free exercise or enjoyment of any right or privilege," as specified. (P.C. 422.6(b).) Violation of these provisions is a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment in county jail for not more than 1 year, a fine of not over $ 5,000, or both, and community service of not more than 400 hours. (P.C. 422.6(c).) However, no person may be convicted of violating P.C. 422.6(a) based on speech alone, except on "a showing that the speech itself threatened violence against a specific person or group of persons and that the defendant had the apparent ability to carry out the threat." (P.C. 422.6(c).) Conduct that violates P.C. 422.6 or another provision of law may be charged under all applicable provisions, but an act or omission punishable in different ways by this section and the other provisions cannot be punished under more than one provision, and the penalty must be determined as provided in P.C. 654. (P.C. 422.6(d).)

Except in the case of a person punished under P.C. 422.6, a hate crime that is not made punishable by imprisonment in a state prison is punishable as specified "if the crime is committed against the person or property of another for the purpose of intimidating or interfering with that person's free exercise or enjoyment" of constitutional or statutory rights based on discrimination, and the crime is committed under specified circumstances charged in the accusatory pleading. (P.C. 422.7.) (See In re M.S. (1995) 10 C.4th 698, 716, 720, 725, 42 C.R.2d 355, 896 P.2d 1365, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §411 [construing and rejecting constitutional challenges to P.C. 422.6 and 422.7]; CALJIC (6th ed.), No. 9.95 (1999 Revision) [felony interference with civil rights under P.C. 422.7].)

Except in the case of a person punished under P.C. 422.7, a person who commits or attempts to commit a felony that is a hate crime must receive "an additional term of one, two, or three years in state prison, at the court's discretion." (P.C. 422.75; see People v. Superior Court (Aishman) (1995) 10 C.4th 735, 739, 42 C.R.2d 377, 896 P.2d 1387, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §305 [construing P.C. 422.75].) And except where the court imposes additional punishment under P.C. 422.75, committing or attempting to commit a felony because of the victim's race, etc., is an aggravating circumstance in sentencing under P.C. 1170(b). (P.C. 422.76; see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment §263.)

Except as otherwise required by law, nothing in P.C. 422.6 et seq. may "be construed to prevent or limit the prosecution of any person pursuant to any provision of law." (P.C. 422.8.)

A "willful and knowing violation" of an order issued pursuant to C.C. 52.1(a) or 52.1(b) is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not over $ 1,000, imprisonment in county jail for not more than 6 months, or both. (P.C. 422.77(a); see P.C. 422.77(b) [person previously convicted of order under C.C. 52.1(a) or 52.1(b) must be imprisoned in county jail for not more than 1 year]; P.C. 422.78 [prosecuting agency of each county has primary responsibility to enforce orders issued pursuant to C.C. 52.1].)

P.C. 422.85 permits a court to order, as a condition of probation, that a defendant convicted of a hate crime or a specified offense committed because of the victim's actual or perceived race, color, ethnicity, religion, nationality, country of origin, ancestry, disability, gender, or sexual orientation, complete a class or program on racial or ethnic sensitivity, other similar training in civil rights, or a counseling program, and reimburse the victim or make payments to a program or local agency providing services to victims of hate violence. (See 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §561; on vandalism of place of worship and terrorizing by desecration or use of symbols, see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare §§18, 410.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. The Legislature, the courts, and commentators have not always been consistent in identifying by name the portions of the Civil Code dealing with civil rights. (See text, §898.) C.C. 51 may be cited as the Unruh Civil Rights Act (C.C. 51(a)). The Ralph Civil Rights Act added C.C. 51.7 and amended C.C. 52. (See Stats. 1976, Chap. 1293, §1.) The Tom Bane Civil Rights Act amended C.C. 51.7 and added C.C. 52.1. (See Stats. 1987, Chap. 1277, §1.)

The Ralph Civil Rights Act (C.C. 51.7) and the Tom Bane Civil Rights Acts (C.C. 52.1) are not part of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, and there is nothing in the Ralph or Bane Acts or their history that precludes them from being asserted in employment cases. (Stamps v. Superior Court (2006) 136 C.A.4th 1441, 1447, 1449, 1457, 39 C.R.3d 706 [Tom Bane Civil Rights Act was intended to supplement Ralph Civil Rights Act].)

(2) Freedom From Violence, Intimidation, or Threat. C.C. 51.7, as amended in 2005, now provides: "All persons within the jurisdiction of this state have the right to be free from any violence, or intimidation by threat of violence, committed against their persons or property because of political affiliation, or on account of" a characteristic listed or defined in C.C. 51, or a "position in a labor dispute, or because another person perceives them to have one or more of those characteristics." (C.C. 51.7(a).) The provision excluding statements made during lawful labor picketing is now found in C.C. 51.7(b). "Sexual orientation" is now defined in C.C. 51(e). (See 37 McGeorge L. Rev. 181 [2005 amendment of C.C. 51.7].)(3) Damages for Prohibited Violence. An action for a violation of C.C. 51.7 must be commenced within 3 years (C.C. 388(n), added in 2005), including an action for the $ 25,000 statutory penalty (C.C. 52, as amended in 2005).

(4) Interference With Enjoyment of Legal Rights. Qualified immunity of the kind applicable to actions brought under 42 U.S.C., §1983 (see text, §837) does not apply to actions under C.C. 52.1. (Venegas v. Los Angeles (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1230, 1246, 63 C.R.3d 741 [question of first impression].) However, public employees acting in good faith under the apparent authority of an enactment that is inapplicable or unconstitutional have statutory immunity under Govt.C. 820.6, which applies to C.C. 52.1. (O'Toole v. Superior Court (2006) 140 C.A.4th 488, 504, 44 C.R.3d 531.) But the immunity provided by Govt.C. 821.6 for an injury caused by public employees in instituting or prosecuting a judicial or administrative proceeding, does not protect them from liability under C.C. 52.1 for false arrest. And, because the immunity provided public employees by Govt.C. 820.2 for discretionary acts covers only basic policy decisions, it does not protect them from liability under C.C. 52.1 for making an arrest without probable cause. (Gillan v. San Marino (2007) 147 C.A.4th 1033, 1047, 1051, 55 C.R.3d 158.) (On liability of public employees generally, see 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §345 et seq.)

Contempt proceeding:

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Enforcement of Judgment, §340 et seq.

99 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS E. California Civil Rights Legislation. 1. In General.

g. Sexual Harassment in Business and Professional Relationships.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 896

[§ 896] Sexual Harassment in Business and Professional Relationships.

(1) In General. The 1994 Legislature, finding that "sexual harassment occurs not only in the workplace, but in relationships between providers of professional services and their clients" (Stats. 1994, Chap. 710, §1), added C.C. 51.9, creating a cause of action for sexual harassment that occurs as part of a professional relationship. The statute authorizes recovery of damages as provided by C.C. 52(b) (supra, §895). (C.C. 51.9(b); see C.C. 51.9(c) [statute does not limit application of other remedies provided by law]; C.C. 51.9(d) [statute's definition of sexual harassment and standards for liability are limited to actions brought under statute].) (See 1 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §10:5 et seq. [action under statute]; 61 Am.Jur. Trials 489 [Individual Liability for Sexual Harassment]; 62 Am.Jur. Trials 235 [Workplace Sexual Harassment: Quid Pro Quo]; on sexual harassment under Title VII of Civil Rights Act, see supra, §864 et seq.; on liability of supervisors for sexual harassment under FEHA, see infra, §928; on prohibited sexual harassment under FEHA, see infra, §927 et seq.)

(2) Elements of Action. A person is liable for sexual harassment under this statute when the plaintiff proves that: (a) there is a business, service, or professional relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant; (b) the defendant has made sexual advances, solicitations, requests, or demands for sexual compliance by the plaintiff, or engaged in other verbal, visual, or physical conduct of a sexual nature, or a hostile nature based on gender, that was unwelcome and pervasive or severe; (c) the plaintiff is unable to easily terminate the relationship; and (d) the plaintiff has suffered or will suffer economic loss or disadvantage or personal injury, including emotional distress or the violation of a constitutional or statutory right, as a result of the defendant's conduct. (C.C. 51.9(a); on what constitutes professional relationship, see C.C. 51.9(a)(1).) (See BAJI, No. 7.91 [elements of action]; CACI, No. 3024 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

100 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
1. In General.
h. Other Discrimination Statutes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 897

[§ 897] Other Discrimination Statutes.

Statutes outlaw discrimination in a number of fields, including the following:

(1) Clubs Selling Liquor. Under the Alcoholic Beverages Control Act (B. & P.C. 23000 et seq.), certain clubs engaging in specified discriminatory practices are not eligible for an alcoholic beverage club license. (See, e.g., B. & P.C. 23428.5 [press clubs]; B. & P.C. 23428.18 [labor councils]; B. & P.C. 23428.20 [nonprofit condominium and stock cooperative organizations]; B. & P.C. 23428.21 [local dental societies]; B. & P.C. 23428.22 [nonprofit corporations promoting cultural ties and understanding]; B. & P.C. 23428.23 [letter carriers' local]; B. & P.C. 23428.27 [peace officers' and employees' associations].) Other provisions of the Act provide that it is unlawful for certain licensed clubs to engage in specified discriminatory practices. (See, e.g., B. & P.C. 23426.5 [tennis clubs]; B. & P.C. 23428.19 [handball and racquetball clubs]; B. & P.C. 23428.24 [nonprofit social organizations]; B. & P.C. 23428.25 [Hidalgo society]; B. & P.C. 23428.26 [nonprofit property owners' association].) In addition, B. & P.C. 23438 provides that a person may not deduct club expenses for taxation purposes if the club engages in discriminatory practices. (See 19 Pacific L. J. 509.)

(2) Credit Denial to Woman. The discriminatory refusal of credit to a married woman is prohibited. (See C.C. 1812.30 et seq.; 11 Summary (10th), Husband and Wife, §22.)

(3) Dealerships. The California Fair Dealership Law prohibits discrimination in granting dealerships. (See C.C. 80 et seq.; C.C. 81(b) [defining dealership].)

(4) Dentistry. Legislation prohibits discrimination with respect to employment, staff privileges, or professional services against a licensed dentist solely on the basis of the educational degree held. (See Govt.C. 7120 [discrimination by state and local government agencies]; Health & Saf.C. 1373.13 [discrimination by health care service plans]; Ins.C. 10177.9 [discrimination by nonprofit hospital service plans and self-insured employee welfare plans].)

(5) Deprivation of Rights by Law Enforcement. No governmental authority or agent may "engage in a pattern or practice of conduct by law enforcement officers that deprives any person of rights, privileges, or immunities secured or protected" by state or federal law. The Attorney General may bring a civil action "to obtain appropriate equitable and declaratory relief to eliminate the pattern or practice of conduct." (C.C. 52.3.)

(6) Disabled Persons. (See infra, §957 et seq.)

(7) Elder Care. "Adult day care centers may not discriminate because of race, color, creed, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, or physical or mental disabilities." However, participants who cannot be appropriately cared for may be refused admittance to the program. (Health & Saf.C. 1586.6.)

(8) Employment. Except for reinstatement remedies prohibited by federal law, the protections, rights, and remedies available under state law are available to all individuals who have applied for employment or who are or have been employed, regardless of their immigration status. (C.C. 3339, Govt.C. 7285, Health & Saf.C. 24000, Lab.C. 1171.5; see Govt.C. 12900 et seq. [California Fair Employment and Housing Act], infra, §915 et seq.; 34 McGeorge L. Rev. 435 [discussing statutes].)

(9) Franchises. Discrimination in the granting of a franchise is prohibited. (C.C. 51.8.)

(10) Gender Violence. Gender-motivated violence, including domestic violence and sexual abuse, is a form of sex discrimination prohibited by statute. (C.C. 52.4.) A person subject to gender violence may bring a civil action against the responsible party for actual, compensatory, and punitive damages and injunctive relief. (C.C. 52.4(a) ; 34 McGeorge L. Rev. 333 [discussing C.C. 52.4].)

(11) Health Care and Nursing. Health care service plans, group policies of disability insurance, self-insured employee welfare benefit plans, fraternal benefit societies, and nonprofit hospital service plans are prohibited from providing dependent spouses less favorable coverage than that provided covered employee spouses. (See Health & Saf.C. 1374; Ins.C. 10122.2, 10123.4, and 11073; on rights of patients in nursing facilities, see Health & Saf.C. 1599 et seq.)

(12) Licensed Persons. A person holding a license (or certificate, permit, authority, etc.) under the Business and Professions Code is subject to disciplinary action if he or she refuses services to an applicant, or otherwise discriminates in performing services "because of the applicant's race, color, sex, religion, ancestry, disability, physical handicap, marital status, or national origin." (B. & P.C. 125.6.)

(13) Linguistic Minorities. The Dymally-Alatorre Bilingual Services Act (Govt.C. 7290 et seq.) seeks to improve communication between public employees and persons unable to speak or write English effectively. It requires state and local agencies to employ qualified bilingual persons in public contact positions or as interpreters. (Govt.C. 7292, 7293.)

(14) Mental Health Services. A nonprofit protection and advocacy agency ensures that state hospitals and licensed health and community care facilities observe mental health laws, regulations, and policies on the rights of mental health services recipients. (See Welf.C. 5510 et seq.; see Welf.C. 4901 [protection and advocacy agency].)

(15) Mobilehome Park Tenancies. Membership in a private club or organization, which is a condition for tenancy in a mobilehome park, "shall not be denied on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, ancestry, or marital status." (C.C. 798.20.)

(16) Prisoners. Prisoners are guaranteed specified civil rights, including the right to read materials, to initiate civil actions, to marry, and to make a will. (See P.C. 2601.)

(17) Public Accommodations. (See C.C. 51, 52, infra, §898 et seq. [Unruh Civil Rights Act]; B. & P.C. 19572 [racetracks]; Govt.C. 54091, 54092 [public beaches]; 70 A.L.R.3d 1142 [trailer park as public accommodation]; 38 A.L.R.4th 339 [gender-based discrimination in places of public accommodation].)

(18) Public Employment. (See Govt.C. 19572 [setting forth authorized causes for discipline of state civil service employees, including unlawful discrimination and unlawful retaliation]; Govt.C. 19702 [prohibiting discrimination against and harassment of state civil service employees or employee applicants on the bases of sex, race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, marital status, or physical or mental disability]; Govt.C. 19702(a) [prohibiting retaliatory discrimination]; Govt.C. 19702(h) [burden of proof in retaliation actions]; Govt.C. 19702.1 [state hiring and promotion must conform to Federal Civil Rights Act (supra, §847)]; Govt.C. 50084 [same; local agencies]; Govt.C. 19702.2 [only job-related tests are authorized for state hiring or promotional practices]; Govt.C. 50085 [same; local agencies]; Govt.C. 19704 [prohibiting notations or entries on documents relating to state examination, appointment, or promotion]; Govt.C. 8310 [prohibiting certain questions to applicants for state employment]; Educ.C. 45293, 88112 [prohibiting certain questions to applicants or candidates for elementary, secondary, or community college positions; prohibiting discrimination in appointment]; Kidd v. California (1998) 62 C.A.4th 386, 405, 72 C.R.2d 758, infra, §967 [use of race and sex in appointment of job applicants to civil service positions under supplemental certification policy violated Govt.C. 19704, 19705]; 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §332 et seq.; infra, §915 et seq.)

(19) Public Safety Officers. (See infra, §960 et seq.)

(20) Public Utility Deposits and Rates. No public utility may "prejudice, disadvantage, or require different rates or deposit amounts ... because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, occupation, sex, marital status or change in marital status." (Pub.Util.C. 453(b).)

(21) Residential Developments and Emergency Shelters. Cities and counties are prohibited from discriminating against residential developments or emergency shelters because of (a) the method of financing, (b) "the race, sex, color, religion, ethnicity, national origin, ancestry, lawful occupation, familial status, disability, or age" of the owners or intended occupants, or because (c) occupancy is by persons or families of low, moderate, or middle income. (Govt.C. 65008.)

(22) State Militia. Members of the state militia must not be discriminated against in enlistments, promotions, or commissions on any basis listed in Govt.C. 12940(a), except as provided in Govt.C. 12940. (Mil. & Vet.C. 130.)

(23) Transfer of Land. Discriminatory provisions in written instruments relating to real property are prohibited. (C.C. 53, 782; see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §201.)

(24) Voting Registration. A county clerk may not refuse to deputize any person to register voters "because of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, sex, marital status, disability, religious or political affiliation, or age." (Elec.C. 2110.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.110 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(11a) (New) Juvenile Detention. The Youth Bill of Rights, Welf.C. 224.70 et seq., added in 2007, enumerates the rights of youth committed to the custody of the Division of Juvenile Facilities and the duties of the Division regarding their care, placement, and services.

(12) Licensed Persons. B. & P.C. 125.6, as amended in 2007, no longer specifically lists the prohibited characteristics; instead, B. & P.C. 125.6 refers to those characteristics listed or defined in C.C. 51(b) (see text and Supp., infra, §898) or defined in C.C. 51(e). (15) Mobilehome Park Tenancies. C.C. 798.20, as amended in 2006, now provides that membership may not be denied on any basis listed in Govt.C. 12955(a) or (d). (C.C. 798.20(a); see text, §947.) An exception is made with respect to familial status for housing for older persons and senior citizens. (C.C. 798.20(b).) (20) Public Utility Deposits and Rates. Pub.Util.C. 453(b), as amended in 2007, now lists the protected characteristics as "ancestry, medical condition, marital status or change in marital status, occupation, or any characteristic listed or defined in" Govt.C. 11135 (see text and Supp., supra, §892).

(21) Residential Developments and Emergency Shelters. Govt.C. 65008, as amended in 2006, now prohibits discrimination on any basis listed in Govt.C. 12955(a) or (d) (see text, §947). With respect to familial status, the statute does not apply to housing for older persons or senior citizens. Govt.C. 65008 also now prohibits discrimination based on a person's or family's very low income.

(24) Voting Registration. Elec.C. 2110, as amended in 2007, now lists the protected characteristics as "ancestry, marital status, political affiliation, or any characteristic listed or defined in" Govt.C. 11135 (see text and Supp, supra, §892).

101 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS E. California Civil Rights Legislation. 2. Unruh Civil Rights Act. a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 898

[§ 898] In General.

(1) The Statute. Prior to 1959, the California Civil Rights Act (C.C. 51 et seq.) prohibited discrimination in certain specified places of public accommodation or amusement, and authorized an action for actual damages and for a statutory penalty of $ 100. (See In re Cox (1970) 3 C.3d 205, 213, 90 C.R. 24, 474 P.2d 992.) The Act was repealed in 1959, and C.C. 51 and 52 were amended and designated the Unruh Civil Rights Act. This Act provides that "[a]ll persons within the jurisdiction of this state are free and equal, and no matter what their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, or medical condition are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever." (C.C. 51(b); see 31 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 443 [uncertain guarantee of Unruh Act]; 36 U.S.F. L. Rev. 109 [saving California's statutory ban on arbitrary discrimination by businesses]; 29 Western State L. Rev. 1 [argument in favor of liberalizing Act]; 1 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §2:1 et seq. [actions under Unruh Act]; 2 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §13:16 et seq. [housing discrimination under Act]; 87 A.L.R.2d 120 [what establishments fall within protection of state civil rights statutes]; 83 A.L.R.5th 467 [What Constitutes Private Club or Association Not Otherwise Open to Public That Is Exempt From State Civil Rights Statute]; on businesses and acts covered, see infra, §899 et seq.; on enforcement, see C.C. 52, infra, §914.)

(2) Popular Name. C.C. 51(a) provides that it "shall be known, and may be cited, as the Unruh Civil Rights Act." Thus, some courts and commentators refer only to C.C. 51 as the Unruh Civil Rights Act (see Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 C.A.4th 339, 395, 19 C.R.3d 29), while others include both C.C. 51 and its related enforcement statute C.C. 52 (see infra, §914). Others refer to C.C. 51 through C.C. 53, inclusive, as the Unruh Civil Rights Act, thus including the Tom Bane Civil Rights Act (see supra, §895). (See C.C. 1801 [stating that statutes on retail installment sales may be cited as "Unruh Act"].)

(3) Purpose and Scope of Act. The primary purpose of the Unruh Civil Rights Act "is to compel recognition of the equality of all persons in the right to the particular service offered by an organization or entity covered by the act." (Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 C.A.3d 712, 733, 195 C.R. 325.) The protection afforded by the Act applies to "all persons," and is not confined to a limited category of "protected classes." (Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 C.3d 721, 730, 180 C.R. 496, 640 P.2d 115, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §683.) (See Gates v. Superior Court (1995) 32 C.A.4th 481, 508, 512, 38 C.R.2d 489, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §303 [Act does not supersede Govt.C. 845 (immunity from liability for failure to provide police protection)).)

"Emanating from and modeled upon traditional 'public accommodations' legislation, the Unruh Act expanded the reach of such statutes from common carriers and places of public accommodation and recreation, e.g., railroads, hotels, restaurants, theaters and the like, to include 'all business establishments of every kind whatsoever.' " (Marina Point Ltd. v. Wolfson supra, 30 C.3d 731.) "By its use of the emphatic words 'all' and 'of every kind whatsoever,' the Legislature intended that the phrase 'business establishments' be interpreted 'in the broadest sense reasonably possible.' " (Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 C.3d 72, 78, 219 C.R. 150, 707 P.2d 212, infra, §901; see infra, §899 et seq.)

The enumeration of particular kinds of discrimination in the Act is "illustrative, rather than restrictive." The Act's "language and its history compel the conclusion that the Legislature intended to prohibit all arbitrary discrimination by business establishments," whether or not the ground of discrimination is expressly set forth in the Act. (Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson, supra, 30 C.3d 725, 732; Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz, supra, 40 C.3d 86; see infra, §905 et seq.) However, the Act is not violated by the establishment and enforcement of "reasonable department regulations that are rationally related to the services performed and the facilities provided." (In re Cox (1970) 3 C.3d 205, 217, 90 C.R. 24, 474 P.2d 992.) Nor is the Act violated by distinctions based on financial or economic status. (See Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 1150, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, infra, §912.) (On retaliatory discrimination, see infra, §913.)

(4) Liberal Construction. The Unruh Civil Rights Act must be liberally construed with a view to effectuating the purposes for which it was enacted and to promote justice. In enforcing its commands, "both the policy expressed in its terms, and the object implicit in its history and background, should be recognized." (Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 C.3d 24, 28, 219 C.R. 133, 707 P.2d 195; Winchell v. English (1976) 62 C.A.3d 125, 127, 133 C.R. 20, infra, §907; Curran v. Mt. Diablo Council, supra, 147 C.A.3d 727; Rotary Club of Duarte v. Board of Directors (1986) 178 C.A.3d 1035, 1046, 224 C.R. 213, infra, §902.)

(5) Proof of Violation. Statistical evidence is admissible to support an inference of intentional discrimination when based on a "proper foundation and subject to the general rules of evidence." (Everett v. Superior Court (2002) 104 C.A.4th 388, 393, 128 C.R.2d 418 [citing Harris v. Capital Growth Investors; statistical evidence showing greater percentage of Blacks than people of other races being removed from amusement park for line-cutting was sufficient to support inference that park's facially neutral line-cutting policy was applied in discriminatory manner].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) The Statute. C.C. 51, as amended in 2005, further prohibits discrimination based on marital status or sexual orientation. (See 37 McGeorge L. Rev. 181.)

See 37 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1065 [state protection of disability civil rights].(2) Popular Name. See Stamps v. Superior Court (2006) 136 C.A.4th 1441, 1449, 39 C.R.3d 706, Supp., supra, §895 [Unruh Civil Rights Act does not include Ralph Civil Rights Act (C.C. 51.7) or Tom Bane Civil Rights Act (C.C. 52.1)]; Gunther v. Lin (2006) 144 C.A.4th 223, 226, 50 C.R.3d 317 [strictly speaking, C.C. 52 is not part of Unruh Civil Rights Act, although it provides remedies for discrimination in violation of that Act].

(3) Purpose and Scope of Act. Although the Act has broad application, it does not extend to practices and policies that apply equally to all persons. (See C.C. 51(c).) Hence, a policy that is neutral on its face is not actionable, even when it has a disproportionate impact on a protected class. (Turner v. Association of Amer. Med. Colleges (2008) 167 C.A.4th 1401, 1408, 85 C.R.3d 94 [following Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, text, §912; Act did not require national testing service to alter standardized testing conditions to accommodate applicants with learning and reading-related disabilities].)

See Ingels v. Westwood One Broadcasting Services (2005) 129 C.A.4th 1050, 1072, 28 C.R.3d 933 [although certain aspects of operating and publishing commercial radio talk show may qualify for treatment under Unruh Civil Rights Act, countervailing interests require additional scrutiny when First Amendment rights are involved; here, plaintiff claiming age discrimination failed to demonstrate compelling interest to apply Act in face of defendant broadcaster's right to determine content of radio show].

102 of 102 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
b. Business Establishments.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 899

[§ 899] Business Establishments.

C.C. 51 (supra, §898) states the rights of persons to equal treatment "in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever." The following are illustrations of businesses held subject to the Act.

(1) Apartment Complex. An apartment complex is a business establishment within the meaning of the Act. (Flowers v. John Burnham & Co. (1971) 21 C.A.3d 700, 703, 98 C.R. 644.)

(2) Banks and Financing Agencies. In Holmes v. Bank of America (1963) 216 C.A.2d 529, 535, 30 C.R. 917, allegations that defendant bank conspired with defendant developer of homes to refuse to sell or finance sales to Blacks on housing built under the National Housing Act were held to state a cause of action.

In Jackson v. Superior Court (1994) 30 C.A.4th 936, 36 C.R.2d 207, plaintiff, a black investment adviser, accompanied two elderly female customers into defendant bank to transfer some funds from certificates of deposit to a mutual fund. While there, he was wrongfully accused by defendant bank manager of trying to pull a scam on the two customers, who left defendant bank without transferring the funds. Held, even though plaintiff was not a customer of defendant, he, as a member of the public, was entitled to full and equal accommodations under C.C. 51. Furthermore, neither the more limited, business language of C.C. 51.5 (discrimination in selling, buying, or trading; see infra, §906), nor the failure to allege a pattern of discrimination on the basis of race changed this result. (30 C.A.4th 940.)

(3) Country Club. In Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1989) 214 C.A.3d 646, 262 C.R. 890, plaintiff wife, in a dissolution proceeding, was awarded the family membership in defendant club, but defendant terminated the membership under its bylaw allowing memberships to be issued only to males. In this action, plaintiff alleged that defendant operated a restaurant and bar and recreational facilities for members and their guests, and also leased facilities to others. Held, the pleaded allegations, if proved, would bring defendant within the "business establishments" clause of the statute. (214 C.A.3d 655.) (See Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 C.4th 594, 607, 42 C.R.2d 50, 896 P.2d 776, supra, §389 [evidence established that, although not all private clubs are business establishments, club in question had sufficient transactions with nonmembers to qualify]; 83 A.L.R.5th 467 [What Constitutes Private Club or Association Not Otherwise Open to Public That Is Exempt From State Civil Rights Statute].)

(4) Medical Office. In Washington v. Blampin (1964) 226 C.A.2d 604, 38 C.R. 235, the Act was held applicable to a physician who refused to render medical service to a black person. The court pointed out that various statutes refer to medical practice as a "business," and held that the broad language of C.C. 51 ("services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever") was intended to cover the professions. Because the action was for damages only, the problem of compelling an unwelcome physician-patient relationship was not involved. (226 C.A.2d 608.) (See Leach v. Drummond Med. Group (1983) 144 C.A.3d 362, 369, 370, 192 C.R. 650 [following Blampin; only medical group providing medical services within area covered].)

(5) Real Estate Broker's Office. The office that "a real estate broker is required by law to maintain at a specified location, and from which his business must be transacted, is a business establishment within the meaning of the Unruh Act." (Lee v. O'Hara (1962) 57 C.2d 476, 478, 20 C.R. 617, 370 P.2d 321; see Vargas v. Hampson (1962) 57 C.2d 479, 481, 20 C.R. 618, 370 P.2d 322 [same holding, but special demurrer for uncertainty was properly sustained]; Wagner v. O'Bannon (1969) 274 C.A.2d 121, 130, 79 C.R. 44 [sale to white purchasers rushed through for same price offered by black purchasers of listed property].) However, a broker's failure to take affirmative steps to seek out qualified black buyers for a white seller is not a basis for an action by the seller. Inaction could amount to discrimination if there was a failure to show property to black prospects, but failure to look for or advertise for them is not; and if there is discrimination, it is not against the white seller. (Crowell v. Isaacs (1965) 235 C.A.2d 755, 757, 45 C.R. 566.)

(6) Shopping Center. A shopping center is a business open to the public, and is subject to the restrictions of the Act. "In some areas the public must rely upon the shopping center as its sole source of food, clothing and other commodities. If a shopping center arbitrarily denies individuals the right to purchase essentials, these people may have no practicable alternative source of supply. Our modern society has become so interdependent and interrelated that those who perform a significant public function may not erect barriers of arbitrary discrimination in the marketplace." (In re Cox (1970) 3 C.3d 205, 218, 90 C.R. 24, 474 P.2d 992.)

(7) Community Service Organizations. Certain nonprofit community service organizations are subject to the Act. (See infra, §900 et seq.)

(8) Talent Agency. The exclusion of "discrimination in employment" from coverage under the Act does not extend to age discrimination claims in the services provided by talent agencies to their clients. (Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 C.A.4th 339, 391, 19 C.R.3d 29 [writers who were would-be clients of talent agencies had no employer-employee relationship with talent agencies].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.119 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Country Club. On marital status discrimination by country club, see Supp., infra, §908A.

(3a) (New) Hospital. A hospital that operates as a business offering "its facilities to qualified physicians, who are not its employees, in exchange for fees and other considerations" is a business establishment for purposes of the Unruh Civil Rights Act and may not restrict its staff privileges on the basis of race. (Payne v. Anaheim Memorial Med. Center (2005) 130 C.A.4th 729, 733, 748, 30 C.R.3d 230 [see dissent, at p. 749, finding this extension of liability under Unruh Civil Rights Act to be unwarranted].)

1 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
c. Nonprofit Community Service Organizations.
1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 900

[§ 900] In General.

By use of the words "all" and "of every kind whatsoever," the Legislature intended that the phrase "business establishments" in the Unruh Civil Rights Act be interpreted "in the broadest sense reasonably possible." (Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 C.3d 72, 78, 219 C.R. 150, 707 P.2d 212, infra, §901; 83 A.L.R.5th 467 [What Constitutes Private Club or Association Not Otherwise Open to Public That Is Exempt From State Civil Rights Statute]; see supra, §898.)

"Nothing in the language or history of its enactment calls for excluding an organization from its scope simply because it is nonprofit. ... Indeed, hospitals are often nonprofit organizations, and they are clearly business establishments to the extent that they employ a vast array of persons, care for an extensive physical plant and charge substantial fees to those who use the facilities." (O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Assn. (1983) 33 C.3d 790, 796, 191 C.R. 320, 662 P.2d 427, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §116; see 21 San Diego L. Rev. 477 [O'Connor]; 31 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 443 [uncertain guarantee of Unruh Civil Rights Act].)

Thus, the term extends to various kinds of nonprofit organizations that have "businesslike attributes," including the following:

(1) Homeowners' associations. (See O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Assn. supra, 33 C.3d 796 [condominium association]; Park Redlands Covenant Control Committee v. Simon (1986) 181 C.A.3d 87, 93, 226 C.R. 199 [tract housing association].)

(2) Mother's Against Drunk Driving. (Harris v. Mothers Against Drunk Driving (1995) 40 C.A.4th 16, 20, 46 C.R.2d 833.)

(3) Boys' Club. (See infra, §901.)

(4) Rotary Club. (See infra, §902.)

However, the Boy Scouts and a cult awareness network have been held not to have the necessary business attributes to be covered by the Act. (See infra, §§903, 904.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.124

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

2 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.

c. Nonprofit Community Service Organizations.

2. Boys' Club.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 901

[§ 901] Boys' Club.

Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 C.3d 72, 219 C.R. 150, 707 P.2d 212, held that the Act applied to defendant, a private charitable organization that operates a community recreational facility. The Boys' Club of Santa Cruz, a private nonprofit California corporation, owns and operates a building that includes a gymnasium, an indoor swimming pool, a snack bar, and craft and game areas. It is affiliated with the Boys' Clubs of America, a congressional chartered organization. Its membership is open to all Santa Cruz male children between 8 and 16 for a nominal annual membership fee ($ 3.25). Its main source of funds consists of donations from a private trust. Plaintiff girls were denied membership and brought suit for injunctive and declaratory relief. The lower court granted relief, permanently enjoining the Club from denying membership or access to its facilities to girls. Held, affirmed.

(a) Boys' Club is a business establishment.

(1) The Club is "public" in its operation; it is open to the entire male youthful population of Santa Cruz. Its emphasis is on drop-in use of the facilities, thus minimizing any sense of social cohesiveness, shared identity, or continuity. (40 C.3d 81.)

(2) O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Assn. (1983) 33 C.3d 790, 191 C.R. 320, 662 P.2d 427, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §116, held that a nonprofit condominium owners' association was covered, and the fact that defendant's purposes and operations are not strictly commercial does not preclude application of the Act. (40 C.3d 83.)

(3) The fact that parallel California statutes banning discrimination in housing and employment contain express exemptions for nonprofit organizations does not call for an implied exemption in the Unruh Civil Rights Act. (40 C.3d 84.)

(4) It is suggested that extension of the Act to the Boys' Club will threaten all private organizations that traditionally serve the special cultural or charitable needs of particular minority groups with common interests. But the Club's status as a "business establishment" arises from its "public" nature. "[I]t offers basic recreational facilities to a broad segment of the population, excluding only a particular group expressly recognized by the Act as a traditional target of discrimination." (40 C.3d 84.)

(5) Application of the Act would not interfere with current members' constitutional rights of association; a similar contention was rejected in Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 104 S.Ct. 3244, 82 L.Ed.2d 462, supra, §389, holding that no federal constitutional right was infringed by the Minnesota Human Rights Act. "We reach a similar conclusion under California's Constitution, though we recognize it affords greater privacy, expressive, and associational rights in some cases than its federal counterpart." (40 C.3d 85.)

(b) Male-only membership policy prohibited. The contention that the "traditional" membership policy of the Club is "reasonable" and therefore permitted by the Act is unacceptable. Under Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 C.3d 721, 180 C.R. 496, 640 P.2d 115, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §683, it is "arbitrary" to exclude an entire class on the basis of stereotyped notions. (40 C.3d 86, 87.) The Marina Point exception, that the Act might allow the exclusion of a class whose presence would not accord with the nature of the enterprise, is inapplicable here. Defendant has not proved that "the crafts, games, counseling programs, and recreational facilities offered by the Club are suited or safe only for males." (40 C.3d 88.) Good faith is not sufficient to support group discrimination. (40 C.3d 89, footnote 19.) And the argument that the Club traditionally serves boys can no longer be sustained, for the record shows that a number of local Clubs have admitted girls with no untoward effects. (40 C.3d 90.)

(c) Scope of holding. The conclusions reached in this opinion are compelled by "the Legislature's very broad antidiscrimination policy." But the holding is based on "the particular nature and function of the Club." "Nothing we say necessarily requires a similar result in the case of other single-sex youth organizations. Nor may we foreclose the Legislature from a more precise formulation of the situations in which private discrimination is forbidden." (40 C.3d 91.)

Two justices dissented in separate opinions. (40 C.3d 93, 98.) (See 19 U.S.F. L. Rev. 431; on permissible exclusion of gays, atheists, and agnostics from Boy Scouts, see infra, §904.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

3 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
c. Nonprofit Community Service Organizations.
3. Rotary Club.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 902

[§ 902] Rotary Club.

(1) California Decision. In Rotary Club of Duarte v. Board of Directors (1986) 178 C.A.3d 1035, 224 C.R. 213, the issue was whether the Board of Directors of Rotary International could revoke the charter of the local club of Duarte and terminate its membership in International because it had admitted three women to the club. International is a worldwide nonprofit corporation with approximately 19,788 local clubs and over 900,000 individual members. Membership in local clubs is limited to men, but Duarte decided that its membership growth goals could best be reached by allowing qualified women to join. In this action for injunctive and declaratory relief, brought by Duarte and two of the women, the trial judge ruled that International and the local were not "business establishments" within the Act. Held, reversed.

(a) International, though a nonprofit organization, has substantial businesslike attributes, including publication of books and periodicals that produce substantial revenues. (178 C.A.3d 1051 et seq.)

(b) Although Rotarians perform charitable services, business concerns are a motivating factor in joining local clubs. (178 C.A.3d 1047.) "By limiting membership in local clubs to business and professional leaders in the community, International has in effect provided a forum which encourages business relations to grow and which enhances the commercial advantages of its members." (178 C.A.3d 1058.)

(c) Although the Act does not govern truly "private" relationships that are "continuous, personal and social," membership in Rotary is not of this type. (178 C.A.3d 1058.) Forcing International to excuse compliance with the male-only-membership policy would not violate the associational freedom protected by the federal Constitution. The immense size of the organization and the number of Rotarians throughout the world negative any intimate relations, and the state's compelling interest in eradicating discrimination against women justifies any impact on associational freedoms of male members. (178 C.A.3d 1064, 1065, discussing and following Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 104 S.Ct. 3244, 82 L.Ed.2d 462, supra, §389.)

(2) U.S. Supreme Court Decision. Board of Directors of Rotary Int. v. Rotary Club of Duarte (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S.Ct. 1940, 95 L.Ed.2d 474, affirmed the California decision on the principles laid down in Roberts v. United States

Jaycees. (a) Application of the Unruh Act does not violate the freedom of private association because the relationship among Rotary Club members is not the kind of intimate or private relation that warrants constitutional protection. (107 S.Ct. 1946, 95 L.Ed.2d 484.) (b) The Act does not violate the right of expressive association, because the slight infringement on the right serves the state's compelling interest in eliminating discrimination against women. (107 S.Ct. 1947, 95 L.Ed.2d 486.) (See 19 Pacific L. J. 399; 18 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 559.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

4 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.

c. Nonprofit Community Service Organizations.

4. Cult Awareness Network.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 903

[§ 903] Cult Awareness Network.

In Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 C.A.4th 777, 16 C.R.2d 705, the court held that the Cult Awareness Network (CAN) and its Los Angeles Chapter (CAN-LA) are not business establishments within the meaning of C.C. 51. CAN is a nonprofit corporation; its purpose is to educate the public about the harmful effects of mind control as practiced by destructive cults and about the unethical or illegal practices they employ. Its membership is open to all individuals on payment of an annual fee of $ 30, and the members receive a monthly newsletter and the right to attend yearly meetings. CAN-LA is a separate association that requires payment of $ 100 annual dues; it has no paid employees, owns no tangible assets, and sells no products or services of any kind. It holds meetings in rooms provided without charge. Its only revenue comes in the form of donations, and the entire "work force" consists of unpaid volunteers.

In 1991, CAN-LA received many letters from acknowledged Scientologists requesting admission to membership, purportedly to engage in religious dialogue with other members. Believing that this campaign of the Church of Scientology was a harassment measure, CAN-LA rejected the applications. Plaintiff, a member of the church, then filed a complaint for damages and a permanent injunction, and also filed an application for a preliminary injunction. The trial court denied the application on the ground that plaintiff did not demonstrate a reasonable probability that he would succeed in showing that CAN-LA is a business establishment. Held, order affirmed.

(a) CAN-LA's associational rights.

(1) Freedom of private association. The relationship among CAN-LA members is the type of intimate and private relationship that warrants constitutional protection. It is not a "large and basically unselective" group as in Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 104 S.Ct. 3244, 82 L.Ed.2d 462, supra, §389. It is a "well-defined subgroup," whose membership is highly restricted and selective, based on shared opinions, thoughts, and concerns with respect to "destructive cults." (13 C.A.4th 789.)

(2) Freedom of expressive association. Implicit in the right to engage in activities protected by the First Amendment is a corresponding right to associate with others in pursuit of a wide variety of political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends. A regulation that forces the group to accept members it does not desire may impair the ability of the original members to express only those views that brought them together. (13 C.A.4th 790.) There is a substantial basis in the record to support the conclusion that admitting plaintiff and other Scientologists as members of CAN-LA would impede its ability to engage in protected activities and to disseminate its preferred views. (13 C.A.4th 790.)

(b) No compelling state interest justifies application of Unruh Act.

(1) Plaintiff argued, with no supporting authority, that any privacy rights of members of CAN-LA are outweighed by California's compelling interest in eradicating religious discrimination so that all persons may be judged solely on their individual merits. But what plaintiff characterizes as "religious discrimination" is simply CAN-LA's expression of its own ideas and beliefs in a private and highly selective forum from which Scientologists are excluded. (13 C.A.4th 791.)

(2) "Moreover, in light of the establishment clause of the United States Constitution and the religion clauses of the California Constitution ... , it is difficult to postulate any state interest which would justify application of the Unruh Civil Rights Act to the circumstances of this case." (13 C.A.4th 791.) The proper stance of government with respect to the instant case is best stated in Sands v. Morongo Unified School Dist. (1991) 53 C.3d 863, 281 C.R. 34, 809 P.2d 809, supra, §533: "Ours is a religiously diverse nation. Within the vast array of Christian denominations and sects, there is a wide variety of belief and practice. Moreover, substantial segments of our population adhere to non-Christian religions or to no religion. Respect for the differing religious choices of the people of this country requires that government neither place its stamp of approval on any particular religious practice, nor appear to take a stand on any religious question." (13 C.A.4th 792.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

5 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.

c. Nonprofit Community Service Organizations.

5. Boy Scouts.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 904

[§ 904] Boy Scouts.

The California Supreme Court unanimously ruled in Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 C.4th 670, 72 C.R.2d 410, 952 P.2d 218, and Randall v. Orange County Council, Boy Scouts of America (1998) 17 C.4th 736, 72 C.R.2d 453, 952 P.2d 261, that the Boy Scouts organization is not a "business establishment" within the scope of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, and thus may exclude gays, atheists, and agnostics.

In Curran, plaintiff, a former Eagle Scout, applied to become an assistant scoutmaster. His application was rejected by defendant, a regional council of the Boy Scouts, after plaintiff publicly stated that he was a homosexual and committed to communicating his view that homosexuality is acceptable and moral, a view in conflict with the Boy Scouts' official position. Plaintiff sought an injunction prohibiting defendant from rejecting his application. The trial court entered judgment for defendant, concluding that defendant was a "business establishment" covered by the Act, but that application of the Act to prohibit defendant from rejecting plaintiff's application would violate defendant's members' right of expressive association under the First and Fourteenth Amendments. The Court of Appeal affirmed, agreeing with the trial court that application of the Act would violate the members' federal constitutional right of association, but finding, contrary to the trial court, that defendant was not a business establishment subject to the Act. Held, affirmed.

(a) Boy Scouts is not business establishment within Unruh Act. In expanding the reach of California's prior public accommodation law by enacting the Unruh Civil Rights Act in 1959, the Legislature chose to bring within the reach of the Act "all business establishments of every kind whatsoever." (17 C.4th 696, quoting C.C. 51.) Past decisions have stressed that the term "business establishments" must properly be interpreted in the broadest sense reasonably possible, and have applied the Act to a variety of entities that ordinarily might not be thought of as traditional business establishments. Thus, past decisions demonstrate that the Act clearly applies not only to for-profit commercial enterprises, but also to nonprofit entities designed to serve the business or economic interests of owners or members. However, no prior decision has interpreted the "business establishments" language of the Act so expansively as to include the membership decisions of a charitable, expressive, and social organization, like the Boy Scouts, the formation and activities of which are unrelated to the promotion or advancement of its members' economic or business interests. Given the organization's overall purpose and function, the Boy Scouts cannot reasonably be found to constitute a business establishment the membership decisions of which are subject to the Act. (17 C.4th 696.)

(b) Isbister case distinguished. Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz (1985) 40 C.3d 72, 219 C.R. 150, 707 P.2d 212, supra, §901, involving a local boys' club, concluded that the Unruh Act was intended to extend the reach of California's prior public accommodation statute, and that the very broad "business establishments" language of the Act applies to the membership policies of an entity—even a charitable organization that lacks a significant business-related purpose—if the entity's attributes and activities make it the "functional equivalent" of a classic "place of public accommodation or amusement." However, the circumstance that the Boy Scouts is generally nonselective in its admission policies, and affords membership to a large segment of the public, is not itself sufficient to characterize the organization as the functional equivalent of a traditional place of public accommodation or amusement. The record establishes that the Boy Scouts is an organization the primary function of which is the inculcation of a specific set of values in its members, and the recreational facilities and activities of which are complementary to the organization's primary purpose. Unlike membership in the boys' club in Isbister, membership in the Boy Scouts is not simply an admission ticket to a recreational facility that is open to a large segment of the public and that has all the attributes of a place of public amusement. Scouts meet regularly in small groups (often in private homes) that are intended to foster close friendship, trust, and loyalty, and Scouts are required to participate in a variety of activities, ceremonies, and rituals that are designed to teach the moral principles to which the organization subscribes. (17 C.4th 697.)

(c) Warfield case distinguished. Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 C.4th 594, 42 C.R.2d 50, 896 P.2d 776, supra, §899, applied the Act to the membership decisions of a private country club that permitted nonmembers to use its facilities for a fee. It is likewise distinguishable. Although the Boy Scouts, like the country club in Warfield, engages in business transactions with nonmembers on a regular basis (by operating retail shops and licensing the use of its insignia), those business activities differ significantly from those of the defendant in Warfield. The Boy Scouts is an expressive social organization. Its primary function is the inculcation of values in its members, and its small social-group structure and activities are not comparable to those of a traditional place of public accommodation or amusement. Unlike the business transactions involved in Warfield, the business transactions engaged in by the Boy Scouts do not involve the sale of access to the basic activities or services offered by the organization. Nonmembers cannot purchase entry to pack or troop meetings, overnight hikes, the national jamboree, or any portion of the Boy Scouts' extended training and educational process. Although the Act would apply to, and would prohibit discrimination in, the actual business transactions with nonmembers in its retail stores and elsewhere, those transactions do not render the Boy Scouts a business establishment so as to bring its membership policies or decisions within the reach of the Unruh Act. Those business transactions are distinct from the Scouts' core functions and do not demonstrate that the organization has become a commercial purveyor of the primary incidents and benefits of membership. (17 C.4th 699.)

(d) Constitutional issue is not determined. Because the judgment for defendant must be sustained on the basis of statutory interpretation, there is no occasion to pass on the merits of defendant's claims relating to the constitutional right of association. (17 C.4th 701.)

In Randall, supra, plaintiffs were prohibited from continuing their membership and advancing in the Cub Scouts by defendant, another regional council of the Boy Scouts, because they failed or refused to participate in religion-related elements of the scout program and refused to affirm a belief in God. They sought injunctive and other relief. The trial court granted the injunction, and the Court of Appeal generally affirmed. Held, reversed, adopting the reasoning in Curran. (17 C.4th 744.)

In both cases, four justices filed separate concurring opinions, generally expressing the need to further clarify what constitutes a business establishment under the Act. (17 C.4th 702, 744.) (See 29 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 401 [Curran]; on exclusion of gay scoutmaster based on Boy Scouts' right of expressive association, see Boy Scouts of America v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S.Ct. 2446, 147 L.Ed.2d 554, supra, §391.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

6 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
d. Activities Covered.
1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 905

[§ 905] In General.

(1) Sex Discrimination. The Gender Tax Repeal Act of 1995, C.C. 51.6, prohibits discrimination in pricing services based on a person's gender. (C.C. 51.6(b).) However, businesses may charge different prices "based specifically on the amount of time, difficulty, or cost of providing the services." (C.C. 51.6(c); see C.C. 51.6(f) [required disclosure of prices for standard services of specified businesses]; cf. Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 C.3d 24, 219 C.R. 133, 707 P.2d 195 [decided before enactment of C.C. 51.6, but holding that sex-based price discounts are prohibited by Act].)

In Easebe Enterprises v. Alcoholic Bev. Control App. Bd. (1983) 141 C.A.3d 981, 986, 190 C.R. 678, a business establishment licensed to sell liquor featured male dancers and admitted women only. Held, it was unlawfully discriminating against male customers.

(2) Discrimination in Dress Regulations. In Hales v. Ojai Valley Inn & Country Club (1977) 73 C.A.3d 25, 140 C.R. 555, plaintiff alleged that he and his family entered defendant's dining room for dinner; that he was refused service because he was wearing a "leisure suit" without a necktie; that women patrons "similarly attired in leisure suits" were served; and that he was consequently the victim of sex discrimination. Held, judgment for defendant on demurrer reversed. Under In re Cox (1970) 3 C.3d 205, 218, 90 C.R. 24, 474 P.2d 992, supra, §899, an establishment may not arbitrarily discriminate; and factual issues were raised by the pleading regarding the meaning of "leisure suit," the nature of the establishment, and the local community standards of dress for both sexes. (73 C.A.3d 29.) (See Hessians Motorcycle Club v. J.C. Flanagans (2001) 86 C.A.4th 833, 836, 103 C.R.2d 552 [applying principles of Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, infra, §912, to discrimination claim by motorcycle club members required to remove their "colors" before entering defendant bar; "no colors" rule does not violate Act]; Gatto v. Sonoma (2002) 98 C.A.4th 744, 765, 120 C.R.2d 550 [following Hessians; refusing plaintiff entry to county fair because he refused to remove vest showing membership in motorcycle club did not violate Act]; 89 A.L.R.3d 7 [validity of dress or grooming requirements for customers of establishments serving food or beverages].)

(3) Discrimination Against Disabled Persons. (See infra, §957 et seq.; on discrimination against disabled under FEHA, see infra, §§936 et seq., 947.)

(4) Occupational Discrimination. In Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 C.A.3d 1287, 265 C.R. 96, plaintiff police officer attended an A.C.L.U. seminar on police espionage. He was in plain clothes and his purpose was apparently to spy. His identity was discovered and he was verbally ordered to leave, which he did. Defendant seminar provider was subsequently found liable for unlawful occupational discrimination in violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act. Held, the officer was entitled to the protection of the Act.

(a) Defendant does not argue that physical expulsion because of an individual's occupation is permissible; however, relying on White v. Davis (1975) 13 C.3d 757, 120 C.R. 94, 533 P.2d 222, supra, §357, he claims that a police officer on a spying mission is not entitled to the protection of the Act, and that the officer's verbal ejection was lawful. (216 C.A.3d 1293, 1298.) However, defendant chose self-help rather than the legal process, and did not properly tender the issue of lawfulness of the officer's conduct. (216 C.A.3d 1299.)

(b) "Even if applicable to the present facts, White cannot excuse Lloyd's conduct. He is no more entitled to relief based on Long's allegedly improper activities than would be the owner of a diner, who after being denied an apartment because of her race, sex, or occupation, refused service to the offending landlord for the identical reason. Neither violation excuses the other. We have found no authority on this precise point and rely on a basic principle of our jurisprudence: Two wrongs do not make a right. Assuming Long was engaged in improper surveillance at the instance of his department, the remedy selected by Lloyd cannot be condoned." (216 C.A.3d 1299.) (See Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 C.A.4th 530, 539, 30 C.R.2d 706, infra, §912 [operators of medical building could refuse to lease to podiatrist on basis of policy of only leasing to medical doctors].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.105

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Sex Discrimination. Generally, a business establishment's policy of giving gender-based price discounts violates the Unruh Civil Rights Act. (Angelucci v. Century Supper Club (2007) 41 C.4th 160, 173, 59 C.R.3d 142, 158 P.3d 718 [following Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 C.3d 24, 219 C.R. 133, 707 P.2d 195, text, p. 388; lower admission fee for women].)(3) Discrimination Against Disabled Persons. Unless a defendant is required by another statute to make structural modifications to a property, the existence of a structural barrier does not violate C.C. 51. (Coronado v. Cobblestone Village Community Rentals, L.P. (2008) 163 C.A.4th 831, 841, 77 C.R.3d 883 [because defendant landlord was not required by ADA, Disabled Persons Act (text, §958), or other statutes providing structural access standards to construct wheelchair ramp at particular curb, defendant was not liable under Unruh Civil Rights Act for injuries caused by its absence].)

(4) Occupational Discrimination. See Sisemore v. Master Financial (2007) 151 C.A.4th 1386, 1405, 60 C.R.3d 719, citing the text [following Long v. Valentino (1989) 216 C.A.3d 1287, 265 C.R. 96, text, p. 388; plaintiff, who was denied mortgage to purchase home solely because she was family day care home operator, stated cause of action for discrimination under Act on basis of occupational status].(5) (New) Age Discrimination. Arbitrary age discrimination is prohibited by the Unruh Civil Rights Act. (Ingels v. Westwood One Broadcasting Services (2005) 129 C.A.4th 1050, 1070, 28 C.R.3d 933.)

(6) (New) Discrimination Against Canine Unit. During declared emergencies, a peace officer or firefighter assigned to a canine unit and away from his or her home jurisdiction may not be discriminated against in lodging, eating establishments, or in public transportation. (C.C. 54.25.)

7 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
d. Activities Covered.
2. Business Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 906

[§ 906] Business Discrimination.

(1) Business Boycotts. The Unruh Civil Rights Act (supra, §898 et seq.) and the Cartwright Act (1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §591 et seq.) bar business boycotts:

(a) Unruh Civil Rights Act. Business establishments "of any kind whatsoever" are prohibited from discriminating against, boycotting, blacklisting, or refusing to buy from, contract with, sell to, or trade with any person in this state (1) "because of the race, creed, religion, color, national origin, sex, disability, or medical condition of the person or the person's partners, members, stockholders, directors, officers, managers, superintendents, agents, employees, business associates, suppliers, or customers"; (2) "because a person is perceived to have one or more of the protected characteristics"; or (3) "because the person is associated with a person who has, or is perceived to have, any of those characteristics." (C.C. 51.5; on enforcement, see C.C. 52, infra, §914.)

(b) Cartwright Act. (1) B. & P.C. 16721 prohibits contracts that exclude or require exclusion of anyone from a business transaction to effect the discriminatory policies of a third party based on sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, or national origin, or because of where a person conducts or has conducted business. (2) B. & P.C. 16721.5 makes it an unlawful trust and an unlawful restraint of trade (a) to grant or accept a letter of credit (or similar document), or to enter into a contract for the sale of goods or services, that contains a provision, or (b) to refuse to do any of those acts because of the lack of a provision, that requires a "person to discriminate against or to certify that he, she, or it has not dealt with any other person on the basis of sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, or national origin, or on the basis of a person's lawful business associations." (For enforcement, see 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §599 et seq.)

The possible application of these statutes to interstate or foreign commerce raised constitutional questions. In 1977, federal legislation was enacted to prohibit compliance with a foreign boycott; and B. & P.C. 16721.6 was adopted to declare the legislative intent that B. & P.C. 16721 and 16721.5 be interpreted and applied so as not to conflict with federal law.

(2) Distinction: Reasonable Business Restrictions. A business establishment may impose reasonable restrictions on customers rationally related to the business being conducted or the facilities and services being provided. Thus, an establishment serving liquor may refuse access or service to an intoxicated person or one who had in the past created a disturbance; and a gambling establishment may legally contract with a husband to bar his wife, a compulsive gambler, from further play. (Wynn v. Monterey Club (1980) 111 C.A.3d 789, 796, 168 C.R. 878.)

In Frantz v. Blackwell (1987) 189 C.A.3d 91, 234 C.R. 178, plaintiff sued defendant, a developer of single-family homes, alleging that defendant refused to sell to him because he had successfully sued and obtained a settlement from defendant on a prior purchase. Defendant offered evidence showing that plaintiff was not a home purchaser but an investor-speculator, who purchased units in new developments for resale before escrow closing, using the time delay and the developer's promotional efforts to create a profit. Held, judgment for defendant affirmed. If the allegations of the complaint were true, defendant's refusal to deal was an arbitrary discrimination that might come within the broad scope of the Act (189 C.A.3d 95); but the evidence showed that defendant, engaged in selling new homes, was protecting his enterprise. (189 C.A.3d 96.) "The Unruh Act seeks to remedy arbitrary discrimination. It does not seek to remedy traditional wrongs arising out of tort or breach of contract, nor does it seek to remedy discrimination based on purely personal grounds." (189 C.A.3d 96, citing Wynn v. Monterey Club.) (See Lazar v. Hertz Corp. (1999) 69 C.A.4th 1494, 1503, 82 C.R.2d 368 [no violation of Act for car rental companies to refuse to rent to persons under 25 years of age].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Business Boycotts.

(a) Unruh Civil Rights Act. C.C. 51.5, as amended in 2005, no longer specifically lists the prohibited characteristics; instead, C.C. 51.5 refers to those characteristics listed or defined in C.C. 51 (see text and Supp., supra, §898). (b) Cartwright Act. B. & P.C. 16721 and 16721.5, as amended in 2007, no longer specifically list the prohibited characteristics; instead, both statutes refer to those characteristics listed or defined in C.C. 51(b) (see text and Supp., supra, §898) or defined in C.C. 51(e). Both statutes still prohibit discrimination or refusal of service based on a person's lawful business associations.

B. & P.C. 16721.5, as amended in 2008, now refers to dealing with "another person" instead of "any other person."

8 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
d. Activities Covered.
3. Racial Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 907

[§ 907] Racial Discrimination.

In Winchell v. English (1976) 62 C.A.3d 125, 133 C.R. 20, plaintiffs, white tenants of defendants' mobilehome court, had been given permission to sublease to others. The complaint alleged that defendants discriminated against plaintiffs because plaintiffs subleased to, and associated with, black persons. Held, a cause of action was stated. The broad language of C.C. 52 (infra, §914) does more than protect a person who is the immediate object of the discrimination; by prohibiting discrimination "on account of" color, it applies to discrimination against white persons on account of their association with black persons. (62 C.A.3d 129.)

In Green v. Rancho Santa Margarita Mortg. Co. (1994) 28 C.A.4th 686, 33 C.R.2d 706, plaintiffs, a black couple with a monthly income of over $ 16,000 and considerable assets, went to a mortgage broker to obtain a loan for the purchase of a new house. An officer at the broker told plaintiffs that she could not find a lender who would accept them. Plaintiffs brought the present action for racial discrimination in violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, and the jury awarded them $ 150,000 in damages. Held, affirmed.

(a) Until recently, discrimination cases have been analyzed as a sort of game of "hot potato." The plaintiff had the burden of making a prima facie case. The defendant then had the burden of showing a nondiscriminatory reason for its treatment of the plaintiff. If it failed in carrying that burden, the plaintiff won. If it succeeded, however, the burden then shifted back to the plaintiff to show that the defendant's reason was only a pretext. In St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S.Ct. 2742, 125 L.Ed.2d 407, supra, §870, decided after the trial in the present case, the U.S. Supreme Court pointed out a flaw in the way this game operated: If the plaintiff was able to show that the defendant's articulated reason was false, the plaintiff won, even though the defendant's real reason might not be discriminatory. For this reason the Court held that "the mere rejection by the trier of fact of a defendant's proffered reason still did not relieve the plaintiff of the necessity of proving actual discrimination." (28 C.A.4th 695.)

(b) St. Mary's Honor Center however, is inapplicable in the present case. "Any error in the verdict forms in allowing the Greens to prevail on an unrebutted prima facie case--that is, simply an inference of discrimination--was waived by the mortgage broker." Defendant asserts neither that it objected to the special verdict forms, nor that the forms did not truly reflect the law at the time. Defendant's own brief reflected the idea that plaintiffs should win if the jury disbelieved defendant's "explanation." (28 C.A.4th 696.)

(c) Question three of the special verdict forms asked the jury whether defendant properly submitted home loan applications from nonminorities with financial qualifications similar to plaintiffs' and those loans were approved by lenders. The jury's affirmative response to this question helped establish plaintiffs' prima facie case, and it was supported by substantial, if somewhat scattered, evidence. But even if the evidence was lacking in this respect, plaintiffs established a prima facie case quite independent of question three. "The central fact largely ignored by the mortgage broker is that it could have found the Greens a loan. Ninety percent of 'B' lenders and 100 percent of 'C' lenders would have made a loan. The Greens testified that they put no restrictions on the level of lender--they simply wanted a loan under the best terms they could get. ... The explanation that was given--that the Greens artificially restricted the loan search to 'A' lenders--was simply rejected as untrue by the jury. ... [T]he jury's verdict does not reflect merely the outcome of an artificial game of legal hot potato, but the valid and un rebutted possibility of race discrimination." (28 C.A.4th 698, 699.) (See Jackson v. Superior Court (1994) 30 C.A.4th 936, 36 C.R.2d 207, supra, §899.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

9 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
d. Activities Covered.
4. Housing Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 908

[§ 908] Housing Discrimination.

(1) Discrimination Against Children. In Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 C.3d 721, 736, 180 C.R. 496, 640 P.2d 115, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §683, discrimination against children by the lessor of a private apartment complex was held a violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act. And in O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Assn. (1983) 33 C.3d 790, 794, 191 C.R. 320, 662 P.2d 427, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §116, the Marina Point holding was applied to prevent a condominium homeowners association from engaging in similar discrimination. (See San Jose Country Club Apartments v. Santa Clara (1982) 137 C.A.3d 948, 952, 187 C.R. 493 [ordinance prohibiting discrimination against children was upheld on authority of Marina Point]; Sunrise Country Club Assn. v. Proud (1987) 190 C.A.3d 377, 380, 382, 235 C.R. 404, Real Property, §116 [Act prohibits only unreasonable, arbitrary, or invidious discrimination; condominium rules dividing development into "Adult" and "Family" regions were not unreasonable or arbitrary and were valid, although outright prohibition of sale to owners with children was invalid]; Bliler v. Covenant Control Com. (1988) 205 C.A.3d 18, 26, 252 C.R. 50; Huntington Landmark Adult Community Assn. v. Ross (1989) 213 C.A.3d 1012, 1018, 261 C.R. 875; 94 Harv. L. Rev. 1829; 71 Cal. L. Rev. 1234; 15 Cal. Western L. Rev. 219; 11 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 609; 17 San Diego L. Rev. 403; 19 Santa Clara L. Rev. 21.)

The Legislature subsequently clarified the decisions in Marina Point and O'Connor, by adding C.C. 51.2 and 51.3 to the Unruh Civil Rights Act. (C.C. 51.2(b).) Under C.C. 51.2(a), C.C. 51 must "be construed to prohibit a business establishment from discriminating in the sale or rental of housing based upon age."

(1) Senior Housing. Special rules apply to senior housing:

(a) Where accommodations are designed to meet the physical and social needs of senior citizens, they may be preserved as such pursuant to C.C. 51.3, unless preempted by the federal Fair Housing Act amendments regarding discrimination on the basis of familial status. Accommodations constructed before February 8, 1982, that meet the criteria for senior citizen housing specified in C.C. 51.3, may be established and preserved as such without the development "being designed to meet the physical and social needs of senior citizens." (C.C. 51.2(a)) A housing development for senior citizens constructed on or after January 1, 2001, is presumed to be designed to meet the needs of senior citizens if it includes statutorily prescribed elements. (C.C. 51.2(d).)

(b) "The covenants, conditions, and restrictions and other documents or written policy shall set forth the limitations on occupancy, residency, or use on the basis of age." (C.C. 51.3(c).) However, the limitations must not be more exclusive than the following:

(1) One resident in each "dwelling unit" may be required to be a "senior citizen"; other residents may be a "qualified permanent resident," a "permitted health care resident," or a person under 55 years who is exempted because of long-term residency. (C.C. 51.3(c); for definitions, see C.C. 51.3(b)(1) ["qualifying resident" or "senior citizen"], C.C. 51.3(b)(2) ["qualified permanent resident"], C.C. 51.3(b)(4) ["senior citizen housing development"], C.C. 51.3(b)(5) ["dwelling unit" or "housing"], C.C. 51.3(b)(6) ["cohabitant"], C.C. 51.3(b)(7) ["permitted health care resident"]; on grandfathering in of long-term residents, see C.C. 51.3(h), 51.4(b).)

(2) Temporary residency of a person less than 55 years of age for not less than 60 days in any calendar year. (C.C. 51.3(d).)

(3) The death, dissolution of marriage, hospitalization, or other prolonged absence of the qualifying resident cannot preclude any qualified permanent resident from continuing residency. (C.C. 51.3(e).)

(4) The development must have been developed and initially put to use as a senior citizen housing development or have been substantially rehabilitated or renovated and immediately used for senior citizen housing. Developments constructed before January 1, 1985, are exempt. (C.C. 51.3(f).)

These statutes do not apply to Riverside County. (See C.C. 51.2(c), 51.3(k), 51.4(e); for senior housing in Riverside County, see C.C. 51.10, 51.11.) (On age-based preferences generally, see infra, §909.)

(2) Mobilehomes. The management of a mobilehome park may require a prospective purchaser to comply with rules and regulations "limiting residency based on age requirements for housing for older persons," provided these rules and regulations comply with the federal Fair Housing Act. (C.C. 798.76; on Fair Housing Act, see supra, §851.)

In Schmidt v. Superior Court (1989) 48 C.3d 370, 383, 256 C.R. 750, 769 P.2d 932, the court upheld the validity of a regulation limiting residence in the park to persons 25 years or older. In concluding that C.C. 798.76 was not in conflict with the antidiscrimination policy of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, the court reviewed the legislative history and came to the following conclusion on legislative intent: "[A]lthough A.B. 3909, as originally introduced, proposed a modification of section 798.76 which would have imposed the same limitations in mobilehome parks as in all other housing, the Legislature eliminated that proposed modification of section 798.76 in the course of its deliberation and instead adopted a comprehensive legislative package which defined 'housing' to specifically exclude mobilehome developments. In light of this history, we think that it is inescapable that one of the compromises reached in the legislative process was to exclude mobilehome parks--the one category of housing as to which there was an already existing statutory provision--from the reach of the new Unruh Act provisions." (48 C.3d 387.) (See Colony Cove Associates v. Brown (1990) 220 C.A.3d 195, 199, 203, 269 C.R. 234 [mobilehome park rule limiting residence to persons 55 years or older was not invalid under federal Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988; although federal statute generally prohibits discrimination in housing on basis of "familial status," exception is allowed for "housing for older persons"].)

(3) Housing for Homeless Youth. Housing for homeless youth is authorized and does not constitute unlawful age discrimination, notwithstanding other provisions of law and local housing or age discrimination ordinances. (See Govt.C. 11139.3.)

(4) Landlord Discrimination Against Homosexuals. Under the reasoning of Marina Point, homosexuals are protected under the Act from arbitrary discrimination in rental of housing. (Hubert v. Williams (1982) 133 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 3, 184 C.R. 161.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

10 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.

d. Activities Covered.

5. (New) Marital Status Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 908A

[§ 908A] (New) Marital Status Discrimination.

In Koebke v. Bernardo Heights Country Club (2005) 36 C.4th 824, 31 C.R.3d 565, 115 P.3d 1212, plaintiffs, a lesbian couple who had registered as domestic partners, claimed that defendant country club's refusal to extend to them the same benefits it extends to married members constituted marital status discrimination under the Unruh Civil Rights Act, C.C. 51. The trial court granted defendant summary judgment and the Court of Appeal affirmed. Held, reversed. Defendant is not entitled to summary judgment on the marital status discrimination claim. Under the Domestic Partner Act, effective in 2005, plaintiffs must be treated the same as spouses for purposes of the Unruh Civil Rights Act. Further, although defendant's spousal benefit policy did not constitute impermissible marital status or sexual orientation discrimination on its face prior to enactment of the Domestic Partner Act, plaintiffs adduced sufficient evidence of unequal application of defendant's policy to allow them to proceed under the Unruh Civil Rights Act on that theory.

(a) Under the Domestic Partner Act, Family C. 297 et seq., registered domestic partners have the same rights and protections granted to spouses. The Act is to be "construed liberally." It uses the broadest terms possible to grant domestic partners the same rights and responsibilities as spouses in specified areas of the law. (36 C.4th 838.)

(b) Under the Unruh Civil Rights Act, all persons within state jurisdiction "no matter what their sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, or medical condition are entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments of every kind whatsoever." The protections of the Act are not confined to the enumerated categories; these categories are illustrative. (36 C.4th 839.) In Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, the court created a three-part framework for determining whether a future claim of discrimination involving a category not enumerated in C.C. 51 should be cognizable under the Act. (36 C.4th 840.) Thus, the court must consider the following:

(1) Whether marital status involves personal characteristics. Like the categories listed in the statute and those added by judicial construction, marital status represents "traits, conditions, decisions, or choices fundamental to a person's identity, beliefs and self-definition." (36 C.4th 842.) Although there is a strong public policy favoring marriage, the Legislature has granted legal recognition comparable to marriage to registered domestic partners "both procedurally and in terms of the substantive rights and obligations granted to and imposed upon the partners, which are supported by policy considerations similar to those that favor marriage." (36 C.4th 845.) Thus, "permitting a business to discriminate against registered domestic partners by denying them benefits or services it extends to spouses violates the comparable public policy favoring domestic partnership" and "is a type of discrimination that falls within the ambit of the Act." (36 C.4th 846.)

(2) Whether the restriction of benefits to married couples serves a legitimate business interest. "Registered domestic partners occupy a legal status that, like marital status, is formalized, public and verifiable." Hence, a business is not required to intrude into a couple's private life to determine whether the union has "a sufficient assurance of permanence and legal unity of interests to extend benefits formerly reserved for spouses." And, because registered domestic partners have legal rights and responsibilities, businesses extending them benefits "have the same assurance against loss or fraud" that they would have in the case of spouses. Further, while promoting a "family-friendly" environment "may be a legitimate business interest, that interest is not furthered by excluding families formed through domestic partnership." (36 C.4th 847.)

(3) The consequences of allowing plaintiffs' claim to proceed. Because this ruling affects only registered domestic partners, it would not permit other unmarried couples to claim discrimination, and it would effectuate "the Legislature's intent expressed in the Domestic Partner Act to create substantial legal equality between registered domestic partners and spouses." (36 C.4th 848.)

(c) Discrimination "based on marital status implicates discrimination against homosexuals who, as the Legislature recognized in the Domestic Partner Act, have been subject to widespread discrimination. ... [O]ne purpose served by expanding the rights of domestic partners is to combat such discrimination." (36 C.4th 849.)

(d) Before the effective date of the Domestic Partner Act, legitimate business interests facially justified defendant's spousal benefit policy. Defendant sought to strike a balance between attracting and maintaining members and preventing overutilization of its facilities. Defendant "could reasonably have concluded that these goals would best be served by extending certain benefits to families created through marriage but not to unmarried couples and individuals." (36 C.4th 851.) Prior to the Domestic Partner Act, a marriage license was the clearest method by which defendant "could distinguish among its members in order to extend benefits to some, but not to others, and achieve its larger goals." Defendant's failure to make finer distinctions than married and unmarried, "even though it may have resulted in some degree of unfairness to committed couples like plaintiffs, did not on its face constitute impermissible marital status discrimination." (36 C.4th 852.)

(e) Likewise, prior to the current Domestic Partner Act, defendant's spousal benefit policy did not facially violate the proscription in the Unruh Civil Rights Act against sexual orientation discrimination. The language of the Unruh Civil Rights Act suggests that it protects against intentional acts of discrimination in providing public accommodations. (36 C.4th 853.) However, evidence of disparate impact can be admitted in Unruh Civil Rights Act cases where it is probative of intentional acts of discrimination. Here, there is evidence that defendant did not apply its facially neutral policy in an impartial manner, and that defendant's directors were motivated by animus towards plaintiffs because of their sexual orientation. Thus, plaintiffs should be allowed to try to establish that defendant's spousal benefit policy was discriminatorily applied in violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act prior to 2005. (36 C.4th 854.)

One justice dissented from the majority's conclusion that legitimate business interests facially justified defendant's spousal benefit policy prior to the effective date of the current Domestic Partner Act. (36 C.4th 855.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

11 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
d. Activities Covered.
6. (New) Sexual Orientation Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 908B

[§ 908B] (New) Sexual Orientation Discrimination.

In North Coast Women's Care Med. Group v. Superior Court (2008) 44 C.4th 1145, 81 C.R.3d 708, 189 P.3d 959, plaintiff, a lesbian, after undergoing fertility treatments at defendant medical group, sought intrauterine insemination. Two group doctors refused to perform the procedure for religious reasons, and two other group doctors, who had no religious objection, were not licensed to perform the procedure. Plaintiff was referred to another doctor outside the practice. Plaintiff sued the group and the objecting doctors for sexual orientation discrimination in violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, C.C. 51. The court concluded that the rights of religious freedom and free speech, as guaranteed by both the U.S. and California Constitutions, did not exempt the medical group's physicians from complying with the Act.

(a) The U.S. Supreme Court, in Employment Div., Dept. of Human Resources of Oregon v. Smith (1988) 485 U.S. 660, 108 S.Ct. 1444, 99 L.Ed.2d 753, text, §523, held that "a religious objector has no federal constitutional right to an exemption from a neutral and valid law of general applicability on the ground that compliance with the law is contrary to the objector's religious beliefs." This holding was applied in Catholic Charities of Sacramento v. Superior Court (2004) 32 C.4th 527, 10 C.R.3d 283, 85 P.3d 67, text, §528, to reject a claim by an employer affiliated with the Roman Catholic Church that it was exempt from complying with the Women's Contraceptive Equity Act. (44 C.4th 1155.)

(b) Smith is also applicable here. The Unruh Civil Rights Act is a "neutral and valid law of general applicability." It requires business establishments to provide "full and equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services" to all persons notwithstanding their sexual orientation. Hence, the First Amendment right to the free exercise of religion does not exempt defendants from conforming their conduct to the Act's antidiscrimination requirements, even if compliance poses an incidental conflict with their religious beliefs. (44 C.4th 1156.)

(c) Smith does not control a challenge under the California Constitution. However, even under a strict scrutiny test, defendants' claim of exemption fails. The Unruh Civil Rights Act "furtheres California's compelling interest in ensuring full and equal access to medical treatment irrespective of sexual orientation, and there are no less restrictive means for the state to achieve that goal." (44 C.4th 1158.)

On marriage between persons of the same sex, see Supp., supra, §226A.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

12 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
e. Distinctions.
1. Age-Based Preferences.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 909

[§ 909] Age-Based Preferences.

In Starkman v. Mann Theatres Corp. (1991) 227 C.A.3d 1491, 278 C.R. 543, plaintiffs, who were neither adults of 60 or over nor children of 12 or under, paid the $ 6 general admission price for tickets at defendant's theatre. They then brought this action alleging that the theater's pricing policy of 50% discount to senior citizens and children was a violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act. Held, summary judgment for defendant affirmed.

(a) In Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 C.3d 24, 219 C.R. 133, 707 P.2d 195, the court found sex-based discounts illegal, but fully approved age-based discounts, pointing out that differential treatment of children and adults was supported by public policy and federal and state legislation. (227 C.A.3d 1498.)

(b) "Establishing different price rates for seniors and children in an amusement business does not perpetuate irrational stereotypes. The pricing discounts are aimed directly at encouraging attendance at a family-oriented business. Such classifications recognize that without such incentives these populations may be totally excluded from enjoying some of the pleasures of our society. Paying for the necessities of life frequently strains the pocketbooks of many Americans. Without discount tickets, a family may never be able to afford and enjoy a baseball game, amusement parks, Disneyland, the zoo, museums, campgrounds, state fairs, parks or a movie. Making these American pastimes affordable is beneficial to us all." (227 C.A.3d 1499.)

(c) "All members of society regardless of their sex, race, religion or national origin will, in the normal course of events, be members of each class entitled to the discount. This is neither arbitrary, discriminatory nor unfair." (227 C.A.3d 1501.)

Koire and Starkman were followed in Sargoy v. Resolution Trust Corp. (1992) 8 C.A.4th 1039, 10 C.R.2d 889, which involved an action against a savings and loan that offered higher interest rates to senior citizens. Held, age-based preferences based on a strong public policy do not violate the Unruh Civil Rights Act. (8 C.A.4th 1043.) The opinion adds two instructive comments:

(a) "Although most states have public accommodations statutes similar to the Unruh Act and comparable federal legislation has also been enacted, no case law from any other jurisdiction has been found which prohibits the favorable treatment of senior citizens." (8 C.A.4th 1046.)

(b) "Should this court reverse the trial court's decision, every discount or preference offered senior citizens would be placed in jeopardy by eliminating countless socially beneficial practices. Such a result would have a profound impact on the quality of life enjoyed by senior citizens throughout the state. The fundamental purpose of the Unruh Act is the elimination of antisocial discriminatory practices--not the elimination of socially beneficial ones." (8 C.A.4th 1049.) (On housing reserved for seniors or homeless youths, see supra, §908.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.106

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Pizarro v. Lamb's Players Theatre (2006) 135 C.A.4th 1171, 1174, 37 C.R.3d 859 [offering discount to baby boomers to attend production about that generation did not involve arbitrary class-based generalization prohibited by Unruh Civil Rights Act].

13 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.

e. Distinctions.

2. Classification Based on Marital Status.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 910

[§ 910] Classification Based on Marital Status.

In Beatty v. Truck Ins. Exchange (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1455, 8 C.R.2d 593, the issue was whether an insurer violated the Unruh Civil Rights Act when it refused to offer a couple cohabiting in a homosexual relationship the same insurance policy and at the same premium that it regularly offered to married couples. Plaintiffs had lived together for 18 years, owned a home as joint tenants, maintained a joint credit card account and a joint bank account, jointly owned two cars and the furnishings in their home, and had wills and life insurance policies naming each other as primary beneficiary. They also had joint homeowners and automobile insurance policies issued by defendant. However, to provide extended additional protection, they applied to defendant for a joint umbrella liability insurance policy in the amount of $ 1 million. Defendant refused to issue the policy for a single premium because these policies are issued only to married couples. Instead, defendant offered plaintiffs separate umbrella policies, each with its own premium. Plaintiffs refused the offer, and filed an action seeking damages and injunctive and declaratory relief, contending that defendant's conduct was an arbitrary and unlawful discrimination. Held, judgment for defendant on demurrer affirmed.

(a) This case is similar to Hinman v. Department of Personnel Administration (1985) 167 C.A.3d 516, 213 C.R. 410, supra, §785, an action brought by the same plaintiffs. In Hinman, the court rejected plaintiffs' claims, pointing out that the insurer's denial of coverage was not on the basis of sexual orientation but on the basis of marital status, and holding that the classification was valid. (6 C.A.4th 1455.) Plaintiffs argued that, because Hinman was decided on the constitutional Equal Protection Clause, the decision was not controlling on the issue of interpretation of the Act. But the same conclusion must be reached on either theory.

(b) To the extent that plaintiffs are treated in a manner different from the treatment of a married couple, it is because they are not married, not because they are homosexuals. (6 C.A.4th 1460, 1461.)

(c) The Act has been extended to include categories not expressly stated in C.C. 51 and 52; but no court has extended it to claimed discrimination on the basis of marital status. (6 C.A.4th 1462.) And in Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, infra, §912, the court made it clear that future expansion of prohibited categories should be carefully weighed to insure a result consistent with the legislative intent. (6 C.A.4th 1462.) To expand the Act to include "marital status" would be contrary to the strong policy in this state in favor of marriage. (6 C.A.4th 1462.)

(d) There are many statutes in which the Legislature has included "marital status" in antidiscrimination legislation. "Clearly the Legislature knows how to designate marital status as a prohibited category of discrimination when inclined to do so." (6 C.A.4th 1463.)

(e) C.C. 51 states that the section must not be construed to confer any right or privilege on a person that is applicable alike to persons of every sex, color, etc. (See supra, §898.) This indicates that the Act was not intended to create a right of insurance access so long as the insurer's policy is applicable alike to all persons regardless of sex, etc. (6 C.A.4th 1463.)

(f) The Act prohibits "arbitrary" discrimination; but there is nothing arbitrary about defendant's issuance of joint umbrella policies only to married persons. "Given the legal unity of interest and the shared responsibilities attendant upon a marriage, an insurer could reasonably conclude there is no significant risk in covering both an insured and his or her spouse with a joint policy for a single premium. With regard to unmarried couples of whatever sexual orientation, an insurer could conclude the relationship lacks the assurance of permanence necessary to assess with confidence the risks insured against in a joint umbrella policy." (6 C.A.4th 1464.) "Equally important, the shared responsibilities and the legal unity of interest ... provides a fair and reasonable means of determining eligibility for services or benefits." (6 C.A.4th 1464.)

(g) "[T]o assess the risk with regard to unmarried individuals, the insurer would necessarily be required to undertake a 'massive intrusion' ... into the private lives of applicants--e.g., inquire into their sexual fidelity and emotional and economic ties. ... We see no reason why an insurer, any more than an administrative agency, should be forced to engage in such inquiry, which could only lead to inconsistent results and predictably to allegations of discriminatory treatment by the insurer." (6 C.A.4th 1465.)

(h) What plaintiffs seek to achieve by this litigation is that both defendant and this court treat them as if they were in fact married. This result would not only be contrary to the strong policy favoring marriage but would ignore the fact that de facto couples are not generally entitled to the benefits afforded to married couples. "[M]arried couples receive special consideration in a number of areas not available to unmarried individuals, including the right to bring a wrongful death action if a third party kills the other spouse ... , the right to sue for loss of consortium and negligent infliction of emotional distress ... , the marital communications privilege ... , and community property laws, including the right to divide community property and to seek spousal support on the termination of marriage." (6 C.A.4th 1466.)

(i) In the final analysis, plaintiffs' quarrel is with the Legislature. They may achieve the reform they seek only by attacking C.C. 4100 (now Family C. 300), which defines marriage as a civil contract "between a man and a woman." (6 C.A.4th 1466.) (On applicability of Fair Employment and Housing Act to marital status discrimination, see infra, §941.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.C. 51, as amended in 2005, now prohibits discrimination based on marital status.

14 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS E. California Civil Rights Legislation. 2. Unruh Civil Rights Act. e. Distinctions. 3. Nonsmokers.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 911

[§ 911] Nonsmokers.

In King v. Hofer (1996) 42 C.A.4th 678, 49 C.R.2d 719, plaintiff brought an action under the Unruh Act based on defendant restaurant owner's alleged discrimination against nonsmokers. Held, applying the test enunciated in Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R.2d 614, 805 P.2d 873, infra, §912, summary judgment for defendant affirmed. Nonsmokers are not a protected class under the Act.

(a) Nonsmoking is not an immutable "physical attribute" that carries a negative connotation in the usual social setting. Nor is it a "personal belief," equatable with religion, the only express "belief" category in the Act. (42 C.A.4th 683.)

(b) There is no authority or history suggesting that the Act was designed to deal with health and safety in public accommodations. In re Cox (1970) 3 C.3d 205, 90 C.R. 24, 474 P.2d 992, supra, §899, is distinguishable, because Cox dealt with protection of persons having an "unconventional" appearance, while the nonsmokers involved here have a "conventional" appearance. (42 C.A.4th 683.)

(c) Discrimination against nonsmokers serves legitimate business interests. By so discriminating, the restaurant is complying with local ordinances, maintaining order, and protecting its reputation, all legitimate business interests. (42 C.A.4th 684.)

(d) Making nonsmokers a protected class would place restaurants in a bind. Discrimination against them would be both required under local ordinances and prohibited under the Act. (42 C.A.4th 684.)

(e) Finally, granting protected status to nonsmokers would divide the entire world into smokers and nonsmokers, categories that are often difficult to recognize. (42 C.A.4th 684.) (On accommodation under Fair Employment and Housing Act of employee with respiratory sensitivity to tobacco smoke, see Fresno v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1991) 226 C.A.3d 1541, 277 C.R. 557, infra, §937.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

15 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS E. California Civil Rights Legislation. 2. Unruh Civil Rights Act. e. Distinctions. 4. Economic Criteria.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 912

[§ 912] Economic Criteria.

In Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, plaintiffs, female heads of low income families whose income consisted of public assistance benefits, filed a representative action against defendant owners and operators of apartment buildings, challenging their minimum income policy as economic and sex discrimination. Defendants had an express written policy that prospective tenants must have a monthly income equal to or greater than three times the rent charged. Plaintiffs alleged that they could afford to pay the rent but did not have incomes equal to three times the rent; and they contended that the policy was grounded on unsubstantiated assumptions and had a disparate impact on women. The trial court gave judgment for defendants on demurrer. Held, affirmed.

(a) Economic discrimination.

(1) Prior decisions of Supreme Court. In re Cox (1970) 3 C.3d 205, 90 C.R. 24, 474 P.2d 992, supra, §899, Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 C.3d 721, 180 C.R. 496, 640 P.2d 115, supra, §898, and other cases construed the Unruh Act to apply to several classifications not expressed in the statute. (52 C.3d 1155.) Nevertheless, the Legislature "has continued to pay close attention to the specified categories of discrimination," and its addition of new categories reflects the continued importance of the categories in interpreting the Act. (52 C.3d 1158, 1159.)

(2) Statutory language. The doctrine of ejusdem generis allows the court to reconcile the plain language of the statute with the holdings of prior cases and the Legislature's reactions. C.C. 51 refers to the freedom and equality of all persons and then illustrates the reference with the specific categories of race, color, religion, etc. "The categories involve personal as opposed to economic characteristics--a person's geographical origin, physical attributes, and personal beliefs. Conspicuously absent from the list is any reference to financial or economic status, although the Legislature could not have been unaware throughout the history of the Unruh Act that businesses make charges for goods and services and impose financial conditions on access to their establishments." (52 C.3d 1160.) Moreover: "The parties have cited no case nor has our research disclosed any in which distinctions based on financial or economic status (as opposed to personal characteristics) have been subjected to scrutiny under the Act. Although most states have public accommodations statutes similar to the Unruh Act and comparable federal legislation has also been enacted, there appears to be no case law from any jurisdiction supporting the proposition that economic distinctions are proscribed."

(52 C.3d 1161.)

(3) Legitimate business interest. Business establishments have an obvious and important interest in obtaining full and timely payment for the goods and services they provide, and California appellate cases have recognized that this interest may justify limitations on consumer access to public accommodations. (52 C.3d 1162, 1163.) The minimum income policy is similar in purpose and effect to stated prices or payment terms. "In pursuit of the objective of securing payment, a landlord has a legitimate and direct economic interest in the income level of prospective tenants, as opposed to their sex, race, religion, or other personal beliefs or characteristics. For nearly all tenants, current income is the source of the monthly rental payment. When a tenant ceases paying rent during the term of the tenancy, the landlord must resort to legal process to obtain possession of the premises and to collect any back rent that may be due." (52 C.3d 1163.) The policy of screening out prospective tenants who are likely to default assumes that, at some ratio of rent to income, the burden of paying rent along with other living expenses will impose a hardship and result in default. It is not arbitrary in the way that race and sex discrimination are arbitrary; "it is based on the rational economic interest of the landlord to minimize defaults and maintain the solvency of his business establishment." (52 C.3d 1164.)

(4) Consequences of allowing claims for economic discrimination. Plaintiffs contend that the policy is arbitrary because it "stereotypes" them instead of treating them as individuals. But their proposed interpretation would involve the courts in a multitude of "microeconomic decisions" that they are ill equipped to make; the trial "would devolve into a battle of economic studies and experts, with each side arguing from statistical and other evidence in support of its favorite criteria." (52 C.3d 1166.) Moreover, plaintiffs' argument is not one readily confined to landlords and tenants; many other businesses, including lending institutions and retail and wholesale sellers, use minimum income policies as well as other financial criteria to make risk-oriented decisions regarding what customers to deal with and on what terms. (52 C.3d 1167.) For these reasons, the economics of credit practices have "traditionally been left to the guidance of market forces or to specific legislative and administrative action designed to address particular grievances." (52 C.3d 1167.) The individualized determinations proposed by plaintiffs "may have pernicious effects on the antidiscrimination policy of the Unruh Act itself." (52 C.3d 1168.) Instead of encouraging landlords and other businesses to rely on "criteria that are race-and sex-neutral" in making business decisions, plaintiffs would challenge the criteria on a case-by-case basis, "thereby inducing landlords to abandon such criteria in favor of subjective, individualized decisions." These evaluations might serve to disguise and thereby promote the very kinds of invidious discrimination that the Act prohibits. (52 C.3d 1169.)

(b) Sex discrimination based on disparate impact on women.

(1) Allegations of disparate impact. Plaintiffs alleged that a disproportionate number of families receiving public assistance are headed by women; that women generally have lower average incomes than men; that defendants' minimum income policy excludes a disproportionate number of female-headed households from the pool of applications to whom defendants will rent units; and that this constitutes sex discrimination because of an alleged disparate impact. (52 C.3d 1170.)

(2) Nature of disparate impact test. The disparate impact test, as developed in federal law in cases like Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S.Ct. 849, 28 L.Ed.2d 158, supra, §869, and Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 109 S.Ct. 2115, 104 L.Ed.2d 733, supra, §870, allows a plaintiff in certain contexts to establish a prima facie case of discrimination by showing that a defendant's policies or practices have an adverse impact on a statutorily protected class of persons such as women, Blacks, and Hispanics. The test originated in, and continues to apply, in employment discrimination cases. (52 C.3d 1170, 1171.) California appellate courts have applied the test under the Fair Employment and Housing Act in employment discrimination cases like Ibarbia v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 1318, 237 C.R. 92, infra, §923, and San Francisco v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 976, 236 C.R. 716, infra, §923. (52 C.3d 1171.)

(3) Disparate impact test does not apply to Unruh Civil Rights Act. Nothing in the language or history of the Unruh Civil Rights Act indicates a legislative intent to use the test. The language of the Act suggests that only intentional acts of discrimination are covered; and the damages provisions reveal a desire to punish intentional and morally offensive conduct. (52 C.3d 1172.) Moreover, the Unruh Act is part of a large body of federal and state legislation dealing with public accommodations, and no case has been found in which a disparate impact test was used in applying any of these statutes. (52 C.3d 1173.)

(c) Conclusion. "[A] plaintiff seeking to establish a case under the Unruh Act must plead and prove intentional discrimination in public accommodations in violation of the terms of the Act. A disparate impact analysis or test does not apply to Unruh Act claims. In so holding, we do not preclude the admission of relevant evidence of disparate impact in Unruh Act cases on proper foundation and subject to the general rules of evidence. Because such evidence may be probative of intentional discrimination in some cases, a blanket rule of exclusion cannot be justified. In addition, we express no view as to whether a disparate or adverse impact test applies to housing, employment, or other discrimination claims under the FEHA or any other provision of law." (52 C.3d 1175.)

Two justices dissented in two opinions. (52 C.3d 1176.) (See 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 230; 29 Western State L. Rev. 1 [Unruh Act after Harris].)

In Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 C.A.4th 530, 30 C.R.2d 706, defendant medical building operators had a policy of leasing offices only to medical doctors. Plaintiff, a podiatrist, brought the present action, alleging that defendants' refusal to lease to him constituted a violation of the Unruh Act. The trial judge granted defendants' motion for summary adjudication. Held, affirmed.

(a) A policy or classification that is otherwise permissible may nevertheless be illegal if it is merely a device to accomplish prohibited discrimination. However, there is no hint that defendants had any ulterior purpose, or that their policy was applied in light of plaintiff's race, sex, religion, or other personal characteristic. (25 C.A.4th 538.)

(b) The Act reaches discrimination involving "personal as opposed to economic characteristics--a person's geographical origin, physical attributes, and personal beliefs." Moreover, legitimate business interests may justify limitations on consumer access to public accommodations. (25 C.A.4th 539, quoting Harris, supra.) Here, defendants had an obvious legitimate business interest. "If operators of an office building perceive a niche in the market for a particular type of tenant, no useful purpose is to be served by our interfering with their economic decision to so limit the tenancy." (25 C.A.4th 539.) (On use of economic criteria for determining age discrimination under Fair Employment and Housing Act, see infra, §935.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

16 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
e. Distinctions.
5. Retaliatory Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 913

[§ 913] Retaliatory Discrimination.

In Vaughn v. Hugo Neu Proler Int. (1990) 223 C.A.3d 1612, 1617, 1619, 273 C.R. 426, the court held that plaintiff's claim under the Unruh Civil Rights Act stated a cause of action. Defendants had excluded her from their business because of her previous sex discrimination lawsuit against them.

In Gayer v. Polk Gulch (1991) 231 C.A.3d 515, 282 C.R. 556, plaintiff filed a complaint against defendant, a public drinking establishment, for violation of the Act. He alleged that defendant initially refused to serve him and later permanently excluded him in retaliation for a previous discrimination suit he had instituted against defendant. Held, judgment for defendant on demurrer affirmed.

(a) The Act has been held to prohibit discrimination based on several classifications not specifically enumerated in the statute. (231 C.A.3d 520, 521, citing Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 C.3d 721, 180 C.R. 496, 640 P.2d 115, supra, §898; In re Cox (1970) 3 C.3d 205, 217, 90 C.R. 24, 474 P.2d 992, supra, §899; and Vaughn.) But Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, supra, §912, decided after Vaughn was filed, concluded that coverage of the Act should be limited to discrimination based on personal characteristics. (231 C.A.3d 522.)

(b) "Appellant's argument is not completely without merit. The Act might indeed offer better protection for victims of class-based discrimination if an action for retaliatory discrimination were added to the list of remedies currently available under the Act." (231 C.A.3d 524.) However, the Legislature has not specifically included this protection. (231 C.A.3d 524.) And "[w]e refrain from amending the Act to so expand coverage thereunder, whether that expansion is based on individualized discrimination, a never before protected class of litigants, or on asserted needs of the statutory scheme." (231 C.A.3d 525.)

A dissenting justice disagreed, contending that the majority misread Harris, and that the holding in Vaughn should control. (231 C.A.3d 526, 527.) (See Scripps Clinic v. Superior Court (2003) 108 C.A.4th 917, 934, 134 C.R.2d 101 [following Gayer; retaliatory discrimination by medical group by terminating medical care of patients who file lawsuits against its doctors is not kind of discrimination covered by Act]; on retaliatory discrimination under Fair Employment and Housing Act, see infra, §940.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

17 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
2. Unruh Civil Rights Act.
f. Enforcement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 914

[§ 914] Enforcement.

(1) In General. A private action may be brought for actual damages, punitive damages (up to three times actual damages, but not less than $ 4000), and attorneys' fees, for each violation of C.C. 51 (see supra, §898), C.C. 51.5 (see supra, §906), or C.C. 51.6 (see supra, §905). (C.C. 52(a); see C.C. 52(h) ["actual damages" means special and general damages]; on action for damages for prohibited violence, see C.C. 52(b), supra, §895.)

The action may be brought in any court of competent jurisdiction, including small claims court, if the amount sought does not exceed its jurisdictional limits. (C.C. 52.2.) (For jury instructions relating to Unruh Act violations, see BAJI, No. 7.90 et seq.)

(2) Preventive Relief for Discriminatory Conduct. The Attorney General, a district or city attorney, or the person aggrieved by prohibited conduct may bring a civil action in the appropriate court by filing a complaint (a) signed by the officer or aggrieved person, (b) setting forth facts pertaining to the conduct, and (c) requesting preventive relief, including an application for a permanent or temporary injunction, a restraining order, or other order against the person or persons responsible for the conduct. (C.C. 52(c).)

A nonprofit corporation organized to secure equal housing opportunities is not an "aggrieved person" entitled to seek relief under C.C. 52(c). The term "person aggrieved," as used in the statute, refers to the actual victims of the discriminatory acts. (Midpeninsula Citizens for Fair Housing v. Westwood Investors (1990) 221 C.A.3d 1377, 1384, 1386, 271 C.R. 99.) However, a nonprofit corporation may have standing under the Unfair Competition Statute (see B. & P.C. 17204, 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §124) to seek injunctive relief to compel enforcement of the Unruh Act. (221 C.A.3d 1389, 1393.)

(3) Intervention by State. The Attorney General or a district or city attorney may intervene whenever an action has been commenced in any court seeking relief from the denial of equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment "on account of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or disability." Application to intervene must be timely and the intervening attorney must certify that the case is of "general public importance." On intervention, the state is entitled to the same relief as if it had instituted the action. (C.C. 52(d).)

(4) Cumulative Remedies. Actions under C.C. 52 are independent of other remedies or procedures available to an aggrieved party. (C.C. 52(e); see Wolitarisky v. Blue Cross of Calif. (1997) 53 C.A.4th 338, 61 C.R.2d 629 [C.C. 52(e) does not prevent arbitration of claim arising under Act, where parties agree to submit all disputes regarding insurer's decisions to arbitration].)

A person claiming to be aggrieved by an alleged unlawful practice in violation of C.C. 51 (supra, §898) or C.C. 51.7 (supra, §895) may also file a verified complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing, pursuant to Govt.C. 12948 (infra, §941). (C.C. 52(f).)

Discrimination may be a defense in an unlawful detainer action. (See Abstract Inv. Co. v. Hutchinson (1962) 204 C.A.2d 242, 248, 22 C.R. 309, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §682.)

(5) Matters Not Affected. C.C. 52 does not (a) require the alteration, repair, etc. of any new or existing structure beyond that otherwise required by law; or (b) augment, restrict, or alter in any way the authority of the State Architect to require construction, etc. (C.C. 52(g).)

(6) Immigration Status Is Irrelevant. A person's immigration status is irrelevant to the issue of liability for purposes of enforcing state labor, employment, civil rights, and employee housing laws. Thus, unless an inquiry into a person's immigration status is necessary to comply with federal immigration law, no such inquiry may be made to enforce those state laws. (C.C. 3339, Govt.C. 7285, Health & Saf.C. 24000, Lab.C. 1171.5; see 34 McGeorge L. Rev. 435 [discussing statutes].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.448 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. Intentional discrimination must be proved to recover damages under C.C. 52. (Gunther v. Lin (2006) 144 C.A.4th 223, 232, 234, 50 C.R.3d 317 [Legislature's addition of C.C. 51(f) in 1992 did not change judicial interpretation of triggering language of C.C. 52 made in Harris v. Capital Growth Investors XIV (1991) 52 C.3d 1142, 278 C.R. 614, 805 P.2d 873, text, §912].) However, to state a claim under C.C. 52, a plaintiff need not demonstrate that he or she affirmatively requested nondiscriminatory treatment and was refused. (Angelucci v. Century Supper Club (2007) 41 C.4th 160, 168, 59 C.R.3d 142, 158 P.3d 718 [involving price discounts for women at night club].)

See 36 McGeorge L. Rev. 661 [California disability antidiscrimination law--damages and notice].

18 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
a. Nature and Purpose of Act.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 915

[§ 915] Nature and Purpose of Act.

(1) Statutory Development. In 1959, California adopted a comprehensive police power measure prohibiting discrimination in employment, the California Fair Employment Practice Act (former Lab.C. 1410 et seq.). (See Bennett v. Borden (1976) 56 C.A.3d 706, 709, 128 C.R. 627; Mahdavi v. Fair Emp. Practice Com. (1977) 67 C.A.3d 326, 333, 136 C.R. 421.) The statute was repealed in 1980 and replaced by the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA). (Govt.C. 12900 et seq.; see infra, §916 et seq.)

(2) Legislative Policy. Govt.C. 12920 and 12921 contain the declarations of legislative policy.

Govt.C. 12920 states:

"It is hereby declared as the public policy of this state that it is necessary to protect and safeguard the right and opportunity of all persons to seek, obtain, and hold employment without discrimination or abridgment on account of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation."

"It is recognized that the practice of denying employment opportunity and discriminating in the terms of employment for these reasons foment domestic strife and unrest, deprives the state of the fullest utilization of its capacities for development and advancement, and substantially and adversely affects the interest of employees, employers, and the public in general."

"Further, the practice of discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, disability, or sexual orientation in housing accommodations is declared to be against public policy."

"It is the purpose of this part to provide effective remedies that will eliminate these discriminatory practices."

"This part shall be deemed an exercise of the police power of the state for the protection of the welfare, health, and peace of the people of this state."

Govt.C. 12921 adds: "The opportunity to seek, obtain, and hold employment without discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, disability, or any other basis" prohibited by C.C. 51 "is hereby recognized as and declared to be a civil right." (Govt.C. 12921(a).)

"The opportunity to seek, obtain and hold housing without discrimination because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation is hereby recognized as and declared to be a civil right." (Govt.C. 12921(b).)

(3) Relation to Other Antidiscrimination Provision. The FEHA must be liberally construed, and other antidiscrimination statutes, such as the Unruh Civil Rights Act (supra, §898), are not repealed "unless those provisions provide less protection" to the persons covered under the Act. (Govt.C. 12993(a).) Although the Legislature intends to displace local laws banning discrimination in employment and housing, it does not intend, "in any manner or way, to limit or restrict the application" of C.C. 51 (supra, §898), or C.C. 51.7 (see supra, §895). (Govt.C. 12993(c), 12993.5.) By expressly disclaiming a purpose to repeal other applicable state laws, the Legislature has manifested an intent to amplify, not abrogate, an employee's common law remedies for injuries relating to employment discrimination. (Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 C.3d 65, 75, 276 C.R. 130, 801 P.2d 373, infra, §952; on common law claim for wrongful termination of employment in violation of public policy, see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §242 et seq.) (See Citizens for Uniform Laws v. Contra Costa (1991) 233 C.A.3d 1468, 1470, 1475, 285 C.R. 456 [Act does not preempt county ordinance prohibiting discrimination against persons who test positive for HIV]; Caldwell v. Montoya (1995) 10 C.4th 972, 986, 42 C.R.2d 842, 897 P.2d 1320, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §353 [school board members who voted not to renew contract of school superintendent were immune under Govt.C. 820.2, despite fact that their action allegedly constituted race and age discrimination in violation of FEHA].)

(4) Commentary. Many articles discuss the FEHA and similar statutes in other states. (See 2 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §13:1 et seq. [actions involving housing discrimination]; 37 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 511 [study of low success rates for women and minorities charging employment discrimination and wrongful discharge]; 22 U.S.F. L. Rev. 317, 333 [arguing that Act applies to AIDS patients]; 31 U.S.F. L. Rev. 1017 [employment law in second appellate district]; 44 A.L.R.2d 1138 [fair employment statutes designed to eliminate discrimination in private employment]; 99 A.L.R.3d 154 [state laws prohibiting advertisements by job seekers identifying themselves by race, religion, national origin, sex, or age]; 37 A.L.R.5th 349 [state laws prohibiting religious discrimination in employment]; 63 Am.Jur. Trials 127 [defending employment discrimination cases]; 45A Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Job Discrimination §115 et seq.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.131, 141 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Commentary. See 36 McGeorge L. Rev. 871 [dissemination of FEHA standards].

19 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
b. Scope of Act.
1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 916

[§ 916] In General.

(1) General Coverage of Act. Regarding employment, the FEHA applies to employers, employees, employment agencies, and labor organizations. (See infra, §921 et seq.) With respect to examinations, non-job-related inquiries, etc., the prohibitions of the Act apply to licensing boards. (Govt.C. 12944.) Regarding housing, the Act applies to owners of housing accommodations. (See infra, §945 et seq.) (For definitions of "employee" and "employer," see infra, §§917, 918; on liability of supervisors, see infra, §§919, 928.)

(2) Liberal Construction. Nothing in the Act may be construed to afford to the protected classes fewer rights or remedies than the federal Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1988 and implementing regulations (see supra, §851), or state law on fair employment and housing as it existed prior to the effective date of the section. State laws purporting to require or permit an action that would be an unlawful practice under the FEHA are to that extent invalid. However, the Act may be construed to afford greater rights and remedies than federal law and other state laws. (Govt.C. 12955.6.) (See Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 C.4th 880, 894, 66 C.R.2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 [FEHA policy against age discrimination in employment is sufficiently substantial and fundamental to support tort claim for wrongful discharge by employers who are not statutorily exempt].)

(3) Nonemployees. For purposes of sexual harassment only (Govt.C. 12940(j), infra, §927 et seq.), an employer may be responsible for acts of nonemployees when the employer, or its agents or supervisors, knows or should have known of objectionable conduct and fails to take immediate corrective action. In reviewing claims involving acts of nonemployees, "the extent of the employer's control and other legal responsibility which the employer may have with respect to the conduct of those nonemployees shall be considered." (Govt.C. 12940(j)(1).) (See 76 Proof of Facts 3d 331 [liability for sexual harassment by customers or third parties].)

(4) Employment Agencies. "Employment agency" includes a "person undertaking for compensation to procure employees or opportunities to work." (Govt.C. 12926(e).)

(5) Labor Organizations. "Labor organization" includes an "organization that exists and is constituted for the purpose, in whole or in part, of collective bargaining or of dealing with employers concerning grievances, terms or conditions of employment, or of other mutual aid or protection." (Govt.C. 12926(g).)

(6) Licensing Boards. "Licensing board" means a "state board, agency, or authority in the State and Consumer Services Agency that has the authority to grant licenses or certificates which are prerequisites to employment eligibility or professional status." (Govt.C. 12944(f).)

(7) Disability. "Disability" includes, but is not limited to, those physical or mental disabilities defined in Govt.C. 12926. (Govt.C. 12955.3.) The term "mental disability" includes having, or being regarded or treated as having, or having had, a mental or psychological disorder or condition that limits a major life activity. (Govt.C. 12926(i).) The term "physical disability" includes having or being regarded or treated as having a "physiological disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss" that affects a specified body system or limits a major life activity. (Govt.C. 12926(k).) Neither mental nor physical disability includes "sexual behavior disorders, compulsive gambling, kleptomania, pyromania, or psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from the current use of controlled substances or other drugs." (Govt.C. 12926(i), (k)(6).)

(8) Familial Status. "Familial status" means one or more individuals under 18 years of age who reside with (a) a parent, (b) another person with care and legal custody, (c) a person who has been given care and legal custody of that individual by the state or a local agency, or (d) the designee of a parent or person with legal custody of that individual with written consent. The protections against discrimination on the basis of familial status also apply to persons who are pregnant, or are in the process of securing legal custody or of being given care and custody of an individual under 18 years of age. (Govt.C. 12955.2.)

(9) Illegal Aliens. "[T]he employment discrimination statutes apply to undocumented alien employees notwithstanding the illegality of employing them." (Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods (1998) 65 C.A.4th 833, 849, 77 C.R.2d 12, infra, §927.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Nonemployees. Govt.C. 12940(j)(1), as amended in 2003, clarifies existing law by providing explicit standards to determine employer liability for sexual harassment by nonemployees. Hence, it may be applied retroactively. (Carter v. California Dept. of Veterans Affairs (2006) 38 C.4th 914, 930, 44 C.R.3d 223, 135 P.3d 637.)

20 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
b. Scope of Act.
2. Employees.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 917

[§ 917] Employees.

(1) In General. "Employee" does not include (a) an individual employed by his or her parents, spouse, or child, or (b) an individual employed under a special license in a nonprofit sheltered workshop or rehabilitation facility. (Govt.C. 12926(c); see Shephard v. Loyola Marymount University (2002) 102 C.A.4th 837, 842, 125 C.R.2d 829 [issue of first impression; student athlete receiving athletic scholarship is not school employee under FEHA]; Estes v. Monroe (2004) 120 C.A.4th 1347, 1360, 16 C.R.3d 616 [FEHA does not cover claims of national guardsmen on state active duty when challenged personnel action is incident to military service].)

In Campbell v. Arco Marine (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1850, 50 C.R.2d 626, the court, applying the reasoning of Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. v. Arabian Amer. Oil Co. (1991) 499 U.S. 244, 111 S.Ct. 1227, 113 L.Ed.2d 274, supra, §855, held that the Act does not apply to nonresidents where the prohibited conduct occurred outside of California. Applying the FEHA in that situation would raise serious constitutional concerns under the Commerce, Due Process, and Full Faith and Credit clauses. (42 C.A.4th 1856.)

(2) Civil Service Employees. The Legislature intended that the Act cover state civil service employees; accordingly, the Department of Fair Employment and Housing and Fair Housing Commission have jurisdiction concurrently with the State Personnel Board over civil service discrimination complaints. (State Personnel Bd. v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1985) 39 C.3d 422, 427, 217 C.R. 16, 703 P.2d 354; see Ruiz v. Department of Corrections (2000) 77 C.A.4th 891, 897, 92 C.R.2d 139 [following State Personnel Bd.; civil service employee has option of pursuing administrative remedy either through State Personnel Board or DFEH, or both].) Likewise, an aggrieved municipal employee need not exhaust the internal remedies set out in a city charter before filing a complaint with the DFEH. (Schifando v. Los Angeles (2003) 31 C.4th 1074, 1089, 6 C.R.3d 457, 79 P.3d 569 [relying on State Personnel Bd. and approving Ruiz; it would be inconsistent with legislative purpose of expanding employee rights to require aggrieved employee to exhaust administrative remedies under city charter contemporaneously with or before filing claim with DFEH]; Williams v. Housing Authority of Los Angeles (2004) 121 C.A.4th 708, 727, 17 C.R.3d 374 [extending Schifando exemption to FEHA-related nonstatutory claim that might have preclusive effect on FEHA claim, but requiring exhaustion of administrative remedies for non-FEHA claims that are not related and have no preclusive effect on FEHA claim, such as breach of implied contract not to terminate].) But once a public employee chooses the civil service process and pursues it through evidentiary hearings to a proposed decision, the employee must exhaust the administrative and judicial remedies even if the statute of limitations will then preclude a FEHA action. (Page v. Los Angeles County Probation Dept. (2004) 123 C.A.4th 1135, 1142, 20 C.R.3d 598.) (On exhaustion of administrative remedies generally, see infra, §952.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Mendoza v. Ross (2005) 128 C.A.4th 625, 27 C.R.3d 452 [volunteer community service officer, who received no form of remuneration, was not "employee" and was not entitled to sue town for employment discrimination or wrongful termination under FEHA]; Bradley v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 C.A.4th 1612, 1627, 71 C.R.3d 222 [registry employee hired as temporary social worker at state prison was employee for purposes of FEHA even though she was not official employee of state for civil service and benefit purposes; amount of control employer exercises over person's work is important factor in determining who is employee for purposes of FEHA].

(2) Civil Service Employees. See Jenkins v. Riverside (2006) 138 C.A.4th 593, 616, 41 C.R.3d 686 [trial court did not err in granting defendant county's motion for summary judgment in action claiming disability discrimination and failure to accommodate where plaintiff was temporary employee whose discharge was based on exceeding number of hours she was authorized to work]; on equitable tolling of statute of limitations during voluntary pursuit of internal administrative remedy, see Supp., infra, §948.

21 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
b. Scope of Act.
3. Employers.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 918

[§ 918] Employers.

(1) In General. "Employer" for purposes of the antidiscrimination provisions of the Act, includes (a) a person regularly employing five or more persons, (b) a person acting as an agent of an employer, directly or indirectly, (c) the state or any of its political or civil subdivisions, and (d) cities. Excluded are (a) persons who do not regularly employ five or more persons, and (b) religious associations and nonprofit corporations. (Govt.C. 12926(d); see Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 C.4th 121, 135, 32 C.R.2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074, 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §248 [restriction of age discrimination liability to employers of five or more persons indicates intent not to establish fundamental public policy prohibiting age discrimination by employers of fewer than five persons]; International Union of Operating Engineers, Local No. 12 v. Fair Emp. Practice Com. (1969) 276 C.A.2d 504, 511, 81 C.R. 47 [labor union as employer]; Bohemian Club v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1986) 187 C.A.3d 1, 9, 231 C.R. 769, infra, §925 [private nonprofit social club is "employer" subject to antidiscrimination provisions of FEHA]; Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC (1998) 68 C.A.4th 727, 738, 80 C.R.2d 454 [parent corporation was not plaintiff's "employer" where it did not exercise control over subsidiary's employment decisions or over plaintiff, and operations of two corporations were not interrelated]; Vernon v. California (2004) 116 C.A.4th 114, 121, 10 C.R.3d 121 [state was not employer for purposes of liability under FEHA in action by firefighter whose employment was terminated because he could not meet policies mandated by CAL-OSHA regulations and his employer did not receive variance from those regulations; state did not pay or exert control over plaintiff or his employment opportunities].)

For purposes of the antiharassment provisions of the Act only, "employer" includes a person regularly employing one or more persons. The remainder of the definition of employer is the same as for the antidiscrimination statutes; and religious associations and nonprofit corporations are exempted. (Govt.C. 12940(j)(4); see infra, §§922, 927.)

Robinson v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1992) 2 C.4th 226, 5 C.R.2d 782, 825 P.2d 767, construed the statutory term "regularly employing" as applicable to an employer who had more than five employees, even though as many as five of them worked only 2 days of each week. The number of persons on the payroll, not the number working on any particular day, is determinative of the number of employees an employer regularly employs. (2 C.4th 231.) In reaching its conclusion, the court engaged in a comprehensive review of the history of the California Act and of similar legislation in other states. (2 C.4th 234 et seq.) (See 20 Pepperdine L. Rev. 824.)

(2) Employment Agencies. For purposes of the FEHA, an employment agency and its client "are treated as the employer, and employees of the client entity are treated as coworkers of employees" of the employment agency. Thus, when general and special employment exists, an injured employee may look to both employers for redress. (Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 C.A.4th 1174, 1184, 10 C.R.3d 52.)

(3) Religious Association. Notwithstanding Govt.C. 12926(d), and except as provided in Govt.C. 12926.2(d), an "employer" for purposes of the FEHA includes a religious corporation or association with respect to persons it employs to perform nonreligious duties at a health care facility that is not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the association or corporation. (Govt.C. 12926.2(c); cf. Kelly v. Methodist Hosp. of Southern Calif. (2000) 22 C.4th 1108, 1111, 1126, 95 C.R.2d 514, 997 P.2d 1169 [religiously affiliated hospital is exempt from claim for wrongful termination of nurse in violation of public policy as expressed in FEHA; applying law in effect prior to amendment of religious-entity exemption in 1999].) However, a religious corporation "may restrict eligibility for employment in any position involving the performance of religious duties to adherents of the religion for which the corporation is organized." (Govt.C. 12922.) (See 5 Rotunda, §21.15; on nonprofit public benefit corporation as employer under Act, see Govt.C. 12926.2(e), (f).)

To claim exemption from the FEHA, a religious entity need not incorporate under the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law. (See McKeon v. Mercy Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 C.4th 321, 325, 79 C.R.2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 [organization of requisite religious character does not lose its exemption by organizing under Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law].)

(4) Exemption Under First Amendment Religion Clauses. In Schmoll v. Chapman University (1999) 70 C.A.4th 1434, 83 C.R.2d 426, a case of first impression, plaintiff university chaplain sued defendant university for discrimination and retaliation under the FEHA. Defendant did not claim that it was exempt, but rather that the religion clauses of the First Amendment barred judicial review. Held, "[t]he First amendment guarantees to a religious institution the right to decide matters affecting its ministers' employment, free from the scrutiny and second-guessing of the civil courts." (70 C.A.4th 1436.) (See Hope Int. University v. Superior Court (2004) 119 C.A.4th 719, 738, 14 C.R.3d 643 [in action for marital status discrimination, trial court correctly denied motion for summary judgment where defendant religious university failed to establish as matter of law that ministerial exception applied to its firing of two nonordained, psychology professors who taught marriage and family therapy and worked in defendant's counseling center, and who it suspected of having affair before divorce of one of them was final]; 5 Rotunda, §21.15 [regulation of employment practices of religious organizations].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Religious Association. See 6 Rotunda 4th, §21.15.(4) Exemption Under First Amendment Religion Clauses. See 6 Rotunda 4th, §21.15.

22 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
b. Scope of Act.
4. Supervisors.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 919

[§ 919] Supervisors.

(1) Harassment. A supervisor is a "person" within the meaning of former Govt.C. 12940(h) (now Govt.C. 12940(j)); see infra, §§927, 928), and hence is capable of committing sexual harassment. (Page v. Superior Court (1995) 31 C.A.4th 1206, 1210, 37 C.R.2d 529.)

In Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 C.A.4th 598, 40 C.R.2d 350, plaintiff, a male heterosexual, brought an action against his former employer and four individual defendants, all of whom were supervisors and two of whom were gay, alleging that he was the victim of sexual harassment. Specifically, he alleged that two of the supervisors engaged in the harassment, and that the other two were aware of it, but did nothing. The individual defendants successfully demurred, on the ground that the FEHA does not impose individual liability. Held, mandamus granted, directing the trial judge to vacate his orders sustaining the demurrers.

(a) Former Govt.C. 12940(h) (now Govt.C. 12940(j)), as well as several other sections of the Act, impose liability on several entities, including "persons," a term defined as including an "individual." Hence, a "person" may be accused in an action under the Act. (34 C.A.4th 603, citing Page.)

(b) The Fair Employment and Housing Commission has consistently held that supervisors who either engage in the wrongful activity or tacitly agree with it are individually liable. It is assumed that the Legislature was aware of the Commission's long-standing practice of imposing liability on individuals, when it enacted various amendments to the Act. Had the Legislature intended the word "person" to apply only to "employers," it could have so provided. The fact that reference to "person" or "persons" survived several amendments is consistent with the legislative goal of construing the Act liberally to remove all illegal discrimination. This interpretation is supported by the cases which, without question, have imposed individual liability. (34 C.A.4th 604.)

(c) "Unlike discrimination in hiring, the ultimate responsibility for which rests with the employer, sexual or other harassment perpetrated by a supervisor with the power to hire, fire and control the victimized employee's working conditions is a particularly personal form of the type of discrimination which the Legislature sought to proscribe when it enacted the FEHA. Our holding that the responsibility for such acts must be borne both by the offender as well as the employer who tolerates the offense is consistent with the Legislature's intent to provide 'effective remedies which will eliminate such discriminatory practices.' " (34 C.A.4th 605.)

The suggestion in Matthews that mere inaction would be sufficient to hold a supervisor liable for sexual harassment was refuted by the same court in Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 C.A.4th 1318, 1327, 58 C.R.2d 308: "A supervisor who, without more, fails to take action to prevent sexual harassment of an employee is not personally liable as an aider and abettor of the harasser, an aider and abettor of the employer or an agent of the employer." (50 C.A.4th 1331.) (See BAJI, No. 12.21 [direct liability and as aider and abettor]; 33 U.S.F. L. Rev. 487 [Fiol]; 61 Am.Jur. Trials 489 [Individual Liability for Sexual Harassment]; on vicarious liability of employer for sexual harassment under Title VII of Civil Rights Act, see supra, §866; on liability of supervisor for workplace sexual harassment, see infra, §928; on coworker liability for harassment, see infra, §§922, 928.)

(2) Discrimination. Janken v. GM Hughes Electronics (1996) 46 C.A.4th 55, 53 C.R.2d 741, concluded that while individual supervisory employees may be personally liable for conduct that constitutes harassment, they may not be held liable for conduct that constitutes discrimination; only "employers" may be held liable for prohibited discrimination. (46 C.A.4th 62.) Govt.C. 12926(d), which defines "employer" to include any person acting as the employer's agent, was designed to make clear that an employer could be liable under principles of respondeat superior for discriminatory acts of its supervisors, not to make those supervisors personally liable. (46 C.A.4th 65, 67.) (See 37 Santa Clara L. Rev. 517 [Individual Supervisor Liability in Employment Discrimination Claims in California].)

In Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 C.4th 640, 76 C.R.2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333, plaintiff employee sued her former supervisor, alleging that the supervisor had discriminated against her and wrongfully discharged her on the basis of her medical condition (cancer), in violation of the FEHA. The Court of Appeal reversed the trial court's summary judgment for defendant. Held, reversed. Supervisors may not be held liable for discrimination under the Act.

(a) Harassment versus discrimination. The FEHA treats harassment and discrimination differently. While former Govt.C. 12940(h)(1) (now Govt.C. 12940(j)(1)) prohibits an employer "or any other person" from harassing an employee, Govt.C. 12940(a) prohibits only "an employer" from engaging in improper discrimination. (18 C.4th 644.) This differing treatment reflects the fact that supervisory employees can insulate themselves from harassment claims by refraining from harassing conduct, but they cannot refrain from the type of conduct (hiring, firing, job assignments, office assignments, promotions or demotions, performance evaluations, and the like) that could later give rise to a discrimination claim. (18 C.4th 646, 657.) Whatever similarities there may be between discrimination and harassment, "the employer ultimately does the former; coworkers and supervisors do the latter." (18 C.4th 657.)

(b) Agency language. Govt.C. 12926(d) prohibits discrimination by a "person acting as an agent of an employer, directly or indirectly." However, this agency language does not extend personal liability for discrimination to supervisors:

(1) This reading of the agency language is supported by the decisions of the federal courts, which have overwhelmingly rejected individual liability for supervisory employees under the federal antidiscrimination acts. Those acts are "virtually identical" in language, purpose, and intent to the FEHA. (18 C.4th 659.)

(2) The potential for individual liability for discrimination would place supervisors in a direct conflict of interest with their employers whenever they made a personnel decision. The supervisors would be pressed to make whatever decision would be least likely to lead to a future discrimination claim, which might not be the best decision for meeting the employer's interests. (18 C.4th 651, 662.)

(3) The lack of personal liability will not give supervisors the freedom to discriminate with impunity. They will face swift discipline from their employers, who will not condone discriminatory acts for which the employers ultimately must pay. (18 C.4th 654, 662.) "Until the Legislature provides for punishing individual employees, [the courts] should leave that task to the employers." (18 C.4th 662.)

(c) Aiding and abetting prohibition. Although Govt.C. 12940(g) prohibits aiding and abetting someone else in discriminating, this prohibition does not impose personal liability on individual supervisors. (18 C.4th 656, 659.) "Linguistically, it is questionable whether it can properly be said that an employee who exercises delegated personnel management authority is aiding and abetting" the employer. The Legislature would not have reached such a significant result as personal liability for supervisors by this "roundabout" method. (18 C.4th 656, quoting Janken.)

(d) Contrary administrative decision. Administrative decisions of the Fair Employment and Housing Commission, although consistently holding supervisors individually liable for discrimination, do not provide strong support for that position. "None considered the differing statutory treatment of harassment and discrimination. More importantly, they rested solely on now-outdated federal authority." (18 C.4th 661.) (See 83 A.L.R.5th 1 [Individual Liability of Supervisors, Managers, Officers or Co-Employees For Discriminatory Actions Under State Civil Rights Act].)

(3) Retaliation. Reno v. Baird, supra, is not controlling as to retaliatory actions. Thus, a supervisor may be liable for a retaliatory discharge "in violation of the public policy set forth in the FEHA." (Walrath v. Sprinkel (2002) 99 C.A.4th 1237, 1242, 1243, 121 C.R.2d 806.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Retaliation. The court in Taylor v. Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 C.A.4th 1216, 1237, 51 C.R.3d 206, followed Walrath v. Sprinkel (2002) 99 C.A.4th 1237, 121 C.R.2d 806, text, p. 415, in holding that a supervisor is a "person" subject to liability under Govt.C. 12940(h). However, both Walrath and Taylor were disapproved in Jones v. The Lodge at Torrey Pines Partnership (2008) 42 C.4th 1158, 1174, 72 C.R.3d 624, 177 P.3d 232, to the extent they conflict with its holding.

In Jones, plaintiff sued his employer and his supervisor under the FEHA for retaliation after he complained about sexual harassment. Although the trial court originally entered judgment on a jury verdict for plaintiff, it subsequently granted both defendants' motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and entered judgment for defendants. The Court of Appeal reversed, and reinstated the original judgment for plaintiff on the verdict. Both parties appealed. The Supreme Court's grant of review was limited to the question whether a nonemployer individual may be held personally liable for retaliation under the FEHA. Held, reversed; only the employer may be held liable for retaliation under the FEHA.

(a) Govt.C. 12940(a) prohibits an employer from engaging in specified forms of discrimination. Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 C.4th 640, 76 C.R.2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333, text, p. 414, held that, under Govt.C. 12940(a) employers, but not nonemployer supervisors, may be held liable for discrimination. Govt.C. 12940(h) prohibits retaliation by "any employer, labor organization, employment agency, or person," and the issue in this case is whether the word "person" evinces a legislative intent that individuals be held personally liable for retaliation. (42 C.4th 1162.)

(b) Plaintiff argued that the plain meaning of Govt.C. 12940(h) is to make individuals personally liable for retaliation and that other forms of statutory interpretation need not be utilized. This contention is without merit. (42 C.4th 1162.) Govt.C. 12940(h) is a catch-all provision aimed at prohibiting retaliation against an individual who opposes any practices forbidden "under this part" or who assists in any proceeding "under this part." (42 C.4th 1163.) Govt.C. 12940(h) thus incorporates unlawful employment practices defined in other parts of Govt.C. 12940, and forbids retaliation against anyone opposing an unlawful employment practice. Each of the entities to which Govt.C. 12940(h) applies (employer, labor organization, employment agency, or person) is the subject of one or more other subdivisions of Govt.C. 12940, defining specific unlawful employment practices. It is thus possible that the Legislature merely used each of these terms in subdivision (h) to reflect that the other subdivisions of Govt.C. 12940 use those terms, rather than to impose additional personal liability on nonemployer individuals. Accordingly, it is necessary to engage in statutory interpretation to resolve this ambiguity. (42 C.4th 1164.)

(c) In concluding that the FEHA does not make individuals personally liable for discrimination, Reno followed the reasoning of Janken v. GM Hughes Electronics (1996) 46 C.A.4th 55, 53 C.R.2d 741, text, p. 414: (1) The FEHA makes

at least some individuals liable for harassment, but not for discrimination, because there is a fundamental distinction between harassment, which is a type of conduct not necessary to the performance of a supervisor's job, and business or personnel management decisions, which are inherently necessary to the performance of a supervisor's job and which might later be considered discriminatory. (42 C.4th 1164, 1165.) (2) Under the FEHA, small employers (those employing fewer than five employees) may be sued for harassment, but may not be sued for discrimination. Because the Legislature clearly intended to protect small employers from the burdens of litigating discrimination claims, it is highly unlikely that it simultaneously intended to subject individual nonemployers to these burdens. (3) Sound policy favors avoiding conflicts of interest and the chilling of effective management that would result were supervisors to be held personally liable. (42 C.4th 1165, 1166.) (4) Corporate employment decisions are often collective. (42 C.4th 1166.) (5) It is bad policy to subject supervisors to the threat of a lawsuit every time they make a personnel decision. All of these reasons for not imposing individual liability for discrimination apply equally to retaliation. Indeed, some may apply even more forcefully to retaliation claims. For example, if an employee gains a reputation as a complainer, supervisors might be particularly afraid to impose discipline on that employee or make other lawful personnel decisions out of fear that the employee might claim retaliation. (42 C.4th 1167.)

(d) Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA (2005) 36 C.4th 1028, 32 C.R.3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123, Supp., infra, §940, held that the employment actions that give rise to a claim for retaliation are identical to the employment actions that give rise to a claim for discrimination, despite differences in wording between Govt.C. 12940(h) and Govt.C. 12940(a). Thus, "it is hard to conceive why the Legislature would impose individual liability for actions that are claimed to be retaliatory but not for the same actions that are claimed to be discriminatory." (42 C.4th 1168, 1169.)

(e) The word "person" was added to Govt.C. 12940(h) in 1987. If plaintiff's claim that this addition made individuals liable for retaliation is correct, then the legislation created individual liability where none had existed previously. The legislative history does not support this conclusion. The bill adding the word "person" made several amendments to the FEHA, but the Legislative Counsel's Digest describing several of these amendments does not mention Govt.C. 12940. The bill refers only to "technical and conforming changes" to the Act. (42 C.4th 1169.) A change that created individual liability for retaliation where none existed previously would be substantive, not technical. (42 C.4th 1171, citing Ailanto Properties v. Half Moon Bay (2006) 142 C.A.4th 572, 48 C.R.3d 340.) Plaintiff relies on documents analyzing these legislative changes, both of which documents were dated approximately 13 years after the legislation. They are inherently unreliable, as well as ambiguous. (42 C.4th 1171, 1173.)

Three justices dissented in two opinions. They argued that the language of Govt.C. 12940(h) clearly provides for nonemployer liability for retaliation. Further, it would be illogical to conclude, as the majority did, that the Legislature intended to expose a supervisor to individual liability for harassing an employee, while shielding that supervisor from liability for retaliating against the employee for opposing that harassment. (42 C.4th 1174, 1175.)

23 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
c. Department and Commission.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 920

[§ 920] Department and Commission.

(1) In General. The FEHA is administered by the Department of Fair Employment and Housing, headed by a Director (Govt.C. 12901), and by the seven-member Fair Employment and Housing Commission (Govt.C. 12903).

(2) The Department. The department may (a) adopt rules and regulations (Govt.C. 12930(e)); (b) investigate and conciliate complaints (Govt.C. 12930(f)); (c) subpoena and examine witnesses, take depositions and issue written interrogatories, and gather documentary evidence (Govt.C. 12930(g)); (d) issue accusations (Govt.C. 12930(h)); and (e) publish the results of investigations and research (Govt.C. 12930(i)). It is also empowered to assist communities in resolving disputes relating to discriminatory practices (Govt.C. 12931), and is directed to maintain liaison with local human relations commissions (Govt.C. 12933).

(3) The Commission. In addition to rulemaking (Govt.C. 12935(a)) and conducting hearings (Govt.C. 12935(b)), (f) and mediations (Govt.C. 12935(c)), the Fair Employment and Housing Commission may (a) create or provide financial or technical assistance to advisory agencies and conciliation councils (Govt.C. 12935(g)); (b) publish its opinions (Govt.C. 12935(h)); (c) issue publications and research results (Govt.C. 12935(i)); and (d) appoint administrative law judges (Govt.C. 12935(j)).

The actions and procedures of the Commission must be conducted pursuant to its own regulations, or if no regulation is applicable, then pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act (see 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §28 et seq.). (Govt.C. 12972.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) The Commission.

Administrative Procedure Act.

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Administrative Proceedings, §34 et seq.

24 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
1. In General.
aa. Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 921

[§ 921] Discrimination.

Govt.C. 12940 makes it an unlawful employment practice to discriminate on the basis of "race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation" unless the discrimination is based on a "bona fide occupational qualification" or applicable state or national security regulations. Specifically, it is unlawful:

(1) For an employer to refuse to hire, to refuse to select for a training program leading to employment, to discharge, or to discriminate "in compensation or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment." (Govt.C. 12940(a).)

(2) For a labor organization to exclude, expel, or restrict membership, or to provide only second-class or segregated membership, or to discriminate in the election of officers or selection of staff, or to discriminate against a member, an employer, or a person employed. (Govt.C. 12940(b).) (On discrimination in selection of business agent, see International Union of Operating Engineers, Local No. 12 v. Fair Emp. Practice Com. (1969) 276 C.A.2d 504, 512, 81 C.R. 47.)

(3) For a person to discriminate in the selection for apprenticeship and other training programs leading to employment. (Govt.C. 12940(c).)

(4) For an employer or employment agency to make any non-job-related inquiry that expresses a limitation or specification as to race, etc. (Govt.C. 12940(d)); on permissibility of inquiry into applicant's age as provided by law, see infra, §934.)

(5) For an employer or employment agency to require a medical or psychological examination of an applicant, or to inquire into his or her disabilities or medical condition, except as it relates to job-related functions, or a request for reasonable accommodation. (Govt.C. 12940(e); see infra, §936 et seq.)

(6) For an employer or employment agency to require a medical or psychological examination of an employee, or to inquire into his or her disabilities or medical condition, unless it is "job-related and consistent with business necessity." (Govt.C. 12940(f); see infra, §936 et seq.)

(7) "For an employer, labor organization, or employment agency to harass, discharge, expel, or otherwise discriminate against" a person in retaliation for reporting, pursuant to P.C. 11161.8, suspected patient abuse by a health or community care facility. (Govt.C. 12940(g).)

(8) "For an employer, labor organization, employment agency, or person to discharge, expel, or otherwise discriminate against" a person in retaliation for that person's opposition to practices forbidden by the Act, or for his or her filing of a complaint, testifying, or assisting in a proceeding under the Act. (Govt.C. 12940(h); see infra, §940.)

(9) For a person to "aid, abet, incite, compel, or coerce the doing" of the forbidden acts, or to attempt to do so. (Govt.C. 12940(i); see Vernon v. California (2004) 116 C.A.4th 114, 131, 10 C.R.3d 121 [state is not "person" subject to liability under Govt.C. 12940(i)].)

(10) For an employer, labor organization, employment agency, or apprenticeship training program "to fail to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent discrimination" from occurring. (Govt.C. 12940(k).)

(11) For an employer or other covered entity to discriminate based on a conflict between a person's religious belief and observance and an employment requirement, except where the employer or other entity demonstrates that it cannot make a reasonable accommodation without undue hardship on the conduct of business. "Religious belief or observance" includes observance of a Sabbath or other holy day, and reasonable travel time. (Govt.C. 12940(l); see infra, §941.)

(12) For an employer or other covered entity (a) "to fail to make reasonable accommodation for the known physical or mental disability of an applicant or employee," or (b) "to fail to engage in a timely, good faith, interactive process with the employee or applicant to determine effective reasonable accommodations." (Govt.C. 12940(m), 12940(n); see infra, §937.)

(13) For an employer or other covered entity to subject a person "to a test for the presence of a genetic characteristic." (Govt.C. 12940(o).)

Employees of public agencies and applicants for employment may be solicited to voluntarily declare ethnic information, but this information cannot be used to give discriminatory preference to a member of a group. (Govt.C. 1233.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Taylor v. Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 C.A.4th 1216, 123, 51 C.R.3d 206 [retaliation is form of discrimination actionable under Govt.C. 12940(k)]; 93 Cal. L. Rev. 1455 [maintaining work environments free of harassment and discrimination by nonemployees]; 39 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1369 [Towards an "Honest Belief Plus" Standard in California Employment Discrimination Cases]; 43 San Diego L. Rev. 733 [Symposium: Rights and wrongs of discrimination]; 41 U.S.F. L. Rev. 171 [growing trend of family responsibilities discrimination]; CACI, No. 2527 [failure to prevent discrimination--essential factual elements]. (New Disparate treatment and disparate impact: To establish a prima facie case of disparate treatment, an employee must show: (a) membership in a protected class, (b) qualification for the position at issue, (c) an adverse employment action, and (d) at least an inference of intentional discrimination from facts showing that the employer chose the particular policy because of its effect on members of a protected class, and not just that the employer "was aware that a given policy would lead to adverse consequences for a given group." To establish a prima facie case of disparate impact, an employee must show that, regardless of the employer's motive, "a facially neutral practice or policy bearing no relation- ship to job requirements had a disproportionate adverse effect on members of the protected class." (Hall v. Los Angeles (2007) 148 C.A.4th 318, 326, 327, 55 C.R.3d 732 [sex discrimination]; see Frank v. Los Angeles (2007) 149 C.A.4th 805, 817, 822, 57 C.R.3d 430 [racial discrimination]; CACI, No. 2500 [disparate treatment]; CACI, No. 2502 [disparate impact]; CACI, No. 2507 [motivating reason].)

25 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
1. In General.
bb. Harassment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 922

[§ 922] Harassment.

It is an unlawful employment practice under the FEHA:

(1) "For an employer, labor organization, employment agency, apprenticeship training program or any training program leading to employment, or any other person" to harass an employee, applicant, or other person providing services "because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation." Harassment by an employee other than an agent or supervisor is unlawful "if the entity, or its agents or supervisors, knows or should have known of this conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action." (Govt.C. 12940(j)(1); see Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 C.A.4th 457, 464, 79 C.R.2d 33 [instruction that acts of racial harassment must be more than "occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial" was accurate statement of threshold standard of severe or pervasive conduct]; Dee v. Vintage Petroleum (2003) 106 C.A.4th 30, 36, 129 C.R.2d 923 [single ethnic slur by supervisor may be sufficient to establish employer liability for hostile work environment]; on who is "employer" for harassment purposes, see supra, §918; on sexual harassment of employee or applicant, see infra, §927 et seq.)

(2) For one of the entities mentioned above "to fail to take all reasonable steps necessary" to prevent harassment from occurring. (Govt.C. 12940(k).)

(3) "For any employer, labor organization, or employment agency to harass, discharge, expel, or otherwise discriminate against" a person in retaliation for reporting, pursuant to P.C. 11161.8, suspected patient abuse by health or community care facilities. (Govt.C. 12940(g).)

An employee is personally liable for harassment prohibited by Govt.C. 12940 that is perpetrated by the employee, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. (Govt.C. 12940(j)(3).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 93 Cal. L. Rev. 1455 [maintaining work environments free of harassment and discrimination by nonemployees]; 17 A.L.R.6th 563 [what constitutes racial harassment violative of state civil rights acts]; BAJI, No. 12.05.1 [prompt corrective action]; BAJI, No. 12.20 [failure to prevent harassment]; CACI, No. 2527 [same]; CACI, Nos. 2521A et seq., 2522A et seq. [hostile work environment]; CACI, No. 2523 [harassing conduct explained]; CACI, No. 2524 ["severe or pervasive" explained].

26 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

2. Racial Discrimination.

aa. Discrimination Against Minorities.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 923

[§ 923] Discrimination Against Minorities.

(1) In General. In Alameda v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1984) 153 C.A.3d 499, 200 C.R. 381, C, a black woman, applied for a permanent cook position with the county Sheriff's Department. C's eligibility examination score placed her at the top of the eligibility list, but the job went to a white woman who was second on the list and whose prior cooking experience was substantially less than C's. The county's service manager testified that it was the first time in 9 years that he had not hired the applicant with the highest score, that it was his preference to hire C, but that he felt the other applicant's prior cooking experience with high school students was more relevant than C's restaurant work because he likened students to prison inmates. The FEHC found that the county wrongfully denied C employment (Govt.C. 12940(a)), and the trial court denied the county's petition for administrative mandamus. Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) While the California Act and Title VII of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 (see supra, §847) differ in some particulars, their objectives are identical, and California courts rely on federal law to interpret analogous provisions of the state statute. (153 C.A.3d 504.)

(b) Under both Acts, the employee alleging racial discrimination must first establish a prima facie case. "This may be done by showing (1) that he or she belongs to a racial minority; (2) that he applied and was qualified for a job for which the employer was seeking applicants; (3) that despite his qualification, he was rejected; and (4) that after his rejection, the position remained open and the employer continued to seek applicants from persons of the complainant's qualifications." Thereafter, the burden shifts to the employer "to articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the employee's rejection." Finally, if the employer gives reasons for the rejection, the complainant must be given an opportunity to show that these reasons were a mere pretext for discrimination. The complainant "must be given a full and fair opportunity to demonstrate by competent evidence that the presumptively valid reasons for his rejection were a coverup for a racially discriminatory decision." (153 C.A.3d 504.)

(c) The substantial evidence test applies in reviewing the decision of the FEHC (153 C.A.3d 503); and there was sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case of racial discrimination and that the county's nondiscriminatory reason was a mere pretext. (153 C.A.3d 504, 505.)

In San Francisco v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 976, 236 C.R. 716, the FEHC determined, after a lengthy administrative proceeding, that the city discriminated against black firefighters by using a written promotional examination for the position of lieutenant that had an adverse impact on Blacks and was not proven to be job related. The city sought administrative mandamus, contending that the examination was sufficiently related to a lieutenant's duties to justify any disproportionate impact it might have on black applicants. The writ issued, and the black firefighters appealed. Held, judgment reversed.

(a) Under the substantial evidence test, the FEHC's findings of fact were presumptively correct. (191 C.A.3d 983, 984.) And the FEHC made out a prima facie case by showing a statistically disparate impact on racial minorities in the passage rate of the examination in question. Statistical disparities alone may constitute prima facie proof of discrimination. Here, 47.8% of the white firefighters passed the examination, as compared to 18.18% of the black firefighters. "Similar passage rates have been found statistically significant in establishing a prima facie case of discrimination." (191 C.A.3d 986 et seq.)

(b) The city failed to carry its burden of proving that the examination was sufficiently job-related so as to overcome the prima facie case. Although the primary function of the position tested was supervision, the job description did not list ability to supervise as a necessary component, ability to supervise was not tested, and there was no evidence correlating higher examination scores with better job performance. (191 C.A.3d 989 et seq.)

(c) However, inasmuch as parallel proceedings regarding the same subject had been commenced in federal court, deference to the remedies fashioned by that court was more appropriate than reinstatement of the FEHC's original remedial order. (191 C.A.3d 991 et seq.)

In Ibarbia v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1987) 191 C.A.3d 1318, 237 C.R. 92, I, a Filipino-American, sought a position as farm advisor with the Cooperative Extension, a part of the U.C. Division of Agricultural Services. A search committee notified I by letter that although the position had "not yet been filled," I had not been selected as a finalist. I then wrote a letter of protest to U.C. and filed a discrimination complaint with the federal EEOC. Subsequently, U.C. reevaluated the applications and contacted I by phone to inform him that he was a finalist for the position and to invite him for an interview. However, I declined the interview, assertedly because it was merely a pretext and because the selection of a candidate had already taken place. The position was then offered to another candidate. Following adverse rulings by the EEOC and the FEHC, I filed an employment discrimination action. Summary judgment was entered against I. Held, summary judgment against I affirmed.

(a) A claim of employment discrimination because of race or national origin may be pursued under either federal or state law in two different ways: "An individual may allege that he has been subjected to 'disparate treatment' because of his race, or that he has been the victim of a facially neutral practice having a 'disparate impact on his racial group.' ... To overcome defendant's motion for summary judgment, under either theory, plaintiff has to offer facts sufficient to establish a prima facie case." (191 C.A.3d 1327.)

(b) I failed to make a sufficient showing of disparate treatment by the employer because he failed to complete the application process by declining the proffered interview. (191 C.A.3d 1328.) I's assertion that the interview was a mere pretext did not relieve him of the burden of having to complete the application process because his claims were purely speculative and unsupported by the evidence. (191 C.A.3d 1329.)

(c) "A disparate impact plaintiff must not merely prove circumstances raising an inference of discriminatory impact; he must prove the discriminatory impact at issue. ... This is usually done by establishing 'that an employment practice selects members of a protected class in a proportion smaller than their percentage in the pool of actual applicants.' " (191 C.A.3d 1329.) I failed to present a prima facie case because the evidence on which he based his assertion was inconclusive and inadmissible. (191 C.A.3d 1330.)

In Mixon v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1987) 192 C.A.3d 1306, 237 C.R. 884, M, a black man, was terminated

from his job as a business representative for a labor union, after refusing to comply with the union's request that he relocate to reduce union expenses from his lengthy commute. The FEHC found that the union had not discriminated on the basis of race, and the trial court denied M's petition for administrative mandamus. Held, judgment affirmed. Although M established a prima facie case of disparate-treatment racial discrimination, the union's desire to reduce its expenses resulting from his commute was a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for termination. Thereafter, it was M's burden to prove that a discriminatory intent, and not this proffered reason, was behind the decision to terminate. However, M produced no direct evidence of racial animus, he knew at the outset that he might be required to relocate, and white employees who were allowed to commute great distances were in circumstances different from his. (192 C.A.3d 1320 et seq.)

In Clark v. Claremont University Center (1992) 6 C.A.4th 639, 8 C.R.2d 151, a black assistant professor brought the action after he was denied promotion and tenure, and judgment was rendered in his favor on a verdict for compensatory and punitive damages. The Court of Appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that the evidence was sufficient to sustain the jury's verdict. (6 C.A.4th 643, detailing an extraordinary history of anti-black behavior by faculty and administration.) The opinion then discusses the problem of proof as follows:

(a) "In most disparate treatment employment discrimination cases, the plaintiff will lack direct evidence of the employer's discriminatory intent, which is a necessary element to prevail." (6 C.A.4th 662.) McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668, supra, §870, mandates a three-part analysis and provides the applicable standard of proof. (6 C.A.4th 662.)

(b) If the employer successfully rebuts the presumption raised by a prima facie case, the fact finder must decide on all the evidence before it whether it believes the employer's explanation of its actions or the employee's. The employee, who retains the burden of persuasion, has the opportunity to demonstrate that the proffered reason was not the true reason for the employment decision. (6 C.A.4th 664.) Many courts have used the term "pretext" in describing the employee's burden, a term that refers to "but for" causation; i.e., the employee must prove by a preponderance of evidence that there was a causal connection between the employee's protected status and the adverse employment decision. (6 C.A.4th 665.) In this case, there was strong evidence of improper motive, and "the jury was justified in inferring that the entire tenure process was tainted by discrimination." (6 C.A.4th 669.)

Heard v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1996) 44 C.A.4th 1735, 52 C.R.2d 620, held that McDonnell Douglas, supra, did not require that the plaintiff prove, as part of his prima facie case, that similarly situated non-Blacks were treated differentially in the terms and conditions of their employment. "To state that a plaintiff may never establish a prima facie case if the plaintiff fails to produce evidence that similarly situated employees outside the protected class were promoted, restricts unfairly the circumstances from which discrimination may be inferred. ... Such a requirement also unfairly emphasizes one way of proving intentional discrimination instead of properly focusing upon the pivotal issue in disparate treatment cases--whether a particular individual was discriminated against and why. ... Although the characteristics of the employee replacing a discharged or demoted employee are certainly relevant in evaluating an employer's motive for an employment decision, we believe those characteristics go to the weight of the evidence rather than its legal sufficiency." (44 C.A.4th 1755, 1756.) (See Perez v. Santa Clara (2003) 111 C.A.4th 671, 676, 3 C.R.3d 867, 7 Cal. Procedure (4th), Judgment, Supp., §107A [although, under McDonnell Douglas, burden shifts back and forth between plaintiff and defendant, ultimate burden of persuading trier of fact that defendant intentionally discriminated against plaintiff remains with plaintiff, who may either directly persuade trier of fact that discriminatory reason more likely motivated employer or indirectly show that employer's proffered explanation is not believable].)

Many other cases involve racial discrimination actions under the FEHA. (See Valdez v. Los Angeles (1991) 231 C.A.3d 1043, 1052, 282 C.R. 726 [effect of continuing nature of discrimination]; Janken v. GM Hughes Electronics (1996) 46 C.A.4th 55, 53 C.R.2d 741, supra, §919, citing the text [California courts look to federal decisions in interpreting FEHA]; Los Angeles County Office of the Dist. Attorney v. Civil Service Com. of Los Angeles (1997) 55 C.A.4th 187, 201, 63 C.R.2d 661 [black deputy district attorney failed to prove prima facie race discrimination; his transfer out of special unit was consistent with management's usual policy of rotating attorneys]; Sada v. Robert F.

Kennedy Med. Center (1997) 56 C.A.4th 138, 151, 153, 65 C.R.2d 112 [Mexican American made prima facie case of employment discrimination based on race: she belonged to protected class, applied for job, and was rejected; defendant employer failed to show that plaintiff was not qualified or that more qualified persons were hired]; Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 C.A.4th 457, 464, 79 C.R.2d 33 [instruction that acts of racial harassment must be more than "occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial" was accurate statement of threshold standard of severe or pervasive conduct].) (See 104 Harv. L. Rev. 817 [race discrimination in retail car negotiations]; 81 Cal. L. Rev. 1241 et seq. [inaugural issue of Asian Law Journal]; on racial discrimination under federal statutes, see supra, §869 et seq.)

(2) Effect of Workers' Compensation Exclusivity Provision. An action by an employee seeking damages for racial discrimination in violation of the FEHA is not barred by the exclusive remedy provision of the Workers' Compensation Act (see 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §24 et seq.). (Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 C.A.3d 794, 808, 244 C.R. 37, 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §46.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Frank v. Los Angeles (2007) 149 C.A.4th 805, 821, 824, 57 C.R.3d 430 [following Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 109 S.Ct. 2115, 104 L.Ed.2d 733, text, §870; paying county police officers, 70% of whom were minorities, less than county sheriff's deputies, 70% of whom were Caucasian, did not constitute disparate impact or disparate treatment racial discrimination; county policy was to pay all police officers less because they were members of county police rather than members of sheriff's department; no county policy or procedure deterred or prevented plaintiffs from applying for deputy sheriff positions and there was no evidence that pay disparity was product of racial discrimination].

27 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

2. Racial Discrimination.

bb. Discrimination Against Whites.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 924

[§ 924] Discrimination Against Whites.

In Sandhu v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 26 C.A.4th 846, 31 C.R.2d 617, the issue was whether plaintiff could state a claim for racial discrimination under Govt.C. 12940, even though he was born in India and, as a self-described "East Indian," was Caucasian. Defendant employer demurred on this ground, and the trial judge, although overruling the demurrer, ordered plaintiff to strike all references to race from his complaint. When he filed an amended complaint alleging national origin discrimination instead, the judge sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend on the ground that the administrative complaint had not alleged this form of discrimination. Held, reversed.

(a) The principle stated in St. Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 107 S.Ct. 2022, 95 L.Ed.2d 582, supra, §871, is applicable. A group may be entitled to legal protection solely because of its ancestry or ethnic characteristics even if it would not be categorized as a race in terms of modern scientific theory; a distinctive physiognomy is not essential. (26 C.A.4th 855.) "Sandhu's allegation that he was subject to a discriminatory animus based on his membership in a group which is perceived as distinct when measured against other Lockheed employees, and which is not based on his birthplace alone, is sufficient to make out a cognizable claim for racial discrimination under FEHA." (26 C.A.4th 857.)

(b) Plaintiff's failure to check the "national origin" box on his administrative complaint was not a proper ground for dismissal. The crucial element of the administrative complaint is the factual statement. A plaintiff may not even be aware of the motivation for an employer's discriminatory conduct. The selection of which box to check is nothing more than the attachment of a legal conclusion to the facts alleged, and is therefore a mere technical defect. "[W]e are confident that the administrative investigation into Sandhu's claim of disparate treatment because he was 'Asian' would likely have encompassed both race and national origin." (26 C.A.4th 859.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.142

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 14 A.L.R.6th 277 [what constitutes reverse discrimination under state law].

28 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
3. Sex Discrimination.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 925

[§ 925] In General.

(1) Nature and Scope of Requirement. The FEHA makes it an unlawful employment practice to discriminate on the basis of sex. (Govt.C. 12940, supra, §921; see Govt.C. 12947.5 [it is unlawful employment practice for employer to refuse to permit employee to wear pants because of employee's sex, but statute does not prohibit employer from requiring employees to wear uniform]; Govt.C. 12949 [employer may require employee to adhere to reasonable workplace appearance, grooming, and dress standards not precluded by other provisions of law, provided that employees are permitted to appear or dress consistently with their gender identity].) "Sex" as defined in the Act includes a person's gender as defined in P.C. 422.56, which includes the employee's actual sex or the employer's perception of the employee's sex. (Govt.C. 12926(p).) (See 104 Harv. L. Rev. 817 [gender discrimination in retail car negotiations]; 87 A.L.R.3d 93 [application of state laws prohibiting sex discrimination in employment]; 123 A.L.R.5th 411 [employment discrimination based on heterosexual conduct or relationship]; on sex discrimination under federal statute, see supra, §861.)

However, this prohibition does not affect the operation of the terms or conditions of a "bona fide retirement, pension, employee benefit, or insurance plan," if the terms or conditions are in accordance with "customary and reasonable or actuarially sound underwriting practices." (Govt.C. 12993(b).) And the prohibition does not affect the employer's right (a) to consider veteran status in selecting employees, or (b) to afford special consideration to Vietnam Era veterans. (Govt.C. 12940(a)(4); see 13 Pacific L. J. 693.)

(2) Valid Practices. The following are not unlawful practices:

(a) Providing child care services for employees or members who are responsible for minor children. (Govt.C. 12947.)

(b) Denying a promotion based on neutral nondiscriminatory criteria. (See University of Southern Calif. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 C.A.3d 1028, 1036, 1039, 272 C.R. 264; Cucuzza v. Santa Clara (2002) 104 C.A.4th 1031, 1043, 128 C.R.2d 660 [even if supervisor had bias against women, plaintiff did not dispute fact that evaluation of job candidates was fair, that supervisor took no part in evaluation, and that person hired was better qualified for job than plaintiff].)

(c) Hiring on the basis of gender, if gender is a bona fide occupational qualification for a particular position. (See Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 97 S.Ct. 2720, 53 L.Ed.2d 786, 800 [upholding exclusion of woman as prison guard in maximum-security male prison]; Long v. State Personnel Bd. (1974) 41 C.A.3d 1000, 1015, 116 C.R. 562 [upholding exclusion of female minister as chaplain at state youth training center].)

(3) Illustrations. Alameda v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1984) 153 C.A.3d 499, 505, 200 C.R. 381, supra, §923, distinguishing Dothard, held that gender was not a bona fide occupational qualification for the position of cook in a men's prison, in the absence of evidence that hiring a woman would seriously threaten the privacy interests of male inmates, endanger the security of the prison, or unreasonably increase the likelihood of physical injury to the applicant. However, "except in extreme circumstances, government agencies must attempt to make suitable accommodations in matters where the privacy interests of the population to be served clash with the applicant's right to obtain a job without fear of sexual discrimination." (153 C.A.3d 506.)

In Bohemian Club v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1986) 187 C.A.3d 1, 231 C.R. 769, the FEHC filed an accusation against the club, a private nonprofit men's association, alleging that its hiring policy systematically excluded women from all temporary and permanent jobs at its campground facilities and most of these positions at its city location. The club denied that it is a covered employer, asserted that male gender is a bona fide occupational qualification, and alleged that the FEHA is preempted by Title VII of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 (supra, §847). The FEHC ordered the club to institute an affirmative action program (see infra, §965 et seq.) to employ women at both its camp and city locations. The trial court set aside the FEHC's decision and dismissed the underlying accusation. Held, judgment reversed.

(a) A private nonprofit social club is an "employer," subject to the FEHA. (187 C.A.3d 9; see supra, §918.)

(b) Compelling the club to hire women did not violate the members' constitutional right of association (see supra, §378 et seq.). This right protects "highly personal" and "intimate" relationships, but no such relationship existed between the club members and the club employees so as to warrant protection from state intrusion. (187 C.A.3d 11 et seq.) Moreover, the impact of forced hiring of female employees on club members' associational rights was justified "by the state's compelling interest in eliminating employment discrimination." (187 C.A.3d 14.)

(c) The FEHA is not preempted by Title VII of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964. Even though Title VII excludes coverage of private clubs, the inclusion of these clubs in the FEHA coverage "in no way hinders Title VII's overriding objective of eliminating employment discrimination." (187 C.A.3d 17.) "Title VII is neutral on the subject of all employment practices it does not prohibit"; thus, states are free to extend their antidiscrimination laws to areas not covered by Title VII. (187 C.A.3d 15, 18.)

(d) Male gender is not a bona fide occupational qualification for club employees. (1) To justify discrimination against women, the employer must establish "a factual basis for believing that all or substantially all women would be unable to perform safely and efficiently the duties of the job involved," and must also establish that it would be impossible to rearrange job responsibilities. (187 C.A.3d 19.) The preference of club members for male employees cannot form the basis of a defense. (187 C.A.3d 19 et seq.) (2) Claims based on the privacy interests of club members were not justified where the club facilities had enclosed showers and bathrooms; if a member chose not to use these enclosed facilities, no legally enforceable right of privacy was impaired. (187 C.A.3d 22.)

In Proksel v. Gattis (1996) 41 C.A.4th 1626, 49 C.R.2d 322, plaintiff filed sexual discrimination and harassment charges against defendant employer on the grounds that he had given preferential treatment to another employee with whom he was romantically involved. Held, "a romantic relationship between a supervisor and an employee does not, without more, give rise to a sexual discrimination or sexual harassment claim either under the FEHA or the public policy of the state." Because plaintiff "has shown nothing more than such a relationship, her sexual discrimination and harassment claims were properly dismissed." (41 C.4th 1631.) However, evidence of a romantic involvement with another employee might be relevant to prove liability under another theory, such as creation of a hostile work environment, where there is other evidence to support that theory. (41 C.4th 1629, 1630.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.158 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Nature and Scope of Requirement. See 34 Pepperdine L. Rev. 313 [Keeping Discrimination Theory Front and Center in the Discourse Over Work and Family Conflict].

29 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

3. Sex Discrimination.

bb. Discrimination Based on Pregnancy.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 926

[§ 926] Discrimination Based on Pregnancy.

(1) Statutory Provisions. It is an unlawful employment practice, unless based on a bona fide occupational qualification, to discriminate against females because of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition. (See Govt.C. 12945; Govt.C. 12926 [defining "sex" as including pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions].) The statute specifies a number of prohibited acts, including (a) refusal to allow reasonable pregnancy leave; (b) refusal to allow the usual benefits or privileges of employment; and (c) refusal to transfer a pregnant employee to a less strenuous or hazardous position, where this can be reasonably accommodated. (Govt.C. 12945; see Govt.C. 12943(a) [prohibition against discrimination by school districts].) (See Williams v. MacFrugal's Bargains-Close-outs (1998) 67 C.A.4th 479, 482, 79 C.R.2d 98 [phrase "related medical conditions" in Govt.C. 12945 only applies to medical conditions related to pregnancy or childbirth; it does not "cover 'indirect' related medical conditions, such as a 'diagnostic hysterectomy' performed years after childbirth"]; 17 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 409 [equal opportunity child care]; on pregnancy discrimination under federal statute, see supra, §877.)

(2) Illustrations. In Johnson Controls v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1990) 218 C.A.3d 517, 267 C.R. 158, J, the operator of an automotive battery plant, voluntarily adopted a "fetal protection program" that excluded women of child-bearing age and capacity from jobs involving exposure to lead oxide. Respondent F, a young, physically able woman, applied for a job as a cast-on-strap loader (COS loader), but was denied employment because she declined to produce medical evidence of infertility. She filed a complaint with the FEHC. The Commission, after lengthy hearings, found that J's exclusion of F constituted unlawful sex discrimination, and that the two justifications relied on by the company--bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) and business necessity (BND)--were not supported by sufficient proof. J sought administrative mandamus, and the superior court, reweighing the evidence under the independent judgment test, granted the writ, ruling (1) that J had proved a substantial risk of harm, and (2) that the Commission erred in failing to consider the business necessity defense. Held, reversed.

(a) The substantial evidence test was the appropriate standard of review. There is no vested right of an employer to conduct a business free of reasonable governmental rules and regulations. (218 C.A.3d 531, citing Northern Inyo Hosp. v. Fair Emp. Practice Com. (1974) 38 C.A.3d 14, 112 C.R. 872.) Hence, the Commission's decision must be upheld unless the record shows it so lacking in evidentiary support as to make the decision unreasonable. (218 C.A.3d 532.)

(b) Govt.C. 12940 makes it unlawful to refuse to hire on the basis of sex unless the practice is "based upon a bona fide occupational qualification." The California Code of Regulations makes it unlawful to refuse to hire a female because she is of child-bearing age, or to require an employee to be sterilized as a condition of employment. Here, the evidence is uncontradicted: "Before a woman could obtain work under the fetal protection program, she must demonstrate, in effect, there is medical certainty that she is sterile." (218 C.A.3d 533.)

(c) After a number of federal decisions had reached conflicting decisions on the issue of sex discrimination based on pregnancy, Congress enacted the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA) (supra, §877) to provide that discrimination based on sex includes discrimination based on pregnancy, childbirth, and related medical conditions. "The effect of the PDA was to make categorical discrimination against a subclass of women, viz., pregnant women, discrimination on the basis of sex, requiring affirmative proof that 'nonpregnancy' was a bona fide occupational qualification." (218 C.A.3d 535.)

(d) The scientific evidence offered on the effect of lead in the blood did not justify the exclusion of fertile females only: "[T]he evidentiary paucity supports the factual conclusion that the exclusion of fertile women only from the battery factory workplace is a facial, blatant, overt gender based job discrimination" violative of Govt.C. 12940, "unless warranted by a bona fide occupational qualification." (218 C.A.3d 539.)

(e) The BFOQ defense is an extremely narrow exception to the general prohibition of discrimination on the basis of sex. An employer has the burden of proving "that he had reasonable cause to believe ... that all or substantially all women would be unable to perform safely and efficiently the duties of the job involved." (218 C.A.3d 541.) "In contrast, the BND is to be applied in connection with facially neutral practices that have a demonstrably disproportionate and adverse impact on members of a protected class. ... The test is whether there exists an overriding legitimate business purpose such that the practice is necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business." (218 C.A.3d 541.)

(f) J failed to establish a factual basis for applying the BFOQ defense. "There is no evidence that fertile women cannot efficiently perform jobs involving contact with lead at the Company's facilities. Although some women have become pregnant while working there, thus creating the possibility of harm to their offspring, this fact falls far short of a showing that 'all or substantially all' female workers create such a risk." (218 C.A.3d 542.) Federal cases holding that fetal protection programs are subject to the BND test are not controlling and will not be followed. (218 C.A.3d 543.)

(g) "From the perspective of fetal protection, until a fertile woman becomes pregnant, she stands in precisely the same position as a fertile man; in either case, the danger to unborn offspring is nonexistent, or, at least, identical (assuming as evidence suggests there may be some danger of injury to reproductive cells posed by exposure to lead compounds). It is not the abstract biological fact that women are capable of becoming pregnant which supposedly requires the exclusion of women, but rather the chance that they will become pregnant--a factor speaking more about the ability of women to control their lives and their bodies than about biological distinctions." (218 C.A.3d 550.)

(h) J's policy is predicated on "the presumption that the employer is better suited to safeguard the interests of a woman's future offspring, should there be an unexpected pregnancy, than is the woman herself--i.e., that society's interest in fetal safety is best served, not by fully informing women of the risks involved and allowing them to make informed choices, not by fixing the workplace, but rather by removing from women the opportunity to make any choices in the matter at all." (218 C.A.3d 551.) "[T]his is not discrimination based on 'objective differences' between men and women, it is discrimination based on categorical, long ago discarded assumptions about the ability of women to govern their sexuality and about the comparative ability of women to make reasoned, informed choices." (218 C.A.3d 551.)

(i) "However laudable the concern by businesses such as J for the safety of the unborn, they may not effectuate their goals in that regard at the expense of a woman's ability to obtain work for which she is otherwise qualified." (218

C.A.3d 552.) (See International Union, United Auto., Aerospace & Agricultural Implement Workers of America, UAW v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 111 S.Ct. 1196, 113 L.Ed.2d 158, supra, §863; Carr v. Barnabey's Hotel Corp. (1994) 23 C.A.4th 14, 19, 28 C.R.2d 127 [verdict for plaintiff hotel employee was supported by evidence that food and beverage director told plaintiff "this was no place for pregnant women to be" and "no woman talks to me this way," and that other employees were stupid and lazy due to her incompetence]; Spaziano v. Lucky Stores (1999) 69 C.A.4th 106, 112, 81 C.R.2d 378 [employer's policy of providing pregnant disabled workers with same leave as other workers disabled by nonindustrial causes, though less than workers disabled through work-related illness or injury, was not discriminatory]; 99 A.L.R.5th 1 [discrimination against pregnant employee].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.162

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Illustrations. See Kelly v. Stamps.com (2005) 135 C.A.4th 1088, 1100, 38 C.R.3d 240 [trial court erred in granting summary judgment to defendant employer in action for pregnancy discrimination based on plaintiff's dismissal during defendant's downsizing when plaintiff was 7 months pregnant; plaintiff's superior had listed her as person to retain and her reviews had been excellent, but new CEO claimed that plaintiff had "already checked out," and his contract turnaround specialist, who later took over plaintiff's duties, submitted new, critical review within 1 day of plaintiff's complaint that impending dismissal might be based on her pregnancy].

30 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
4. Sexual Harassment.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 927

[§ 927] In General.

(1) Nature of Prohibition. It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer or other covered entity to harass an employee or applicant because of race, etc., including sex. (Govt.C. 12940(j); see supra, §922.) For this purpose, harassment because of sex includes "sexual harassment, gender harassment, and harassment based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions." (Govt.C. 12940(j)(4)(C).) Govt.C. 12940(j) "is declaratory of existing law, except for the new duties imposed on employers with regard to harassment." (Govt.C. 12940(j)(2).) (See Govt.C. 12950.1 [requiring employers with 50 or more employees to provide specified education and training on sexual harassment to supervisory employees]; on who is employer for harassment purposes, see supra, §918; on employer's liability for acts of nonemployees generally with respect to sexual harassment, see supra, §916; on sexual harassment under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, see supra, §864 et seq.; on supervisor as "person" subject to liability for sexual harassment under FEHA, see supra, §919; on sexual harassment occurring in professional relationship, see supra, §896.)

The following decisions are illustrative. (See Farmers Ins. Group v. Santa Clara (1995) 11 C.4th 992, 1001, 47 C.R.2d 478, 906 P.2d 440, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §240 [sexual harassment was not within deputy sheriff's scope of employment]; Proksel v. Gattis (1996) 41 C.A.4th 1626, 49 C.R.2d 322, supra, §925; Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 C.A.4th 1318, 1327, 58 C.R.2d 308, supra, §919 [mere inaction by nonharassing supervisor does not constitute aiding and abetting]; Birschstein v. New United Motor Mfg. (2001) 92 C.A.4th 994, 1001, 1003, 112 C.R.2d 347 [trial court erred in finding that coworker's repeated acts of staring at plaintiff could not qualify as actionable sexual harassment as matter of law, particularly in light of coworker's prior overt acts of sexual harassment; applying continuing violation doctrine of Richards v. CH2M Hill (2001) 26 C.4th 798, 111 C.R.2d 87, 29 P.3d 175, 3 Cal. Procedure (4th), Actions, Supp., §521]; Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 C.A.4th 142, 149, 124 C.R.2d 1 [student display for 24 hours of art piece depicting employee engaged in sexual act was not sufficiently severe or pervasive to warrant liability for sexual harassment]; Sheffield v. Los Angeles County Dept. of Social Services (2003) 109 C.A.4th 153, 164, 134 C.R.2d 492 [trial court erred in granting defendant's motion for summary judgment in sexual harassment action where, although harassment lasted less than 7 days, defendant knew that harasser might be violent; defendant's failure to act could be found to have amounted to deliberate indifference that caused plaintiff to suffer physical attack by harasser].)

The FEHA establishes "minimum requirements" for employers to ensure a workplace free of sexual harassment:

(a) The department must amend its poster on discrimination in employment to include information on the illegality of sexual harassment, and every employer must post the amended poster in a prominent and accessible location. (Govt.C. 12950(a).)

(b) Every employer must (1) distribute to all employees the department's information sheet on sexual harassment, or (2) provide to all employees equivalent information containing, at a minimum, components on the illegality, definition, and description of sexual harassment, the employer's internal complaint process, the legal remedies and complaint process available through, and directions on how to contact, the department and the Commission, and the protection provided against retaliation. (Govt.C. 12950(b), (c).) (See Govt.C. 12950(d) [compliance or noncompliance with distribution requirements does not establish or negate employer's liability for sexual harassment]; Govt.C. 12950(e) [if employer violates section, Commission must issue order requiring compliance].)

(2) Hostile Work Environment. To support a claim for sexual harassment involving creation of a hostile work environment, the alleged misconduct need not seriously affect the plaintiff employee's psychological well-being. "So long as the environment reasonably would be perceived, and is perceived, as hostile or abusive, there is no need for it also to be psychologically injurious." (Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 C.A.4th 397, 412, 27 C.R.2d 457 [trial judge properly rejected instruction to contrary].) However, to prove a claim for sexual harassment involving an abusive workplace, a nexus must be established between the allegedly hostile environment and plaintiff's experience in the workplace. "Harassment against others in the workplace is only relevant to the plaintiff's case if she has personal knowledge of it. Unless plaintiff witnesses the conduct against others, or is otherwise aware of it, that conduct cannot alter the conditions of her employment and create an abusive working environment." (Beyda v. Los Angeles (1998) 65 C.A.4th 511, 520, 76 C.R.2d 547 [evidence of acts of sexual harassment against others was properly excluded where acts did not occur in plaintiff's presence and plaintiff failed to present evidence that she knew of acts during employment].)

(3) After-Acquired Evidence Doctrine Is Not Applicable. Application of the after-acquired evidence doctrine (supra, §860) to bar claims for sexual harassment during the employment relationship when the employer discovers evidence of wrongdoing that, in any event, would have led to an employee's discharge on legitimate and lawful grounds, would not serve the purposes of the antidiscrimination statutes. The likely consequence of widespread exploitation of the doctrine would be underenforcement of the statutes and underdeterrence of discriminatory employment practices. "In applying the after-acquired evidence doctrine, the equities between employer and employee can be balanced by barring all portions of the employment discrimination claim tied to the employee's discharge." (Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods (1998) 65 C.A.4th 833, 849, 850, 77 C.R.2d 12 [involving sexual harassment of illegal alien hired with false documents].)

(4) Harassment by Customer or Client. An employer may be liable for sexual harassment by a customer or client under specified circumstances. (See Govt.C. 12940(j)(1), supra, §916; Salazar v. Diversified Paratransit (2004) 117 C.A.4th 318, 326, 11 C.R.3d 630 [statute is clarification of existing law and may be applied retroactively].)

(5) Texts and Commentary. Many articles have commented on sexual harassment in the workplace. (See 18 California Lawyer 73 (November 1998) [Investigating Sexual Harassment]; 34 Cal. Western L. Rev. 457 [study of factors affecting employee perceptions and consequences of sexual harassment]; 19 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 215 [sexual harassment, fair housing, and expanding statutory remedies into common law framework]; 28 U.S.F. L. Rev. 715 [sexual harassment of attorneys by clients]; 18 A.L.R.4th 328 [sexual harassment of employee as violation of state civil rights law]; 93 A.L.R.5th 47 [when is work environment intimidating, hostile, or offensive]; 94 A.L.R.5th 1 [when is supervisor's or coemployee's hostile environment sexual harassment imputable to employer]; 62 Am.Jur. Trials 235 [Workplace Sexual Harassment: Quid Pro Quo].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.167

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Nature of Prohibition. See Bradley v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 C.A.4th 1612, 1630, 71 C.R.3d 222 [once employer is informed about sexual harassment, employer must take remedial action designed both to stop harassment and to deter future harassment; it is not sufficient for employer simply to conduct investigation]. (2) Hostile Work Environment. "[A]n employee may establish an actionable claim of sexual harassment under the FEHA by demonstrating that widespread sexual favoritism was severe or pervasive enough to alter his or her working conditions and create a hostile work environment." A hostile work environment can be established by showing that the objectionable conduct conveyed the message that management views women as "sexual playthings" or that the way for women to succeed in the workplace is to engage in sexual conduct, thereby creating a demeaning atmosphere. (Miller v. Department of Corrections (2005) 36 C.4th 446, 466, 468, 30 C.R.3d 797, 115 P.3d 77 [plaintiff raised triable issue of fact on issue whether sexual favoritism by prison warden constituted hostile work environment].) (See CACI, No. 2521A [essential factual elements]; CACI, Nos. 2521C, 2522C [widespread sexual favoritism]; CACI, No. 2524 ["severe or pervasive" explained].)

The essence of a sexual harassment claim based on a hostile work environment "is the disparate treatment of an employee on the basis of sex--not the mere discussion of sex or use of vulgar language" in the employee's presence. Although the use of coarse and vulgar language in the workplace might establish actionable sexual harassment, the FEHA "does not outlaw sexually coarse and vulgar language or conduct that merely offends." (Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Productions (2006) 38 C.4th 264, 280, 287, 295, 42 C.R.3d 2, 132 P.3d 211 [defendant television writers met burden of showing that cause of action for sexual harassment had no merit; none of sexual antics and coarse language was directed at plaintiff, plaintiff was warned that creative process in writing show involved sexual discussions and coarse language, and most of conduct took place in group sessions with both male and female writers recounting sexual experiences while brainstorming and generating script ideas for adult-themed show; plaintiff failed to show how vulgar discussions and conduct affected her work hours or duties in disparate manner].) (See Mokler v. Orange (2007) 157 C.A.4th 121, 145, 68 C.R.3d 568 [plaintiff failed to establish hostile work environment by evidence of isolated rude, offensive, and boorish comments and nonsexual and slight touchings made by defendant who did not work in same building as plaintiff and who was not plaintiff's supervisor]; 40 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1963 [Lyle].)

(4) Harassment by Customer or Client. See Carter v. California Dept. of Veterans Affairs (2006) 38 C.4th 914, 44 C.R.3d 223, 135 P.3d 637, Supp., supra, §916 [retroactive application of Govt.C. 12940(j)(1)]. (5) Texts and Commentary. See 25 California Lawyer 37 (March 2005) [Rules for Sexual Harassment Training]. Correction: Page 431, line 7 of first full paragraph, "Birschstein" should read "Birschtein".

31 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

4. Sexual Harassment.

bb. Liability of Supervisor or Coworker.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 928

[§ 928] Liability of Supervisor or Coworker.

(1) Supervisors. In Department of Health Services v. Superior Court (2003) 31 C.4th 1026, 6 C.R.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556, plaintiff was sexually harassed by her supervisor for nearly 2 years before she reported the harassment to management. Once the report was made, an investigation commenced and disciplinary action against the supervisor was taken. Plaintiff brought an action for sexual harassment against defendant employer for violation of the FEHA. Defendant sought to defend the action based on the federal defense to Title VII actions, as enunciated in Burlington Industries v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S.Ct 2257, 141 L.Ed.2d 633, supra, §866, and Faragher v. Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S.Ct 2275, 141 L.Ed.2d 662, supra, §866. Held, under the FEHA, an employer is strictly liable for sexual harassment by a supervisor, but the avoidable consequences doctrine may limit an employer's liability. Although instructive, federal precedent does not apply. (31 C.4th 1040.)

(a) "The FEHA imposes two standards of employer liability for sexual harassment, depending on whether the person engaging in the harassment is the victim's supervisor or a nonsupervisory coemployee." (31 C.4th 1040.) Here, the harasser was a supervisor, and "an employer is liable for all acts of sexual harassment by a supervisor. But strict liability is not absolute in the sense that it precludes all defenses. ... Even under a strict liability standard, a plaintiff's own conduct may limit the amount of damages recoverable or bar recovery entirely." (31 C.4th 1042.)

(b) Under the FEHA, an employee may recover those damages "generally available in noncontractual actions." In civil actions generally, that right is qualified by the common law doctrine of avoidable consequences, which is described in the Rest.2d, Torts, §918(1), as preventing the injured party from recovering damages for harm he or she could have avoided "by the use of reasonable effort or expenditure after the commission of the tort." (31 C.4th 1042.)

(c) The defendant bears the burden of pleading and proving the defense. It has three elements: "(1) the employer took reasonable steps to prevent and correct workplace sexual harassment; (2) the employee unreasonably failed to use the preventive and corrective measures that the employer provided; and (3) reasonable use of the employer's procedures would have prevented at least some of the harm that the employee suffered." (31 C.4th 1044.)

(d) The avoidable consequences doctrine allows an employer to escape liability only for those damages "that the employee more likely than not could have prevented with reasonable effort and without undue risk, expense, or humiliation, by taking advantage of the employer's internal complaint procedures appropriately designed to prevent and eliminate sexual harassment. Deciding when a harassed employee has first suffered compensable harm and when a reasonable employee would have reported the harassment will in many and perhaps most instances present disputed factual issues to be resolved by application of practical knowledge and experience." (31 C.4th 1044.) Delay that results from the employee's initial resort to informal attempts to resolve the problem with the supervisor must be carefully evaluated to determine whether it was reasonable in the particular employment situation. (31 C.4th 1045.)

(e) Being part of the law of damages, the avoidable consequences doctrine only affects the remedy. "If the employer establishes that the employee, by taking reasonable steps to utilize employer-provided complaint procedures, could have caused the harassing conduct to cease, the employer will nonetheless remain liable for any compensable harm the employee suffered before the time at which the harassment would have ceased, and the employer avoids liability only for the harm the employee incurred thereafter." (31 C.4th 1045.)

(f) The avoidable consequences doctrine furthers the goal of the FEHA by encouraging employees to use employer-provided grievance procedures, and thus to stop harassment before it becomes severe or pervasive. However, exhausting an employer's grievance procedures is not a prerequisite to filing an FEHA claim or bringing an FEHA action; it is merely a relevant factor in determining the merits of the avoidable consequences defense should the employer choose to assert it. (31 C.4th 1047.) (See Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 C.A.4th 920, 931, 10 C.R.3d 852 [trial court erred in instructing jury that to be supervisor, one must be "fully accountable and responsible" for employee's performance and work product; this instruction narrowed definition of "supervisor" contained in FEHA, impaired plaintiff's rights under statute, and incorrectly stated statutory requirements for liability]; on liability of supervisors under FEHA generally, see supra, §919.)

(2) Coworker Liability. Govt.C. 12940 was amended in 2000 in response to Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 C.4th 1132, 90 C.R.2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083. The statute now provides that an employee is personally liable for harassment prohibited by Govt.C. 12940 "that is perpetrated by the employee, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action." (Govt.C. 12940(j)(3).) Although the statute specifically states that it is "declaratory of existing law" (see Govt.C. 12940(j)(2)), the amendment does more than just clarify existing law; it imposes personal liability on nonsupervisory coworkers where, according to Carrisales, there had been none. Thus, the amendment does not apply retroactively. (McClung v. Employment Dev. Dept. (2004) 34 C.4th 467, 471, 20 C.R.3d 428, 99 P.3d 1015.) (See 32 McGeorge L. Rev. 483 [personal liability for sexual harassment under FEHA]; 61 Am.Jur. Trials 489 [Individual Liability for Sexual Harassment]; BAJI, No. 12.21 [direct liability and as aider and abettor].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Supervisors. See Myers v. Trendwest Resorts (2007) 148 C.A.4th 1403, 1421, 56 C.R.3d 501 [following Department of Health Services v. Superior Court (2003) 31 C.4th 1026, 6 C.R.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556, text, p. 433; trial court erred in granting summary judgment to employer on sexual harassment claim even though worst harassment took place outside office; there was no private relationship between supervisor and employee unconnected with employment and harassing conduct occurred during work-related excursions]; CACI, No. 2525 ["supervisor" defined]. (2) Coworker Liability. See CACI, No. 2521A [hostile work environment--essential factual elements].

32 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
4. Sexual Harassment.
cc. Harassment of Applicant.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 929

[§ 929] Harassment of Applicant.

In Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 C.A.4th 1038, 58 C.R.2d 122, the issue was posed as follows: "An aspiring actor is first drugged and then gang-raped by a casting director and four other men one Sunday at the casting director's home. Can the actor successfully allege causes of action for sexual harassment and negligent hiring against the casting director's employers?" (50 C.A.4th 1042.) Held, a cause of action for sexual harassment lies, but not one for negligent hiring. Plaintiff alleged that he was recruited and groomed by defendant M for an acting position at defendant ABC, where M was a casting director. Over the course of a month, M spent several hours a day working with plaintiff and preparing him for auditions. Finally, on a Sunday morning, plaintiff, at M's request, went to M's home for what he thought was a meeting to further his acting career. Instead, plaintiff was drugged, beaten, and gang-raped by M and four other men. Plaintiff's complaint with respect to ABC alleged causes of action for sexual harassment and negligent hiring.

(a) The FEHA prohibits sexual harassment not only of employees, but also of applicants. (Former Govt.C. 12940(h), now Govt.C. 12940(j).) Contrary to what ABC seems to suggest, the same conduct can give rise to both civil and criminal liability, and a violent sexual assault can be the basis of a claim under the Act for sexual harassment. (50 C.A.4th 1045.)

(b) Under former Govt.C. 12940(h)(1) (now Govt.C. 12940(j)(1)), an employer is strictly liable for harassment by an agent or supervisor, but is liable for harassment by a coworker only if the employer knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate corrective action. Here, plaintiff's allegations are sufficient to allege that M was ABC's agent. (50 C.A.4th 1046.) The Act applies to employees and applicants. In the case of an applicant, the counterpart to a supervisor must be the person to whom application for employment is made. The complaint alleges that M acted as ABC's agent in finding, grooming, and recruiting actors. These allegations establish that, vis-a-vis plaintiff's position as a potential employee at ABC, M was an "agent" within the terms of the Act. (50 C.A.4th 1047.)

(c) Decisions from the FEHC, cited in Capitol City Foods v. Superior Court (1992) 5 C.A.4th 1042, 7 C.R.2d 418, have recognized that, while harassing conduct need not occur in the workplace, it must occur in a work-related context.

Unwelcome sexual conduct that occurs outside the workplace but is in some fashion work-related constitutes sexual harassment. Hence, liability is not defeated by the fact that the sexual assault occurred on a Sunday at M's home. (50 C.A.4th 1048.)

(d) Rigid principles of respondeat superior apparently do not apply to FEHA claims, but they do provide guidance. (50 C.A.4th 1048, citing Farmers Ins. Group v. Santa Clara (1995) 11 C.4th 992, 47 C.R.2d 478, 906 P.2d 440, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §240.) Hence, while liability under the Act is broader than liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior, principles of respondeat superior are still relevant in determining liability for sexual harassment that occurs during nonwork hours away from the workplace. (50 C.A.4th 1048.)

(e) The Supreme Court's recent decision on the relationship between respondeat superior and sexual assaults, Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hosp. (1995) 12 C.4th 291, 48 C.R.2d 510, 907 P.2d 358, involved a plaintiff who was sexually molested by a technician while undergoing a hospital examination. The court, noting that vicarious liability under principles of respondeat superior requires a causal nexus between the tort and the employee's work, i.e., some relationship between the nature of the work involved and the type of tort committed, concluded as a matter of law that the hospital could not be held vicariously liable for the assault. (50 C.A.4th 1049.)

(f) This case is different. A casting director, acting as gatekeeper to the glamorous world of entertainment, occupies a position that will predictably create the risk that he will commit intentional torts of the type involved here. The hiring process for actors and actresses is not limited to the workplace, and plaintiff's allegations reveal a pattern of conduct by which plaintiff was essentially at M's beck and call. It is not farfetched that plaintiff believed his presence at M's home on that Sunday would advance his acting ambitions, and M's alleged conduct thus was sufficiently work-related to render ABC liable. (50 C.A.4th 1050.) Plaintiff's allegations are adequate to establish a statutory claim for sexual harassment, and, if plaintiff can prove those allegations, ABC is strictly liable without regard to what it knew or should have known about M's propensities. (50 C.A.4th 1052, 1053.)

(g) The conclusion here is not inconsistent with Capitol City Foods, the only published case to consider an employer's liability for sexual harassment by a supervisor while off duty and not at the workplace. Capitol City Foods involved a date between the plaintiff and her supervisor; the impetus for the date came from the plaintiff, the date was not work-related, and it did not occur in a work-related context. It did not involve "anything like the pattern of conduct alleged here where the applicant's admission to employment requires continuous participation in a variety of activities at various locations in pursuit of his acting career." (50 C.A.4th 1052.)

(h) Plaintiff's causes of action for violation of former Govt.C. 12940(i) (now Govt.C. 12940(k)) (failure to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent discrimination and harassment) and negligent hiring fail. The cornerstone of a negligent hiring theory is the risk that the employee will act in a certain way and the employee does act in that way. Here, no facts are alleged to show ABC's prior knowledge of M's propensity to engage in this particular form of sexual harassment. Allegations that ABC knew that M used mind-altering drugs and used his position to gain sexual favors do not show knowledge that he would surreptitiously drug a prospective employee and then brutally assault him. (50 C.A.4th 1053, 1054.) (On sexual harassment under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, see supra, §864 et seq.; on who is an employer for harassment purposes, see supra, §918; on coworker liability for sexual harassment, see supra, §928.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

33 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
4. Sexual Harassment.
dd. Same-Gender Harassment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 930

[§ 930] Same-Gender Harassment.

In Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 C.A.4th 1409, 26 C.R.2d 116, plaintiff, a male, filed an action for sexual harassment, claiming that his supervisor, also male, had made sexual comments to him, asked him to perform sexual acts on him, and falsely told others that plaintiff had engaged in sex with him. The trial judge sustained defendants' demurrers without leave to amend, and denied plaintiff's motion for reconsideration. Held, plaintiff's petition for mandamus granted.

(a) Sexual harassment may be of two types. To state a cause of action for "quid pro quo" harassment, the plaintiff need only allege that "a term of employment was expressly or impliedly conditioned on acceptance of a supervisor's unwelcome sexual advances." (20 C.A.4th 1414.) A cause of action for "hostile environment" harassment, by contrast, is stated where the plaintiff alleges that the employer created a hostile environment for the plaintiff because of the plaintiff's sex. (20 C.A.4th 1415.)

(b) The only previous California case alleging same-gender harassment was a hostile environment case, Hart v. National Mortg. & Land Co. (1987) 189 C.A.3d 1420, 235 C.R. 68. There, the court stated that the alleged harassment was not "because of sex," but admitted that if the plaintiff had been a woman, the alleged misconduct would have unquestionably constituted sexual harassment. "Hart's failure to mention, much less discuss, this double standard leaves the opinion vulnerable to criticism." Furthermore, to the extent Hart turned on the lack of showing of discrimination in the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, it rested on Govt.C. 12940(a), not former Govt.C. 12940(h) (now Govt.C. 12940(j)), which is the basis for the present case. (20 C.A.4th 1416.)

(c) There is no support in the statutory language for the contention that the Legislature intended to limit protection from sexual harassment to male-female harassment, and this conclusion is confirmed by decisions under federal law. Behavior inflicted on a plaintiff "because of sex" need not be tolerated simply because the plaintiff is a member of the "empowered" gender. (20 C.A.4th 1416, 1417.)

(d) Thus, an action for sexual harassment may be stated under the FEHA "by a member of the same sex as the harasser, whether based on the quid pro quo theory or the hostile environment theory or a hybrid of both theories." (20 C.A.4th 1418.) (See 73 A.L.R.5th 1 [Same-Sex Sexual Harassment Under State Antidiscrimination Laws]; on same gender harassment under federal Civil Rights Act, see supra, §865.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006) 140 C.A.4th 1547, 1561, 45 C.R.3d 597 [applying guidelines of Lyle v. Warner Bros. Television Productions (2006) 38 C.4th 264, 42 C.R.3d 2, 132 P.3d 211, Supp., supra, §927; trial court erred in granting summary judgment to defendant employer where there were material issues of fact regarding whether plaintiff was subjected to sexual harassment; male-on-male harassment that consistently challenges employee's heterosexual identity is harassment "because of sex"; motive behind harassment need not be sexual].

34 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
 Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

5. Sexual Orientation Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 931

[§ 931] Sexual Orientation Discrimination.

(1) Development of Law. The 1992 Legislature codified decisions prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation (supra, §708), based on former Lab.C. 1102.1. (See Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 C.A.4th 590, 596, 18 C.R.2d 33 [municipal ordinance prohibiting discrimination in employment on basis of sexual orientation was preempted by FEHA, even though Act did not ban discrimination on basis of sexual orientation]; 18 California Lawyer 59 (June, 1998) [Eliminating Sexual Orientation Bias]; 24 Pacific L. J. 969; 66 So. Cal. L. Rev. 2297 [discussion of background, constitutional issues, cases, and legislative history of Lab.C. 1102.1 and related sections]; 82 A.L.R.5th 1 [validity, etc., of state enactment or regulation prohibiting sexual orientation discrimination]; on same-gender sexual harassment, see Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 C.A.4th 1409, 26 C.R.2d 116, supra, §930; on sexual orientation discrimination as violation of Equal Protection Clause, see supra, §§708, 798.)

(2) Sexual Orientation as Covered Characteristic Under FEHA. Lab.C. 1102.1 was repealed in 1999, and "sexual orientation" was added to the list of characteristics protected by the FEHA. (See Govt.C. 12920, 12921, supra, §915; Govt.C. 12940, supra, §921.) "Sexual orientation" is defined as "heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality." (Govt.C. 12926(q).) (See Murray v. Oceanside Unified School Dist. (2000) 79 C.A.4th 1338, 1357, 95 C.R.2d 28 [plaintiff could proceed under either or both FEHA and former Lab.C. 1102.1 for workplace harassment based on sexual orientation; because conduct that would have violated Lab.C. 1102.1 as it read on December 1, 1999, is deemed violation of FEHA as amended, "harassing conduct, as well as adverse employment consequences, are each fully actionable when sexual orientation harassment in the workplace is involved"].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.164

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Sexual Orientation as Covered Characteristic Under FEHA. See Hope v. California Youth Authority (2005) 134 C.A.4th 577, 589, 36 C.R.3d 154 [evidence that plaintiff's supervisor continually called plaintiff "motherfuckin' faggot" and "homo," that kitchen security officer continually called plaintiff "faggot ass bitch" and "faggot ass motherfucker" and that he refused to let wards assist plaintiff in cooking duties and told them that plaintiff thought male wards were pretty, and openly refused to discipline wards when plaintiff complained about their misbehavior, that all of this conduct was well known to other employees and to supervisors, and that plaintiff's promotion was revoked, in violation of departmental policies, on ground that he was "just not right," supported finding of harassment because of sexual orientation under FEHA].

35 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
6. Age Discrimination.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 932

[§ 932] In General.

(1) Development of Law. Under former Govt.C. 12941, it was an unlawful employment practice "to refuse to hire or employ, or to discharge, dismiss, reduce, suspend or demote, any individual over the age of 40 on the ground of age." The statute included several general and specific exceptions, including where: (a) the law provided otherwise, (b) the employee or applicant failed to meet "bona fide requirements" of the job, (c) bona fide retirement or pension programs or existing collective-bargaining agreements were applicable, or (d) promotions or hiring were made on the basis of experience and training; rehiring was based on seniority and prior service; or hiring was made under an established recruiting program. (Former Govt.C. 12941(a).) The statute did not limit the right to select or refer "the better qualified person from among all applicants for a job," and the burden of proving a violation was on the claimant. (Former Govt.C. 12941(b).)

Govt.C. 12941 was repealed in 2002. Age is now a protected class under Govt.C. 12940. (See infra, §934.) (See Levy v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1988) 199 C.A.3d 1334, 1343, 245 C.R. 576 [as guide to analysis of claims under FEHA, California looks to federal decisions]; Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 C.4th 121, 135, 32 C.R.2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074, 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §248 [Legislature's restriction of employer liability to employers of five or more persons under Govt.C. 12926(d) indicates it did not intend to make right to be free of age discrimination by small employers a fundamental public policy]; Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 C.4th 880, 885, 66 C.R.2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 [FEHA policy against age discrimination satisfies criteria necessary to support common law action for tortious wrongful discharge]; West v. Bechtel Corp. (2002) 96 C.A.4th 966, 978, 117 C.R.2d 647 [foreign principal's bias against worker cannot be imputed to innocent U.S. agent making business decision that is otherwise neutral]; 51 A.L.R.5th 1 [application of state law to age discrimination in employment]; on age discrimination under federal statute, see supra, §873; on unlawful practice of harassing employee because of age, see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §346.)

Other statutory provisions also recognize and protect the employment rights of older workers. (See, e.g., Govt.C. 12942, 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §343 [prohibition of mandatory retirement]; Govt.C. 19706 [with certain exceptions, applicant for civil service position cannot be required to indicate his or her age on application]; *Unemp.Ins.C. 2070 et seq., 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §342 [employment for older workers]; Welf.C. 9000 et seq. [Older Californians Act; provides employment services, etc.].) (See Smith v. Alum Rock Union Elementary School Dist. (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1651, 1655, 8 C.R.2d 399 [discrimination action under former Educ.C. 23902 was improper; statute conflicted with federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act, supra, §873, and ADEA controls under Supremacy Clause].)*

(2) Prima Facie Case. A prima facie case of age discrimination is established by evidence that the plaintiff is over the age of 40, was performing satisfactorily at the time of termination, and was discharged under circumstances giving rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination, i.e., others under the age of 40 were retained, or plaintiff's job was filled by someone of comparable skill under the age of 40. (Gibbs v. Consolidated Services (2003) 111 C.A.4th 794, 798, 4 C.R.3d 187; see Ewing v. Gill Industries (1992) 3 C.A.4th 601, 610, 4 C.R.2d 640 [instructions on elements of prima facie case, under line of cases following McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668, supra, §870]; Smith v. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (2003) 109 C.A.4th 1637, 1657, 1 C.R.3d 374 [defendants were entitled to summary judgment in action for age discrimination where plaintiff admitted that he was not in physical condition to carry out all his duties and where, after termination, plaintiff's duties were divided up among other employees, many of whom were over age 40 when hired].)

Nothing in the FEHA prohibits classwide claims of systematic discrimination, and in a "pattern or practice" claim, class action plaintiffs are not required to plead individual prima facie cases of discrimination. (Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 C.A.4th 339, 378, 19 C.R.3d 29.)

(3) Replacement by Younger Worker Is Not Required. In Begnal v. Canfield & Associates (2000) 78 C.A.4th 66, 92 C.R.2d 611, plaintiff, a 40-year-old employee, was replaced by an older worker. The court held, in a case of first impression, that although evidence that plaintiff was replaced by an older worker weighs against the inference that she was terminated based on her age, it does not "conclusively establish the absence of age discrimination, or preclude the jury from drawing other inferences." (78 C.A.4th 76.) As stated in Heard v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1996) 44 C.A.4th 1735, 1756, 52 C.R.2d 620, supra, §923, involving racial discrimination: "Although the characteristics of the employee replacing a discharged or demoted employee are certainly relevant in evaluating an employer's motive for an employment decision, we believe those characteristics go to the weight of the evidence rather than its legal sufficiency." (78 C.A.4th 75.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.168 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

36 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

6. Age Discrimination.

bb. Sufficiency of Evidence.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 933

[§ 933] Sufficiency of Evidence.

In Martin v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 29 C.A.4th 1718, 35 C.R.2d 181, a 65-year-old plaintiff sued defendant, claiming that she was laid off from her job because of age discrimination. Held, summary judgment for defendant affirmed; defendant was able to justify its actions.

(a) Had plaintiff reached trial, she would have had the burden of proving age discrimination by defendant. The burden would then have shifted to defendant to show a lawful reason for its action, after which the burden would have returned to plaintiff to show that the justification was a mere pretext. However, in a sense defendant's motion for summary judgment reversed the procedure; defendant was required initially to show either that there was no discrimination or, assuming it existed, that it was justified, the latter being the most appropriate here. (29 C.A.4th 1730.)

(b) As justification for its action, defendant was able to show that the layoff was due to adverse economic conditions. More specifically, plaintiff's manager was directed to lay off two workers, and he determined that one of them should be in the position occupied by plaintiff. A younger woman also occupied this position, so one of the two had to go. To select which workers to keep and which to lay off, defendant had created a salary performance appraisal (SPA), which was weighted in favor of seniority. Despite plaintiff's having more seniority, the younger woman had a higher SPA, and as a result plaintiff was the one laid off. This was sufficient evidence by defendant to establish prima facie justification for its action. (29 C.A.4th 1731.)

(c) It was admitted that plaintiff was competent at her job. However, in an economically motivated layoff, good workers often lose their jobs. The question is whether defendant selected the workers to be laid off in a fair and nondiscriminatory manner. To meet the burden of showing that defendant's justification was a mere pretext, plaintiff attempted to show that defendant had a policy of age discrimination. Specifically, she introduced memos allowing a fund for preferred treatment for "young" people with critical skills and one disallowing pay raises for workers over 60 and management positions for those over 40; a statement by a coworker that persons were ranked first on the basis of whom they knew, and then given an SPA to fit the ranking; unsupported claims of a substantial number of age discrimination suits against defendant since 1988; and various statements directed at plaintiff that showed that, over the years, age discrimination was the prevalent climate at defendant. (29 C.A.4th 1732.)

(d) "Whether or not a trier of fact would find any of this to be persuasive evidence on issues to which it was germane, it is apparent that none of it is material to the issue which was before the trial court and thus is before us, which is whether Martin had raised a triable issue of fact material to Lockheed's showing that on a specific occasion in early 1991 Martin was found available for reassignment by means of valid and fair procedures validly and fairly applied without regard to her age. ... The purpose of the summary judgment procedure, as we perceive it, is to identify those cases in which there is no factual issue which warrants the time and cost of fact-finding by trial. Obviously the procedure cannot fairly serve its purpose unless and until all parties have had sufficient opportunity, through discovery and otherwise, adequately to develop their factual cases. But where, as here, the parties have received (and apparently have utilized) that opportunity, we believe the correct rule to be that to meet an employer's sufficient showing of a legitimate reason for discharge the discharged employee, to avert summary judgment, must produce 'substantial responsive evidence' that the employer's showing was untrue or pretextual. ... For this purpose, speculation cannot be regarded as substantial responsive evidence. ... In our view Martin's showing in the trial court was insufficient to create more than speculation that Lockheed's showing was pretextual or false." (29 C.A.4th 1734, 1735.) (See Hersant v. Department of Social Services (1997) 57 C.A.4th 997, 1004, 67 C.R.2d 483 [following Martin]; Horn v. Cushman & Wakefield Western (1999) 72 C.A.4th 798, 805, 85 C.R.2d 459 [following Martin and Hersant]; Muzquiz v. Emeryville (2000) 79 C.A.4th 1106, 1116, 94 C.R.2d 579 [plaintiff failed to carry burden; following Martin and Hersant].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

37 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
6. Age Discrimination.
cc. Age as Protected Class.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 934

[§ 934] Age as Protected Class.

In Esberg v. Union Oil Co. of Calif. (2002) 28 C.4th 262, 121 C.R.2d 203, 47 P.3d 1069, the question was whether defendant employer's denial of postgraduate educational benefits to plaintiff, a 56-year-old employee, violated the proscription against age discrimination in the FEHA. Held, the statute does not apply.

(a) Two provisions of the FEHA, Govt.C. 12940 and 12941, identify protected classes of people and prohibited forms of discrimination in the workplace. Govt.C. 12940, which includes coverage for discrimination in the terms and condition of employment, does not list age as a protected class. Govt.C. 12941 makes it "an unlawful employment practice to refuse to hire or employ, or to discharge, dismiss, reduce, suspend, or demote, any person over the age of 40 on the ground of age," but does not prohibit discrimination in the terms and conditions of employment. (28 C.4th 268.) "Because the language of these sections is unambiguous, we need not consider various extrinsic aids, such as the purpose of the statute, the evils to be remedied, the legislative history, public policy, or the statutory scheme encompassing the statute." (28 C.4th 269.)

(b) 2 Cal. Code Reg. §7295.2(a), which provides that the denial of employment benefits may be considered in establishing age discrimination, is invalid insofar as it is inconsistent with the authorizing statute. (28 C.4th 270.)

(c) Plaintiff's common law tort claim also fails. A "common law tort claim based on the public policy against age discrimination articulated in the FEHA is subject to the FEHA's limitations on the nature and scope of the statutory prohibition against age discrimination." (28 C.4th 272.) Because the FEHA does not prohibit employers from denying educational benefits on the basis of age, "plaintiff may not ground a common law claim for denial of the same benefits in the FEHA's prohibition against age discrimination." (28 C.4th 272.)

In 2002, the Legislature rejected the reasoning of Esberg. It repealed Govt.C. 12941 and amended Govt.C. 12940 to include age as a class protected against harassment (see Govt.C. 12940(j)) and discrimination, including discrimination in compensation and the "terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" (see Govt.C. 12940(a)). However, an employer still may refuse to employ a person "because of his or her age if the law compels or provides for that refusal.

Promotions within the existing staff, hiring or promotion on the basis of experience and training, rehiring on the basis of seniority and prior service with the employer, or hiring under an established recruiting program from high schools, colleges, universities, or trade schools do not, in and of themselves, constitute unlawful employment practices." (Govt.C. 12940(a)(5).) Further, an employer or employment agency may inquire into an applicant's age, and specify age limitations, "where the law compels or provides for that action." (Govt.C. 12940(d); see Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 C.A.4th 339, 396, 19 C.R.3d 29 [amendments to Govt.C. 12940(d), as they apply to employment agencies, do not apply retroactively].) (See Gibbs v. Consolidated Services (2003) 111 C.A.4th 794, 800, 4 C.R3d 187 [supervisor who was terminated in job restructuring had no right to another position within company].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.168 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

38 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
6. Age Discrimination.
dd. Use of Economic Criteria.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 935

[§ 935] Use of Economic Criteria.

In Marks v. Loral Corp. (1997) 57 C.A.4th 30, 68 C.R.2d 1, plaintiff was employed by defendant in Newport Beach. Most of the Newport Beach positions were eliminated in 1992, but new departments were created at seven other locations. With the exception of plaintiff and one other person, who was also over 40 years old, employees willing to relocate found new positions. Plaintiff sued under state and federal age discrimination laws, but the jury returned a defense verdict. On appeal, plaintiff challenged an instruction that an employer is entitled to choose employees with lower salaries, even if this results in choosing younger employees, and that a choice based on salary does not constitute age discrimination. Held, decisions based on relative compensation rates do not constitute prohibited age discrimination.

(a) The issue. Federal courts have struggled with the problem whether a policy or practice that has a disparate impact on older workers generally constitutes illegal age discrimination. Earlier cases, and a few later ones, concluded that a decision based on salary is actionable age discrimination if it disproportionately affects older workers. Other recent cases, particularly those decided after Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U. S. 604, 113 S.Ct. 1701, 123 L.Ed.2d 338, supra, §873, held that an employer is not liable for age discrimination based on economic decisions despite a disparate impact on older workers. (57 C.A.4th 43, 44.)

(b) The state statute. Unlike federal law, the California statute does not specifically permit an employer to base decisions on "reasonable factors other than age." However, it does permit an employer to choose "the better qualified person from among all applicants" (Govt.C. 12941(b)), and the phrase "better qualified" applies not only to individual qualifications such as skills, experience, and ability, but also to price, i.e., the wage demanded. (57 C.A.4th 52, 54.) The language of the statute does not prohibit use of salary to differentiate between employees, and, because price-based decisions are basic to a free market system, a court should not extend the statute to prohibit these decisions. (57 C.A.4th 53.) The purpose behind the California statute, as stated in Unemp.Ins.C. 2070 (see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §342), is to eliminate "arbitrary and unreasonable rules which bar or terminate employment on the basis of age." The normal preference of businesses and others to pay no more money than necessary for goods or services is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable. (57 C.A.4th 59, 60.)

(c) Principles of disparate impact analysis. The principles of disparate impact analysis, properly understood, do not apply to differentiations based on salary. As first stated in Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S.Ct. 849, 28 L.Ed.2d 158, supra, §869, disparate impact discrimination involves a requirement or criterion that does not have a business justification; it does not include purely economic business decisions. (57 C.A.4th 61.) "Given the emphasis on job relatedness, job performance, individualized assessment of ability to do a job, and business necessity, it is unfathomable that disparate impact analysis should apply to differentiation on the basis of salary. Such differentiation goes to the very essence of any enterprise." (57 C.A.4th 63.)

Marks v. Loral Corp. was superseded by Govt.C. 12941.1 in 1999. The statute was renumbered as Govt.C. 12941 in 2002. It declares its intent that:

(a) Marks "does not affect existing law in any way, including, but not limited to, the law pertaining to disparate treatment."

(b) "[T]he use of salary as the basis for differentiating between employees when terminating employment may be found to constitute age discrimination if use of that criterion adversely impacts older workers as a group."

(c) "[T]he disparate impact theory of proof may be used in claims of age discrimination."

(d) Courts should interpret state statutes prohibiting age discrimination in employment "broadly and vigorously, in a manner comparable to prohibitions against sex and race discrimination, and with the goal of not only protecting older workers as individuals, but also of protecting older workers as a group, since they face unique obstacles in the later phases of their careers."

(e) Affirmative defenses traditionally available in employment discrimination cases are not limited.

In Guz v. Bechtel Nat. (2000) 24 C.4th 317, 100 C.R.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089, defendant, a large engineering company, discharged plaintiff, a 49-year-old management information supervisor who had worked for defendant for 22 years, when it eliminated his work unit allegedly to reduce costs and because of a workload downturn. Plaintiff brought a wrongful discharge claim on three theories, including age discrimination. The trial judge granted summary judgment for defendant on all theories. Held, affirmed.

(a) McDonnell-Douglas test. California has adopted the three-stage test established by the United States Supreme Court in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668, supra, §870, for trying claims of discrimination, including age discrimination, based on a theory of disparate treatment. (24 C.4th 354.) The test requires the following: (1) Plaintiff has the initial burden at trial to establish a prima facie case of discrimination; if plaintiff does so, a rebuttable presumption of discrimination arises. (2) The burden then shifts to the employer to rebut the presumption by producing admissible evidence that its action was taken for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason. If the employer sustains this burden, the presumption of discrimination disappears. (3) The plaintiff must then have the opportunity to attack the employer's proffered reasons as pretexts for discrimination, or to offer other evidence of discriminatory motive. (24 C.4th 356.) For purposes of summary judgment, a sufficient prima facie showing combined with proof of pretext (i.e., defendant's stated reasons for terminating plaintiff are untrue) may preclude summary judgment for defendant. However, even in that case, summary judgment still may be appropriate where the employer presents strong evidence that its termination was based on innocent reasons and plaintiff's countervailing evidence of discriminatory motive is too weak to raise a rational inference that discrimination occurred. (24 C.4th 362.)

(b) Sufficiency of evidence. Here, plaintiff presented only a weak suspicion that discrimination was a likely basis for his termination. (24 C.4th 369.) Against that evidence, defendant presented a plausible, extensive, and uncontradicted explanation that it eliminated plaintiff's work unit to cut costs and because the unit was not performing adequately, and that defendant chose others for alternative jobs over plaintiff because defendant believed they were better qualified. (24 C.4th 370.)

(c) Salary reduction as factor. Although plaintiff "occasionally insinuated" that defendant's decisions "were discriminatory efforts to reduce salaries by releasing higher-paid older workers", plaintiff never made a developed claim to that effect. While defendant concedes that it sought to save costs by eliminating plaintiff's unit, "any evidence that the motive was to eliminate senior salaries is no greater or different than the evidence that the decision disfavored older workers directly." Nor did defendant's decision to select one junior employee for a junior position have a disparate impact on older workers as a group. (24 C.4th 369, footnote 29.) (See 27 Pepperdine L. Rev. 807 [firing older employees to satisfy shareholder demands for higher earnings]; on use of economic criteria for determining discrimination under Unruh Civil Rights Act, see supra, §912.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.170

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

39 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
7. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 936

[§ 936] In General.

(1) State v. Federal Protections. The 1992 Legislature amended the Unruh Civil Rights Act (supra, §898 et seq.), the FEHA, and related statutes to substantially increase the protections afforded to persons with disabilities. The purpose of the Act was "to strengthen California law in areas where it is weaker than the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 ... and to retain California law when it provides more protection for individuals with disabilities." (Stats. 1992, Chap. 913, §1.) (On ADA, see supra, §882 et seq.; on rights of disabled persons outside of FEHA, see infra, §957 et seq.)

The FEHA provides broader protection than the ADA in the area of reasonable accommodation for an employee with a disability. Under the FEHA, the right of an employee to assert an employer's duty of reasonable accommodation is not limited, as under the ADA, to cases where there has been some kind of adverse employment action. Hence, "the duty of reasonable accommodation under the FEHA should be construed according to our own state regulation." (Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 C.A.4th 344, 118 C.R.2d 443 [disagreeing with use of interpretative statement of EEOC, construing ADA, to define scope of reasonable accommodation under FEHA].)

(2) Statutory Protections. It is an unlawful employment practice to discriminate on the basis of physical or mental disability or medical condition. (Govt.C. 12940(a).) Failure to make reasonable accommodation for the known physical or mental disability of an applicant or employee is also an unlawful employment practice. (Govt.C. 12940(m).) (For definitions, see Govt.C. 12926(h) ["medical condition"]; Govt.C. 12926(i) ["mental disability"]; Govt.C. 12926(k) ["physical disability"]; Govt.C. 12926(n) ["reasonable accommodation"].) If the ADA provides broader coverage of a disability or medical condition, then its provisions prevail over those definitions in Govt.C. 12926. (Govt.C. 12926(l).) (See Raytheon Co. v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1989) 212 C.A.3d 1242, 1250, 261 C.R. 197 [AIDS is physical handicap under FEHA]; 78 A.L.R.4th 265 [handicap as job disqualification]; 81 A.L.R.4th 144 [discrimination because of handicap under state statute prohibiting job discrimination on account of handicap]; 82 A.L.R.4th 26 [what is "handicap" under state legislation forbidding discrimination on account of handicap]; 77 A.L.R.5th 595 [Visual Impairment as Handicap or Disability Under State Employment Discrimination Law].)

However, an employer may refuse to hire or may discharge an employee if, even with reasonable accommodations, the employee, because of his or her physical or mental disability or medical condition, either is unable to perform his or her essential duties or cannot perform them without endangering the health or safety of the employee or others. (Govt.C. 12940(a).) Also, the employer or other covered entity is not required to make an accommodation that is demonstrated to produce undue hardship to its operation. (Govt.C. 12940(m).) But the employer or other entity must "engage in a timely, good faith, interactive process with the employee or applicant to determine effective, reasonable accommodations, if any, in response to a request for reasonable accommodation by an employee or applicant with a known physical or mental disability or known medical condition." (Govt.C. 12940(n).) (See Govt.C. 12926(d), supra, §918 ["employer" defined]; Govt.C. 12926(f) ["essential functions" defined]; Govt.C. 12926(s) ["undue hardship" defined]; Quinn v. Los Angeles (2000) 84 C.A.4th 472, 480, 100 C.R.2d 914 [trial court erred in denying defendant's motion for directed verdict where plaintiff failed to produce evidence that he was qualified to be hired as police officer; plaintiff had failed qualifying hearing test and was only hired because of clerical error]; Diffey v. Riverside County Sheriff's Dept. (2000) 84 C.A.4th 1031, 1039, 101 C.R.2d 353 [color vision is valid job requirement for deputy sheriff].)

An employer or employment agency may not inquire into an applicant's medical or psychological condition unless an inquiry or examination is job-related and consistent with business necessity, and is required of all entering employees in the same job classification. (Govt.C. 12940(e).) Likewise, an employer may not inquire into an employee's medical or psychological condition unless it is job-related and consistent with business necessity. (Govt.C. 12940(m).)

(3) Legislative Clarification of California Law. Govt.C. 12926.1, added in 2000, reiterates that, notwithstanding any interpretation of law in Cassista v. Community Foods (1993) 5 C.4th 1050, 22 C.R.2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143, infra, §938, the ADA provides a floor of protection, but California law affords additional protections. California law protects applicants and employees from "discrimination due to an actual or perceived physical or mental impairment that is disabling, potentially disabling, or perceived as disabling or potentially disabling." (Govt.C. 12926.1(b).) Although the definitions of "physical disability" and "mental disability" require a "limitation" on a major life activity, they do not require, as does the ADA, a "substantial limitation." And, "whether a condition limits a major life activity shall be determined without respect to any mitigating measures, unless the mitigating measure itself limits a major life activity, regardless of federal law" under the ADA. Further, "working" is a "major life activity, regardless of whether the actual or perceived working limitation implicates a particular employment or a class or broad range of employments." (Govt.C. 12926.1(c).) By enacting Govt.C. 12926(i)(4) and Govt.C. 12926(k)(4), the Legislature intends to provide protection when an individual is erroneously or mistakenly believed to have a physical or mental condition that limits a major life activity. (Govt.C. 12926.1(d).) (See Govt.C. 12926.1(e) [affirming importance of interactive process between employee or applicant and employer in determining reasonable accommodation].)

In Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club (2003) 29 C.4th 1019, 130 C.R.2d 662, 63 P.3d 220, the court clarified that Govt.C. 12926.1 retains former FEHA language requiring a mere limitation, and not a substantial limitation, on a major life activity. Thus, plaintiff, who was fired in 1997 for a chronic back injury, needed to show only that his condition limited his ability to participate in major life activities. (29 C.4th 1030, 1032.) The court disapproved Diffey v. Riverside County Sheriff's Dept., supra, and other cases to the extent they hold or suggest that the ADA "substantial limitation" standard applied to disability claims under the FEHA. (29 C.4th 1031, footnote 6.)

(4) Effect of Workers' Compensation Remedy. Lab.C. 132a, the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provision, does not provide the exclusive remedy for discrimination based on work-related disabilities, and does not preclude an employee from pursuing FEHA and common law wrongful discharge remedies. (Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 C.4th 1143, 1148, 1158, 77 C.R.2d 445, 959 P.2d 752, 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §20; 37 Santa Clara L. Rev. 587 [protecting rights of workers disabled on job to file suits for disability discrimination]; 38 Santa Clara L. Rev. 893 [Moorpark].)

(5) Physical Ability To Work Elsewhere. In Maloney v. ANR Freight System (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1284, 20 C.R.2d 656, plaintiff, a truck driver for defendant ANR, had only one kidney, a transplant. Unable to do long runs, he requested assignment to short routes without loss of seniority. On denial of this request, he asked for and was granted a medical leave of absence for 3 years, during which period he worked as a truck driver for several different employers. In this present action for violation of the FEHA, the trial court granted summary judgment for defendants, on the ground that plaintiff did not meet the coverage threshold of being a "handicapped individual" under FEHA and its regulations. Held, summary judgment affirmed. The courts "have consistently declined to provide statutory protection to persons whose conditions have rendered them unable to meet their employer's requirements for a particular job, but who are otherwise physically able to work elsewhere in their chosen profession." (16 C.A.4th 1287, citing federal cases.)

(6) After-Acquired Evidence. After-acquired medical evidence relating to a plaintiff's physical condition is admissible to show that the plaintiff was not physically able to perform his or her job and that this was the reason for termination. (Finegan v. Los Angeles (2001) 91 C.A.4th 1, 12, 109 C.R.2d 762 [distinguishing McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S.Ct. 879, 130 L.Ed.2d 852, supra, §860].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.173 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) State v. Federal Protections. See 59 Hastings L. J. 429 [Rethinking the Application of ADA Precedent to FEHA Disability Discrimination Cases]. (2) Statutory Protections. See Knight v. Hayward Unified School Dist. (2005) 132 C.A.4th 121, 131, 33 C.R.3d 287 [FEHA does not prohibit treatment-based distinctions in health insurance coverage; hence, denial of coverage for in vitro fertilization is not disability discrimination]; Malais v. Los Angeles City Fire Dept. (2007) 150 C.A.4th 350, 358, 58 C.R.3d 444 [firefighter did not suffer adverse employment action in transfer to special duty assignment after loss of lower leg in work-related accident; although firefighter preferred to work in platoon duty, he suffered no loss of pay, benefits, or promotional opportunities and no hostile work environment]; BAJI, No. 12.12 [disability discrimination]; CACI, No. 2507 [motivating reason]; CACI, No. 2540 [disparate treatment--essential factual elements]; CACI, No. 2543 et seq. [affirmative defenses].

Inability to perform essential duties: An employee's inability to perform the essential duties of a job is not an affirmative defense to an action claiming that an employer has discriminated on the basis of a disability in violation of the FEHA. Instead, the employee bears the burden of proving that he or she was able to perform the essential duties of the position, with or without reasonable accommodation. (Green v. California (2007) 42 C.4th 254, 262, 64 C.R.3d 390, 165 P.3d 118 [FEHA does not change rule requiring plaintiff to prove essential elements of claim; although language used in ADA and FEHA is different, both acts limit protective scope to disabled employees who can perform essential duties of job, with reasonable accommodation]; see BAJI, No. 12.14 [defense of inability to perform].)

Interactive process: See Claudio v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (2005) 134 C.A.4th 224, 247, 35 C.R.3d 837 [although employee cannot ordinarily force employer to go through employee's attorney for interactive process, unusual circumstances here raised triable issue of fact whether employer's refusal to communicate with employee's attorney constituted failure to engage in interactive process in good faith; employee was told repeatedly that his employment had been terminated and that he had been dropped from employer's computer]; Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group (2008) 166 C.A.4th 952, 982, 83 C.R.3d 190 [Govt.C. 12940(n) imposes liability for failing to engage in timely, good faith, interactive process only if reasonable accommodation would have been possible, and burden of proving availability of reasonable accommodation in that action is on employee; triable issue existed on whether employer's refusal to provide employee with information on available positions before employee was released to return to work contributed to breakdown in interactive process]; BAJI, No. 12.12.6 [failure to engage in interactive process]; CACI, No. 2546 [same]. (7) (New) Effect of Compassionate Use Act. Nothing in the Compassionate Use Act prevents an employer from considering an employee's or an applicant's use of marijuana in making employment-related decisions. The Act was enacted solely to decriminalize the possession and use of marijuana in California for medical purposes, when the drug is prescribed by a physician. Marijuana use and possession remain illegal under federal law. The FEHA does not require employers to accommodate the use of illegal drugs. (Ross v. Raging Wire Telecommunications (2008) 42 C.4th 920, 926, 70 C.R.3d 382, 174 P.3d 200 [relying on Loder v. Glendale (1997) 14 C.4th 846, 59 C.R.2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200, text, §592; plaintiff, who was prescribed marijuana for back condition, failed to state cause of action for disability-based discrimination under FEHA based on employment being terminated after preemployment drug test showed marijuana use].)

40 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

7. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.

bb. Accommodation Requirement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 937

[§ 937] Accommodation Requirement.

In Fresno v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1991) 226 C.A.3d 1541, 277 C.R. 557, B and C alleged that Fresno County forced them to work in inadequately ventilated rooms filled with cigarette smoke, despite the county's knowledge that they suffered from severe respiratory problems and despite requests for reasonable accommodation. The commission granted relief, but the trial court on administrative mandamus ordered the commission to set aside its decision. Held, reversed.

(a) Former Govt.C. 12926(h) (now Govt.C. 12926(k)) defines "physical handicap" to include impairment of physical ability because of "loss of function." And in American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1982) 32 C.3d 603, 186 C.R. 345, 651 P.2d 1151, the court concluded that in certain cases high blood pressure may be a physical handicap. (226 C.A.3d 1549.) The same court, in dicta, observed that some "ills or defects" such as "respiratory, digestive or skin disorders are not handicapping." (226 C.A.3d 1549.) But this does not mean that respiratory disorders as a category are not covered by the FEHA. In the present case the evidence showed that because of a respiratory disorder, exposure of B and C to tobacco smoke substantially limited their ability to breathe. (226 C.A.3d 1549, 1550.)

(b) The county's contention that hypersensitivity to smoke is merely an "environmental limitation" and not a physical handicap is equally unmeritorious. "Tobacco smoke in the environment may simply be an environmental limitation to those who do not suffer from severe respiratory disorders. To most people tobacco smoke is merely irritating, distasteful or discomforting. Someone who suffers from a respiratory disorder and whose ability to breathe is severely limited by tobacco smoke is, nevertheless, physically handicapped within the meaning of the Act." (226 C.A.3d 1550.)

(c) The Act requires an employer to make reasonable accommodations to the physical disability of an employee (see now Govt.C. 12940(m), supra, §936), and the commission regulations define "reasonable accommodation." (226 C.A.3d 1551, 1552.) Similar regulations of the federal Rehabilitation Act as interpreted in the federal courts (226 C.A.3d 1553), support the commission's conclusion that the county failed to provide reasonable accommodation. (226 C.A.3d 1555, describing existing conditions and accommodation efforts.) (See 53 Stanf. L. Rev. 223 [Accommodation Mandates]; 32 U.S.F. L. Rev. 75 [accommodating individuals with disabilities in courts]; 76 A.L.R.4th 310 [requirement of accommodation by employer under state law forbidding job discrimination on account of handicap].)

In Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 C.A.4th 245, 102 C.R.2d 55, plaintiff bank manager suffered from posttraumatic stress disorder brought on by an attempted robbery at her branch. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment on plaintiff's FEHA failure-to-accommodate claim, holding that plaintiff's disorder did not substantially limit her ability to participate in major life activities, and that she had been reasonably accommodated. Held, reversed and remanded.

(a) To establish a failure-to-accommodate claim under Govt.C. 12940(k), plaintiff must prove (1) that she suffers from a disability covered by the FEHA, and (2) that she is a qualified individual, meaning that "she can perform the essential functions of the job to which reassignment is sought. ... [T]he employer's failure to reasonably accommodate a disabled individual is a violation of the statute in and of itself." (85 C.A.4th 256.)

(b) To be a "mental disability" under the FEHA, a disorder need not substantially limit a major life activity. (85 C.A.4th 257, noting adoption of Govt.C. 12926.1, supra, §936.) However, even if the court were to apply the stricter ADA substantial limitation test, summary judgment should not have been granted here because defendant failed to present evidence on the severity of plaintiff's mental disorder. (85 C.A.4th 259.)

(c) Assuming that an employee is disabled, an "employer cannot prevail on summary judgment on a claim of failure to reasonably accommodate unless it establishes through undisputed facts that (1) reasonable accommodation was offered and refused; (2) there simply was no vacant position within the employer's organization for which the disabled employee was qualified and which the disabled employee was capable of performing with or without accommodation; or (3) the employer did everything in its power to find a reasonable accommodation, but the informal interactive process broke down because the employee failed to engage in discussions in good faith." (85 C.A.4th 263.) Here it is clear that a factual dispute existed on these issues. The only employment ever offered was a temporary job. Further, defendant never established whether there were available positions that met plaintiff's qualifications. (85 C.A.4th 264.) It is not the employee's burden to identify possible alternative positions. (85 C.A.4th 265.)

(d) To the extent defendant rejected plaintiff "for positions for which she was qualified because it had applicants who were more qualified or had seniority, it overlooks that when reassignment of an existing employee is at issue, the disabled employee is entitled to preferential consideration." (85 C.A.4th 265.)

Other decisions deal with the accommodation requirement. (See Prilliman v. United Air Lines (1997) 53 C.A.4th 935, 950, 62 C.R.2d 142 [employer who knows that employee's disability prevents him or her from performing current job has affirmative duty to make other suitable job opportunities with it known to employee if it can do so without undue hardship or if it offers similar assistance to other employees]; Hanson v. Lucky Stores (1999) 74 C.A.4th 215, 228, 87 C.R.2d 487 [employer made reasonable accommodation for physically disabled employee by extending duration of leave and seeking available, alternative position, despite failure to engage in interactive process with employee concerning accommodations as recommended in EEOC guidelines]; Spitzer v. The Good Guys (2000) 80 C.A.4th 1376, 1386, 1390, 96 C.R.2d 236 [trial court erred in granting summary judgment on claim of failure to accommodate when there were triable issues of fact on whether defendant knew it had not reasonably accommodated plaintiff's limitations and, if so, whether other suitable positions were available to her; court's conclusion that requesting plaintiff to continually check defendant's job hotline constituted reasonable accommodation was untenable as matter of law]; Hastings v. Department of Corrections (2003) 110 C.A.4th 963, 972, 2 C.R.3d 329 [probationary corrections officer who was not able to complete training due to injury and therefore was not able to demonstrate that he was qualified for position, was not entitled, as reasonable accommodation, to reassignment to another position with different qualifications within same department]; 26 Western State L. Rev. 71 [Prilliman].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

An employer must reasonably accommodate an employee or applicant whom it regards as disabled, and, on request, must engage in an informal, interactive process to determine an effective accommodation. (Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 C.A.4th 34, 55, 61, 43 C.R.3d 874 [issue of first impression under FEHA; although employee was not actually disabled, employer believed him to be when it failed to rehire or accommodate him].)

An employer is liable under Govt.C. 12940(m) (see text, §936) for failing to accommodate an employee with a known disability "only if the work environment could have been modified or adjusted in a manner that would have enabled the employee to perform the essential functions of the job." The employee bears the burden of proving that he or she was able to perform the essential functions of the job with the accommodation. (Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group (2008) 166 C.A.4th 952, 969, 977, 83 C.R.3d 190 [facts regarding plaintiff's physical restrictions and availability of vacant positions that could accommodate her did not support summary adjudication for defendant employer].)

See Raine v. Burbank (2006) 135 C.A.4th 1215, 1223, 37 C.R.3d 899 [employer has no duty under FEHA to make temporary light-duty assignment permanent when employee's disability becomes permanent if doing so would require employer to create new position just for disabled employee]; Jenkins v. Riverside (2006) 138 C.A.4th 593, 616, 41 C.R.3d 686 [county had no duty to make reasonable accommodation for temporary employee]; BAJI, No. 12.12.5 [failure to make reasonable accommodation]; BAJI, No. 12.14 [defense of inability to perform]; BAJI, No. 12.15 [defense of undue hardship]; CACI, No. 2541 [essential factual elements]; CACI, No. 2542 [reasonable accommodation explained].

41 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

7. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.

cc. Discrimination on Basis of Weight.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 938

[§ 938] Discrimination on Basis of Weight.

In Cassista v. Community Foods (1993) 5 C.4th 1050, 22 C.R.2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143, the issue was whether the FEHA prohibits employment discrimination on the basis of a person's weight. The court, in an extensive review of statutes and case law, state and federal, concluded that weight may qualify as a protected "handicap" or "disability" only if medical evidence demonstrates that "it results from a physiological condition affecting one or more of the basic bodily systems and limits a major life activity." (5 C.4th 1052.)

Plaintiff was 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighed 305 pounds. She sought employment by defendant, a health food store operating as a neighborhood collective. Her application was rejected, the department determined not to file a complaint, and she brought this action. The case was tried before a jury, and the court instructed the jury that plaintiff was required to prove that "but for" her handicap she would have been hired. The verdict was for defendant. The Court of Appeal held that the instruction was prejudicial error and reversed the trial court's judgment. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the Court of Appeal.

(a) American Nat. Ins. Co. case. The majority opinion in American Nat. Ins. Co. v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1982) 32 C.3d 603, 186 C.R. 345, 651 P.2d 1151, supra, §937, reasoned that "handicap" must be construed as coextensive with its dictionary definition, and held that high blood pressure was such a handicap. A strong dissenting opinion asserted that this construction virtually ignored both the statutory language and the legislative history. (5 C.4th 1057.)

(b) Amendment of Govt.C. 12926 in 1992. This sweeping amendment completely rewrote the law of handicap discrimination, replacing "physical handicap" with "physical disability," and defining the phrase as including a number of elements. (5 C.4th 1058; see supra, §936.) However, in an apparent effort to maintain continuity with the former law, the statute stated the intent of the Legislature "that the definition of 'physical disability' ... shall have the same meaning as the term 'physical handicap' " construed in American Nat. Ins. Co. (5 C.4th 1059.) The obvious similarity of the old law and the new law is evidenced by the legislative history. Both derive from the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973; and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 adopted the Rehabilitation Act definition. (5 C.4th 1060.) Case law, including Raytheon Co. v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1989) 212 C.A.3d 1242, 261 C.R. 197, and Fresno v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1991) 226 C.A.3d 1541, 277 C.R. 557, supra, §937, also reveals a general consistency between the current and former versions of Govt.C. 12926. (5 C.4th 1061.) Thus, under both the current and former versions of Govt.C. 12926, "the touchstone of a qualifying handicap or disability is an actual or perceived physiological disorder which affects a major body system and limits the individual's ability to participate in one or more major life activities." (5 C.4th 1061.)

(c) Weight as physical disability. Case law in actions brought under the FEHA is minimal but instructive. (5 C.4th 1061.) Federal cases decided under the federal Rehabilitation Act are also pertinent. (5 C.4th 1063.) The rule that obesity does not constitute a qualifying disability absent proof of physiological causation is followed by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (5 C.4th 1064), and by most other state decisions on the subject (5 C.4th 1065).

(d) Perception of disability. Plaintiff argues that even if weight does not qualify as an actual handicap or disability, one might still qualify as a handicapped individual if he or she is "regarded as having such a physical handicap." This argument is unavailing. The language of the statute makes it clear that the condition, as perceived by the employer, must still be in the nature of a physiological disorder within the meaning of the FEHA. (5 C.4th 1065, 1066.) The record is devoid of evidence that plaintiff's weight is the result of a physiological condition or disorder affecting one or more of the body systems. "Indeed, plaintiff alleged in her complaint and maintained at trial that despite her weight she is a healthy, fit individual. Thus, she demonstrated neither an actual nor a perceived handicap within the meaning of the FEHA." (5 C.4th 1066.) (See Hegwer v. Board of Civil Service Commrs. (1992) 5 C.A.4th 1011, 1024, 7 C.R.2d 389 [application of weight limitation standards to obese city paramedic was reasonable and not discriminatory under Govt.C. 12940, notwithstanding thyroid problem that contributed to paramedic's weight gain]; McMillen v. Civil Service Com. (1992) 6 C.A.4th 125, 129, 8 C.R.2d 548 [same, as applied to overweight city fire department ambulance driver]; 90 Cal. L. Rev. 57 [weight discrimination in employment]; 31 Cal. Western L. Rev. 41 [legality under federal statutes of obesity discrimination in employment]; 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 271 [Cassista].)

The 2000 Legislature clarified California law "[n]otwithstanding any interpretation of law" in Cassista by adopting Govt.C. 12926.1. (See supra, §936.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

42 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
7. Discrimination Against Disabled Persons.
dd. Chronic Alcoholics.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 939

[§ 939] Chronic Alcoholics.

Both state and federal disability laws require employers to reasonably accommodate the mental and physical disabilities of otherwise qualified employees and job applicants. (See supra, §937.) However, recent decisions have refused to fault an employer for allegedly failing to reasonably accommodate an employee's chronic alcoholism before terminating him.

In Gonzalez v. State Personnel Bd. (1995) 33 C.A.4th 422, 39 C.R.2d 282, a state employee challenged his dismissal for misconduct related to his alcoholism, including driving with a suspended license and abandoning a state vehicle. The employee claimed that his dismissal was improper because he was not first afforded an opportunity to undergo inpatient treatment. Held, the employee's misconduct was egregious as a matter of law, and thus he was disqualified from the protection of both the state and federal disability statutes, rendering it unnecessary to reasonably accommodate his disability as a precondition to termination. (33 C.A.4th 431.)

In Gosvener v. Coastal Corp. (1996) 51 C.A.4th 805, 59 C.R.2d 339, plaintiff, a former shift supervisor for defendant chemical refinery, brought a wrongful termination action on various theories, alleging that he was illegally discharged due to his alcohol abuse problem and that defendant failed to reasonably accommodate him. Plaintiff's alcohol abuse problem spanned 3 years of employment, and he had unsuccessfully participated in two treatment programs during that period. Held, summary judgment for defendant affirmed.

(a) Discharge is not in violation of FEHA.

(1) Plaintiff's claim that he was discharged in violation of the FEHA because of his alcoholism disability is without merit. Defendant repeatedly granted plaintiff reasonable accommodations in his attempts to recover from alcoholism; however, plaintiff began drinking again after every accommodation, violated numerous agreements with defendant designed to allow him to recover and save his job, and lied to defendant about the reasons for his absences. It was also highly significant that plaintiff was the only supervisor on duty at crucial times at a dangerous chemical refinery located in a residential area. (51 C.A.4th 812.)

(2) "It is unfortunate that appellant suffered from alcoholism and continually relapsed into binge drinking which prevented him from working, but the employer's duty to accommodate such a disabling condition is not unlimited, and an employer cannot be an insurer of recovery. Nor should an employer be required to tolerate unsafe conditions, or be forced to enable substance abuse to continue indefinitely." (51 C.A.4th 813.)

(b) No breach of contract. Plaintiff contended that defendant breached (1) an express contract based on unspecified oral statements and on two written agreements expressly providing and warning plaintiff that he could be discharged for continued alcohol abuse, (2) an implied contract not to terminate him except for good cause, and (3) the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. These contentions are invalid. It was undisputed that plaintiff did not honor his contractual promises to maintain an exemplary attendance record, take only absences that could be verified, remain drug and alcohol free, be fit for work, and follow the terms of his substance abuse treatment program. (51 C.A.4th 813.)

(c) No violation of public policy. Plaintiff's termination did not violate public policy, as expressed in Lab.C. 1025, requiring private employers with 25 or more employees to reasonably accommodate an employee wishing to participate in an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program (see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §428):

(1) Defendant did not refuse to allow plaintiff to enroll in a treatment program. Plaintiff enrolled in two treatment programs, and defendant aided him in his attempts to recover. (51 C.A.4th 816.)

(2) Defendant's refusal to rescind plaintiff's termination when he offered to enroll in still another program did not violate Lab.C. 1025 because plaintiff's previous programs had failed and he had been warned that discharge would result from those failures. (51 C.A.4th 816.)

(3) The fact that plaintiff had a large sick leave balance outstanding at discharge was of no import, because sick leave is for sickness, not drinking. An employer is not required to allow an employee abusing alcohol to use up his or her sick leave. (51 C.A.4th 816.)

(4) Finally, Lab.C. 1025 does not prevent a discharge where, as here, plaintiff was adversely affected by current alcohol use. (51 C.A.4th 816.)

Gosvenor was disapproved in Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club (2003) 29 C.4th 1019, 130 C.R.2d 662, 63 P.3d 220, supra, §936, to the extent it states that the FEHA incorporates the ADA "substantial limitation" test for a covered disability.

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.174

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

43 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
8. Retaliatory Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 940

[§ 940] Retaliatory Discrimination.

The Act prohibits an employer, labor organization, or employment agency from discharging, expelling, or otherwise discriminating against a person who has opposed an unlawful employment practice or who has filed a complaint, testified, or assisted in a proceeding under the Act. (Govt.C. 12940(h); see Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 C.A.4th 1038, 1053, 58 C.R.2d 122, supra, §929 [no cause of action where alleged acts of retaliation occurred before plaintiff filed sexual harassment complaint with DFEH]; Chen v. Orange (2002) 96 C.A.4th 926, 931, 948, 116 C.R.2d 786 [trial court did not err in dismissing retaliation claim where plaintiff failed to show causal connection between her failure to be promoted and original complaint]; Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 C.A.4th 1174, 1185, 10 C.R.3d 52, supra, §918 [taking corrective measures after being notified of hostile work environment sexual harassment did not exonerate employer from potential liability for retaliation due to employee's complaints; to establish prima facie case of retaliation, plaintiff must show causal link between engaging in protected activity and being subjected to adverse employment action by employer]; BAJI, No. 12.10 [retaliation]; CACI, No. 2505 [same]; on retaliatory discrimination under Unruh Civil Rights Act, see supra, §913.)

For retaliation to be actionable, it must have had substantial and material adverse effect on the terms and conditions of employment. (Thomas v. Department of Corrections (2000) 77 C.A.4th 507, 510, 91 C.R.2d 770 [change in terms of employment is not limited to discharge, demotion, or refusal to hire or promote, but one-time events such as delayed check, early job change, and failure to receive overtime check are insufficient]; Akers v. San Diego (2002) 95 C.A.4th 1441, 1455, 116 C.R.2d 602 [written criticisms of employee's performance generated shortly after she complained about discrimination, and management's demonstrated willingness to use this information against her in deciding promotions were sufficient to satisfy test].)

Evidence that may be offered to show that an employer's nonretaliatory explanation is pretextual includes "(1) direct evidence of retaliation, such as statements or admissions, (2) comparative evidence, and (3) statistics." (Iwekaogwu v. Los Angeles (1999) 75 C.A.4th 803, 816, 89 C.R.2d 505.)

In Reeves v. Safeway Stores (2004) 121 C.A.4th 95, 16 C.R.3d 717, the court reversed a summary judgment for defendant employer. Plaintiff was discharged for cause based on an alleged incidence of workplace violence after having complained about the sexual harassment of female employees. The district manager who fired plaintiff was ignorant of plaintiff's sexual harassment allegations, but acted on information supplied by plaintiff's supervisor. The evidence raised triable issues regarding whether the investigator and manager acted as tools or "cat's paws" for the supervisor, i.e., instrumentalities by which the supervisor's retaliatory animus was carried into effect.

(a) The ignorance of a "decisionmaker" does not categorically shield the employer from liability if other substantial contributors to the decision bear the requisite animus. (121 C.A.4th 110.) A plaintiff can establish causation "by showing that any of the persons involved in bringing about the adverse action held the requisite animus, provided that such person's animus operated as a but-for cause, i.e., a force without which the adverse action would not have happened." (121 C.A.4th 108.)

(b) "If a supervisor makes another his tool for carrying out a discriminatory action, the original actor's purpose will be imputed to the tool, or through the tool to their common employer." (121 C.A.4th 113.)

The antiretaliation provision of the FEHA covers applicants for employment in addition to employees. (Sada v. Robert F. Kennedy Med. Center (1997) 56 C.A.4th 138, 151, 160, 162, 65 C.R.2d 112 [trial court erred in entering summary judgment against Mexican American nurse who was terminated as independent contractor after filing complaint that she was denied regular employment due to racial discrimination].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.157

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

A plaintiff establishes a prima facie case of retaliation under the FEHA by showing that (a) the plaintiff was engaged in a protected activity, (b) the employer subjected the plaintiff to an adverse employment action, and (c) there was a causal link between the protected activity and the employer's action. Once a prima facie case is established, the employer must offer a legitimate, nonretaliatory reason for the adverse employment action. If the employer produces a legitimate reason for that action, the presumption of retaliation "drops out of the picture," and the burden of proof shifts back to the plaintiff to show intentional discrimination. (Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA (2005) 36 C.4th 1028, 1042, 32 C.R.3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123.) (See Taylor v. Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 C.A.4th 1216, 1229, 1235, 51 C.R.3d 206 [in action for retaliation based on plaintiff's opposition to race discrimination against subordinate and failure to prevent retaliation, causal link was established between protected activity and employer's action where retaliation commenced or intensified shortly after each of plaintiff's acts in opposition to race discrimination against subordinate or retaliation by supervisor]; Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts (2008) 165 C.A.4th 686, 715, 81 C.R.3d 406 [when employer offers reason for adverse action, central issue remains whether evidence as whole supports reasoned inference that challenged action was product of retaliatory animus; employer's articulation of legitimate reason entitles employer to summary judgment only when employee's showing, while sufficient to invoke presumption of improper motive, is too weak to sustain reasoned inference in employee's favor]; CACI, No. 2505 [retaliation]; CACI, No. 2507 [motivating reason].)

To be protected by the antiretaliation provisions of the FEHA, a complaining employee is not required to communicate to his or her employer the legal theory underlying his or her complaint. (Miller v. Department of Corrections (2005) 36 C.4th 446, 474, 30 C.R.3d 797, 115 P.3d 77, Supp., supra, §927 [although not specifically reciting words "sexual harassment," complaints of sexual favoritism in workplace fell within general purview of FEHA]; Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, supra, 36 C.4th 1046 [following Miller; plaintiff's continuing refusal to fire employee who employer said was not sufficiently sexually attractive, coupled with plaintiff's multiple requests for "adequate justification" for firing, sufficiently communicated to employer that plaintiff believed order was discriminatory].)

Requirement that retaliation had substantial and material adverse impact on terms and conditions of employment: The term "otherwise discriminate," as used in Govt.C. 12940(h), "should be interpreted to refer to and encompass the same forms of adverse employment activity that is actionable under" Govt.C. 12940(a) (see text, §921). "[A]dverse treatment that is reasonably likely to impair a reasonable employee's job performance or prospects for advancement or promotion falls within the reach of the antidiscrimination provisions" of Govt.C. 12940(a) and (h). (Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, supra, 36 C.4th 1050, 1054.) The Yanowitz standard also applies to an employee retaliation action under Lab.C. 1102.5(b) (retaliation for whistleblowing regarding legal violations that are reasonably believed to have occurred). (Patten v. Grant Joint Union High School Dist. (2005) 134 C.A.4th 1378, 1381, 37 C.R.3d 113; see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §284 et seq.)

See Pinero v. Specialty Restaurants Corp. (2005) 130 C.A.4th 635, 646, 30 C.R.3d 348 [plaintiff failed to establish retaliation under FEHA where evidence failed both "materiality" test of Thomas v. Department of Corrections (2000) 77 C.A.4th 507, 91 C.R.2d 770, text, p. 457, and Akers v. San Diego (2002) 95 C.A.4th 1441, 116 C.R.2d 602, text, p. 457, and "less stringent EEOC 'deterrence test' which looks only to see whether the employer's action is reasonably likely to deter employees from engaging in protected activity"]; McRae v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2006) 142 C.A.4th 377, 393, 397, 48 C.R.3d 313 [job transfer to comparable position in other facility was not actionable adverse employment action where plaintiff suffered no substantial or tangible harm and employer's reason for making transfer appeared to be reasonable management decision]; Taylor v. Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power, supra, 144 C.A.4th 1231 [plaintiff sufficiently pleaded adverse action under both materiality test of Yanowitz and deterrence test adopted by Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S.Ct. 2405, 165 L.Ed.2d 345, Supp., supra, §855; plaintiff alleged that he was stripped of supervisory position, barred from completing needed courses to advance in position, excluded from meetings, deprived of necessary information to carry out duties, denied emergency promotion to full engineer but required to train appointee, and labeled as troublemaker to prevent transfer]; Loggins v. Kaiser Permanente Int. (2007) 151 C.A.4th 1102, 1111, 60 C.R.3d 45 [employer who asserted facially valid and specific basis for employment termination was not additionally required to prove objective fairness of termination procedures as part of burden of proof]; Wysinger v. Automobile Club of Southern Calif. (2007) 157 C.A.4th 413, 423, 69 C.R.3d 1 [although instructions in action for retaliatory discrimination failed to contain phrase that employer's retaliatory conduct must have had substantial and material adverse effect on terms and conditions of employment, instructions given were sufficient where their combined effect required jurors not to include management decisions that involved ordinary discretion, even if they found that conduct to be unfair, and plaintiff had to prove animus and retaliation]; Steele v. Youthful Offender Parole Bd. (2008) 162 C.A.4th 1241, 1255, 76 C.R.3d 632 [FEHA protects employees against preemptive retaliation; hence, trial court properly considered evidence of intolerable or aggravated working conditions from time that defendant learned of incident that might subject it to claim of sexual harassment and that plaintiff might be witness or complainant; plaintiff established constructive discharge by substantial evidence of coercion to resign, including series of uninvestigated work performance issues, hints that she might be laid off, threats of suspension, and transfer of complaining coworker].

44 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
9. Other Prohibited Discrimination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 941

[§ 941] Other Prohibited Discrimination.

(1) Civil Rights Violation. It is an unlawful practice to deny the rights created by C.C. 51 (supra, §898), C.C. 51.5 (supra, §906), C.C. 51.7 (supra, §895), C.C. 54, 54.1, or 54.2 (infra, §957 et seq.). (Govt.C. 12948.)

(2) Language Restriction. It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer, as defined in Govt.C. 12926(d) (supra, §918), to adopt or enforce a policy limiting or prohibiting the use of a language in the workplace, unless both (a) the restriction is justified by a business necessity, and (b) the employer has notified the employees of the circumstances, the times when the language restriction is required, and the consequences of violating the restriction. (Govt.C. 12951(a).) "Business necessity" means an overriding legitimate business purpose, i.e., the language restriction must be necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business; it must effectively fulfill the business purpose it is supposed to serve; and there must not be an alternative practice that would accomplish the purpose equally well with a lesser discriminatory impact. (Govt.C. 12951(b).) (See 81 Cal. L. Rev. 1325 [discussion of accent discrimination as unlawful employment discrimination, and call for use of standardized test for assessment of comprehensibility of nonnative speakers]; 33 McGeorge L. Rev. 433 [codification of FEHA workplace language policies and regulations].)

(3) Marital Status Discrimination. It is an unlawful employment practice to discriminate on the basis of marital status. (Govt.C. 12940(a), supra, §921; see 44 A.L.R.4th 1044 [what constitutes marital status employment discrimination].) However, marital status may be considered for (a) "reasons of supervision, safety, security, or morale" when working spouses are in the same "department, division, or facility," and (b) health plans that provide "additional or greater benefits to employees with dependents than to those employees without or with fewer dependents." (Govt.C. 12940(a)(3).) (See Chen v. Orange (2002) 96 C.A.4th 926, 930, 939, 116 C.R.2d 786 [trial court did not err in dismissing marital status discrimination claim where any antipathy against plaintiff was based on political disfavor husband was in at time and not result of her status as married or single, or fact that she was married to coworker]; Hope Int. University v. Superior Court (2004) 119 C.A.4th 719, 742, 14 C.R.3d 643 [trial court did not err in denying motion for summary judgment to defendant university that fired two married professors who made up entire graduate psychology department, to extent that claims were based on theory that married couple cannot work in same department; two professors working in same department does not necessarily implicate "problems of supervision" that would make summary judgment appropriate]; on applicability of Unruh Civil Rights Act to marital status) discrimination, see supra, §910.)

(4) Public Works Contractors. Discrimination is prohibited in employment in public works on any basis listed in Govt.C. 12940(a) (supra, §921), except as provided in Govt.C. 12940. (Lab.C. 1735.)

An employer who is a contractor with the state for public works or for goods or services is subject to the Act, and each prospective contractor or subcontractor may be required to submit a nondiscrimination program for approval and certification. (Govt.C. 12990(a), (b).)

(5) Religious Creed Discrimination. It is an unlawful employment practice to discriminate on the basis of religious creed. (Govt.C. 12940(a), supra, §921; see Slatkin v. University of Redlands (2001) 88 C.A.4th 1147, 1156, 106 C.R.2d 480 [evidence that stated reasons for denying tenure were pretextual is not necessarily evidence that tenure was denied because of plaintiff's religion; following St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S.Ct. 2742, 125 L.Ed.2d 407, supra, §870]; Friedman v. Southern Calif. Permanente Med. Group (2002) 102 C.A.4th 39, 66, 125 C.R.2d 663 [veganism by itself is not religious creed entitled to protection under FEHA; adopting approach of federal circuits]; California Fair Employment & Housing Com. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp. (2004) 122 C.A.4th 1004, 1013, 18 C.R.3d 906 [statute covers religious observances as well as beliefs, and fact that employee's attendance at particular religious convention may not have been required by tenets of his religion or amounted to "temporal mandate" did not excuse defendant's failure to accommodate request for time off to attend]; 36 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1709 [Friedman]; 37 A.L.R.5th 349 [construction of state legislation prohibiting religious discrimination in employment]; on religious discrimination under federal statute, see supra, §876.)

An employer or other covered entity may not discriminate based on a conflict between a person's religious belief and observance and an employment requirement, except where the employer or other entity demonstrates that it cannot make a reasonable accommodation without undue hardship on the conduct of business. "Religious belief or observance" includes observance of a Sabbath or other holy day, and reasonable travel time. (Govt.C. 12940(l); see Soldinger v. Northwest Airlines (1996) 51 C.A.4th 345, 58 C.R.2d 747 [action based on refusal to allow employee to take time off for religious holiday; collective bargaining agreement between employer and union, by itself, was not accommodation as matter of law].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.145, 146, 151

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

45 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
d. Employment.
10. Family Care and Medical Leave.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 942

[§ 942] In General.

(1) Nature and Purpose of Statute. The 1991 Legislature added two sections to the Government Code: Govt.C. 12945.2 and 19702.3, now known as the Moore-Brown-Roberti Family Rights Act. (Govt.C. 12945.1.) (See 23 Pacific L. J. 720.) The Act is also referred to as the CFRA. (For other statutes relating to family care rights, including Paid Family Care Leave Act and federal Family and Medical Leave Act, see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §§420, 421.)

On child care, the enacting statute includes the Legislature's findings and declarations that: (a) the "United States is the only industrialized country that does not have a mandated policy on child care leave"; (b) a majority of women are now in the workforce; (c) there is a shortage of day care, particularly for infants; (d) it is in the child's best interest to have close contact with his or her parents; and (e) "both men and women should have the option of taking leave for child-rearing purposes." (Stats. 1991, Chap. 462, §2.)

On elder care, the enacting statute notes that: (a) the population is aging and the number of adults caring "for their parents due to physical and mental disabilities is growing"; (b) family care is generally preferable to institutionalization; (c) there is a lack of affordable and available elder care; (d) women have traditionally cared for aged parents, but now a majority of women are in the workforce, and providing elder care may jeopardize their employment and career opportunities; (e) there is a growing number of elderly in this state and many "must receive home care or be confined to hospitals or nursing homes"; and (f) facilitating home care "can present economic savings to the health system, seniors, care givers, and employers." (Stats. 1991, Chap. 462, §3.)

The Act is not intended to affect the rights of state employees to pregnancy leaves of absence under Govt.C. 19991.6 or Educ.C. 89519. (Stats. 1991, Chap. 462, §8.) (See 35 Santa Clara L. Rev. 983 [family leave laws as ensuring job security and family values]; 77 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1067 [striking balance between needs of employers and employees]; 57 A.L.R.5th 477 [state family, parental, or medical leave acts].)

(2) Definitions. The Act defines the following terms:

(a) "Child" and "parent" are defined to include biological, adoptive, foster, and step parent-child relationships, as well as legal ward and guardian or a child of a person standing in loco parentis. A child must be under 18 or an adult dependent child. (Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(1), (c)(7).)

(b) Family care and medical leave includes leave for childbirth, adoption, or foster care, or for a child's serious health condition; leave to care for a parent or spouse who has a serious health condition; and leave because of an employee's own serious health condition (other than pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions) that makes the employee unable to perform his or her job functions. (Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(3).) (See Pang v. Beverly Hosp. (2000) 79 C.A.4th 986, 995, 94 C.R.2d 643 [it is not enough that parent has serious health condition; caregiver's participation must be warranted during period of treatment or supervision; thus, help given in moving mother to new home because she was no longer able to deal with stairs and yard did not entitle plaintiff to take leave under CFRA].)

(c) Serious health condition means "an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition" that involves either inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential care facility, or continuing treatment or supervision by a health care provider. (Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(8).) (See Gibbs v. American Airlines (1999) 74 C.A.4th 1, 8, 87 C.R.2d 554 [cold or flu is not incapacitating serious health condition under Act, absent unusual circumstances].)

(d) FMLA means the federal Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993. (Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(5).)

(e) Health care provider includes physicians, surgeons, and osteopathic physicians or surgeons, whether licensed in California or another jurisdiction, and other persons determined by the Secretary of Labor to be capable of providing health care services under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA). (Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(6).)

(f) Employer is (1) a person directly employing 50 or more persons, or (2) the state, its subdivisions, and cities. (Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(2).)

(g) Employment in same or comparable position means employment in a position with the same or similar duties and pay at the same or similar geographic location as before the leave. (Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(4).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Nature and Purpose of Statute. See 59 Hastings L. J. 1285 [Symposium on family responsibilities discrimination and stereotyping evidence]; 41 U.S.F. L. Rev. 171 [growing trend of family responsibilities discrimination]. (2) Definitions.

(b) Family care and medical leave: Under Govt.C. 12945.2(c)(3)(C), an employee is entitled to medical leave when suffering from a "serious medical condition" that "makes the employee unable to perform the functions of the position of that employee." This inability refers to the job assigned to the employee by his or her employer. It does not refer to an inability to perform essential job functions generally. Hence, an employee's ability to work part time for a different employer during the period when the employee is seeking medical leave, doing essentially the same tasks, although strong evidence of the employee's capacity to perform the functions of the job, is not dispositive of whether the employee has a serious medical condition. (Lonicki v. Sutter Health Cen. (2008) 43 C.4th 201, 214, 216, 74 C.R.3d 570, 180 P.3d 321.)

46 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

10. Family Care and Medical Leave.

bb. Requirements for Taking Leave.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 943

[§ 943] Requirements for Taking Leave.

(1) Refusal To Grant Request. A family care or medical leave request "shall not be deemed to have been granted unless the employer provides the employee, upon granting the leave request, a guarantee of employment in the same or a comparable position upon the termination of the leave. The commission shall adopt a regulation specifying the elements of a reasonable request." (Govt.C. 12945.2(a).)

In adopting the regulations required by Govt.C. 12945.2, the Fair Employment and Housing Commission must consider and specify: (a) the length of time necessary for appropriate advance notice for a leave request; (b) the appropriate minimum duration of a leave; (c) what would constitute undue hardship for denial or deferral of a leave; and (d) what accommodation of the employee's family care rights, short of granting a leave, would be reasonable. (Stats. 1991, Chap. 462, §6; see 2 Cal. Code Reg., §7297.0 et seq.)

(2) Advance Notice to Employer. If the need for family care and medical leave is foreseeable, the employee must provide reasonable advance notice to the employer. (Govt.C. 12945.2(h).) If the need is foreseeable due to a planned medical treatment or supervision, the employee must make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment or supervision to avoid disruption of the employer's operations, subject to the health care provider's approval. (Govt.C. 12945.2(i).) (See Gibbs v. American Airlines (1999) 74 C.A.4th 1, 7, 87 C.R.2d 554 [employee's messages to employer that she was absent for flu or cold symptoms and taking antibiotics was not notice sufficient to make employer aware that she needed CFRA qualifying leave]; Stevens v. Department of Corrections (2003) 107 C.A.4th 285, 292, 132 C.R.2d 19 [request for vacation time to spend holidays with ailing parents was insufficient to trigger requirements of CFRA; in context of ailing parent, reasonable notice requires some communication, express or implied, that employee seeks leave to care for parent]; 24 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1209 [notice requirements under Act]; for adequacy of notice to employer under federal Act, see 184 A.L.R. Fed 171.)

(3) Certification. When an employee requests leave, the employer may require that the request be supported by a certification from the health care provider of the person requiring care. (Govt.C. 12945.2(j), (k).) If the leave is to care for a child, spouse, or parent, a certification is sufficient if it includes (a) the date on which the serious health condition commenced, (b) its probable duration, (c) an estimate of the amount of time that the provider believes the employee needs to care for the person, and (d) a statement that the condition warrants the participation of a family member to provide care during a period of the treatment or supervision of the person. (Govt.C. 12945.2(j).) If the leave is because of the employee's own serious health condition, the employer may further require the certification to include a statement that, due to the condition, the employee is unable to perform the function of his or her position. If the employer has reason to doubt the validity of the certification, it may seek a second opinion at its expense. (Govt.C. 12945.2(k).)

(4) Periods of Leave. An employee may take leave in one or more periods. The 12-month period for taking leave and the leave taken under the CFRA must run concurrently with the 12-month period and any leave (other than leave for pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions) taken under the FMLA. (Govt.C. 12945.2(p), (s).) The total leave (other than leave for pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions) under both statutes may not exceed 12 workweeks in a 12-month period. (Govt.C. 12945.2(s).)

The provisions governing family care and medical leave are separate and distinct from those governing pregnancy leave (Govt.C. 12945, supra, §926). (Govt.C. 12945.2(o).) If otherwise qualified, an employee is entitled to take pregnancy leave under Govt.C. 12945, in addition to family and medical leave under Govt.C. 12945.2 and FMLA. (Govt.C. 12945.2(s).)

If both parents are entitled to leave and employed by the same employer, the employer is not required to grant leave for birth, adoption, or foster care that would allow the parents family care and medical leave totaling more than 12 workweeks in a 12-month period. (Govt.C. 12945.2(q).)

(5) Pay and Benefits During Leave. The leave is normally without pay. (Govt.C. 12945.2(d).) However, an employee may elect, or an employer may require, that accrued vacation leave, other accrued time off, other paid or unpaid time off negotiated with the employer, or, if the leave is for the employee's own serious health condition, accrued sick leave, be substituted for family care and medical leave. An employee may not otherwise use sick leave during a family care and medical leave unless the employer agrees. (Govt.C. 12945.2(e).)

During the leave, the employer must maintain and pay for coverage under a group health plan for at least 12 workweeks during a 12-month period, on the same conditions that would apply if the employee were continuously employed. (Govt.C. 12945.2(f)(1).) During any period that this coverage is not provided, an employee is entitled to participate in employee health, benefit, pension and retirement, and supplemental unemployment benefit plans, under the same conditions as apply to other unpaid leave. In the absence of these conditions, the employee is entitled to participate in these plans, but the employer may require payment of premiums, at the group rate, for health and welfare employee benefit plans. An employee's nonpayment does not constitute a break in service for purposes of longevity, seniority, or any benefit plan. An employer is not required to make payments to a pension or retirement plan, and the leave period is not counted as time accrued under the plan, but an employee may continue to make contributions to a pension plan. (Govt.C. 12945.2(f)(2).)

An employee retains employee status during the leave period, and the leave does not constitute a break in service for purposes of longevity, seniority, or any benefit plan. For purposes of layoff, recall, promotion, job assignment, and seniority-related benefits, the employee returns with no less seniority than he or she had before the leave. (Govt.C. 12945.2(g).)

(6) Exceptions. It is not an unlawful employment practice for an employer to refuse to grant an employee's leave request if the employer employs fewer than 50 employees within 75 miles of that employee's worksite. (Govt.C. 12945.2(b).) In addition, an employer may refuse to reinstate an employee returning from leave to the same or a comparable position if (a) the employee is a salaried employee who is among the highest paid 10% of the employees employed within 75 miles of that employee's worksite, (b) "refusal is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury" to the employer's operations, and (c) the employer notifies the employee of the intent to refuse reinstatement at the time the employer determines the refusal is necessary. (Govt.C. 12945.2(r)(1).) If the leave has already commenced, the employer must give the employee a reasonable opportunity to return to work following the notice. (Govt.C. 12945.2(r)(2).) (See Tomlinson v. Qualcomm (2002) 97 C.A.4th 934, 940, 118 C.R.2d 822 [employee on pregnancy leave had no greater right to job protection than other employees, and was thus subject to layoff in company work force reduction].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Advanced Notice to Employer. See Avila v. Continental Airlines (2008) 165 C.A.4th 1237, 1257, 82 C.R.3d 440 [in case involving medical emergency, notice on hospital's preprinted form of employee's hospitalization submitted to employer after employee returned to work might be sufficient to notify employer of employee's need for CFRA-qualifying leave at least regarding absent days, and thus might constitute "request" for leave under CFRA].

(3) Certification. When leave is for the employee's own health condition and there is a difference of opinion between the employee's certification and the opinion of the employer's health care provider, the employer may require, at its expense, that the employee obtain the opinion of a third health care provider designated or approved jointly by the employer and the employee. If obtained, this third opinion is binding on both parties. (Govt.C. 12945.2(k)(3)); see Lonicki v. Sutter Health Cen. (2008) 43 C.4th 201, 209, 74 C.R.3d 570, 180 P.3d 321, Supp., supra, §942 [employer's failure to obtain binding opinion by third health care provider did not bar it from asserting that it was justified in firing plaintiff because she did not meet statutory requirement for having serious health condition that prevented her from doing job].)

47 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
 Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

d. Employment.

10. Family Care and Medical Leave.

cc. Unlawful Employment Practices.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 944

[§ 944] Unlawful Employment Practices.

(1) Refusal To Grant Request. It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer "to refuse to grant a request by any employee with more than 12 months of service with the employer, and who has at least 1,250 hours of service with the employer during the previous 12-month period, to take up to a total of 12 workweeks in any 12-month period for family care and medical leave." (Govt.C. 12945.2(a).)

(2) Discriminatory Discharge or Refusal To Hire. It is an unlawful employment practice for an employer "to refuse to hire, or to discharge, fine, suspend, expel, or discriminate against," a person because of the person's (a) exercise of the right to family care and medical leave, or (b) giving information or testimony as to his, her, or another person's family care and medical leave, in an inquiry or proceeding related to rights guaranteed under Govt.C. 12945.2. (Govt.C. 12945.2(l).) The same prohibition against discrimination in hiring, discharge, etc., applies to state civil service employees. (See Govt.C. 19702.3(a).)

The elements of a cause of action under the CFRA for retaliation against an employee needing medical leave are: (a) the defendant was an employer covered by the CFRA; (b) the plaintiff was an employee eligible to take leave; (c) the plaintiff exercised his or her right to take leave for a qualifying purpose; and (d) the plaintiff suffered an adverse employment action, such as termination, fine, or suspension, because of the exercise of his or her right to take leave. (Dudley v. Department of Trans. (2001) 90 C.A.4th 255, 261, 108 C.R.2d 739; see McDaneld v. Eastern Mun. Water Dist. Bd. (2003) 109 C.A.4th 702, 706, 135 C.R.2d 267 [employer did not err in terminating employee who it reasonably believed had misused leave and who was untruthful in investigation].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Discriminatory Discharge or Refusal To Hire. See Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 C.A.4th 509, 520, 49 C.R.3d 216 [plaintiff could not state valid claim under CFRA for failure of employer to reinstate her after she took extended medical leave because employer had legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for terminating plaintiff's employment which had nothing to do with her taking CFRA leave]; Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 C.A.4th 864, 881, 58 C.R.3d 729 [trial court erred in granting summary judgment to defendant employer where defendant failed to establish that it complied with CFRA notice requirements; although plaintiff failed to personally respond to defendant's requests for more information about his condition, defendant failed to contact plaintiff's doctor or attorney as directed by plaintiff's wife].

48 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS E. California Civil Rights Legislation. 3. Fair Employment and Housing Act. e. Housing. 1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 945

[§ 945] In General.

(1) Discrimination Prohibited. "[T]he practice of discrimination because of race, color, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, disability, or sexual orientation in housing accommodations is declared to be against public policy." (Govt.C. 12920; see Hess v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1982) 138 C.A.3d 232, 235, 187 C.R. 712 [discrimination against unmarried couples]; Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (2004) 121 C.A.4th 1578, 1593, 18 C.R.3d 669 [condominium association with no-dog policy violated FEHA by failing to permit condominium owners to keep dog as reasonable accommodation to their mental disabilities]; 108 Harv. L. Rev. 763 [note on Alaska case: anti-discrimination laws protecting unmarried couples do not violate free exercise rights of religious landlord]; 21 California Lawyer 66 (May 2001) [Disabled Tenants]; 31 McGeorge L. Rev. 211 [minority housing and employment rights]; 25 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1055 [discrimination against unmarried couples]; 96 A.L.R.3d 497 [state civil rights acts prohibiting racial discrimination in rental of privately owned residential property]; 28 A.L.R.4th 685 [state civil rights acts prohibiting discrimination in housing based on physical handicap]; 33 A.L.R.4th 964 [state civil rights acts prohibiting discrimination in housing based on marital status]; 81 A.L.R.4th 205 [state civil rights legislation prohibiting sex discrimination in housing]; 2 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §13:5 et seq. [text and form]; on unlawful practices, see infra, §947; on discrimination by landlords against children, see supra, §908.)

(2) Construction. The Act is to be liberally construed. (Govt.C. 12993(a)) The Act occupies the field, superseding any city or county regulations on the subject. But it does not restrict or limit the application of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, C.C. 51 (supra, §898), or the Tom Bane Civil Rights Act, C.C. 51.7 (supra, §895). (Govt.C. 12993(c), 12993.5.)

The FEHA is not to be construed to:

(a) Affect the title or other interest of a bona fide purchaser or encumbrancer without knowledge or notice of a violation. (Govt.C. 12995(a)(1).)

(b) Prohibit private or public postsecondary educational institutions from providing separate housing for male or female students, or for married students or students with minor dependents residing with them. (Govt.C. 12995(a)(2).)

(c) Prohibit selection based on "factors other than race, color, religion, sex, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, disability, or other basis prohibited by the Unruh Civil Rights Act." (Govt.C. 12995(a)(3).)

(d) "Promote housing accommodations on a preferential or quota basis." (Govt.C. 12995(a)(4).)

(e) Prohibit "the nondiscriminatory enforcement of state and local public nuisance laws" that do not otherwise conflict with the Act. (Govt.C. 12995(b).)

Further, the Act does not prohibit a religious organization, association, or society, or a nonprofit institution or organization operated or controlled by it, "from limiting the sale, rental, or occupancy of dwellings that it owns or operates for other than a commercial purpose to persons of the same religion or from giving preference to those persons, unless membership in that religion is restricted on account of race, color, or national origin." (Govt.C. 12955.4.)

(3) Preservation of Records. On notice that a verified complaint against it has been filed, the owner of housing accommodations must maintain and preserve all rental records and other written materials relevant to the complaint, "until the complaint is fully and finally disposed of and all appeals or related proceedings terminated." (Govt.C. 12956.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.131

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

49 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
e. Housing.
2. Definitions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 946

[§ 946] Definitions.

(1) Discrimination. For purposes of the Act, "discrimination" is broadly defined in Govt.C. 12927(c)(1) to include the following:

- (a) The refusal to sell, rent, or lease housing accommodations.
- (b) The refusal to negotiate for the sale, rental, or lease of housing accommodations.
- (c) A representation that a housing accommodation is not available for inspection, sale, or rental when the housing accommodation is, in fact, available.
- (d) Other denials or withholdings of housing accommodations.
- (e) The provision of inferior terms, conditions, privileges, facilities, or services in connection with the housing accommodations.
- (f) Harassment in connection with housing accommodations.
- (g) The cancellation or termination of a sale or rental agreement.
- (h) The provision of segregated or separated housing accommodations.
- (i) The "refusal to permit, at the expense of the disabled person, reasonable modifications of existing premises occupied or to be occupied by the disabled person, if the modifications may be necessary to afford the disabled person full enjoyment of the premises ... and includes refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services when these accommodations may be necessary to afford a disabled person equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling." However, in the case of a rental, the landlord, where reasonable, may "condition permission for a modification on the renter's agreeing to restore the interior of the premises to the condition that existed before the modification (other than for reasonable wear and tear)." (Govt.C. 12927(c)(1).)

"Discrimination" does not include "refusal to rent or lease a portion of an owner-occupied single-family house to a person as a roomer or boarder living within the household, provided that no more than one roomer or boarder is to live within the household, and the owner complies with" Govt.C. 12955(c) (infra, §947), on proper notices and advertisements. (Govt.C. 12927(c)(2).) Where living space in a single unit is to be shared, "discrimination" does not include advertising targeted to persons of one sex. (Govt.C. 12927(c)(2).)

(2) Owner. "Owner" includes (a) the lessee, sublessee, assignee, managing agent, real estate broker, or salesman; (b) a person having any legal or equitable right of ownership or possession or the right to rent or lease housing accommodations; and (c) the state and its political subdivisions or their agencies. (Govt.C. 12927(e).)

(3) Housing Accommodation.

"Housing accommodation" is a "building, structure, or portion thereof that is occupied as, or intended for occupancy as, a residence by one or more families and any vacant land that is offered for sale or lease for the construction" of such a building, etc. (Govt.C. 12927(d).)

(4) Person. "Person" includes "all individuals and entities" described in 42 U.S.C., §3602(d), and in the definition of "owner" in Govt.C. 12927(e), and all institutional third parties, including the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation. (Govt.C. 12927(f).)

(5) Aggrieved Person. "Aggrieved person" includes a "person who claims to have been injured by a discriminatory housing practice or believes that the person will be injured by a discriminatory housing practice that is about to occur." (Govt.C. 12927(g).)

(6) Real Estate-Related Transactions. "Real estate-related transactions" includes (a) the making or purchasing of loans for the purchase, maintenance, or improvement of residential real estate, (b) the sale, brokering, or appraisal of residential real estate, and (c) the use of territorial underwriting criteria to require earthquake insurance. (Govt.C. 12927(h).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(5) Aggrieved Person. See Sisemore v. Master Financial (2007) 151 C.A.4th 1386, 1426, 60 C.R.3d 719 [nonprofit fair housing organization that was required to divert scarce resources to address defendant lender's alleged discriminatory conduct was "person aggrieved" under Govt.C. 12989.1 and had standing to assert FEHA claim].

50 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS E. California Civil Rights Legislation. 3. Fair Employment and Housing Act. e. Housing. 3. Unlawful Activities.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 947

[§ 947] Unlawful Activities.

(1) Statutory Provisions. The FEHA sets forth unlawful acts and practices relating to housing discrimination and harassment based on a person's "race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, national origin, ancestry, familial status, source of income, or disability" (Govt.C. 12955), or the perception that a person has, or is associated with a person who has, one of these protected characteristics (Govt.C. 12955(m)). Specifically, it is unlawful:

(a) For the owner of a housing accommodation to discriminate against or harass a person because of that person's race, etc. (Govt.C. 12955(a).)

(b) For the owner to make an inquiry concerning the race, etc., but not the source of income, of a person seeking to purchase, rent, or lease any housing accommodation. (Govt.C. 12955(b)); on inquiry into source of income, see Govt.C. 12955(p).)

(c) For a person to make any form of publication with respect to the sale or rental of a housing accommodation expressing any discriminatory preference. (Govt.C. 12955(c).)

(d) For a person subject to the Unruh Act (supra, §898 et seq.) to discriminate against any person on the ground of race, etc. (Govt.C. 12955(d).)

(e) For a person, bank, mortgage company, or other financial institution to whom application is made for financial assistance for the purchase, organization, or construction of any housing accommodation to discriminate against a person or group of persons because of the race, etc., of the person or persons, or of prospective occupants or tenants, "in the terms, conditions, or privileges relating to the obtaining or use of that financial assistance." (Govt.C. 12955(e).)

(f) For an owner of housing accommodations "to harass, evict, or otherwise discriminate against any person in the sale or rental of housing accommodations," when the owner's dominant purpose is retaliation for seeking or supporting enforcement of the Act. (Govt.C. 12955(f)) [this provision is not intended to cause or permit delay of unlawful detainer action].)

(g) "For any person to aid, abet, incite, compel, or coerce" any of the proscribed acts or practices, or to attempt to do so. (Govt.C. 12955(g).)

(h) "For any person, for profit, to induce any person to sell or rent any dwelling by representations regarding the entry or prospective entry into the neighborhood of a person or persons" of a particular race, etc. (Govt.C. 12955(h).)

(i) For any person, organization, or entity "whose business involves real estate-related transactions to discriminate" on the basis of race, etc., in making a transaction available or in the terms or conditions of a transaction. (Govt.C. 12955(i).)

(j) "To deny a person access to, or membership or participation in, a multiple listing service, real estate brokerage organization, or other service" because of race, etc. (Govt.C. 12955(j).)

(k) "To otherwise make unavailable or deny a dwelling based on discrimination" because of race, etc. (Govt.C. 12955(k).)

(l) "To discriminate through public or private land use practices, decisions, and authorizations" because of race, etc. Discrimination includes "restrictive covenants, zoning laws, denials of use permits, and other actions authorized under the Planning and Zoning Law" (Govt.C. 65000 et seq., infra, §1010 et seq.), "that make housing opportunities unavailable." This includes the use of a restrictive covenant, even if accompanied by a statement that it has been repealed or is void. (Govt.C. 12955(l).) (See Broadmoor San Clemente Homeowners Assn. v. Nelson (1994) 25 C.A.4th 1, 9, 30 C.R.2d 316, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §456 [in enacting 1993 amendments of Govt.C. 12955 and 12955.6 (see supra, §916), Legislature intended to bring California law into compliance with federal law, which prohibits enforcement of restrictive covenants having effect of excluding group homes for disabled].)

(m) "To use a financial or income standard in the rental of housing that fails to account for the aggregate income of persons residing together ... on the same basis as the aggregate income of married persons residing together." (Govt.C. 12955(n).)

(n) Where there is a government rent subsidy, "to use a financial or income standard in assessing eligibility for the rental of housing that is not based on the portion of rent to be paid by the tenant." (Govt.C. 12955(o).)

For purposes of Govt.C. 12955, discrimination includes "failure to design and construct a covered multifamily dwelling in a manner that allows access to and use by disabled persons." (Govt.C. 12955.1 [providing required minimum features and standards that must be applied]; see Govt.C. 12955.1(a)(2) [defining "covered multifamily dwelling"].)

It is unlawful "to coerce, intimidate, threaten, or interfere with any person" who exercises or aids another in exercising a right granted or protected by Govt.C. 12955 or Govt.C. 12955.1. (Govt.C. 12955.7.)

(2) Familial Status. Provisions relating to discrimination on the basis of familial status do not apply to specified housing for older persons. (Govt.C. 12955.9.)

(3) Marital Status. In Smith v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1996) 12 C.4th 1143, 51 C.R.2d 700, 913 P.2d 909, a landlord refused on religious grounds to rent an apartment to an unmarried couple. Acting on the couple's complaint, the Fair Employment and Housing Commission determined that the landlord had violated the FEHA by discriminating on the basis of marital status. The landlord argued that the Act does not prohibit housing discrimination against unmarried couples. Held, the Act applies. Three justices joined in the lead opinion, and a fourth concurred fully in the disposition of the case.

(a) Under Govt.C. 12955(a), it is unlawful for the owner of housing to discriminate against a person because of "marital status." The usual and ordinary meaning of the words "marital status," as applied to two prospective tenants, is that a landlord may not ask them whether they are married or refuse to rent to them because they are or are not married. (12 C.4th 1155.) The language means that unmarried couples, as well as single, married, widowed, and divorced individuals are protected from discrimination. This reading of the words "marital status" is confirmed by the Legislature's use of the words in other statutes. (12 C.4th 1156.)

(b) The Commission has interpreted Govt.C. 12955 to protect unmarried couples since 1980, when the FEHA was enacted. Although final responsibility for interpreting the statute rests with the courts, the Commission's interpretation is entitled to great weight: (1) the interpretation is contemporaneous with the statute's enactment, uniform, and long standing, and (2) nothing in the legislative history of Govt.C. 12955 contradicts the established interpretation. (12 C.4th 1157.) (On court's rejection of landlord's claim that statute burdened her exercise of religious freedom, see supra, §527.)

(4) Sexual Harassment. The FEHA applies to sexual harassment in housing. In Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 C.A.4th 767, 64 C.R.2d 301, the court explained that the Act should conform to the general requirements of federal law in the area and is to be liberally construed to accomplish its purposes. (55 C.A.4th 780, citing Govt.C. 12993.) Federal case law has recognized a hostile housing environment cause of action. (55 C.A.4th 781.) The nature of the environment as hostile or abusive can be determined only by looking at all the circumstances. Factors to be considered include the frequency of the objectionable conduct; its severity; whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance; and whether it unreasonably interferes with a tenant's enjoyment of the housing conditions. (55 C.A.4th 784.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.131

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Statutory Provisions. See Sisemore v. Master Financial (2007) 151 C.A.4th 1386, 1416, 60 C.R.3d 719 [fact that Govt.C. 12955(p)(1) defines "source of income" in context of discrimination by landlord against tenant does not confine other protections afforded by statute to discrimination against tenants; plaintiffs, who alleged that lender discriminated against them on basis of source of income in connection with efforts to obtain mortgage to purchase home to be used as family day care business, stated claim under Govt.C. 12955(e)].

(New) Disparate impact: An act or a failure to act that is otherwise covered under the FEHA provisions governing housing discrimination, and that has the effect, regardless of intent, of discriminating on one of the specified grounds, is actionable. (See Govt.C. 12955.8(b).) Hence, a housing discrimination claim under the FEHA may be based on a disparate impact theory. (Sisemore v. Master Financial, supra, 151 C.A.4th 1419 [although FEHA does not protect home day care operators as class, plaintiffs stated claim for disparate impact discrimination where effect of defendant's policy not to give mortgages to home day care providers was to discriminate against plaintiffs on basis of gender or familial status].)

51 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
f. Enforcement Procedure.
1. Employment.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 948

[§ 948] In General.

(1) Enforcement Responsibility. Responsibilities for enforcing the FEHA are allocated between the Department of Fair Employment and Housing and the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (see supra, §920). The Act establishes a procedure for the prevention and elimination of unlawful practices. (See Govt.C. 12960 et seq.; on judicial enforcement, see infra, §951; on effect of arbitration on claim under FEHA, see 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, Supp., §494A et seq.)

(2) Initiation of Investigation by Complaint. A person aggrieved by an unlawful employment practice, or the director of the department or his or her authorized representative, may file a verified complaint with the department. (Govt.C. 12960(b).) A complaint on behalf of a class is permitted. (Govt.C. 12961.) Also, an employer whose employees refuse to cooperate may file a complaint "asking for assistance by conciliation or other remedial action." (Govt.C. 12960(c).)

The complaint must be filed within 1 year of the alleged unlawful practice, subject to a 90-day extension if the practice was not discovered within that period. (Govt.C. 12960(d).) It must be served on the person, employer, or organization alleged to have committed the unlawful practice at the time of initial contact or within 60 days, "whichever first occurs." (Govt.C. 12962.) (See Balloon v. Superior Court (1995) 39 C.A.4th 1116, 1120, 46 C.R.2d 161 [time for filing complaint is not tolled during minority]; Williams v. Belvedere (1999) 72 C.A.4th 84, 93, 84 C.R.2d 658 [issuance of right-to-sue letter does not overturn rule requiring timely filing of administrative claim as prerequisite to filing civil action]; Morgan v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (2000) 88 C.A.4th 52, 64, 105 C.R.2d 652 [series of rejected job applications with different departments of defendant university did not demonstrate continuing violation sufficient to permit evidence of events occurring before limitations period].)

(3) Investigatory Powers. The department must promptly investigate a complaint of unfair employment practices. (Govt.C. 12963.) It may (a) issue and serve subpoenas requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses by deposition or otherwise, and the production of documentary evidence and physical materials (Govt.C. 12963.1(a)); (b) issue and serve written interrogatories (Govt.C. 12963.2(a)); (c) take depositions (Govt.C. 12963.3); and (d) issue and serve requests for the production, inspection, and copying of documentary evidence and physical materials (Govt.C. 12963.4(a)).

The superior court has jurisdiction to compel the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of evidence, and the answering of interrogatories. (Govt.C. 12963.5(a).) Orders are final and not subject to review by appeal, but the losing party may seek mandamus to compel the court to set aside or otherwise modify its order. (Govt.C. 12963.5(d).) (See 12 Pacific L. J. 567.)

(4) Conference, Conciliation, and Persuasion. If the department determines that the complaint is valid, it must seek to eliminate the unlawful practice by confidential conference, conciliation, and persuasion. (Govt.C. 12963.7(a).) A successful agreement must be reduced to writing, and the department retains power to enforce it if it is not implemented. (Govt.C. 12964.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.441 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Enforcement Responsibility.

Cross-Reference: 6 Cal. Proc. (5th), Proceedings Without Trial, §518 et seq.

(2) Initiation of Investigation by Complaint. As amended in 2003, Govt.C. 12962 only requires the department to serve a verified complaint for an unrepresented employee that is "filed for investigation." Where an employee is represented by private counsel, service of the administrative complaint is made by counsel. But where an unrepresented employee files an administrative complaint and asks for a right-to-sue letter to pursue the matter in court, the department does not start an investigation, and the employee need not serve the defunct administrative complaint on the employer within the 60-day time limit as a prerequisite to bringing an action. (Wasti v. Superior Court (2006) 140 C.A.4th 667, 672, 674, 44 C.R.3d 625 [because 2003 amendment did not change filing requirements for unrepresented employees, even if time limit applied to employee in this case, department would have been responsible for serving complaint].)

See Blum v. Superior Court (2006) 141 C.A.4th 418, 428, 45 C.R.3d 902 [attorney may verify DFEH complaint for client by signing attorney's own name to complaint].

(New) Tolling of 1-year period to file complaint: The FEHA does not foreclose as a matter of law the equitable tolling of the statute of limitations for filing a complaint with the DFEH during a complainant's voluntary pursuit of an internal administrative remedy. (McDonald v. Antelope Valley Community College Dist. (2008) 45 C.4th 88, 106, 84 C.R.3d 734, 194 P.3d 1026.)

52 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

f. Enforcement Procedure.

1. Employment.

bb. Accusation, Hearing, and Decision.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 949

[§ 949] Accusation, Hearing, and Decision.

(1) Formal Accusation. A written accusation is issued if conference, conciliation, or persuasion fails (see supra, §948), or if the department determines that the "circumstances warrant" it. If the complaint is treated as a class complaint or alleges a violation of C.C. 51.7 (supra, §895), the accusation must be issued within 2 years after the filing of the complaint; otherwise within 1 year. (Govt.C. 12965(a).) If the accused is a state contractor or supplier, notice and a copy of the accusation must be sent to the appropriate agency. (Govt.C. 12966.)

The language in Govt.C. 12965(a) allowing the division to issue an accusation in advance of conference, conciliation, or persuasion "if circumstances warrant" was intended to give the division (a) the discretion to determine what circumstances warrant a premature filing, and (b) the right to salvage otherwise unsuccessfully resolved claims by filing them on the last possible day. (Motors Ins. Corp. v. Division of Fair Emp. Practices (1981) 118 C.A.3d 209, 224, 173 C.R. 332 [decided under predecessor statute].)

(2) Hearing. The Commission must hold a hearing on an accusation issued pursuant to Govt.C. 12965 (Govt.C. 12967), and the hearing must take place not more than 90 days after issuance of the accusation (Govt.C. 12968). The department prosecutes accusations before the Commission. (Govt.C. 12930(h).)

A commissioner who has engaged in the investigation of a particular case may not hear the case or participate in the Commission's deliberations on the case. (Govt.C. 12969; see Govt.C. 12970(h) [findings must identify members who participated in decisions].)

(3) Injunction Pending Decision. The department may obtain temporary or preliminary relief pending final disposition of the complaint if necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act. (Govt.C. 12974.)

(4) Findings, Determination, and Order. If the Commission concludes that there was an unlawful practice, it makes findings of fact, and issues and serves its order. This order requires the respondent "to cease and desist from the unlawful practice and to take action, including, but not limited to," the following:

- (a) Hiring, reinstatement, or upgrading of employees, with or without back pay. (Govt.C. 12970(a)(1).)
- (b) Restoration to membership in any respondent labor organization. (Govt.C. 12970(a)(2).)
- (c) Payment of damages. (See infra, §950.)
- (d) Affirmative or prospective relief that will prevent a recurrence of the unlawful practice. (Govt.C. 12970(a)(5).)
- (e) Reporting to the Commission regarding compliance. (Govt.C. 12970(a)(6).)

(5) Copy of Decision to State Agency. If the unlawful practice occurred in connection with respondent's exercise of a license or privilege granted by a state agency, the Commission must provide that agency with a copy of its decision or order. (Govt.C. 12970(f).)

(6) Copy of Decision to District Attorney. If it appears that the unlawful practice consisted of a violation of specified statutes relating to sexual offenses, the Commission, with the complainant's consent, must provide the local district attorney's office with a copy of its decision and order. (Govt.C. 12970(j)); for discussion of crimes specified, see 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against the Person, §26; 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Sex Offenses and Crimes Against Decency, §§1 et seq., 31 et seq., 37 et seq., 47 et seq.)

(7) Judicial Review. The Commission's order must contain on its face "references to the rights of appeal of any party to the proceeding to whose position the order is adverse." (Govt.C. 12970(i).) (On standard of judicial review by administrative mandamus under former Lab.C. 1410 et seq., see Kerrigan v. Fair Emp. Practice Com. (1979) 91 C.A.3d 43, 52, 154 C.R. 29 [independent judgment rule governed review of finding that employer had not discriminated on basis of age in refusing to hire plaintiff]; cf. Northern Inyo Hosp. v. Fair Emp. Practice Com. (1974) 38 C.A.3d 14, 21, 112 C.R. 872 [employer claiming right to set its own employment practices sought review by administrative mandamus of order finding it guilty of racial discrimination; because claimed right was neither fundamental nor vested, substantial evidence rule was proper standard of review].)

(8) Compliance Review. Within 1 year of the effective date of every final order or decision, the department must "conduct a compliance review to determine whether the order or decision has been fully obeyed and implemented." (Govt.C. 12973(a).)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.446

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

53 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
f. Enforcement Procedure.
1. Employment.
cc. Damages and Penalties.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 950

[§ 950] Damages and Penalties.

(1) Historical Background. In Peralta Community College Dist. v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1990) 52 C.3d 40, 276 C.R. 114, 801 P.2d 357, the court, applying the reasoning of Dyna-Med. v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1987) 43 C.3d 1379, 241 C.R. 67, 743 P.2d 1323, held that the Fair Employment and Housing Commission cannot make an award of compensatory damages.

(a) If the department deems a claim valid, it may issue an accusation to be heard by the Commission. If the department determines not to prosecute, it must give the complainant a "right to sue" letter, and the complainant may then bring a civil action in the superior court and recover compensatory and punitive damages. (52 C.3d 45.)

(b) Dyna-Med. concluded that the statutory remedies "are exclusively corrective," and relate to matters that "serve to make the aggrieved employee whole in the context of the employment." (52 C.3d 49.) Under Govt.C. 12970, this includes such actions as "hiring, reinstatement or upgrading of employees, with or without back pay, ... as, in the judgment of the Commission, will effectuate the purposes" of the FEHA. (52 C.3d 46.) Govt.C. 12987 authorizes the award of both actual and limited punitive damages in housing discrimination cases. "Had the Legislature intended to authorize the Commission to award damages in employment as in housing cases, it could easily have expressly so provided." (52 C.3d 51.)

(c) The Attorney General argues that in harassment cases, where no detriment to the employment has been shown and the employee's out-of-pocket expenses are minimal, the only injury is emotional distress and the only redress is compensatory damages. (52 C.3d 53.) But the administrative procedure does not preclude the employee from instituting a private lawsuit based on a nonstatutory cause of action. (52 C.3d 54.) And the department in every case has the discretion to issue a right-to-sue letter, clearing the way for a private civil action under the FEHA. (52 C.3d 54.)

Two justices joined in a dissenting opinion, stressing the seriousness of the problem of sexual harassment and discrimination in the workplace, and asserting that the majority's holding frustrates the legislative goal of providing administrative relief. (52 C.3d 63.) (See 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 211.)

(2) Statutory Amendments and Legislative Policy. The 1992 Legislature responded to Peralta and Dyna-Med. by amending Govt.C. 12970 and related sections. (See Stats. 1992, Chap. 911.) A "primary public policy" of the FEHA "is the prevention and elimination of unlawful employment practices" in California. "A critical corollary to this policy is the availability of effective remedies in administrative proceedings" before the commission. (Stats. 1992, Chap. 911, §1(a).) "The commission must be able to assess civil penalties or fines against particularly egregious respondents to meaningfully vindicate the strong public interest in the prevention and elimination of unlawful employment practices. The commission must be able to redress the victim of discrimination for damages resulting from harassment or discrimination to effectuate the act's remedial purpose of making whole victims of discrimination." (Stats. 1992, Chap. 911, §1(b).) (See Govt.C. 12920.5 ["effective remedies that will both prevent and deter unlawful employment practices and redress the adverse effects of those practices on aggrieved persons" are necessary to eliminate discrimination].)

(3) Remedies.

(a) Orders. In addition to a cease and desist order, order to hire employees, etc., (see supra, §949), the Commission may order (1) payment of actual damages (Govt.C. 12970(a)(3), (a)(4)); (2) an administrative fine (Govt.C. 12970(c)); and (3) payment of a civil penalty of up to $ 25,000 to a person denied any right provided by C.C. 51.7 (Tom Bane Civil Rights Act, supra, §895) (Govt.C. 12970(e)).

(b) Actual damages. Actual damages include damages for emotional injuries. Actual damages "for emotional pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental anguish, loss of enjoyment of life, and other nonpecuniary losses" may not exceed, in combination with any administrative fine, $ 150,000 per aggrieved person per respondent. (Govt.C. 12970(a)(3).) Further, actual damages up to $ 150,000 may be awarded for a violation of C.C. 51.7. (Govt.C. 12970(a)(4).)

(c) Proof of actual injury. To sustain an award of actual damages, the department must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that an aggrieved person has sustained actual injury; proof of an unlawful practice alone is not sufficient. In determining the amount, if any, to award for emotional injuries, the Commission must consider the effects of discrimination on the aggrieved person with respect to specified factors, the duration of the injury, and whether it was caused or exacerbated by the person's knowledge of respondent's failure to respond adequately to, or to correct, the discriminatory practice or by the egregiousness of the practice. (Govt.C. 12970(b).)

(d) Administrative fines. To assess an administrative fine, the Commission must find that respondent has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or expressed or implied malice, as required by C.C. 3294 (6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1599) for punitive damages. In determining the amount, the Commission must consider relevant evidence of specified factors. (Govt.C. 12970(d).) However, the amount of the fine must be determined "in accordance with the combined amount limitation" of Govt.C. 12970(a)(3). (Govt.C. 12970(c).) Administrative fines are paid into the General Fund and may not be assessed against a public entity. (Govt.C. 12970(d).)

(e) Punitive damages. The Commission may not award punitive damages for employment discrimination. (Govt.C. 12970(d).)

(4) Transfer of Proceedings.

(a) Election to transfer. If an accusation seeks damages for emotional injuries, administrative fines, or both, the respondent may elect to transfer the proceedings to a court. The election must be made within 30 days of service of the accusation, by serving a written notice, on a form prescribed by the Commission, on the department, the Commission, and the person claiming to be aggrieved. (Govt.C. 12965(c)(1).)

(b) Dismissal of action. Within 30 days after service of the notice of election, the department must dismiss the accusation and, either itself or through the Attorney General, file an action in its own name on behalf of the aggrieved person as real party in interest. Venue is determined in the same manner as in civil actions under Govt.C. 12965(b) (infra, §951). The real party in interest has the right to participate as a party and to be represented by counsel. (Govt.C. 12965(c)(2).)

(c) Relief available. The court may grant the same relief as could be granted in an action under Govt.C. 12965(b), as well as other relief that will effectuate the purpose of Govt.C. 12900 et seq. (Govt.C. 12965(c)(3).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Remedies.

(b) Actual damages. See 14 A.L.R.6th 417 [compensatory damages recoverable in state action for employer's sexual harassment or discrimination].

54 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

f. Enforcement Procedure.

1. Employment.

dd. Judicial Enforcement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 951

[§ 951] Judicial Enforcement.

(1) Judgment and Review. The department may apply to the appropriate court to enforce the final Commission order or decision, or the order as modified in accordance with a decision on judicial review. If, after a hearing, the court determines that an order or decision has been issued by the Commission and that either the time limits for judicial review have lapsed, or the order or decision was upheld in whole or in part on judicial review, the court must issue a judgment enforcing the order or decision, or order as modified; it may not review the merits of the Commission order or decision. The court's judgment is nonappealable and has the same force and effect as a judgment in a civil action. (Govt.C. 12973(b).) However, where a reviewing court denies a petition for review of a Commission order or decision, the court must "enter judgment denying the petition and enforcing the Commission's final order or decision." (Govt.C. 12973(c).)

(2) Civil Action. If an accusation is not issued within 150 days after filing the complaint, or if the department earlier determines that no accusation will issue, it must promptly notify the complainant in writing that a right-to-sue notice will be issued on his or her request. If the complainant does not request a right-to-sue notice, the department must issue the notice on completing its investigation, and not more than 1 year after filing the complaint. The notice must indicate that the complainant may bring a civil action against the person or entity named in the complaint within 1 year from the date of the notice. (Govt.C. 12965(b)) [under specified conditions, civil action may be filed by county if complainant claims HIV/AIDS discrimination]; see Williams v. Pacific Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 941, 948, 231 C.R. 234 [employee's private right of action under Govt.C. 12965(b) does not accrue until receipt of right-to-sue notice].)

Civil actions under the FEHA may not be filed or maintained as class actions where the aggrieved persons "have filed" a class action in the federal courts alleging a comparable claim of employment discrimination against the same defendants. (Govt.C. 12965(b).) However, the words "have filed" do not mean that any past filing of a federal class action bars a subsequent FEHA class action in state court. The provision only bars a state class action when a comparable federal claim is pending. (Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 C.A.4th 339, 362, 19 C.R.3d 29 [writers who filed and then dismissed age discrimination actions in federal court were not barred from pursuing FEHA class action in state court].)

Venue lies (a) in the county in which the unlawful practice is alleged to have been committed, (b) in the county in which the records relevant to the practice are maintained and administered, or (c) in the county in which the aggrieved person would have worked or would have had access to the public accommodation but for the alleged unlawful practice; but if the defendant is not found within these counties, the action may be brought in the county of defendant's residence or principal office. (Govt.C. 12965(b); see Brown v. Superior Court (1984) 37 C.3d 477, 487, 208 C.R. 724, 691 P.2d 272, 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §801 [where FEHA claims were joined with non-FEHA claims arising from same facts, special venue provisions of Govt.C. 12965(b) governed entire action, prevailing over general venue provisions of C.C.P. 395].)

All forms of relief granted to civil litigants generally, including punitive damages where appropriate, may be awarded by the court in the civil action. (Commodore Home Systems v. Superior Court (1982) 32 C.3d 211, 215, 185 C.R. 270, 649 P.2d 912, 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1596; Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System (1999) 21 C.4th 121, 132, 141, 87 C.R.2d 132, 980 P.2d 846 [injunctive relief against post-trial use of discriminatory and harassing language]; on effect of arbitration agreement on claim under FEHA, see 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, Supp., §494A et seq.)

(3) Effect of Pendency of Proceeding Before EEOC. The 1-year statute of limitations commencing after issuance of the right-to-sue notice by the department is tolled after the concurrent filing of a charge of discrimination or harassment with the EEOC and the department, when the investigation is deferred by the department to the EEOC (see Govt.C. 12965(d)), or by the EEOC to the department (see Govt.C. 12965(e)). (See Downs v. Department of Water & Power (1997) 58 C.A.4th 1093, 1102, 68 C.R.2d 590, 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, Supp., §659 [Govt.C. 12965(d) is codification of Downs].) The time for commencing an action when the statute of limitations has been tolled expires when the federal right to sue period expires, or 1 year from the date of the right-to-sue notice by the department, whichever is later. (Govt.C. 12965(d)(2), 12965(e)(2).)

(4) Interference With Duties or Violation of Order. A person who wilfully interferes with a member of the department, the Commission, or their agents or employees, in the performance of statutory duties relating to employment discrimination, or who wilfully violates a commission order relating to this matter, is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by county jail imprisonment for not more than 6 months, a fine of not over $ 1,000, or both. (Govt.C. 12975.)

(5) Failure To Retain Records. Employers, labor organizations, and employment agencies must keep their personnel and application records for 2 years (except the State Personnel Board, which must do so for 1 year), and until final disposition of a complaint. (Govt.C. 12946.) Wilful violation of Govt.C. 12946 is a misdemeanor, punishable by county jail imprisonment for not more than 6 months, a fine of not over $ 1,000, or both. (Govt.C. 12976.)

(6) Immigration Status Is Irrelevant. A person's immigration status is irrelevant to the issue of liability for purposes of enforcing state labor, employment, civil rights, and employee housing laws. Thus, unless an inquiry into a person's immigration status is necessary to comply with federal immigration law, no such inquiry may be made to enforce those state laws. (C.C. 3339, Govt.C. 7285, Health & Saf.C. 24000, Lab.C. 1171.5; see 34 McGeorge L. Rev. 435 [discussing statutes].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.448 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Civil Action.Brown case:

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §886.

Effect of arbitration agreement:

Cross-Reference: 6 Cal. Proc. (5th), Proceedings Without Trial, §517 et seq.

(3) Effect of Pendency of Proceeding Before EEOC.

Downs case:

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §731.

55 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

f. Enforcement Procedure.

1. Employment.

ee. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 952

[§ 952] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies.

(1) In General. In Baker v. Children's Hosp. Med. Center (1989) 209 C.A.3d 1057, 257 C.R. 768, plaintiff's internal grievance was denied by his employer; he then filed a complaint with the department, which did not file an accusation. His subsequent civil action, in addition to repeating his earlier charges that he was the victim of racial discrimination in work hours, claimed harassment and discriminatory treatment because of race and in retaliation for his earlier pursuit of the internal grievance. The employer's motion for summary judgment was granted on the ground of failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Held, reversed. "[T]he allegations of harassment and differential treatment encompass the allegations of discrimination in his DFEH complaint. Moreover, it is reasonable that an investigation of the allegations in the original DFEH complaint would lead to the investigation of subsequent discriminatory acts undertaken by respondents in retaliation for appellant's filing an internal grievance. Consequently, we conclude the instant action is not barred by the exhaustion doctrine." (209 C.A.3d 1065.)

In Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 C.3d 65, 276 C.R. 130, 801 P.2d 373, plaintiffs, employed as assistants to defendant physician, brought an action for (1) violation of the FEHA, (2) intentional infliction of emotional distress, and (3) tortious discharge in contravention of public policy. The complaint alleged that they had been subjected by defendant to sexually harassing remarks and demands for sexual favors which had ultimately forced them to leave their employment. Defendant moved for summary judgment on the grounds that the FEHA was plaintiffs' exclusive remedy and that plaintiffs had failed to exhaust their administrative remedies under that Act. The trial judge granted the motion, the Court of Appeal reversed, and the Supreme Court affirmed the Court of Appeal judgment.

(a) FEHA does not supplant other statutory or common law claims. Govt.C. 12993(a) specifically provides that the Act does not supplant other statutory remedies (see supra, §915). (52 C.3d 73.) The common law provides a "number of remedial theories" to compensate for injuries relating to discrimination. (52 C.3d 74, citing Brown v. Superior Court (1984) 37 C.3d 477, 487, 208 C.R. 724, 691 P.2d 272.) And the Supreme Court has recognized on many occasions that both administrative and judicial remedies are available to victims of employment discrimination. (52 C.3d 74.)

(b) Exhaustion as prerequisite to statutory cause of action. If an action is brought on the statutory cause of action under the Act, exhaustion of administrative remedies is a prerequisite to judicial relief. (52 C.3d 83, citing Yurick v. Superior Court (1989) 209 C.A.3d 1116, 1121, 1123, 257 C.R. 665.) Compliance with this condition serves the important policy interests of resolving disputes by conciliation, and the salutary goals of easing the burden on the court system. The condition is not an impediment to a civil suit because the department's practice is to issue a right-to-sue letter (Govt.C. 12965) at the employee's request as a matter of course. (52 C.3d 83.)

(c) Exhaustion doctrine is inapplicable to nonstatutory cause of action. The exhaustion rule declared in Abelleira v. District Court of App., Third Dist. (1941) 17 C.2d 280, 109 P.2d 942, "speaks only to the need to exhaust administrative remedies provided for a statutory right and does not govern rights and remedies outside the legislative scheme." (52 C.3d 84.) Nor do policy considerations require extension of the requirement to constitutional and common law claims. The cases dealing with exhaustion of internal remedies of a private association are not persuasive. (52 C.3d 85, 86; see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §303.) "[R]equiring exhaustion as to nonstatutory claims ... , would either lead to routine issuance of right-to-sue letters, thus nullifying the requirement, or, alternatively, burden the Department and Commission with the investigation and determination of issues beyond their jurisdiction and special expertise, limit the resources available for the resolution of cases within the scope of the act, raise complex issues of collateral estoppel or res judicata, and ultimately have no beneficial impact on the judicial system, in that the case in any event must still enter the 'judicial pipeline,' a result the exhaustion doctrine was in part intended to avert." (52 C.3d 88.)

(d) Conclusion. "[A]lthough an employee must exhaust the FEHA administrative remedy before bringing suit on a cause of action under the act or seeking the relief provided therein, exhaustion is not required before filing a civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory causes of action. An employee, of course, may elect to waive the statutory cause of action and remedies, and proceed directly to court on the common law claims ... ; alternatively, the employee may pursue both the administrative and the judicial remedies, either sequentially ... or simultaneously, in the latter case amending his or her complaint to join the FEHA cause of action once the Department has issued the right-to-sue letter." (52 C.3d 88.) (See Keiffer v. Bechtel Corp. (1998) 65 C.A.4th 893, 899, 76 C.R.2d 827 [claim that plaintiff failed to present allegations of discrimination to department within 1 year, as required by FEHA, did not concern trial court's fundamental jurisdiction and could be waived where plaintiff filed complaint and received right-to-sue notice]; 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 291 [Rojo]; on right of civil service employee to pursue FEHA action without exhausting administrative remedies, see supra, §917; on common law claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §242 et seq.)

(2) Need To Name Defendant. In Martin v. Fisher (1992) 11 C.A.4th 118, 13 C.R.2d 922, plaintiff employee failed to name defendant supervisor in the caption of his administrative complaint, or to obtain a right-to-sue letter naming him. The trial court dismissed defendant on the ground of failure to exhaust administrative remedies. However, plaintiff had named defendant in the body of his complaint, and defendant participated in the administrative investigation. Held, dismissal of defendant for failure to name him in the caption of the administrative complaint was error.

"The function of an administrative complaint is to provide the basis for an investigation into an employee's claim of discrimination against an employer, and not to limit access to the courts. A strict rule would harm victims of discrimination without providing legitimate protection to individuals who are made aware of the charges through the administrative proceeding. If they are described in the charge as the perpetrators of the harm, they can certainly anticipate they will be named as parties in any ensuing lawsuit." (11 C.A.4th 122.) (See Cole v. Antelope Valley Union High School Dist. (1996) 47 C.A.4th 1505, 1511, 1515, 55 C.R.2d 443 [under Govt.C. 12960 (supra, §948), persons who discriminated must be named in either caption or body of administrative complaint, and failure to do so bars civil action against those persons; naming persons in letter to department is insufficient]; Medix Ambulance Service v. Superior Court (2002) 97 C.A.4th 109, 116, 118 C.R.2d 249 [following Cole; fact that employer was named in FEHA sexual harassment complaint did not obviate need to name individual defendants; statutory requirement could not be circumvented by asserting purported common law cause of action for sexual harassment].)

(3) Need for Department To Receive Notice of Claim. In Martin v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 29 C.A.4th 1718, 35 C.R.2d 181, supra, §933, plaintiff filed with the EEOC a complaint alleging age discrimination by defendant. The EEOC referred the matter to the DFEH, which sent plaintiff a letter saying that in the future the EEOC would handle the matter. However, the department issued a right-to-sue letter with respect to the age discrimination charge. Approximately 1 year later, plaintiff filed with the EEOC an amended complaint that included charges of sex discrimination, harassment, and retaliation, and the EEOC issued a right-to-sue letter. No complaint with respect to these charges was ever filed with the DFEH, which apparently never knew of the charges and never issued a right-to-sue letter regarding them. However, the present suit was filed, alleging that it stated charges under California statutes, including the charges for which the DFEH had never issued a right-to-sue letter. Held, summary judgment for defendant affirmed with respect to the charges of sex discrimination, harassment, and retaliation; plaintiff had failed to exhaust her administrative remedies.

"[T]he only claim before the DFEH in April 1991 was that Martin had been a victim of age discrimination. We cannot know how the DFEH would have reacted to the additional claims Martin made nearly a year later, because so far as we are aware those additional claims never reached the DFEH. If the procedural purposes of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (and, for that matter, the Title VII policy of initial deferral to a qualified state agency) are to be served, we cannot treat the DFEH's decision to defer an age discrimination claim as an effective delegation to the EEOC for the purpose of any further claim the aggrieved person may later make. If Martin wished to avail herself of state judicial remedies for her additional claims, it was essential that she undertake by reasonable means to make the additional claims known to the DFEH. In our view she did not do so, and therefore she did not exhaust her state administrative remedies." (29 C.A.4th 1729, 1730.) (See Okoli v. Lockheed Technical Operations Co. (1995) 36 C.A.4th 1607, 1612, 43 C.R.2d 57 [action for retaliatory firing was barred where it was not contained in charge filed with DFEH; retaliatory firing was not related to other claims, and DFEH thus had no chance to investigate it].)

(4) No Need for Current Right-To-Sue Letter. Martin v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. was distinguished in Grant v. CompUSA (2003) 109 C.A.4th 637, 135 C.R.2d 177, where the issue was whether the plaintiff could proceed with an action under the FEHA without having an outstanding right-to-sue notice. Plaintiff had filed a complaint with the DFEH and had received a right-to-sue notice, but the notice was later rescinded when the case was reopened after the EEOC returned the case to the DFEH for investigation. The DFEH sent a proposed settlement agreement to defendant employer, but it was not accepted. When there was no successful resolution of the matter within 1-year from filing the complaint, plaintiff filed this action against defendant. Held, plaintiff's failure to obtain a second right-to-sue letter does not preclude a finding that she exhausted her administrative remedies. Plaintiff's "right to sue arose by operation of law when the DFEH failed to resolve the matter within one year from the time she filed her administrative complaint." (109 C.A.4th 640.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.444

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Holland v. Union Pac. R. Co. (2007) 154 C.A.4th 940, 947, 65 C.R.3d 145 [failure to file timely administrative complaint was not fatal to disability discrimination action where plaintiff diligently pursued remedy with DFEH, raised issue of tardiness with DFEH, and relied on DFEH's assurances that he would meet deadline]. Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §320.

56 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
f. Enforcement Procedure.
2. Housing.
aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 953

[§ 953] In General.

(1) In General. Govt.C. 12980 et seq. establish a procedure for enforcing the prohibitions against housing discrimination (see supra, §945 et seq.). The procedure is basically the same as that established for employment discrimination. (See supra, §948.)

(2) Complaint. Complaints may be filed by the Attorney General or the Director (Govt.C. 12980(b)), as well as by an aggrieved person (Govt.C. 12980(a)). The complaint must be filed within 1-year from the date the violation occurred or terminated. (Govt.C. 12980(b).) The department then must, within 10 days, serve a copy of the verified complaint on the person charged, with notice of his or her procedural rights and obligations. The respondent may file an answer. (Govt.C. 12986.)

The department may not dismiss a complaint or accusation unless (a) the complainant withdraws the complaint, or (b) the department, after a thorough investigation, determines that there is no reasonable cause to believe that an unlawful housing practice has occurred or is about to occur. (Govt.C. 12981.1.)

(3) Coordination with Unruh Civil Rights Act. The filing of a complaint and pursuit of conciliation or remedy under the FEHA does not prejudice the complainant's right to pursue effective judicial relief under other applicable laws. However, if a civil action has been filed under the Unruh Civil Rights Act (supra, §914), the department must terminate proceedings under the FEHA, on notice of entry of final judgment, unless it is a judgment of dismissal entered at the complainant's request. (Govt.C. 12980(a).) Before a remedy will be provided under the FEHA, all rights under the Unruh Civil Rights Act must be waived. (Govt.C. 12987(b).)

(4) Investigation. The department's investigation of the complaint, and attempt to eliminate the discriminatory practice through conference, conciliation, and persuasion, proceeds in the same manner as in discriminatory employment practice (see supra, §948). (Govt.C. 12980(c) [provisions of Govt.C. 12980 et seq. prevail where they provide greater rights and remedies to aggrieved person].) Except as provided in Govt.C. 12980, matters connected with a conference or conciliation effort are privileged, and disclosure is prohibited. (Govt.C. 12984; see Govt.C. 12985

[respondent to be informed of privilege].)

On filing a complaint, the department must serve notice on the complainant of the time limits, rights of the parties, and choice of forums provided by law, and must provide a written explanation informing the complainant that, if an accusation is issued, the complainant may recover damages for emotional distress or other intangibles only through a civil action under Govt.C. 12989. (Govt.C. 12980(d).) The department must begin proceedings within 30 days after the complaint is filed. (Govt.C. 12980(e).)

Unless impracticable, the investigation must be completed within 100 days of receipt of the complaint; if the investigation is not completed within 100 days, the department must notify the complainant and respondent in writing of its reasons for not doing so. (Govt.C. 12980(f).) On concluding the investigation, the department must prepare a final investigative report containing the names and dates of contact with witnesses; a summary of the dates of contacts with the aggrieved persons or the respondent; answers to interrogatories; and summaries of witness statements and other pertinent records. This report may be amended if additional evidence is later discovered. (Govt.C. 12980(g).)

(5) Settlement Agreement. Settlement agreements on housing discrimination complaints must be made public, unless (a) the complainant and respondent otherwise agree, and (b) the department determines that disclosure is not required to further the purpose of the law. (Govt.C. 12980(i).) These agreements are between the respondent and complainant and are subject to approval by the department. (Govt.C. 12980(j).)

(6) Injunction Pending Decision. If the department finds that probable cause exists, it may bring an action to enjoin the owner from taking further steps to sell or rent until the department completes its investigation and makes its determination. However, a temporary restraining order cannot be effective for more than 20 days. (Govt.C. 12983 [Attorney General may also bring action for injunctive relief].)

(7) Affirmative Actions. The Commission may engage in "affirmative actions" with owners in furtherance of the purposes of the Act. (Govt.C. 12988; for definition of term, see Govt.C. 12927(a).)

(8) Judicial Review. A Commission order must have printed on its face references to the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act that prescribe the right of appeal by any party. (Govt.C. 12987(e).) This right of "appeal" is a right to review by administrative mandamus. (See Govt.C. 11523, 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, §122.)

(9) Compliance Review. The department must conduct a compliance review within 1 year of every final order and decision to determine if it has been implemented. (Govt.C. 12981(d).)

(10) Judicial Enforcement. If the time for judicial review of a final commission order or decision has lapsed, or if all means of judicial review have been exhausted, the department may apply to the appropriate superior court, in the same manner as is provided for discriminatory employment practices (see supra, §948), for enforcement of its order. (Govt.C. 12981(f).) If it has reasonable cause to believe that a respondent has breached a conciliation agreement, the department must refer the matter to the Attorney General with a recommendation that a civil action for enforcement be filed. (Govt.C. 12981(e).)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.441 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(8) Judicial Review.

Administrative mandamus:

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Administrative Proceedings, §148.

57 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

E. California Civil Rights Legislation.

3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.

f. Enforcement Procedure.

2. Housing.

bb. Accusation, Hearing, and Decision.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 954

[§ 954] Accusation, Hearing, and Decision.

(1) Formal Accusation. If conciliation fails or the department determines that the circumstances warrant a written accusation, it is issued in the same manner as under Govt.C. 12965 (see supra, §949). (Govt.C. 12981(a) [provisions of Govt.C. 12980 et seq. prevail where they provide greater rights and remedies to aggrieved person].)

An accusation alleging an unfair housing practice must, if possible, be issued within 100 days after filing a complaint. (Govt.C. 12981(a).) It must require the respondent to answer the charges at an administrative hearing or a civil trial as elected by the parties under Govt.C. 12989. Any aggrieved person may intervene as a party. (Govt.C. 12981(a).)

If the department determines on the basis of its investigation that an accusation or amended accusation should include a prayer for damages for emotional distress or other intangible injuries, it must advise the complainant in writing that these damages may only be recovered through a civil action under Govt.C. 12989. (Govt.C. 12981(g).)

If an allegation concerns the legality of a zoning or other land use law or ordinance, the department or the Attorney General must take appropriate action according to the procedures established for other complaints of housing discrimination. (Govt.C. 12981(b).)

(2) Hearing. Hearings on accusations are held by the Commission in the same manner as provided in Govt.C. 12967 et seq. (see supra, §949). (Govt.C. 12981(c) [provisions of Govt.C. 12980 et seq. prevail where they provide greater rights and remedies to aggrieved person].) Unless impracticable, the Commission must make a final administrative disposition of a complaint alleging unfair housing practices within 1 year after it is filed. If the department is unable to do so, it must notify the complainant and respondent in writing of its reasons for not doing so. (Govt.C. 12981(c).) (On proof of intentional violation or discriminatory effect, see Govt.C. 12955.8.)

(3) Decision and Orders. If the Commission, after hearing, finds in favor of the respondent, it must state its findings of fact and issue an order dismissing the accusation. (Govt.C. 12987(d).) If it finds against the respondent, it must state its findings and issue its order requesting the respondent: (a) to cease and desist from the discriminatory practice; and (b) to take such actions as will further the purposes of the Act, including but not limited to, any of the following: (1) sell or rent to the aggrieved person if the accommodation is still available; (2) sell or rent a like accommodation, if one is available; (3) provide financial assistance, in cases of violation of Govt.C. 12955(f) (see supra, §947); (4) pay a civil penalty; (5) pay actual damages; (6) give affirmative or prospective relief. (Govt.C. 12987(a)); on penalties and damages, see infra, §956.) The Commission may require a report of the manner of compliance. (Govt.C. 12987(c).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

58 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
f. Enforcement Procedure.
2. Housing.
cc. Civil Action.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 955

[§ 955] Civil Action.

(1) Where Accusation Is Not Filed. If an accusation (supra, §954) is not issued within 100 days of filing the complaint, or the department earlier determines that it will not file an accusation, the complainant must be so notified. Unless the department has determined that no accusation will be issued, the notice also must inform the complainant that, if he or she does not desire to file a civil action, the complainant may continue to seek redress through the procedures of the department. (Govt.C. 12980(h).)

An action may be filed in an appropriate court not later than 2 years after the occurrence or termination of the discriminatory housing practice or the breach of a conciliation agreement, whichever occurs last. Any time during which an administrative proceeding was pending on a complaint or accusation is excluded from this period. (Govt.C. 12989.1.)

(2) Election To Have Claim Adjudicated in Civil Proceeding. If an accusation is filed, a complainant, respondent, or aggrieved person may elect to have the claims adjudicated in a civil action. (Govt.C. 12989(a).) A written notice of election may be filed with the department within 20 days of service of the accusation, and not more than 20 days after service of the complaint to the respondent. The department must serve a copy of the notice on the director, the respondent, and the aggrieved person, and the notice must be served on all parties in accordance with Govt.C. 12962 (supra, §948). (Govt.C. 12989(b).)

Within 30 days after service of the notice of election, the department must dismiss the accusation and, either itself or through the Attorney General, file an action in its own name or on behalf of the aggrieved person as real party in interest. The action may be filed (a) in any county where an unlawful practice is alleged to have been committed, (b) in the county where relevant records are maintained and administered, or (c) in the county where the aggrieved person would have resided in the housing accommodation. If the respondent is not found in those counties, the action may be filed in the county of respondent's residence or principal office. (Govt.C. 12989(c).) Any aggrieved person may intervene in the action. (Govt.C. 12989(d), 12989.1.) (See Govt.C. 12989(e) [if no election is made, director must maintain administrative proceeding in accordance with Govt.C. 12981, supra, §954]; Govt.C. 12989(f) [director or designate must be available for consultation concerning issues raised by Attorney General in civil action].)

An aggrieved person may bring a civil action whether or not a complaint has been filed. However, an aggrieved person may not bring an action if the department has commenced a hearing on an accusation issued on the discriminatory housing practice in question, and an aggrieved person who has consented to a conciliation agreement may bring an action only to enforce the agreement. (Govt.C. 12989.1.)

(3) Action by Attorney General. The Attorney General may bring a civil action in specified situations: (a) when there is a "pattern or practice" of denying others their rights or when a denial of rights raises an "issue of general public importance" (Govt.C. 12989.3(a)); (b) on referral under Govt.C. 12981(b) (Govt.C. 12989.3(b)); (c) on referral, for breach of a conciliation agreement (Govt.C. 12989.3(d)); (d) on request, to enforce subpoenas (Govt.C. 12989.3(e)). An action generally must be brought within 18 months of the date of occurrence or termination of the discriminatory housing practice (Govt.C. 12989.3(c)), but an action for breach of a conciliation agreement must be brought within 90 days of the referral (Govt.C. 12989.3(d)).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

59 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
3. Fair Employment and Housing Act.
f. Enforcement Procedure.
2. Housing.
dd. Damages and Penalties.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 956

[§ 956] Damages and Penalties.

(1) Historical Development. Walnut Creek Manor v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (1991) 54 C.3d 245, 284 C.R. 718, 814 P.2d 704, held that (1) the provision in Govt.C. 12987 authorizing the Commission to award compensatory damages for emotional distress violates the Judicial Powers Clause of the California Constitution (Cal. Const., Art. VI, §1), and (2) the provision authorizing punitive damages not to exceed $ 1,000 permits only one award against a respondent for a course of discriminatory conduct against the same individual on the same unlawful basis.

(a) Actual damages. The Judicial Powers Clause permits only "restitutive" damages--defined as "quantifiable amounts of money due an injured private party from another party to compensate for the pecuniary loss directly resulting from the second party's violation of law." (54 C.3d 262, 263.) "General compensatory damages for emotional distress ... are not pecuniarily measurable, defy a fixed rule of quantification, and are awarded without proof of pecuniary loss." (54 C.3d 263.) In Dean Witter Reynolds v. Superior Court (1989) 211 C.A.3d 758, 259 C.R. 789, the court concluded that general compensatory damages are not available under B. & P.C. 17200 et seq. (the unfair competition statute), and the same holds true for the administrative adjudication of emotional distress damages in housing discrimination cases. The purpose of the Act is "to provide a streamlined and economic procedure for preventing and redressing discrimination in housing as an alternative to the more cumbersome and costly procedure of civil suit." (54 C.3d 264.) "The award of unlimited general compensatory damages is neither necessary to this purpose nor merely incidental thereto; its effect, rather, is to shift the remedial focus of the administrative hearing from affirmative actions designed to redress the particular instance of unlawful housing discrimination and prevent its recurrence, to compensating the injured party not just for the tangible detriment to his or her housing situation, but for the intangible and nonquantifiable injury to his or her psyche suffered as a result of the respondent's unlawful acts, in the manner of a traditional private tort action in a court of law." (54 C.3d 264.)

(b) Punitive damages. Govt.C. 12987(2) authorizes an award of $ 1,000 as punitive damages on a finding of any "unlawful practice." The term "practice" is not defined, but its plain meaning is "a course of conduct," and in refusing to rent to the complainant on the basis of race, respondents committed a single "unlawful practice." (54 C.3d 269.) Had they also discriminated against the complainant on grounds of marital status (i.e., because he was single), that discrimination would have constituted a separate violation of the Act, permitting a separate award of punitive damages. (54 C.3d 270.) To construe this essentially remedial statute as permitting unlimited multiple cumulative awards of punitive damages based on rentals made to others while the complainant's application was pending would be to alter fundamentally the nature of the administrative remedy. (54 C.3d 271.) A statute is to be construed whenever possible so as to preserve its constitutionality; and a statute authorizing the administrative award of major or substantial punitive damages with no cap on the cumulative amount "would be constitutionally suspect." (54 C.3d 271.)

A strong dissent of two justices argued that state and federal efforts to combat discriminatory housing practices have not been sufficient, and that vigorous administrative enforcement, with meaningful compensatory and punitive damage awards, offer the best available means to ensure a free and nondiscriminatory housing market. (54 C.3d 287.) (See 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 741.)

(2) Statutory Provisions. Govt.C. 12987 was amended after the decision in Walnut Creek Manor, and now provides as follows:

(a) If the Commission finds that a respondent has committed an unlawful housing practice, it may, in addition to serving a cease and desist order and ordering other appropriate relief (see supra, §954), direct the respondent to pay the complainant actual damages and a civil penalty up to $ 10,000. (Govt.C. 12987(a)(3).) In determining whether to assess a civil penalty, the Commission must find that the respondent has been guilty of fraud, malice, or oppression. Specified conduct must be considered in determining the amount of the penalty. (See Govt.C. 12987(b).)

(b) If the respondent has a prior intentional violation of Govt.C. 12955 within the preceding 5 years, the civil penalty may not exceed $ 25,000; if the respondent has two or more prior intentional violations of Govt.C. 12955 within the preceding 7 years, the civil penalty may not exceed $ 50,000. (Govt.C. 12987(a)(3).)

(c) The Commission may award attorneys' fees and costs, including expert witness fees, to a prevailing party other than the state, against any party other than the state. (Govt.C. 12987(a)(3).)

A respondent who has engaged in unlawful discrimination in housing under Govt.C. 12948 (violation of civil rights; supra, §941), is subject to the remedies provided in Govt.C. 12987, and other provisions pertaining to housing discrimination. (Govt.C. 12970(k).)

In a civil action brought under Govt.C. 12989 or 12989.1 (see supra, §955), the court may grant actual and punitive damages and other appropriate relief, including injunctive relief, and may award the prevailing party, other than the state, reasonable attorneys' fees and costs against any party other than the state. (Govt.C. 12989.2.)

In an action by the Attorney General (see supra, §955), the court may award preventive relief, including injunctive relief, other appropriate relief, including monetary damages to aggrieved persons, and a civil penalty of not more than $ 50,000 for a first violation or $ 100,000 for a subsequent violation. (Govt.C. 12989.3(f).) Attorneys' fees and costs, including expert witness fees, may be awarded to a prevailing party other than the state, but may not be awarded against the state. (Govt.C. 12989.3(g).) An aggrieved person may intervene and be granted relief as authorized by Govt.C. 12989.2. (Govt.C. 12989.3(h).)

(3) Effect of Amendments to FEHA. In Konig v. Fair Emp. & Housing Com. (2002) 28 C.4th 743, 123 C.R.2d 1, 50 P.3d 718, the court examined whether amendments to the FEHA following its decision in Walnut Creek Manor authorize the Commission to award emotional distress damages to victims of housing discrimination. Held, the amendments, particularly the judicial option provision of Govt.C. 12989, "remedy separation of powers concerns over the Commission's authority to award emotional distress damages." (28 C.4th 745.)

(a) Walnut Creek Manor held that the Commission's award of damages for emotional distress "constituted an exercise of judicial power by a nonjudicial body and thus violated the California Constitution's judicial powers clause." (28 C.4th 748.) However, after that decision, the Legislature made several significant amendments to the FEHA: (1) It sought to make the FEHA "substantially equivalent" to the federal Fair Housing Act, which permits HUD administrative law judges to award emotional distress damages in administrative hearings. (28 C.4th 749, 750.) (2) It added Govt.C. 12989, which provides the option of a civil action in lieu of an administrative proceeding. (28 C.4th 750.) (3) It amended Govt.C. 12987 to increase the amount of civil penalties available, set apart the authority to award "actual damages" in a separate subdivision, and affirmed its intent that the FEHA should not be construed to afford fewer rights or remedies than the federal Act. (28 C.4th 750.) (4) It amended Govt.C. 12980 and 12981 to require notice that a housing discrimination complainant "may only be able to recover damages for emotional distress or other intangible injuries through a civil action." (28 C.4th 751.)

(b) Walnut Creek Manor did not consider whether the ability to opt out of the FEHA administrative proceeding would have made a difference in its constitutional analysis. Thus, that decision is not dispositive on whether the recent amendments "address separation of powers concerns over the Commission's authority to award emotional distress damages." (28 C.4th 751.)

(c) The ability to choose between quasi-judicial and judicial proceedings highlights an important aspect of the constitutional analysis. Because both complainants and respondents have the option of adjudicating an FEHA claim in state court, the decision to invoke an administrative proceeding before the Commission is left entirely to the parties. The power of the judiciary to take jurisdiction of these matters is unaffected. (28 C.4th 753.)

(d) It is instructive to compare arbitration and FEHA administrative proceedings. The court has had several opportunities since Walnut Creek Manor to reaffirm the broad discretion of arbitrators to resolve cases and fashion relief free from judicial review. "Courts generally may not correct arbitration awards, which are both binding and final, even if an award is based on an arbitrator's factual or legal error. ... In contrast, the Commission's awards ... are subject to judicial review and are enforceable only by a court judgment and order. ... Were we to hold that the Commission's authority to award emotional distress damages violated the judicial powers clause ... we would create an unjustified distinction between the authority of arbitrators and that of administrative adjudicators." (28 C.4th 754.)

(e) The amendment of Govt.C. 12980 and 12981, to require that advice be given to complainants that the recovery of emotional distress damages may only be able to be recovered in a civil action, simply reflects "the uncertainty of recovering these damages in light of Walnut Creek Manor." (28 C.4th 757.)

One justice dissented. (28 C.4th 759.) Govt.C. 12980 and 12981 were amended in 2003 to delete the requirement that the department advise complainants in writing regarding recovery of damages for emotional distress and other intangible injuries.

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.454

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

60 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS E. California Civil Rights Legislation. 4. Rights of Disabled Persons. a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 957

[§ 957] In General.

A number of statutes provide that physically disabled persons have the same rights as able-bodied persons to public and private facilities, places, and services. The 1992 Legislature amended the Unruh Civil Rights Act and many of these related statutes to substantially increase the protections afforded persons with disabilities. The purpose of the act was "to strengthen California law in areas where it is weaker than the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 ... and to retain California law when it provides more protection for individuals with disabilities." (Stats. 1992, Chap. 913, §1; see C.C. 54.1(d) [violations of rights of individuals under ADA also constitute violations of C.C. 54 or 54.1].) (See 2 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §12:1 et seq. [California's disability access statutes]; on Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, see supra, §882 et seq.; on employment rights of disabled persons, see supra, §936 et seq.) The following are illustrative:

(1) Civil Rights. "Disability" is expressly included within the bases of discrimination prohibited by general civil rights statutes. (See, e.g., C.C. 51, supra, §898 [rights of persons in business establishments]; C.C. 51.5, supra, §906 [discrimination against businesses]; C.C. 51.8, supra, §897 [discrimination in granting of franchises]; C.C. 52, supra, §914 [actions for damages and other relief]; C.C. 53, supra, §897 [discriminating restrictions in real property instruments].) However, these statutes do not require anyone who rents, leases, or otherwise provides real property for compensation to construct, alter, or repair the property beyond that which is otherwise required by law for new and existing structures. (C.C. 51, 51.5, 51.8, 52.) (See Hankins v. El Torito Restaurants (1998) 63 C.A.4th 510, 518, 74 C.R.2d 684 [restaurant's policy of denying disabled persons access to employee restroom, which was only restroom accessible to plaintiff, violated C.C. 51].)

(2) Developmentally Disabled Persons. The Lanterman Developmental Disabilities Services Act (Welf.C. 4500 et seq.) is designed to preserve the legal rights and responsibilities of developmentally disabled persons. (Welf.C. 4502 [listing most important rights]; see 20 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1249 et seq. [disability rights symposium]; on community living facilities for developmentally disabled, see Welf.C. 4830 et seq.)

(3) Education. A teacher is prohibited from giving instruction, a school district is prohibited from sponsoring any activity (Educ.C. 51500), and a school board is prohibited from adopting any instructional material, that reflects adversely on persons because of their disability (Educ.C. 51501, 60044). Discrimination against teachers with disabilities is also prohibited. (Educ.C. 44337, 44338.)

(4) Health Care Service Plans. An individual or group health care service plan may not refuse equal service to a person solely because of a physical or mental impairment, except on sound actuarial or sound underwriting practices. (Health & Saf.C. 1367.8.)

(5) Life, Annuity, or Disability Insurance. Insurers may not discriminate on the basis of a physical or mental impairment in issuing insurance providing for life, annuity, or disability benefits, or in establishing the extent of coverage or rates, unless the discrimination is based on sound actuarial principles or related to "actual and reasonably anticipated experience." (Ins.C. 10144.)

(6) Motor Vehicle Liability Insurance. Vehicle liability insurers may not discriminate on the basis of an insured's physical handicap; but the insurer may require proof of qualification for a driver's license since the occurrence of the handicapping condition, and may, on the basis of actuarial evidence, charge a higher rate or premium. (Ins.C. 11628.5; see 11 Pacific L. J. 554.) Further, insurers may not refuse to issue motor vehicle liability policies on the basis of the vehicle owner's blindness; but the insurer may refuse to cover an unlicensed blind owner for injuries and damages incurred while he or she is operating the vehicle. (Ins.C. 11628.7.)

(7) State Sponsored Programs or Activities. Unlawful discrimination against, or denial of benefits to, a person on the basis of disability is prohibited by Govt.C. 11135 et seq. in any program or activity that is operated or administered by the state or a state agency, or is funded by, or receives financial assistance from, the state. (Govt.C. 11135(a); see Govt.C. 11135(b) [programs and activities subject to statute must meet protections and prohibitions of ADA or laws of California, whichever is stronger]; People v. Levinson (1984) 155 C.A.3d Supp. 13, 16, 203 C.R. 426 [municipal court's discretionary referral to traffic schools is not "program or activity" within meaning of Govt.C. 11135; hence, court was not required to appoint oral interpreter to assist hearing-impaired person in traffic school].)

(8) Use of Guide, Signal, or Service Dog. Several statutes regulate the rights of disabled or handicapped persons accompanied by a specially trained guide, signal, or service dog. (See, e.g., C.C. 54.1(b)(5), (6) [it is discriminatory practice to refuse to rent or lease housing accommodations to disabled person with guide dog, etc., unless no persons with dogs are allowed to use accommodations]; C.C. 54.1(c) [right of access of trainers and disabled persons to public places during training]; C.C. 54.2 [prohibiting extra charges for guide dogs, etc. in public facilities]; P.C. 365.5 [right to have guide dog, etc. on common carrier or in places of public accommodation]; C.C. 54.7 [guide dogs may be excluded from zoo if zoo animals are not separated from public by physical barrier; zoo must then provide free kennel facilities, free transportation on any mode of transportation provided to public, and sighted escorts].) A violation of a blind person's rights under the ADA is also a violation of C.C. 54.2. (C.C. 54.2(b).) (See 28 Pacific L. J. 883 [Disabled Access and Dog Tags: "Cleaning Up" Equal Access for Disabled Individuals].)

(9) Assistance for Hearing Impaired in Judicial Proceeding. In all civil and criminal proceedings an assistive listening or computer-aided transcription system must be furnished, on advance notice, to any hearing impaired party, witness, attorney, judicial employee, judge, juror, or other participant who requests one. (C.C. 54.8; see 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Presentation at Trial, §40.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.107

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Turner v. Association of Amer. Med. Colleges (2008) 167 C.A.4th 1401, 1411, 85 C.R.3d 94 ([Disabled Persons Act did not require national testing service to alter standardized testing procedures to accommodate applicants with learning and reading-related disabilities].)(1) Civil Rights. See 37 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1065 [state protection of disability civil rights]; 57 Stanf. L. Rev. 2135 [accommodation of students with learning disabilities on SAT].

61 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
4. Rights of Disabled Persons.
b. Physical Access.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 958

[§ 958] Physical Access.

(1) Access to Housing. Individuals with disabilities are guaranteed "full and equal access" to housing accommodations offered for rent, lease, or compensation. (C.C. 54.1(b)(1).) This statute does not apply to a single-family residence, whose occupants do not rent more than one room. (C.C. 54.1(b)(2).) And it does not require modification of the premises to provide a higher degree of care than that given other persons. (C.C. 54.1(b)(4).) However, a lessor must permit a disabled tenant to make reasonable modifications necessary to afford the person full enjoyment of the premises, on the condition that the tenant agree to restore the premises to their prior condition on termination of the tenancy. The lessor may not require additional security for this purpose, but may require that a reasonable amount be paid into an escrow account to cover the estimated cost of restoring the property. (C.C. 54.1(b)(3)(A).) A lessor must make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services when necessary to afford individuals with a disability equal opportunity to use and enjoy the premises. (C.C. 54.1(b)(3)(B).) (See Govt.C. 12955.1, supra, §947 [access to covered multifamily dwellings]; Health & Saf.C. 19902 et seq. [promoting shared housing for elderly and disabled].)

(2) Access to Public Facilities. C.C. 54 et seq. provide that disabled persons are entitled to equal access to all public facilities. Individuals with disabilities are entitled to "the full and free use of the streets, highways, sidewalks, walkways, public buildings, medical facilities, including hospitals, clinics, and physicians' offices, public facilities, and other public places." (C.C. 54; on special parking privileges, see Govt.C. 14679 and Veh.C. 22511.5.) They also have the right to "full and equal access" to all forms of public transportation (whether public or private), "telephone facilities, adoption agencies, private schools, hotels, lodging places, places of public accommodation, amusement or resort, and other places to which the general public is invited." (C.C. 54.1(a).) (See Donald v. Sacramento Valley Bank (1989) 209 C.A.3d 1183, 1195, 260 C.R. 49 [bank automatic teller machine is "public accommodation" or facility within meaning of C.C. 54.1]; Hankins v. El Torito Restaurants (1998) 63 C.A.4th 510, 524, 74 C.R.2d 684 [C.C. 54.1 et seq. apply to policies as well as structural impediments; restaurant violated C.C. 54.1 because disabled person who was unable to climb stairs to public restroom was denied access to first floor employee restroom].)

"Full and equal access" for purposes of transportation means access that meets the standards of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 or of the laws of California, whichever is higher. (C.C. 54.1(a)(3).)

Gasoline service stations are required to provide, at no extra cost, refueling service to a disabled driver of a vehicle displaying a disabled person's or veteran's plate or placard. (B. & P.C. 13660(a).) However, the statute provides exemptions during specified hours (B. & P.C. 13660(b)), and provides for posting notice whether the station provides service to disabled persons (B. & P.C. 13660(c)).

(3) Construction and Alteration of Buildings. All construction and alteration of public buildings, and private buildings for public accommodations, must be designed to facilitate their use by the disabled. (Govt.C. 4450 et seq. [public buildings]; Health & Saf.C. 19955 et seq. [private buildings for public accommodation]; see Donald v. Sacramento Valley Bank, supra, 209 C.A.3d 1194 [bank automatic teller machine is "public facility" within meaning of Govt.C. 4450 et seq. and Health & Saf.C. 19955]; Wilshire Financial Tower v. Los Angeles (1990) 217 C.A.3d 119, 122, 124, 265 C.R. 685 [under Health & Saf.C. 19955.5 and Govt.C. 4456, office building alterations must provide handicapped with restroom access; exception under Health & Saf.C. 19956 for public accommodations was inapplicable]; Donald v. Cafe Royale (1990) 218 C.A.3d 168, 182, 183, 266 C.R. 804 [Govt.C. 4450 et seq. and Health & Saf.C. 19955 et seq. do not provide cause of action independent of enforcement provisions of C.C. 54 et seq.; hence, even if building is not in compliance with access requirements, individual must actually be denied access before action for damages is proper]; Berkeley Center for Independent Living v. Coyle (1996) 42 C.A.4th 874, 878, 50 C.R.2d 39 [Govt.C. 4450 refers to buildings constructed with public funds and intended for use by general public, regardless of whether building is publicly or privately owned].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Access to Public Facilities. See Madden v. Del Taco (2007) 150 C.A.4th 294, 303, 58 C.R.3d 313 [allowing concrete trash container to block wheelchair access to restaurant violated ADA and C.C. 54 et seq.]; Urhausen v. Longs Drug Stores Calif. (2007) 155 C.A.4th 254, 263, 65 C.R.3d 838 [plaintiff on crutches who fell while attempting to reach raised curb in front of handicapped space did not have cause of action under C.C. 54.3; although disabled parking area violated slope regulations, plaintiff was not denied equal access to store where she did not use disabled accessible aisle provided by store or prove that it was inadequate]; Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's LLC (2008) 165 C.A.4th 571, 594, 81 C.R.3d 144 [although retail store was not required to remove architectural barriers to disabled where reconfiguration would result in significant loss of sales, store's failure to make facilities available through alternative methods such as customer assistance violated ADA and Disabled Persons Act; fact that new and remodeled stores outside area provided access to disabled did not excuse lack of access to existing stores].(3) Construction and Alteration of Buildings. Unless a defendant is required by another statute to make structural modifications to a property, the existence of a structural barrier does not violate the Disabled Persons Act, C.C. 54 et seq. (Coronado v. Cobblestone Village Community Rentals, L.P. (2008) 163 C.A.4th 831, 845, 77 C.R.3d 883 [because neither Govt.C. 4450 et seq. nor Health & Saf.C. 19955 et seq. required defendant landlord to construct wheelchair ramp at particular curb in common area of complex that was not open to general public, defendant was not liable under Disabled Persons Act for injuries caused by its absence].)

(4) (New) Compliance With Construction-Related Accessibility Standards. The 2008 Legislature enacted the Construction-Related Accessibility Standards Compliance Act, C.C. 55.51 et seq. The Act provides for the hiring and training of certified access specialists to inspect construction sites for places of public accommodation and to make written reports regarding compliance with accessibility standards. Beginning July 1, 2010, each local agency must have at least one building inspector who is a certified accessibility specialist. (C.C. 55.53.) Having an inspection report issued by a certified accessibility specialist allows a defendant in a construction-related accessibility claim to request a court stay and an early evaluation conference. (C.C. 55.54.)

62 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
4. Rights of Disabled Persons.
c. Enforcement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 959

[§ 959] Enforcement.

Several remedies are available for discrimination against the disabled:

(1) Civil Action for Damages. A person, firm, or corporation who denies or interferes with the rights of a disabled person under C.C. 54, 54.1, or 54.2 is liable for actual damages, punitive damages from $ 1000 to three times the actual damages, and attorneys' fees. (C.C. 54.3; see Donald v. Cafe Royale (1990) 218 C.A.3d 168, 177, 180, 266 C.R. 804 [minimum statutory damage amount must ordinarily be awarded for denial of equal access; intent to violate statute is not required].) The remedies provided by the statute are nonexclusive and are in addition to other remedies provided by law, including actions for injunctive or other equitable relief. (C.C. 54.3(b).) However, a person may not be held liable for damages under both C.C. 54.3 and C.C. 52 (supra, §914) for the same act or failure to act. (C.C. 54.3(c).)

An action may be brought to enforce C.C. 54.3 in any court of competent jurisdiction, including small claims court, if the amount sought does not exceed its jurisdictional limits. (C.C. 52.2.)

(2) Complaint to Department of Fair Employment and Housing. A person claiming to be aggrieved by an alleged unlawful practice in violation of C.C. 54, 54.1, or 54.2 may also file a verified complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing, pursuant to Govt.C. 12948 (supra, §941). (C.C. 54.3(b).)

(3) Injunction Proceedings. A person who is "aggrieved or potentially aggrieved" by a violation of C.C. 54 or 54.1, Govt.C. 4450 et seq., or Health & Saf.C. 19955 et seq. may bring an action to enjoin the violation. (C.C. 55; see Donald v. Cafe Royale, supra, 218 C.A.3d 184 [denial of injunctive relief was proper where restaurant ceased operating during course of litigation].) The prevailing party in the action is entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees. (C.C. 55.) The district attorney, city attorney, or Attorney General is authorized to bring an action to enjoin a violation of C.C. 54 or 54.1. (C.C. 55.1.)

In Deukmejian v. CHE (1983) 150 C.A.3d 123, 197 C.R. 484, the state and the Director of the State Department of Rehabilitation brought an action against a restaurant operator and others to compel the restaurant to provide legally sufficient access for the physically handicapped and to mandate compliance with legal requirements. When the restaurant first opened, the physically disabled were restricted to entering through a locked employee entrance that was neither designated nor decorated for patron access. Defendants moved for summary judgment, contending that (1) the laws only require public accommodations to provide some means of access to the facilities; (2) the restaurant was exempt under Health & Saf.C. 19956 because it occupied a two-story building and the restaurant facilities were on the upper floor; and (3) the restaurant was entitled to a "hardship" exemption under Health & Saf.C. 19957. Held, summary judgment for defendants reversed.

(a) Under the statutory schemes, at least one primary entrance must be "accessible to and usable by" the physically disabled. (150 C.A.3d 134.) "[T]he required primary entrance must necessarily be burdened by a substantial flow of pedestrian traffic." Hence, a restaurant entrance only used by the physically disabled is not a "primary entrance." (150 C.A.3d 135.)

(b) Although Health & Saf.C. 19956 exempts "a restaurant with accessible, equivalent dining areas on both the first and second floors from having to provide access to tables on the second floor," it "does not exempt a restaurant having all its public accommodations above the ground floor from providing an upper floor primary entrance equivalent" to the disabled. (150 C.A.3d 136.)

(c) Summary judgment was erroneous because several triable issues of fact existed, including whether the entry provided disabled persons was a "primary entrance"; whether that entry accommodated a substantial portion of the general public patrons; whether that entry subjected disabled persons to safety hazards; whether the city director had granted the restaurant an exemption under Health & Saf.C. 19957; and whether the restaurant was entitled to the exemption by showing "practical difficulty, unnecessary hardship," or that the existing method of entry secured "equivalent facilitation and protection." (150 C.A.3d 136 et seq.) (See San Francisco v. Grant Co. (1986) 181 C.A.3d 1085, 1090, 227 C.R. 154 [remodeled restaurant violated access requirements for disabled, under C.C. 54.1(a) and Health & Saf.C. 19955 et seq., where telephones and restrooms were situated on restaurant's second floor without wheelchair access from first floor, and first floor itself had two levels but no ramp or other means of wheelchair access between them].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Civil Action for Damages. See Gunther v. Lin (2006) 144 C.A.4th 223, 231, 50 C.R.3d 317 [discussing proof requirements of C.C. 52(f) and 54.3, and observing that intentional discrimination need not be proved under C.C. 54.3]; 36 McGeorge L. Rev. 661 [California disability antidiscrimination law--damages and notice].

Statutory damages under C.C. 52(a) or 54.3 may be recovered on a construction-related accessibility claim against a place of public accommodation only if the violation of one or more construction-related accessibility standards denied the plaintiff full and equal access to the place of accommodation on a particular occasion. (C.C. 55.56(a), added in 2008.)

63 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
5. Rights of Public Safety Officers.
a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 960

[§ 960] In General.

(1) Purpose and Scope of Act. The Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act (Govt.C. 3300 et seq.) contains the following statement of purpose: "[T]he rights and protections provided to peace officers under this chapter constitute a matter of statewide concern." Effective law enforcement depends on the maintenance of stable employer-employee relations between public safety employees and their employers. To "assure that stable relations are continued throughout the state and to further assure that effective services are provided to all people of the state, it is necessary that this chapter be applicable to all public safety officers, as defined in this section, wherever situated within the State of California." (Govt.C. 3301.) However, agencies that have adopted a procedure that provides "at a minimum" the same rights or protections are not subject to the Act. (Govt.C. 3310.)

The Act applies only to public safety officers, which means all peace officers specified in numerous designated sections of the Penal Code. (Govt.C. 3301.) Thus, the Act applies to police chiefs. (Gray v. Gustine (1990) 224 C.A.3d 621, 627, 273 C.R. 730; Binkley v. Long Beach (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1795, 20 C.R.2d 903.) But it does not apply to city fire chiefs. (Gauthier v. Red Bluff (1995) 34 C.A.4th 1441, 1445, 1447, 41 C.R.2d 35 [under P.C. 830.37(b), members of fire department are peace officers only if their primary duty is enforcement of laws relating to fire prevention or suppression].) And temporary employees are not covered. (Bell v. Duffy (1980) 111 C.A.3d 643, 649, 168 C.R. 753.)

In Burden v. Snowden (1992) 2 C.4th 556, 561, 7 C.R.2d 531, 828 P.2d 672, the issue was whether plaintiff, hired by defendant city police department as a "police recruit," came within the coverage of the Act. A "police recruit" is a candidate for a police officer position who has not yet completed a training academy and who is not authorized to use peace officer powers. Defendant police department denied coverage; the trial court and the Court of Appeal disagreed; but the Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the Court of Appeal. (2 C.4th 569.)

In addition to its extended discussion of statutory construction, the Court rejected the policy argument that the Act must "logically cover" recruits and trainees to achieve its goals. "Indeed, to judicially deem police recruits to be the equivalent of police officers, thus entitling them to the full panoply of protections under the Act, may even detract from effective law enforcement. Appointing new hires to the position of recruit offers local law enforcement agencies their first opportunity to quickly screen out those candidates who are unfit or unable to function as officers. It behooves cities, police departments, police officers, and most important, the public, to weed out these candidates at the earliest opportunity. Construing the term 'police officer' to include recruits unnecessarily restricts local agencies from eliminating those candidates whose background investigations and/or academy performance indicates their likely unsuitability as police officers." (2 C.4th 567.)

(2) No Discriminatory Duty Assignment. "No public safety officer shall be loaned or temporarily reassigned to a location or duty assignment if a sworn member of his department would not normally be sent to that location or would not normally be given that duty assignment." (Govt.C. 3303(j).)

(3) Exercise of Constitutional Rights. Safety officers, except as provided by law or when on duty or in uniform, may not be prohibited from engaging in, or be coerced or required to engage in, political activity. (Govt.C. 3302.) They may not be discriminated against for the lawful exercise of their constitutional rights, their rights under the Act, or those under a grievance procedure. (Govt.C. 3304(a).) However, Govt.C. 3304(a) does not prohibit greater punishment when an officer exercises his or her right to an administrative appeal; the statute only prohibits increased punishment that is retaliatory or vindictive, and the officer has the burden of establishing this vindictiveness. (Holcomb v. Los Angeles (1989) 210 C.A.3d 1560, 1567, 1568, 259 C.R. 1; Jackson v. Los Angeles (1999) 69 C.A.4th 769, 782, 81 C.R.2d 814 [following Holcomb; on appeal of disciplinary suspension, once board has convened, officer has no right to terminate proceedings by withdrawing or abandoning appeal, and officer may not complain of receiving increased punishment on appeal].)

(4) Polygraph Test. Public safety officers may not be compelled to submit to a polygraph test, and their refusal to do so may not be used against them. (Govt.C. 3307; see Civil Service Assn. v. Civil Service Com. (1983) 139 C.A.3d 449, 458, 188 C.R. 806, 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §299 [Govt.C. 3307 does not unconstitutionally discriminate against other public employees]; Los Angeles Police Protective League v. Los Angeles (1995) 35 C.A.4th 1535, 1537, 1540, 1544, 42 C.R.2d 23 [Govt.C. 3307 does not apply where polygraph examination is used to screen applicants voluntarily seeking transfer within police department to specialized divisions involving unusually sensitive work and requiring highest level of integrity].)

(5) Personnel Files and Privacy. Adverse comments in the personnel files of safety officers are prohibited unless first shown to them. (Govt.C. 3305.) The officers are then entitled to insert a written response. (Govt.C. 3306.) (See Aguilar v. Johnson (1988) 202 C.A.3d 241, 251, 247 C.R. 909 [citizen's complaint is adverse comment within meaning of Govt.C. 3305, 3306]; Riverside v. Superior Court (2002) 27 C.4th 793, 802, 803, 118 C.R.2d 167, 42 P.3d 1034, infra, §962 [following Aguilar; background investigation of peace officer during probationary employment is personnel matter subject to Act because materials affect status of employment; Act applies whether personnel matter at issue arises out of conduct prior to or during employment, and whether comments are prepared and filed prior to or after termination]; Sacramento Police Officers Assn. v. Venegas (2002) 101 C.A.4th 916, 923, 124 C.R.2d 666 [following Riverside; index card kept in officer's name by department of internal affairs listing complaints against him is file "used for any personnel purposes" under Govt.C. 3305, and officer was entitled to read and respond to adverse comments even though complaint did not result in adverse personnel action]; Seligsohn v. Day (2004) 121 C.A.4th 518, 528, 16 C.R.3d 909 [following Venegas; police officers employed by community college had right to copies of discrimination complaints against them filed with college's office of affirmative action, with copies sent to their superior officer and to college's vice chancellor].)

With specified exceptions, safety officers may not be required or requested, for purposes of assignments or other personnel action, to disclose their personal finances. (Govt.C. 3308.) Their lockers, and other storage areas assigned to them, may not be searched unless they are present and consent to the search, or a search warrant is obtained. (Govt.C. 3309.)

(6) Notice of Discipline. If, after investigation and any predisciplinary response or procedure, the public agency decides to impose discipline, it must notify the officer in writing within 30 days of its decision. The notice must include the date discipline will be imposed. (Govt.C. 3304(f).)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.132.1

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Purpose and Scope of Act. See Benach v. Los Angeles (2007) 149 C.A.4th 836, 843, 57 C.R.3d 363 [Act did not apply where deputy's transfer did not constitute punitive demotion]; on similar protections for firefighters, see Firefighters Procedural Bill of Rights Act, Govt.C. 3250 et seq., added in 2007.

The Act does not cover investigations "concerned solely and directly with alleged criminal activities." (Govt.C. 3303(i); see California Correctional Peace Officers Assn. v. California (2000) 82 C.A.4th 294, 307, 98 C.R.2d 302, text, §961; Van Winkle v. Ventura (2007) 158 C.A.4th 492, 497, 69 C.R.3d 809, Supp., infra, §961.) (6) Notice of Discipline. See Sulier v. State Personnel Bd. (2004) 125 C.A.4th 21, 27, 22 C.R.3d 615 [Govt.C. 3304(d), requiring that public safety officer be notified of proposed discipline within 1 year, does not require that formal notice of adverse action be given under Govt.C. 19574; formal notice is required by Govt.C. 3304(f) when agency decides to impose discipline].

64 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
5. Rights of Public Safety Officers.
b. Interrogation and Investigation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 961

[§ 961] Interrogation and Investigation.

(1) Interrogation. Detailed standards are provided for interrogation of officers that may lead to discipline, dismissal, or criminal charges. These standards include: (a) questioning only at reasonable times and for reasonable periods; (b) notice of who will be conducting the interrogation, and the nature of the investigation; (c) freedom from verbal abuse, threats, and exposure to the news media; (d) a record hearing, a transcript, and access to all notes, etc., taken during the hearing; (e) if arrest is likely, notice of rights; and (f) if discipline or criminal charges may result, the right to be represented. (Govt.C. 3303.) However, the statute does not apply to "counseling, instruction, or informal verbal admonishment by, or other routine contact or unplanned contact with, a supervisor" (Govt.C. 3303(i)), or to investigations by persons other than the officer's commanding officer or members of the employing department (People v. Velez (1983) 144 C.A.3d 558, 564, 192 C.R. 686).

The fact that the statute (now Govt.C. 3303(g)), provides for recording the interrogation does not grant preinterrogation discovery rights to a peace officer who is the subject of an internal affairs investigation. (Pasadena Police Officers Assn. v. Pasadena (1990) 51 C.3d 564, 569, 578, 273 C.R. 584, 797 P.2d 608 [providing detailed discussion of statute]; 18 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1078.)

(2) No Absolute Right to Representative of Choice. In Upland Police Officers Assn. v. Upland (2003) 111 C.A.4th 1294, 4 C.R.3d 629, the court held, on a question of first impression, that the statutory right to a representative of an officer's choice is limited by a reasonableness requirement. Otherwise, an officer could prevent a timely investigation by choosing a representative who is temporarily unavailable. (111 C.A.4th 1305.) Further, an officer is responsible for securing the attendance of his or her chosen representative at the interrogation. (111 C.A.4th 1306.)

(3) Rights of Representatives. Under Govt.C. 3303(i), an officer's representative has a privilege not to disclose information divulged by the officer being investigated for noncriminal matters. However, this privilege is not unlimited. "Whatever representative privilege may be created by the Act, it does not supplant an officer's official duties." (Alhambra Police Officers Assn v. Alhambra Police Dept. (2003) 113 C.A.4th 1413, 1422, 1423, 7 C.R.3d 432 [statute does not authorize officer to remove documentary evidence pertaining to misconduct of another officer and return it to that officer, in contravention of department rules, even if officer is acting as other's representative].)

(4) Right to Investigatory Evidence. The reference in Govt.C. 3303(g) to the rights of officers to receive reports or complaints made by other persons, "provides officers with protections similar to those enjoyed by criminal defendants, including the rights to raw notes and tape-recorded statements of witnesses." (San Diego Police Officers Assn v. San Diego (2002) 98 C.A.4th 779, 785, 120 C.R.2d 609.)

(5) Information as to Constitutional Rights. In Lybarger v. Los Angeles (1985) 40 C.3d 822, 221 C.R. 529, 710 P.2d 329, a police officer was removed from his position with total loss of pay for insubordination because he refused to answer questions during an investigation of allegations against his unit, and the superior court denied his petition for mandamus. Held, reversed. Under Govt.C. 3303, a safety officer must be informed of his or her constitutional rights when it is deemed that the officer may be charged with a criminal offense. Hence, the officer "should have been told, among other things, that, although he had the right to remain silent and not incriminate himself, (a) his silence could be deemed insubordination, leading to administrative discipline, and (b) any statement made under the compulsion of the threat of discipline could not be used against him in any subsequent criminal proceeding." (40 C.3d 829.) (See Williams v. Los Angeles (1988) 47 C.3d 195, 201, 252 C.R. 817, 763 P.2d 480 [distinguishing Lybarger; although officer was not told extent of protection afforded to statements he might make, he was not prejudiced by omission because it only would have provided him with additional incentive to speak to investigators; thus, it did not have any causal connection to his ultimate dismissal]; Hanna v. Los Angeles (1989) 212 C.A.3d 363, 375, 260 C.R. 782 [distinguishing Williams; probationary police officer's statements made after his request for counsel was denied were properly suppressed where violation might have affected content of his statements, and might have changed outcome]; Los Angeles v. Superior Court (Labio) (1997) 57 C.A.4th 1506, 1516, 67 C.R.2d 775 [discussing Williams and Hanna; suppression of officer's statements was warranted where officer had not been informed that he was being investigated; however, statements could be used for impeachment].)

(6) Investigation by Other Persons. In California Correctional Peace Officers Assn. v. California (2000) 82 C.A.4th 294, 98 C.R.2d 302, the superior court issued a preliminary injunction limiting the conduct of the California Department of Justice (DOJ) and the California Department of Corrections (CDC) in an investigation of alleged criminal misconduct by correctional officers at a state prison. Held, the injunction against the CDC was proper, but there was no authorization for an injunction against the DOJ.

(a) Govt.C. 3303 was applicable. Govt.C. 3303 expressly states that it applies only to investigations by an officer's commanding officer or "other member of the employing public safety department." (82 C.A.4th 306.) However, here, the DOJ and the CDC must be considered to have been acting in concert in the investigation. The CDC ordered the officers to cooperate in the DOJ investigation, delivered interviewees to DOJ investigators, threatened the officers with arrest or discipline if they asserted their rights during interrogation, prevented the officers from leaving the prison grounds until they were interviewed, and guarded the hallway exits and interrogation rooms. (82 C.A.4th 307.)

(b) Statutory interpretation. The exception in Govt.C. 3303(i) that the statute does not apply to "an investigation concerned solely and directly with alleged criminal activities," and the corollary provision in Govt.C. 3304 authorizing the employer to require an officer's cooperation with other agencies involved in criminal investigations, must be "limited to investigations conducted by outside agencies that are substantially independent of the employer." (82 C.A.4th 307, 308.) Otherwise, they would effectively defeat the purpose of the Act because "[a]lmost every administrative investigation of alleged misconduct could be recast as a criminal investigation to avoid the requirements of the Act." (82 C.A.4th 308.)

(c) Separation of powers doctrine precludes injunctive relief against DOJ. Govt.C. 3309.5 (infra, §963) only authorizes injunctive relief against the employing public safety department. (82 C.A.4th 312.) The power of the DOJ to investigate and prosecute criminal conduct is subject to prior restraint only under extraordinary circumstances not present here. (82 C.A.4th 311, 312.) "Enjoining the DOJ is, as a practical matter, unnecessary because the injunction issued against the CDC will effectively prevent any such future concerted activity." (82 C.A.4th 312.) (See Shafer v. Los Angeles County Sheriff's Dept. (2003) 106 C.A.4th 1388, 1399, 131 C.R.2d 670 [distinguishing Calif. Correctional Peace Officers Assn.; officer's deposition testimony taken by county counsel's office regarding his workers'] compensation claim was admissible in officer's discharge hearing even though he was not informed that he was under investigation; interrogations by county counsel's office are not covered by Act and that office was not acting in concert with sheriff's department].)

(7) Time for Investigation. No punitive action, or denial of promotion on grounds other than merit, may be undertaken for an allegation of misconduct if the investigation of the allegation is not completed within 1 year of the public agency's discovery of the misconduct by a person authorized to initiate an investigation. (Govt.C. 3304(d); see Jackson v. Los Angeles (2003) 111 C.A.4th 899, 906, 4 C.R.3d 325 [Govt.C. 3304(d) addresses matter of statewide concern, and its limitations provision prevails over one stated in city charter].) The 1-year period may be tolled or extended as provided by statute. (Govt.C. 3304(d)(1)-(d)(8).) The 1-year period is inapplicable where a predisciplinary response or grievance procedure is required or utilized. (Govt.C. 3304(e).) (See Alameida v. State Personnel Bd. (2004) 120 C.A.4th 46, 62, 15 C.R.3d 383, infra, §963 [dishonesty charge against officer that flowed directly from investigation of assault did not start new limitations period; to allow employer to prove underlying charge (barred by statute of limitations) in order to demonstrate employee's dishonesty in denying that charge would defeat purpose of Act].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Interrogation. See Steinert v. Covina (2006) 146 C.A.4th 458, 466, 53 C.R.3d 1 [statute did not apply to routine conversation with supervisor who sought information regarding only officer's knowledge of proper procedures to be followed in search of criminal records].

(2) No Absolute Right to Representative of Choice. See Association for Los Angeles Deputy Sheriffs v. Los Angeles (2008) 166 C.A.4th 1625, 1636, 1646, 83 C.R.3d 494 [following Upland Police Officers Assn. v. Upland (2003) 111 C.A.4th 1294, 4 C.R.3d 629, text, p. 501; trial court did not abuse discretion in denying preliminary injunction to enjoin sheriff's department from implementing anti-huddling policy, which restricted officers involved in or witnessing officer-involved shootings from collectively consulting with labor representative or legal counsel; restriction was reasonable and did not violate officers' constitutional rights to association or to counsel]. (4) Right to Investigatory Evidence. Gilbert v. Sunnyvale (2005) 130 C.A.4th 1264, 31 C.R.3d 297, disagrees with San Diego Police Officers Assn. v. San Diego (2002) 98 C.A.4th 779, 120 C.R.2d 609, text, p. 502: "Nothing in the Act's language or legislative history reveals a legislative intent to provide an officer who is the subject of an administrative internal affairs investigation with broad statutory discovery rights similar to those held by criminal defendants." (130 C.A.4th 1287.) The main purpose of Govt.C. 3303 is to prevent abusive tactics during the conduct of an officer's interrogation. Fair treatment of the officer does not require that all the material amassed in the course of the investigation, including raw notes, be provided to the officer after his or her interrogation. (130 C.A.4th 1286.) However, Govt.C. 3303(g) does cover nonconfidential reports by persons other than the agency's investigators, such as those originating from a criminal investigation, where they have been "expressly made part of the department's internal affairs investigation of an officer." (130 C.A.4th 1287.) The statute fails to specify a time frame for disclosure; hence, "a reasonable, post-interrogation time frame is implied." (130 C.A.4th 1293.) (See Hinrichs v. Orange (2004) 125 C.A.4th 921, 928, 23 C.R.3d 186 [in disciplinary proceeding based on odor of alcohol on officer's breath, department's failure to provide nonconfidential reports created during course of investigation, including statement of other officer that he only smelled medicine on officer's breath, was prejudicial].)

(5) Information as to Constitutional Rights. See Hinrichs v. Orange, supra, 125 C.A.4th 926 [distinguishing Los Angeles v. Superior Court (Labio) (1997) 57 C.A.4th 1506, 67 C.R.2d 775, text, p. 502; failure expressly to inform officer of nature of investigation was harmless where initial questioning took place within hour of alcohol being noted on officer's breath, and it began with prefatory statement by other officer that he had smelled alcohol on her breath]. (6) Investigation by Other Persons. California Correctional Peace Officers Assn. v. California (2000) 82 C.A.4th 294, 98 C.R.2d 302, text, p. 503, was distinguished, and dicta that Govt.C. 3303(i) only applies to criminal investigations conducted primarily by outside agencies was rejected, in Van Winkle v. Ventura (2007) 158 C.A.4th 492, 69 C.R.3d 809. Plaintiff officer obtained an injunction preventing defendant county, his employer, from using statements that he made during a criminal investigation at his civil service hearing. The statements were made after he was arrested for embezzling property from defendant and after he waived his Miranda rights. Plaintiff claimed that the statements must be suppressed because defendant failed to give the advisements required by the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act. Held, injunction vacated. The Act does not apply to officers subject to criminal investigations conducted by their employers.

(a) Govt.C. 3303(i) unambiguously excepts from its coverage investigations "concerned solely and directly with alleged criminal activities." (158 C.A.4th 497, 499.) To require that the excepted investigations be ones conducted primarily by outside agencies would impede law enforcement agencies from pursuing their own personnel who commit crimes. The Act only covers law enforcement employers, so there would have been no reason for the Legislature to have added this provision to regulate the conduct of agencies that are not covered by the Act. (158 C.A.4th 499.)

(b) The court in California Correctional Peace Officers Assn. misinterpreted Govt.C. 3303(i), and narrowed its scope. The statutory language regarding criminal investigations does not limit the law enforcement agencies that may conduct those investigations. Yet the court assumed, without evidence to support its speculation, that it needed to alter the statute because it believed that law enforcement employers would routinely violate the Act. The Legislature knew that there could be abuses by law enforcement employers conducting criminal and internal affairs investigations of their employees; that is why it qualified the exemption with language that the investigation had to be "concerned solely and directly with alleged criminal activities." There was no need to regulate purely criminal investigations because officers subject to those investigations have Miranda protections. In addition, the Act allows officers to challenge in a trial court the type of investigations law enforcement agencies conduct. (158 C.A.4th 500.)

See Berkeley Police Assn. v. Berkeley (2008) 167 C.A.4th 385, 408, 84 C.R.3d 130 [following California Correctional Peace Officers Assn.; POBRA was applicable to investigative and public hearing process of city police review commission (PRC) that investigated citizen complaints of misconduct by police officers; although PRC had no power to order officer to provide statement during investigation, police chief had issued written order to officers to attend interview under penalty of discipline, including dismissal, for failing to appear].(7) Time for Investigation.

Tolling or extension of period: See Parra v. San Francisco (2006) 144 C.A.4th 977, 993, 50 C.R.3d 822 [issue of first impression; limitations period was properly tolled under Govt.C. 3304(d)(1) during criminal investigation into allegations of misconduct against many officers even though charges were dismissed against some of them; limitations period was properly extended under Govt.C. 3304(d)(4) by evidence of (a) lack of cooperation by police department, (b) administrative and criminal investigations, and (c) complexity of case, including numerous witnesses and numerous allegations of misconduct against many officers]; Breslin v. San Francisco (2007) 146 C.A.4th 1064, 1080, 55 C.R.3d 14 [under Govt.C. 3304(d)(6), statute is tolled when public safety officer is named defendant in civil action; provision applies only to officer named in civil action, and not to others involved in incident; fact that complaint could have been amended to name other officers by substituting them for Doe defendants was not sufficient to toll statute as to them]; Bettencourt v. San Francisco (2007) 146 C.A.4th 1090, 1100, 53 C.R.3d 402 [tolling provision of Govt.C. 3304(d)(6) does not require that investigation actually be impeded by civil action; statute only requires that civil action and investigation involve same incident].

(8) (New) Notice of Discipline. Notice of "proposed disciplinary action" must be given to the public safety officer within the 1-year period required for investigation. (Govt.C. 3304(d).) This provision does not require notice of a specific punishment. Instead, the notice contemplated by the statute is simply notice that the public agency, having completed its investigation, has decided to take disciplinary action for the alleged misconduct. (Mays v. Los Angeles (2008) 43 C.4th 313, 317, 325, 74 C.R.3d 891, 180 P.3d 935 [disapproving Sanchez v. Los Angeles (2006) 140 C.A.4th 1069, 1079, 45 C.R.3d 188, to extent that it requires notice of specific discipline; notice proposing that alleged misconduct be adjudicated by Board of Rights constituted sufficient notice of proposed disciplinary action under statute].)

(9) (New) Raising Statute of Limitations Defense. The defense of the statute of limitations must be raised either (a) at the administrative hearing, or (b) in a proceeding under Govt.C. 3309.5 (see text, §963), that asserts a violation of the Act. (Moore v. Los Angeles (2007) 156 C.A.4th 373, 384, 67 C.R.3d 218 [following Alameida v. State Personnel Bd.

(2004) 120 C.A.4th 46, 15 C.R.3d 383, text, §963, and distinguishing Sanchez v. Los Angeles, supra].)

65 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
5. Rights of Public Safety Officers.
c. Waiver of Rights.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 962

[§ 962] Waiver of Rights.

In Haight v. San Diego (1991) 228 C.A.3d 413, 278 C.R. 334, an officer voluntarily resigned while an investigation was pending, but later demanded a "name-clearing" hearing concerning derogatory comments in the separation report placed in his personnel file after his departure. Held, he no longer had a due process right to a hearing. (228 C.A.3d 417.)

In Riverside v. Superior Court (2002) 27 C.4th 793, 118 C.R.2d 167, 42 P.3d 1034, a city police department was disbanded and law enforcement services were contracted with the county. Plaintiff police officer had been under investigation, without his knowledge, by the police department when he was discharged as part of the department closure. On being hired by the county on a probationary basis, pending a background investigation, plaintiff signed waivers giving up his right to receive feedback and to read or review any background investigation report prepared by the county. The release lasted for 1 year. Plaintiff first learned of the prior investigation when he was asked to take a polygraph examination. He voluntarily submitted to the exam, and was discharged several months later while still on probation. Held, the waivers were valid as to those matters arising prior to plaintiff's employment with the county.

(a) Where an employee's waiver is limited to an investigation of matters that arose prior to employment, and the waiver expires after 1 year, so that the employee is not subject to a continuing investigation long after being hired, enforcement of the waiver would not particularly undermine the public purpose of the Act. Rather, "enforcement of the waiver would serve that purpose by facilitating an earlier hiring date for new police officers who are transferred from other agencies." (27 C.4th 806.) However, this kind of waiver should be limited to officers like plaintiff who are already peace officers at the time of signing a waiver and are merely trying to transfer from one agency to another. (27 C.4th 806.)

(b) The waiver also must be signed voluntarily, "with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences." (27 C.4th 806.) Here, plaintiff knew or should have known of the consequences of his waiver, including that any background investigation would become available to future law enforcement employers. (27 C.4th 807.)

Three justices joined in a dissent. (27 C.4th 807.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

66 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
5. Rights of Public Safety Officers.
d. Remedies.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 963

[§ 963] Remedies.

(1) In General. It is unlawful for a public safety department to deny or refuse a public safety officer "the rights and protections guaranteed" by the statute. (Govt.C. 3309.5(a).) Appropriate injunctive and other extraordinary relief is authorized to remedy a violation. (Govt.C. 3309.5(c)(1).) Sanctions may be recoverable against a party filing a frivolous action, or one brought in bad faith or for an improper purpose. (Govt.C. 3309.5(d)(1).) With regard to acts taken within the scope of employment, if the public safety department or its agents or employees acted maliciously with intent to injure a public safety officer, the department is liable to the officer for a civil penalty and actual damages. An individual is not liable for an "act for which a public safety department is liable under this section." (Govt.C. 3309.5(e).) (See Zazueta v. San Benito (1995) 38 C.A.4th 106, 112, 113, 44 C.R.2d 678 [officer waived right to seek judicial remedy under Govt.C. 3309.5 by participating in binding arbitration].)

The superior court has initial jurisdiction over actions for violations of the Act. (Govt.C. 3309.5(c).) However, this does not mean that the trial court has exclusive jurisdiction. Before being served with a notice of adverse action, the peace officer may bring an action in the trial court asserting a violation of the Act without waiting for punitive action to be taken. After punitive action is taken, the officer can assert the violation "as a defense to discipline in the administrative proceedings, or can seek an adjudication in court." (Alameida v. State Personnel Bd. (2004) 120 C.A.4th 46, 54, 15 C.R.3d 383.)

(2) Concurrent Actions. Gales v. Superior Court (1996) 47 C.A.4th 1596, 55 C.R.2d 460, holds that an officer may pursue an action under Govt.C. 3309.5 simultaneously with an action seeking administrative mandamus under C.C.P. 1094.5.

(a) Under Govt.C. 3309.5, an officer may file an action for injunctive or other extraordinary relief, such as mandamus, quo warranto, and habeas corpus. In that action, the court, rather than a jury, makes the determination whether the Act was violated. (47 C.A.4th 1602.)

(b) An action under Govt.C. 3309.5 may be filed after the employer has issued its final decision. (47 C.A.4th 1602.)

(c) Review under Govt.C. 3309.5 is limited to determining whether the employer violated the officer's rights under the Act. On the other hand, a mandamus action under C.C.P. 1094.5 requires inquiry into the validity of the final administrative decision. (47 C.A.4th 1602, 1603.)

(d) "The answer, we believe, is to require an officer to file, after a final administrative decision has been rendered, a mandamus petition" pursuant to C.C.P. 1094.5, and to permit the officer to file a concurrent action pursuant to C.C.P. 3309.5. "The subject matter of the actions will, of course, overlap, and consolidation will undoubtedly be required. And issues decided in one action will be binding in the other. For example, should a judicial officer determine, in connection with" a Govt.C. 3309.5 action, "that a violation of the Act occurred, that finding will be binding" in the C.C.P. 1094.5 action. (47 C.A.4th 1603.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. In 2003, Govt.C. 3309.5(c)(1), providing for injunctive relief, was relettered as Govt.C. 3309.5(d)(1). Govt.C. 3309.5(d)(2) now provides for sanctions.

Govt.C. 3309.5(e) is not the exclusive basis for recovering attorneys' fees for a violation of the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights. Attorneys' fees also may be awarded under the private attorney general statute, C.C.P. 1021.5 (see 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §259). (Riverside Sheriffs' Assn. v. Riverside (2007) 152 C.A.4th 414, 420, 61 C.R.3d 295 [issue of first impression; Govt.C. 3309.5(e) and C.C.P. 1021.5 are reconcilable; Legislature did not intend to limit attorneys' fee awards only to malicious violations as provided in Govt.C. 3309.5(e)].)

See Perez v. Los Angeles (2008) 167 C.A.4th 118, 123, 83 C.R.3d 821 [excluding evidence that officer pointed loaded weapon at fellow officer during improper interrogation was not proper remedy for POBRA violation; no deterrent effect would be served by excluding evidence, which was independent act of physical misconduct taken to demonstrate prior conduct and in response to question that called for verbal answer].(3) (New) Government Claims Act. Claims under the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights are not exempt from the Government Claims Act (see 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §238). Thus, a claim for actual damages and civil penalties under Govt.C. 3309.5 will be barred if the public safety officer fails to present a claim to the public entity employer pursuant to the claim filing requirement. (Lozada v. San Francisco (2006) 145 C.A.4th 1139, 1152, 1163, 52 C.R.3d 209 [claims here for money damages were more that incidental to extraordinary relief sought].)

67 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
E. California Civil Rights Legislation.
5. Rights of Public Safety Officers.
e. Administrative Appeal.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 964

[§ 964] Administrative Appeal.

(1) In General. "No punitive action, nor denial of promotion on grounds other than merit, shall be undertaken by any public agency against any public safety officer who has successfully completed the probationary period" without providing an opportunity for administrative appeal. (Govt.C. 3304(b).) (See White v. Sacramento (1982) 31 C.3d 676, 679, 683, 183 C.R. 520, 646 P.2d 191 [decision to reassign peace officer to lower paying position is per se disciplinary or punitive in nature and entitles officer to administrative appeal]; Henneberque v. Culver City (1983) 147 C.A.3d 250, 254, 194 C.R. 869 [police officer was entitled to administrative appeal where he was promoted to probationary position of police sergeant with corresponding increase in salary and benefits, and received no unfavorable evaluations while serving in this capacity, but was summarily demoted with reduction in salary and benefits after he was elected president of city police officers association, the recognized employee organization]; Runyan v. Ellis (1995) 40 C.A.4th 961, 964, 47 C.R.2d 356 [transfer of police officer with reduction in pay is punitive action requiring administrative appeal]; Caloca v. San Diego (1999) 72 C.A.4th 1209, 1220, 85 C.R.2d 660 [deputies were entitled to administrative appeal of citizen review board's findings of misconduct where board's reports would be considered in future personnel decisions and could lead to punitive action]; Giuffre v. Sparks (1999) 76 C.A.4th 1322, 1329, 1332, 91 C.R.2d 171 [following Runyan and White v. Sacramento; reassignment from SWAT team that paid special duty pay to position that did not was punitive in nature and required administrative appeal before civil service commission]; Gordon v. Horsley (2001) 86 C.A.4th 336, 349, 102 C.R.2d 910 [placing sheriff's written reprimand in officer's personnel file and enforcing restrictions it outlined regarding officer's right to carry weapon and make off-duty arrests constituted punitive action entitling officer to administrative appeal]; Otto v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2001) 89 C.A.4th 985, 995, 107 C.R.2d 664 [whether "summary of conference" memorandum inserted in officer's file constitutes punitive action that triggers administrative appellate rights depends on contents of memorandum].)

(2) Removal or Demotion of Police Chief. No police chief may be removed without providing the chief written notice, the reason for removal, and an opportunity for administrative appeal. (Govt.C. 3304(c).) A police chief's demotion and reduction in salary constitute punitive action triggering the right to an administrative appeal. (Gray v. Gustine (1990) 224 C.A.3d 621, 631, 273 C.R. 730.)

In Binkley v. Long Beach (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1795, 20 C.R.2d 903, defendant city manager of a charter city notified plaintiff Binkley that he was being removed as police chief. At the administrative appeal hearing, which was heard by a hearing officer appointed by the city manager, the chief's request to cross-examine the witnesses against him was denied, and the burden of disproving the allegations against him was placed on the chief. The hearing officer concluded that the decision to discharge should be sustained, and, on review, the city manager reaffirmed his decision. The trial court granted the chief's petition for mandamus, ordering a new administrative appeal hearing and prohibiting the city manager from exercising any review authority. Held, reversed.

(a) The Act was not intended to interfere with the right of charter cities to regulate peace officers, including the right to terminate an officer at will without a showing of "just cause." The limited purpose of an appeal under Govt.C. 3304 is to give the peace officer the opportunity to establish a formal record of the circumstances surrounding his or her termination and to attempt to convince the employing agency to reverse its decision. (16 C.A.4th 1806.)

(b) Removal as police chief based on charges of misconduct, mismanagement, and misjudgment would tend to stigmatize plaintiff and impair his employment opportunities. Hence, "due process requires, at minimum, that he be given an opportunity to refute the charges and clear his name." (16 C.A.4th 1807.)

(c) Plaintiff argues that he was denied due process because he was not permitted to cross-examine his accusers and was improperly forced to assume the burden of proof. But he held his position at the pleasure of the city manager, who could discharge him without just cause. No case supports his claim that a peace officer serving at will has a right of confrontation under either the Act or the Due Process Clause. (16 C.A.4th 1809.)

(d) Plaintiff also claims that the appeal process was biased. However, the facts do not support a claim that the hearing officer was biased. (16 C.A.4th 1810.) And the city manager's retention of final decision-making authority did not violate any due process rights. (16 C.A.4th 1811.)

(3) Procedure Set by Local Entity. Govt.C. 3304(b) guarantees only "an opportunity for administrative appeal." It leaves the procedural details for implementing the procedure to the entity employing the public safety officers. (See Govt.C. 3304.5 [appeal by public safety officer must be conducted "in conformance with rules and procedures adopted by the local public agency"]; Howell v. San Bernardino (1983) 149 C.A.3d 200, 206, 196 C.R. 746 [transfer, unlike dismissal, does not involve "fundamental vested right"; hence, there was no basis for implying "good cause" exception in administrative rule prescribing 5-day limit for requesting review of employee reassignment]; Caloca v. San Diego (2002) 102 C.A.4th 433, 443, 445, 126 C.R.2d 3 [on administrative appeal of citizen review findings, county bears burden of sustaining findings; because of public nature of these findings, deputies have substantial interest in being vindicated in open, public hearing]; James v. Coronado (2003) 106 C.A.4th 905, 910, 131 C.R.2d 85 [although placing written memorandum in personnel file triggers officer's right of appeal, due process does not require that hearing include full panoply of rights, including right to confront and cross-examine witnesses].)

The appeal process implemented by the employing agency must include procedural safeguards that comply with due process. (Runyan v. Ellis, supra, 40 C.A.4th 965, 966 [memorandum of understanding calling for appeal before city manager lacked procedural safeguards sufficient to satisfy due process and did not comply with Govt.C. 3304(b)]; see Los Angeles Police Protective League v. Los Angeles (2002) 102 C.A.4th 85, 92, 124 C.R.2d 911 [administrative order providing appeal process for officers to challenge reassignment or punitive reduction in pay grade, which relieved department of burden of proof and of obligation to present evidence to support its action, did not satisfy procedural due process requirements]; Brown v. Los Angeles (2002) 102 C.A.4th 155, 175, 178, 125 C.R.2d 474 [same; fact that police chief initially authorizes punitive action and is also final decision maker on administrative appeal contributes to risk of unfair procedure].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

68 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS F. Affirmative Action Programs. 1. In General. a. Nature of Programs.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 965

[§ 965] Nature of Programs.

(1) In General. Affirmative action programs provide "benign discrimination" or "reverse discrimination" in favor of minority groups that have suffered past discrimination. The constitutionality of these methods has been challenged in a number of cases. (See infra, §968 et seq.)

(2) Texts and Commentary. Affirmative action has been the subject of considerable commentary. (See 3 Rotunda, §18.10; 106 Harv. L. Rev. 1709 ["whiteness" as form of property; necessity of affirmative action to eradicate "legacy of oppression"]; 109 Harv. L. Rev. 1357 [diversity as compelling interest justifying affirmative action in higher education]; 82 Cal. L. Rev. 893 [The Outmoded Debate Over Affirmative Action]; 84 Cal. L. Rev. 887 [symposium on race-based remedies]; 89 Cal. L. Rev. 59 [Retelling the Story of Affirmative Action: Reflections on a Decade of Federal Jurisprudence in the Public Workplace]; 92 Cal. L. Rev. 683 [moral justification for affirmative action and reparations]; 19 Hastings Const. L. Q. 599 [Affirmative Action and Disadvantaged Neighborhoods]; 23 Hastings Const. L. Q. 921 [Understanding Affirmative Action]; 22 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 717; 25 San Diego L. Rev. 1027; 47 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1521 [California's Racial History and Constitutional Rationales for Race-Conscious Decision Making in Higher Education]; 37 San Diego L. Rev. 575 [Has Affirmative Action Been Negated? A Closer Look at Public Employment]; 49 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 943 [American Indians and "Preferential" Treatment]; 29 Western State L. Rev. 57 [paradox of legalized inequality and revised context for race based affirmative action]; 150 A.L.R. Fed 1 [What Constitutes Reverse or Majority Race or National Origin Discrimination Violative of Federal Constitution or Statutes--Private Employment Cases]; 152 A.L.R. Fed 1 [What Constitutes Reverse or Majority Race or National Origin Discrimination Violative of Federal Constitution or Statutes--Nonemployment Cases]; 153 A.L.R. Fed 609 [What Constitutes Reverse or Majority Gender Discrimination Against Males Violative of Federal Constitution or Statutes-Public Employment Cases]; 162 A.L.R. Fed 273 [What Constitutes Reverse or Majority Gender Discrimination Against Males Violative of Federal Constitution or Statutes--Private Employment Cases]; 166 A.L.R. Fed 1 [What Constitutes Reverse Sex or Gender Discrimination Against Males Violative of Federal Constitution or Statutes--Nonemployment Cases]; 168 A.L.R. Fed 1 [What Constitutes Reverse or Majority Race or National Origin Discrimination Violative of Federal Constitution or Statutes--Public Employment Cases].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.154

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Texts and Commentary. See 3 Rotunda 4th, §18.10; 43 Cal. Western L. Rev. 131 [Patching Leaks in Diversity Pipeline to Law School and the Bar]; 43 Cal. Western L. Rev. 151 [policy and strategies for affirmative action admissions in higher education]; 54 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1931 [federal Government as constitutional niche in affirmative action cases].

69 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS F. Affirmative Action Programs. 1. In General. b. California Statutes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 966

[§ 966] California Statutes.

(1) In General. A number of statutes have been enacted in furtherance of affirmative action:

(a) Educ.C. 44100 et seq. require local public education agencies and the Department of Education to establish affirmative action programs for school employees.

(b) Govt.C. 19230 et seq. require every state agency to develop an affirmative action plan for the employment of disabled persons. (See 9 Pacific L. J. 525.)

(c) Govt.C. 19705 permits the State Personnel Board to ask civil service applicants to provide ethnic data for use in assessing the fairness of the selection process and in planning affirmative action efforts.

(d) Govt.C. 19702 provides remedies, such as hiring, reinstatement, or upgrading, for civil service employees who have been victims of discrimination. (Govt.C. 19702(f).) (See Dawn v. State Personnel Bd. (1979) 91 C.A.3d 588, 593, 154 C.R. 186 [promotion of woman employee over equally-qualified male employee, to effect affirmative action plan adopted pursuant to Govt.C. 19702 and 19705, was not denial of equal protection].)

(e) Pub.Util.C. 8281 et seq. require each electric, gas, and telephone corporation with gross annual revenues of over $ 25 million to submit annual plans for increasing the percentage of procurement contracts awarded to women and minority business enterprises.

(f) Pub.Contr.C. 10115 et seq. establish statewide participation goals for state contracts of at least 15% for minority business enterprises and at least 5% for women business enterprises. (See Govt.C. 14132(b) [same goals for Department of Transportation]; Govt.C. 16850 et seq. [same goals for professional bond services]; 20 Pacific L. J. 715.) These statutes were held unconstitutional by a federal Court of Appeals in 1997, and an executive order in 1998 directed cessation of enforcement. (See Barlow v. Davis (1999) 72 C.A.4th 1258, 1262, 1267, 85 C.R.2d 752 [holding Pub.Contr.C. 10115.5, on monitoring of participation levels, void as inextricably connected to invalid provisions]; Connerly v. State Personnel Bd. (2001) 92 C.A.4th 16, 62, 112 C.R.2d 5, infra, §967 [disagreeing with Barlow v. Davis; because reporting requirement in Pub.Contr.C. 10115.5 may be severed mechanically, grammatically, and functionally from invalid portions of Act, they are valid and enforceable].)

(g) Pub.Contr.C. 10116 requires yearly reports by departments awarding contracts on the level of participation of business enterprises by race, ethnicity, and gender of owner in contracts concerning construction, professional services, or purchases of equipment, materials, and supplies. The report also must disclose participation in contracts of less than $ 25,000. However, these departments and contractors are prohibited from using this data to discriminate or provide preferences.

(2) Effect of Proposition 209. Although Proposition 209 (see infra, §967) prohibits affirmative action by public entities, "this prohibition does not prevent governmental agencies from engaging in inclusive public sector outreach and recruitment programs" as a part of general recruitment, including "focused outreach and recruitment of minority groups and women if any group is underrepresented in entry level positions of a public sector employer." (Govt.C. 11139.6.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General.

(e) Pub.Util.C. 8283, as amended in 2008, also requires water corporations with gross annual revenue of over $ 25 million to submit annual plans. Electrical, gas, water, and telephone corporations that are exempt from submitting annual plans are encouraged to adopt voluntary plans to increase women, minority, and disabled veteran business enterprise procurement.(g) Pub.Contr.C. 10116 was repealed by its own terms, effective January 1, 2007.

70 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS F. Affirmative Action Programs.

1. In General.

c. Proposition 209: Affirmative Action Prohibited.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 967

[§ 967] Proposition 209: Affirmative Action Prohibited.

(1) Discrimination and Preferential Treatment Are Prohibited. Proposition 209, an initiative measure adopted at the November 1996 election, added Cal. Const., Art. I, §31, prohibiting affirmative action by public entities. The measure provides: "The state shall not discriminate against, or grant preferential treatment to, any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin in the operation of public employment, public education, or public contracting." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(a); see Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(f) ["state" includes cities, counties, universities, community college and school districts, and other political subdivisions and governmental instrumentalities].)

For purposes of Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(a), Govt.C. 8315, added in 2003, uses the definition of "racial discrimination" stated in the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination: "[A]ny distinction, exclusion, restriction or preference based on race, colour, descent, or national or ethnic origin which has the purpose or effect of nullifying or impairing the recognition, enjoyment or exercise, on an equal footing, of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural or any other field of public life." (Govt.C. 8315(b).)

(2) Authorized Actions. The measure does not prohibit: (a) bona fide qualifications based on sex that are reasonably necessary (Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(c)); (b) actions that must be taken to establish or maintain eligibility and avoid loss of funds for federal programs (Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(e)). The measure also does not invalidate court orders or consent decrees in force on the effective date of the section. (Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(d).) (See C&C Const. v. Sacramento Mun. Util. Dist. (2004) 122 C.A.4th 284, 298, 18 C.R.3d 715 [to discriminate on basis of loss of federal funds, government agency "must have substantial evidence that it will lose federal funding if it does not use race-based measures and must narrowly tailor those measures to minimize" discrimination]; 44 Santa Clara L. Rev. 457 [federal funding exception].)

(3) Remedies. Remedies available for violation of the section must be the same, regardless of the injured party's race, sex, etc., as are otherwise available for violations of California antidiscrimination laws. (Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(g); see 33 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 521 [right to damages under Proposition 209].)

In Kidd v. California (1998) 62 C.A.4th 386, 72 C.R.2d 758, plaintiff civil service applicants were denied employment under a certification program that allowed the use of race and sex as factors in hiring. Held, they were entitled to equitable relief for the violation of their constitutional and statutory rights. However, plaintiffs' request that those persons hired under the certification program be dismissed was denied. (62 C.A.4th 410.) The beneficiaries of the certification program did not cause the civil service to discriminatorily hire them, and it would be inequitable to penalize them by ousting them from their positions. (62 C.A.4th 411.)

(4) Measure Is Self-Executing. The section is self-executing. If any part is found to be in conflict with the federal Constitution or law, the section must be implemented to the maximum extent permissible. Any provision held invalid is severable from the remainder of the section. (Cal. Const., Art. I, §31(h).)

(5) Applications. In Hi-Voltage Wire Works v. San Jose (2000) 24 C.4th 537, 101 C.R.2d 653, 12 P.3d 1068, a city program requiring contractors bidding on city projects to notify and use minority (MBE) and women (WBE) subcontractors or to document their efforts in attempting to hire these subcontractors, was held to violate Proposition 209.

(a) Unlike the Equal Protection Clause, Proposition 209 expressly prohibits discrimination and preferential treatment. "Its literal language admits no 'compelling state interest' exception" and there is nothing to suggest that the voters intended to include one. (24 C.4th 567.)

(b) "Satisfying the participation option discriminates against non-MBE's/WBE's on the basis of race and sex in the operation of public contracting to the extent the prime contractor utilizes sufficient MBE/WBE subcontractors to meet the city's evidentiary presumption. Satisfying the outreach option grants preferential treatment because prime contractors must notify, solicit bids from, and negotiate with MBE's and WBE's, but may exclude non-MBE's/WBE's. If a contractor fails to satisfy either option, the city discriminates on the basis of race and sex by rejecting its bid out of hand even, as in this case, when that bid is the lowest otherwise responsive submission." (24 C.4th 564.) "This result is precisely what the voters were told Proposition 209 would prohibit." (24 C.4th 564.)

(c) However, not all outreach programs necessarily violate the Proposition. "Plainly, the voters intended to preserve outreach efforts to disseminate information about public employment, education, and contracting not predicated on an impermissible classification." (24 C.4th 565.)

One justice wrote a separate concurring opinion (24 C.4th 570), one justice concurred in the judgment without concurring in the other opinions (24 C.4th 575), and one justice wrote a lengthy concurring and dissenting opinion (24 C.4th 576). (See 74 So. Cal. L. Rev. 913 [Hi-Voltage].)

Proposition 209 overlaps, but is not synonymous with, equal protection. Under equal protection principles, actions that meet the rigid strict scrutiny test are constitutionally permissible. However, Proposition 209 "prohibits discrimination against or preferential treatment to individuals or groups regardless of whether the governmental action could be justified under strict scrutiny." Thus, "[t]o the extent the federal Constitution would permit, but not require, the state to grant preferential treatment to suspect classes, Proposition 209 precludes such action." (Connerly v. State Personnel Bd. (2001) 92 C.A.4th 16, 31, 42, 112 C.R.2d 5 [for purposes of equal protection analysis, gender is not "suspect" classification under federal law, but it is under California law]; see Crawford v. Huntington Beach Union High School Dist. (2002) 98 C.A.4th 1275, 1279, 1283, 121 C.R.2d 96 [following Hi-Voltage and Connerly; school district's attempts to keep racial balance in one high school by limiting transfers in and out to swapping positions with same race students in other high schools violated Proposition 209].)

(6) Distinction: Outreach Programs. Although Proposition 209 prohibits affirmative action by public entities, government agencies must engage in public sector and outreach programs to recruit the economically disadvantaged, and to minorities and women if they are underrepresented in entry level positions. (Govt.C. 11139.6.)

(7) Commentary and Practice Works. Commentary on Proposition 209 has been extensive. (See 111 Harv. L. Rev. 2081 [constitutionality of Proposition 209]; 113 Harv. L. Rev. 1449 [The Relationship Between Equality and Access in Law School Admissions]; 27 Golden Gate L. Rev. 287 [symposium on race relations: affirmative action]; 23 Hastings Const. L. Q. 999 [impact of proposed California Civil Rights Initiative]; 23 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1019 [Equal Protection, Unequal Political Burdens, and the CCRI]; 23 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1135 [California Civil Rights Initiative]; 23 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1153 [debunking myth that subdivision (c) of the CCRI lessens standard of judicial review of sex classifications in California]; 24 Hastings Const. L. Q. 969 [Wood: Does decisional law grant fewer political rights to whites under Fourteenth Amendment]; 24 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1001 [response to Wood article]; 30 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1447 [Proposition 209: temporary diversion on road to racial disaster]; 35 San Diego L. Rev. 689 [Proposition 209]; 38 San Diego L. Rev. 661 [Proposition 209 and School Desegregation Programs in California]; 38 Santa Clara L. Rev. 141 [A Progressive Reply to the ACLU on Proposition 209]; 38 Santa Clara L. Rev. 235 [California civil rights initiative and future of affirmative action]; 39 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1153 ["conservative" response to "progressive" critique of ACLU on Proposition 209]; 27 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1 [Proposition 209 and evolution of affirmative action]; 44 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1335 [interpretive guide to California Civil Rights Initiative]; 24 Western State L. Rev. 1 [legal implications of Proposition 209]; 2 Cal. Civil Practice (2003 ed.), Civil Rights Litigation, §9:1 et seq. [text and form].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Authorized Actions. See Hernandez v. Board of Education of Stockton Unified School Dist. (2004) 126 C.A.4th 1161, 1178, 25 C.R.3d 1 [favorable funding during transition period of magnet schools that were established under desegregation order but that were no longer racially imbalanced did not violate Cal. Const., Art. I, §31; selection of one racially balanced school over another does not constitute preference of one or discrimination against other based on race].(7) Commentary and Practice Works. See 96 Cal. L. Rev. 1139 [Symposium on affirmative action]; 27 California Lawyer 31 (October 2007) [Redistributing California's Schoolchildren].

71 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
F. Affirmative Action Programs.
2. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Education.
a. Bakke Case: California Decision.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 968

[§ 968] Bakke Case: California Decision.

In Bakke v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1976) 18 C.3d 34, 132 C.R. 680, 553 P.2d 1152, a program saving 16 out of 100 available places for admission to the University of California at Davis medical school for disadvantaged students was held unconstitutional. Plaintiff, a Caucasian, complained that he was qualified, but that he was denied admission because he is white, that all students admitted under the special program were members of racial minorities, and that the use of separate standards resulted in the acceptance of minority applicants less qualified than nonminority applicants, thereby denying them equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment. The University cross-complained, seeking a determination that the special admission program was valid. The cross-complaint alleged that minority status was only one factor in the selection process, and that the purposes of the special program were to promote diversity in the student body and the medical profession, and to expand medical education opportunities to persons from economically or educationally disadvantaged backgrounds.

The trial judge, ruling on pleadings, a deposition, a declaration, and interrogatories, found that (1) the program discriminated against plaintiff because of his race, and that he was entitled to have his application evaluated without regard to race; and (2) that he was not entitled to an order for admission because, although qualified, he would not have been selected even if no special program existed. Held, affirmed as to invalidity of the program, reversed for determination of whether he would have been selected.

(a) Strict scrutiny standard applies. Where a racial classification is involved, (1) the purpose of the classification must serve a compelling state interest, and (2) it must be demonstrated that there are no reasonable ways to achieve the state's goals that impose a lesser limitation on the rights of the disadvantaged group. (18 C.3d 49; see supra, §704.) The Equal Protection Clause applies to "any person," and the rights are guaranteed to the individual. (18 C.3d 51, and footnote 17.) Thus, the University's contention that the strict standard applies only to discrimination against a minority is unsound. (18 C.3d 50.)

(b) Application of standard. The justifications for the program asserted by the University are insufficient:

(1) Compelling state interest: The two major aims--to integrate the medical school and the profession, and to increase the number of doctors willing to serve the minority community--may be assumed, arguendo, to meet the standards. But the additional assertion that black physicians would have greater rapport with black patients, and more interest in treating diseases especially prevalent among them, is unacceptable. "The record contains no evidence to justify the parochialism implicit in the latter assertion; and as to the former, we cite as eloquent refutation to racial exclusivity the comment of Justice Douglas in his dissenting opinion in De Funis: 'The Equal Protection Clause commands the elimination of racial barriers, not their creation in order to satisfy our theory as to how society ought to be organized. The purpose of the University of Washington cannot be to produce black lawyers for blacks, Polish lawyers for Poles, Jewish lawyers for Jews, Irish lawyers for Irish. It should be to produce good lawyers for Americans.' " (18 C.3d 53.)

(2) Necessity of program to achieve goals: (a) The University is not required to afford determinative weight in admissions to quantitative factors of grade point averages and test scores; it may adopt flexible admission standards, taking into consideration character and matters relating to the needs of the profession and society, provided that it does not do so in a racially discriminatory manner. (18 C.3d 54.) (b) It may increase the number of places available in the medical schools, by allowing additional enrollments in existing schools or by expanding the schools. (18 C.3d 55.) (c) It may employ more directly effective methods to induce doctors to assist in meeting the minority community's medical needs; e.g., academic and clinical courses on those needs and emphasis on the training of general practitioners to serve them. (18 C.3d 57.)

(c) Absence of past discrimination. Employment cases under the Civil Rights Act cited by the University to support the validity of a preference to a racial majority all involved a showing of past discrimination, making preferential treatment necessary to grant the opportunity for equality. "Absent a finding of past discrimination--and thus the need for remedial measures to compensate minorities for the prior discriminatory practices of the employer--the federal courts, with one exception, have held that the preferential treatment of minorities in employment is invalid on the ground that it deprives a member of the majority of a benefit because of his race." (18 C.3d 57.) Here, the record contains nothing to indicate that the University has discriminated against minority applicants in the past, and neither party has contended that it has. (18 C.3d 59.)

(d) Conclusion. The court noted the persuasive arguments for preferential treatment to overcome the effect of more than a century of unequal treatment, but stressed the stronger policy reasons against preferential admissions based on race: "The divisive effect of such preferences needs no explication and raises serious doubts whether the advantages obtained by the few preferred are worth the inevitable cost to racial harmony. The overemphasis upon race as a criterion will undoubtedly be counterproductive: rewards and penalties, achievements and failures, are likely to be considered in a racial context through the school years and beyond. Pragmatic problems are certain to arise in identifying groups which should be preferred or in specifying their numbers, and preferences once established will be difficult to alter or abolish; human nature suggests a preferred minority will be no more willing than others to relinquish an advantage once it is bestowed. Perhaps most important, the principle that the Constitution sanctions racial discrimination against a race--any race--is a dangerous concept fraught with potential for misuse in situations which involve far less laudable objectives than are manifest in the present case." (18 C.3d 61.)

One justice wrote a lengthy dissent, concluding: "It is anomalous that the Fourteenth Amendment that served as the basis for the requirement that elementary and secondary schools could be compelled to integrate, should now be turned around to forbid graduate schools from voluntarily seeking that very objective." (18 C.3d 67, 92.) (See 65 Cal. L. Rev. 506; 17 Santa Clara L. Rev. 271 [Symposium on Bakke]; 10 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 648; 3 Hastings Const. L. Q. 879, 891; 13 Cal. Western L. Rev. 588; 9 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 571, 583, 597.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

72 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
F. Affirmative Action Programs.
2. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Education.
b. Bakke Case: United States Supreme Court Decision.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 969

[§ 969] Bakke Case: United States Supreme Court Decision.

In Regents of Univ. of Calif. v. Bakke (1978) 438 U.S. 265, 98 S.Ct. 2733, 57 L.Ed.2d 750, the California decision (supra, §968) was affirmed in part and reversed in part. The several opinions differ in their views on the principles to be applied, and are separately briefed below. However, the first (Powell) opinion states the effect of the appellate judgment as follows: One part of the California judgment, that the special admissions program is unlawful and that Bakke must be admitted to the Medical School, is affirmed (Powell, Burger, Stewart, Rehnquist, Stevens). The other part of the California judgment, enjoining the Regents from according any consideration to race, is reversed (Powell, Brennan, White, Marshall, Blackmun).

A. The Powell Opinion. (98 S.Ct. 2738, 57 L.Ed.2d 758.)

(1) Title VI, §601, of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

(a) Whether a right of action for private parties exists under Title VI is uncertain; the Title contains no explicit grant of a private right of action, in contrast to Titles II, III, IV, and VII, which do. But the question was not argued in the courts below, and is not resolved here; nor is the contention that private plaintiffs under Title VI must exhaust administrative remedies passed upon. For purposes of this case, it is assumed that plaintiff has a right of action. (98 S.Ct. 2745, 57 L.Ed.2d 767.)

(b) Section 601 (42 U.S.C., §2000d; supra, §852), like the Equal Protection Clause, is "majestic in its sweep." "No person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color, or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance." The legislative history reveals a congressional intent to halt federal funding of entities that violate a prohibition of racial discrimination similar to that of the Constitution; and supporters of Title VI repeatedly declared that it enacted constitutional principles, and refused to precisely define the term "discrimination." Thus, the statute incorporates a constitutional standard, and "must be held to proscribe only those racial classifications that would violate the Equal Protection Clause of the Fifth Amendment." (98 S.Ct. 2747, 57 L.Ed.2d 769.)

(2) Strict scrutiny of racial classification.

(a) The special admissions program, in defendant's view, is a "goal" of minority representation; in plaintiff's view, it is a racial quota. But the semantic distinction is beside the point: "the special admissions program is undeniably a classification based on race and ethnic background," whether described as a quota or a goal. (98 S.Ct. 2748, 57 L.Ed.2d 770.)

(b) The Fourteenth Amendment extends to persons, and cannot have one meaning when applied to one individual and something else when applied to a person of another color. Defendant's argument that strict scrutiny is not required because white males are not a minority requiring extraordinary protection is unsupported by past decisions. "Racial and ethnic distinctions of any sort are inherently suspect and thus call for the most exacting judicial examination." (98 S.Ct. 2749, 57 L.Ed.2d 771.)

(c) The Equal Protection Clause was relegated to decades of relative desuetude while the Due Process Clause flourished as a cornerstone in the court's defense of property and contract. Only as the era of substantive due process came to a close did the Equal Protection Clause begin to attain vitality. By this time it was no longer possible to peg its guarantees to the struggle for equality of one racial minority because the United States had become a nation of minorities. Landmark decisions arose in response to discrimination against Blacks, but the results did not depend on Caucasian discrimination against Blacks; and they do not support the theory that discrimination against Caucasians can be "benign." "It is far too late to argue that the guarantee of equal protection to all persons permits the recognition of special wards entitled to a degree of protection greater than that accorded others." (98 S.Ct. 2751, 57 L.Ed.2d 774.)

(d) There are serious problems of justice connected with the idea of preference: (1) It may not always be clear that it is in fact benign; individual members of particular groups may have burdens imposed on them to advance the group's general interest. (2) The programs may only reinforce common stereotypes holding that certain groups are unable to achieve success without special protection. (3) There is inequity in forcing innocent persons like plaintiff to bear the burdens of redressing grievances not of his making. (98 S.Ct. 2753, 57 L.Ed.2d 776.) By hitching the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause to these transitory considerations, judicial scrutiny of racial and ethnic classification might vary with the ebb and flow of political forces. (98 S.Ct. 2753, 57 L.Ed.2d 776.)

(e) "If it is the individual who is entitled to judicial protection against classifications based upon his racial or ethnic background because such distinctions impinge upon personal rights, rather than the individual only because of his membership in a particular group, then constitutional standards may be applied consistently." (98 S.Ct. 2753, 57 L.Ed.2d 777.)

(f) Cases in which preferential classifications were not subjected to exacting scrutiny are mainly in three areas: school desegregation, employment discrimination, and sex discrimination. All are distinguishable: (1) School desegregation cases involved remedies for clearly determined constitutional violations; here, there were none. (2) Employment discrimination cases were based on determination of past discrimination by the industries affected, and remedies were fashioned to rectify it. (3) Gender-based classifications have never been viewed as inherently suspect or as comparable to racial or ethnic classifications. (98 S.Ct. 2754, 2755, 57 L.Ed.2d 778.)

(g) Lau v. Nichols (1974) 414 U.S. 563, 94 S.Ct. 786, 39 L.Ed.2d 1, and United Jewish Organizations of Williamsburgh v. Carey (1977) 430 U.S. 144, 97 S.Ct. 996, 51 L.Ed.2d 229, are also distinguishable. There has been no determination by the Legislature or a responsible administrative agency that the University engaged in a discriminatory practice requiring remedial efforts; and the special admissions program is quite different from the remedial measures approved in those cases. It prefers the designated minority groups at the expense of other individuals totally foreclosed from competition for the 16 special admissions seats. (98 S.Ct. 2756, 57 L.Ed.2d 780.)

(3) State purposes are insufficient to support use of suspect classification.

(a) The state has a substantial interest in eliminating the disabling effects of identified discrimination, as in the school cases. But here there are no judicial, legislative, or administrative findings of constitutional or statutory violations. Hence, the purpose of helping certain groups whom the faculty perceived as victims of societal discrimination does not justify a classification that imposes disadvantages on innocent persons like plaintiff. "To hold otherwise would be to convert a remedy heretofore reserved for violations of legal rights into a privilege that all institutions throughout the Nation could grant at their pleasure to whatever groups are perceived as victims of societal discrimination." (98 S.Ct. 2759, 57 L.Ed.2d 784.)

(b) Another purpose--improving the delivery of health care services to communities currently underserved--has no support in the record, as the California opinion pointed out; i.e., there was no evidence that the special admissions program was either needed or geared to promote that objective. (98 S.Ct. 2759, 57 L.Ed.2d 784.)

(c) The goal of attainment of a diverse student body is constitutionally permissible; but ethnic diversity is only one element in the range of factors a university may consider in attaining the goal of a heterogeneous student body, and constitutional limitations protecting individual rights may not be disregarded. Thus, though the interest in diversity is compelling, the question remains whether the racial classification is necessary to promote this interest. (98 S.Ct. 2759, 57 L.Ed.2d 785.)

(d) The reservation of a specified number of seats for individuals from the preferred ethnic groups would contribute to ethnic diversity, but the argument that it is the only effective means of serving the interests of diversity is unsound. Racial or ethnic diversity is only one kind, and the special admissions program based solely on these would hinder rather than attain genuine diversity. (98 S.Ct. 2761, 57 L.Ed.2d 786.) Nor would the interest in genuine diversity be served by expanding this two-track system into a multitrack program with a prescribed number of seats for each identifiable category of applicants. The experience of other university programs, e.g., Harvard, shows that assignment of a fixed number of places to a minority group is not a necessary means toward the end. Race or ethnic background may be deemed a "plus" in a particular applicant's file but will not be decisive; other qualities would be considered, and each applicant would be considered as an individual. (98 S.Ct. 2762, 57 L.Ed.2d 788.)

(e) The suggestion that a program considering race as only one factor is simply a subtle and more sophisticated means of according racial preference is not persuasive. The Davis program has a facial intent to discriminate; no such facial infirmity exists in the other kind of program. "And a Court would not assume that a university, professing to employ a facially nondiscriminatory admissions policy, would operate it as a cover for the functional equivalent of a quota system." (98 S.Ct. 2763, 57 L.Ed.2d 789.)

(4) Conclusion. (a) The state has failed to sustain the burden of showing that the challenged classification is necessary to support a substantial state interest; hence, the California court's judgment holding the program invalid is affirmed. (b) In enjoining defendant from ever considering an applicant's race, the court "failed to recognize that the State has a substantial interest that legitimately may be served by a properly devised admissions program involving the competitive consideration of race and ethnic origin." Hence, that part of the judgment is reversed. (c) The Regents have conceded that it cannot be proved that plaintiff would not have been admitted anyway; hence, he is entitled to an injunction directing his admission, and that part of the judgment is affirmed. (98 S.Ct. 2764, 57 L.Ed.2d 790.)

B. The Brennan Opinion, with White, Marshall, and Blackmun, concurring and dissenting. (98 S.Ct. 2766, 57 L.Ed.2d 792.)

(1) No single opinion speaks for the court, but the central meaning of the opinions is this: "Government may take race into account when it acts not to demean or insult any racial group, but to remedy disadvantages cast on minorities by past racial prejudice, at least when appropriate findings have been made by judicial, legislative, or administrative bodies with competence to act in this area." (98 S.Ct. 2766, 57 L.Ed.2d 793.)

(2) Burger, Stewart, Rehnquist, and Stevens conclude that Title VI prohibits the Davis type program, and would hold that plaintiff's rights were violated on that statutory theory alone. Powell reaches the same result on the Constitution. We agree with Powell that, as applied to this case, Title VI goes no further in prohibiting use of race than the Equal Protection Clause. Powell agrees with us that some uses of race in university admissions are permissible; hence, "he joins with us to make five votes reversing the judgment below insofar as it prohibits the University from establishing race-conscious programs in the future." (98 S.Ct. 2766, 2767, 57 L.Ed.2d 793.)

(3) The legislative history of Title VI, the regulations promulgated under it, and decisions, show the court's construction of remedial statutes to support the objective of eliminating discrimination. (98 S.Ct. 2781, 57 L.Ed.2d 807.)

(4) Racial classifications are not per se violative of the Equal Protection Clause; but, because of the risk that ostensibly benign purposes can be misused, strict scrutiny is appropriate, and an important and articulated purpose must be shown. (98 S.Ct. 2782, 57 L.Ed.2d 813.) Defendant's articulated purpose is sufficiently important to justify the use of race-conscious admissions programs "where there is a sound basis for concluding that minority underrepresentation is substantial and chronic, and that the handicap of past discrimination is impeding access of minorities to the medical school." (98 S.Ct. 2785, 57 L.Ed.2d 816.) The requirement of a judicial determination of a constitutional or statutory violation as a predicate would be self-defeating--undermining efforts to achieve voluntary compliance. (98 S.Ct. 2786, 57 L.Ed.2d 818.) Defendant's program meets the test stated above. (98 S.Ct. 2789, 57 L.Ed.2d 823.) The Harvard program openly and successfully employs a racial criterion; it may be more acceptable to the public than defendant's quota, but there is no basis for preferring a particular preference program. (98 S.Ct. 2794, 57 L.Ed.2d 827.)

C. The White Opinion. (98 S.Ct. 2794, 57 L.Ed.2d 827.) He is unwilling merely to assume that Title VI provides for a private cause of action: four justices say yes, four assume it for the case; he agrees with the position of Brennan and the others that there is such a private cause of action. (98 S.Ct. 2798, 57 L.Ed.2d 832.)

D. The Marshall Opinion. (98 S.Ct. 2798, 57 L.Ed.2d 832.) Defendant's program is constitutional. Nothing in the history or prior cases justifies the conclusion that the University may not remedy cumulative effects of society's discrimination. (98 S.Ct. 2803, 57 L.Ed.2d 837.) We have come full circle. After the Civil War, the government started several "affirmative action" programs, and the court in Civil Rights Cases (1883) 109 U.S. 3, 3 S.Ct. 18, 27 L.Ed. 835, and Plessy v. Ferguson (1896) 163 U.S. 537, 16 S.Ct. 1138, 41 L.Ed. 256, destroyed the movement toward complete equality. For a century, there was inaction; then Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Shawnee, Kansas (1954) 347 U.S. 483, 74 S.Ct. 686, 98 L.Ed. 873, supra, §750, and the Civil Rights Acts were followed by numerous affirmative action programs. Now the court steps in to stop them. (98 S.Ct. 2806, 57 L.Ed.2d 841.)

E. The Blackmun Opinion. (98 S.Ct. 2806, 57 L.Ed.2d 841.) (1) If affirmative action conflicts with idealistic equality, that tension is part of the Fourteenth Amendment's very nature. (98 S.Ct. 2807, 57 L.Ed.2d 843.) (2) Government preference is not a stranger to our legal life: we see it in veterans' preferences, aid to the handicapped, progressive income tax, and Indian programs. (98 S.Ct. 2808, 57 L.Ed.2d 844.) (3) It would be impossible to arrange an affirmative action program in a racially neutral way and have it be successful; "[t]o get beyond racism, we must first take account of race." (98 S.Ct. 2808, 57 L.Ed.2d 844.) (4) It is a Constitution we are expounding, and the same principle that governed McCulloch v. Maryland (1819) 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L.Ed. 579, infra, §1293, should govern Bakke. (98 S.Ct. 2808, 57 L.Ed.2d 845.)

F. The Stevens Opinion, with Burger, Stewart and Rehnquist. (98 S.Ct. 2809, 57 L.Ed.2d 845.) (1) Only if the Regents should prevail on the statutory issue would it be necessary to decide whether the program violated the Constitution. (98 S.Ct. 2811, 57 L.Ed.2d 847.) (2) The program violated Title VI in excluding plaintiff by reason of his race. (98 S.Ct. 2815, 57 L.Ed.2d 853.) Accordingly, he concurs in the judgment so far as it affirms the California court; "[t]o the extent that it purports to do anything else, I respectfully dissent." (98 S.Ct. 2815, 57 L.Ed.2d 853.) (See 92 Harv. L. Rev. 131; 67 Cal. L. Rev. 1 et seq. [Symposium--entire issue]; 15 Cal. Western L. Rev. 179; 29 Hastings L. J. 1021; 6 San Fernando Valley L. Rev. 75; 10 Southwestern L. Rev. 617; 11 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1; 36 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 505 [Affirmative Action in Higher Education: Federal Circuit Court Split Over Bakke's Diversity Rationale].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 32 Hastings Const. L. Q. 847 [Bakke].

73 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
F. Affirmative Action Programs.
2. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Education.
c. Gratz and Grutter Cases.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 970

[§ 970] Gratz and Grutter Cases.

In Gratz v. Bollinger (2003) 539 U.S. 244, 123 S.Ct. 2411, 156 L.Ed.2d 257, two Caucasian Michigan residents filed a class action claiming that defendant University of Michigan's use of racial preferences in undergraduate admissions violated the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C., §2000d et seq.), and 42 U.S.C., §1981. Plaintiffs' applications to the University were rejected even though underrepresented minority applicants with plaintiffs' qualifications would have been admitted. The district court held that admissions guidelines used by defendant from 1995 through 1998 essentially established a quota that "ran afoul of Justice Powell's opinion" in Regents of Univ. of Calif. v. Bakke (1978) 438 U.S. 265, 98 S.Ct. 2733, 57 L.Ed.2d 750, supra, §969, but that guidelines used since 1999, based on an accumulation of points from a variety of factors in a student's record, did not use rigid quotas and were narrowly tailored to achieve defendant's "interest in the educational benefits that flow from a racially and ethnically diverse student body." (123 S.Ct. 2421, 156 L.Ed.2d 274.) The Supreme Court granted certiorari before the Court of Appeals rendered a judgment in order to address the constitutionality of using race as a consideration in university admissions, in conjunction with hearing Grutter v. Bollinger (2003) 539 U.S. 306, 123 S.Ct. 2325, 156 L.Ed.2d 304 (infra, this section), involving law school admissions. Held, the current guidelines are unconstitutional.

(a) Strict scrutiny. As set forth in Grutter, a university's desire for a diverse student body may constitute a sufficiently compelling interest to employ racial preferences. (123 S.Ct. 2426, 156 L.Ed.2d 280.) However, racial classifications are subject to strict scrutiny. Thus, defendant must demonstrate that its policy is narrowly tailored to further compelling governmental interests. Defendant's policy of automatically distributing one-fifth of the points needed to guarantee admission to every single "underrepresented minority" applicant solely because of race "is not narrowly tailored to achieve the interest in educational diversity that respondents claim justifies their program." (123 S.Ct. 2427, 156 L.Ed.2d 281.) Justice Powell's opinion in Bakke "did not contemplate that any single characteristic automatically ensured a specific and identifiable contribution to a university's diversity. ... Instead, ... each characteristic of a particular application was to be considered in assessing the applicant's entire application." (123 S.Ct. 2428, 156 L.Ed.2d 282.)

(b) Effect of difficulty of implementation. The fact that "implementation of a program capable of providing individualized consideration might present administrative challenges does not render constitutional an otherwise problematic system." (123 S.Ct. 2430, 156 L.Ed.2d 284.)

(c) Effect of constitutional violation. Discrimination that violates the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment by an institution that accepts federal funds also constitutes a violation of Title VI. Likewise, 42 U.S.C., §1981 proscribes discrimination "in the making or enforcement of contracts against, or in favor of, race," and a contract for educational services is a "contract" for purposes of 42 U.S.C., §1981. "Finally, purposeful discrimination that violates the Equal Protection Clause ... will also violate §1981." (123 S.Ct. 2430, 156 L.Ed.2d 285, footnote 23.)

Three justices concurred in three opinions. (123 S.Ct. 2431, 2433, 156 L.Ed.2d 285, 288.) Three justices dissented in three opinions, in which a fourth justice joined in part. (123 S.Ct. 2434, 2438, 2442, 156 L.Ed.2d 289, 294, 298.) Two dissenting opinions would dismiss for lack of jurisdiction (123 S.Ct. 2434, 2438, 156 L.Ed.2d 289, 294), and one would have affirmed the district court opinion (123 S.Ct. 2442, 156 L.Ed.2d 298).

In Grutter v. Bollinger, supra, a companion case to Gratz v. Bollinger, the question was whether the use of race as a factor in defendant University of Michigan's law school admissions was unlawful. To answer this question, the Court needed to (1) resolve a disagreement between the Courts of Appeals on whether diversity is a compelling interest that can justify the narrowly tailored use of race in selecting applicants for admission to public universities, and (2) determine whether defendant's selection system satisfied the strict scrutiny requirement of being narrowly tailored to the achievement of that goal. Held, defendant's use of race in its admissions process did not violate the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act (42 U.S.C., §2000d et seq.), or 42 U.S.C., §1981.

(a) Diversity is compelling interest. Justice Powell's opinion in the splintered decision in Bakke, "has served as the touchstone for constitutional analysis of race-conscious admissions policies." (123 S.Ct. 2336, 156 L.Ed.2d 328.) "Justice Powell approved the university's use of race to further only one interest: 'the attainment of a diverse student body.' " He emphasized the importance of wide exposure "to the ideas and mores" of students from diverse backgrounds, who will contribute to a "robust exchange of ideas." However, racial and ethnic origin is only one element of diversity. (123 S.Ct. 2336, 156 L.Ed.2d 329.) "[T]oday we endorse Justice Powell's view that student body diversity is a compelling state interest that can justify the use of race in university admissions." (123 S.Ct. 2337, 156 L.Ed.2d 330.) Defendant has a compelling interest in attaining a diverse student body. (123 S.Ct. 2339, 156 L.Ed.2d 332.)

(b) Strict scrutiny requirements. "Although all governmental uses of race are subject to strict scrutiny, not all are invalidated by it. ... When race-based action is necessary to further a compelling governmental interest, such action does not violate the constitutional guarantee of equal protection so long as the narrow-tailoring requirement is also satisfied." (123 S.Ct. 2338, 156 L.Ed.2d 331.) The inquiry into whether an admissions program is narrowly tailored "must be calibrated to fit the distinct issues raised by the use of race to achieve student body diversity in public higher education." (123 S.Ct. 2341, 156 L.Ed.2d 335.) A narrowly tailored program calls for individualized consideration, where "race is used in a flexible, nonmechanical way." Thus, the program may not use a quota system. It must consider race or ethnicity only as a "plus," without placing certain racial groups on a separate admissions track or insulating their members from competition for admission. (123 S.Ct. 2342, 156 L.Ed.2d 336.) "Narrow tailoring does not require exhaustion of every conceivable race-neutral alternative. Nor does it require a university to choose between maintaining a reputation for excellence or fulfilling a commitment to provide educational opportunities to members of all racial groups." However, it does "require serious, good faith consideration of workable race-neutral alternatives that will achieve the diversity the university seeks." (123 S.Ct. 2344, 156 L.Ed.2d 339.)

(c) No quota. Defendant's "goal of attaining a critical mass of underrepresented minority students does not transform its program into a quota." As Justice Powell noted in Bakke, there will be "some relationship between numbers and achieving the benefits to be derived from a diverse student body, and between numbers and providing a reasonable environment for those students admitted." Here, between 1993 and 2000, the number of underrepresented minority students "in each class varied from 13.5 to 20.1 percent, a range inconsistent with a quota." (123 S.Ct. 2343, 156 L.Ed.2d 337.)

(d) Individualized consideration. Defendant "engages in a highly individualized, holistic review of each applicant's file, giving serious consideration to all the ways an applicant might contribute to a diverse educational environment. The Law School affords this individualized consideration to applicants of all races. There is no policy ... of automatic acceptance or rejection based on any single 'soft' variable." Unlike the program in Gratz, defendant "awards no mechanical, predetermined diversity 'bonuses' based on race or ethnicity." Further, defendant "gives substantial weight to diversity factors besides race." (123 S.Ct. 2343, 156 L.Ed.2d 338.)

(e) No undue harm to nonminority applicants. Because defendant "considers 'all pertinent elements of diversity,' it can (and does) select nonminority applicants who have greater potential to enhance student body diversity over underrepresented minority applicants." (123 S.Ct. 2345, 156 L.Ed.2d 340.)

Two justices concurred. (123 S.Ct. 2347, 156 L.Ed.2d 342.) Two justices concurred and dissented, joining in two opinions. (123 S.Ct. 2348, 2350, 156 L.Ed.2d 344, 346.) Four justices dissented in two opinions, asserting that the majority failed to use strict scrutiny in its analysis of the admissions program. (123 S.Ct. 2365, 2370, 156 L.Ed.2d 364, 370.) (See 30 Hastings Const. L. Q. 425 [Gratz and Grutter]; 31 Hastings Const. L. Q. 557, 587 [same]; 77 So. Cal. L. Rev. 481 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 94 Cal. L. Rev. 457 [Grutter]; 42 Cal. Western L. Rev. 1 [impact of Grutter on use of race in law school admissions]; 32 Hastings Const. L. Q. 847 [Grutter]; 56 Hastings L. J. 379 [concept of merit in affirmative action debate]; 35 Pepperdine L. Rev. 569 [necessity of diversity in legal profession]; 45 San Diego L. Rev. 33 [Grutter]; 59 Stanf. L. Rev. 761 [social science justification for diversity rationale in Grutter and Gratz]; 38 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 545 [perpetuating exclusion of Asian Americans from affirmative action debate: oversight of diversity rationale in Grutter]; 52 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 563 [After Grutter: Ensuring Diversity in K-12 Schools].

74 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS
F. Affirmative Action Programs.
2. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Education.
d. Other Decisions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 971

[§ 971] Other Decisions.

In DeRonde v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1981) 28 C.3d 875, 172 C.R. 677, 625 P.2d 220, the issues raised in Bakke (supra, §§968, 969) were again presented in an action by plaintiff, a white male, whose application for admission to the law school at the University of California at Davis, was rejected. The University's admissions procedures treated "ethnic minority status" as a factor but did not employ a quota system or reserve a fixed number of positions for minority applicants. Held, the procedures were not in violation of either the federal or California Constitution.

The U.S. Supreme Court decision in Bakke (see supra, §969) is controlling; and, "whether based on the Powell reasoning of assuring an academically beneficial diversity among the student body, or on the Brennan rationale of mitigating the effects of historical discrimination, it is abundantly clear that the University's 1975 admissions program would, on its face meet federal constitutional standards as declared by a majority of the justices of the high court." (28 C.3d 886.) A facially valid procedure may in application produce a constitutionally discriminatory result; e.g., where it operates as a cover for the functional equivalent of a quota system. "[W]e emphasize Justice Powell's analysis on the point because the Brennan group presumably would permit even a deliberate and systematic exclusion of white applicants if supported by the requisite showing of past discrimination." (28 C.3d 887.) Here, there is no showing of bad faith or disproportionate impact. (28 C.3d 887, 888.)

The court found no violation of the California Constitution. (28 C.3d 890.) However, Cal. Const., Art. I, §31, added by Proposition 209 in 1996, now prohibits affirmative action by public entities (see supra, §967). (See 28 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1 [consequences of including race as factor in law school admissions].)

In Wygant v. Jackson Bd. of Education (1986) 476 U.S. 267, 106 S.Ct. 1842, 90 L.Ed.2d 260, the Jackson Board of Education in Michigan, because of racial tension in the community, added a provision to the collective bargaining agreement between the board and the teachers union, to protect minority employees against layoffs. Under the provision, there could not be a greater percentage of minority personnel laid off than the current percentage of minority personnel employed at the time. When it appeared that the result would be the layoff of tenured nonminority teachers while minority teachers on probationary status were retained, the board took the position that the layoff provision conflicted with the Michigan Teacher Tenure Act, and kept the tenured teachers. But after legal proceedings in the state court, the board laid off the nonminority teachers, and they sued in the federal district court claiming a denial of equal protection. The district court and Court of Appeals concluded that although there was no showing of prior discrimination, the board's interest in providing minority role models for minority students was sufficient to justify the racial classification embodied in the layoff provision. Held, reversed.

(a) "[B]ecause the role model theory does not necessarily bear a relationship to the harm caused by prior discriminatory hiring practices, it actually could be used to escape the obligation to remedy such practices by justifying the small percentage of black teachers by reference to the small percentage of black students. ... Carried to its logical extreme, the idea that black students are better off with black teachers could lead to the very system the Court rejected" in Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, Shawnee, Kansas (1954) 347 U.S. 483, 74 S.Ct. 686, 98 L.Ed. 873, supra, §750. (106 S.Ct. 1847, 90 L.Ed.2d 270.)

(b) The Court of Appeals employed a test of "reasonableness" of the means chosen to accomplish the board's race-conscious purposes; but the proper standard is necessity. (106 S.Ct. 1849, 90 L.Ed.2d 272.) Prior cases upholding the remedy under this strict test involved hiring goals, but "layoffs impose the entire burden of achieving racial equality on particular individuals, often resulting in serious disruption of their lives." (106 S.Ct. 1851, 90 L.Ed.2d 274.) "We therefore hold that, as a means of accomplishing purposes that otherwise may be legitimate, the Board's layoff plan is not sufficiently narrowly tailored. Other, less intrusive means of accomplishing similar purposes--such as the adoption of hiring goals--are available. For these reasons, the Board's selection of layoffs as the means to accomplish even a valid purpose cannot satisfy the demands of the Equal Protection Clause." (106 S.Ct. 1852, 90 L.Ed.2d 274.)

Four justices dissented. (See Bolin v. San Bernardino City Unified School Dist. (1984) 155 C.A.3d 759, 763, 202 C.R. 416 [school district guideline, setting goal of 29 to 45 percent minority faculty at each school, did not violate rights of transferred Caucasian teacher whose race was only one factor considered]; 101 Harv. L. Rev. 1797 [Wygant]; 112 Harv. L. Rev. 940 [race-conscious admissions programs in public elementary and secondary schools]; 87 Cal. L. Rev. 1299 [reflections on values of affirmative action]; 20 Hastings Const. L. Q. 877 [Bakke and Wygant]; 28 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1 [consequences of including race as factor in law school admission].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

75 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

F. Affirmative Action Programs.

3. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Employment.

a. Programs Created Through Collective Bargaining.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 972

[§ 972] Programs Created Through Collective Bargaining.

In United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO-CLC v. Weber (1979) 443 U.S. 193, 99 S.Ct. 2721, 61 L.Ed.2d 480, Kaiser Corporation, with a history of racial imbalance in its craft workers, entered into a master collective-bargaining agreement. It contained an affirmative action plan, providing for on-the-job training programs to teach unskilled workers the skills necessary to become craft workers, with openings of 50% reserved for black workers until the percentage of black skilled craft workers approximated the black work force in the area. Plaintiff, a white production worker with more seniority than successful black applicants, applied for admission to the program and was rejected. He brought this class action challenging the legality of the plan. Because the private agreement did not involve state action, there was no violation of the Equal Protection Clause; the challenge was made under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which makes it unlawful to discriminate because of race in the hiring and selection of apprentices for training programs. Chief reliance was placed on McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Trans. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 96 S.Ct. 2574, 49 L.Ed.2d 493, supra, §871, holding that Title VII forbids discrimination against Whites as well as Blacks. The district court and Court of Appeals held his challenge good; the Supreme Court reversed.

(a) Following the literal language of the statute would bring about a result completely at variance with its purpose, which was to open employment opportunities for Blacks in occupations that had been traditionally closed to them. (99 S.Ct. 2727, 2728, 61 L.Ed.2d 488, 489.) And the legislative history makes it clear that Congress did not intend wholly to prohibit private and voluntary affirmative action efforts as one method of solving this problem. (99 S.Ct. 2728, 61 L.Ed.2d 490.) Hence, the statute's prohibition against racial discrimination "does not condemn all private, voluntary, race-conscious affirmative action plans." (99 S.Ct. 2730, 61 L.Ed.2d 492.)

(b) It is unnecessary to define in detail the line of demarcation between permissible and impermissible affirmative action plans; this one falls on the permissible side of the line because it does not unnecessarily trammel the interests of white employees: (1) It does not require the discharge of white workers and their replacement with black workers. (2) It does not create an absolute bar to the advancement of white employees; half of those trained will be white. (3) It is a temporary measure, not intended to maintain racial balance, but simply to eliminate a manifest racial imbalance; i.e., preferential selection will end as soon as the percentage of black skilled craft workers in the plant approximates the percentage of Blacks in the local labor force (here, 39%). (99 S.Ct. 2730, 61 L.Ed.2d 492.)

Two justices joined in a strong dissent: "Thus, by a tour de force reminiscent not of jurists such as Hale, Holmes, and Hughes, but of escape artists such as Houdini, the Court eludes clear statutory language, 'uncontradicted' legislative history, and uniform precedent in concluding that employers are, after all, permitted to consider race in making employment decisions." (99 S.Ct. 2737, 61 L.Ed.2d 501.) (See 93 Harv. L. Rev. 243 [Weber]; 102 Harv. L. Rev. 658 [Rethinking Weber: The Business Response to Affirmative Action]; 27 Pepperdine L. Rev. 377 [Weber]; 27 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1159 [same].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.154

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

76 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

F. Affirmative Action Programs.

3. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Employment.

b. Programs Mandated by Statute, Ordinance, or Rule.

1. United States Supreme Court Cases.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 973

[§ 973] United States Supreme Court Cases.

(1) Fullilove Case. The Public Works Employment Act of 1977 contains a "minority business enterprise" provision, which requires that 10% of federal funds granted for local public works projects be used by the state or local grantee to procure services or supplies from businesses owned and controlled by members of specified minority groups (42 U.S.C., §6705(f)(2)). In Fullilove v. Klutznick (1980) 448 U.S. 448, 100 S.Ct. 2758, 65 L.Ed.2d 902, a 6-3 decision with no majority opinion, the facial constitutional challenge was rejected. The decision thus holds that racial and ethnic criteria may be used to accomplish the objective of remedying present effects of past discrimination. (See 94 Harv. L. Rev. 125.)

(2) Johnson Case. In Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara, Calif. (1987) 480 U.S. 616, 107 S.Ct. 1442, 94 L.Ed.2d 615, defendant Transportation Agency of Santa Clara County, California, promulgated an affirmative action plan for promotions of employees. In selecting a person for the position of road dispatcher, the Agency took into account the sex of the applicants, and promoted a female employee applicant. Plaintiff, a male employee passed over, challenged the procedure as a violation of Title VII (supra, §855). Held, under the criteria in United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO-CLC v. Weber (1979) 443 U.S. 193, 99 S.Ct. 2721, 61 L.Ed.2d 480, supra, §972, the plan was valid.

"[T]he Agency appropriately took into account as one factor the sex of Diane Joyce in determining that she should be promoted to the road dispatcher position. The decision to do so was made pursuant to an affirmative action plan that represents a moderate, flexible, case-by-case approach to effecting a gradual improvement in the representation of minorities and women in the Agency's work force. Such a plan is fully consistent with Title VII, for it embodies the contribution that voluntary employer action can make in eliminating the vestiges of discrimination in the workplace." (107 S.Ct. 1457, 94 L.Ed.2d 637.)

(3) Richmond Case. In Richmond v. J.A. Croson Co. (1989) 488 U.S. 469, 109 S.Ct. 706, 102 L.Ed.2d 854, the City Council in Richmond, Virginia, adopted a Minority Business Utilization Plan, requiring prime contractors to whom the city awarded construction contracts to subcontract at least 30% of the dollar amount to one or more minority business enterprises. These were defined as businesses with at least 51% of minority group members (Blacks, Spanish-speaking persons, Asians, Indians, Eskimos, or Aleuts). There was no geographic limit; an otherwise qualified business from anywhere in the U.S. could avail itself of the 30% set-aside. Supporters of the plan relied on Fullilove; the Court, applying the strict scrutiny test of Wygant v. Jackson Bd. of Education (1986) 476 U.S. 267, 106 S.Ct. 1842, 90 L.Ed.2d 260, supra, §971, concluded that the city had failed to demonstrate a compelling governmental interest and that the 30% set-aside was not narrowly tailored to achieve a remedial purpose.

(a) Appellant city argued that under Fullilove, a city council need not make specific findings of discrimination to engage in race-conscious relief. But Congress, unlike a state or political subdivision, has a specific constitutional mandate to enforce the dictates of the Fourteenth Amendment. "That Congress may identify and redress the effects of society-wide discrimination does not mean that a fortiori, the States and their political subdivisions are free to decide that such remedies are appropriate. ... To hold otherwise would be to cede control over the content of the Equal Protection Clause to the 50 state legislatures and their myriad political subdivisions. The mere recitation of a benign or compensatory purpose for the use of a racial classification would essentially entitle the States to exercise the full power of Congress under §5 of the Fourteenth Amendment and insulate any racial classification from judicial scrutiny under §1." (109 S.Ct. 719, 102 L.Ed.2d 880.)

(b) "It would seem equally clear, however, that a state or local subdivision (if delegated the authority from the State) has the authority to eradicate the effects of private discrimination within its own legislative jurisdiction. ... Thus, if the city should show that it had essentially become a 'passive participant' in a system of racial exclusion practiced by elements of the local construction industry, we think it clear that the city could take affirmative steps to dismantle such a system." (109 S.Ct. 720, 102 L.Ed.2d 880.)

(c) "The Richmond Plan denies certain citizens the opportunity to compete for a fixed percentage of public contracts based solely upon their race. To whatever racial group these citizens belong, their 'personal rights' to be treated with equal dignity and respect are implicated by a rigid rule erecting race as the sole criterion in an aspect of public decisionmaking. ... Absent searching judicial inquiry into the justification for such race-based measures, there is simply no way of determining what classifications are 'benign' or 'remedial' and what classifications are in fact motivated by illegitimate notions of racial inferiority or simple racial politics. Indeed, the purpose of strict scrutiny is to 'smoke out' illegitimate uses of race by assuring that the legislative body is pursuing a goal important enough to warrant use of a highly suspect tool. The test also ensures that the means chosen 'fit' this compelling goal so closely that there is little or no possibility that the motive for the classification was illegitimate racial prejudice or stereotype." (109 S.Ct. 721, 102 L.Ed.2d 881.)

(d) Because none of the city's evidence points to any identified discrimination in its construction industry, the city failed "to demonstrate a compelling interest in apportioning public contracting opportunities on the basis of race. To accept Richmond's claim that past societal discrimination alone can serve as the basis for rigid racial preferences would be to open the door to competing claims for 'remedial relief' for every disadvantaged group. The dream of a Nation of equal citizens in a society where race is irrelevant to personal opportunity and achievement would be lost in a mosaic of shifting preferences based on inherently unmeasurable claims of past wrongs. ... We think such a result would be contrary to both the letter and spirit of a constitutional provision whose central command is equality." (109 S.Ct. 727, 102 L.Ed.2d 889.)

(e) "If the city of Richmond had evidence before it that nonminority contractors were systematically excluding minority businesses from subcontracting opportunities it could take action to end the discriminatory exclusion. Where there is a significant statistical disparity between the number of qualified minority contractors willing and able to perform a particular service and the number of such contractors actually engaged by the locality or the locality's prime contractors, an inference of discriminatory exclusion would arise. ... Under such circumstances, the city could act to dismantle the closed business system by taking appropriate measures against those who discriminate on the basis of race or other illegitimate criteria. ... In the extreme case, some form of narrowly tailored racial preference might be necessary to break down patterns of deliberate exclusion." (109 S.Ct. 728, 102 L.Ed.2d 892.)

Three justices filed concurring opinions; three justices joined in a dissenting opinion, and two joined in a separate dissenting opinion. (See 103 Harv. L. Rev. 217; 42 Hastings L. J. 1257; 37 U.S.F. L. Rev. 887.)

(4) Metro Broadcasting Case. In Metro Broadcasting v. Federal Communications Com. (1990) 497 U.S. 547, 110 S.Ct. 2997, 111 L.Ed.2d 445, the issue was whether certain minority preference policies of the FCC "violate the equal protection component of the Fifth Amendment. The policies in question are (1) a program awarding an enhancement for minority ownership in comparative proceedings for new licenses, and (2) the minority 'distress sale' program, which permits a limited category of existing radio and television broadcast stations to be transferred only to minority-controlled firms." Held, these policies do not violate equal protection. (110 S.Ct. 3002, 111 L.Ed.2d 455.)

In the lead opinion, in which four justices joined, the Court first pointed out that Richmond recognized that Congress may adopt race-conscious classifications to address racial and ethnic discrimination. (110 S.Ct. 3009, 111 L.Ed.2d 463.) The opinion contains a lengthy historical review of the development of the policies, and then states:

"Congress found that 'the effects of past inequities stemming from racial and ethnic discrimination have resulted in a severe underrepresentation of minorities in the media of mass communications.' ... Congress and the Commission do not justify the minority ownership policies strictly as remedies for victims of this discrimination, however. Rather, Congress and the FCC have selected the minority ownership policies primarily to promote programming diversity, and they urge that such diversity is an important governmental objective that can serve as a constitutional basis for the preference policies. We agree." (110 S.Ct. 3009, 111 L.Ed.2d 464.)

One justice concurred in a brief opinion, four justices joined in a dissenting opinion, and two of the dissenters joined in a separate dissenting opinion. (See Shaw v. Reno (1993) 509 U.S. 630, 113 S.Ct. 2816, 125 L.Ed.2d 511, supra, §296 [reapportionment statute]; 84 Cal. L. Rev. 875 [Metro Broadcasting]; 17 Hastings Const. L. Q. 483 [The Supreme Court and Affirmative Action: Whose Classification Is Suspect?]; 64 So. Cal. L. Rev. 293 [Metro Broadcasting]; 38 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 583 [same].)

(5) Adarand Constructors Case. Adarand Constructors v. Pena (1995) 515 U.S. 200, 115 S.Ct. 2097, 132 L.Ed.2d 158, involved the use by federal agencies of subcontractor compensation clauses under which general contractors are given financial incentives to hire subcontractors controlled by disadvantaged individuals, and race-based presumptions are used in identifying these individuals. The District Court and the Court of Appeals, applying the "lenient standard" of intermediate scrutiny adopted in Fullilove, and further developed in Metro Broadcasting, rejected the equal protection challenge of a nondisadvantaged subcontractor. Held, reversed. "All racial classifications, imposed by whatever federal, state, or local governmental actor, must be analyzed by a reviewing court under strict scrutiny. In other words, such classifications are constitutional only if they are narrowly tailored measures that further compelling governmental interests. To the extent that Metro Broadcasting is inconsistent with that holding, it is overruled." (115 S.Ct. 2113, 132 L.Ed.2d 182.) (See 109 Harv. L. Rev. 151; 84 Cal. L. Rev. 875; 70 So. Cal. L. Rev. 591; 26 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1161; 37 U.S.F. L. Rev. 887; 27 West L.A. L. Rev. 525.)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.154

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

77 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

F. Affirmative Action Programs.

3. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Employment.

b. Programs Mandated by Statute, Ordinance, or Rule.

2. California Cases.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 974

[§ 974] California Cases.

The following cases were decided prior to the adoption of Cal. Const., Art. I, §31, added by Proposition 209 in 1996, which prohibits affirmative action by public entities (see supra, §967):

In Price v. Civil Service Com. (1980) 26 C.3d 257, 161 C.R. 475, 604 P.2d 1365, the question was whether a county could voluntarily adopt a race-conscious, affirmative action hiring program of limited duration to alleviate an underrepresentation of minority employees that the entity finds is attributable to its own past discriminatory employment practices. (26 C.3d 261.) The court found no violation of the following:

(a) The Fair Employment Practices Act (former Lab.C. 1410 et seq., now Govt.C. 12900 et seq., supra, §915 et seq.), because although it creates a statewide remedy for victims of discriminatory employment practices, "nothing in the act evidences any intent to preclude employers--public or private--from voluntarily implementing affirmative action plans to overcome the continuing effects of past discrimination." (26 C.3d 270.)

(b) Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, because the program involved here seeks to eliminate established discriminatory practices; it does not contemplate discharge of nonminority employees or create a bar against their hiring; and the remedial orders are temporary. (26 C.3d 275.)

(c) The federal Equal Protection Clause, because "the principle that the eradication of past discrimination against minorities may be corrected by affirmative actions of government entities under the Fourteenth Amendment has been upheld by a majority of the Supreme Court in Bakke and by the rulings of all of the federal courts of appeals that have addressed the issue." (26 C.3d 284.)

(d) California's equal protection guarantee, because although it provides distinct safeguards, it does not place greater restrictions on bona fide affirmative action programs than those imposed by the Fourteenth Amendment. (26 C.3d 284.)

In conclusion, the court found that "affirmative steps are at times necessary to overcome the legacy of the past degradation of minorities and to bring minorities into full membership in American society. One such instance of that essential affirmative action is the correction of an employer's past discriminatory employment practice by a race-conscious hiring program such as that of the instant case." (26 C.3d 286.) (See Department of General Services v. Superior Court (1978) 85 C.A.3d 273, 284, 147 C.R. 422 [recognizing that minority business participation plan may be valid, but remanding for determination of whether there was sufficient finding of prior discrimination justifying adoption of plan].)

In Hiatt v. Berkeley (1982) 130 C.A.3d 298, 181 C.R. 661, defendant city's affirmative action program, setting up rigid quotas in hiring and promoting employees based solely on race or sex, was held violative of both the federal and state Constitutions' equal protection guarantees. The plan lacks features that have been deemed significant to a finding of validity in the analysis of other affirmative-action plans: Limited duration, continuing oversight, synthesis of factors such as race and sex with several other factors, all of which are to be considered in arriving at the classification, and use of flexible ratios rather than fixed quotas. (130 C.A.3d 319.) (See Domar Elec. v. Los Angeles (1995) 41 C.A.4th 810, 825, 827, 48 C.R.2d 822 [distinguishing Richmond v. J.A. Croson Co. (1989) 488 U.S. 469, 109 S.Ct. 706, 102 L.Ed.2d 854, supra, §973; city's outreach program for public contract bidding did not violate equal protection, where it did not establish fixed quotas but instead established goals for participation by businesses owned by minorities and women, to be reached by good faith application of stated criteria].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

78 of 78 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XI. EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS

F. Affirmative Action Programs.

3. Programs Directed at Discrimination in Employment.

c. Programs Created by Court Order.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 975

[§ 975] Programs Created by Court Order.

In Local 28 of Sheet Metal Workers' Int. Assn. v. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com. (1986) 478 U.S. 421, 106 S.Ct. 3019, 92 L.Ed.2d 344, defendant union was found guilty of discriminating against nonwhites in recruitment, training, and admission in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (see supra, §855 et seq.). The remedy fashioned by the trial judge under §706(g) of the Act (42 U.S.C., §2000e-5(g)) included a 29% nonwhite membership goal, and when the union was judged in contempt, a fine to be placed in a fund designed to increase nonwhite membership. Held, these remedies did not violate Title VII or the equal protection component of the Fifth Amendment's Due Process Clause.

(a) Title VII.

(1) The last sentence of §706(g), providing that a union need not admit a person who was denied admission for any reason other than discrimination, does not prohibit a court from ordering affirmative action that might benefit some individuals who were not the actual victims of discrimination. (106 S.Ct. 3035, 92 L.Ed.2d 370.) While this provision confirms that a union may not be ordered to admit an unqualified individual, it does not say that a court may grant relief only to the actual victims of discrimination. (106 S.Ct. 3035, 92 L.Ed.2d 370.) There is nothing supporting a contrary interpretation in the legislative history, because the debate centered around a concern with, and rejection of, the need to adopt racial preferences merely because of a racial imbalance, but said nothing about the use of racial preferences as a remedy for past discrimination. (106 S.Ct. 3043, 92 L.Ed.2d 380.)

(2) In cases involving longstanding or egregious discrimination, an injunction is often useless. Requiring the employer or union to admit qualified minorities in proportion to their number in the work force may be the only effective way to ensure compliance with Title VII. (106 S.Ct. 3036, 92 L.Ed.2d 370.)

(3) Even if an employer or union has ceased to discriminate, its reputation may discourage minorities from seeking employment. In these circumstances, affirmative race-conscious relief, which " 'promptly operates to change the outward and visible signs of yesterday's racial distinctions and thus, to provide an impetus to the process of dismantling the barriers, psychological or otherwise, erected by past practices,' " may be the only effective remedy. (106 S.Ct. 3036, 92 L.Ed.2d 371.)

(4) Although affirmative relief will not be appropriate in many cases, several factors support its use here: (a) the record clearly established both defendant's pervasive and egregious discrimination and the lingering effects of that discrimination (106 S.Ct. 3050, 92 L.Ed.2d 388); (b) the trial judge's flexible application of the membership goal (extensions in the deadline and approval of changes in the size of apprenticeship classes) clearly indicated that it was being used as a means of measuring defendant's compliance with the judge's orders, rather than as a strict racial quota (106 S.Ct. 3051, 92 L.Ed.2d 389); (c) the relief granted was a temporary measure designed to remedy past discrimination, rather than to maintain a previously achieved racial balance (106 S.Ct. 3052, 92 L.Ed.2d 390); (d) the relief did not unnecessarily trammel the rights of white employees, for there were no layoffs, no discrimination against existing union members, and no absolute bar to hiring new white employees (106 S.Ct. 3052, 92 L.Ed.2d 390).

(b) Equal protection. It is well established that governmental bodies may adopt racial classifications as a remedy for past discrimination. (106 S.Ct. 3052, 92 L.Ed.2d 390.) The relief ordered is narrowly tailored to achieve the compelling governmental interest in remedying past discrimination. The test is satisfied by the same factors that rendered the relief appropriate under Title VII. (106 S.Ct. 3053, 92 L.Ed.2d 391.)

Local No. 93, Int. Assn. of Firefighters, AFL-CIO C.L.C. v. Cleveland (1986) 478 U.S. 501, 106 S.Ct. 3063, 92 L.Ed.2d 405, involved alleged discrimination against nonwhites in a city fire department. The trial judge, after finding that the discrimination was established, approved a consent decree between the city and an organization of minority firefighters requiring that a specified number of promotions be given to nonwhite firefighters. The decree was to be effective for 4 years, during which time the trial judge retained jurisdiction regarding its enforcement and modification. A union representing a majority of the firefighters intervened and challenged the decree, arguing that §706(g) of Title VII prohibited relief to persons who were not actual victims of discrimination and that the statutory language that "[n]o order of the court" may provide this relief extended the limitation to consent decrees. Held, the decree was valid; the statute is inapplicable to relief awarded in a consent decree.

(a) United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO-CLC v. Weber (1979) 443 U.S. 193, 99 S.Ct. 2721, 61 L.Ed.2d 480, supra, §972, held that employers and unions may enter into private agreements that include race-conscious relief that benefits persons who were not actual discrimination victims. (106 S.Ct. 3072, 92 L.Ed.2d 419.) There is no reason to conclude that the relief held appropriate in Weber would be rendered inappropriate by Title VII simply because it was incorporated into a consent decree. (106 S.Ct. 3073, 92 L.Ed.2d 421.)

(b) The union argued that a consent decree is an "order of the court" within the meaning of §706(g) and that, therefore, this provision constitutes an independent limitation on what courts, as opposed to private parties, may do. (106 S.Ct. 3073, 92 L.Ed.2d 421.) This position is untenable. The legislative history of §706(g) shows that its enactment was due to a desire to protect the right of employers and unions to engage in voluntary action. Hence, it is readily apparent that consent decrees, whose primary characteristic is voluntariness, are not among the "orders" referred to in §706(g). (106 S.Ct. 3075, 92 L.Ed.2d 423.) The facts that a consent decree looks like a judgment, is modifiable by the trial judge, and is enforceable by a contempt citation do not override the basic fact that the decree is created by the agreement of the parties. (106 S.Ct. 3076, 92 L.Ed.2d 424.)

(c) The union argued that the decree was void because the trial judge would have been powerless, under §706(g), to issue it had the case gone to trial. This contention is also untenable. A trial judge is not necessarily barred from entering a consent decree merely because the relief provided in it is broader than that which he or she could have awarded after a trial. (106 S.Ct. 3077, 92 L.Ed.2d 425.) Of course, the parties may not reach an agreement that violates the statute on which the conflict was based. "However, inasmuch as the limits placed by §706(g) on the remedial authority of a federal court--whatever these may be--are not implicated by voluntary agreements, there is no conflict with or violation of §706(g) when a federal court enters a consent decree that provides such relief." (106 S.Ct. 3078, 92 L.Ed.2d 426.)

(d) The court rejected the contention that the decree was invalid because it was approved without the union's consent; the union was given ample opportunity to participate in the hearings on the matter and the decree imposed no obligations on it. (106 S.Ct. 3080, 92 L.Ed.2d 428.)

United States v. Paradise (1987) 480 U.S. 149, 107 S.Ct. 1053, 94 L.Ed.2d 203, involved a challenge by black plaintiffs of the long-standing practice of the Alabama Department of Public Safety of discrimination in hiring and promotion. Protracted litigation resulted in an interim order of the federal district court requiring one-black-for-one-white promotion of state troopers. The lead opinion concludes: "The remedy imposed here is an effective, temporary and flexible measure. It applies only if qualified blacks are available, only if the Department has an objective need to make promotions, and only if the Department fails to implement a promotion procedure that does not have an adverse impact on blacks. The one-for-one requirement is the product of the considered judgment of the District Court which, with its knowledge of the parties and their resources, properly determined that strong measures were required in light of the Department's long and shameful record of delay and resistance." (107 S.Ct. 1074, 94 L.Ed.2d 232.) (See Hull v. Cason (1981) 114 C.A.3d 344, 370, 171 C.R. 14 [order establishing quota for nonwhite firefighters was invalid where none of plaintiffs had been victims of discrimination and, for past decade, defendant had attempted in good faith to recruit minority firefighters].)

West's Key Number Digest, Civil Rights k.393

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

1 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

1. Nature of Police Power.

a. Inherent Power To Regulate.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 976

[§ 976] Inherent Power To Regulate.

(1) Inherent Power. It has been said that the police power is simply the power of sovereignty or power to govern--the inherent reserved power of the state to subject individual rights to reasonable regulation for the general welfare. (See Western Indem. Co. v. Pillsbury (1915) 170 C. 686, 694, 151 P. 398; Nebbia v. New York (1934) 291 U.S. 502, 54 S.Ct. 505, 510, 78 L.Ed. 940, 948; Churchill v. Parnell (1985) 170 C.A.3d 1094, 1098, 216 C.R. 876, quoting the text; Massingill v. Department of Food & Agriculture (2002) 102 C.A.4th 498, 504, 125 C.R.2d 561, quoting the text [upholding statute requiring service stations to provide free air and water to customers buying gasoline]; 27 Hastings L. Rev. 511 [observations on evolving police power]; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §313 et seq.)

Congress has the same powers in the District of Columbia. (Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 102, 99 L.Ed. 27, 37.)

(2) No Alienation or Delegation. The inherent power cannot be alienated even by express contract. (Laurel Hill Cemetery v. San Francisco (1907) 152 C. 464, 475, 93 P. 70.) While the Constitution permits the state to grant police power to specified local subdivisions with respect to local affairs, it cannot delegate the power to private persons or public corporations not specified in the Constitution. (See infra, §984; cf. In re Petersen (1958) 51 C.2d 177, 183, 184, 331 P.2d 24 [requirement of abutting property owner's consent to exclusive taxi stand was condition precedent to permit, not delegation of power to designate].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Inherent Power. See Cotta v. San Francisco (2007) 157 C.A.4th 1550, 1557, 69 C.R.3d 612, quoting the text.

2 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

1. Nature of Police Power.

b. Paramount Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 977

[§ 977] Paramount Power.

Private rights of property and contract must yield to the police power. (Queenside Hills Realty Co. v. Saxl (1946) 328 U.S. 80, 66 S.Ct. 850, 852, 90 L.Ed. 1096, 1098 ["police power is one of the least limitable of governmental powers, and in its operation often cuts down property rights"]; Clemons v. Los Angeles (1950) 36 C.2d 95, 102, 222 P.2d 439 [sale of various types of property has been subject to regulation in innumerable situations]; Agricultural Lab. Rel. Bd. v. Superior Court (Tulare) (1976) 16 C.3d 392, 403, 128 C.R. 183, 546 P.2d 687 [all private property is subject to power of government to regulate its use for public welfare]; see infra, §1060 et seq.)

Thus, the constitutional prohibition against impairment of the obligation of contract does not prevent this impairment when it is the result of a reasonable exercise of the police power. (Home Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Blaisdell (1934) 290 U.S. 398, 54 S.Ct. 231, 239, 78 L.Ed. 413, 427; Sutter Butte Canal Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1927) 202 C. 179, 184, 259 P. 937; Bent Bros. v. Campbell (1929) 101 C.A. 456, 462, 281 P. 717; see infra, §1289 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

3 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

1. Nature of Police Power.

c. Elastic Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 978

[§ 978] Elastic Power.

The police power is elastic; its scope changes with social and economic progress, and in its exercise the Legislature and the courts continually apply new views of what constitutes legislation for the preservation of the public peace, safety, morals, health, and general welfare. (See Miller v. Board of Public Works of Los Angeles (1925) 195 C. 477, 484, 234 P. 381; Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 320, 295 P. 14.) "Public safety, public health, morality, peace and quiet, law and order--these are some of the more conspicuous examples of the traditional application of the police power to municipal affairs. Yet they merely illustrate the scope of the power and do not delimit it." (Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 102, 99 L.Ed. 27, 37.)

"The term 'police power' connotes the time-tested conceptional limit of public encroachment upon private interests. ... Except for the substitution of the familiar standard of 'reasonableness,' this Court has generally refrained from announcing any specific criteria. ... 'To justify the state in ... interposing its authority in behalf of the public, it must appear--First, that the interests of the public ... require such interference; and, second, that the means are reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose, and not unduly oppressive upon individuals.' " (Goldblatt v. Hempstead (1962) 369 U.S. 590, 82 S.Ct. 987, 990, 8 L.Ed.2d 130, 134, infra, §981.)

Thus, the state is not restricted to traditional forms of regulation of property or business, but may act affirmatively, as in slum clearance and redevelopment. (See Berman v. Parker, supra; Housing Authority of Los Angeles v. Dockweiler (1939) 14 C.2d 437, 449, 94 P.2d 794.) And the police power justifies measures to achieve "the political well-being," such as protecting the right of suffrage. (Day-Brite Lighting v. Missouri (1952) 342 U.S. 421, 72 S.Ct. 405, 408, 96 L.Ed. 469, 473.)

The scope of the power is necessarily increased in an emergency. Thus, in a housing shortage, state legislation regulating rents and preventing dispossession of tenants was upheld. (Marcus Brown Holding Co. v. Feldman (1921) 256 U.S. 170, 41 S.Ct. 465, 65 L.Ed. 877; see Block v. Hirsh (1921) 256 U.S. 135, 41 S.Ct. 458, 65 L.Ed. 865.) Similarly, the federal power over commerce justified a statute prescribing an 8-hour day and fixing wages for persons employed by interstate railroads, pending investigation by a federal commission, the purpose being to avert a general strike. (Wilson v. New (1917) 243 U.S. 332, 37 S.Ct. 298, 61 L.Ed. 755.) (See Home Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Blaisdell (1934) 290 U.S. 398, 54 S.Ct. 231, 78 L.Ed. 413; Nebbia v. New York (1934) 291 U.S. 502, 54 S.Ct. 505, 78 L.Ed. 940; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §323; infra, §§1072, 1289.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

4 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

1. Nature of Police Power.

d. Legislative Judgment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 979

[§ 979] Legislative Judgment.

The modern tendency is to defer to the legislative judgment regarding the existence of evils requiring regulation, and to disregard charges that special interests have procured the enactment of the measure. (See Daniel v. Family Sec. Life Ins. Co. (1949) 336 U.S. 220, 69 S.Ct. 550, 552, 93 L.Ed. 632, 636 ["We cannot undertake a search for motive in testing constitutionality"]; Sandstrom v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1948) 31 C.2d 401, 407, 189 P.2d 17 [when state regulates matter that is within its police power, "its authority over the subject is plenary and can be reviewed by the courts only to the extent of determining whether the regulation is reasonable"]; Markus v. Justice's Court (1953) 117 C.A.2d 391, 393, 255 P.2d 883 [court cannot condemn law merely because it is unreasonable or unnecessarily severe]; Williamson v. Lee Optical of Oklahoma (1955) 348 U.S. 483, 75 S.Ct. 461, 464, 99 L.Ed. 563, 572 [Supreme Court will not use Due Process Clause "to strike down state laws, regulatory of business and industrial conditions, because they may be unwise, improvident, or out of harmony with a particular school of thought"]; Goldblatt v. Hempstead (1962) 369 U.S. 590, 82 S.Ct. 987, 990, 8 L.Ed.2d 130, 134; Skyline Materials v. Belmont (1961) 198 C.A.2d 449, 455, 18 C.R. 95; Hope v. Contractors' State License Bd. (1964) 228 C.A.2d 414, 417, 39 C.R. 514.)

One of the strongest statements appears in Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 102, 99 L.Ed. 27, 37: "We deal ... with what traditionally has been known as the police power. An attempt to define its reach or trace its outer limits is fruitless, for each case must turn on its own facts. The definition is essentially the product of legislative determinations addressed to the purposes of government, purposes neither abstractly nor historically capable of complete definition. Subject to specific constitutional limitations, when the legislature has spoken, the public interest has been declared in terms well-nigh conclusive. In such cases the legislature, not the judiciary, is the main guardian of the public needs to be served by social legislation, whether it be Congress legislating concerning the District of Columbia ... or the States legislating concerning local affairs."

In Ferguson v. Skrupa (1963) 372 U.S. 726, 83 S.Ct. 1028, 10 L.Ed.2d 93, the statute was concerned with the business of debt adjusting by a contract under which a debtor pays the adjuster periodic sums, and he or she for a consideration undertakes its distribution to specified creditors in accordance with a plan. Some states regulate it (e.g., Fin.C. 12200 et seq.), others outlaw it. In this case, a Kansas statute prohibited the business except as an incident to the lawful practice of law. A three-judge district court held it unconstitutional as prohibitory or unreasonably regulatory of a "lawful business." Held, the statute was valid.

"The doctrine that prevailed in the Lochner, Coppage, Adkins, Burns, and like cases--that due process authorizes courts to hold laws unconstitutional when they believe the legislature has acted unwisely--has long since been discarded. We have returned to the original constitutional proposition that courts do not substitute their social and economic beliefs for the judgment of legislative bodies, who are elected to pass laws." (83 S.Ct. 1031, 10 L.Ed.2d 97.)

In Doyle v. Board of Barber Examiners (1963) 219 C.A.2d 504, 33 C.R. 349, infra, §1080, the court, upholding a statute regulating apprentice barbers, commented on the uncertainty of the constitutional test for regulations in the field of occupational licensing. The requirement must have a "rational connection" with fitness to practice the particular vocation or profession; but "[t]hese verbal formulae, which assume to express judicial criteria of constitutionality, are as loose as they are pliable. What seem to be standards turn out to be only admonitions, reflections of attitude." (219 C.A.2d 510.) "The tide of judicial supervision over regulatory legislation ran high during the first three decades of the century." (219 C.A.2d 511.) California decisions "voiced the notion that regulatory restrictions on private liberty will be balanced against the benefit to the public." (219 C.A.2d 514.) Then the tide turned; and, although our Supreme Court continued to speak in terms of statutory reasonableness, its decisions demonstrated a high degree of judicial self-restraint. Thus the old approach is gone. "If the judicial arm stops swinging upon postulation of any rationally acceptable hypothesis for the statute, without regard to the real facts which motivated its enactment, there is little elbow room for balancing private burdens against public benefits. The process stops as soon as any public benefit is hypothesized." (219 C.A.2d 515.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

5 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

2. Other Powers Distinguished.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 980

[§ 980] Other Powers Distinguished.

(1) Eminent Domain. This is the power to take property for public use on payment of just compensation. (See infra, §1112.) Under the police power, property is not taken for use by the public; its use by private persons is regulated or prohibited where necessary for the public welfare. (See Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Eshleman (1913) 166 C. 640, 662, 137 P. 1119; O'Hara v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1941) 19 C.2d 61, 63, 119 P.2d 23; House v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1944) 25 C.2d 384, 388, 153 P.2d 950; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §318.)

In Hunter v. Adams (1960) 180 C.A.2d 511, 4 C.R. 776, a municipal council resolution froze building permits during a period in which a comprehensive redevelopment plan was being devised. Held, this was an exercise of the police power, and a property owner who had incurred expenses in preparing plans for his own structure was not deprived of property within eminent domain principles. (180 C.A.2d 518.)

Because of the element of compensation, it has been suggested that interference with private property under eminent domain might be sanctioned in cases where an exercise of police power would be deemed unreasonable and not justified. (See Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon (1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322; Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 320, 295 P. 14.) (For discussion of theory of Pennsylvania Coal, see Penn Cen. Trans. Co. v. New York (1978) 438 U.S. 104, 98 S.Ct. 2646, 2665, 57 L.Ed.2d 631, 656, infra, §981; on regulatory taking of property, see infra, §1153 et seq.)

(2) Federal Government's Implied Powers. It was long contended that the federal government has no police power, as such, except in the District of Columbia. As stated in the Tenth Amendment, it has only those powers that are granted to it. But under the Necessary and Proper Clause (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8; infra, §1293), the federal government exercises implied powers incidental to the express powers, and the nature of legislation enacted under these powers is frequently regulatory in character and therefore similar to legislation enacted by a state under its police power. (On federal government's police power in District of Columbia, see Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 102, 99 L.Ed. 27, 37.)

Hence, it is recognized that "in the exercise of its control over interstate commerce, the means employed by the Congress may have the quality of police regulations." (Kentucky Whip & Collar Co. v. Illinois Cen. R. Co. (1937) 299

U.S. 334, 57 S.Ct. 277, 280, 81 L.Ed. 270, 274, infra, §1320; see United States v. Darby (1941) 312 U.S. 100, 61 S.Ct. 451, 462, 85 L.Ed. 609, 622, infra, §1321 [Tenth Amendment is not limitation; federal power over interstate commerce is same as that of state over intrastate commerce]; Wickard v. Filburn (1942) 317 U.S. 111, 63 S.Ct. 82, 87 L.Ed. 122, infra, §1322; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §328.)

(3) Taxing Power. The relatively unlimited power to select property to be taxed for revenue (see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §41) furnishes the chief distinction between the two powers, because an exercise of the police power must meet stricter tests of due process and equal protection (infra, §983). But a tax may also be used for regulatory purposes, i.e., as an implement of the police power. (See infra, §982; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §318.)

In Cupertino v. San Jose (1995) 33 C.A.4th 1671, 40 C.R.2d 171, the regional welfare doctrine of Associated Home Builders of the Greater Eastbay v. Livermore (1976) 18 C.3d 582, 135 C.R. 41, 557 P.2d 473, infra, §1031, used in evaluating the validity of land use regulations, was held not applicable as a limitation on a city's power to impose a tax. Defendant city passed an ordinance that raised the tax on landfill operators from about $ 2 or $ 3 per ton to $ 13 per ton. It was stipulated that the tax was passed to raise revenue, not for land use regulation. The landfill operators elected to pass the increase along to their customers, one of whom was defendant. Defendant absorbed the increase instead of raising its customers' rates, but plaintiffs, 10 surrounding cities that used defendant's landfills, passed the increase along to their customers. Plaintiffs, whose customers thus paid higher garbage rates than defendant's, then sought mandamus on the ground that the result of defendant's action would be an increase in illegal dumping and environmental pollution. The trial judge sustained defendant's demurrer. Held, affirmed.

(a) Under Livermore, whether an ordinance is a proper exercise of the police power depends on whether it is reasonably related to the welfare of those it affects. This means that if an ordinance affects a whole region, instead of just the city that enacted it, whether it is reasonably related to the welfare of the entire region has to be considered. For many reasons, this regional impact test does not apply to the power to tax:

(1) The power to tax and the police power are derived from different constitutional provisions. A charter city, such as defendant, has the power to tax under the Municipal Affairs Clause of Cal. Const., Art. XI, §5(a), while the ability to enact land use regulations is based on the police power found in Cal. Const., Art. XI, §7. The power to tax permits cities to raise revenue for local purposes, while the police power permits cities to promote the health and safety of their residents. (33 C.A.4th 1677.)

(2) The ordinance involved in Livermore, which placed a moratorium on building permits in that city, could have forced surrounding communities to accept, involuntarily, Livermore's share of regional growth. Here, the only persons who paid the tax in question are those who use defendant's landfills, and no one was forced to do so. (33 C.A.4th 1677.)

(3) Conditioning the power to tax on a regional impact test could result in needed revenue not being raised, due to delay caused by attempts to determine whether the tax did, or did not, have a regional impact. No court has adopted this contention in California, and Livermore does not require or suggest otherwise. (33 C.A.4th 1678.)

(4) The fact that one plaintiff had a long-term contract requiring it to use defendant's landfills does not change the result. Nothing required it to execute a contract, which, in hindsight, might not have been wise. In fact, the record shows that other landfills were available. In any event, defendant's ordinance is judged by constitutional and statutory principles, not by whether one of the plaintiffs executed what turns out not to have been a good deal. (33 C.A.4th 1678.)

(5) Plaintiffs relied on Los Angeles v. Shell Oil Co. (1971) 4 C.3d 108, 93 C.R. 1, 480 P.2d 953, 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §51, and Alameda v. San Francisco (1971) 19 C.A.3d 750, 97 C.R. 175, 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §52. However, Shell Oil simply held that a business tax must be fairly apportioned to the amount of business actually done within the taxing jurisdiction. Alameda held that a city's attempt to impose a commuter tax on residents who lived in other cities violated equal protection principles. The present tax is based on activities done solely within defendant's borders and involves no equal protection challenge. (33 C.A.4th 1679.)

(b) Plaintiffs also contended that if the present tax is held valid, there is nothing to prevent defendant from imposing a construction tax that is so large that it would force development to move into other communities, similar to the situation in Livermore. This argument is not decided here, whatever force it might have in another case. As mentioned, it was stipulated that the purpose of defendant's tax was to raise revenue, not to regulate the use of land. (33 C.A.4th 1679.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

6 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

3. Methods of Exercising Power.

a. Prohibition and Regulation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 981

[§ 981] Prohibition and Regulation.

The two common methods of exercising the police power are prohibition and regulation.

(1) Regulation. A business or activity that is lawful and not inherently harmful ordinarily may only be regulated. (See Adams v. Tanner (1917) 244 U.S. 590, 37 S.Ct. 662, 61 L.Ed. 1336; Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 309, 295 P. 14; People v. El Dorado (1979) 96 C.A.3d 403, 406, 157 C.R. 815 [county ordinance banning rafting and boating on section of navigable river because of property owners' complaints of noise, litter, pollution, and trespassing; regulation is proper solution to problem].) Prohibitive legislation may be so drastic and arbitrary as to be unconstitutional, although some form of regulation would have been proper. (People v. Goodspeed (1948) 85 C.A.2d Supp. 821, 824, 192 P.2d 130, infra, §1062.) It has been held, however, that imposition of liability without fault is a permissible form of regulation. (Sandstrom v. California Horse Racing Bd. (1948) 31 C.2d 401, 407, 189 P.2d 17 [race horse trainer's license was made subject to suspension if horse was drugged].)

(2) Prohibition. If an activity is inherently dangerous, or by reason of local conditions or the manner in which it is conducted it becomes harmful, and ordinary means of regulation are insufficient to overcome the evil, it may be wholly prohibited. (Murphy v. California (1912) 225 U.S. 623, 32 S.Ct. 697, 56 L.Ed. 1229; Ex parte Hadacheck (1913) 165 C. 416, 419, 132 P. 584; see infra, §1060.)

In Goldblatt v. Hempstead (1962) 369 U.S. 590, 82 S.Ct. 987, 8 L.Ed.2d 130, supra, §978, appellant owned a 38-acre tract within a town, used for mining sand and gravel since 1927. Operations went to the water table, leaving a 20-acre lake, 25 feet deep, in a residential area. The town, in a series of steps to regulate this activity, finally adopted an ordinance prohibiting excavation below the water table, imposing a duty to refill any excavation below that, and requiring certain safety precautions such as slope and fence requirements. On violation of the ordinance, the city obtained an injunction against further mining. Held, affirmed. The ordinance completely prohibited the beneficial use to which the property had previously been devoted; but this did not render it unconstitutional, nor was it significant that the use prohibited was "of" the soil rather than "upon" it. (82 S.Ct. 989, 8 L.Ed.2d 133.) No set formula answers the question of when a regulation becomes a taking so as to require compensation under Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon (1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322, supra, §980, and the record contained nothing to show that prohibiting mining would reduce the value of the lot. (82 S.Ct. 990, 8 L.Ed.2d 133.)

In Penn Cen. Trans. Co. v. New York (1978) 438 U.S. 104, 98 S.Ct. 2646, 57 L.Ed.2d 631, New York City's Landmark Preservation Law was applied by the city's commission in refusing approval of a 50-story office building over Grand Central Terminal (the "landmark"). Held, there was no "taking" of property requiring compensation under eminent domain principles. The Court first observed that no "set formula" has been developed for determining when "justice and fairness" require compensation for economic injuries caused by public action. (98 S.Ct. 2659, 57 L.Ed.2d 648.) Then, after a detailed analysis of Pennsylvania Coal, Goldblatt, and other cases, the Court declared that the law involved does not restrict present uses of the Terminal, and hence, it does not interfere with Penn Central's "primary expectation concerning the use of the parcel," and permits it to obtain a "reasonable return" on its investment. (98 S.Ct. 2665, 2666, 57 L.Ed.2d 655, 666.)

Three justices dissented. (98 S.Ct. 2674, 57 L.Ed.2d 666.) (See 91 Harv. L. Rev. 402; 92 Harv. L. Rev. 222; 18 A.L.R.4th 990 [validity and construction of statute or ordinance protecting historical landmarks].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

7 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

3. Methods of Exercising Power.

b. Taxation and Eminent Domain.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 982

[§ 982] Taxation and Eminent Domain.

(1) Taxation. "Taxation may be made the implement of the exercise of the state's police power." Hence, where a state desires to mitigate the evils of unequal competition between single and chain stores, it may either regulate the latter directly or resort to discriminatory taxation. (Great Atlantic & Pac. Tea Co. v. Grosjean (1937) 301 U.S. 412, 57 S.Ct. 772, 777, 81 L.Ed. 1193, 1201; see Rast v. Van Deman & Lewis Co. (1916) 240 U.S. 342, 36 S.Ct. 370, 374, 60 L.Ed. 679, 687 [prohibitive license fees on merchants using trading stamps]; Glendale v. Trondsen (1957) 48 C.2d 93, 101, 308 P.2d 1; 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §42.)

(2) Eminent Domain. The same is true of eminent domain; i.e., the Legislature may conclude that the public welfare object should be attained with compensation for persons whose property is taken or damaged. (See Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 102, 99 L.Ed. 27, 37, infra, §1063 [slum clearance and redevelopment]; Hawaii Housing Authority v. Midkiff (1984) 467 U.S. 229, 104 S.Ct. 2321, 2329, 81 L.Ed.2d 186, 198, infra, §1123; 90 Harv. L. Rev. 637 [urban park preservation through transferable development rights].) (On regulatory taking of property, see infra, §1153 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

8 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

A. In General.

4. Limitations on Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 983

[§ 983] Limitations on Power.

(1) Due Process. The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is the chief limitation on the exercise of police power. If the attempted exercise of power is unreasonable or arbitrary, i.e., not sufficiently justified by public necessity, or too drastic in its methods, it is a violation of due process. (Ex parte Whitwell (1893) 98 C. 73, 78, 32 P. 870; Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 309, 295 P. 14; Hale v. Morgan (1978) 22 C.3d 388, 398, 399, 149 C.R. 375, 584 P.2d 512, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §614 [arbitrary or oppressive civil penalties].) But the notions of fairness and reasonableness that make up the content of substantive due process (see supra, §615) are too general to offer a definite test, and the doctrine is applied by the familiar method of "judicial exclusion and inclusion" as particular cases are presented. (See Davidson v. New Orleans (1877) 96 U.S. 97, 24 L.Ed. 616; Nebbia v. New York (1934) 291 U.S. 502, 54 S.Ct. 505, 516, 78 L.Ed. 940, 956; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §§329 et seq., 353.)

Procedural due process may also be invoked. In Friedman v. Los Angeles (1975) 52 C.A.3d 317, 125 C.R. 93, fire damaged an apartment building. Defendant city's Department of Building and Safety ordered it repaired or demolished, and gave notice with a date for compliance to the record owner. The owner then sold to H, which obtained a permit to repair, but did not do so; instead it sold to plaintiff. Thereafter, defendant proceeded to demolish the building without notice to either H or plaintiff. Held, plaintiff was entitled to damages measured by the value of the unrepaired building that he had intended to rehabilitate and sell. Under its police power the city could destroy the building without liability, but destruction without notice to the owner was an unlawful exercise of the power and a denial of due process. Reliance on the notice to the owner of record 16 months before the demolition was wholly unjustified; the city should have made some attempt to investigate current ownership, or, after its original title search, it should have recorded notice of its intention to demolish. (52 C.A.3d 322.)

(2) Equal Protection. The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is the other limitation commonly invoked on the exercise of the police power. If certain activities are singled out and subjected to regulation, the classification must not be improperly discriminatory. (See In re Richardson (1915) 170 C. 68, 70, 148 P. 213; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §354; supra, §694 et seq.)

(3) Express Constitutional Provisions. Another limitation, although rarely encountered, is that the Legislature cannot, under the police power, do something that is expressly or impliedly forbidden by the Constitution. (See Wood v. Hamaguchi (1929) 207 C. 79, 89, 277 P. 113.)

(4) Excessive Fines Provisions. A civil penalty assessed for housing and building code violations is a fine for purposes of constitutional protection under both the Eighth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Cal. Const., Art. I, §17. In determining whether a fine is constitutionally excessive, a court must compare the amount of the fine with the gravity of the offense. A defendant's ability to pay is a critical factor. (San Francisco v. Sainez (2000) 77 C.A.4th 1302, 1319, 1321, 92 C.R.2d 418 [fine of $ 663,000 was not excessive where defendants ignored and disobeyed for almost 2 years numerous orders to abate substandard housing conditions that seriously affected their tenants' health and safety, and defendants had net worth of $ 2.3 million; substantive due process allows inquiry into defendant's full net worth, and not just value of particular property at issue].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Due Process. See D & M Financial Corp. v. Long Beach (2006) 136 C.A.4th 165, 178, 38 C.R.3d 562 [city violated due process in demolishing substandard building without notice to holder of recorded trust deed; recording Declaration of Substandard Property was not sufficient notice to trust deed holder that building would be demolished]; Santa Monica v. Gonzalez (2008) 43 C.4th 905, 925, 76 C.R.3d 483, 182 P.3d 1027 [distinguishing D & M Financial Corp.; in action challenging appointment of receiver to undertake repair or demolition of substandard property, city's failure to comply with statutory requirements that city post notice on property and that tenants receive notice that lessors are prohibited from retaliating could not be used to invalidate receivership order; city had personally served landowner and retaliation provision was for benefit of tenants]. (2) Equal Protection. See Hernandez v. Hanford (2007) 41 C.4th 279, 59 C.R.3d 442, 302, 159 P.3d 33, Supp., infra, §1020 [permitting only large department stores, but with square footage limitation, to sell furniture in particular district did not violate equal protection; one of purposes of ordinance was to attract large department stores and retain them in district].

(3) Express Constitutional Provisions. In Mendoza v. California (2007) 149 C.A.4th 1034, 57 C.R.3d 505, the court affirmed the trial court's invalidation of the Romero Act. The Act (a) transferred substantial control over the Los Angeles Unified School District from the board of education to the district superintendent, while granting the mayor the authority to ratify the appointment of the district superintendent, and (b) transferred control over part of the school system from the board of education to a partnership led by the mayor. These provisions were in violation of Cal. Const., Art. IX, §16, which guarantees to charter cities the right to provide for the method of selection of members of boards of education, and Cal. Const., Art. IX, §6, which prohibits the transfer of schools from the public school system to an outside authority. (149 C.A.4th 1052, 1057.)

(4) Excessive Fines Provisions. See People v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. (2005) 37 C.4th 707, 730, 36 C.R.3d 814, 124 P.3d 408 [defendant's good faith or bad faith is relevant to evaluation of constitutionality of fine assessed against defendant].

9 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

1. In General.

a. Constitutional Authorization.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 984

[§ 984] Constitutional Authorization.

"A county or city may make and enforce within its limits all local, police, sanitary, and other ordinances and regulations not in conflict with general laws." (Cal. Const., Art. XI, §7.) Because the Constitution mentions only cities and counties, the Legislature cannot confer police power on other public or quasi-municipal corporations, e.g., sanitary or port districts. (Gilgert v. Stockton Port Dist. (1936) 7 C.2d 384, 387, 60 P.2d 847.)

Although the exercise of the police power must be confined to local regulations and is subject to general laws, it is otherwise as broad as that of the Legislature. (See In re Maas (1933) 219 C. 422, 424, 27 P.2d 373; In re Martinez (1943) 22 C.2d 259, 262, 138 P.2d 10 [rates of taxicabs are not subject to jurisdiction of PUC]; Carlin v. Palm Springs (1971) 14 C.A.3d 706, 711, 92 C.R. 535, infra, §1063; Birkenfeld v. Berkeley (1976) 17 C.3d 129, 140, 130 C.R. 465, 550 P.2d 1001, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §577; Loska v. Superior Court (1986) 188 C.A.3d 569, 575, 233 C.R. 213; Crown Motors v. Redding (1991) 232 C.A.3d 173, 178, 283 C.R. 356 [city council had power to adopt urgency ordinance banning particular outdoor advertising].) But it is no broader. The grant is only of police power, to be invoked under the conditions that call for, and subject to the limitations on, the exercise of legislative police power. (Roussey v. Burlingame (1950) 100 C.A.2d 321, 324, 223 P.2d 517.) (See 116 Harv. L. Rev. 2255 [Reclaiming Home Rule]; 25 Hastings Const. L. Q. 187 [analyzing cases interpreting Cal. Const., Art. XI, §7]; on Local Agency Formation Commission Law, see Govt.C. 54773 et seq.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k. 81

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

10 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

1. In General.

b. Subjects of Regulation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 985

[§ 985] Subjects of Regulation.

The following are typical subjects of local regulation:

(1) Use of Land. (See People v. Johnson (1954) 129 C.A.2d 1, 5, 277 P.2d 45 [zoning]; Thain v. Palo Alto (1962) 207 C.A.2d 173, 187, 24 C.R. 515 [weed abatement]; Colusa v. Strain (1963) 215 C.A.2d 472, 481, 30 C.R. 415 [ordinance regulating leveling of land of more than five acres, to protect against injury from surface drainage]; People v. Greene (1968) 264 C.A.2d 774, 778, 70 C.R. 818 [ordinance directed toward nuisance of excavation or fill that endangers safety]; Birkenfeld v. Berkeley (1976) 17 C.3d 129, 140, 130 C.R. 465, 550 P.2d 1001 [rent control]; Gregory v. San Juan Capistrano (1983) 142 C.A.3d 72, 79, 191 C.R. 47 [same]; Great Western Shows v. Los Angeles (2002) 27 C.4th 853, 873, 118 C.R.2d 746, 44 P.3d 120, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Crimes, Supp., §57 [county may regulate sale of firearms on its own property located in incorporated city within borders of county]; 92 A.L.R.2d 1283 [regulation of private swimming pools]; 43 A.L.R.3d 916 [destruction of unsafe buildings]; 79 A.L.R.3d 716 [regulations requiring bathroom facilities in dwelling units]; 63 A.L.R.5th 517 [statute or ordinance requiring installation of automatic sprinklers].)

(2) Use of Streets. (See Skyline Materials v. Belmont (1961) 198 C.A.2d 449, 455, 18 C.R. 95 [gross weight of eight tons for vehicles on city streets]; Loska v. Superior Court (1986) 188 C.A.3d 569, 579, 581, 233 C.R. 213 [prohibition of commercial sale of tickets on public street or sidewalk other than from fixed booth]; 83 A.L.R.2d 464 [regulation of moving buildings on highway]; 14 A.L.R.3d 896 [regulation of selling merchandise on streets]; 43 A.L.R.3d 1394 [regulation of streets]; 70 A.L.R.3d 1323 [regulations providing for reserved parking space on public property].)

(3) Occupations and Businesses. (See Matula v. Superior Court (1956) 146 C.A.2d 93, 99, 303 P.2d 871 [garbage disposal]; Lynch Meats of Oakland v. Oakland (1961) 196 C.A.2d 104, 107, 16 C.R. 302 [closing hours for sale of uncured and uncooked meat, to facilitate inspection]; Silver v. Los Angeles (1963) 217 C.A.2d 134, 137, 31 C.R. 545 [municipal garbage and rubbish collection service]; Harriman v. Beverly Hills (1969) 275 C.A.2d 918, 923, 80 C.R. 426 [regulation of telephone answering services]; People v. Stuller (1970) 10 C.A.3d 582, 591, 89 C.R. 158 [fingerprinting of bartenders]; Antonello v. San Diego (1971) 16 C.A.3d 161, 167, 93 C.R. 820 [regulation of "peep" shows to protect against fire and public health dangers]; Sunset Amusement Co. v. Board of Police Commrs. (1972) 7 C.3d 64, 72, 101 C.R. 768, 496 P.2d 840 [licensing of skating rink to promote public peace, health, safety, convenience, and good morals]; 7978 Corp. v. Pitchess (1974) 41 C.A.3d 42, 46, 115 C.R. 746 [ordinance prohibiting dance and entertainment licensees from operating between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m.]; Perez v. San Bruno (1980) 27 C.3d 875, 885, 168 C.R. 114, 616 P.2d 1287, supra, §684; People v. Morone (1983) 150 C.A.3d Supp. 18, 22, 198 C.R. 316 [licensing of health club]; Crown Motors v. Redding (1991) 232 C.A.3d 173, 178, 283 C.R. 356 [urgency legislation to prohibit automobile dealer's electronic advertising reader board was within city's power to eliminate visual blight]; 73 A.L.R.3d 1105 [statute or ordinance requiring return deposits on soft drink or similar containers]; 97 A.L.R.3d 495 [vehicle towing business]; 38 A.L.R.4th 930 [regulation of commercial video games].)

(4) Animals. (See Simpson v. Los Angeles (1953) 40 C.2d 271, 278, 253 P.2d 464 [ordinance providing that animals impounded and unclaimed be surrendered to institutions for medical research]; Markus v. Justice's Court (1953) 117 C.A.2d 391, 396, 255 P.2d 883 [ordinance prohibiting dogs from running at large]; San Diego County Veterinary Med. Assn. v. San Diego (2004) 116 C.A.4th 1129, 1135, 10 C.R.3d 885 [county is not limited to vaccinating animals for rabies, which is threat to humans; preventing other animal diseases is matter of legitimate county concern because of effect on animal control costs, and county may provide service even if it might decrease demand for pet owners to pay private veterinarians for same service].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Use of Land. See 19 A.L.R.6th 335 [municipal restrictions on location or operations of facilities for sale or use of firearms].(3) Occupations and Businesses. See Wal-Mart Stores v. Turlock (2006) 138 C.A.4th 273, 301, 41 C.R.3d 420 [city did not exceed authority in enacting ordinance that prohibited development of discount superstores within city limits; ordinance was reasonably related to public welfare and did not improperly target plaintiff]; Hernandez v. Hanford (2007) 41 C.4th 279, 295, 59 C.R.3d 442, 159 P.3d 33, Supp., infra, §1020 [clarifying and affirming holding of Wal-Mart Stores].

11 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

2. Where State Legislates on Same Subject.

a. Test of Valid Regulation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 986

[§ 986] Test of Valid Regulation.

The fact that the state has legislated on the same subject does not necessarily exclude the municipal power. The municipality may make additional regulations, different from those established by the state and not inconsistent with the purpose of the general law. It is only where the Legislature has manifested an intention, expressly or by implication, wholly to occupy the field, so that any local regulations will necessarily be inconsistent with state law, that municipal power is lost. (See In re Hubbard (1964) 62 C.2d 119, 126, 41 C.R. 393, 396 P.2d 809 [local ordinance prohibiting games of chance was not preempted]; IT Corp. v. Solano County Bd. of Supervisors (1991) 1 C.4th 81, 89, 97, 2 C.R.2d 513, 820 P.2d 1023 [discussing implied and express preemption; local regulation valid]; Sherwin-Williams Co. v. Los Angeles (1993) 4 C.4th 893, 897, 904, 16 C.R.2d 215, 844 P.2d 534, infra, §990 [discussing general principles governing preemption analysis; local ordinance valid]; Karrin v. Ocean-Aire Mobile Home Estates (1991) 1 C.A.4th 1066, 1071, 2 C.R.2d 581; Korean Amer. Legal Advocacy Foundation v. Los Angeles (1994) 23 C.A.4th 376, 28 C.R.2d 530, infra, §989 [city planning approval process for rebuilding following major civil disturbance was not expressly or impliedly preempted]; Baldwin v. Tehama (1994) 31 C.A.4th 166, 172, 36 C.R.2d 886 [groundwater]; Water Quality Assn. v. Santa Barbara (1996) 44 C.A.4th 732, 738, 52 C.R.2d 184 [water softener ordinances were explicitly and implicitly preempted by Health & Saf.C. 116775 et seq.]; Water Quality Assn. v. Escondido (1997) 53 C.A.4th 755, 766, 61 C.R.2d 878 [same]; Gilbert v. San Jose (2003) 114 C.A.4th 606, 616, 7 C.R.3d 692 [Gambling Control Act only provides minimum standards and does not preempt more stringent local controls]; 40 Hastings L. J. 87 [constitutional infirmities in local procurement ordinances blacklisting producers of nuclear weapons components]; 22 U.S.F. L. Rev. 561 [local nuclear-free zone legislation].)

But even if the state has not occupied the field, if the matter is one of exclusive statewide concern there is no room for municipal regulation. (See infra, §1000.)

In determining whether the state has, in fact, occupied the field, the courts not only look for an abstract legislative intent but also examine concrete provisions for the design--either so extensive as to disclose a purpose to exclude all local regulation, or so confined as to show a purpose to leave room for it. (In re Farrant (1960) 181 C.A.2d 231, 234, 5 C.R.171, infra, §990.)

In Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 40 C.3d 277, 219 C.R. 467, 707 P.2d 840, San Francisco adopted an ordinance requiring the operators of "escort services" to obtain a permit from the chief of police and pay an annual license fee. "Escort" is defined as a person who charges a fee for accompanying other persons to social affairs or places of amusement "or consorts with others about any place of public resort or within any private quarters." Plaintiffs contended that the ordinance was in substance a criminal statute enacted to curb sex-related offenses such as prostitution that are often associated with escort service activities. Held, except to the extent that the ordinance prohibited escorts from engaging in criminal conduct or from aiding and abetting that conduct, it was not preempted by state law.

(a) State law does not implicitly or explicitly prohibit or permit conduct regulated by the ordinance. The ordinance does not prohibit sexual or criminal activity. "It prohibits escort services and escorts from operating without permits, whether or not the escorts provide sexual favors in return for money. The law regulates the business of escort services, not their nature." (40 C.3d 295.) By contrast, the state prostitution statute does not deal with the business of escort services; it proscribes particular acts that may or may not occur while escort services are being provided. (40 C.3d 296.)

(b) "[A] local governmental body may properly determine that a particular business foster, profits from and provides an environment for activities proscribed by state law. An ordinance is not transformed into a statute prohibiting crime simply because the city uses its licensing power to discourage illegitimate activities associated with certain businesses. Most licensing ordinances have a direct impact on the enforcement of state laws which have been enacted to preserve the health, safety and welfare of state and local citizens. This fact does not deprive a municipality of the power to enact them." (40 C.3d 298.)

(c) The ordinance requires disclosure of information to aid police in investigating criminal activity that may arise in connection with the operation of escort services, and granting a permit is dependent on the absence of convictions for sexual offenses; however, these aspects of the ordinance afford no basis for preemption. (40 C.3d 299.)

In Big Creek Lumber Co. v. San Mateo (1995) 31 C.A.4th 418, 37 C.R.2d 159, the Forest Practice Act (FPA) regulated the conduct of timber operations throughout the state. Another state law, the California Timberland Productivity Act (TPA), required counties to zone certain described timberlands as timberland production zones (TPZs), where only timber harvesting was permitted. In accordance with the TPA, defendant county designated certain zones as TPZs. However, it had also designated that certain other rural districts be used for timber harvesting, as one of a wide variety of other, allowed uses. Concerned about the conflict between lumbering and residential use, defendant amended its zoning ordinance by generally prohibiting timber harvesting in these other districts within 1,000 feet of a residence. Plaintiff lumber company, a corporation operating on land subject to the ordinance, obtained mandamus, declaring that the ordinance was invalid in that it was preempted by state law. Held, reversed.

(a) Although the zoning power is left to the counties, it cannot conflict with state law. In passing the FPA, the state expressly covered the conduct of timber harvesting. Pub.Res.C. 4516.5 expressly preempted local attempts to control timber operations. However, the legislative history contains no discussion of county zoning authority or its relation to the "conduct" of logging operations. Plaintiff's expansive interpretation of this statute would apparently preclude all local zoning over timber operations, so that local governments would be required, for example, to allow logging in residential districts, a result that is not supported by either the statute or the legislative history. In short, the amended ordinance addresses not how timber operations may be conducted, but where they may take place. And the TPA clearly contemplates that local zoning authority be exercised on these issues. (31 C.A.4th 424.)

(b) The TPA requires counties to designate certain areas as TPZs to protect timber harvesting from being prohibited or restricted. However, the actual designation is left to the counties. In fact, a number of important zoning decisions are deferred to the county under the Act, e.g., parcels excluded from TPZs may be zoned as suitable for uses other than timberland. Nowhere is the zoning power expressly preempted by the TPA. (31 C.A.4th 425.)

(c) The TPA does not impliedly preempt the county ordinance. Applying the three-part implied preemption test: (1) state law has not completely covered the subject of zoning; (2) it invites local action on this matter; and (3) there is nothing in the record showing that the adverse effect on transient citizens will outweigh possible municipal benefits. In short, implied preemption should not be found where, as here, the statutory scheme recognizes local regulation. (31 C.A.4th 426.)

(d) Plaintiff relies on several regulations adopted under the FPA that address such issues as noise, erosion, and fire hazards, i.e., the kinds of issues that prompted the amendment to defendant's zoning ordinance. However, the fact that the state has attempted to control the same concerns as defendant does not preempt local zoning, any more than state or federal industrial air pollution control would preclude a local zoning authority from relying on air pollution as grounds for excluding industrial plants from residential districts. "Nothing in the FPA or TPA, however, precludes the County from addressing some of the same concerns by excluding logging activity from some of the non-TPZ land under its zoning jurisdiction." (31 C.A.4th 427.) (See Westhaven Community Dev. Council v. Humboldt (1998) 61 C.A.4th 365, 371, 71 C.R.2d 536 [distinguishing Big Creek Lumber Co. FPA preempts county zoning regulations requiring conditional use permit prior to harvesting timber situated on three or more acres].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See O'Connell v. Stockton (2007) 41 C.4th 1061, 1068, 63 C.R.3d 67, 162 P.3d 583, citing the text; 41 U.S.F. L. Rev. 333 [futility of local gun bans].

12 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

2. Where State Legislates on Same Subject.

b. Legislative Authorization of Local Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 987

[§ 987] Legislative Authorization of Local Regulations.

State laws occasionally declare that their provisions are not exclusive or that cities may also regulate the subject matter. For example, Health & Saf.C. 17958, 17958.5, and 17958.7, authorize cities to adopt more stringent residential fire sprinkler standards than those found in state law. (See Building Industry Assn. v. Livermore (1996) 45 C.A.4th 719, 724, 727, 52 C.R.2d 902.) And B. & P.C. 21637 and 21638 expressly authorize local regulation of pawnbrokers. (See Malish v. San Diego (2000) 84 C.A.4th 725, 729, 101 C.R.2d 18.) (See Ratkovich v. San Bruno (1966) 245 C.A.2d 870, 877, 884, 54 C.R. 333 [Veh.C. 35701, weight of commercial vehicles]; Stewart v. San Mateo (1966) 246 C.A.2d 273, 282, 54 C.R. 599 [former B. & P.C. 7523 (now B. & P.C. 7582.3), local regulation of private patrol operators]; Stagg v. Municipal Court (1969) 2 C.A.3d 318, 322, 82 C.R. 578 [Govt.C. 50470, operation of municipal airports]; Graf v. San Diego Unified Port Dist. (1988) 205 C.A.3d 1189, 1197, 252 C.R. 889 [port district ordinance prohibiting anchoring of vessels was valid where Legislature had delegated to district power to pass ordinances and declared that violation of ordinance is misdemeanor]; Malibu v. Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy (2002) 98 C.A.4th 1379, 1385, 119 C.R.2d 777 [Pub.Res.C. 33008 authorizes application of local zoning laws to use of land in state conservancy]; Smith v. Los Angeles Board of Supervisors (2002) 104 C.A.4th 1104, 1119, 128 C.R.2d 700 [CalWORKS regulatory scheme delegates gathering of evidence to counties to determine eligibility for benefits].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

13 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

2. Where State Legislates on Same Subject.

c. Local Regulations Held Valid.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 988

[§ 988] In General.

Areas in which local regulation has been upheld include the following:

(1) Civil Rights. (See Citizens for Uniform Laws v. Contra Costa (1991) 233 C.A.3d 1468, 1470, 1475, 285 C.R. 456 [county ordinance prohibiting discrimination against persons who test positive for HIV was not preempted by FEHA (Govt.C. 12900 et seq.; supra, §915 et seq.)].)

(2) Contractors. (See Stacy & Witbeck v. San Francisco (1995) 36 C.A.4th 1074, 1092, 44 C.R.2d 472 [Contractors' License Law (B. & P.C. 7000 et seq.) does not preempt ordinance providing sanctions against irresponsible bidders on city's public works contracts]; M & B Const. v. Yuba County Water Agency (1999) 68 C.A.4th 1353, 1362, 81 C.R.2d 231 [following Stacy & Witbeck; nothing in general law conflicts with agency's right to consider certain license classification in determining whether bidder is qualified].)

(3) Employee Leave. (See Burns Int. Sec. Services Corp. v. Los Angeles (2004) 123 C.A.4th 162, 180, 19 C.R.3d 776, infra, §1004 [ordinance requiring companies contracting with county to offer up to 5 days' compensation to all full time employees while serving on jury was not preempted by host of narrowly-drawn statutes covering employers' duties to provide leave].)

(4) Firearm Sales. (See 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Crimes, §§55, 57.)

(5) Food. (See Natural Milk Producers Assn. v. San Francisco (1942) 20 C.2d 101, 109, 124 P.2d 25 [city milk ordinance]; infra, §1073.)

(6) Gaming Clubs. (See Lowe v. Commerce (1997) 59 C.A.4th 1075, 1082, 69 C.R.2d 356 [ordinance providing for exclusion from gaming clubs of persons whose presence is inimical to licensee's interests, though broader, does not conflict with, and is not preempted by, state law].)

(7) Groundwater. (See Baldwin v. Tehama (1994) 31 C.A.4th 166, 173, 36 C.R.2d 886 [county ordinance requiring permit for extraction of groundwater for use on land other than where extraction occurred was not preempted by state laws on water use].)

(8) Hazardous Waste Disposal. (See IT Corp. v. Solano County Bd. of Supervisors (1991) 1 C.4th 81, 89, 97, 2 C.R.2d 513, 820 P.2d 1023 [Hazardous Waste Control Act (Health & Saf.C. 25100 et seq.) does not preempt power of county to order removal of hazardous wastes deposited in violation of valid land use regulation].)

(9) Land Development. (See San Mateo County Coastal Landowners' Assn. v. San Mateo (1995) 38 C.A.4th 523, 539, 45 C.R.2d 117 [amendments to local coastal plans may be adopted by initiative and are not preempted by state Coastal Act].)

(10) Leases of Municipal Property. (See Alioto's Fish Co. v. Human Rights Com. of San Francisco (1981) 120 C.A.3d 594, 604, 606, 174 C.R. 763 [provisions prohibited discrimination in employment and required hiring of minority and women employees].)

(11) Oil Drilling. (See Higgins v. Santa Monica (1964) 62 C.2d 24, 28, 41 C.R. 9, 396 P.2d 41 [ordinance prohibiting oil drilling on tidelands granted by state; state statutes did not compel oil development].)

(12) Pawnbroker Regulations. (See Miller v. Murphy (1983) 143 C.A.3d 337, 341, 342, 191 C.R. 740 [requirement of identification of customer, including fingerprint]; Malish v. San Diego (2000) 84 C.A.4th 725, 730, 101 C.R.2d 18 [while several ordinances regulating pawnbrokers were preempted by state regulating statutes, city's permit system was proper means of enforcing ordinances that were not inconsistent with state law].)

(13) Rent Control. (See Birkenfeld v. Berkeley (1976) 17 C.3d 129, 142, 130 C.R. 465, 550 P.2d 1001, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §577; Gregory v. San Juan Capistrano (1983) 142 C.A.3d 72, 85, 191 C.R. 47 [mobilehomes]; Pennell v. San Jose (1988) 485 U.S. 1, 108 S.Ct. 849, 857, 99 L.Ed.2d 1, 12; on rent control regulations generally, see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §572 et seq.)

(14) Solid Waste Reduction and Disposal. (See Park & Shop Markets v. Berkeley (1981) 116 C.A.3d 78, 172 C.R. 515 [ordinance requiring retailers to collect deposit on containers]; Waste Resource Technologies v. Department of Public Health (1994) 23 C.A.4th 299, 304, 309, 28 C.R.2d 422 [Integrated Waste Management Act (Pub.Res.C. 40000 et seq.) does not preempt city's authority to grant exclusive refuse collection permits]; Empire Waste Management v. Windsor (1998) 67 C.A.4th 714, 719, 721, 79 C.R.2d 262 [following Waste Resource Technologies; local referendum power is not superseded by provision of Act (Pub.Res.C. 40059) that vests authority to grant franchises or contracts for handling solid waste collection in local "governing body"]; Valley Vista Services v. Monterey Park (2004) 118 C.A.4th 881, 887, 13 C.R.3d 433 [ordinance preventing waste disposal company from soliciting new business after it has received notice that its franchise will be terminated within 5 years was not preempted by California Integrated Waste Management Act].)

(15) Taxation. (See State Bd. of Equalization v. Cenicerros (1998) 63 C.A.4th 122, 133, 73 C.R.2d 539 [local rule governing exchange of information prior to assessment appeal hearing did not conflict with state law granting broad power to assessor to demand information of real property owners].)

(16) Timber Harvesting. (See Big Creek Lumber Co. v. San Mateo (1995) 31 C.A.4th 418, 428, 37 C.R.2d 159, supra, §986 [county ordinance prohibiting timber harvesting within 1,000 feet of residence].)

(17) Transportation. (See Stagg v. Municipal Court (1969) 2 C.A.3d 318, 320, 82 C.R. 578 [ordinance prohibiting takeoff of jet aircraft between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m., except in emergency]; Bell v. Mountain View (1977) 66 C.A.3d 332, 338, 136 C.R. 8 [ambulance licensing, conditioned on finding of public convenience and necessity]; 17 Hastings L. J. 571 [freeway problems]; 17 Hastings L. J. 642 [municipal regulation of railroad crossings]; 17 Hastings L. J. 647 [vehicle repair ordinance].)

(18) Welfare Programs. (See Smith v. Los Angeles Board of Supervisors (2002) 104 C.A.4th 1104, 1117, 128

C.R.2d 700 [county's home visit pilot program to verify eligibility for state welfare benefits].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2a) (New) Cruelty to Animals. See California Veterinary Med. Assn. v West Hollywood (2007) 152 C.A.4th 536, 549, 557, 61 C.R.3d 318 [ordinance prohibiting non-therapeutic declawing of animals was not preempted by state laws regulating licensing and practice of veterinary medicine]. (12a) (New) Premises Liability. See Gonzales v. San Jose (2004) 125 C.A.4th 1127, 1135, 1137, 23 C.R.3d 178 [ordinance providing for liability of abutting property owner who fails to maintain city-owned sidewalk in nondangerous condition for injuries to third persons is not preempted by Government Tort Claims Act; fact that state law does not impose liability on adjacent landowners for injuries to pedestrians does not mean that state intends to fully occupy this area of law].

(14) Solid Waste Reduction and Disposal. See Casteel v. San Joaquin (2005) 134 C.A.4th 918, 924, 36 C.R.3d 395 [county could apply mandatory solid waste collection ordinance against nonresident landlord who had not contracted for service].

(16) Timber Harvesting. See Big Creek Lumber Co. v. Santa Cruz (2006) 38 C.4th 1139, 1151, 1162, 45 C.R.3d 21, 136 P.3d 821 [agreeing with Big Creek Lumber Co. v. San Mateo (1995) 31 C.A.4th 418, 924, 37 C.R.2d 159, text, §986; Forest Practice Act and Timberland Productivity Act did not preempt local regulations limiting locations for timber harvesting and helicopter support operations].

14 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

2. Where State Legislates on Same Subject.

c. Local Regulations Held Valid.

2. Alcoholic Beverages.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 989

[§ 989] Alcoholic Beverages.

(1) Health Warnings. In California Restaurant Assn. v. Los Angeles (1987) 192 C.A.3d 405, 237 C.R. 415, an ordinance of defendant city required the posting of health warnings wherever alcoholic beverages are sold, cautioning that drinking alcohol during pregnancy can cause birth defects. Held, the ordinance was valid.

(a) There was no express preemption by Cal. Const., Art. XX, §22 (exclusive power of state to regulate liquor production and sale, etc.) because the ordinance did not restrict the sale or purchase of alcoholic beverages. Municipal ordinances prohibiting a liquor licensee from engaging in sales if certain entertainment exists on the premises have been upheld in a number of decisions. (192 C.A.3d 410.) "[A] common thread that runs throughout these cases is that Article XX, section 22, will not be held to preempt a local ordinance where, as here, the ordinance does not directly affect the licensee's ability to sell alcoholic beverages to a willing purchaser." (192 C.A.3d 411.)

(b) There was no implied preemption by state statutes regulating advertising signs; these laws are unrelated to health warnings. (192 C.A.3d 412, 413.) And there was no implied preemption on the theory that one of the purposes of the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Act is to promote temperance. That statute prohibits furnishing liquor to persons who lack the capacity to make a socially responsible decision on whether to drink; the Los Angeles ordinance merely warns a group of potential consumers that the decision to drink has potentially dire consequences. (192 C.A.3d 413, 414.) (See Rancho Cucamonga v. Warner Consulting Services, Ltd. (1989) 213 C.A.3d 1338, 1345, 262 C.R. 349 [city's authority for ordinance making topless dancing in places serving alcohol a misdemeanor derives from general police power, not from delegation of state's power to regulate sale and possession of alcohol under Cal. Const., Art. XX, §22].)

(2) Location of Business. In Korean Amer. Legal Advocacy Foundation v. Los Angeles (1994) 23 C.A.4th 376, 28 C.R.2d 530, the City of Los Angeles enacted a new plan approval process to be followed for the rebuilding of businesses destroyed or damaged during a major civil disturbance. The process allowed for revocation hearings regarding businesses that had become a nuisance or law enforcement problem. Plaintiffs, owners and operators of retail stores licensed to sell alcoholic beverages, brought the present action, claiming that the plan approval process was preempted by state law. The trial judge denied plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction and sustained defendant's demurrer to the preemption claim. Held, plaintiffs' petition for writ relief denied.

(a) The plan approval process is not expressly preempted by Cal. Const., Art. XX, §22, granting the state the exclusive power to regulate the manufacture, sale, purchase, possession, and transportation of alcoholic beverages, because the city's ordinance has a different purpose and effect than the state provision. The city's ordinance is a geographic limitation imposing conditions on restricted businesses allowed to operate within a particular area. It focuses on the negative conduct that tends to occur on premises immediately surrounding retail establishments selling alcoholic beverages. "That the conditions imposed under the ordinance may have some indirect impact on the sale of alcoholic beverages does not transmute the purpose and scope of the ordinance into a regulation merely seeking to control alcohol sales." (23 C.A.4th 389.)

(b) Even though application of the ordinance and several provisions of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act (B. & P.C. 23000 et seq.) may result in the abatement or eradication of nuisance activities, the ultimate outcome of each procedure is different. The state's action may result in the revocation of a license to sell alcohol, while the city's action may result, not in the loss of a license, but in the loss of the right to sell alcoholic beverages on particular premises. Thus, the ordinance neither duplicates nor contradicts state law. (23 C.A.4th 391.)

(c) The state statutory scheme evidences no intent to occupy the field by implication. Indeed, B. & P.C. 23790 prohibits the issuance of a license for premises located in any territory where use of the license would be contrary to a valid zoning ordinance, and B. & P.C. 23791 provides that nothing in the Act interferes with the powers of cities conferred on them by the Government Code provisions authorizing local governments to impose reasonable land use and zoning restrictions. (23 C.A.4th 393.)

(d) B. & P.C. 23790 does allow for the continued operation of premises in existence at the time a zoning ordinance is enacted, but this "grandfathering" applies only to continuously operated businesses. Although, for purposes of the statute, breaks in operation do not include closures for not more than 30 days for purposes of repair, and closures for restoration necessitated by an act of God or a toxic accident, plaintiffs qualify for neither exception. As there is no preemption and B. & P.C. 23790 does not immunize plaintiffs from compliance with the new procedure, the trial judge properly sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend. (23 C.A.4th 384, 394.) (See Boccatto v. Hermosa Beach (1994) 29 C.A.4th 1797, 1804, 1807, 35 C.R.2d 282 [following Korean Amer. Legal Foundation].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

15 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

2. Where State Legislates on Same Subject.

c. Local Regulations Held Valid.

3. Criminal Activities.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 990

[§ 990] Criminal Activities.

(1) In General. Local regulation of criminal activities has been upheld in a number of cases. (See In re Hubbard (1964) 62 C.2d 119, 41 C.R. 393, 396 P.2d 809; Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 C.2d 851, 855, 76 C.R. 642, 452 P.2d 930; In re Benson (1985) 172 C.A.3d 532, 535, 537, 218 C.R. 384; Rancho Cucamonga v. Warner Consulting Services, Ltd. (1989) 213 C.A.3d 1338, 1345, 262 C.R. 349 [topless dancing in places serving alcohol]; Horton v. Oakland (2000) 82 C.A.4th 580, 586, 98 C.R.2d 371 [ordinance authorizing forfeiture of vehicles involved in soliciting prostitution or acquiring drugs did not conflict with Health & Saf.C. 11470(e) (forfeiture of vehicles used in manufacture or sale of drugs) or Veh.C. 22659.5 (authorizing pilot programs to impound vehicles used to pimp, pander, or solicit prostitution as public nuisances); neither statute expresses intent to preempt field]; Foley v. Superior Court (2004) 117 C.A.4th 206, 210, 11 C.R.3d 505 [ordinance making it crime for spectator to be knowingly present at illegal speed contest or exhibition is valid; ordinance is complimentary to, and not in conflict with Vehicle Code sections dealing with speed contests and exhibitions]; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Crimes, §56 et seq.)

(2) Gambling. In re Farrant (1960) 181 C.A.2d 231, 5 C.R.171, involved a charge of playing "with dice for money," in violation of a Contra Costa County ordinance prohibiting all gambling. Petitioner sought habeas corpus, contending that P.C. 330, prohibiting certain specified gambling games including "banking or percentage" games played with dice, preempted the field. Held, the ordinance was valid because it covered some games not prohibited by state law. "[W]hile we recognize the rather fine line drawn here between state prohibition of gambling with dice in a banking or percentage game and a county regulation of gambling with dice in general, and while we are cognizant of the power of the Legislature to preempt the whole field of gambling and thereby simplify the problem of enforcement, we deal here in a historical setting of both statute and precedent long on the books." (181 C.A.2d 239.)

(3) Sale of Cigarettes. In Bravo Vending v. Rancho Mirage (1993) 16 C.A.4th 383, 20 C.R.2d 164, the sole issue was whether P.C. 308, prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors (see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Sex Offenses and Crimes Against Decency, §167), preempted a city ordinance that forbade the sale of cigarettes through vending machines. (16 C.A.4th 391.) Held, the ordinance was valid.

(a) P.C. 308(e) provides: "It is the Legislature's intent to regulate the subject matter of this section. As a result, no city, county, or city and county shall adopt any ordinance or regulation inconsistent with this section." Although this language is far from clear, the better interpretation is that the Legislature intended to regulate the subject matter of the section to the exclusion of local regulation. (16 C.A.4th 398.) The text of P.C. 308 "clearly indicates that the subject matter of that section is the penal aspects of the sale of cigarettes to minors." (16 C.A.4th 402.) Vending machines are mentioned in only one sentence, and the sole purpose of that sentence is to identify the person responsible for sales to a minor by vending machine. (16 C.A.4th 400.)

(b) The ordinance covers two related subjects--persons who may sell cigarettes, and the means by which cigarettes can be sold--neither of which is touched on by P.C. 308. (16 C.A.4th 403.) However, the legislative history of the ordinance makes clear that its purpose was to deter the sale of cigarettes to minors by prohibiting the method of sale most often used by minors. (16 C.A.4th 408, 409.)

(c) Because the purpose of the ordinance is to discourage violation of P.C. 308, does the ordinance intrude into the field preempted by the statute? "No. Case law establishes that an ordinance designed to discourage criminal acts is not necessarily preempted by the statute proscribing those acts." (16 C.A.4th 409.) Under Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 40 C.3d 277, 219 C.R. 467, 707 P.2d 840, supra, §986, "when the state has preempted the regulatory field regarding the criminal aspects of a particular activity, a local government may nevertheless impose substantive regulations concerning the manner of operation of a lawful business which facilitates violations of the state's prohibitory regulations so long as the ordinance (1) is intended to discourage the activity proscribed by state law and (2) does not attempt to either expand or reduce the degree to which the particular activity regulated by state law is criminally proscribed." (16 C.A.4th 412.) Accordingly, the ordinance is not preempted; it is intended to discourage violations of P.C. 308, but it neither expands nor limits the prohibitions of the statute. (16 C.A.4th 412.)

(4) Graffiti. In Sherwin-Williams Co. v. Los Angeles (1993) 4 C.4th 893, 16 C.R.2d 215, 844 P.2d 534, the court rejected a claim that P.C. 594.1, which restricts the sale to or possession by minors of aerosol paint, and also requires retailers to post a notice that vandalism is illegal, preempted a city ordinance requiring aerosol paint containers to be displayed in an area inaccessible to the public.

(a) P.C. 594.1 is a graffiti-prevention measure; it seeks to accomplish its goal primarily by regulating transfer and possession of aerosol paint and also by requiring posted warnings against vandalism. When added in 1981, the statute covered only aerosol containers larger than six ounces, and the enacting statute contained an uncodified section declaring the Legislature's intent to preempt local regulations of these containers. The section was amended in 1988 to cover all aerosol paint containers, but the amending statute had no provision concerning intent to preempt local legislation. (4 C.4th 900, 901.)

(b) The Los Angeles ordinance is also a graffiti-prevention measure; it seeks to accomplish its goal by requiring that retailers of aerosol paint and broad-tipped marker pens display these items out of the public's reach. (4 C.4th 901, 902.)

(c) Local legislation is preempted when it is duplicative of or contradictory to, or enters an area expressly or impliedly fully occupied by, general law. (4 C.4th 897, 898.) Like the statute, the ordinance is a graffiti-prevention measure, but it is different in scope and substance and neither duplicates nor contradicts the statute. (4 C.4th 902.) Nor does the ordinance enter an area fully occupied by the statute. Express preemptive intent was stated in the original act but not in the 1988 act. Hence, express preemptive intent is absent. (4 C.4th 903.)

(d) Implied preemption is also absent. Under P.C. 594.5, aerosol paint legislation is generally nonpreemptive. Hence, both in 1981 and 1988, the Legislature knew it was obligated to take affirmative steps if it intended to preempt; it did so in 1981, but not in 1988. (4 C.4th 904.) Moreover, the statute does not exclusively cover the field, nor does it partially cover the field in preclusive terms, regardless of whether the subject matter is specified as graffiti prevention or as regulation of the retail display of aerosol paint. (4 C.4th 904, 905.)

One justice dissented, arguing that the uncodified preemption provision of the 1981 act was unaffected by the 1988 amendment of P.C. 594.1. (4 C.4th 907, 908.) (See 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1034; on vandalism and graffiti generally, see 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Property, §244 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See O'Connell v. Stockton (2007) 41 C.4th 1061, 1072, 63 C.R.3d 67, 162 P.3d 583 [disapproving Horton v. Oakland (2000) 82 C.A.4th 580, 98 C.R.2d 371, text, p. 559; state's comprehensive regulation of drug offenses as a whole impliedly preempted city ordinance providing for forfeiture of vehicles used in acquiring controlled substances, and Vehicle Code provision expressly preempted ordinance providing for forfeiture of vehicles used to solicit prostitution].

16 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

2. Where State Legislates on Same Subject.

c. Local Regulations Held Valid.

4. Activity on State-Owned Land.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 991

[§ 991] Activity on State-Owned Land.

In Board of Trustees v. Los Angeles (1975) 49 C.A.3d 45, 122 C.R. 361, plaintiff, the board of trustees of a state university, owned a parcel of real property in Los Angeles adjoining the campus, which it leased to the general public for shows, fairs, and similar purposes. It leased the property for 16 days to the M Circus, and M failed to comply with the Los Angeles regulatory ordinance requiring a permit. Plaintiff board contended that the university property was in effect a state enclave in which the state was immune from local regulations (as the federal government is immune from state regulations in its enclaves; see supra, §27). Held, the ordinance was validly applied to the activity involved.

(a) Although the governmental-proprietary activity distinction has been abrogated in tort liability cases (see 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §210 et seq.), it should be applied in the field of local regulation, so as to limit the immunity of the state to situations in which the state is acting in a governmental capacity. (49 C.A.3d 49.) In the instant case, the leasing of the land is for revenue purposes alone; the activities conducted by the lessees have no relation to the governmental function of the university. (49 C.A.3d 50.)

(b) State laws on construction of school buildings, the board's statutory power to adopt rules, land regulations for the government of state colleges, and similar statutes, do not amount to preemption of the field, so as to nullify local regulation of circuses and other exhibitions in the interests of safety and health. (49 C.A.3d 51.) (See Malibu v. Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy (2002) 98 C.A.4th 1379, 1384, 119 C.R.2d 777 [commercial use of land in conservancy was subject to local zoning regulation because Conservancy Act specifically provides that Act is "complement" to exercise of local police power].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

17 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

2. Where State Legislates on Same Subject.

d. Local Regulations Held Void.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 992

[§ 992] Local Regulations Held Void.

The following are illustrative of areas held preempted by state law:

(1) Alcoholic Beverages. (See Mussalli v. Glendale (1988) 205 C.A.3d 524, 527, 252 C.R. 299 [ordinance prohibiting sale of alcoholic beverages at automobile service stations conflicted with Cal. Const., Art. XX, §22, giving state exclusive power to regulate liquor sales, and B. & P.C. 23790, exempting premises with liquor licenses from zoning ordinances prohibiting sales]; People v. Ramirez (1994) 25 C.A.4th Supp. 1, 3, 30 C.R.2d 626 [Cal. Const., Art. XX, §22, giving state exclusive power to regulate possession of alcoholic beverages, preempts ordinance prohibiting possession of alcoholic beverages in public buildings and parks]; 65 A.L.R.4th 555 [zoning regulation of intoxicating liquor as preempted by state law].)

(2) Court Fees. (See Hogoboom v. Superior Court (1996) 51 C.A.4th 653, 668, 59 C.R.2d 254 [local court rule authorizing mediation fee in family law and domestic violence matters was preempted by state statutory scheme limiting allowable charges in conciliation court].)

(3) Criminal Activities. (See People v. Villarino (1955) 134 C.A.2d Supp. 893, 899, 286 P.2d 86 [ordinance prohibiting use of or addiction to narcotics]; Abbott v. Los Angeles (1960) 53 C.2d 674, 681, 3 C.R. 158, 349 P.2d 974 [state criminal registration law precludes local ordinance requiring registration of criminals generally]; Younger v. Berkeley City Council (1975) 45 C.A.3d 825, 831, 119 C.R. 830 [control over state criminal offender records]; Doe v. San Francisco (1982) 136 C.A.3d 509, 513, 515, 517, 518, 186 C.R. 380 [municipal ordinance banning possession of handguns]; Gates v. Municipal Court (1982) 135 C.A.3d 309, 320, 185 C.R. 330 [ordinance regulating sexual conduct]; Ventura v. San Jose (1984) 151 C.A.3d 1076, 1078, 199 C.R. 216 [municipal ordinance banning sale of fireworks; subject is fully covered by state fireworks law]; A & B Cattle Co. v. Escondido (1987) 192 C.A.3d 1032, 1042, 238 C.R. 580 [state law banning manufacture and distribution of drug paraphernalia nullified local ordinance regulating sale of those materials]; 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Crimes, §55.)

(4) Elections. (See Younger v. Board of Supervisors (1979) 93 C.A.3d 864, 155 C.R. 921 [Govt.C. 24001, setting forth eligibility requirements for local office, expresses legislative intent to preempt local regulation aimed at adding further eligibility requirements]; Polis v. La Palma (1992) 10 C.A.4th 25, 12 C.R. 322 [state law preempts power of general law cities to impose term limits on local elected officials].)

(5) Housing Occupancy Standards. (See Briseno v. Santa Ana (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1378, 1382, 1383, 8 C.R.2d 486, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §826 [Uniform Housing Code preempts most local ordinances regarding occupancy standards].)

(6) Labor Relations. (See Chavez v. Sargent (1959) 52 C.2d 162, 177, 339 P.2d 801; Stephenson v. Palm Springs (1959) 52 C.2d 407, 340 P.2d 1009; 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §531 et seq.)

(7) Land Development. (See Glenbrook Dev. Co. v. Brea (1967) 253 C.A.2d 267, 278, 61 C.R. 189 [ordinance that subdivider obtain water from city conflicted with Water C. 31053 where county water district incurred bonded indebtedness to provide same service]; Wells Fargo Bank v. Woodside (1983) 33 C.3d 379, 384, 189 C.R. 41, 657 P.2d 819 [local subdivision ordinance requiring surviving widow to obtain local approval for division of land resulting from setting apart to her of probate homestead was preempted by state probate homestead law]; L.I.F.E. Committee v. Lodi (1989) 213 C.A.3d 1139, 1146, 262 C.R. 166 [initiative ordinance establishing "green belt" and requiring amendments to land use element of general plan to be approved in citywide election conflicted with state annexation law]; Los Angeles Lincoln Place Investors, Ltd. v. Los Angeles (1997) 54 C.A.4th 53, 64, 62 C.R.2d 600 [ordinance that sought to restrain landowners from obtaining demolition permits by requiring future land use approvals and by imposing penalties for lack of approval was preempted by Ellis Act (Govt.C. 7060 et seq.).]

(8) Licensed Trades and Professions. (See Agnew v. Los Angeles (1952) 110 C.A.2d 612, 615, 243 P.2d 73, infra, §996 [local fee and bond for electrical contractors was void]; Robillwayne Corp. v. Los Angeles (1966) 241 C.A.2d 57, 62, 50 C.R. 1 [local ordinance licensing fire insurance adjusters conflicted with B. & P.C. 7520 et seq.]; Verner, Hilby & Dunn v. Monte Sereno (1966) 245 C.A.2d 29, 34, 53 C.R. 592 [local ordinance regulating civil engineers and surveyors conflicted with B. & P.C. 6700 et seq.].)

(9) Lien Priority. (See Isaac v. Los Angeles (1998) 66 C.A.4th 586, 600, 77 C.R.2d 752 [uniformity in lien priority on real property is essential, making it matter of statewide concern].)

(10) Mobilehome Residency Regulations. (See Karrin v. Ocean-Aire Mobile Home Estates (1991) 1 C.A.4th 1066, 1071, 2 C.R.2d 581 [C.C. 798.31, prohibiting fees other than rent, utilities, and charges for services rendered, preempts ordinance permitting capital improvement assessment fee for repaving roads in mobilehome park]; Mobilepark West Homeowners Assn. v. Escondido Mobilepark West (1995) 35 C.A.4th 32, 45, 41 C.R.2d 393 [C.C. 798.17, exempting certain mobilehome leases from local rent control, preempts city ordinance imposing requirements for exempt status].)

(11) Pawnbroker Regulations. (See Malish v. San Diego (2000) 84 C.A.4th 725, 734, 737, 101 C.R.2d 18 [while several ordinances regulating pawnbrokers were valid, others were preempted, including those that authorized denial or revocation of local permit based on violation not showing pattern of misconduct, as required by state regulatory law, and that set holding requirements other than those set forth in state law].)

(12) Public Safety Officers. (See Jackson v. Los Angeles (2003) 111 C.A.4th 899, 906, 4 C.R.3d 325 [statutory limitations period stated for bringing disciplinary action against officer prevails over limitations period stated in city charter].)

(13) Public Utilities. (See California Water & Tel. Co. v. Los Angeles (1967) 253 C.A.2d 16, 28, 61 C.R. 618 [ordinance regulating investor-owned water utilities conflicted with Public Utilities Act]; San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Carlsbad (1998) 64 C.A.4th 785, 802, 75 C.R.2d 534 [city's floodplain ordinance, which placed conditions on exercise of utility's right to dredge and dispose of dredging spoils, went beyond city's police power into field fully occupied by PUC].)

(14) Remediation of Hazardous Substance Contamination. (See Lodi v. Randtron (2004) 118 C.A.4th 337, 345, 13 C.R.3d 107 [administrative abatement order issued pursuant to city ordinance directing defendant to clean up site was preempted by state Hazardous Substance Account Act; city is site listed by Department of Toxic Substances Control for which state has exclusive jurisdiction over all remedial response actions].)

(15) Rent Control. (See Tri County Apartment Assn. v. Mountain View (1987) 196 C.A.3d 1283, 1298, 242 C.R. 438, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §573 [ordinance restricting effective date of rent increases was preempted by state landlord-tenant law].)

(16) Sewage and Waste Disposal. (See Del Norte Disposal v. Department of Corrections (1994) 26 C.A.4th 1009, 1013, 1015, 31 C.R.2d 746 [ordinances giving solid waste disposal company exclusive franchise over state prison site conflicted with state's sovereign right to maintain its own buildings; rejecting argument that California Integrated Waste Management Act (Pub.Res.C. 40000, 40050 et seq.) authorized local regulation of waste disposal at state facilities]; Laidlaw Waste Systems v. Bay Cities Services (1996) 43 C.A.4th 630, 635, 638, 50 C.R.2d 824 [following Del Norte; school districts, as state agencies, were immune from local regulations granting exclusive franchise for hauling trash; immunity was not waived by Pub.Res.C. 40059]; Rodeo Sanitary Dist. v. Board of Supervisors (1999) 71 C.A.4th 1443, 1446, 1450, 84 C.R.2d 601 [sanitary districts are creatures of state law and county has no power to regulate collection and disposal of garbage within their boundaries; Integrated Waste Management Act did not alter districts' authority]; Home Gardens Sanitary Dist. v. Corona (2002) 96 C.A.4th 87, 91, 116 C.R.2d 638 [following Rodeo; even though area of sanitary district had been annexed by general-law city, district still had exclusive authority under state law to provide sewer service to property within its territorial boundaries].)

(17) State Employees. (See In re Means (1939) 14 C.2d 254, 258, 93 P.2d 105 [municipal regulation of state civil service employees]; Bowen v. Los Angeles (1952) 39 C.2d 714, 715, 249 P.2d 285 [oath for teachers].)

(18) Taxation. (See Bame v. Del Mar (2001) 86 C.A.4th 1346, 1355, 104 C.R.2d 183 [distinguishing Board of Trustees v. Los Angeles (1975) 49 C.A.3d 45, 122 C.R. 361, supra, §991; city may not impose admissions tax on entities that contract with state agricultural district to operate product exhibitions and shows; state agricultural district has broad purpose to promote California industries and products, and its sovereign immunity extends to private entities contracting with it to operate consumer product exhibitions and shows].)

(19) Timber Harvesting. (See Westhaven Community Dev. Council v. Humboldt (1998) 61 C.A.4th 365, 371, 71 C.R.2d 536 [distinguishing Big Creek Lumber Co. v. San Mateo (1995) 31 C.A.4th 418, 37 C.R.2d 159, supra, §986; county zoning ordinance requiring conditional use permit prior to harvesting timber was preempted by Forest Practice Act as applied to land area of three or more acres].)

(20) Tobacco Smoking. (See Lab.C. 6404.5 [specifically preempting local regulation of smoking in workplace].)

(21) Towing Fees. (See People v. PKS (1994) 26 C.A.4th 400, 406, 31 C.R.2d 543 [Veh.C. 22658(i), establishing standard for determining whether towing charge is excessive, preempts ordinance establishing conflicting standard].)

(22) Traffic. (See Barajas v. Anaheim (1993) 15 C.A.4th 1808, 1811, 1814, 1817, 19 C.R.2d 764 [Veh.C. 22455, regulating vending from vehicles in residential districts, preempts ordinance banning vending from vehicles parked on public streets].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Criminal Activities. See O'Connell v. Stockton (2007) 41 C.4th 1061, 1072, 63 C.R.3d 67, 162 P.3d 583 [comprehensive regulation of drug offenses as whole by California Uniform Controlled Substances Act impliedly preempted city ordinance providing for forfeiture of vehicles used in acquiring controlled substances; provision allowing forfeiture of vehicles used to solicit prostitution was expressly preempted by state law providing for local adoption of pilot program that would declare motor vehicle used to solicit prostitution as nuisance, and providing for abatement of nuisance, but not forfeiture]; 33 A.L.R.6th 293 [Preemptive Effect of Uniform Controlled Substances Act upon Local Ordinances].

(4a) (New) Firearm Regulations. See Fiscal v. San Francisco (2008) 158 C.A.4th 895, 906, 911, 70 C.R.3d 324 [ordinance prohibiting virtually all possession of handguns by city residents and banning, without exception, sale, manufacture, transfer, or distribution of firearms and ammunition was preempted by state law].(10) Mobilehome Residency Regulations. See Santa Cruz v. Waterhouse (2005) 127 C.A.4th 1483, 1492, 26 C.R.3d 543 [Mobilehome Parks Act, Health & Saf.C. 18300 et seq., preempts county ordinance restricting height of mobilehomes].

(11a) (New) Predatory Lending Practices. See American Financial Services Assn. v. Oakland (2005) 34 C.4th 1239, 1252, 23 C.R.3d 453, 104 P.3d 813 [state law seeking to combat predatory practices in home mortgage lending preempted city ordinance with same goal despite absence of preemption language in state statute; state law is comprehensive, regulation of mortgage lenders has historically occurred at state level, and uniform regulation throughout state is necessary].(15a) (New) Scrap Metal Regulations. See Tosi v. Fresno (2008) 161 C.A.4th 799, 804, 806, 74 C.R.3d 727 [purchase and sale of scrap metal is comprehensively regulated by state law; hence, ordinances that were more restrictive than state law regarding record keeping and cash transactions were preempted].

(16) Sewage and Waste Disposal. See County Sanitation Dist. No. 2 of Los Angeles v. Kern (2005) 127 C.A.4th 1544, 1619, 1622, 27 C.R.3d 28 [statute prohibiting local agencies from imposing tax, fee, or other charge for use of streets or highways "other than a permit fee for extra legal loads" preempted part of county fee used to mitigate impact to county infrastructure caused by transportation of legal loads of biosolids].

18 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

a. Constitutional Provisions and Theory.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 993

[§ 993] Constitutional Provisions and Theory.

(1) Charter Cities. The California Constitution provides that a city, or city and county, may adopt a charter giving it the power to "make and enforce all ordinances and regulations in respect to municipal affairs, subject only to restrictions and limitations provided in their several charters and in respect to other matters they shall be subject to general laws." (Cal. Const., Art. XI, §§5(a), 6(b); see Cal. Const., Art. XI, §5(b) [authorizing cities to adopt charter provisions covering city police, subgovernment, city elections, city officers and employees].)

Under this theory of "municipal home rule," municipalities have supreme authority in the field of "municipal affairs," i.e., matters of internal or local concern, free from interference by the Legislature. (See Butterworth v. Boyd (1938) 12 C.2d 140, 146, 82 P.2d 434; Bishop v. San Jose (1969) 1 C.3d 56, 61, 81 C.R. 465, 460 P.2d 137, infra, §996; Sonoma County Organization of Public Employees v. Sonoma (1979) 23 C.3d 296, 314, 152 C.R. 903, 591 P.2d 1; Fresno v. Pinedale County Water Dist. (1986) 184 C.A.3d 840, 844, 845, 229 C.R. 275, citing the text; Johnson v. Bradley (1992) 4 C.4th 389, 397, 14 C.R.2d 470, 841 P.2d 990, infra, §998 [partial public funding of city political campaigns]; Cawdrey v. Redondo Beach (1993) 15 C.A.4th 1212, 19 C.R.2d 179, infra, §999 [term limits for city council members]; Rider v. San Diego (1998) 18 C.4th 1035, 1054, 77 C.R.2d 189, 959 P.2d 347 [Joint Exercise of Powers Act (Govt.C. 6500 et seq.), by allowing joint powers agency to issue bonds without complying with city charter's two-thirds vote requirement, does not violate "home rule" doctrine]; 68 Cal. L. Rev. 829 [Sonoma]; 7 Hastings Const. L. Q. 643 [General Laws and Municipal Affairs]; 16 U.S.F. L. Rev. 603 [Charter City Financing in California].)

The municipal affairs doctrine merely allows an area in which the local government may freely operate, subject to basic constitutional limitations. Thus, in Wilson v. Los Angeles Bd. of Civil Service Commrs. (1960) 54 C.2d 61, 4 C.R. 489, 351 P.2d 761, defendant asserted complete power to disqualify an applicant for municipal employment, on the ground that this employment is a matter of local concern. The court said: "[W]e are referred to no case in which it is suggested that where a matter is of local concern only, the authorities may administer such matters in an arbitrary and capricious manner. We are bound by those decisions of the United States Supreme Court which impose the requirements of due process on all governmental action, including the determination of loyalty as a qualification for municipal employment." (54 C.2d 65.) (See Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Assn. v. San Diego (2004) 120 C.A.4th 374, 385, 394, 15 C.R.3d 457, quoting the text [city proposition requiring new or increased general tax to be approved by two-thirds majority vote conflicted with Cal. Const., Art. XIII C, §2(b), requiring majority vote].)

(2) Charter Counties. The constitutional provision relating to charter counties (Cal. Const., Art. XI, §4) contains no general reservation of local autonomy. A charter county possesses only those powers specifically enumerated in the Constitution. (Cawdrey v. Redondo Beach, supra, 15 C.A.4th 1221; see Dibb v. San Diego (1994) 8 C.4th 1200, 36 C.R.2d 55, 884 P.2d 1003 [under Cal. Const., Art. XI, §§3(a), 4(e), 4(h), charter county has authority to create citizens' law enforcement review board and to confer on board power to issue subpoenas]; Giles v. Horn (2002) 100 C.A.4th 206, 222, 123 C.R.2d 735 [county charter provisions requiring economy and efficiency determinations prior to contracting out case management functions under welfare-to-work program superseded state law allowing contracting out]; People v. Orange (2003) 106 C.A.4th 914, 922, 931, 131 C.R.2d 274 [county charter that, with one exception, incorporates general state law to govern county operations does not violate Cal. Const., Art. XI, §4, and is valid].)

(3) City Charter. The charter is the "constitution" of a municipality; and ordinances, whether adopted by the city council or by the initiative process, are invalid to the extent that they conflict with governing charter provisions. (Brown v. Berkeley (1976) 57 C.A.3d 223, 231, 129 C.R. 1.)

In Domar Elec. v. Los Angeles (1994) 9 C.4th 161, 36 C.R.2d 521, 885 P.2d 934, defendant city's charter provided that, with certain exceptions, a public contract bid must be let to the lowest and best responsible bidder. However, under an executive order, defendant's Board of Public Works adopted an outreach program, requiring that all bidders make an equal effort to utilize minority-owned businesses (MBE), women-owned businesses (WBE), and other business enterprises (OBE). One of the provisions of the program was that all bidders had to show that they had made a good faith effort to comply. Plaintiff was the lowest bidder on a project, but did not get the bid because it did not file a timely response showing that it had in good faith complied with the outreach program. The trial judge denied plaintiff's petition for mandamus. The Court of Appeal reversed, holding that the requirement that the bid comply with the outreach program was contrary to defendant's charter. Held, judgment of the Court of Appeal reversed.

(a) The charter does not specifically authorize defendant to create an outreach program. However, "[t]he charter operates not as a grant of power, but as an instrument of limitation and restriction on the exercise of power over all municipal affairs which the city is assumed to possess; and the enumeration of powers does not constitute an exclusion or limitation." (9 C.4th 170, quoting Grass Valley v. Walkinshaw (1949) 34 C.2d 595, 212 P.2d 894, 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §310.) Unless there are clear limitations and restrictions in the charter, which may not be implied, the city has all powers over municipal affairs, including the awarding of public contracts. "[T]he mere failure of the City's charter to expressly grant the power to require bidders to conduct subcontractor outreach does not render the outreach program void." (9 C.4th 171.)

(b) The charter lists certain exceptions to the requirement that the bid be awarded to the lowest and best bidder, such as allowing a preference for local bidders and excluding bidders who do business in South Africa. To determine whether this list was meant to be exclusive, the purpose of competitive bidding, which is to prevent corruption and favoritism while ensuring that the lowest bid is accepted, must be looked at. When this is done, it is seen that there is no conflict between the outreach program, which increases competition, and the bidding process. (9 C.4th 173.)

(c) Plaintiff argued that the outreach program, instead of opening the competitive bidding process to everyone, had the effect of stifling competition and simply substituting the more expensive MBEs and WBEs for the existing parties. However, plaintiff offered no evidence to this effect. The board concluded that the program would open the process, ensuring the lowest possible bid, and the board's conclusion is subject to deference, even though there is no evidence to support it. Moreover, even though awarding the contract may not save money in this case, the board is entitled to conclude that in the long run the outreach program will do so. (9 C.4th 174.)

(d) The outreach program poses none of the evils that plaintiff identifies. The program does not require a bidder to contract with a particular business. It does not compel bidders to set aside a percentage of a contract to MBEs or WBEs. And, although a participation level of one percent is normal, a bidder gets no advantage based on whether he does or does not meet this level. "Hence, mindful as we must be of the principle that a charter must not be given such a construction as to defeat the objectives of competitive bidding ... , we conclude that the outreach program is not void under the charter. By working to ensure that bids for municipal projects reflect the lowest prices practicable, the program is fully compatible with the charter requirement that contracts be awarded to the lowest and best regular responsible bidders." (9 C.4th 175.)

(e) Because defendant may require bidders to conduct the outreach program without violating the charter, it follows that the board may reject bids that do not comply. If bidders had the option to disregard the program, because the board could take no action to enforce it, the program itself would be undermined. (9 C.4th 175.) The board's rejection of plaintiff's bid is consistent with the principle that bidding requirements must be strictly adhered to in order to avoid any potential for abuse in the competitive bidding process. (9 C.4th 175.)

(f) Plaintiff argued that the charter's enumeration of various exceptions to the rule that the bid go to the lowest and best bidder was meant to be exclusive. However, all of the exceptions are, in effect, anticompetitive. For example, the provisions giving preference to local bidders, requiring domestic goods, and disqualifying those who do business with South Africa, all have the effect of limiting the eligible bidders and are anticompetitive in this respect. "That the charter expressly authorizes the City and its contracting agencies to consider these anticompetitive factors during the bid process (pursuant to lawfully enacted ordinances) does not logically lead to the conclusion that bid requirements intended to stimulate and promote competition may not be considered." (9 C.4th 176.)

One justice dissented. (9 C.4th 179.) (See 23 Pepperdine L. Rev. 378 [Domar]; on California constitutional provision prohibiting affirmative action by public entities, and statute permitting outreach programs, see supra, §967.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

19 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

b. Unlawful Surrender of Control.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 994

[§ 994] Unlawful Surrender of Control.

In County Mobilehome Positive Action Committee v. San Diego (1998) 62 C.A.4th 727, 73 C.R.2d 409, plaintiff, an association of mobilehome owners and renters of spaces at mobilehome parks, challenged the constitutionality of a county ordinance imposing a moratorium on the enactment of rent control legislation for 15 years, pursuant to an accord reached between defendants, the county and an association of mobilehome park owners. The accord created a 15-year lease to be offered to renters by defendant association members, containing certain rent stabilization and related measures conditioned on defendant county refraining from enacting rent control legislation affecting defendant association members who signed the accord. Held, summary judgment for defendants reversed. The ordinance is facially unconstitutional and the accord is invalid to that extent. (62 C.A.4th 741.)

(a) "[O]ne legislative body cannot restrict the powers of its successors by enacting legislation which is purported to be nonrepealable." (62 C.A.4th 734.) Further, in contractually agreeing not to enact rent control legislation for 15 years, the county would be exposed to potential breach of contract damages if the accord were breached. (62 C.A.4th 735.)

(b) As stated in Avco Community Developers v. South Coast Regional Com. (1976) 17 C.3d 785, 800, 132 C.R. 386, 553 P.2d 546, "the government may not contract away its right to exercise the police power in the future." (62 C.A.4th 736.) This rule voids contracts that surrender or bargain away a municipality's control of a properly municipal function. (62 C.A.4th 736.)

(c) As stated in Mounts v. Uyeda (1991) 227 C.A.3d 111, 122, 277 C.R. 730, the test for facial unconstitutionality of a statute or ordinance is whether "its provisions inevitably pose a present total and fatal conflict with applicable constitutional prohibitions." (62 C.A.4th 740.) Cal. Const., Art. XI, §7, provides that a county "may make and enforce within its limits all local, police, sanitary, and other ordinances and regulations not in conflict with general laws." Here, the ordinance seeks to delay for 15 years any discretionary compliance with those obligations that might be warranted in the coming years. (62 C.A.4th 740.) (Cf. Santa Margarita Area Residents Together v. San Luis Obispo County Bd. of Supervisors (2000) 84 C.A.4th 221, 232, 100 C.R.2d 740, infra, §1020 [agreement under Govt.C. 65865 between developer and county that would freeze zoning on parcel for 5 years during development of major real estate project in accordance with general plan was not unconstitutional surrender of county's right to exercise its police power in future].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 108 Holdings, Ltd. v. Rohnert Park (2006) 136 C.A.4th 186, 195, 38 C.R.3d 589 [distinguishing County Mobilehome Positive Action Committee v. San Diego (1998) 62 C.A.4th 727, 73 C.R.2d 409, text, p. 570; in entering into settlement agreement and stipulated judgment, city did not unlawfully surrender its police power; city retained power to alter or amend general plan as future circumstances might require]; Trancas Property Owners Assn. v. Malibu (2006) 138 C.A.4th 172, 181, 41 C.R.3d 200 [settlement agreement between developer and city that exempted developer from density requirements and from future zoning or other ordinances that would prohibit construction of residences shown in final map was unlawful surrender of city's zoning authority]; Cotta v. San Francisco (2007) 157 C.A.4th 1550, 1561, 69 C.R.3d 612 [following County Mobilehome Positive Action Committee, supra; resolutions providing incentives for using clean air vehicles for taxis were clearly experimental regulatory acts adopted pursuant to city's police power; even if resolution that failed to reserve authority to change incentives formed contract, it would be unenforceable because city could not contract away police power over taxicab industry].

20 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

c. Determination of Issue.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 995

[§ 995] In General.

(1) Difficulty of Determination. The cases have not developed a formula or test for determining whether a particular subject is a municipal affair, over which the municipality has full authority (infra, §997), or is a matter of "statewide" or "general" concern as to which the legislative authority is paramount (infra, §996.) (See Bishop v. San Jose (1969) 1 C.3d 56, 62, 81 C.R. 465, 460 P.2d 137, infra, §996; Smith v. Riverside (1973) 34 C.A.3d 529, 534, 110 C.R. 67; Fresno v. Pinedale County Water Dist. (1986) 184 C.A.3d 840, 845, 229 C.R. 275; California Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. Los Angeles (1991) 54 C.3d 1, 5, 283 C.R. 569, 812 P.2d 916, infra, §1000.)

An instructive analysis appears, however, in the borderline case of Perez v. San Jose (1951) 107 C.A.2d 562, 237 P.2d 548. The city of San Jose and the state made an agreement for the improvement of a street within the city, part of the state highway, by a central dividing strip with electrical traffic signals and a central highway lighting system, for which the city was to pay a part of the cost. Held, city tax funds, which may be expended only for municipal purposes, could be used. Although highways are projects of the state and not municipal affairs, the improvement of a city street or state highway within its borders is a city affair. "San Jose and its inhabitants receive a special benefit, as compared with the rest of the state, in the improvement of The Alameda within the city limits. It facilitates local as well as through traffic. The lighting, the signals, and the general safety advantages of the improvement are for the benefit of the local citizens as well as others. There could be no possible question that this improvement on any other city street would be a municipal purpose. The fact that this city street is also a state highway makes it no less a city street and makes its improvement no less a matter of city concern." (107 C.A.2d 569.)

In Baggett v. Gates (1982) 32 C.3d 128, 136, 185 C.R. 232, 649 P.2d 874, the court held that the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act (supra, §960) is a matter of statewide concern.

(a) The court will accord great weight to the Legislature's evaluation of this question, and the Legislature has expressly declared that "the right and protections provided ... constitute a matter of statewide concern." (Govt.C. 3301.) Also, the Legislature has set forth findings underlying that conclusion; effective law enforcement depends on maintenance of stable employer-employee relations between public safety employees and their employers, wherever situated within the state. (Govt.C. 3301.) (32 C.3d 136, 137.)

(b) The act does not impinge on the plenary authority of cities to provide in their charters for appointment, compensation, and removal of officers. The interference is minimal, and in Professional Fire Fighters v. Los Angeles (1963) 60 C.2d 276, 32 C.R. 830, 384 P.2d 158, infra, §1000, the court rejected the notion that an intrusion on matters connected with public employment is necessarily an intrusion on "municipal affairs." (32 C.3d 138.) As in Professional Fire Fighters, "the total effect of the legislation is not to deprive local governments of the right to manage and control their police departments but to secure basic rights and protections to a segment of public employees who were thought unable to secure them for themselves." (32 C.3d 140.) (See Los Angeles County Safety Police Assn. v. Los Angeles (1987) 192 C.A.3d 1378, 1385, 237 C.R. 920; Runyan v. Ellis (1995) 40 C.A.4th 961, 967, 47 C.R.2d 356 [Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act, under which officer is entitled to administrative appeal when punitive action is taken, does not conflict with "home rule" provision of Art. XI, §5].)

(2) Public Contracts. The Public Contract Code "is the basis of contracts between most public entities in this state and their contractors and subcontractors. With regard to charter cities, this code applies in the absence of an express exemption or a city charter provision or ordinance that conflicts with the relevant provisions of this code." (Pub.Contr.C. 1100.7; see Domar Elec. v. Los Angeles (1995) 41 C.A.4th 810, 820, 822, 48 C.R.2d 822, supra, §993 [Pub.Contr.C. 2000, permitting local agencies to require that bidders on public contracts meet goals for participation by minorities and women, is concerned with statewide issue of discrimination; thus, charter city's outreach program for public contract bidding was not concerned solely with "municipal affair" of competitive bidding and was not exempt from compliance with Pub.Contr.C. 2000]; on government contracts generally, see 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §976 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

21 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

c. Determination of Issue.

2. Consideration of Purpose.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 996

[§ 996] Consideration of Purpose.

(1) Legislative Purpose. Although the legislative purpose is entitled to great weight, the issue is one for judicial determination. "[T]he fact, standing alone, that the Legislature has attempted to deal with a particular subject on a statewide basis is not determinative of the issue as between state and municipal affairs, nor does it impair the constitutional authority of a home rule city or county to enact and enforce its own regulations to the exclusion of general laws if the subject is held by the courts to be a municipal affair rather than of statewide concern; stated otherwise, the Legislature is empowered neither to determine what constitutes a municipal affair nor to change such an affair into a matter of statewide concern." (Bishop v. San Jose (1969) 1 C.3d 56, 63, 81 C.R. 465, 460 P.2d 137; see footnote 6, disapproving contrary statements in Redwood City v. Moore (1965) 231 C.A.2d 563, 580, 42 C.R. 72, and In re Hubbard (1964) 62 C.2d 119, 127, 41 C.R. 393, 396 P.2d 809.)

However, a legislative determination not to impose a limitation of a general law on charter cities is effective. (See Rees v. Layton (1970) 6 C.A.3d 815, 821, 86 C.R. 268; Fresno v. Pinedale County Water Dist. (1986) 184 C.A.3d 840, 846, 847, 229 C.R. 275 [Health and Safety Code recognizes need of local government to exercise control over solid waste collection services within its boundaries].)

(2) Purpose of Local Regulation. The purpose of the local regulation may be determinative. Thus, in Agnew v. Los Angeles (1952) 110 C.A.2d 612, 243 P.2d 73, Los Angeles sought to impose a $ 100 fee on electrical contractors, and a $ 1,000 surety bond before a permit would be issued to install wiring. Held, the regulation was void. "[T]he state ... has adopted a broad and comprehensive plan for licensing contractors throughout the state, for examination as to their qualifications and fitness to engage in their various activities, for licensing only those who prove themselves qualified by satisfactorily passing examinations, and for punishing those who prove themselves incompetent or unfaithful to the trust imposed in them. ... The state license implies permission to the licensee to conduct his business at any place in the state, and this permission should not be circumscribed by local authorities." (110 C.A.2d 617.) (See Lynch v. Los Angeles (1952) 114 C.A.2d 115, 117, 249 P.2d 856 [following Agnew]; In re Groves (1960) 54 C.2d 154, 156, 4 C.R. 844, 351 P.2d 1028 [$ 100 yearly fee for operation of ice cream plant was valid as license fee for revenue only]; Agnew v. Los Angeles (1961) 190 C.A.2d 820, 828, 12 C.R. 507 [following Groves; amended ordinance was valid].)

In Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. San Francisco (1959) 51 C.2d 766, 771, 336 P.2d 514, the court cautioned that "the constitutional concept of municipal affairs is not a fixed or static quantity. It changes with the changing conditions upon which it is to operate. What may at one time have been a matter of local concern may at a later time become a matter of state concern controlled by the general laws of the state."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

22 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

d. What Are Municipal Affairs.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 997

[§ 997] In General.

The following are illustrations of matters held to be municipal affairs:

(1) Bidding Procedures for Work in City. (See Piledrivers' Local Union v. Santa Monica (1984) 151 C.A.3d 509, 511, 198 C.R. 731; R & A Vending Services v. Los Angeles (1985) 172 C.A.3d 1188, 1191, 218 C.R. 667; MCM Const. v. San Francisco (1998) 66 C.A.4th 359, 372, 78 C.R.2d 44 [city had power to impose requirements "above and beyond" Subletting and Subcontracting Fair Practices Act].)

(2) Contracting. (See First Street Plaza Partners v. Los Angeles (1998) 65 C.A.4th 650, 661, 76 C.R.2d 626 [manner in which city contracts is "municipal affair" that can be controlled by terms of charter].)

(3) Juvenile Crime Prevention. (See Harrahill v. Monrovia (2002) 104 C.A.4th 761, 764, 770, 128 C.R.2d 552 [ordinance prohibiting school age children from being in public places during particular hours when school is in session was valid juvenile crime prevention law, and not truancy law, which would have been preempted by state law].)

(4) Local Public Employees. (See Butterworth v. Boyd (1938) 12 C.2d 140, 148, 82 P.2d 434 [health service system]; Bellus v. Eureka (1968) 69 C.2d 336, 345, 71 C.R. 135, 444 P.2d 711 [employee pension plan adopting part of State Pension Act is not subject to all of Act's provisions]; Bishop v. San Jose (1969) 1 C.3d 56, 64, 81 C.R. 465, 460 P.2d 137, supra, §996 [wages of city employees were not controlled by state law requiring "prevailing wages" for contracted public work]; Ector v. Torrance (1973) 10 C.3d 129, 133, 109 C.R. 849, 514 P.2d 433 [qualification for city employment, including residence requirement]; Sonoma County Organization of Public Employees v. Sonoma (1979) 23 C.3d 296, 317, 152 C.R. 903, 591 P.2d 1 [determination of wages paid to employees]; Riverside v. Superior Court (2003) 30 C.4th 278, 285, 291, 132 C.R.2d 713, 66 P.3d 718 [statute requiring counties to submit to binding arbitration certain economic issues, including compensation, that arise during negotiations with unions representing public safety officers violated both Cal. Const., Art. XI, §11(b), as unlawful delegation of county affairs to private body, and Cal. Const., Art. XI, §1(b), as unlawful delegation of county's authority to set compensation of its employees]; 68 Cal. L. Rev. 829 [Sonoma].)

(5) Local Revenue and Taxation. (See Glendale v. Trondsen (1957) 48 C.2d 93, 98, 308 P.2d 1 [levy and collection of taxes for revenue]; In re Groves (1960) 54 C.2d 154, 156, 4 C.R. 844, 351 P.2d 1028 [license fee for revenue purposes was valid]; Fisher v. Alameda (1993) 20 C.A.4th 120, 124, 130, 24 C.R.2d 384 [city's real estate transfer tax conflicted with Govt.C. 53725(a), restricting imposition of ad valorem, transaction, or sales tax on sale of real property (see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §§131, 135); however, subject of statute is not of statewide concern (infra, §1000), and thus conflicting tax was municipal affair]; Community Memorial Hosp. of San Buena Ventura v. Ventura (1996) 50 C.A.4th 199, 207, 56 C.R.2d 732 [county hospital's competition with private hospitals for paying medical patients to help defray costs of treating indigents is within county's police power].)

(6) Local Utilities. (See Mefford v. Tulare (1951) 102 C.A.2d 919, 924, 228 P.2d 847 [ordinance regulating furnishing and installation of sewer and water facilities by subdividers of land within city]; Stagg v. Municipal Court (1969) 2 C.A.3d 318, 320, 82 C.R. 578 [regulation of municipal airport]; Smith v. Riverside (1973) 34 C.A.3d 529, 534, 110 C.R. 67 [contracting for construction of extension of water and electric systems]; 41 A.L.R.3d 384 [community television].)

(7) Municipal Elections. (See Rees v. Layton (1970) 6 C.A.3d 815, 820, 86 C.R. 268; Johnson v. Bradley (1992) 4 C.4th 389, 401, 14 C.R.2d 470, 841 P.2d 990, infra, §998; Traders Sports v. San Leandro (2001) 93 C.A.4th 37, 46, 112 C.R.2d 677 [following Johnson; number of votes required to put local tax measure on ballot is municipal affair].)

(8) Parking. (See Sipperly v. San Diego Yellow Cabs (1949) 89 C.A.2d 645, 651, 201 P.2d 543.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Local Public Employees. See Curcini v. Alameda (2008) 164 C.A.4th 629, 640, 643, 645, 79 C.R.3d 383 [Labor Code statutes regulating overtime, meals, and rest breaks did not apply to charter county; those statutes address matters of employee "compensation," which is within charter county's exclusive constitutional purview]; Dimon v. Los Angeles (2008) 166 C.A.4th 1276, 1279, 1283, 83 C.R.3d 576 [following Curcini regarding meal periods].

23 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

d. What Are Municipal Affairs.

2. Financing of Local Political Campaigns.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 998

[§ 998] Financing of Local Political Campaigns.

Johnson v. Bradley (1992) 4 C.4th 389, 14 C.R.2d 470, 841 P.2d 990, deals with Proposition 73, a 1988 statewide initiative, which added Chapter 5 to the Political Reform Act of 1974 (Govt.C. 81000 et seq., supra, §271 et seq.). Article 3 imposed restrictions on contributions to and by candidates and political committees or parties. Two years later the voters of Los Angeles amended the city charter by adopting Measure H, a comprehensive campaign, election, and ethics reform plan, that, unlike Proposition 73, imposed spending limitations. To comply with Buckley v. Valeo (1976) 424 U.S. 1, 96 S.Ct. 612, 46 L.Ed.2d 659, supra, §256, Measure H, as codified in §313 of the city charter, provided for partial public funding of city political campaigns, and, correspondingly, spending limits on candidates who accept public funds. Petitioners, including sponsors of Proposition 73, brought an original mandamus proceeding in the Supreme Court to invalidate and enjoin enforcement of §313. The Court of Appeal denied relief, concluding that the charter city's decision to provide its own public funds to finance city political campaigns was a municipal affair. Held, judgment of Court of Appeal affirmed.

(a) Govt.C. 85300, in Proposition 73, states: "No public officer shall expend and no candidate shall accept any public moneys for the purpose of seeking elective office." Petitioners contend that Govt.C. 85300 prohibits the use of public money to fund political campaigns in local as well as statewide elections. Their major premise, that the integrity of the electoral process, at both the state and local level, is a statewide concern, is sound. (4 C.4th 409.)

(b) The question remains, however, whether Govt.C. 85300 is "reasonably related and narrowly tailored to resolution of that statewide concern." (4 C.4th 409.) Petitioners cite nothing to support the proposition that public funding of political campaigns advances in any way the goal of enhancing the integrity of the electoral process. "In fact, the opposite appears to be true. As the high court observed in Buckley v. Valeo, ... concerning the federal 'matching funds' program for Presidential candidates, 'It cannot be gainsaid that public financing as a means of eliminating improper influence of large private contributions furthers a significant governmental interest. ... In addition, the limits on contributions necessarily increase the burden of fundraising, and Congress properly regarded public financing as an appropriate means of relieving major-party Presidential candidates from the rigors of soliciting private contributions.' " (4 C.4th 410.)

(c) The drafters of the charter amendment provided for partial public financing of campaigns so that they could impose spending limitations consistently with Buckley v. Valeo. "It follows that, assuming spending limitations may enhance the integrity of the electoral process, a ban on public funding would actually frustrate achievement of that goal." (4 C.4th 411.)

(d) Govt.C. 85300 "is not reasonably related to the statewide concern of enhancing the integrity of the electoral process. Having reached this conclusion, we need not address whether the statute is also narrowly tailored to avoid unnecessary incursion into legitimate areas of local concern." (4 C.4th 411.)

One justice filed a concurring opinion disagreeing with the reasoning of the majority (4 C.4th 411), and another justice, concurring and dissenting at length, asserted that the majority's "advisory opinion" deals with a state initiative measure "that has been declared essentially a dead letter on federal constitutional grounds by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals." (4 C.4th 414.) (See 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 653.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Govt.C. 85300 was repealed in 2008.

24 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

d. What Are Municipal Affairs.

3. Term Limits for Elected Officials.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 999

[§ 999] Term Limits for Elected Officials.

In Cawdrey v. Redondo Beach (1993) 15 C.A.4th 1212, 19 C.R.2d 179, defendant city amended its charter by adding a section limiting the number of terms city council members and the mayor could serve to no more than two terms, whether consecutive or not. Plaintiff, seeking reelection to a third term on the city council, petitioned for mandamus and injunctive relief when defendant city clerk refused to accept the nomination papers. The trial court denied the petition. Held, affirmed.

(a) In Younger v. Board of Supervisors (1979) 93 C.A.3d 864, 155 C.R. 921, a term limit provision of a county charter was held unconstitutional; but no cases have been found dealing with the power of cities to impose term limits on elected officials. (15 C.A.4th 1218.)

(b) Johnson v. Bradley (1992) 4 C.4th 389, 14 C.R.2d 470, 841 P.2d 990, supra, §998, and California Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. Los Angeles (1991) 54 C.3d 1, 283 C.R. 569, 812 P.2d 916, infra, §1000, explore the breadth of Cal. Const., Art. XI, §5(a), and set forth a framework for ascertaining whether a given provision is within the plenary powers granted charter cities. (15 C.A.4th 1219.)

(c) There is a fundamental distinction between charter counties and charter cities. (1) The constitutional provision relating to charter counties (Cal. Const., Art. XI, §4) contains no general reservation of local autonomy, and no grant of plenary authority over local election measures. A charter county possesses only those powers specifically enumerated in the Constitution. (15 C.A.4th 1221, 1222, discussing Younger.) (2) A city charter is not a grant of powers; it is an instrument that accepts the privilege granted by the Constitution of complete autonomous rule with respect to municipal affairs, and which otherwise serves merely to specify the limitations and restrictions on the exercise of the powers so granted and accepted. Hence, those powers not expressly forbidden may be exercised. (15 C.A.4th 1221.)

(d) Term limits are not of statewide concern. The fact that this charter provision conflicts with the state statutory scheme governing local elections (15 C.A.4th 1223, 1224) is not determinative of the issue as between state and municipal affairs. The inquiry concerning statewide concern focuses not on the legislative body's intent, but on the identification of a convincing basis for legislative action originating in extramunicipal concerns, one justifying legislative supersession based on sensible, pragmatic considerations. (15 C.A.4th 1226, citing Johnson v. Bradley.)

(e) The charter provision regulates only the number of terms a candidate may serve as city council member or mayor. It does not preclude plaintiff, a former city council member, from seeking election to other city offices, including that of mayor; and city voters retain the right to vote for any qualified candidates. (15 C.A.4th 1229.) On balance, therefore, the interests of the city in incumbency reform outweigh any injury to incumbent officeholders and those who would vote for them. (15 C.A.4th 1231.) (On term limits generally, see supra, §§268, 269.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

25 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

e. Matters of Statewide Concern.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1000

[§ 1000] In General.

If the matter is one of general or statewide concern, the Legislature has paramount authority. The following are illustrations:

(1) Annexation of Territory by City. (See Ferrini v. San Luis Obispo (1983) 150 C.A.3d 239, 246, 197 C.R. 694.)

(2) Assessment of Public Property. A city cannot levy a special assessment on county property for a local improvement such as a parking district; i.e., creation of a parking district is a municipal affair, but assessment of the county property publicly used is a matter of statewide concern. (Santa Barbara v. Santa Barbara (1976) 59 C.A.3d 364, 370, 371, 130 C.R. 615.)

(3) Cable Television. (See Cox Cable San Diego v. San Diego (1987) 188 C.A.3d 952, 965, 966, 233 C.R. 735; 41 A.L.R.3d 384 [community antenna television service].)

(4) Charter Amendment Procedures. (See District Election of Supervisors Committee for 5% v. O'Connor (1978) 78 C.A.3d 261, 272, 274, 144 C.R. 442; Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Assn. v. San Diego (2004) 120 C.A.4th 374, 387, 394, 15 C.R.3d 457 [following O'Connor; city propositions requiring two-thirds majority for certain charter amendments were preempted by Cal. Const., Art. XI, §3(a)].)

(5) Criminal Records. (See Younger v. Berkeley City Council (1975) 45 C.A.3d 825, 830, 119 C.R. 830; Rivero v. Superior Court (1997) 54 C.A.4th 1048, 1059, 63 C.R.2d 213 [district attorney's criminal investigation files].)

(6) Franchise for Telephone or Power Service Lines. The authority to grant a franchise to engage in the telephone business is in the state; i.e., the business of supplying the people with telephone service is a matter of statewide concern. (Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Los Angeles (1955) 44 C.2d 272, 279, 282 P.2d 36; Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. San Francisco (1959) 51 C.2d 766, 774, 776, 336 P.2d 514 [requirement of municipal franchise for maintenance of poles, wires, and other equipment in city streets was invalid].) The same reasoning applies to power lines. (Modesto Irr. Dist. v. Modesto (1962) 210 C.A.2d 652, 654, 27 C.R. 90.)

(7) Government Subsidized Rental Housing Units. (See Bruce v. Alameda (1985) 166 C.A.3d 18, 21, 212 C.R. 304.)

(8) Horse Racing. (See Desert Turf Club v. Board of Supervisors of Riverside (1956) 141 C.A.2d 446, 450, 296 P.2d 882 [county cannot, in guise of zoning ordinance, wholly exclude track from county].)

(9) Intercity Sewage System. Ordinarily, treatment and disposal of city sewage, and sewage bonds, are municipal affairs. (See supra, §997.) But where the sewage system transcends the boundaries of the city, affects navigable waters or tidelands, or otherwise touches public health generally, the system becomes a matter of statewide concern and is subject to regulation under the general laws. (Santa Clara v. Von Raesfeld (1970) 3 C.3d 239, 246, 90 C.R. 8, 474 P.2d 976 [revenue bonds ordered issued under state law, not in accord with conflicting charter provisions].)

(10) Labor Relations Affecting Municipal Employees. In Professional Fire Fighters v. Los Angeles (1963) 60 C.2d 276, 32 C.R. 830, 384 P.2d 158, defendant city contended that its regulations concerning dealings with members of the fire department prevailed over the Labor Code provisions recognizing the right of municipal employees, including fire fighters, to organize or join labor unions (Lab. C. 1960 et seq.). Held, the legislative object was to create uniform fair labor practices throughout the state, and "[l]abor relations are of the same statewide concern as workmen's compensation, liability of municipalities for tort, perfecting and filing of claims, and the requirement to subscribe to loyalty oaths." (60 C.2d 295.)

(11) Licensed Trades or Professions. Where the state has provided a comprehensive scheme for examining and licensing members of a particular trade or profession, municipalities may not impose additional qualifications before issuing licenses to exercise the trade or profession within the city. (Horwith v. Fresno (1946) 74 C.A.2d 443, 447, 168 P.2d 767 [electrical contractors]; San Francisco v. Boss (1948) 83 C.A.2d 445, 446, 189 P.2d 32 [painting contractors]; Agnew v. Los Angeles (1952) 110 C.A.2d 612, 617, 243 P.2d 73, supra, §996 [electrical contractors]; Baron v. Los Angeles (1970) 2 C.3d 535, 540, 541, 86 C.R. 673, 469 P.2d 353, 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §357 [ordinance regulating local lobbying cannot apply to acts of attorney constituting practice of law].)

(12) Milk Industry. (See Dairy Belle Farms v. Brock (1950) 97 C.A.2d 146, 154, 217 P.2d 704 [state milk control law, regulating milk prices, prevailed over the municipal power to let purchase contracts]; 14 A.L.R.2d 103 [requirements on outside producers of milk to be sold in city].)

(13) Psychiatric Treatment. (See Northern Calif. Psychiatric Soc. v. Berkeley (1986) 178 C.A.3d 90, 102, 106, 223 C.R. 609, citing the text [city ordinance prohibiting electroconvulsive therapy].)

(14) Statutory Liability. Where liability is imposed by a state statute, or, as in the case of damage to property by a public improvement, by the constitutional provision on eminent domain (infra, §1112), enforcement is a matter for statutory regulation and cannot be validly affected by local procedural restrictions. (Wilson v. Beville (1957) 47 C.2d 852, 859, 306 P.2d 789.)

(15) Tax on Financial Corporations. In California Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. Los Angeles (1991) 54 C.3d 1, 283 C.R. 569, 812 P.2d 916, defendant city imposed an annual license tax on most businesses within its municipal boundaries. It attempted to collect the tax from plaintiff financial corporation despite the provision in Rev.C. 23182 that a state income tax on financial corporations was in lieu of all other taxes and licenses (see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §337). Defendant argued that its tax was a local revenue measure qualified as a "municipal affair," and therefore immune from state legislative interference by virtue of Cal. Const., Art. XI, §5(a). Held, the tax was invalid.

(a) "Although municipal taxation is a 'municipal affair' ... in that it is a necessary and appropriate power of municipal government, aspects of local taxation may under some circumstances acquire a 'supramunicipal' dimension, transforming an otherwise intramural affair into a matter of statewide concern warranting legislative attention." (54 C.3d 7.)

(b) "In the event of a true conflict between a state statute reasonably tailored to the resolution of a subject of statewide concern and a charter city tax measure, the latter ceases to be a 'municipal affair' to the extent of the conflict and must yield." (54 C.3d 7.)

(c) Under the circumstances of this case, "the trial court correctly concluded that the aggregate intrastate tax burden on financial corporations--including local taxes such as the City's business license tax--is a subject of statewide concern." (54 C.3d 7.) (See 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 838.)

(16) Veterans. (See Cunningham v. Hart (1947) 80 C.A.2d 902, 907, 183 P.2d 75 [state statute governing reinstatement to position in public employment].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(5a) (New) Firearm Regulation. See Fiscal v. San Francisco (2008) 158 C.A.4th 895, 918, 70 C.R.3d 324 [creation of uniform statutory scheme to regulate handgun possession, licensing, and sales is matter of statewide concern].(11)
Licensed Trades or Professions.

Baron case:

Cross-Reference: 1 Cal. Proc. (5th), Attorneys, §341.

26 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

e. Matters of Statewide Concern.

2. District Formation and Dissolution.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1001

[§ 1001] District Formation and Dissolution.

In Las Tunas Beach Geologic Hazard Abatement Dist. v. Superior Court (1995) 38 C.A.4th 1002, 45 C.R.2d 529, defendant city formed plaintiff geologic hazard abatement district (GHAD). The formation resolution contained a condition permitting defendant to dissolve the district if it found that the district's plan was not feasible. Defendant attempted to do this, but plaintiff filed an action for declaratory relief to prevent dissolution. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment was denied, and plaintiff sought mandamus. Held, mandamus granted, directing the trial judge to vacate the order denying summary judgment, and to enjoin defendant from taking any action to dissolve plaintiff except in compliance with the Cortese-Knox Local Government Reorganization Act of 1985 (now the Cortese-Knox-Hertzberg Local Government Reorganization Act of 2000) (Govt.C. 56000 et seq.).

(a) Cortese-Knox generally preempts local law regarding the formation of districts. However, it does not preempt more specific state laws regarding various types of districts. The formation of GHADs is governed by Pub.Res.C. 26500 et seq. Other special statutes, for example, authorize mosquito abatement districts and the formation of sanitary districts. These special statutes govern over the more general Cortese-Knox Act. (38 C.A.4th 1009.)

(b) Although controlling the formation of GHADs, Pub.Res.C. 26500 is silent on their dissolution. In this event, Cortese-Knox, not common law, is turned to. "The City's reliance on these common law theories is misplaced. A GHAD is purely a creature of statute, unknown at common law. Further, Cortese-Knox expressly states it is 'the sole and exclusive authority and procedure' for changes of organization, including district dissolution. ... The Legislature thus has evidenced its intention that Cortese-Knox provide the exclusive method for such changes of organization. ... Therefore, the City's effort to enforce its home-grown formation condition pursuant to common law doctrines 'interferes with and frustrates state [dissolution] procedures and cannot be sustained.' " This conclusion that Cortese-Knox governs the dissolution, but not the formation, is consistent with other statutory schemes. (38 C.A.4th 1012.)

(c) The fact that plaintiff convinced defendant that it would abide by the condition reserving to defendant the right to order dissolution, did not estop plaintiff from asserting the invalidity of that condition. "[T]he comprehensiveness of the statutory scheme bars the City from invoking the equitable doctrine of estoppel to achieve dissolution of the District. ... The City could not disregard Cortese-Knox and purport to improvise its own dissolution procedure in the formation resolution. To allow the City to maintain it was induced by the proponents into adopting the resolution of formation in reliance on their representations the City would retain the power to order dissolution would wreak havoc with the statutory scheme, which prescribes the exclusive authority and procedure for dissolution." (38 C.A.4th 1014.)

(d) Defendant relied on the Validating Act, which allows 6 months to attack the formation of a public body, a condition not met here. This argument is also without merit. "The District is not challenging its own validity. Rather, it is the City which is now attacking the validity of the District by arguing the conditions of formation are not severable from the rest of the formation resolution and if the formation conditions are invalid so is the entire formation resolution. It is that challenge by the City to the validity of the formation of the District which is time-barred. Under the Validating Act, the City had six months to bring an action contesting the validity of the formation of the District. Having failed to bring such an action during that period, the City cannot now challenge the District's status as a legally organized entity." (38 C.A.4th 1015.)

(e) The summary judgment sought by plaintiff tried to enjoin defendant from taking any action to interfere with plaintiff's status or activities. This request is overbroad. Because Cortese-Knox provides a mechanism for dissolving GHADs, defendant cannot be prevented from relying on it. Although defendant is time-barred from attacking the validity of plaintiff's formation, it is not foreclosed from starting the Cortese-Knox procedure for dissolution. (38 C.A.4th 1016.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

27 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

e. Matters of Statewide Concern.

3. School System.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1002

[§ 1002] School System.

Education and public schools historically have been, and remain, matters of statewide rather than local concern. (California Teachers Assn. v. Hayes (1992) 5 C.A.4th 1513, 1522, 1524, 7 C.R.2d 699; see Govt.C. 53094 [regulating compliance with local zoning ordinances]; Whitmore v. Brown (1929) 207 C. 473, 480, 279 P. 447; Atherton v. Superior Court (1958) 159 C.A.2d 417, 421, 324 P.2d 328 [school site location; school district's determination supersedes local zoning ordinance].)

California Teachers Assn. involved an attack on the state's power to control funds allocated under Proposition 98. That initiative, adopted in 1988, added Cal. Const., Art. XVI, §8(b), setting a minimum level for "monies to be applied by the state for the support of school districts and community college districts." As part of its Proposition 98 funding, the Legislature included funds for the Child Care and Development Services Act (Educ.C. 8200 et seq.), which is under the general supervision of the Superintendent of Public Instruction. This was challenged by the California Teachers Association and others, who argued that only funds allocated to and administered by school districts satisfy Proposition 98. The trial court agreed and entered judgment for plaintiffs. Held, reversed.

(a) As a result of various events, including San Antonio Independent School Dist. v. Rodriguez (1973) 411 U.S. 1, 93 S.Ct. 1278, 36 L.Ed.2d 16, supra, §805, and Serrano v. Priest (1976) 18 C.3d 728, 135 C.R. 345, 557 P.2d 929, supra, §806, and the adoption of Proposition 13 (9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §125 et seq.), the state over the past 20 years has been forced to assume a greater share of responsibility for school financing. Proposition 98 was adopted against this background. (5 C.A.4th 1526, 1528.)

(b) Proposition 98 must be considered in light of other constitutional provisions, including those relating to school districts and their relationship to the state. (5 C.A.4th 1532.) Because "Proposition 98 did not alter the state's role in education, the Constitution continues to make education and the operation of the public schools a matter of statewide rather than local or municipal concern." (5 C.A.4th 1533.)

(c) Cal. Const., Art. XVI, §8(b), in establishing a minimum sum for "monies to be applied by the state," would appear to retain, rather than divest, the state of its authority over education funds. (5 C.A.4th 1533, 1534.)

(d) "Given plaintiffs' facial attack, it is enough to hold, as we do, that legislative programs which advance, and hence support, the educational mission of school districts and community college districts may constitutionally be included within the funding guarantee of Proposition 98." (5 C.A.4th 1534.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Cobb v. O'Connell (2005) 134 C.A.4th 91, 97, 36 C.R.3d 170 [statute allowing state temporarily to run city schools during fiscal crisis did not violate home rule provision; statute was not overbroad and did not conflict with charter provision regulating election of school board]; Mendoza v. California (2007) 149 C.A.4th 1034, 1056, 57 C.R.3d 505, Supp., supra, §983 [distinguishing Cobb; unique challenges facing school district did not justify constitutional violation].

28 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

3. Exclusive Power Over Municipal Affairs.

e. Matters of Statewide Concern.

4. Traffic.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1003

[§ 1003] Traffic.

Traffic, even within a city, is of statewide concern. (See Los Angeles Ry. Corp. v. Los Angeles (1940) 16 C.2d 779, 783, 108 P.2d 430 [municipal ordinance prohibiting one-man streetcar operation was void where it was contrary to valid Public Utilities Commission regulations]; Holman v. Viko (1958) 161 C.A.2d 87, 93, 326 P.2d 551 [Vehicle Code provisions on pedestrian crossing supersede local regulations except to extent authorized by Code]; People v. Moore (1964) 229 C.A.2d 221, 228, 40 C.R. 121 [ordinance requiring "Driver's Permit" to operate public transportation vehicle was invalid; statutes authorize only local licensing of vehicles, not drivers]; Union City v. Southern Pac. Co. (1968) 261 C.A.2d 277, 279, 67 C.R. 816 [railroad grade crossing]; Lafayette v. Contra Costa (1979) 91 C.A.3d 749, 755, 154 C.R. 374; Rumford v. Berkeley (1982) 31 C.3d 545, 553, 183 C.R. 73, 645 P.2d 124 [traffic barriers]; Barajas v. Anaheim (1993) 15 C.A.4th 1808, 1811, 1814, 1817, 19 C.R.2d 764 [Veh.C. 22455, regulating vending from vehicles in residential districts, preempts ordinance banning vending from vehicles parked on public streets]; Citizens Against Gated Enclaves v. Whitley Heights Civic Assn. (1994) 23 C.A.4th 812, 819, 822, 28 C.R.2d 451 [citing Lafayette; Veh.C. 21101.6 precluded homeowners association from erecting gates on streets in neighborhood to exclude public, because city had no authority to withdraw streets from public use]; 23 Santa Clara L. Rev. 331 [Rumford].)

Veh.C. 22508, authorizing local authorities to provide by ordinance for parking zones and meters, is not an abandonment of the field to local control; it is an occupation of the field by the state and a limited delegation to the local legislative body. Hence, a local initiative measure to repeal a parking meter ordinance was improper. (Mervynne v. Acker (1961) 189 C.A.2d 558, 561, 11 C.R. 340; see Los Angeles v. Alhambra (1980) 27 C.3d 184, 192, 165 C.R. 440, 612 P.2d 24 [parking meter regulation].)

The Legislature has authorized adopting local ordinances to regulate the closure of roads, under specified conditions. (See Veh.C. 21101; Hawaiian Gardens v. Long Beach (1998) 61 C.A.4th 1100, 1111, 72 C.R.2d 134 [city's proposed closure of road at border with other city for traffic control purposes was inconsistent with Veh.C. 21101(f), because it would have significant negative impact on residents of other city as well as on provision of emergency services]; Save the Sunset Strip Coalition v. West Hollywood (2001) 87 C.A.4th 1172, 1177, 105 C.R.2d 172 [Veh.C. 21101(a)(1) and 21101(f) are separate provisions; thus, city did not need to find that street was no longer needed for vehicular traffic before changing it to cul-de-sac where this change was consistent with general plan circulation element; distinguishing Hawaiian Gardens]; Citizens for Improved Access v. San Diego (2004) 118 C.A.4th 808, 814, 13 C.R.3d 259 [city had authority to close road based on legislative determination that it was no longer necessary for vehicular traffic].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

29 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

B. Exercise of Police Power by Local Subdivision.

4. Extraterritorial Municipal Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1004

[§ 1004] Extraterritorial Municipal Regulations.

(1) Local Inspection. Municipal inspection of food in the interest of health is a recognized exercise of local police power but ordinarily this regulation cannot be given an extraterritorial operation.

In Oakland v. Brock (1937) 8 C.2d 639, 67 P.2d 344, a city ordinance authorized municipal inspection of meat in slaughterhouses outside the city when the meat was sold inside. There already existed a comprehensive federal, state, or municipal inspection service covering the state, and no showing was made of its inadequacy to protect the health of the city. Held, the ordinance was void. Where necessary to protect its residents, the city might have authority to grant licenses conditioned on the right of inspection; but here there was merely the unauthorized attempt to impose an extraterritorial regulation without licensing, and with no showing of necessity. (8 C.2d 642.) The court also commented on the danger of "a race to claim fees for inspection" from outside establishments already subject to inspection under state law. (8 C.2d 643.)

(2) Prohibition of Outside Competition. Municipalities sometimes seek to prevent free competition from businesses having plants or establishments located outside the city limits. The attempt to do so by discriminatory license fees or taxes, i.e., the practical erection of a "tariff barrier," is sometimes upheld under the taxing power, the classification being deemed reasonable. (See 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §51.)

But the attempt wholly to exclude these businesses under the police power will fail. In LaFranchi v. Santa Rosa (1937) 8 C.2d 331, 65 P.2d 1301, an ordinance made it unlawful to distribute, within the city, milk that had been pasteurized outside. Petitioner's plant complied with all standards of the state Department of Agriculture; it was located in the same state inspection district; and city inspection of the plant would not unduly burden the inspector. Held, the ordinance was unconstitutional. Assuming that the municipality may impose higher standards than the state and zone plants within the city, this was not the purpose of the ordinance; and, although reasonable restrictions of distance for convenience of inspection may be justified, prohibition of the product of outside plants bears no reasonable relationship to a proper legislative object. (8 C.2d 338.) (See In re Lyons (1938) 27 C.A.2d 182, 186, 80 P.2d 745 [ordinance prohibiting bringing garbage into county was invalid]; 14 A.L.R.2d 103 [validity of ordinance imposing requirements on outside producers of milk to be sold in city].)

(3) Requiring County Contractors to Pay Compensation for Employees on Jury Duty. In Burns Int. Sec. Services

Corp. v. Los Angeles (2004) 123 C.A.4th 162, 180, 19 C.R.3d 776, the court held that a county ordinance requiring companies contracting with the county to offer up to 5 days' compensation to all full-time employees while serving on a jury was not invalid despite its extraterritorial effect. Private companies increasingly were reducing or eliminating paying employees' salaries while they served on juries, thus reducing the number of potential jurors because of financial hardship, and increasing the burden on the county and other employers who do make those payments. Here, defendant was acting as a market participant, not a regulator. (123 C.A.4th 178.) It was not seeking "to enlarge its powers or regulate outside its boundaries," or to force employers to change their behavior outside the county. Further, the remedies provided are effective only within the county's territorial boundaries. (123 C.A.4th 172.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) (New) Requiring City Contractor To Comply With Living Wage Ordinance. Although a municipal corporation generally has no extraterritorial power of regulation, it may exercise certain extraterritorial powers when necessary to the proper conduct of its own affairs. In Amaral v. Cintas Corp. No. 2 (2008) 163 C.A.4th 1157, 78 C.R.3d 572, the court held that application of a city's living wage ordinance to defendant, who contracted with the city to provide laundry services, but whose employees performed those services in other cities, was an appropriate exercise of the city's contracting power. The ordinance does not purport to regulate conduct outside the city's boundaries; rather, it specifies conduct it wants its contracting partners to follow. For constitutional purposes, it does not matter whether a contractor might have to perform the required conduct outside the city. (163 C.A.4th 1177.) Neither does it matter that the ordinance gives employees a private right of action against their contracting employer for a violation. The requirements of the living wage ordinance and its enforcement mechanisms reach outside the city's boundaries only to the extent that outside parties choose to contract with the city. The fact that some enforcement measures go beyond traditional contract remedies does not convert the city's exercise of its contracting power into a prohibited extraterritorial regulation. (163 C.A.4th 1178.)

30 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

1. In General.

a. Nature of Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1005

[§ 1005] Nature of Power.

Early cases upheld the validity of zoning laws as police power measures to promote safety, health, or order. The power to zone is not limited, however, to cases where a particular business or structure is dangerous and amounts to a nuisance. Zoning laws attempt to make an orderly distribution of activities throughout the community, with the resulting benefits of safety and convenience to those who live in purely residential districts. Thus, apartment houses, stores, hospitals, etc., may be zoned by a comprehensive ordinance. (Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co. (1926) 272 U.S. 365, 47 S.Ct. 114, 118, 71 L.Ed. 303, 310; see Miller v. Board of Public Works of Los Angeles (1925) 195 C. 477, 484, 234 P. 381; Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 307, 295 P. 14; Sunny Slope Water Co. v. Pasadena (1934) 1 C.2d 87, 92, 33 P.2d 672; Banville v. Los Angeles (1960) 180 C.A.2d 563, 570, 4 C.R. 458; Consolidated Rock Products Co. v. Los Angeles (1962) 57 C.2d 515, 521, 20 C.R. 638, 370 P.2d 342, infra, §1007.)

"It is well settled that zoning ordinances, when reasonable in object and not arbitrary in operation, constitute a justifiable exercise of police power, and that the establishment, as part of a comprehensive and systematic plan, of districts devoted to strictly private residences or single family dwellings, from which are excluded business or multiple dwelling structures, is a legitimate exercise of the police power." (Wilkins v. San Bernardino (1946) 29 C.2d 332, 337, 175 P.2d 542.) Thus, if "the validity of the legislative classification for zoning purposes be fairly debatable, the legislative judgment must be allowed to control." (Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., supra.) "The courts will, of course, inquire as to whether the scheme of classification and districting is arbitrary or unreasonable, but the decision of the zoning authorities as to matters of opinion and policy will not be set aside or disregarded by the courts unless the regulations have no reasonable relation to the public welfare or unless the physical facts show that there has been an unreasonable, oppressive, or unwarranted interference with property rights in the exercise of the police power." (Lockard v. Los Angeles (1949) 33 C.2d 453, 461, 202 P.2d 38.) (See Clemons v. Los Angeles (1950) 36 C.2d 95, 98, 103, 222 P.2d 439; Beverly Oil Co. v. Los Angeles (1953) 40 C.2d 552, 557, 254 P.2d 865; McCarthy v. Manhattan Beach (1953) 41 C.2d 879, 885, 264 P.2d 932; Minney v. Azusa (1958) 164 C.A.2d 12, 25, 330 P.2d 255; Ewing v. Carmel-By-The-Sea (1991) 234 C.A.3d 1579, 1586, 286 C.R. 382, infra, §1034; Placer Ranch Partners v. Placer (2001) 91 C.A.4th 1336, 1343, 111 C.R.2d 577 [1-mile buffer between landfill and residential development had reasonable relation to public welfare and was valid exercise of county's police powers].)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k. 228.2

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

31 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

1. In General.

b. Commentary and Practice Works.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1006

[§ 1006] Commentary and Practice Works.

The literature on zoning is voluminous, and much text and other commentary is available on all of its aspects.

(1) Texts and Practice Works. (See Anderson, American Law of Zoning; C.E.B., Zoning Practice; 83 Am. Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning; Cal. Civil Practice, 2 Real Property Litigation, §14:1 et seq. [text and forms for actions involving land use and zoning litigation]; 32 Proof of Facts 3d 531 [proof of bias or conflict of interest in zoning decision]; 41 Proof of Facts 3d 443 [proof of change in character of neighborhood sufficient to justify rezoning]; 91 Am. Jur. Trials 233 [right to cross-examine witnesses at zoning board of appeals hearings].)

(2) Law Reviews. (See 91 Harv. L. Rev. 1247 [Developments in Law--Zoning]; 108 Harv. L. Rev. 1127 [state-sponsored growth management as remedy for exclusionary zoning]; 89 Cal. L. Rev. 1847 [effect of Costa-Hawkins Act (C.C. 1954.50 et seq.), restricting local rent control, on local inclusionary zoning programs]; 31 Cal. Western L. Rev. 127 [arguing that nonzoning is best zoning]; 8 Ecology L. Q. 655 [agricultural districts and zoning]; 23 Hastings L. J. 1427 [zoning for population control]; 2 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1 [Symposium on Land Use Planning and Control]; 10 San Diego L. Rev. 887 [rural zoning]; 33 San Diego L. Rev. 291 [aesthetic regulation of architectural design of private single-family houses impinges on First Amendment right of expression, and thus must advance substantial governmental interest]; 38 San Diego L. Rev. 693 [Smart Growth and Other Infirmities of Land Use Controls]; 20 Santa Clara L. Rev. 285 [consistency doctrine]; 45 So. Cal. L. Rev. 335 [land use regulation in lieu of zoning]; 54 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1167 ["inclusionary zoning"--requiring developer of new housing units to set aside fraction for occupancy at reduced prices for moderate income and low income families]; 33 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 285 [Congress' attempts to rein in discriminatory state zoning practices]; 26 Stanf. L. Rev. 585 [Phased Zoning: Regulation of the Tempo and Sequence of Land Development]; 10 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1 [Land Use Planning]; 34 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 929 [regulating home-based voyeur websites through land use laws]; 21 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1432 [ordinance requiring developer to devote part of development to low income housing]; 10 U.S.F. L. Rev. 361 [judicial review of zoning agency decisions]; 13 U.S.F. L. Rev. 945 [proposed architectural controls in San Francisco neighborhoods].)

(3) American Law Reports. (See 21 A.L.R.3d 1222 [aesthetics]; 37 A.L.R.3d 1018 [rights as between landlord and tenant when zoning restricts contemplated use]; 41 A.L.R.3d 636 [zoning with compensation]; 48 A.L.R.3d 1210 [exclusionary zoning]; 48 A.L.R.3d 1303 [buffer provision as applicable to abutting land in adjoining municipality]; 58

A.L.R.3d 1241 [validity and construction of regulation as affected by division of lot by zone boundary lines]; 62 A.L.R.3d 880 [ordinance requiring developer to devote part of development to low and moderate income housing]; 63 A.L.R.3d 1184 [validity of ordinance deferring residential development until establishment of public services in area]; 70 A.L.R.3d 125 [creating special restrictions or conditions not applicable to other property similarly zoned]; 83 A.L.R.3d 1084 [zoning for senior citizens communities]; 84 A.L.R.3d 1187 [applicability of zoning regulation to nongovernmental lessee of Government-owned property]; 87 A.L.R.3d 1265 [applicability of zoning regulation to public utilities]; 92 A.L.R.3d 1073 [ban on construction until public facilities comply with specific standards]; 7 A.L.R.4th 732 [validity and construction of provisions of zoning statute or ordinance regarding protest by neighboring property owners]; 8 A.L.R.4th 1087 [standing of civic or property owners association to challenge zoning board decision]; 26 A.L.R.5th 736 [zoning authority as estopped from revoking legally issued building permit]; 63 A.L.R.5th 607 [zoning regulations on golf courses, swimming pools, tennis courts, or the like]; 103 A.L.R.5th 445 [zoning ordinances regulating display of noncommercial flags or banners].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Texts and Practice Works. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice.

(2) Law Reviews. See 118 Harv. L. Rev. 2291 [making regionalism work]; 35 Pepperdine L. Rev. 835 [agencies and zoning of public lands and seas]; 57 Stanf. L. Rev. 1 [Ordering (and Order in) the City]. (3) American Law Reports. See 22 A.L.R.6th 295 [inclusionary zoning ordinances and programs; superseding 62 A.L.R.3d 880, text, p. 588].

32 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

1. In General.

c. Prohibiting Removal of Natural Products.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1007

[§ 1007] Prohibiting Removal of Natural Products.

In Consolidated Rock Products Co. v. Los Angeles (1962) 57 C.2d 515, 20 C.R. 638, 370 P.2d 342, plaintiff owned a 348-acre alluvial cone of rock, sand, and gravel in Los Angeles. The area was zoned for agricultural and residential use. In this action to enjoin enforcement of the zoning ordinance, plaintiff contended that it was unconstitutional to wholly prohibit the use of the property for its primarily valuable purpose; and the trial judge found that its value for other permissible purposes was minimal. But defendant city showed that, despite safeguards, extraction of sand and gravel would create appreciable quantities of dust, which prevailing winds would carry to residences and sanitarium areas, causing personal injury and adversely affecting property values. Held, judgment for defendant affirmed.

"Too many cases have been decided upholding the constitutionality of comprehensive zoning ordinances prohibiting the removal of natural products from lands in certain zones for us now to accept at full value the suggestion that there is such an inherent difference in natural products of the property that in a case where reasonable minds may differ as to the necessity of such prohibition the same power to prohibit the extraction of natural products does not inhere in the legislative body as it has to prohibit uses of other sorts." (57 C.2d 529.) (See 50 Cal. L. Rev. 896 [criticizing decision]; 10 A.L.R.3d 1226 [regulating removal of oil and gas, minerals, soil, or other natural products within municipal limits]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, §8.42 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. On conservation element, see C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §2.20; on conservation easement, see C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §5.43.

33 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

1. In General.

d. Taking of Property.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1008

[§ 1008] Taking of Property.

In Southern Pac. Co. v. Los Angeles (1966) 242 C.A.2d 38, 51 C.R. 197, plaintiff applied for a permit to build a 31/2-acre warehouse in a proper zone--the major produce terminal. The city's master plan of community development, facing the continually increasing pressure of vehicles on an inadequate street system, called for widening highways, by an ordinance requiring dedication of a portion of the property for street widening, as a condition for issuing the permit. Held, the ordinance was constitutional and properly applied to plaintiff.

Bringle v. Board of Supervisors of Orange (1960) 54 C.2d 86, 4 C.R. 493, 351 P.2d 765, infra, §1055, is authority for dedicating part of a parcel as a condition of subdivision or zoning variance. Although in that case the property owner was seeking advantages, while here he merely sought to use property already zoned for the use, the distinction is not controlling. (242 C.A.2d 43.) A flexible police power may require the dedication of additional access when the need arises; the evidence showed that an enormous increase in traffic would result from operation of the new warehouse; and dedicating the small portion needed (less than one-fifth acre from a parcel of 50 acres) would work no undue hardship. (242 C.A.2d 48.) (See Sommers v. Los Angeles (1967) 254 C.A.2d 605, 613, 62 C.R. 523 [following Southern Pac. Co. and Bringle]; 20 Hastings L. J. 735; 4 San Diego L. Rev. 233.)

Southern Pac. Co., Bringle, and Sommers were distinguished in Mid-Way Cabinet Fixture Mfg. v. San Joaquin (1967) 257 C.A.2d 181, 65 C.R. 37. Petitioner, operating a cabinet shop with access to a highway, applied for a building permit to construct an addition and another building. The county imposed conditions calling for conveyance of some of his land for highway purposes, pursuant to its "Precise Plan." Held, the conditions were invalid. The new construction would not result in any traffic congestion, and the county was merely attempting to use its zoning plan as a device to avoid payment of compensation in eminent domain. (257 C.A.2d 189.)

In Rohn v. Visalia (1989) 214 C.A.3d 1463, 263 C.R. 319, plaintiffs owned property at the corner of an intersection that had been misaligned during the area's original development. Plaintiff's property had a single family house but was zoned for single or multifamily residences. They sought an amendment to the general plan to permit use of the property as professional offices, intending to convert the house to an office building. The city planning commission concluded that the proposed use would generate less traffic than would apartments, and the city council passed the requested amendment and approved the rezoning. However, plaintiffs' request for a building permit was approved on the condition that they dedicate 14% of their land for realignment of the misaligned intersection. Plaintiffs sought mandamus to compel the city to delete the condition, and the trial court granted the writ, finding that there was no reasonable relationship between the dedication and the proposed use. Held, affirmed.

(a) Govt.C. 65803 (infra, §1021) exempts charter cities from the prohibition of unreasonable conditional dedication in Govt.C. 65909 (infra, §1055). (214 C.A.3d 1469.) However, to avoid a taking that requires compensation, a dedication requirement must be reasonably related to the proposed use of the property. (214 C.A.3d 1470.)

(b) Here, the need for realignment was due to poor initial planning of the intersection, not to traffic problems arising from the proposed use; and substantial evidence supported the trial court's conclusion that there was no reasonable relationship between the required dedication and the proposed use. (214 C.A.3d 1474, 1475.) The city's action "is merely an attempt to 'disguise under the police power its actual exercise of the power of eminent domain.' " (214 C.A.3d 1476.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

34 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

1. In General.

e. Invalid Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1009

[§ 1009] Invalid Regulations.

(1) Discriminatory Zoning. The Planning and Zoning Law prohibits the following discriminatory acts in zoning:

(a) An action that denies residence, land ownership, tenancy, or other land use because of (1) race, sex, color, religion, ethnicity, national origin, ancestry, lawful occupation, familial status, disability, or age; (2) the method of financing of a residential development; or (3) the intended occupancy of a residential development by low, moderate, or middle income persons or families. (Govt.C. 65008(a).)

(b) An act that prohibits or discriminates against a residential development or emergency shelter because of (1) the method of financing; (2) the race, sex, color, religion, ethnicity, national origin, ancestry, lawful occupation, familial status, disability, or age of the intended occupants; (3) the intended occupancy by those with low, moderate, or middle incomes; (4) the consistency of a multifamily residential project with both the zoning ordinance and general plan as they existed when the application was deemed complete (Govt.C. 65008(b)); (5) federal or state assistance; or (6) the race, sex, color, religion, ethnicity, national origin, ancestry, lawful occupation, familial status, disability, or age, or the low, moderate, or middle income of the intended occupants of a development or shelter that receives federal or state assistance (Govt.C. 65008(d)). (See Govt.C. 65008(e) [preferential treatment to assisted projects permitted]; Govt.C. 65008(f) ["residential development"]; Edmonds v. Oxford House (1995) 514 U.S. 725, 115 S.Ct. 1776, 131 L.Ed.2d 801, infra, §1030 [group home for disabled individuals was not within Fair Housing Act's exemption for local zoning restrictions on number of persons who may inhabit dwelling unit]; 63 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1151 [Racial Diversity in Residential Communities: Societal Housing Patterns and a Proposal for a "Racial Inclusionary Ordinance"].)

(2) Restricting Use of Solar Energy Systems. The Solar Rights Act of 1978 (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §385) declares the state policy to promote and encourage the use of solar energy systems. Accordingly, cities and counties may not enact ordinances that have the effect of unreasonably restricting the installation and use of solar energy systems. Local requirements are limited to the standards and regulations necessary for the preservation or protection of the public health or safety. (Govt.C. 65850.5; see Health & Saf.C. 17959.1 [to same effect].)

(3) Other Restrictions. Zoning ordinances may be invalidated on a number of other grounds:

(a) Denial of equal protection by discrimination. (See infra, §1046 et seq.)

(b) Denial of due process by unreasonable retroactive zoning. (See infra, §1040.)

(c) Violation of right to privacy in home. (See Tom v. San Francisco (2004) 120 C.A.4th 674, 680, 16 C.R.3d 13, supra, §597 [ordinance that attempted to discourage conversion of rental housing into owner occupied housing by prohibiting tenants in common from making agreements giving them exclusive rights in individual units violated state privacy right]; infra, §1032.)

(d) Uncontrolled discretion or bias in agency. (See People v. Perez (1963) 214 C.A.2d Supp. 881, 886, 29 C.R. 781 [uncontrolled discretion in planning commission]; 75 Harv. L. Rev. 423 [voting council member with personal interest]; 10 A.L.R.3d 694 [disqualification of biased officer].)

(e) Matter of statewide concern. (See supra, §1000.)

(f) Invalid exclusionary zoning. (See infra, §1032.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Discriminatory Zoning. Govt.C. 65008, as amended in 2006, now prohibits discrimination on any basis listed in Govt.C. 12955(a) or (d) (see text, §947). With respect to familial status, the statute does not apply to housing for older persons or senior citizens. Govt.C. 65008 also now prohibits discrimination based on a person's or family's very low income.

35 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

a. In General.

1. Local Power and State Law.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1010

[§ 1010] Local Power and State Law.

Zoning is within the constitutional police power of a municipality and is normally accomplished by local ordinances. (See Cal. Const., Art. XI, §7, supra, §984; Scrutton v. Sacramento (1969) 275 C.A.2d 412, 417, 79 C.R. 872; DeVita v. Napa (1995) 9 C.4th 763, 772, 38 C.R.2d 699, 889 P.2d 1019, infra, §1017 [review of planning law]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §499 et seq.) Exercise of the power is, however, subject to the provisions of governing state law. (See Big Creek Lumber Co. v. San Mateo (1995) 31 C.A.4th 418, 423, 37 C.R.2d 159, supra, §986; Friends of Davis v. Davis (2000) 83 C.A.4th 1004, 1014, 100 C.R.2d 413 [state law does not require cities to have design review ordinances; thus, where city chooses to impose this level of review, it is for city to determine scope of review; city properly refused to use ordinance providing for review of siting, exterior appearance, and landscaping to exclude particular tenant from new development]; 26 Hastings Const. L. Q. 621 [California Counties: Second-Rate Localities or Ready-Made Regional Governments?]; 26 A.L.R.5th 736 [zoning authority as estopped from revoking legally issued building permit].)

The Planning and Zoning Law (Govt.C. 65000 et seq.) governs the adoption and contents of general and specific plans (infra, §1012 et seq.), and the organization and financing of city and county planning agencies, departments, and commissions (Govt.C. 65100 et seq.) The law specifies that there is in each city and county a "planning agency with the powers necessary to carry out the purposes" of the Planning and Zoning Law. The local legislative body must assign the functions of the planning agency to a "planning department, one or more planning commissions, administrative bodies or hearing officers, the legislative body itself, or any combination thereof, as it deems appropriate and necessary." In the absence of an assignment, the legislative body must carry out the functions of the planning agency. (Govt.C 65100.)

The planning agency prepares, reviews, revises, and implements the general plan, and performs other related functions. (Govt.C. 65103; see infra, §1012 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

36 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

a. In General.

2. Statutes of Limitation on Attack.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1011

[§ 1011] Statutes of Limitation on Attack.

Finding that actions challenging local governmental decisions under the Planning and Zoning Law contribute to the state housing crisis by delaying the completion of projects, the 1983 Legislature enacted Govt.C. 65009 to provide certainty for specified planning and zoning decisions, by requiring attacks on them to be initiated within designated time periods. (Govt.C. 65009.)

(1) Ninety-Day Statute. The general statute of limitations is 90 days after the decision, where the action or proceeding is brought to (a) challenge a decision adopting or amending a general or specific plan; (b) challenge a decision adopting or amending a zoning ordinance; (c) determine the reasonableness, legality, or validity of a decision adopting or amending a regulation attached to a specific plan; (d) challenge a decision adopting, amending, or modifying a development agreement; (e) challenge a decision on an application for a permit or variance under Govt.C. 65901 or Govt.C. 65903; or (f) where the action or proceeding concerns proceedings, acts, or determinations made prior to these decisions. (Govt.C. 65009(c).)

The statute has been applied in many cases. (See Beresford Neighborhood Assn. v. San Mateo (1989) 207 C.A.3d 1180, 1187, 255 C.R. 434 [under Govt.C. 65009(c), adoption, rather than introduction, of zoning amendment is "decision" commencing statutory period]; Garat v. Riverside (1991) 2 C.A.4th 259, 289, 290, 3 C.R.2d 504 [attack on adequacy of general plan must be brought within specified days of adoption or amendment of plan, and only those portions of plan that are affected by adoption or amendment are subject to challenge]; Freeman v. Beverly Hills (1994) 27 C.A.4th 892, 896, 897, 32 C.R.2d 731 [action for declaratory relief, damages, or inverse condemnation based on city's adoption of conditional-use permit procedure for drive-in restaurants was untimely; it was not commenced within prescribed number of days of adoption of interim procedure, and plaintiffs did not amend complaint after adoption of final ordinance]; Wagner v. South Pasadena (2000) 78 C.A.4th 943, 948, 93 C.R.2d 91 [service of writ petition under Govt.C. 65009(c) is complete on day clerk executes acknowledgement of receipt; service by mail does not extend 90-day period]; Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Assn. v. Los Angeles (2000) 79 C.A.4th 242, 247, 93 C.R.2d 742 [90-day limitations period applied to action claiming zoning ordinance violated constitutional spending limit]; Napa Citizens for Honest Government v. Napa County Bd. of Supervisors (2001) 91 C.A.4th 342, 388, 110 C.R.2d 579 [Govt.C. 65009(c) should not be interpreted as permitting attack on general plan 90 days after decision adopting or amending specific plan];

90-day period only attaches to decision under attack]; Save Our NTC v. San Diego (2003) 105 C.A.4th 285, 292, 129 C.R.2d 306 [where zoning ordinances would not take effect until certified by Coastal Commission, limitations period for challenging ordinances did not begin to run until city adopted modifications Commission required as condition of its approval]; Travis v. Santa Cruz (2004) 33 C.4th 757, 766, 16 C.R.3d 404, 94 P.3d 538 [action brought within 90 days of final administrative action on plaintiff's permit was timely under Govt.C. 65009(c); fact that plaintiff challenged permit conditions as invalid based on facially unconstitutional or preempted ordinance did not affect timeliness of action even though ordinance could have been facially attacked at earlier time].)

(2) One-Year Statute. There is a 1-year statute of limitations after the accrual of the cause of action if the action or proceeding meets both of the following requirements: (a) it is brought in support of the development of housing for persons of very low, low, moderate, or middle incomes (see Govt.C. 65915) and (b) it is brought with respect to an action pursuant to Govt.C. 65580 et seq. (housing elements), Govt.C. 65589.5 (local agency's disapproval of housing development project), Govt.C. 65863.6 (effect of zoning regulations on housing needs), Govt.C. 65915 (bonus for constructing units for persons of low or moderate incomes), Govt.C. 66474.2 (ordinances applicable in determining whether to approve tentative subdivision map), or Govt.C. 65913 et seq. (housing development approvals). (Govt.C. 65009(d).) A cause of action under Govt.C. 65009(d) accrues 60 days after the filing of notice with the city or clerk of the board of supervisors specifying the deficiencies of the general or special plan or zoning ordinance, or after the legislative body takes final action in response to the notice, whichever occurs first. (Govt.C. 65009(d).)

(3) Sixty-Day Statute. An action or proceeding brought to challenge the adequacy of a housing element must be brought within 60 days after the Department of Housing and Community Development reports its findings under Govt.C. 65585(h). (Govt.C. 65009(c)(2).)

(4) Effect of Expiration. After expiration of these statutes of limitation, all further actions or proceedings are barred. (Govt.C. 65009(e).) (On Govt.C. 65009(b), limiting issues that may be raised, see infra, §1047.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Govt.C. 65009 does not apply to an action challenging a local government decision based on events that occurred after that decision took place and, therefore, that could not have been brought during the statutory time limit. (Urban Habitat Program v. Pleasanton (2008) 164 C.A.4th 1561, 1577, 80 C.R.3d 300, 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, Supp., §23 [time limits of C.C.P. 338(a) applied to action alleging that, with passage of time, city's Housing Cap and Growth Management Ordinance now conflicted with city's obligations under state law to meet Regional Housing Needs Allocations; failure to comply with duties required by law was not "action" or "decision" under Govt.C. 65009].)

(1) Ninety-Day Statute. See Honig v. San Francisco Planning Dept. (2005) 127 C.A.4th 520, 527, 25 C.R.3d 649 [Govt.C. 65009 applied to petition challenging issuance of building permit issued in conjunction with zoning variance even though challenged Board of Appeals' decision did not originate with zoning board or zoning administrator as specified in Govt.C. 65003, where gravamen of petition was that variance was improperly granted]. (2) One-Year Statute. Govt.C. 65589.5, as amended in 2007, applies to both housing development projects and emergency shelters.

Although Govt.C. 65009(d) does not provide a time limit within which notice of a complaint regarding an erroneous decision must be given to a local agency, the general 90-day time limit of Govt.C. 65009(c) applies. The claim then accrues 60 days after the notice is given. (Urban Habitat Program v. Pleasanton, supra, 164 C.A.4th 1573, 1579 [action alleging that housing element adopted by city did not comply with state Housing Element Law challenged decision of local authority and was subject to Govt.C. 65009(d)].)

37 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

b. General Plan.

1. Nature and Scope.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1012

[§ 1012] Nature and Scope.

(1) Statutory Requirement. Each planning agency must prepare, and the legislative body of each county and city must adopt, a "comprehensive, long-term general plan for the physical development of the county or city, and of any land outside its boundaries which in the planning agency's judgment bears relation to its planning." (Govt.C. 65300; see Selby Realty Co. v. San Buenaventura (1973) 10 C.3d 110, 116, 109 C.R. 799, 514 P.2d 111; Friends of "B" Street v. Hayward (1980) 106 C.A.3d 988, 997, 165 C.R. 514; Neighborhood Action Group v. Calaveras (1984) 156 C.A.3d 1176, 1183, 203 C.R. 401; Garat v. Riverside (1991) 2 C.A.4th 259, 296, 297, 3 C.R.2d 504, infra, §1014 [there is no statutory requirement that general plan be organized or kept in particular format or location]; 31 Ecology L. Q. 117 [coordinating long-term land use and water planning].)

(2) Mandatory Elements. The general plan must consist of a statement of development policies including diagrams and text "setting forth objectives, principles, standards, and plan proposals." (Govt.C. 65302.) It must include the following elements:

(a) Land use element. (Govt.C. 65302(a).)

(b) Circulation element. (Govt.C. 65302(b)); see Concerned Citizens of Calaveras County v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 166 C.A.3d 90, 99, 212 C.R. 273 [correlation with land use element].)

(c) Housing element. (See infra, §1013.)

(d) Conservation element. (Govt.C. 65302(d).)

(e) Open-space element. (Govt.C. 65302(e); see Govt.C. 65560 et seq.)

(f) Noise element. (Govt.C. 65302(f)); see Guardians of Turlock's Integrity v. Turlock City Council (1983) 149 C.A.3d 584, 592, 197 C.R. 303.)

(g) Safety element. (Govt.C. 65302(g).)

(3) Required Findings for New-Housing Limitation. A mandatory plan element that limits the number of new housing units constructed annually must include findings that "justify reducing the housing opportunities of the region." These must include (a) a description of the local government's "appropriate share of the regional need for housing," (b) a description of specific housing programs and activities undertaken to fulfill the requirements of the housing element, (c) a description of how the restriction promotes public health, safety, and welfare, and (d) the fiscal and environmental resources available to the local jurisdiction. (Govt.C. 65302.8.) (See Ev.C. 669.5, 3 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §97 [shifting burden of proof in action challenging growth control ordinance]; Govt.C. 65863.6 [housing needs must be balanced against public service needs before growth control ordinance is adopted]; Building Industry Assn. v. Camarillo (1986) 41 C.3d 810, 226 C.R. 81, 718 P.2d 68, infra, §1027 [Ev.C. 669.5, but not Govt.C. 65862.6, is applicable to initiative measures].)

(4) Optional Subjects. "The general plan may include any other elements or address any other subjects, which, in the judgment of the legislative body, relate to the physical development of the county or city." (Govt.C. 65303.)

(5) Characteristics. Statutes deal with the following characteristics of the general plan:

(a) Accommodation of local conditions. Because of the diversity of the state's communities and its residents, the general plan requirements must be implemented in "ways that accommodate local conditions and circumstances, while meeting its minimum requirements." (Govt.C. 65300.7.)

(b) Consistency. (See infra, §1014.)

(c) Coordination. The Planning and Zoning law must provide an opportunity for local governments to coordinate their local land use planning process with their budget planning for federal and state program activities. (Govt.C. 65300.9.)

(d) Review by mandamus. The general plan and its parts, elements, and amendments are legislative acts reviewable by mandamus. (Govt.C. 65301.5; see infra, §1016.)

(e) Coordination with airport land use plan. The general plan and specific plans must be consistent with airport land use plans (Pub.Util.C. 21675, 21676.) (Govt.C. 65302.3; see California Aviation Council v. Ceres (1992) 9 C.A.4th 1384, 1388, 1395, 12 C.R.2d 163 [under Pub.Util.C. 21676(b), local agency decision overruling airport land use commission finding of inconsistency requires specific findings; declaration of general conclusion is insufficient]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §8.6 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Mandatory Elements. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §2.6 et seq.(5) Characteristics.

(e) Coordination with airport land use plan. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §6.67 et seq.

See Muzzy Ranch Co. v. Solano County Airport Land Use Com. (2008) 164 C.A.4th 1, 11, 78 C.R.3d 691 [requirement in Pub.Util.C. 21675(b) that Airport Land Use Compatibility Plan be "consistent with" safety and noise standards in Air Installation Compatible Use Zone (AICUZ) study prepared for military airport does not require precise conformity; standards in plans only need to be compatible, which means that land use plan must be at least as protective of airport operations as AICUZ].

38 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

b. General Plan.

2. Housing Element.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1013

[§ 1013] Housing Element.

The general plan must include a housing element as provided in Govt.C. 65580 et seq. (Govt.C. 65302(c)). This element includes identifying "existing and projected housing needs and a statement of goals, policies, quantified objectives, financial resources, and scheduled programs for the preservation, improvement, and development of housing." Further, the housing element must "identify adequate sites for housing, including rental housing, factory-built housing, and mobilehomes, and ... make adequate provision for the existing and projected needs of all economic segments of the community." (Govt.C. 65583.)

Many decisions have involved the housing element. (See Black Property Owners Assn. v. Berkeley (1994) 22 C.A.4th 974, 982, 28 C.R.2d 305 [city's update of housing element satisfied Govt.C. 65583 where it analyzed physical, economic, and governmental constraints faced by city in meeting housing goals; discussion of rent control repeal was not necessary as direct repeal was impossible and in city's view undesirable]; Hernandez v. Encinitas (1994) 28 C.A.4th 1048, 1059, 33 C.R.2d 875 [housing elements of city's general plan substantially complied with Govt.C. 65583(a)]; San Mateo County Coastal Landowners' Assn. v. San Mateo (1995) 38 C.A.4th 523, 542, 45 C.R.2d 117 [initiative measure did not conflict with state requirement that housing element be reviewed at least every 5 years]; Hoffmaster v. San Diego (1997) 55 C.A.4th 1098, 1117, 64 C.R.2d 684 [plan that failed to identify sites to meet needs of homeless violated Govt.C. 65583(c)(1)]; 10 Golden Gate L. Rev. 729; 39 Santa Clara L. Rev. 503 [strengthening California law to ensure adequate locations for affordable housing].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Govt.C. 65583, as amended in 2006 and 2007, further provides for identifying adequate sites for emergency shelters. (See Govt.C. 65582.1 [statutory incentives to facilitate and expedite construction of affordable housing]; 38 McGeorge L. Rev. 188 [2006 amendment of Govt.C. 65583].)

See Action Apartment Assn. v. Santa Monica (2008) 166 C.A.4th 456, 470, 82 C.R.3d 722 [city's affordable housing ordinance was not housing element, or amendment to housing element, subject to review by Department of Housing and Community Development].

39 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

b. General Plan.

3. Consistency Requirement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1014

[§ 1014] Consistency Requirement.

(1) In General. The general plan and its parts must be "an integrated, internally consistent and compatible statement of policies for the adopting agency." (Govt.C. 65300.5; see Karlson v. Camarillo (1980) 100 C.A.3d 789, 161 C.R. 260; deBottari v. Norco (1985) 171 C.A.3d 1204, 1210, 217 C.R. 790, infra, §1029 [referendum inconsistent with general plan is invalid]; Families Unafraid to Uphold Rural El Dorado County v. Board of Supervisors of El Dorado (1998) 62 C.A.4th 1332, 1336, 1341, 74 C.R.2d 1 [although given project need not be in perfect conformity with each and every general plan policy, it must be compatible with objectives, policies, general land uses, and programs specified in general plan; some general plans are more specific than others, leaving less room for discretion].)

"If a general plan is to fulfill its function as a 'constitution' guiding 'an effective planning process,' a general plan must be reasonably consistent and integrated on its face. A document that, on its face, displays substantial contradictions and inconsistencies cannot serve as an effective plan because those subject to the plan cannot tell what it says should happen or not happen. When the court rules a facially inconsistent plan unlawful and requires a local agency to adopt a consistent plan, the court is not evaluating the merits of the plan; rather, the court is simply directing the local agency to state with reasonable clarity what its plan is." (Concerned Citizens of Calaveras County v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 166 C.A.3d 90, 97, 212 C.R. 273.)

(2) Charter Cities. In Garat v. Riverside (1991) 2 C.A.4th 259, 3 C.R.2d 504, the court made the following comments:

(a) A charter city's zoning enactments need not be consistent with its general plan. Govt.C. 65860(a) (infra, §1021) imposes a general requirement of zoning and general plan consistency. (2 C.A.4th 281.) However, under Govt.C. 65803 (infra, §§1019, 1021), a charter city is exempt from this requirement unless it has adopted it by charter or ordinance. (2 C.A.4th 281, 284.)

(b) A charter city's general plan must be internally consistent. Under Govt.C. 65700(a), a charter city's general plan must contain the mandatory elements required by Govt.C. 65300 et seq. Govt.C. 65300 and 65700, construed together, require not only that a charter city's general plan have the mandatory elements of Govt.C. 65302, but also that these elements be internally consistent as required by Govt.C. 65300.5. (2 C.A.4th 285, 287.) (See Irvine v. Irvine Citizens Against Overdevelopment (1994) 25 C.A.4th 868, 875, 876, 879, 30 C.R.2d 797 [Govt.C. 65860(a) prohibition of inconsistent zoning ordinances applied to charter city that had enacted ordinance requiring zoning and general plan consistency; hence, proposed referendum inconsistent with general plan was properly declared invalid].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Federation of Hillside & Canyon Assn. v. Los Angeles (2004) 126 C.A.4th 1180, 1196, 24 C.R.3d 543 [city has broad discretion to weigh and balance competing interests in formulating development policies; there is no requirement that city or county limit population growth or provide traffic management measures to accommodate future population growth].

40 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

b. General Plan.

4. Adoption and Implementation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1015

[§ 1015] Adoption and Implementation.

(1) Adoption.

(a) During the preparation of the general plan, the planning agency must provide opportunities for the involvement of citizens, California Indian tribes, public agencies and utilities, and civic, education, and other community groups, through public hearings and other means. (Govt.C. 65351; see Govt.C. 65352.3 [requiring consultation with certain Indian tribes before adoption or amendment of plan].) The planning agency must refer the proposed action to specified entities. (Govt.C. 65352, 65919 et seq.) (On adoption or amendment of general plan as requiring compliance with California Environmental Quality Act, Pub.Res.C. 21000 et seq., see Santa Ana v. Garden Grove (1979) 100 C.A.3d 521, 526, 160 C.R. 907; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §831 et seq.)

(b) If there is a planning commission authorized to review and recommend action on the proposed general plan, the commission must hold at least one public hearing before approving a recommendation. (Govt.C. 65353.) The commission must make a written recommendation to the legislative body, based on a vote by a majority of the commission's total membership. (Govt.C. 65354.)

(c) The legislative body must hold at least one public hearing with notice pursuant to Govt.C. 65090, prior to adopting the general plan. (Govt.C. 65355.) Adoption requires the affirmative vote of not less than a majority of the legislative body's total membership. The legislative body may approve, modify, or disapprove the recommendation of the planning commission; but a modification not previously considered by the commission must first be referred to it for a report and recommendation. The commission's failure to report within 45 days after the reference, or within the time set by the legislative body, is deemed a recommendation for approval. (Govt.C. 65356.) (On amendment, see infra, §1017.)

(2) Implementation. When a plan, or a part of it, is adopted, the planning agency must investigate and make recommendations for its implementation to the legislative body, and report annually on the status of the plan and the progress of the implementation. (Govt.C. 65400.) All proposed public works, acquisitions and disposals of public property, and construction of public buildings must be submitted to the planning agency for its report on the conformity of the proposal to the general plan. (Govt.C. 65401, 65402.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Implementation. Govt.C. 65400, as amended in 2008, further requires that the housing element portion of the annual report includes a section describing the actions taken by local government towards completion of the programs and the status of compliance with the deadlines in the housing element. This report must be considered at an annual public meeting before the legislative body where members of the public are permitted to provide oral testimony and written comments.

41 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

b. General Plan.

5. Judicial Review.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1016

[§ 1016] Judicial Review.

(1) Actions Challenging Plan. Because a court action challenging a general plan may have a chilling effect on the completion of housing projects, Govt.C. 65750 et seq. "provide methods to expedite judicial review of challenges to a general plan and to insure that a court decision holding a general plan inadequate does not unnecessarily inhibit the provision of affordable housing." (Stats. 1982, Chap. 27, §2; see 14 Pacific L. J. 690.)

(a) Challenges to a general plan must be given preference over all other civil actions (Govt.C. 65752), and are subject to other provisions expediting resolution of the action. (See Govt.C. 65753 [failure to request trial or hearing within 90 days may lead to dismissal]; Govt.C. 65756 [experts, masters, etc., must report within 90 days]; Govt.C. 65758 [final judgment within 180 days of temporary relief].)

(b) If a challenge is sustained, and the court finds that the general plan or any of its mandatory elements are not in substantial compliance with Govt.C. 65300 et seq., the governing body must correct its deficiencies within 120 days, and local zoning ordinances must be brought into consistency with the amended general plan within 120 days thereafter. (Govt.C. 65754.)

(c) A court is prohibited from enjoining a housing development during the pendency of an action under Govt.C. 65754, or on entering a final judgment that the plan or an element of it does not conform to Govt.C. 65300 et seq., if the development meets specified conditions. (Govt.C. 65754.5; see Govt.C. 65760 [determination of housing development's effect on housing element].)

(d) An order entered pursuant to Govt.C. 65754 must include remedial provisions doing one or more of the following:

(1) Suspending the local government's authority to issue building permits, or a category of building permits, and related permits that are not essential to its continuing to function as an enforcement agency, its authority to grant zoning changes or variances, or its authority to grant subdivision map approvals. (Govt.C. 65755(a)(1), (a)(2), (a)(3).)

(2) Mandating its approval under specified circumstances of permits, final subdivision maps, or tentative subdivision maps for residential housing projects that will not affect the local government's ability to properly adopt and implement an adequate general plan. (Govt.C. 65755(a)(4), (a)(5), (a)(6).)

(e) On a proper showing, the court must exclude from remedies entered under Govt.C. 65754(a)(1), (a)(2), (a)(3) projects that are consistent with portions of the plan, that have been found to substantially comply, and that will not significantly impair the local government's ability to correct the portions not in substantial compliance (see Govt.C. 65760). (Govt.C. 65755(b); see Committee for Responsible Planning v. Indian Wells (1989) 209 C.A.3d 1005, 1013, 257 C.R. 635 ["significant," as used in Govt.C. 65755(b), permitting projects that do not "significantly impair" city's ability to adopt complying plan, means "substantial or potentially substantial, adverse change" in ability].)

(f) The remedies in Govt.C. 65755 may be ordered as temporary relief during the pendency of the action, but housing projects that will not affect the adoption of a proper housing element may not be enjoined, and if permitted to continue may not be subjected to restrictions in a final judgment. (Govt.C. 65757.)

(g) Permits for residential housing projects that were issued prior to filing the action may not be revoked. (Govt.C. 65761.)

(2) Review by Mandamus. Adoption of the general plan, or the adoption or amendment of any of its parts or elements, is a "legislative act" reviewable by mandamus under C.C.P. 1085 (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §72 et seq.). (Govt.C. 65301.5; see Concerned Citizens of Calaveras County v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 166 C.A.3d 90, 95, 212 C.R. 273.) Hence, findings are not required, and the action is reviewable by ordinary mandamus, not administrative mandamus (C.C.P. 1094.5). (Cormier v. San Luis Obispo (1984) 161 C.A.3d 850, 855, 207, C.R. 880.)

(3) Plan Is Presumed Valid. Violating Govt.C. 65300.5 (supra, §1014), requiring internal integration and consistency, may invalidate the land use elements of a general plan. However, a general plan is presumed to be valid, and it will not be set aside unless the council acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or without an evidentiary basis. (See Karlson v. Camarillo (1980) 100 C.A.3d 789, 161 C.R. 260; Garat v. Riverside (1991) 2 C.A.4th 259, 293, 3 C.R.2d 504 [to be legally adequate, plan need only show substantial compliance with statutory requirements].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Review by Mandamus.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Extraordinary Writs, §74 et seq.(3) Plan Is Presumed Valid. See Federation of Hillside & Canyon Assn. v. Los Angeles (2004) 126 C.A.4th 1180, 1195, 24 C.R.3d 543 [court cannot disturb general plan based on violation of internal consistency and correlation requirements unless, based on evidence before city council, reasonable person could not conclude that plan is internally consistent or correlative].

42 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

b. General Plan.

6. Amendment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1017

[§ 1017] Amendment.

Statutes relating to the amendment of the general plan provide the following:

(1) The local legislative body may amend all or part of an adopted general plan, and it may specify the manner in which amendments are initiated. (Govt.C. 65358(a).)

(2) Amendments may make multiple changes and may be made at any time. (Govt.C. 65358(b).) However, a mandatory element of the plan (supra, §1012) must not be amended more than four times in a calendar year unless necessary to (a) develop a single residential project with 25% or more of the units going to those with low or moderate incomes (Govt.C. 65358(b)), or (b) comply with a court order in an action challenging the plan or with statutes governing specified developments and programs (Govt.C. 65358(d)). (Govt.C. 65358(b).)

(3) The statutes governing the preparation and adoption of general plans are also applicable to amendments. (See Govt.C. 65350 et seq.; Govt.C. 65354.5 [procedure for interested party to request hearing on amendment acted on by planning agency]; supra, §1015.) Amendments are legislative acts subject to review by mandamus. (See supra, §1016.)

In Leshar Communications v. Walnut Creek (1990) 52 C.3d 531, 277 C.R. 1, 802 P.2d 317, the general plan of defendant city was originally growth oriented. In November 1945, Measure H, an initiative ordinance, was adopted to prohibit buildings or structures that aggravated traffic congestion. Plaintiffs contended that the measure was in conflict with the general plan. Held, the measure was inconsistent with the general plan and could not be construed as an amendment to it.

(a) "We cannot at once accept the function of a general plan as a 'constitution,' or perhaps more accurately a charter for future development, and the proposition that it can be amended without notice to the electorate that such amendment is the purpose of an initiative. ... The Planning and Zoning Law itself precludes consideration of a zoning ordinance which conflicts with a general plan as a pro tanto repeal or implied amendment of the general plan. The general plan stands. A zoning ordinance that is inconsistent with the general plan is invalid when passed, ... and one that was originally consistent but has become inconsistent must be brought into conformity with the general plan." (52 C.3d

540.)

(b) "The analysis of Measure H prepared by the city attorney informed the voters that 'existing law' permitted construction consistent with the general plan, zoning ordinance and building code, and that Measure H would change 'existing law' by prohibiting construction under the specified circumstances. The analysis therefore informed the voters only that the adoption of Measure H would change the existing law that permitted construction consistent with the general plan, not that it would amend the general plan itself." (52 C.3d 543.) Hence, Measure H could not be deemed a general plan amendment. (52 C.3d 544.)

One justice dissented on the ground that while the appeal was pending, defendant city amended the general plan in an effort to incorporate Measure H, and that the case was moot and the appeal should be dismissed. (52 C.3d 547.) (See 18 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1169.)

In DeVita v. Napa (1995) 9 C.4th 763, 38 C.R.2d 699, 889 P.2d 1019, an initiative measure amended the land use element of the county's general plan and prohibited redesignation of existing agricultural land without voter approval for a period of 30 years. Held, the initiative was valid.

(a) Cal. Const., Art. II, §11 (supra, §157), guarantees the local electorate's right to initiative and referendum, and it is presumed, absent a clear showing to the contrary, that legislative decisions of local bodies are subject to initiative and referendum. (9 C.4th 775.)

(b) Prior Court of Appeal decisions have either held or assumed that a general plan could be amended by local initiative. (9 C.4th 774.) Moreover, Elec.C. 9111, by providing for reports on a proposed initiative's effect on the general plan, specifically recognizes that general plans can be amended by initiative. (9 C.4th 777, 779.)

(c) The planning law itself reflects the Legislature's conclusion that land use planning, including adoption and amendment of a general plan, is primarily a local matter, and hence, that the land use element of a general plan can be amended by initiative. (9 C.4th 779, 782, 784.)

(d) Various arguments are advanced against initiative amendments to the general plan--that the general plan process is subject to numerous procedural requirements not imposed on initiatives, that Govt.C. 65358(a) requires flexibility in the general plan amendment process, a flexibility that is eliminated when amendments are adopted by initiative, and that general plan amendments are subject to environmental review, while initiatives are not--but none is persuasive. The existence of procedural requirements for adoption of local ordinances does not imply a restriction on the power of initiative or referendum (9 C.4th 785); all initiatives place limits on the capacity to legislate in areas that are otherwise statutorily authorized (9 C.4th 788); and Elec.C. 9111, considered in conjunction with rejected attempts to impose more stringent environmental review requirements on land use initiatives, reflects a legislative compromise that permits these initiatives while permitting voters to be informed about possible environmental consequences (9 C.4th 793, 795).

A lengthy dissent, joined by two justices, argues that the planning law vests the power to adopt and amend the general plan exclusively in local legislative bodies, to the exclusion of the electorate acting through the initiative process. (9 C.4th 799, 823.) (See Harroman Co. v. Tiburon (1991) 235 C.A.3d 388, 395, 396, 1 C.R.2d 72 [where extension of time had been granted under Govt.C. 65361 to revise general plan, town properly considered "draft" general plan rather than existing plan in determining under Govt.C. 65589.5 that proposed housing development project did not comply with "applicable general plan"]; Garat v. Riverside (1991) 2 C.A.4th 259, 295, 296, 3 C.R.2d 504 [no statutory requirement that general plan be updated at particular time]; San Mateo County Coastal Landowners' Assn. v. San Mateo (1995) 38 C.A.4th 523, 553, 45 C.R.2d 117 [amendments to local coastal plan, as part of general plan, may be adopted by initiative]; on zoning by initiative or referendum, see infra, §1027 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 108 Holdings, Ltd. v. Rohnert Park (2006) 136 C.A.4th 186, 197, 38 C.R.3d 589 [stipulated judgment that merely set forth manner in which city would interpret certain provisions of general plan did not effect improper amendment of general plan]; St. Vincent's School for Boys, Catholic Charities CYO v. San Rafael (2008) 161 C.A.4th 989, 1002, 75 C.R.3d 213 [amendment of general plan to remove plaintiff's property from defendant city's sphere of influence was not arbitrary or discriminatory; property was never subject to defendant's police power, it was never annexed to defendant, and defendant never approved development proposal for property; amendment maintained status quo and did not change property's prevailing land use designation or preclude development].

43 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

c. Specific Plans.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1018

[§ 1018] Specific Plans.

(1) Authority and Scope. The planning agency (see supra, §1010) is authorized, and if directed by the legislative body is required, to prepare specific plans to implement the adopted general plan in all or part of the area covered. (Govt.C. 65450.)

Specific plans must include text and diagrams specifying the following in detail: (a) the distribution, location, and extent of land uses; (b) the proposed distribution, location, and extent and intensity of transportation, sewage, water, drainage, disposal, energy, and other facilities needed to support the land uses; (c) standards and criteria for development, and standards for the conservation, development, and utilization of natural resources; and (d) a program to implement the foregoing. (Govt.C. 65451(a).) A specific plan must also include a statement of its relationship to the general plan. (Govt.C. 65451(b).) It may cover other subjects the planning agency deems necessary or desirable for the implementation of the general plan. (Govt.C. 65452.)

Specific plans must be consistent with the general plan (Govt.C. 65454), and all public works projects, tentative maps, parcel maps, and zoning ordinances must be consistent with an adopted specific plan for the area (Govt.C. 65455). (See Napa Citizens for Honest Government v. Napa County Bd. of Supervisors (2001) 91 C.A.4th 342, 386, 110 C.R.2d 579 [inadequacies of environmental impact report necessarily invalidated adoption of updated specific plan, and inconsistencies between general and specific plans required finding that county abused its discretion in adopting updated specific plan].)

(2) Adoption, Amendment, and Repeal. Specific plans are adopted and amended in the same manner as general plans (Govt.C. 65350 et seq.; see supra, §§1015, 1017), except that specific plans may be adopted by resolution or by ordinance, and may be amended as often as the legislative body deems necessary. (Govt.C. 65453(a).) A specific plan may be repealed in the same manner as is required for amendment. (Govt.C. 65453(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

44 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

d. Local Zoning Regulations.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1019

[§ 1019] In General.

(1) Limited Statutory Control. The provisions governing local zoning are in Govt.C. 65800 et seq. (See 7 Ecology L. Q. 753; C.E.B., Zoning Practice; on authority of cities and counties to enter into local development agreements, see Govt.C. 65864 et seq.) These sections do not apply to charter cities, except to the extent that the city adopts them. (Govt.C. 65803.)

Except for open-space zoning and zoning vacant land for residential use, the legislative purpose is "to provide only a minimum of limitation in order that counties and cities may exercise the maximum degree of control over local zoning matters." (Govt.C. 65800.) A curative statute provides that procedural errors are not grounds for invalidating an ordinance unless the complaining party "suffered substantial injury from that error and that a different result would have been probable if the error had not occurred." (Govt.C. 65010.) (See Govt.C. 65850.3 [codifying "Federal Communication Commission's limited federal preemption of local regulations governing amateur radio station facilities"].)

(2) Open-Space Zoning. Every city and county must prepare and adopt an open-space zoning ordinance. (Govt.C. 65910; see Govt.C. 65560 et seq. [local open-space plans]; infra, §1038.) Variances may be granted only "when, because of special circumstances applicable to the property, including size, shape, topography, location or surroundings, strict application of the zoning ordinance deprives such property of privileges enjoyed by other property in the vicinity and under identical zoning classification." The grant of authority for variances must be "literally and strictly interpreted and enforced." (Govt.C. 65911.)

(3) Zoning Vacant Land for Residential Use. Every city and county must "designate and zone sufficient vacant land for residential use with appropriate standards, in relation to zoning for nonresidential use, and in relation to growth projections of the general plan to meet housing needs for all income categories as identified in the housing element of the general plan." (Govt.C. 65913.1; see Hernandez v. Encinitas (1994) 28 C.A.4th 1048, 1075, 33 C.R.2d 875 [city's density and other land use standards regarding vacant land for residential use were sufficient to satisfy statutory requirement of meeting housing needs as identified in general plan].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Limited Statutory Control. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice.(3) Zoning Vacant Land for Residential Use. See Fonseca v. Gilroy (2007) 148 C.A.4th 1174, 1209, 56 C.R.3d 374 [Govt.C. 65913.1, part of Least Cost Zoning Law, does not require immediate rezoning on adoption of revised housing element].

45 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

d. Local Zoning Regulations.

2. Scope of Zoning Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1020

[§ 1020] Scope of Zoning Power.

(1) Authorized Subjects. The local legislative body may adopt ordinances that:

(a) Regulate the use of buildings, structures, and land as between industry, business, residences, and open space, including agriculture, recreation, enjoyment of scenic beauty, use of natural resources, etc. (Govt.C. 65850(a).)

(b) Regulate signs and billboards. (Govt.C. 65850(b).)

(c) Regulate (1) the location, height, bulk, number of stories, and size of buildings and structures; (2) the size and use of lots, yards, courts, and other open spaces; (3) the percentage of a lot that may be occupied by a building or structure; and (4) the intensity of land use. (Govt.C. 65850(c).)

(d) "Establish requirements for offstreet parking and loading." (Govt.C. 65850(d).)

(e) "Establish and maintain building setback lines." (Govt.C. 65850(e).)

(f) "Create civic districts around civic centers, public parks, public buildings, or public grounds, and establish regulations for those civic districts." (Govt.C. 65850(f).)

(g) Regulate, subject to the protection of First Amendment rights, "the time, place, and manner of operation of sexually oriented businesses." (Govt.C. 65850.4(a); see Govt.C. 65850.4(b) [defining "sexually oriented business" as one the primary purpose of which is "sale or display of matter that, because of its sexually explicit nature, may, pursuant to state law or local regulatory authority, be offered only to persons over the age of 18"]; 49 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1139 [zoning "pornography peddlers" and live nude shows].)

(2) Uniformity Within Zone. Local zoning must be "uniform for each class or kind of building or use of land throughout each zone, but the regulation in one type of zone may differ from those in other types of zones." (Govt.C. 65852.) The uniformity requirement of Govt.C. 65852 is not violated by use limitations imposed by contract; e.g., where the landowner acquiesces in the new zoning classification. (J-Marion Co. v. Sacramento (1977) 76 C.A.3d 517, 523, 142 C.R. 723, citing Imperial v. McDougal (1977) 19 C.3d 505, 138 C.R. 472, 564 P.2d 14, infra, §1050.)

(3) Prezoning. Cities adjoining unincorporated territory may prezone. (Govt.C. 65859.) (On interim zoning, see infra, §1023.)

(4) Development Agreement To Freeze Zoning. Cities and counties may enter into development agreements with property owners to develop properties. (Govt.C. 65865.) The purpose of this provision is to permit "a city or county to freeze zoning and other land use regulation applicable to specified property to guarantee that a developer will not be affected by changes in standards for government approval during the period of development." (Santa Margarita Area Residents Together v. San Luis Obispo County Bd. of Supervisors (2000) 84 C.A.4th 221, 232, 100 C.R.2d 740 [development agreement complied with statute even though project was not fully designed and approved; statute should be construed to permit agreements "as soon as the government and developer are required to make significant financial and personnel commitments to a project"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Authorized Subjects. In Hernandez v. Hanford (2007) 41 C.4th 279, 59 C.R.3d 442, 159 P.3d 33, plaintiff owners of a stand-alone home furnishing and mattress store challenged a zoning ordinance that restricted the sale of furniture to stores located in the downtown business district, but which allowed large department stores, with square footage limitations, to sell furniture in the planned commercial (PC) district. The trial court upheld the ordinance, but the Court of Appeal invalidated it on equal protection grounds. Held, reversed. The Court of Appeal failed to recognize that the zoning ordinance here had two purposes: to protect the economic viability of the downtown business district, and to attract and retain large department stores in the PC district.

(a) Regulating economic competition. The court clarified ambiguous language in a number of decisions of the Courts of Appeal on which the plaintiffs based their argument that a city does not have the power to regulate or restrict economic competition through its zoning ordinance. As the circumstances underlying the decisions in Ensign Bickford Realty Corp. v. Livermore (1977) 68 C.A.3d 467, 137 C.R. 304, text, §1046, and Wal-Mart Stores v. Turlock (2006) 138 C.A.4th 273, 301, 41 C.R.3d 420, "demonstrate, even when the regulation of economic competition reasonably can be viewed as a direct and intended effect of a zoning ordinance or action, so long as the primary purpose of the ordinance or action--that is, its principal and ultimate objective--is not the impermissible private anticompetitive goal of protecting or disadvantaging a particular favored or disfavored business or individual, but instead is the advancement of a legitimate public purpose--such as the preservation of a municipality's downtown business district for the benefit of the municipality as a whole--the ordinance reasonably relates to the general welfare of the municipality and constitutes a legitimate exercise of the municipality's police power." (41 C.4th 296.) Here, the ordinance restricting the sale of furniture in the outlying district was not an invalid limitation on competition; it was enacted to promote the legitimate public purpose of preserving the economic viability of the downtown district, rather than to serve an impermissible anticompetitive purpose. (41 C.4th 298.)

(b) Attracting and retaining large department stores. The Equal Protection Clause "does not preclude a governmental entity from adopting a legislative measure that is aimed at achieving multiple objectives, even when such objectives in some respects may be in tension or conflict." (41 C.4th 300.) Here, the differential treatment of large department stores and other retailers "is rationally related to one of the legitimate legislative purposes of the ordinance--the purpose of attracting and retaining large department stores in the PC district." Extending the square footage exception to all retail stores in the PC district would have undermined the overall objective of the ordinance to permit the sale of furniture in the PC district only to the extent "necessary to serve the city's interest in attracting and retaining large department stores in that district." (41 C.4th 302.) (2) Uniformity Within Zone. "If a zoning scheme is like a contract, the uniformity requirement is like an enforcement clause, allowing parties to the contract to challenge burdens unfairly imposed on them or benefits unfairly conferred on others." The development agreement statutes, Govt.C. 65854 et seq., do not create an exemption to the uniformity requirement. (Neighbors in Support of Appropriate Land Use v. Tuolumne (2007) 157 C.A.4th 997, 1009, 1014, 68 C.R.3d 882) [issue of first impression; county violated uniformity requirement of Govt.C. 65852 by approving application to use property in agricultural zone for commercial purposes, which created ad hoc exception to benefit one parcel in zone; exception was not created through rezoning or other amendment of ordinance, or by granting conditional use permit in conformance with ordinance or proper variance].

46 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

d. Local Zoning Regulations.

3. Consistency With General Plan.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1021

[§ 1021] Consistency With General Plan.

Zoning ordinances must be consistent with the general plan. (Govt.C. 65860(a).) An action or proceeding brought to enforce compliance with the consistency requirement must be commenced and service made on the legislative body within 90 days of the enactment or amendment of a zoning ordinance. (Govt.C. 65860(b).) (See Neighborhood Action Group v. Calaveras (1984) 156 C.A.3d 1176, 1187, 203 C.R. 401, infra, §1051 [Govt.C. 65860(b) is not applicable if ordinance is in conformity with general plan but general plan does not conform to state statutes, or if action challenges use permit rather than seeking amendment of zoning ordinance]; Friends of H Street v. Sacramento (1993) 20 C.A.4th 152, 169, 24 C.R.2d 607 [residents complaining about city's failure to reduce traffic speed and volume on their street could not state cause of action to enforce conformity with general plan; street was completed before enactment of Govt.C. 65860(a), which addresses future growth]; Building Industry Assn. v. Oceanside (1994) 27 C.A.4th 744, 766, 767, 33 C.R.2d 137 [growth control initiative was inconsistent with general plan; it conflicted with plan's policies of avoiding direct controls on number or location of new housing units and adequately providing for needs of all economic segments]; Chandis Sec. Co. v. Dana Point (1996) 52 C.A.4th 475, 485, 60 C.R.2d 481 [election rejecting proposed specific plan for portion of city designated as specific plan area under general plan maintained status quo pending preparation of approved specific plan for area and did not violate consistency requirement]; 17 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1.)

Govt.C. 65803 exempts charter cities from the requirement that zoning ordinances comply with general plans. (See Garat v. Riverside (1991) 2 C.A.4th 259, 281, 284, 3 C.R.2d 504, supra, §1014 [under Govt.C. 65803, charter city's zoning enactments need not be consistent with its general plan]; Irvine v. Irvine Citizens Against Overdevelopment (1994) 25 C.A.4th 868, 875, 876, 30 C.R.2d 797 [consistency requirement of Govt.C. 65860(a) applies to charter city that has enacted ordinance requiring zoning and general plan consistency]; on special rule for charter city of 2,000,000 or more population, see Govt.C. 65860(d); Los Angeles v. California (1982) 138 C.A.3d 526, 532, 187 C.R. 893 [also rejecting contentions that Govt.C. 65860(d) violates Cal. Const., Art. XI, §5(a) ("home rule" provision) and Art. IV, §16(b) (special or local legislation)].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Endangered Habitats League v. Orange (2005) 131 C.A.4th 777, 785, 32 C.R.3d 177 [project that failed to use specified method of evaluating traffic impact, which would have shown impermissible increase in traffic on particular road, was inconsistent with general plan and would be set aside; contributions to fee program to fund road improvements was insufficient mitigation where program did not require improving road to level stated in general plan and there was no evidence that mitigation would occur]; Friends of Lagoon Valley v. Vacaville (2007) 154 C.A.4th 807, 817, 65 C.R.3d 251 [distinguishing Endangered Habitats League; residential and commercial development was consistent with general plan that stressed flexibility and ability of planning officials to balance competing policies; payment of traffic impact fees was reasonable mitigation program].

47 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

d. Local Zoning Regulations.

4. Zoning Procedure.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1022

[§ 1022] Zoning Procedure.

Zoning ordinances and amendments for rezoning or to impose new, or remove existing, regulations listed in Govt.C. 65850 must comply with Govt.C. 65854 et seq. Other zoning amendments "may be adopted as other ordinances are adopted." (Govt.C. 65853.) Local zoning agencies must establish and publish rules for the conduct of their hearings and for a record, on written request, in contested matters. Rules for conducting hearings must incorporate the procedures set out in Govt.C. 65854. (Govt.C. 65804(a).)

The planning commission must hold a public hearing on a proposed zoning ordinance or amendment. This hearing requires 10 days' notice under Govt.C. 65090 or Govt.C. 65091. (Govt.C. 65854.) The planning commission then submits its written recommendations to the legislative body, including its reasons, and the relationship of the proposal to local general and specific plans. (Govt.C. 65855.) The legislative body must then hold a public hearing, unless the commission has recommended against a proposed rezoning, when a hearing is required only on the written request of an interested party. (Govt.C. 65856(a).) Notice of the hearing pursuant to Govt.C. 65090 is required. (Govt.C. 65856(b).) (See Sounhein v. San Dimas (1992) 11 C.A.4th 1255, 1259, 14 C.R.2d 656 [lack of required public notice and hearing rendered ordinance void]; 6 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1011 [Procedural Due Process and Zoning Decisions]; 66 A.L.R.4th 1012 [construction and effect of statute requiring that zoning application be treated as approved if not acted on within specified time].)

If there is no local planning commission, the legislative body must perform the prescribed functions. (Govt.C. 65861.) (On procedure when legislative body requests report on ordinance or amendment, see Govt.C. 65853.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Environmental Defense Project of Sierra County v. Sierra (2008) 158 C.A.4th 877, 888, 70 C.R.3d 474 [10-day notice of legislative body's hearing required by Govt.C. 65856 must be given after planning commission's recommendation has been received, and notice must include that recommendation as part of "general explanation of the matter to be considered" required by Govt.C. 65094; hence, streamlined zoning process in which county gave notice of hearing before planning commission had made its recommendation on proposed zoning amendment violated Planning and Zoning Law].

48 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

d. Local Zoning Regulations.

5. Interim Ordinance.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1023

[§ 1023] Interim Ordinance.

(1) Nature and Authority To Adopt. The local legislative body may, to protect the public health, safety, and welfare, adopt a temporary interim (or "stop-gap" or "incubation period") ordinance, as an emergency measure, without complying with the usual procedure for notice and hearing (supra, §1022). (Govt.C. 65858; see Mang v. Santa Barbara (1960) 182 C.A.2d 93, 97, 5 C.R. 724 [unzoned agricultural land; trailer parks prohibited]; Metro Realty v. El Dorado (1963) 222 C.A.2d 508, 511, 35 C.R. 480 [subdivision map was rejected where interim ordinance zoned property for agricultural and recreational purposes only]; Consaul v. San Diego (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1781, 1797, 8 C.R.2d 762 [issuance of dwelling unit allocations under interim ordinance created no vested rights; hence, new zoning ordinance adopted before developer applied for building permits was properly applied to developer]; 216 Sutter Bay Associates v. Sutter (1997) 58 C.A.4th 860, 871, 68 C.R.2d 492 [new board of supervisors acted legally in adopting ordinances rescinding legislative acts of predecessor board that encompassed plaintiff's development agreement where new board made adequate findings concerning need for urgency and plaintiff's development agreement was not complete at time of rescission]; Building Industry Legal Defense Foundation v. Superior Court (1999) 72 C.A.4th 1410, 1420, 85 C.R.2d 828 [nothing in Govt.C. 65858 permits cities to prohibit formal processing of development applications, such as tentative subdivision maps]; 29 McGeorge L. Rev. 715 [Interim Ordinances in California: Restoring Balance Between the Rights of Individual Landowners and the Rights of the Public]; 30 A.L.R.3d 1196 [validity and effect of interim ordinance]; 32 Proof of Facts 3d 485 [proof of unreasonableness of interim zoning and building moratoria]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §115 et seq.)

This interim ordinance must be approved by a four-fifths vote and remains in effect for only 45 days unless extended for 10 months and 15 days, and subsequently for one year, by four-fifths votes, after notice and hearing. Only two extensions are permitted. (Govt.C. 65858(a).) Alternatively, if the interim ordinance is approved by a four-fifths vote following notice and hearing, it may in a similar manner be extended for 22 months and 15 days. (Govt.C. 65858(b).) (See Bank of the Orient v. Tiburon (1990) 220 C.A.3d 992, 1003, 1005, 1006, 269 C.R. 690 [Govt.C. 65858 applies to all zoning moratorium ordinances, including initiative measures; statutory prohibition on third extension applied where town council adopted two extensions and third extension was adopted by initiative].)

(2) Effect of Subsequent Ordinance. When an interim ordinance has been adopted, a subsequent interim ordinance covering the whole or a part of the same property, "shall automatically terminate and be of no further force or effect upon the termination of the first interim ordinance or any extension of the ordinance." (Govt.C. 65858(e).) Thus, Govt.C. 65858(a) and 65858(e) "allow the City Council to utilize the moratorium ordinance process only once for an aggregate period of two years. ... The City therefore cannot obtain a new two-year moratorium limitation by rezoning or awaiting the expiration of an earlier ordinance." (Martin v. Superior Court (1991) 234 C.A.3d 1765, 1771, 286 C.R. 513.)

Notwithstanding Govt.C. 65858(e), on "termination of a prior interim ordinance, the legislative body may adopt another interim ordinance pursuant to this section provided that the new interim ordinance is adopted to protect the public safety, health, and welfare from an event, occurrence, or set of circumstances different from the event, occurrence, or set of circumstances that led to the adoption of the prior interim ordinance." (Govt.C. 65858(f).)

(3) Distinction: Invalid Ordinance Permitting Use. In Silvera v. South Lake Tahoe (1970) 3 C.A.3d 554, 83 C.R. 698; K applied for a variance to build a structure violating the maximum height limit of the area. The variance was denied for lack of a showing of legal ground, but then the city council adopted an interim ordinance permitting the structures in the zone. Neighboring property owners sought an injunction. Held, they were entitled to relief. The statute authorizes an emergency regulation to limit land uses during the changeover from one type of zoning to another; it does not authorize an interim ordinance to permit a party to erect a permanent structure otherwise prohibited, bypassing the usual requirement of notice and hearing. (3 C.A.3d 557, 558.) The challenged ordinance was therefore not a proper interim measure but an invalid attempt to circumvent the statutory scheme. (3 C.A.3d 556.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

49 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

e. Exemptions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1024

[§ 1024] Exemptions.

"Local agency" is defined in Govt.C. 53090 as an agency of the state for local performance of governmental or proprietary functions. This definition implicitly exempts cities and counties from the requirement of Govt.C. 53091 that local agencies must comply with city and county building and zoning ordinances. (Lawler v. Redding (1992) 7 C.A.4th 778, 782, 784, 9 C.R.2d 392 [Govt.C. 65402(b) requires city to report to county on proposed public work, but city may disregard county's adverse determination]; see Zack v. Marin Emergency Radio Authority (2004) 118 C.A.4th 617, 627, 638, 13 C.R.3d 323 [local zoning regulations did not apply to joint powers agency made up of county and 25 local public agencies located in county; because county, as designated party in joint powers agreement, was not subject to local regulations, neither was joint powers agency].) The statute also provides an absolute exemption for "facilities for the production, generation, storage, or transmission of water, wastewater, or electrical energy by the local agency." (Govt.C. 53091(d).) A qualified exemption is provided for facilities "related to storage or transmission of water or electrical energy, including warehouses, administrative buildings, or automotive storage and repair buildings." (Govt.C. 53096; see Lafayette v. East Bay Mun. Util. Dist. (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1005, 1014, 20 C.R.2d 658 [to be exempt under Govt.C. 53096, facilities must have "connection with" and be integral to proper operation of storage and transmission functions of water district].)

Govt.C. 53091 does not apply to private commercial projects. (Delta Wetlands Properties v. San Joaquin (2004) 121 C.A.4th 128, 137, 142, 16 C.R.3d 672 [state law does not preempt field, and trial court did not err in refusing to set aside county ordinance that might apply to plaintiff's commercial water storage project].)

A school district may render certain zoning ordinances inapplicable by a two-thirds vote. (Govt.C. 53094, infra, §1036.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

50 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

f. Administration and Enforcement.

1. Administration.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1025

[§ 1025] Administration.

(1) Agencies. Local planning ordinances are administered by a board of zoning adjustment or zoning administrator, and a board of appeals. (Govt.C. 65900 et seq.) In the absence of these agencies, the local planning commission (or area planning commission) acts as the adjustment board or administrator, and the local legislative body acts as the appeals board. (Govt.C. 65902, 65904.) These agencies determine applications for, and appeals concerning, variances (see infra, §1053) and conditional use (see infra, §1050) and other permits. (Govt.C. 65901(a), 65903.) (On review by board of appeals, see San Francisco v. Superior Court (1959) 53 C.2d 236, 247, 1 C.R. 158, 347 P.2d 294; Broadway, Laguna, Vallejo Assn. v. Board of Permit App. of San Francisco (1967) 66 C.2d 767, 772, 59 C.R. 146, 427 P.2d 810; Cow Hollow Imp. Club v. Board of Permit App. of San Francisco (1966) 245 C.A.2d 160, 169, 171, 53 C.R. 610 [board's review of decision of zoning administrator; trial judge's review of board's decision; appellate court's review of trial judge's decision]; San Francisco v. Padilla (1972) 23 C.A.3d 388, 395, 100 C.R. 223, 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Jurisdiction, §339; San Francisco v. Board of Permit App. (1989) 207 C.A.3d 1099, 1109, 255 C.R. 307 [board action overruling zoning administrator was in excess of jurisdiction; its findings were legally irrelevant and contrary to city planning code]; Guinnane v. San Francisco City Planning Com. (1989) 209 C.A.3d 732, 736, 742, 257 C.R. 742 [under ordinance providing for discretionary review by planning commission and board of permit appeals, applicant's compliance with zoning laws and building codes did not automatically entitle him to building permit; evidence was sufficient to support denial of permit on ground that large house was "not in character" with surrounding homes]; 12 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 937 [judicial control over zoning boards of appeal].)

(2) Variances or Permits. Public hearings, on notice prescribed by Govt.C. 65091, are generally required before action is taken on variances, conditional use permits, or equivalent development permits. (Govt.C. 65905; see Drum v. Fresno County Dept. of Public Works (1983) 144 C.A.3d 777, 782, 192 C.R. 782 [wholly inaccurate notice was ineffective].) However, the board of zoning adjustment or zoning administrator may be permitted, by ordinance, to decide applications for specified kinds of variances without a public hearing on the application. (Govt.C. 65901(b).)

Except as otherwise provided by statute, an action or proceeding to challenge a decision on an application for a permit or variance under Govt.C. 65901 or Govt.C. 65903 must be commenced and the legislative body must be served within 90 days. (Govt.C. 65009(c), supra, §1011; see Hawkins v. Marin (1976) 54 C.A.3d 586, 592, 126 C.R. 754 [untimely attack barred]; Beresford Neighborhood Assn. v. San Mateo (1989) 207 C.A.3d 1180, 255 C.R. 434 [same]; Ching v. San Francisco Bd. of Permit App. (1998) 60 C.A.4th 888, 894, 70 C.R.2d 700 [statute contains no exceptions and uses unqualified language manifesting plain intent to limit time to seek review of agency decision; there is no exception for actions filed under Political Reform Act].)

In Concerned Citizens of Murphys v. Jackson (1977) 72 C.A.3d 1021, 140 C.R. 531, Calaveras County adopted an ordinance giving the right of appeal to the Board of Supervisors only to a dissatisfied applicant. An application for a conditional use permit to construct an aggregate and mineral recovery plant was granted by the Planning Commission over objection by plaintiff property owners in the area. On refusal of the clerk of the board to accept their notice of appeal, they sought mandamus and declaratory relief. Held, the restrictive ordinance was invalid and they were entitled to appeal. Govt.C. 65033 recognizes the importance of public participation in the planning process, and declares a policy favoring public hearings; and former Govt.C. 65854.5 (now Govt.C. 65091(a)(3)) provides for notice of hearings to adjacent property owners. (72 C.A.3d 1025, 1026.) This legislative intent to involve property owners in the hearing "inherently carries the right of appeal and such right of appeal may not be restricted by local ordinance." (72 C.A.3d 1026.) (On judicial review of variance decision, see infra, §1056.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Agencies.

Padilla case:

Cross-Reference: 2 Cal. Proc. (5th), Jurisdiction, §348.

(2) Variances or Permits. Govt.C. 65091(a)(3), providing for notice of hearing to adjacent property owners, was renumbered Govt.C. 65091(a)(4) in 2006.

51 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

2. Planning and Zoning Ordinances.

f. Administration and Enforcement.

2. Judicial Enforcement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1026

[§ 1026] Judicial Enforcement.

(1) Action by City. A city may enjoin the violation of an ordinance; and, because it is a continuing violation, the statute of limitations does not run and there is no estoppel from failure to take steps to enforce the regulation. (Fontana v. Atkinson (1963) 212 C.A.2d 499, 508, 28 C.R. 25; see 73 A.L.R.4th 870 [laches as defense to governmental agency's suit to enjoin zoning violation].) A city may also sue to enforce a condition to a variance, i.e., to enjoin the violation of the condition (see infra, §§1055, 1056). (Santa Clara v. Paris (1977) 76 C.A.3d 338, 341, 142 C.R. 818.)

The showing necessary for issuance of a preliminary injunction and the court's weighing function were set forth in People v. Synanon Foundation (1979) 88 C.A.3d 304, 151 C.R. 757. "We hold that absent a clear showing that the ordinance is being violated, the court must weigh the relative harm to the defendant if the injunction is issued as against the harm to the plaintiff if it is not issued; that only when the harm to the plaintiff outweighs the harm to the defendant should the injunction issue. Stated otherwise, it is only upon a clear showing that the zoning ordinance is being violated that a conclusive presumption of irreparable injury to the public arises so as to justify the injunction without balancing the relative harm to the parties." (88 C.A.3d 309.)

In a proper case, an action may be brought by one city against an adjacent city for violating a zoning ordinance. (See Nestle v. Santa Monica (1972) 6 C.3d 920, 940, 101 C.R. 568, 496 P.2d 480 [alleged violation of Los Angeles ordinances by Santa Monica].)

(2) Action by Private Parties. In Pacifica Homeowners' Assn. v. Wesley Palms Retirement Community (1986) 178 C.A.3d 1147, 224 C.R. 380, plaintiff homeowners association sought to enjoin defendant from violating a conditional use permit that allegedly limited the height of trees on its property. Held, plaintiff has standing to sue. A private individual may enjoin a zoning violation as a nuisance when the individual (a) suffers a special injury to his or her person or property of a character different in kind from that suffered by the general public, or (b) suffers an injury greater than that suffered by the public generally, or (c) is a member of the community for whose particular welfare the ordinance was enacted. (178 C.A.3d 1152.) The complaint met these conditions by alleging that the permit limitation was imposed particularly for the benefit of the uphill landowners, including plaintiff. (178 C.A.3d 1153.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

52 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

3. Zoning by Initiative or Referendum.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1027

[§ 1027] In General.

In San Diego Bldg. Contractors Assn. v. San Diego (1974) 13 C.3d 205, 118 C.R. 146, 529 P.2d 570, a 4-3 decision, a charter city with exclusive power over municipal affairs (see supra, §993), adopted a zoning ordinance by initiative, in full compliance with statutory procedure, establishing a 30-foot height limitation for buildings within a specified coastal zone. Plaintiffs, building contractor associations, challenged the validity of the ordinance as beyond the charter's grant of power and as a denial of due process. The charter argument was summarily rejected. Nothing in its provisions indicated an intention to exempt zoning ordinances from the initiative process. The due process contention was based on general statements in U.S. Supreme Court decisions that an individual must be given an opportunity for a hearing before he or she is deprived of a significant property interest. Held, there is no denial of due process in the adoption of a zoning ordinance by the initiative process.

(a) The basic principle, now "black letter constitutional law," is that notice and a hearing are required only in quasi-judicial or adjudicatory settings, and not where general legislation is adopted. As Justice Holmes said in Bi-Metallic Inv. Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1915) 239 U.S. 441, 36 S.Ct. 141, 60 L.Ed. 372: "Where a rule of conduct applies to more than a few people it is impracticable that every one should have a direct voice in its adoption. The Constitution does not require all public acts to be done in town meeting or an assembly of the whole. General statutes within the state power are passed that affect the person or property of individuals, sometimes to the point of ruin, without giving them a chance to be heard. Their rights are protected in the only way that they can be in a complex society, by their power, immediate or remote, over those who make the rule." (13 C.3d 211.)

(b) This principle applies to a general zoning measure as distinguished from an administrative zoning decision. The general zoning initiative in question is a legislative act; hence, it requires no notice and hearing as a prerequisite for adoption. However, notice and a hearing are required for adjudicatory determinations that grant a variance or a conditional use permit. (13 C.3d 212, and footnote 5.)

(c) The argument that an exception to the principle should be declared for zoning legislation because of its substantial impact on real property values is untenable because (1) other legislative enactments have an equally important impact on land values; e.g., the location of public improvements, standards of building and health and safety codes, the level of property tax rates, and even the level of educational expenditures (13 C.3d 213); (2) legislation may have significant effects on other values protected by the Due Process Clause (life and liberty); e.g., regulations limiting the liberty to engage in a trade or profession, or imposing criminal sanctions on sharp business practices; and (3) the U.S. Supreme Court has made it clear that legislation affecting the value of real property (e.g., an order of the State Board of Equalization increasing the valuation of all taxable property, or a law authorizing the establishment of maximum rents) is governed by the general constitutional principle. (13 C.3d 214.)

(d) Dicta in Hurst v. Burlingame (1929) 207 C. 134, 277 P. 308, involving a general law, not a charter city, "sowed the seeds" of the present confusion in plaintiffs' argument that where the statute requires notice and hearing, the action of the legislative body becomes quasi-judicial in character. Subsequent cases contain similar dicta; and "[t]o the extent that such statements are inconsistent with our present opinion they are disapproved." (13 C.3d 216.)

(e) Scott v. Indian Wells (1972) 6 C.3d 541, 99 C.R. 745, 492 P.2d 1137, infra, §1052, is distinguishable. It involved an administrative determination of a local planning commission on an application for a conditional use permit for a particular parcel of land; hence, the proceeding was adjudicatory, and the city could not deny notice to adjoining owners outside the city. (13 C.3d 217.)

(f) Other California decisions that directly faced the constitutional issue uniformly concluded that zoning legislation may constitutionally be enacted without affording all affected individuals notice and a hearing. (13 C.3d 217.)

The dissenting opinion took strong issue with the majority. (13 C.3d 219.) (See 64 Cal. L. Rev. 74; 12 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 903; 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 99 [problems with application of initiatives and referenda to zoning process]; 61 So. Cal. L. Rev. 497 [zoning by initiative]; 21 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1 [land use planning through initiative process in California]; 26 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1005 [amending general plan through initiative process]; 72 A.L.R.3d 991 [adopting zoning ordinance or amendment through initiative process].)

In Associated Home Builders of the Greater Eastbay v. Livermore (1976) 18 C.3d 582, 135 C.R. 41, 557 P.2d 473, the court again sustained the initiative power, this time 5-2, overruling Hurst v. Burlingame, supra, and its progeny. The supposed conflict between state zoning statutes and the initiative law does not exist. The Legislature drafted the notice and hearing provisions for city council action, and never intended that they should apply to the enactment of zoning initiatives. Further, although the initiative procedure is set forth in the implementing statute, the right itself is guaranteed by the Constitution. (18 C.3d 594.) (See 66 Cal. L. Rev. 373; 70 Cal. L. Rev. 151; 12 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 90; 14 San Diego L. Rev. 1227; 51 So. Cal. L. Rev. 265; 61 So. Cal. L. Rev. 497; 12 U.S.F. L. Rev. 357.)

The statement in Associated Home Builders of the Greater Eastbay, that the notice and hearing provisions do not apply to zoning initiatives, was cited in Building Industry Assn. v. Camarillo (1986) 41 C.3d 810, 226 C.R. 81, 718 P.2d 68, in support of its holding that Govt.C. 65863.6, requiring a city to consider the effect of ordinances on the housing needs of the region (see supra, §1013), is likewise inapplicable to initiative measures. (41 C.3d 823, 824.) The court pointed out, however, that growth control initiatives must be substantially and reasonably related to the welfare of the region, cannot unfairly discriminate against a particular parcel, and cannot be arbitrary or capricious. (41 C.3d 824.) (See 14 Pepperdine L. Rev. 194.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

53 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

3. Zoning by Initiative or Referendum.

b. Valid Initiative or Referendum Measures.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1028

[§ 1028] Valid Initiative or Referendum Measures.

(1) Referendum. In Eastlake v. Forest City Enterprises (1976) 426 U.S. 668, 96 S.Ct. 2358, 49 L.Ed.2d 132, the city of Eastlake, Ohio, adopted a charter requirement that changes in land use agreed to by the city council had to be approved by a 55% vote in a referendum. Respondent sought a zoning change to permit construction of an apartment building, and the city council approved it, but the voters did not. The Ohio court held the charter provision unconstitutional as a delegation of legislative power without standards, exercisable by the voting public on a whim. Held, the provision was valid. (a) A referendum is not a delegation of power; it is "a means for direct political participation, allowing the people the final decision, amounting to a veto power, over enactments of representative bodies." (96 S.Ct. 2362, 49 L.Ed.2d 137.) (b) If the referendum result is unreasonable, it may be challenged under state law as well as under Fourteenth Amendment standards. (96 S.Ct. 2363, 49 L.Ed.2d 139.) (See 91 Harv. L. Rev. 1373; 64 Cal. L. Rev. 74; 7 Ecology L. Q. 51; 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 99; 51 So. Cal. L. Rev. 265; 29 Stanf. L. Rev. 819; 72 A.L.R.3d 1030 [adoption of zoning ordinance or amendment as subject to referendum].)

In Yost v. Thomas (1984) 36 C.3d 561, 205 C.R. 801, 685 P.2d 1152, the Santa Barbara City Council adopted a land use measure affecting the coastal zone, after the Coastal Commission's approval of the land use plan. Held, the measure was subject to referendum. The adoption of a specific plan, like the adoption of a general plan, is a legislative act (36 C.3d 570); and "the Coastal Act does not transform the exercise of legislative power into administrative action by virtue of a Commission certification of a land use plan" (36 C.3d 574). "The Legislature left wide discretion to local governments to formulate land use plans for the coastal zone and it also left wide discretion to local governments to determine how to implement certified LCPs." (36 C.3d 574.)

(2) Initiative. In Arnel Dev. Co. v. Costa Mesa (1980) 28 C.3d 511, 169 C.R. 904, 620 P.2d 565, defendant city approved development of plaintiff's project to construct 127 single-family residences and 539 apartment units on about 50 acres of land. Shortly thereafter, a homeowners association was successful in having an initiative adopted to rezone plaintiff's tract and two other parcels for single-family residences. The city then refused to process plaintiff's final tract map or issue building permits, and plaintiff sought injunctive and declaratory relief. Held, the initiative measure was valid.

(a) Administrative decisions, such as variances and use permits, are adjudicative and call for notice and a hearing.

But zoning or rezoning by initiative or referendum are legislative; and the cases draw no distinctions based on the size of the area or the number of owners. (28 C.3d 516, 517.)

(b) The contention that characterizing rezoning as a legislative act operates in the present case to deny due process to plaintiff is unsound. The U.S. Supreme Court rejected this challenge under the federal Constitution in Eastlake; and San Diego Bldg. Contractors Assn. v. San Diego (1974) 13 C.3d 205, 118 C.R. 146, 529 P.2d 570, supra, §1027, reached the same conclusion under the California Constitution. (28 C.3d 519, 521.) To hold that whenever a legislative body enacts legislation affecting relatively few persons, those persons are entitled to notice and a hearing before the enacting body would be a radical and unjustifiable curtailment of legislative authority. (28 C.3d 521.)

(c) The present case illustrates the problems courts would face if, abandoning precedent, they attempted to devise a new test, under which rezoning of a "relatively small" parcel of land would be an adjudicative act. (1) It is not self-evident that 68 acres is a "relatively small parcel," and the size of the parcel has very little relationship to land-use policy. (2) Although the initiative affects only three landowners, the proposed construction of housing is for thousands of people; and the number of landowners is as unsuitable a test as the size of the property rezoned. (28 C.3d 523.) (3) To embark on a case-by-case determination would involve substantial administrative cost, would expose the municipality to the uncertainty of whether a proposed measure would be held legislative or adjudicative, and would burden litigants and courts with the resolution of these issues. (28 C.3d 523.)

(d) Rights of landowners are adequately protected under existing law. They may challenge zoning that is arbitrary, unreasonable, or deprives them of substantially all use of their land (see infra, §§1047, 1048); when zoning is enacted by the legislative body, landowners are entitled to notice and a hearing; and when zoning is enacted by initiative, they have the same opportunity as their opponents to present their case to the electorate. (28 C.3d 524.)

Two justices joined in a strong dissent, arguing that a landowner is constitutionally entitled to notice and a hearing before either the people or its government may substantially change the uses of the property. (See Merritt v. Pleasanton (2001) 89 C.A.4th 1032, 1035, 1040, 107 C.R.2d 675 [following Arnel; zoning ordinances are legislative acts, and electorate has coextensive power with city to make zoning decisions by initiative, including whether to prezone unincorporated property within city's sphere of influence according to its general plan]; 70 Cal. L. Rev. 1107 [Arnel]; 34 Hastings L. J. 425 [suggested response to Arnel].)

An initiative that directs a legislative body to enact necessary laws to permit a land use project to take effect and to amend the general plan and the zoning ordinance to ensure consistency with the initiative is within the scope of the electorate's power. (Pala Band of Mission Indians v. Board of Supervisors (1997) 54 C.A.4th 565, 578, 63 C.R.2d 148 [distinguishing Marblehead v. San Clemente (1991) 226 C.A.3d 1504, 277 C.R. 550, infra, §1029, where proposed amendments did not state how specific elements of general plan would be changed].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

54 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

3. Zoning by Initiative or Referendum.

c. Invalid Initiative or Referendum Measures.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1029

[§ 1029] Invalid Initiative or Referendum Measures.

A zoning ordinance that is inconsistent with the general plan is invalid. Thus, in deBottari v. Norco (1985) 171 C.A.3d 1204, 217 C.R. 790, defendant city council properly refused to submit a referendum that would, by repeal of a valid ordinance, enact an inconsistent ordinance. "[T]he requirement of consistency is the linchpin of California's land use and development laws; it is the principle which infused the concept of planned growth with the force of law. We are not persuaded that this principle must now be sacrificed on the altar of an invalid referendum." (171 C.A.3d 1213.) (See Irvine v. Irvine Citizens Against Overdevelopment (1994) 25 C.A.4th 868, 875, 876, 879, 30 C.R.2d 797 [deBottari prohibition of referendum that is inconsistent with general plan applies to charter city that has enacted ordinance adopting Govt.C. 65860(a) requirement of zoning and general plan consistency]; Building Industry Assn. v. Oceanside (1994) 27 C.A.4th 744, 766, 767, 33 C.R.2d 137 [growth control initiative conflicted with general plan and could not be deemed implied amendment of it].)

In Wiltshire v. Superior Court (1985) 172 C.A.3d 296, 218 C.R. 199, petitioner sought to block local agency approval of the construction of a solid waste disposal facility by an initiative measure requiring voter approval of the construction. Held, the proposed initiative was invalid in two respects: (a) It attempted to lodge adjudicatory powers in the electorate, and (b) it was preempted by state law. (172 C.A.3d 302, 305.)

In Marblehead v. San Clemente (1991) 226 C.A.3d 1504, 277 C.R. 550, an initiative measure aimed at changing the general plan did not directly amend it but ordered the city council to make the amendment. Held, the measure was invalid. "In effect, it constitutes a resolution by the voters declaring that the city's general plan should be revised to reflect the 'concepts' expressed in the measure. The actual amendment of the general plan is left to the city council. Which elements of the general plan are affected and how the substantive terms of Measure E are to be incorporated into these elements is unexplained." (226 C.A.3d 1510.) (See Pala Band of Mission Indians v. Board of Supervisors (1997) 54 C.A.4th 565, 578, 63 C.R.2d 148, supra, §1028 [distinguishing Marblehead].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

55 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

a. In General.

1. United States Supreme Court Decisions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1030

[§ 1030] United States Supreme Court Decisions.

In Belle Terre v. Boraas (1974) 416 U.S. 797, 94 S.Ct. 1536, 39 L.Ed.2d 797, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld an ordinance of the village of Belle Terre, on Long Island, consisting of 1 square mile, with 220 homes and 700 people. The ordinance restricted land use to one-family dwellings, and defined "family" as a single housekeeping unit consisting of (1) any number of persons related by blood, adoption, or marriage, or (2) not more than two persons not so related. The owners of a house leased it to a college student who later brought in five other students, none related. When the authorities notified them of violation of the ordinance, they sued under the Civil Rights Act to enjoin enforcement. Held, the ordinance was valid, under the general principles set forth in Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co. (1926) 272 U.S. 365, 47 S.Ct. 114, 71 L.Ed. 303, supra, §1005, and Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 99 L.Ed. 27, infra, §1063.

(a) Constitutional challenges are untenable. (1) The ordinance is not aimed at transients, involves no procedural disparity inflicted on some but not others, and deals with no fundamental constitutional right. (2) The line drawn between a "family" of two unrelated persons and a family of three or more is a matter of legislative discretion; lines must be drawn. (3) The ordinance places no ban on association of unmarried persons; a "family" may entertain whomever they like. (94 S.Ct. 1540, 1541, 39 L.Ed.2d 803, 804.)

(b) Proper zoning purpose. "A quiet place where yards are wide, people few, and motor vehicles restricted are legitimate guidelines in a land use project addressed to family needs. This goal is a permissible one within Berman v. Parker. The police power is not confined to elimination of filth, stench, and unhealthy places. It is ample to lay out zones where family values, youth values, and the blessings of quiet seclusion and clean air make the area a sanctuary for people." (94 S.Ct. 1541, 39 L.Ed.2d 804.)

The only justice to dissent on the merits maintained that freedom of association and the right of privacy include the right to establish a home and choose household companions. (94 S.Ct. 1545, 39 L.Ed.2d 808.) (See 108 Harv. L. Rev. 1127 [state-sponsored growth management as remedy for exclusionary zoning]; 31 Hastings L. J. 122 [exclusionary zoning]; 8 Hastings Const. L. Q. 585 [same]; 13 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 921 [same]; 52 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1239, 1671 [same]; 8 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 910 [same]; 11 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 509 [same]; 48 A.L.R.3d 1210 [same]; 54 A.L.R.3d 1282 [ordinance zoning entire municipality for residential use]; 71 A.L.R.3d 693 [what constitutes "family" within meaning of zoning regulation]; 12 A.L.R.4th 238 [ordinance restricting number of unrelated persons who can live together in residential zone]; 24 Proof of Facts 3d 543 [invalidity of single-family zoning ordinance].)

In Moore v. East Cleveland, Ohio (1977) 431 U.S. 494, 97 S.Ct. 1932, 52 L.Ed.2d 531, an arbitrary definition of family was held invalid. The city of East Cleveland had a single-family occupancy ordinance under which only restricted categories of related individuals could qualify. Appellant lived with two grandsons, and was convicted of violating the ordinance. Held, it was unconstitutional. The city relied on Belle Terre, but that case dealt with unrelated individuals; here, the ordinance prohibits relatives from living together. This interferes with the freedom of personal choice in matters of family life, a liberty protected by the Due Process Clause. (97 S.Ct. 1935, 52 L.Ed.2d 537.) (See 91 Harv. L. Rev. 128; 5 Pepperdine L. Rev. 547; 10 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 651.)

In Edmonds v. Oxford House (1995) 514 U.S. 725, 115 S.Ct. 1776, 131 L.Ed.2d 801, defendant group home consisted of 10 to 12 admittedly handicapped recovering alcoholics and drug addicts living in a single-family residence zone in violation of plaintiff city's zoning ordinance, which defined "family" as people related by genetics, adoption, or marriage (without regard to number), plus 5 or fewer unrelated persons. Although it was in obvious violation of this ordinance, defendant countered by relying on the provision of the Fair Housing Act (FHA) prohibiting discrimination in housing against the handicapped (42 U.S.C., §3602(k)). However, in a federal declaratory relief action, plaintiff claimed that the FHA was not applicable, because its definition of family came within the scope of 42 U.S.C., §3607(b)(1), excluding from the FHA local restrictions regarding the maximum number of persons allowed to occupy a dwelling. Defendant cross-complained that plaintiff, by not allowing it to maintain a group home in a single-family zone, violated 42 U.S.C., §3604(f)(3)(B), which required plaintiff to make such reasonable accommodation to its rules as was necessary to afford the handicapped equal opportunity in housing. The trial judge granted summary judgment for plaintiff, holding that its definition of family was within the exemption, and, therefore, excluded from the FHA. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, thereby creating a conflict between the Ninth and Eleventh Circuits. Held, judgment of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed.

(a) Congress enacted the exemption, 42 U.S.C., §3607(b)(1), against the backdrop of a distinction between land use control and maximum occupancy restrictions. Land use controls preserve the character of neighborhoods by limiting land use to single-family residences, it thus being necessary to define a "family." Occupancy restrictions limit the number of occupants per dwelling. Plaintiff's ordinance is concerned with preserving the quality of the neighborhood, even though, unlike the other parts of the ordinance (where the number is unlimited if the people are related in the required way), the part in question uses a number to define "family." The maximum number of people per dwelling is the subject of another of plaintiff's ordinances. The language of 42 U.S.C., §3607(b)(1), which imposes restrictions regarding the maximum number of persons permitted to occupy a home, surely encompasses maximum occupancy restrictions, but not rules tied to land use control. "In sum, rules that cap the total number of occupants in order to prevent overcrowding of a dwelling 'plainly and unmistakably' ... fall within §3607(b)(1)'s absolute exemption from FHA's governance; rules designed to preserve the family character of a neighborhood, fastening on the composition of households rather than on the total number of occupants living quarters can contain, do not." (115 S.Ct. 1782, 131 L.Ed.2d 811, citing Moore.)

(b) Plaintiff argued that its ordinance was exempt from the FHA because it capped at five persons the number of unrelated persons allowed to occupy a single-family home. However, the ordinance does not answer how many persons may occupy a single home. Indeed, as seen, any number can do so, if they are related in the required biological or legal way. "Family living, not living space per occupant, is what ECDC §21.30.010 describes. ... It is curious reasoning indeed that converts a family values preserver into a maximum occupancy restriction once a town adds to a related persons prescription 'and also two unrelated persons.' " (115 S.Ct. 1783, 131 L.Ed.2d 812.)

(c) Plaintiff's ordinance is not within the exemption; hence, the FHA applies. Whether plaintiff actually violated the FHA is a question to be left to the lower courts. (115 S.Ct. 1783, 131 L.Ed.2d 812.)

Three justices dissented, arguing that plaintiff's ordinance was within the exemption as a reasonable local restriction regarding the maximum number allowed to occupy a dwelling. (115 S.Ct. 1783, 131 L.Ed.2d 813.) (See 109 Harv. L. Rev. 309; 26 Golden Gate L. Rev. 737.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

56 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

a. In General.

2. Tests for Validity.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1031

[§ 1031] Tests for Validity.

The power to limit an area to single-family dwelling houses, excluding apartments and flats, hospitals, etc., has been established. (See supra, §1005; Brady v. Superior Court (1962) 200 C.A.2d 69, 80, 19 C.R. 242; San Francisco v. Burton (1962) 201 C.A.2d 749, 752, 20 C.R. 378; Sechrist v. Municipal Court (1976) 64 C.A.3d 737, 746, 134 C.R. 733; 23 Hastings L. J. 1459 [excluding communes]; 99 A.L.R.2d 873 ["garden-type apartments" and "row housing"]; 23 A.L.R.3d 1210 [motels]; 25 A.L.R.3d 921 [college fraternities and sororities]; 27 A.L.R.3d 1022 [hospitals, sanitariums, nursing homes]; 28 A.L.R.3d 1240 [hotels]; 83 A.L.R.3d 1103 [homes for the elderly]; 95 A.L.R.3d [outside storage of trailers, etc.]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §164 et seq.; on zoning of mobilehomes, second units, residential care facilities, etc., see infra, §1039.)

In Los Altos Hills v. Adobe Creek Properties (1973) 32 C.A.3d 488, 108 C.R. 271, plaintiff city, about 81/2 square miles of land, was incorporated in 1956. To preserve its rural character, zoning ordinances were adopted restricting occupancy to one-family residences of at least 1 acre in area, and preventing commercial uses. B, owner of a 90-acre parcel operated commercially as a public picnic ground, was allowed to continue only as a nonconforming use without the right to repair or change. Held, the ordinances were valid.

(a) The elimination of virtually all commercial uses of property is not a denial of equal protection; i.e., zoning need not provide for multiple uses. (32 C.A.3d 502.)

(b) B is seeking to protect only a commercial amusement area. Hence, "[w]hatever merit there may be for breaking down the exclusionary practices in order to enable the less affluent, including racial minorities, to find a home out of the city, this case does not appear to be the vehicle for pursuing such theories." (32 C.A.3d 507.)

(c) There was no denial of equal protection in the allowance of similar uses to nonprofit clubs or recreational facilities. (32 C.A.3d 516.)

In Associated Home Builders of the Greater Eastbay v. Livermore (1976) 18 C.3d 582, 135 C.R. 41, 557 P.2d 473, the voters of defendant, a general law city, enacted an initiative ordinance prohibiting issuance of further residential building permits until local educational, sewage disposal, and water supply facilities complied with specified standards. Plaintiff, an association of contractors and others interested in residential construction in the area, challenged the constitutionality of the ordinance, and the trial judge granted a permanent injunction. The ground relied on, that the initiative ordinance was invalid because it conflicted with the state zoning law, was held to be without substance. (See supra, §1027.) The more serious challenge, on which the trial judge did not rule, was that the ordinance was not a proper exercise of the police power. The court pointed out that the limited record, with no factual determinations below, prevented resolution of the constitutional issue on this appeal; but it nevertheless proceeded, in an elaborate opinion for the guidance of the trial court, to state the controlling principles. (18 C.3d 601.)

(a) Strict judicial scrutiny test is inapplicable. Writers have contended that exclusionary land use ordinances tend primarily to exclude racial minorities and the poor, and therefore should be subject to strict judicial scrutiny and upheld only on a showing of a compelling interest. (18 C.3d 601.) This is not the proper test for the Livermore ordinance because there is no discrimination on the basis of race or wealth. The ordinance does not ban or limit inexpensive housing while permitting expensive single-family residences on large lots; it impartially bans all residential construction until the standards are met. (18 C.3d 602.)

(b) No burden on right to travel. The indirect burden on the right to travel does not warrant application of the compelling interest standard. Cases holding legislation invalid because of a direct burden, e.g., by discriminating against nonresidents or newly arrived residents (see supra, §734 et seq.) are distinguishable. (18 C.3d 602.) Legislation that does not penalize travel and resettlement, but merely makes it more difficult for the outsider to establish a residence in a desired place, is subject to the liberal standards that have traditionally tested the validity of land use restrictions under the police power. (18 C.3d 603, 604, citing Belle Terre v. Boraas (1974) 416 U.S. 797, 94 S.Ct. 1536, 39 L.Ed.2d 797, supra, §1030, and other federal cases.) The strict test would change the presumption of validity to a presumption of invalidity, and would result in wholesale invalidation of land use controls. (18 C.3d 603.)

(c) Traditional test of reasonable relation to public welfare is applicable. When an exclusionary ordinance is challenged under federal due process, leading federal decisions, followed in California cases, apply the test set forth in Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co. (1926) 272 U.S. 365, 47 S.Ct. 114, 71 L.Ed. 303, supra, §1005: "[I]f it is fairly debatable that the ordinance is reasonably related to the public welfare, the ordinance is constitutional." (18 C.3d 606.)

(d) Regional welfare test where nonresidents are affected. The present ordinance significantly affects the interests of nonresidents, and presents a special problem. An ordinance with an effect only in the municipality need only relate to the welfare of its residents; but "if, as alleged here, the ordinance may strongly influence the supply and distribution of housing for an entire metropolitan region, judicial inquiry must consider the welfare of that region." (18 C.3d 607, citing Scott v. Indian Wells (1972) 6 C.3d 541, 99 C.R. 745, 492 P.2d 1137, infra, §1052.) The trial judge must apply this test as follows:

(1) The first step is to forecast the probable effect and duration of the restriction. "[T]he court must ascertain the extent to which public facilities currently fall short of the specified standards, must inquire whether the city or appropriate regional agencies have undertaken to construct needed improvements, and must determine when the improvements are likely to be completed." (18 C.3d 608.)

(2) The second step is to identify the competing interests affected by the restriction. "We touch in this area deep social antagonisms. We allude to the conflict between the environmental protectionists and the egalitarian humanists; a collision between the forces that would save the benefits of nature and those that would preserve the opportunity of people in general to settle. Suburban residents who seek to overcome problems of inadequate schools and public facilities to secure 'the blessing of quiet seclusion and clean air' and to 'make the area a sanctuary for people' ... may assert a vital interest in limiting immigration to their community. Outsiders searching for a place to live in the face of a growing shortage of adequate housing, and hoping to share in the perceived benefits of suburban life, may present a countervailing interest opposing barriers to immigration." (18 C.3d 608.)

(3) The third step is to determine whether the ordinance represents a reasonable accommodation of the competing interests. The court may defer to the judgment of a municipality's legislative body, but must still find that the ordinance has a real and substantial relation to the public welfare. (18 C.3d 609.)

(e) Evidence necessary for determination of issue. (1) The burden is on the party challenging the ordinance to present the necessary evidence and documentation, and plaintiff did not shoulder that burden. It presented no evidence on the likely duration or effect of the restriction, on whether the city has undertaken to construct the needed improvements, on when those improvements will be completed, or on the existence of an acute housing shortage and its relation to the probable effect of the Livermore ordinance. (2) Defendant maintains that the city has severe problems of air pollution and inadequate public facilities, which make it reasonable to divert new housing temporarily to other communities, but offered no evidence to support the claim. "Without an evidentiary record to demonstrate the validity and significance of the asserted interests, we cannot determine whether the instant ordinance attempts a reasonable accommodation of those interests." (18 C.3d 610.)

A single dissenting justice launched a devastating attack on the majority's approach to this problem, and pointed out that the ordinance provides no timetable for building up the public services, so that the building moratorium is likely to continue for decades. (18 C.3d 616.) (See 67 Cal. L. Rev. 1154; 70 Cal. L. Rev. 151; 29 Hastings L. J. 803; 31 Hastings L. J. 133; 14 San Diego L. Rev. 1227; 19 Santa Clara L. Rev. 777 [impact on neighboring communities]; 10 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 59 [Municipal Services Moratoria]; 92 A.L.R.3d 1073 [ban on construction until public facilities comply with specific standards].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

57 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

a. In General.

3. Invalid Ordinances.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1032

[§ 1032] Invalid Ordinances.

In Santa Barbara v. Adamson (1980) 27 C.3d 123, 164 C.R. 539, 610 P.2d 436, the California constitutional right of privacy (supra, §575) was invoked to nullify an exclusionary ordinance. Santa Barbara and some 37 other cities have zoning ordinances that provide several residence zones--for one-family, two-family, and multiple-family units. "Family" is defined as (1) the traditional family of persons related by blood, marriage, or adoption, or (2) a group of not over 5 persons (excluding servants). Defendant A, owner of a 24-room house, entered into a living arrangement with 11 other adults, who shared expenses and enjoyed social and recreational activities together. This "alternate family" violated the ordinance's "rule of 5," and the city obtained an injunction prohibiting the 12 from living together in the home. Held, reversed.

(a) The California constitutional right of privacy, as construed in White v. Davis (1975) 13 C.3d 757, 120 C.R. 94, 533 P.2d 222, supra, §575, protects "freedom to associate with the people we choose." (27 C.3d 130.) Hence, even if Belle Terre v. Boraas (1974) 416 U.S. 797, 94 S.Ct. 1536, 39 L.Ed.2d 797, supra, §1030, does not recognize a federal right of privacy protecting defendants' rights, the broader California provision does. (27 C.3d 130, footnote 3, commenting on uncertainty of federal law.)

(b) As White declares, the right of privacy should be abridged only when there is a compelling public interest. Plaintiff city has not demonstrated that there is such an interest. The rule of 5 does not inhibit transiency, or prevent overcrowding (crowding is permissible where members are related), or have any effect on noise, traffic, or other important characteristics of a residential district. (27 C.3d 132.)

(c) The residential character of a district can be preserved by means less restrictive of freedom; e.g., by restrictions on transient and institutional uses. Population density can be controlled by floor space and similar regulations. Noise and morality can be dealt with by law enforcement. Traffic and parking can be handled by nondiscriminatory limitations on the number of cars and by off-street parking requirements. "In general, zoning ordinances are much less suspect when they focus on the use than when they command inquiry into who are the users." (27 C.3d 133.)

(d) Some courts have defined "family" to specify a concept more rationally related to the legitimate aim of maintaining a family style of living; e.g., in New Jersey a valid regulation of single-family dwellings would be "a reasonable number of persons who constitute a bona fide single housekeeping unit." (27 C.3d 134.)

Three justices dissented. (27 C.3d 139.) (See Chula Vista v. Pagard (1981) 115 C.A.3d 785, 171 C.R. 738 [following Adamson in invalidating similar ordinance, but encouraging cities to continue drafting regulations to promote family needs and values]; 69 Cal. L. Rev. 1052 [Adamson]; 32 Hastings L. J. 1687 [same]; 14 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 359 [same]; 71 A.L.R.3d 693 [what is "family" for purposes of zoning restriction]; 12 A.L.R.4th 238 [ordinance restricting number of unrelated persons who can live together in residential zone]; 24 Proof of Facts 3d 543 [invalidity of single-family zoning ordinance].)

The reasoning of Adamson was followed in Elysium Institute v. Los Angeles (1991) 232 C.A.3d 408, 283 C.R. 688. Los Angeles County adopted a zoning ordinance under which nudist camps were restricted to areas zoned for heavy agriculture, while other recreational clubs were allowed in areas zoned for light agriculture. Under the ordinance, a nudist camp was any area where three or more persons, not members of the same family, engaged in activity involving nudity. The court found these restrictions unconstitutional.

(a) Under the ordinance, three unrelated nudists could not gather together in a private home. There is no compelling interest for including private homes within the definition of nudist camp, and the definition thus violates the right to privacy guaranteed by the California Constitution. (232 C.A.3d 426.)

(b) Operation of a nudist camp in a particular zone does not involve a fundamental right. (232 C.A.3d 427.) Hence, for equal protection analysis, the question is whether the exclusion of nudist camps while allowing other recreational uses in the light agriculture zone bears a rational relationship to a legitimate state purpose. (232 C.A.3d 429.) The County cited various concerns, such as the possibility of curiosity seekers and increased traffic resulting from use of property as a nudist camp. However, the ordinance requires recreational groups to obtain conditional use permits, and factors such as increased traffic and the health, welfare, and comfort of surrounding residents can be considered through the conditional use permit procedure. Thus, "the distinction between nudist camps and recreational clubs bears no rational relationship to a conceivable legitimate purpose." (232 C.A.3d 432.)

In College Area Renters & Landlord Assn. v. San Diego (1996) 43 C.A.4th 677, 50 C.R.2d 515, an ordinance limited the number of adult occupants of a rented one-family dwelling unit based on the square footage of bedroom areas, the number and size of bathrooms, and the amount of off-street parking. Held, the ordinance was invalid on equal protection grounds. "[T]he purpose of the law is to address problems associated with excessive occupancy of detached homes in a single-family residence zone. Owners and tenants are similarly situated with respect to the overcrowding problem--i.e., both groups can overcrowd a neighborhood. Assuming arguendo (without addressing the issue) that this case only requires use of the rational relationship test, we are not persuaded that there is a sufficient relationship between the non-owner-occupied classification and the overcrowding problem, so as to justify imposing occupancy restrictions on tenant residents that do not apply to neighboring owner residents." (43 C.A.4th 686.) (See Coalition Advocating Legal Housing Options v. Santa Monica (2001) 88 C.A.4th 451, 458, 462, 105 C.R.2d 802 [following Adamson and College Area Renters; ordinance limiting occupancy of second units in single family residential zones to property owner or his or her dependent or caregiver violated both privacy and equal protection rights].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

58 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

b. Business and Commercial Activity.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1033

[§ 1033] Business and Commercial Activity.

(1) In General. The power to exclude businesses or other commercial activities from residential areas is unquestioned. (See Govt.C. 65850(a); Friel v. Los Angeles (1959) 172 C.A.2d 142, 157, 342 P.2d 374 [oil well drilling prohibited in residential district in unincorporated area]; Hart v. Beverly Hills (1938) 11 C.2d 343, 349, 79 P.2d 1080 [ordinance prohibiting auction sales in a residential district was upheld on theory that assembling of curious crowds attracted by auctions furnishes opportunity for petty frauds and crimes]; Teachers Ins. & Annuity Assn. v. Furlotti (1999) 70 C.A.4th 1487, 1496, 1497, 83 C.R.2d 455 [use by business of easement on residentially zoned property to serve commercial property was commercial use in violation of zoning; private agreement on use of property was immaterial]; supra, §1005.)

Floresta v. San Leandro (1961) 190 C.A.2d 599, 12 C.R. 182, upheld the power of a city council to prohibit a cocktail lounge in a shopping center. The court rejected the argument of state preemption of the field of liquor control, pointing out that zoning seeks the planning of uses on a community scale, not the regulation or control of liquor. (190 C.A.2d 605.)

(2) Exception for Home Occupation. In Butte v. Bach (1985) 172 C.A.3d 848, 218 C.R. 613, an ordinance contained a "home occupation" exception allowing a home occupation to be conducted by persons who "reside" on the premises. Defendant, an attorney, had his law office in his home. Held, an injunction would lie against this use. The exception is an accommodation between conflicting values, and "is implicitly premised upon expectations that the number and distribution of such encroachments will not be intolerable and that persons who live where they work are likely to have less detrimental impact than nonresidents." (172 C.A.3d 865.) Here, defendant's "use of the property for 'residential' purposes is, at best, accessory to and incidental to the primary use of the premises for law office purposes." A person whose residential use of a house is so disproportioned to its commercial use is not "residing on the premises" within the meaning the ordinance. (172 C.A.3d 865.)

In Los Altos v. Barnes (1992) 3 C.A.4th 1193, 5 C.R.2d 77, plaintiff city's zoning ordinance permitted home occupations in residential zones, provided that no assistants were employed and that the use was carried on by occupants of the property. Defendant was enjoined from carrying on her home occupation because she employed assistants who did not reside at her home. Held, affirmed.

(a) In the cases relied on by defendant, the government sought to intrude into private areas of individual lives. However, this ordinance does not intrude into defendant's private affairs. "It does not regulate with whom she resides, inquire into whom she employs or force her to divulge information about whom her associates are. All the ordinance does is regulate the use of her home." (3 C.A.4th 1201.)

(b) Prior cases have recognized the validity of ordinances limiting home occupations in residential neighborhoods. The restrictions on home occupations have been crafted to ensure that the occupation remains unobtrusive and does not detract from an otherwise residential neighborhood. "In this respect, ordinances restricting home occupations represent a compromise between removing incompatible commercial use from residential neighborhoods and the social necessity of permitting some home occupations to continue." (3 C.A.4th 1205, 1206.) The Los Altos ordinance strikes a reasonable compromise between the competing interests. (3 C.A.4th 1206.) (See 33 Proof of Facts 3d 547 [validity under zoning ordinance of home occupation accessory use of residential property].)

(3) Texts and Law Reviews. Much has been written on the exclusion of business or commercial activity from specified areas. (See 22 Hastings L. J. 587 [power lines]; 9 San Diego L. Rev. 355 [service stations]; 61 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1373 [criticizing zoning ordinances limiting liquor stores or sales as inappropriate to combat alcohol abuse]; 9 A.L.R.2d 683 [exclusion of industrial activities inconsistent with residential character]; 73 A.L.R.2d 439 ["home occupation" as accessory use]; 75 A.L.R.2d 168 [gasoline filling stations]; 76 A.L.R.2d 1172 [shopping centers]; 82 A.L.R.2d 989 [restaurants, drive-ins, etc.]; 11 A.L.R.3d 1004 [vending machines]; 24 A.L.R.3d 1128 [accessory use of dwelling for professional office]; 50 A.L.R.3d 837 [junkyards and scrap metal plants]; 81 A.L.R.3d 1086 [radio or television facilities]; 92 A.L.R.3d 328 [funeral homes]; 96 A.L.R.3d 921 [cemeteries]; 100 A.L.R.3d 252 [billiard rooms and bowling alleys]; 100 A.L.R.3d 876 [halfway house for former patients of mental hospital]; 54 A.L.R.4th 1034 [incidental and accessory uses of property zoned for residential purposes]; 63 A.L.R.5th 607 [golf, swimming, tennis]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §226 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, Chap. 6.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Texts and Law Reviews. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §5.36 et seq.

59 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

c. Transient Commercial Use of Residential Property.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1034

[§ 1034] Transient Commercial Use of Residential Property.

In Ewing v. Carmel-By-The-Sea (1991) 234 C.A.3d 1579, 286 C.R. 382, defendant city enacted an ordinance prohibiting transient commercial use of residential property for remuneration for less than 30 consecutive days. The crucial term was defined as the commercial use "for bed and breakfast, hostel, hotel, inn, lodging, motel, resort." The city council, in its findings, declared that commercial use of property in the single-family district would "create unmitigable, adverse impacts on surrounding residential uses, including, but not limited to, increased levels of commercial and residential vehicle traffic, parking demand, light and glare, and noise detrimental to surrounding residential uses and the general welfare of the City," and that it might "increase demand for public services, including, but not limited to, police, fire, and medical emergency services, and neighborhood watch programs." (234 C.A.3d 1589.) Held, the ordinance was valid.

(a) "It stands to reason that the 'residential character' of a neighborhood is threatened when a significant number of homes--at least 12 percent in this case, according to the record--are occupied not by permanent residents but by a stream of tenants staying a weekend, a week, or even 29 days. Whether or not transient rentals have the other 'unmitigable adverse impacts' cited by the council, such rentals undoubtedly affect the essential character of a neighborhood and the stability of a community. Short-term tenants have little interest in public agencies or in the welfare of the citizenry. They do not participate in local government, coach little league, or join the hospital guild. They do not lead a scout troop, volunteer at the library, or keep an eye on an elderly neighbor. Literally, they are here today and gone tomorrow--without engaging in the sort of activities that weld and strengthen a community." (234 C.A.3d 1591.)

(b) "Blessed with unparalleled geography, climate, beauty, and charm, Carmel naturally attracts numerous short-term visitors. Again, it stands to reason that Carmel would wish to preserve an enclave of single-family homes as the heart and soul of the city." (234 C.A.3d 1591.) It cannot be said that the ordinance adopted for this purpose is without a substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. (234 C.A.3d 1592.)

(c) The ordinance leaves plaintiffs with several economically viable uses of their property. "Plaintiffs may live in their homes permanently or occasionally. They may rent their homes for remuneration for at least 30 days. They may allow others to use their homes, without remuneration, for any length of time. They may sell their homes or otherwise encumber them." (234 C.A.3d 1592.) Thus, the diminution of their ownership rights is minimal, "and far outweighed by the public interest in enhancing and maintaining permanent residential areas." (234 C.A.3d 1592.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

60 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

d. Churches.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1035

[§ 1035] Churches.

In Corporation of Presiding Bishop of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints v. Porterville (1949) 90 C.A.2d 656, 203 P.2d 823, an ordinance creating a zone for strictly residential uses, excluding use for church purposes, was upheld. "It is a matter of common knowledge that people in considerable numbers assemble in churches and that parking and traffic problems exist where crowds gather. This would be true particularly in areas limited to single family dwellings." (90 C.A.2d 659.) (See Minney v. Azusa (1958) 164 C.A.2d 12, 24, 330 P.2d 255; Garden Grove Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses v. Garden Grove (1959) 176 C.A.2d 136, 142, 1 C.R. 65 [denial of conditional use permit to church affirmed]; 74 A.L.R.2d 377 [zoning regulations as affecting churches]; 62 A.L.R.3d 197 [what constitutes "church" or "religious use"]; 11 A.L.R.4th 1084 [what constitutes accessory or incidental use of religious property within zoning ordinance]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §350 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 31 A.L.R.6th 395 [validity and construction of exclusion or inclusion of religious uses or places of worship in single-family residential zoning districts].

61 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

e. Schools.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1036

[§ 1036] Schools.

An ordinance discriminating against private schools was held invalid in Roman Catholic Welfare Corp. of San Francisco v. Piedmont (1955) 45 C.2d 325, 289 P.2d 438. Defendant city established a residential zone covering 98.7% of the total area and 98.2% of the total population. In that zone the ordinance allowed public schools, but private schools were only permitted in small, unimproved areas of other zones. Petitioner sought mandamus to compel issuance of a building permit for a private school immediately adjacent to a Catholic Church in the residential zone. Held, writ granted; the ordinance was unconstitutional. (a) The right of parents to send their children to private rather than public schools (see infra, §1071) includes the right to send them to a school located in the general neighborhood, rather than outside the city or state. (45 C.2d 329.) (b) Private schools have no more harmful effect on a locality than public schools, and a zoning ordinance cannot exclude one from an area in which the other is allowed. (45 C.2d 332.) (c) Corporation of Presiding Bishop of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints v. Porterville (1949) 90 C.A.2d 656, 203 P.2d 823, supra, §1035, is distinguishable, because there all churches were excluded from the area. (45 C.2d 334.)

Piedmont was effectively undermined by the application of a different governing principle in Tustin Heights Assn. v. Board of Supervisors of Orange (1959) 170 C.A.2d 619, 339 P.2d 914. A county ordinance excluded all schools from the residential area. The Roman Catholic Archbishop, seeking to establish a church and parochial school, pointed out that, because the public school system is a matter of statewide concern that cannot be regulated by local authorities (supra, §1002), public schools were in fact allowed while private schools were excluded. Held, the ordinance was valid. It was not, like that in Piedmont, discriminatory in terms; and the fact that the state public schools were actually free from the restriction did not make it unconstitutional. "The list of state activities which are not subject to local zoning is long and varied and the law does not prohibit the regulation of the counterpart of each of these activities in private ownership. Equal protection of the law does not require an equating of private rights with those of the sovereign." (170 C.A.2d 632.)

The 1959 Legislature solved the problem of these cases by the enactment of Govt.C. 53094, providing that the governing board of a school district may, by a two-thirds vote, render a zoning ordinance inapplicable to school district use (with exceptions for nonclassroom uses). The city, however, may seek judicial review of the board's decision, and the court may set it aside if it is determined to be "arbitrary and capricious." (See Santa Clara v. Santa Clara Unified School Dist. (1971) 22 C.A.3d 152, 160, 99 C.R. 212 [trial court's judgment that district acted arbitrarily and capriciously was reversed for lack of evidentiary support]; 64 A.L.R.3d 1087 [what constitutes "school" or "educational use"]; 64 A.L.R.3d 1138 [regulations as applied to colleges or universities]; 74 A.L.R.3d 14 [private and parochial schools below college level]; 74 A.L.R.3d 136 [elementary and high schools]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §336 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

62 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

4. Exclusionary Zoning.

f. Miscellaneous Classifications.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1037

[§ 1037] Miscellaneous Classifications.

The following are illustrative of the wide variety of other land uses that have been subjected to zoning regulations:

(1) Agricultural zones. (See Gisler v. Madera (1974) 38 C.A.3d 303, 307, 112 C.R. 919 [exclusive agricultural zoning with minimum 18-acre parcel size]; 38 A.L.R.5th 357 [construction and application of terms "agricultural," "farm," "farming," etc., in zoning regulations]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, §6.13 et seq.)

(2) Industrial zones. (See 98 A.L.R.2d 225 [research and laboratory facilities]; 11 A.L.R.3d 1187 [meaning of "garage" in zoning regulation]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, §6.22.)

(3) Public facilities, etc. (See 85 Harv. L. Rev. 574 [preservation of urban landmarks]; 7 A.L.R.3d 1443 [bomb or fallout shelters]; 59 A.L.R.3d 1244 [applicability of regulations to waste disposal facilities of governmental entities]; 53 A.L.R.5th 1 [applicability of zoning regulations to governmental projects or activities]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, §8.59 et seq.)

(4) Signs, billboards, and outdoor advertising. (See infra, §1066 et seq.)

(5) Timberland preserve zones. (See Govt.C. 51100 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, Supp., §6.21A.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Agricultural zones. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §5.38.

(2) Industrial zones. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §5.37.

(3) Public facilities, etc. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §5.44 et seq.

(5) Timberland preserve zones. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. On regulation of state land, see C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §6.61 et seq.

63 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

5. Type of Lot or Dwelling.

a. Lot Area and Open Space.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1038

[§ 1038] Lot Area and Open Space.

One of the evils attacked by residential zoning regulations is the small lot that produces an undersize house, encouraging crowds to dwell together without adequate light and living space, and creating congestion in the streets--in brief, slum conditions. Ordinances that prescribe a minimum lot area for single-family dwellings are usually upheld. (See Govt.C. 65850(c), supra, §1020 [authorizing these regulations]; Hill v. Manhattan Beach (1971) 6 C.3d 279, 286, 98 C.R. 785, 491 P.2d 369, infra, §1041; Morehart v. Santa Barbara (1994) 7 C.4th 725, 751, 29 C.R.2d 804, 872 P.2d 143 [zoning ordinance requiring undersized parcels to be merged to comply with density standards was impliedly preempted by statewide merger provisions (Govt.C. 66451.10 et seq.)]; 94 A.L.R.2d 398, 491 [open yards]; 96 A.L.R.2d 1367 [minimum width or frontage requirements]; 80 A.L.R.3d 95 ["floating zones"]; 1 A.L.R.4th 373 [fences, hedges, walls]; 1 A.L.R.5th 622 [validity of zoning laws setting minimum lot size requirements]; 2 A.L.R.5th 553 [construction of regulations setting minimum lot size requirements]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §127 et seq.)

In Clemons v. Los Angeles (1950) 36 C.2d 95, 222 P.2d 439, a Los Angeles zoning ordinance prescribed an area requirement in residential zones of 5,000 square feet with frontage of not less than 50 feet. Plaintiff bought an old bungalow court of nine units, subdivided it into nine lots of 925 square feet with bungalow, and conveyed to separate individuals. Held, the ordinance was valid and the conveyances were void. Small lots tend to create slum conditions and overcrowding, add noise and other irritations, and make it more difficult to enforce health and sanitary regulations. Larger lots cut down on congestion in the streets, facilitate transportation and other utilities, provide recreational space for children to play, and encourage cultivation of flowers and shrubs. Moreover, the benefits of the Subdivision Map Act (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §809) would be lost if, after compliance by the subdivider, purchasers could erect multiple dwellings and then cut up the units for separate resale. (36 C.2d 99.)

One of the methods of preserving open space is the "cluster development," which groups dwellings on a portion of the development area, leaving other portions open. "Control of density in the area to be developed is an essential part of the plan. The reservation of green, or at least open, spaces, in a manner differing from the conventional front or back yard, is another ingredient. Conformity to good landscaping, as the planners devise it, is also an objective." (Orinda Homeowners Committee v. Board of Supervisors (1970) 11 C.A.3d 768, 772, 90 C.R. 88; see 43 A.L.R.3d 888 [planned unit, cluster, or greenbelt zoning].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

64 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

5. Type of Lot or Dwelling.

b. Other Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1039

[§ 1039] Other Regulations.

(1) Setback Lines and Parking Space. Building setback lines and off-street parking requirements are commonly upheld unless wholly unreasonable. (See Govt.C. 65850(d) [off-street parking and loading]; Govt.C. 65850(e) [setback lines]; Thille v. Board of Public Works of Los Angeles (1927) 82 C.A. 187, 189, 255 P. 294 [30-foot setback valid]; Weiner v. Los Angeles (1968) 68 C.2d 697, 703, 68 C.R. 733, 441 P.2d 293 [331/2-foot setback valid]; Hoshour v. Contra Costa (1962) 203 C.A.2d 602, 21 C.R. 714, infra, §1048 [arbitrary setback requirement is invalid]; 74 A.L.R.2d 418 [parking space]; 71 A.L.R.4th 529 [residential off-street parking requirements]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §139 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §§5.23, 6.53 et seq.)

(2) Minimum Dwelling Size and Cost. Land planning on a bolder scale sometimes seeks to maintain better living conditions in residential districts by requiring adequate minimum square footage in a dwelling. Although the cases are in conflict, there is some authority to support this type of regulation. (See 66 Harv. L. Rev. 1051, 1059; 87 A.L.R.4th 294 [minimum floor space or cubic footage inside residence]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §138.) But a requirement of minimum cost of dwellings is probably unconstitutional. (See 66 Harv. L. Rev. 1055.)

(3) Architectural Style or Design. There are conflicting decisions on the validity of ordinances regulating architectural style or design of structures. (See Briggs v. Rolling Hills Estates (1995) 40 C.A.4th 637, 642, 47 C.R.2d 29 ["neighborhood compatibility" ordinance requiring that design of new or remodeled structures "respect the existing privacy of surrounding properties" was not unconstitutionally vague]; 30 Hastings Const L. Q. 395 [Freedom of Speech and the Language of Architecture]; 33 San Diego L. Rev. 291 [arguing that aesthetic regulation of architectural design of private single-family houses impinges on First Amendment right of expression and thus must advance substantial governmental interest]; 28 Stanf. L. Rev. 179 [Architecture, Aesthetic Zoning, and the First Amendment]; 41 A.L.R.3d 1397; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §148 et seq.; infra, §1063.)

(4) Mobile- and Manufactured Homes. Several statutes deal with zoning of mobile- and manufactured homes. (See Govt.C. 65583 [housing element of general plan (supra, §1013) must identify adequate sites]; Govt.C. 65852.3 [manufactured homes must be permitted on lots zoned for single-family dwellings]; Govt.C. 65852.4 [applications to install manufactured homes on lots zoned for single-family dwellings may not be subjected to requirements other than those imposed on conventional dwellings]; Govt.C. 65852.7 [mobilehome park as permitted use on land zoned for residential use]; Health & Saf.C. 18300(a) [zoning regulations]; 16 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 167 [Govt.C. 65852.3]; 42 A.L.R.3d 598 [validity and application of zoning regulations to mobile home or trailer parks]; 17 A.L.R.4th 106 [restricting mobilehomes or trailers to established mobilehome or trailer parks]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §193 et seq.; 41 Proof of Facts 3d 495 [proof necessary to challenge zoning regulation of mobile- and manufactured homes]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §8.93 et seq.)

(5) Second Units. Local ordinances may be enacted to provide for second units in single-family and multifamily residential zones. (Govt.C. 65852.2(a); see Govt.C. 65852.2(d) [permits minimum and maximum unit size requirements, so long as they permit at least an efficiency unit]; Govt.C. 65852.2(e) [limiting parking restrictions for second units].) However, an ordinance totally precluding second units in these zones must not be adopted unless specified findings are made. (Govt.C. 65852.2(c).) If the local government does not adopt either ordinance, it must accept applications for conditional use permits and approve or disapprove them ministerially without discretionary review. A variance or special use permit must be granted if the second unit complies with specified criteria. (Govt.C. 65852.2(b) [providing for adoption of ordinance on second units within 120 days of receiving application for second unit]; see Desmond v. Contra Costa (1993) 21 C.A.4th 330, 340, 341, 25 C.R.2d 842 [county board of supervisors properly denied application for second unit; county's second-unit ordinance was adopted under and complied with Govt.C. 65852.2(a), and thus "maximum standards" of Govt.C. 65852.2(b) were inapplicable]; Sounhein v. San Dimas (1996) 47 C.A.4th 1181, 1187, 55 C.R.2d 290 [conditions of use permit granted under Govt.C. 65852.2(b) run with land and apply to subsequent owner-occupants]; on conditional use permits, see infra, §1050 et seq.; on Govt.C. 65852.1, permitting zoning variances or permits for attached units to house persons 60 years of age or over, see infra, §1053.)

(6) Residential Care Facilities. Health & Saf.C. 1500 et seq. deal with various types of care facilities. A residential facility serving six or fewer persons must be considered a residential use in local ordinances, and no conditional use permit or zoning variance can be required that would not be required for a family dwelling of the same type in the same zone. (Health & Saf.C. 1566.3; see Health & Saf.C. 1569.85 [residential care facilities for elderly]; Health & Saf.C. 1520.5 [policy to avoid "overconcentration" of residential care facilities]; Health & Saf.C. 1597.40 [restriction on use of single-family residence as family day care home is prohibited].)

(7) Reconstruction or Restoration of Multifamily Dwelling. Except as specifically provided, no local agency may prohibit the reconstruction, restoration, or rebuilding of multifamily dwellings that have been involuntarily damaged or destroyed. (Govt.C. 65852.25.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Setback Lines and Parking Space. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. On design provisions generally, see C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §5.25 et seq.; on parking requirements for density bonus units, see C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §6.15.(4) Mobile- and Manufactured Homes. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §11.19 et seq.(5) Second Units. Govt.C. 65852.1, providing for second units for seniors, became inoperative on January 1, 2007, except that any zoning variance or special or conditional use permit issued before that date remains valid.

65 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

6. Retroactive Zoning.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1040

[§ 1040] Retroactive Zoning.

(1) In General. Zoning ordinances have generally been prospective; i.e., the regulatory bodies have not attempted to eradicate existing nonconforming uses immediately, but have sought to eliminate them gradually by prohibiting alteration and repair. (See infra, §1042.)

In Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 295 P. 14, an ordinance restricting sanitariums to certain districts was expressly made retroactive, and an action was brought to enjoin its enforcement. The court held that nonconforming uses could not be eliminated by a retroactive ordinance unless they amounted to a nuisance. (211 C. 321.) (See Biscay v. Burlingame (1932) 127 C.A. 213, 219, 15 P.2d 784; Trans-Oceanic Oil Corp. v. Santa Barbara (1948) 85 C.A.2d 776, 791, 194 P.2d 148, supra, §626; Armistead v. Los Angeles (1957) 152 C.A.2d 319, 324, 313 P.2d 127; McCaslin v. Monterey Park (1958) 163 C.A.2d 339, 346, 329 P.2d 522; on elimination of nuisance, see Livingston Rock & Gravel Co. v. Los Angeles (1954) 43 C.2d 121, 128, 272 P.2d 4, infra, §1044.)

The claim of invalid retroactive application (or "estoppel to change") has been rejected, however, where the landowner merely relied on a prior zoning plan, or succeeded in freely violating the plan for some time. (See Donovan v. Santa Monica (1948) 88 C.A.2d 386, 395, 199 P.2d 51 [violation commenced in 1926, enforcement in 1945]; Price v. Schwafel (1949) 92 C.A.2d 77, 82, 206 P.2d 683 [reliance on prior plan].) In justification of this result, the court said in Wilkins v. San Bernardino (1946) 29 C.2d 332, 342, 175 P.2d 542: "If this were not so then any landowner could violate a zoning ordinance with impunity, secure in the knowledge that, by just going far enough, by devoting his land to unrestricted uses, and by creating a situation in which enforcement would result in hardship to him, he could obtain a judgment that the ordinance is unconstitutional as applied to the then existing circumstances as changed by his actions." (29 C.2d 342.)

(2) Building Permit Application or Issuance. In Russian Hill Imp. Assn. v. Board of Permit App. of San Francisco (1967) 66 C.2d 34, 56 C.R. 672, 423 P.2d 824, the city Planning Commission approved a maximum height limit, and the Board of Supervisors enacted it, to take effect March 23, 1964. Four days before its effective date, the permit bureau approved a developer's application for an above-height limit apartment building. The Board of Permit Appeals approved, but the superior court ordered the permit revoked. Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) Formerly, a change in zoning law could be retroactively applied unless the permittee had constructed a substantial portion of the building in good faith reliance on the old law. To eliminate uncertainty and waste in this rule, municipalities enacted ordinances like the one involved here, giving immunity from the time of some clearly defined action, e.g., the "lawful granting" of a permit. But this does not protect a mere hope. The permit must be lawfully granted, not merely issued by the permit bureau; and issuance confers only a conditional immunity because the Board of Permit Appeals retains the power to order a denial due to a pending change in the law. (66 C.2d 40.)

(b) By holding that a permit is not "lawfully granted" until all administrative action is completed, municipal power to prevent circumvention of newly enacted zoning laws is preserved. In light of this policy, the lure of statutory immunity should not be extended to all who might obtain a permit bureau preliminary approval during the inevitable interval between enactment and the effective date of a change. (66 C.2d 43.) (See San Francisco Planning & Urban Renewal Assn. Com. v. Central Permit Bureau (1973) 30 C.A.3d 920, 927, 106 C.R. 670 [distinguishing Russian Hill; permit granted before final administrative action adopting interim controls]; 49 A.L.R.3d 13 [retroactive effect of regulation, in absence of saving clause, on validly issued building permit]; 49 A.L.R.3d 1150 [saving provisions protecting landowners who applied for or received permit prior to change]; 50 A.L.R.3d 596 [retroactive effect of regulation, in absence of saving clause, on pending application for permit].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

66 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

7. Nonconforming Uses.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1041

[§ 1041] In General.

The most formidable obstacles to successful land planning are the existing nonconforming property uses--usually businesses in a newly created residential district. As the court observed in Los Angeles v. Gage (1954) 127 C.A.2d 442, 274 P.2d 34: "Until recently zoning ordinances have made no provision for any systematic and comprehensive elimination of the nonconforming use. The expectation seems to have been that existing nonconforming uses would be of little consequence and that they would eventually disappear. ... The contrary appears to be the case. ... It is said that the fundamental problem facing zoning is the inability to eliminate the nonconforming use." (127 C.A.2d 454.)

Because the immediate prohibition of nondangerous business causes serious hardship and may be deemed so destructive of property interests as to constitute a denial of due process (see supra, §1040), less drastic methods have been devised and are generally upheld. (See San Diego v. McClurken (1951) 37 C.2d 683, 686, 234 P.2d 972 ["There is a growing tendency to guard against the indefinite continuance of nonconforming uses by providing for their liquidation within a prescribed period"]; Livingston Rock & Gravel Co. v. Los Angeles (1954) 43 C.2d 121, 127, 272 P.2d 4; 80 A.L.R.3d 630 [advertising structure as nonconforming use]; 89 A.L.R.3d 1051 [building under construction as vested right to nonconforming use]; 38 A.L.R.5th 737 [activities in preparation for building as establishing valid nonconforming use or vested right to engage in construction for intended use]; 44 Proof of Facts 3d 531 [circumstances justifying termination of lawful nonconforming use]; 62 Am.Jur. Trials 1 [landowner's right to maintain nonconforming use under zoning ordinance]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §555 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, Chap. 9.)

The principle for methods for terminating nonconforming uses is (a) prohibition against rebuilding or expansion (infra, §1042), and (b) amortization provisions that terminate the use within a reasonable period (infra, §1044). It also has been suggested that the power of eminent domain might be exercised to eliminate the use without hardship by purchase of the property for its fair value. (See Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 319, 295 P. 14; on nature of power of eminent domain, see infra, §1112.)

The protection against retroactive application of ordinances (supra, §1040) is extended only to a lawful use existing on the effective date of the restriction. If the land has not actually been used for the nonconforming purpose the ordinance will apply; i.e., "[n]onuse is not a nonconforming use." (Hill v. Manhattan Beach (1971) 6 C.3d 279, 286, 98

C.R. 785, 491 P.2d 369; see Hansen Bros. Enterprises v. Board of Supervisors (1996) 12 C.4th 533, 48 C.R.2d 778, 907 P.2d 1324, infra, §1043 [existing use must be similar to use existing when ordinance became effective]; Stokes v. Board of Permit App. (1997) 52 C.A.4th 1348, 1355, 1357, 61 C.R.2d 181 [distinguishing Hansen; use of property as bathhouse had been discontinued as unlawful health hazard for several years before plaintiff purchased building]; Bauer v. San Diego (1999) 75 C.A.4th 1281, 1292, 1296, 89 C.R.2d 795 [following Hansen; plaintiff who had grandfathered right to sell alcoholic beverages but whose liquor license was temporarily suspended was entitled to administrative hearing, including adjudication of termination of grandfathered rights, before city could apply new zoning ordinance to require plaintiff to obtain land use permit to resume selling alcoholic beverages]; 56 A.L.R.3d 14 [right to resume use after involuntary break in continuity caused by difficulties unrelated to governmental activity]; 56 A.L.R.3d 138 [right to resume where break was caused by governmental activity]; 57 A.L.R.3d 279 [right to resume where break was voluntary or unexplained]; 40 A.L.R.4th 1012 [occupation of less than all units as abandonment or discontinuance of multifamily dwelling nonconforming use].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, Chap. 8.

67 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

7. Nonconforming Uses.

b. No Rebuilding or Expansion.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1042

[§ 1042] No Rebuilding or Expansion.

It is permissible to allow the nonconforming structure to become obsolete and be removed in time, by prohibiting expansion of its use, rebuilding, or repair that will keep it operating indefinitely. (See Rehfeld v. San Francisco (1933) 218 C. 83, 84, 21 P.2d. 419; San Diego v. McClurken (1951) 37 C.2d 683, 686, 234 P.2d 972 ["Given the objective of zoning to eliminate nonconforming uses, courts throughout the country generally follow a strict policy against their extension or enlargement"]; Manhattan Sepulveda, Ltd. v. Manhattan Beach (1994) 22 C.A.4th 865, 870, 27 C.R.2d 565 [city improperly denied application to rebuild nonconforming use following fire, on basis of ordinance allowing reconstruction only where extent of damage was not more than 50% of building's value; proper interpretation of "value" was fair market value, not cost of replacing entire building]; 57 A.L.R.3d 419 [right to repair or reconstruct after damage or destruction by fire or other casualty]; 10 A.L.R.4th 1122 [construction of new building or structure]; 56 A.L.R.4th 769 [change in area or location of nonconforming use]; 63 A.L.R.4th 275 [alteration, extension, reconstruction, or repair of nonconforming use]; 26 Proof of Facts 3d 467 [circumstances warranting expansion of nonconforming use]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §583 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §9.8 et seq.)

In San Diego v. McClurken, the ordinance allowed for the continuance of existing uses, which in this case was the intermittent storage above ground of gasoline and other fuels. After the ordinance, four new tanks were added to increase the storage capacity more than five times, and the tanks were permanently affixed on concrete bases, as part of a service station. Held, this was not continuance of the old use but an unwarranted enlargement amounting to a new nonconforming use. (37 C.2d 688.) The defendant's mere prior intention to expand his future business did not give him a right to expand a nonconforming use. There was no showing of legally undertaken construction, or a permit and substantial expenditure in reliance, prior to the effective date of the ordinance. (37 C.2d 690.)

In Orange v. Goldring (1953) 121 C.A.2d 442, 263 P.2d 321, the existing right was to use the land as a resting place for defendant's cattle. Defendant, however, constructed feeding pens on permanent foundations, and used them to fatten cattle for a number of persons, causing noises, stench, etc. An injunction was upheld on the principle that the existing use must not be substantially changed. (121 C.A.2d 446.) (See Edmonds v. Los Angeles (1953) 40 C.2d 642, 651, 255 P.2d 772 [attempt to enlarge trailer camp from 20 to 50 trailers].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §8.10 et seq.

68 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

7. Nonconforming Uses.

c. Distinction: Mining Operations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1043

[§ 1043] Distinction: Mining Operations.

In Hansen Bros. Enterprises v. Board of Supervisors (1996) 12 C.4th 533, 48 C.R.2d 778, 907 P.2d 1324, plaintiff mining company conducted aggregate mining, which had been a nonconforming use since 1954. Most of the materials were mined from the banks and bed of a river, but some rock was quarried from a neighboring hillside. To comply with the Surface Mining and Reclamation Act (Pub.Res.C. 2710 et seq.; see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §888), plaintiff submitted a reclamation plan showing the right to quarry all the hillside areas on its land. The plan was denied by the county on two grounds: (1) any vested right to quarry the hillside had been lost by discontinuance of quarrying operations in excess of the 180 days permitted by statute; and (2) the plan constituted an improper intensification of a nonconforming use. The trial judge denied plaintiff's petition for mandamus and the Court of Appeal affirmed. Held, reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

(a) A zoning ordinance usually exempts existing nonconforming uses because of hardship and the doubtful constitutionality of compelling immediate discontinuance. However, when an existing use is permitted to continue as a nonconforming use, it must be similar to the use existing when the zoning ordinance became effective. (12 C.4th 551, 552.)

(b) An exception exists when the nonconforming use is a mining operation. Progression of the mining into other areas of the property is not a prohibited expansion or change of location of the nonconforming use, if there is objective evidence that the owner, at the time the zoning ordinance was enacted, intended to so expand the mining operation. (12 C.4th 553.) The rationale for this "diminishing asset" doctrine is that the very nature of an excavating business is continuing use of the land, and the nonconforming use therefore may involve a vested right to use the entire tract even though only a portion was used when the ordinance was adopted. (12 C.4th 557.)

(c) The diminishing asset doctrine was applied in California in McCaslin v. Monterey Park (1958) 163 C.A.2d 339, 329 P.2d 522. (12 C.4th 559.) The argument for a contrary rule is based on Paramount Rock Co. v. San Diego (1960) 180 C.A.2d 217, 4 C.R. 317, infra, §1045. However, that case did not reject the doctrine; it found that the proposed use of the property was not substantially the same as its prior use. Recognition of the doctrine is consistent with the Act, which seeks to minimize ecological damage from mining operations. "Were the diminishing asset doctrine inapplicable, a mining enterprise would be required to immediately initiate mining on all areas of its property lest, under a subsequent zoning change, its right to further mining be extinguished." (12 C.4th 559.)

(d) Here, the property was acquired at several times from several owners, and it is not clear which land was being used for mining operations in 1954. The extent of the property on which the right to a nonconforming use may be asserted must be determined on remand. (12 C.4th 561, 564.) However, it is clear that whatever land was being used for mining purposes in 1954 was being used for a single, aggregate business, composed of riverbed gravel mining and hillside rock quarrying, not for two separate operations. (12 C.4th 565.) "We have found no authority for refusing to recognize a vested right to continue a component of a business that itself has a vested right to continue using the land on which it is located for operation of the business. An aggregate business does not differ from other land uses simply because mining for some or all of the materials that comprise aggregate is a component of the business. Unless an independent aspect of the business has been discontinued, the use may not be broken down into component parts and vested rights recognized for less than the entire business operation." (12 C.4th 566.)

(e) The discontinuance of quarrying operations for greater than 180 days does not result in loss of the right to conduct future quarrying. The 180-day provision applies to the nonconforming use itself, i.e., aggregate mining, not to the various components of the business. (12 C.4th 570.)

(f) The land may be used for rock quarrying, but it may not be used to a degree that would constitute an expansion or intensification of the nonconforming use. However, the natural and reasonable expansion of a quarry business to meet increased demand is not an impermissible enlargement or change in use. Here, the conclusion that there was an improper enlargement was based on an estimate of the upper range of the amount of rock quarrying that was to be done over a 100-year period, as was presented in the reclamation plan. There was no evidence fixing the amount of rock that was quarried per year. Hence, whether there has been an impermissible intensification is an issue that is more appropriately addressed at the time increased production actually occurs. (12 C.4th 571, 575.)

Three justices dissented in two opinions. (12 C.4th 577, 581, 592.) (See 24 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1148 [Hansen].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

69 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

7. Nonconforming Uses.

d. Amortization Provisions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1044

[§ 1044] Amortization Provisions.

(1) In General. Prohibition of rebuilding, extension, or expansion (see supra, §1042) is hardly calculated to yield results in any reasonable time. Accordingly, a more realistic and economically sound method has been devised to get rid of the existing nonconforming use--amortization. A definite period of time is given for the continuation of the use, based in part on a calculation of the normal remaining useful life of the structures, and thereafter the use is prohibited. Amortization provisions of various types are found in zoning enabling laws and ordinances enacted under them. (See National Advertising Co. v. Monterey (1962) 211 C.A.2d 375, 380, 27 C.R. 136; National Advertising Co. v. Monterey (1970) 1 C.3d 875, 878, 83 C.R. 577, 464 P.2d 33; People v. Adco Advertisers (1973) 35 C.A.3d 507, 513, 110 C.R. 849; People v. Gates (1974) 41 C.A.3d 590, 603, 116 C.R. 172 [period was reasonable]; 8 A.L.R.5th 391 [validity of provisions for amortization of nonconforming uses]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §621 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §9.25 et seq.)

(2) Validity. The desirability and constitutional validity of these provisions was declared in Los Angeles v. Gage (1954) 127 C.A.2d 442, 455, 274 P.2d 34. "Every zoning ordinance effects some impairment of vested rights either by restricting prospective uses or by prohibiting the continuation of existing uses, because it affects property already owned by individuals at the time of its enactment." There is no real distinction between requiring the discontinuance of a nonconforming use within a reasonable period and provisions that (a) deny the right to add to or extend buildings devoted to an existing nonconforming use, (b) deny the right to resume a nonconforming use after a period of nonuse, (c) deny the right to extend or enlarge an existing nonconforming use, or (d) deny the right to substitute new buildings for those devoted to an existing nonconforming use, "all of which have been held to be valid exercises of the police power." (127 C.A.2d 459.) The use of a reasonable amortization scheme provides an equitable means of reconciling the "conflicting interests in satisfaction of due process requirements. As a method of eliminating existing nonconforming uses it allows the owner of the nonconforming use, by affording an opportunity to make new plans, at least partially to offset any loss he might suffer. The loss he suffers, if any, is spread out over a period of years, and he enjoys a monopolistic position by virtue of the zoning ordinance as long as he remains. If the amortization period is reasonable the loss to the owner may be small when compared with the benefit to the public." (127 C.A.2d 460.)

In Gage, defendant had a two-story residential building in an unlimited zone, which he used, together with the garage, partly for a wholesale and retail plumbing supply business. The subsequent residential zoning ordinance required discontinuance of nonconforming uses according to a graduated periodic schedule, ranging from 5 to 40 years, depending on the zone and nature of the structure and use. For this zone and building the period was 5 years. Held, the application of the ordinance to defendant's property was not a denial of due process. Its effect was to require removal of his business to a zone located within a half mile away, at a cost of $ 5,000, which was less than one percent of his minimum gross business for 5 years; and his property remained usable for residential purposes.

It is also permissible to add a provision for the immediate elimination of the use if it becomes a nuisance. In Livingston Rock & Gravel Co. v. Los Angeles (1954) 43 C.2d 121, 272 P.2d 4, plaintiffs built a concrete aggregates batching plant for loading readymix trucks, in an unrestricted zone. The county rezoned the area to light manufacturing by an ordinance with an automatic exception for 20 years' nonconforming use, except where the Regional Planning Commission (a local board with quasi-judicial powers) revoked the permit for a use detrimental to the public health or safety or a nuisance. Held, the Commission's action in revoking plaintiffs' permit on this ground was constitutional and could not be enjoined, although its determination was subject to judicial review by mandamus or certiorari in the usual manner. (43 C.2d 128.)

Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 C.A.3d 1365, 285 C.R. 335, rejected the claim that a sign ordinance providing a 5-year amortization period for nonconforming uses was a taking without just compensation. First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. Los Angeles, Calif. (1987) 482 U.S. 304, 107 S.Ct. 2378, 96 L.Ed.2d 250, infra, §1160, does not preclude the use of amortization as a constitutionally permissible method of eliminating nonconforming uses. (233 C.A.3d 1397.) First English focused solely on the issue of the required remedy for a temporary taking; the case did not address whether a taking actually had occurred and did not discuss the concept of amortization. (233 C.A.3d 1397, 1399.) Whether a particular ordinance is a valid regulation or an invalid taking can only be determined after a detailed factual analysis. (233 C.A.3d 1402.) (See 80 A.L.R.3d 630 [advertising structure as nonconforming use].)

(3) Unreasonably Short Period. An amortization provision giving too short a period to discontinue the nonconforming use may be invalidated. (See La Mesa v. Tweed & Gambrell Planing Mill (1956) 146 C.A.2d 762, 770, 304 P.2d 803 [requirement that defendants terminate use of buildings, not suitable for residential use, within 5 years]; cf. National Advertising Co. v. Monterey (1970) 1 C.3d 875, 880, 83 C.R. 577, 464 P.2d 33 [only 1 year to remove advertising signs, but evidence showed that they had been fully amortized].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §8.23 et seq.

70 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

7. Nonconforming Uses.

e. Uses Not Protected.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1045

[§ 1045] Uses Not Protected.

The constitutional protection of nonconforming uses cannot be invoked in the following situations:

(1) Use Founded on Illegal Acts. San Marino v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles (1960) 180 C.A.2d 657, 4 C.R. 547, involved a city's action to enjoin zoning violations. Defendant contended that the improper use of the land had continued for years with knowledge of the city that it was needed for that use. Held, long-continued illegal use of property, without more, creates no vested right in the owner, and does not justify an estoppel against enforcement of zoning provisions. Here, there was no showing that defendant was ignorant of the zoning restrictions, nor that the city intended defendant to rely on the inaction; the facts pleaded did nothing more than admit the violations sought to be enjoined. (180 C.A.2d 677.)

(2) Substantial Change in Use. In Paramount Rock Co. v. San Diego (1960) 180 C.A.2d 217, 4 C.R. 317, plaintiff owned a concrete premixing plant. The land was later zoned for agricultural purposes, but the nonconforming use was allowed to continue. Subsequently, plaintiff installed a rock-crushing plant. Held, this was a substantial change in the nonconforming use and the ordinance was enforceable.

(a) Rock-crushing was not an integral part of the ready-mix business (many of these businesses do not operate a rock-crusher on site). The fact that plaintiff had bought and contemplated installation of the rock-crusher before the ordinance was passed was immaterial. Installation was not commenced until 1 year after the ordinance became effective. The owner's use of the property "at the time it becomes subject to a zoning ordinance and not his plans regarding the future use of that property determines the scope of the nonconforming use excepted from the restrictions imposed by the ordinance." (180 C.A.2d 232.)

(b) The equitable doctrine of relative hardship was likewise inapplicable. It applies where the plaintiff seeks to vindicate a technical and unsubstantial right, not where there is a substantial right involved (see 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §169); and the right of a city to enforce its zoning restrictions is substantial. (180 C.A.2d 678.) (See Mang v. Santa Barbara (1960) 182 C.A.2d 93, 102, 5 C.R. 724 [few days prior to the enactment of an interim ordinance, plaintiff graded, excavated, and did similar work for construction of trailer park, expending $ 3,400, but without obtaining building permit]; Los Altos v. Silvey (1962) 206 C.A.2d 606, 609, 24 C.R. 200.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

71 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

a. As Defense Against Enforcement.

1. Where General Plan Is Reasonable.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1046

[§ 1046] Where General Plan Is Reasonable.

A zoning ordinance is often attacked on grounds of discrimination or denial of due process. But in most cases it is recognized that zoning necessarily results in some inequalities and hardship to persons in a zoned district. Hence, if the general scheme is reasonable and fair, individual hardship is not a basis for constitutional attack on the legislative or administrative determination. (See Zahn v. Board of Public Works of Los Angeles (1925) 195 C. 497, 512, 234 P. 388; Rehfeld v. San Francisco (1933) 218 C. 83, 21 P.2d 419; Lockard v. Los Angeles (1949) 33 C.2d 453, 466, 202 P.2d 38; Johnston v. Claremont (1958) 49 C.2d 826, 838, 323 P.2d 71; Consolidated Rock Products Co. v. Los Angeles (1962) 57 C.2d 515, 530, 20 C.R. 638, 370 P.2d 342, supra, §1007; Hamer v. Ross (1963) 59 C.2d 776, 787, 31 C.R. 335, 382 P.2d 375, infra, §1049; Friel v. Los Angeles (1959) 172 C.A.2d 142, 157, 342 P.2d 374 [ordinance prohibiting oil well drilling in residential district in unincorporated area was upheld, though adjacent areas were industrially zoned]; Cormier v. San Luis Obispo (1984) 161 C.A.3d 850, 855, 207 C.R. 880; 17 A.L.R.3d 743 [standing of purchaser to attack validity of regulation existing at time of purchase].)

In Ensign Bickford Realty Corp. v. Livermore (1977) 68 C.A.3d 467, 137 C.R. 304, defendant city council rezoned an area from residential to commercial, and denied plaintiff's application for similar rezoning of another area in the same section. Plaintiff contended that the council's purpose was to eliminate a competitive economic threat to the rezoned area, and therefore was a denial of equal protection. Held, the denial was a proper exercise of police power. If the sole purpose of the legislative decision were to restrict business competition, it would be subject to challenge. (68 C.A.3d 475.) But where the primary purpose is to accomplish a valid objective, an indirect impact on competition does not invalidate the regulation. (68 C.A.3d 476.) Here, the council determined that there was a need for one shopping center, and to further the long-range development plan, it should be located in a particular area. This would have the effect of encouraging development in that area and also would decrease the value of plaintiff's property. However, "[b]y its very nature, a zoning ordinance may be expected to depress the value of some land while it operates, in its total effect, to achieve an end which will benefit the whole community." (68 C.A.3d 477.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Hernandez v. Hanford (2007) 41 C.4th 279, 293, 59 C.R.3d 442, 159 P.3d 33, Supp., supra, §1020 [clarifying language in Ensign Bickford Realty Corp. v. Livermore (1977) 68 C.A.3d 467, 137 C.R. 304, text, p. 645, regarding use of zoning ordinance to restrict business competition].

72 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

a. As Defense Against Enforcement.

2. Where Provision Is Arbitrary.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1047

[§ 1047] In General.

(1) Nature of Defects. Occasionally, an ordinance is held void in its application to a property owner by reason of arbitrary inclusions or exclusions. (See Reynolds v. Barrett (1938) 12 C.2d 244, 251, 83 P.2d 29; Munns v. Stenman (1957) 152 C.A.2d 543, 551, 314 P.2d 67 [hastily adopted ordinance to bolster unwarranted denial of building permit]; Kissinger v. Los Angeles (1958) 161 C.A.2d 454, 460, 327 P.2d 10, infra, §1048 [hastily adopted ordinance to enable city to acquire zoned property at artificially depressed price]; Hoshour v. Contra Costa (1962) 203 C.A.2d 602, 608, 21 C.R. 714, infra, §1048; Scrutton v. Sacramento (1969) 275 C.A.2d 412, 416, 79 C.R. 872, infra, §1048; Viso v. California (1979) 92 C.A.3d 15, 22, 154 C.R. 580 [spot zoning]; Arnel Dev. Co. v. Costa Mesa (1981) 126 C.A.3d 330, 336, 178 C.R. 723 [discriminatory initiative zoning ordinance]; Northwood Homes v. Moraga (1989) 216 C.A.3d 1197, 1204, 1206, 265 C.R. 363 [distinguishing Arnel Dev. Co.; no improper discrimination where purpose of ordinance was to limit hillside development and not merely to rezone particular property]; 36 A.L.R.3d 751 ["freezing" ordinances preventing prospective condemnee from improving or changing condition of property]; 18 A.L.R.4th 542 [zoning regulations limiting use of property near airport as taking]; 25 Proof of Facts 3d 541 [circumstances warranting relief from zoning enforcement]; cf. Beverly Hills v. Brady (1950) 34 C.2d 854, 857, 215 P.2d 460 [ordinance construed as not prohibiting doctor from writing syndicated health column and circulating health pamphlets from residence, where activity did not interfere with appearance of home or character of district].)

(2) Remedies. Several remedies have been invoked in challenging a zoning ordinance's application to a particular property as arbitrary. (On declaratory relief, see McCarthy v. Manhattan Beach (1953) 41 C.2d 879, 882, 264 P.2d 932; Hill v. Manhattan Beach (1971) 6 C.3d 279, 287, 98 C.R. 785, 491 P.2d 369 [declaratory relief is proper to test constitutionality of zoning ordinance, but not to review administrative decision; complaint construed as petition for mandamus]; Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 272, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, infra, §1058; on mandamus, see Arnel Dev. Co. v. Costa Mesa (1980) 28 C.3d 511, 522, 169 C.R. 904, 620 P.2d 565, supra, §1028 [zoning ordinance is reviewable by ordinary mandamus, and administrative decision is reviewable by administrative mandamus]; on requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies (as by application for variance or conditional use permit), see Mountain View Chamber of Commerce v. Mountain View (1978) 77 C.A.3d 82, 93, 143 C.R. 441; Pan Pac. Properties

v. Santa Cruz (1978) 81 C.A.3d 244, 249, 146 C.R. 428; on remedies of inverse condemnation or action for damages, see infra, §§1058, 1059; on statute of limitations, see supra, §1011.) (See 16 Am.Jur. Trials, Relief From Zoning Ordinance §1 et seq.; 25C Am.Jur. P.P. Forms (2001 ed.), Zoning and Planning §14 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, Chap. 12.)

(3) Statutory Limitation. If the challenged action has followed a public hearing on proper notice, including notice of application of the statute, a subsequent legal challenge is limited to issues raised at the hearing or in correspondence delivered at or prior to the hearing. However, another issue may be raised if the court finds either that (a) the issue could not have been raised by persons exercising reasonable diligence, or (b) the body conducting the hearing prevented the issue from being raised. (Govt.C. 65009(b); see Corona-Norco Unified School Dist. v. Corona (1993) 17 C.A.4th 985, 993, 21 C.R.2d 803 [as provided in Govt.C. 65009(b)(2), statutory exhaustion requirement does not apply unless agency warns of requirement in its public notice of hearing]; Park Area Neighbors v. Fairfax (1994) 29 C.A.4th 1442, 1444, 1450, 35 C.R.2d 334 [neither lack of legal representation in administrative proceedings, nor misadvice by agency official on proper method of taking administrative appeal, excuses failure to exhaust administrative remedies as required by Govt.C. 65009(b)(1)]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice, §12.1; on legislative history of Govt.C. 65009, see supra, §1011.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Remedies. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 2 Land Use Practice, Chap. 21.

73 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

a. As Defense Against Enforcement.

2. Where Provision Is Arbitrary.

bb. Illustrations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1048

[§ 1048] Illustrations.

In Hoshour v. Contra Costa (1962) 203 C.A.2d 602, 21 C.R. 714, plaintiffs owned a triangular corner lot zoned residential and subject to setback ordinances. If strictly enforced, the setback lines would have reduced the useful area of the lot to about 10 square feet. If variances were permitted (and only 22 1/2 % of the lots in the neighborhood conformed to the strict requirements), a useful house could be built. Plaintiffs' application for a variance was denied. Held, judgment for declaratory relief and mandatory injunction to compel issuance of a building permit without the necessity of a variance affirmed. "Confiscation, or virtual confiscation, of lands by zoning cannot be upheld. ... Virtual confiscation occurs when set-back ordinances applying to a corner lot reduce the theoretically usable surface to an absurdly small size." (203 C.A.2d 608.)

Skalko v. Sunnyvale (1939) 14 C.2d 213, 93 P.2d 93, invalidated a residential zoning ordinance where the petitioner merely showed individual inconvenience. The adjacent property was zoned for industrial uses and was occupied by a large cannery, so that petitioner's land was unsuited for residential purposes. (14 C.2d 214.) But Skalko was sharply limited in Wilkins v. San Bernardino (1946) 29 C.2d 332, 175 P.2d 542, involving spot commercial zoning in the midst of a surrounding single family residential area. This was sustained against the attack of an adjacent property owner desiring to use residential property commercially. (29 C.2d 345.)

Wilkins states that there are four situations in which California courts will invalidate a zoning ordinance as applied to particular property: (a) Where the ordinance prohibits existing established uses that are not nuisances. (See Jones v. Los Angeles (1930) 211 C. 304, 295 P. 14, supra, §1040.) (b) Where the restrictions create a monopoly. (c) "Where the use of adjacent property renders the land entirely unsuited to or unusable for the only purpose permitted by the ordinance." (See Skalko v. Sunnyvale, supra.) (d) "Where a small parcel is restricted and given less rights than the surrounding property, as where a lot in the center of a business or commercial district is limited to use for residential purposes, thereby creating an 'island' in the middle of a larger area devoted to other uses." (See Reynolds v. Barrett (1938) 12 C.2d 244, 251, 83 P.2d 29.) (29 C.2d 340.) (See Safeway Stores v. San Mateo (1948) 86 C.A.2d 277, 284, 194 P.2d 720 [same facts and holding]; 73 A.L.R.5th 223 [illegal spot zoning].)

Kissinger v. Los Angeles (1958) 161 C.A.2d 454, 327 P.2d 10, adds another situation: Where the legislative purpose is to depress the market value of plaintiff's land, which the governmental agency intends to condemn. Plaintiffs' lots, zoned "R-3" for multiple dwellings from 1932 to 1946, were suddenly restricted by defendant city to "R-1"--single-family dwellings. The reclassification of these lots was accomplished by an emergency "spot zoning" ordinance, without notice or hearing, and against the recommendation of the city planning commission. Surrounding property similarly situated remained "R-3." The declared legislative purpose of this ostensible police power measure was to prevent undue population congestion in the area of an airfield a mile away; the true purpose, the court found, "was to prevent the improvement of the subject property in order that it might be acquired at a lesser price for airport purposes." (161 C.A.2d 462.) Held, the ordinance was void. "A zoning ordinance may not be used as a device to take property for public use without payment of compensation." (161 C.A.2d 462.) (See supra, §1008.)

In Scrutton v. Sacramento (1969) 275 C.A.2d 412, 79 C.R. 872, plaintiff owned land in suburban Sacramento, with 350 feet fronting on W Avenue, and 650 feet fronting on F Way. She sought rezoning from agricultural to multiple family residential, in order to develop apartment units. The Board of Supervisors approved the request subject to the condition that she pave F Way at her own expense. She sued for declaratory relief, contending that this was not necessary for her development and that its purpose was to accommodate other public needs. Held, summary judgment for defendant county reversed.

(a) The same police power that supports the imposition of reasonable conditions on other kinds of change of land use (e.g., approval of subdivision, grant of building permits) sustains the power of a county to engage in "conditional rezoning." (275 C.A.2d 418.) The condition is valid if reasonably conceived to fulfill public needs emanating from the landowner's proposed use; e.g., the community's protection against potentially deleterious effects of the landowner's proposal or the community's need for facilities to meet public service demands created by the proposal. (275 C.A.2d 421.)

(b) Here, the relationship between the condition and the use called for a factual inquiry, and the county's affidavits were silent on the unrelated issues; hence, summary judgment was improperly granted. (275 C.A.2d 422.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

74 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

a. As Defense Against Enforcement.

3. Where Required Use Is Uneconomic.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1049

[§ 1049] Where Required Use Is Uneconomic.

Hamer v. Ross (1963) 59 C.2d 776, 31 C.R. 335, 382 P.2d 375, furnishes an illustration of the modern analysis of a hardship problem. Plaintiff owned an irregularly shaped 2.2-acre parcel of land fronting on an arterial highway, with her home on part of it. The area was zoned for 1-acre lots and single-family dwellings. By application for a variance, plaintiff sought to construct garden apartments, and, on denial, sought mandamus to compel issuance of a building permit. Held, judgment granting writ reversed.

(a) The decision of zoning authorities will not be set aside unless (1) the regulations have no reasonable relation to the public welfare, or (2) the physical facts show oppressive or unwarranted interference with property rights. (59 C.2d 781, 782.) Here, the entire surrounding area was composed of residential property of smaller size, leaving plaintiff with an "island" in an ocean of substantially less restrictive zoning. (59 C.2d 782.) But granting the variance would have resulted in an island of multiple-dwelling use in the midst of single-family dwellings. (59 C.2d 783.) The fact that different uses were made across the boundary boulevard was immaterial; the authorities could draw the line at the town boundary. (59 C.2d 784.)

(b) Because of flood conditions, the trial judge found that plaintiff would have to spend so much for control devices and site improvement that the balance of the property not occupied by her home could not be economically used except for multiple dwellings, and hence, that the ordinance rendered the property valueless. But plaintiff purchased her property with full knowledge of its topography, and a "right accorded to plaintiff to construct multiple dwellings upon her property would result in her foisting upon her neighbors the detriment of the loss of a one-family dwelling area in order to relieve her from disadvantages inherent in the composition of her land." (59 C.2d 788.)

(c) The invalid one-acre provision is severable from the rest of the ordinance, and the trial judge may frame a judgment that will permit the city to impose a minimum lot-size classification no greater than that imposed on neighboring parcels. Because the majority of them contain from 10,000 to 20,000 square feet, the judgment should contain a 10,000-foot limit. (59 C.2d 790.) Plaintiff may construct several single-family dwellings on the property with that limitation, and the trial judge may incorporate in the judgment a declaration of her right to the variances, etc., that are necessary for this purpose. (59 C.2d 791.)

In Ross v. Yorba Linda (1991) 1 C.A.4th 954, 2 C.R.2d 638, plaintiffs owned a 1.117-acre lot. The area was zoned for 1 acre per dwelling, but only 4 of 53 lots in the area actually conformed to the zoning, and the average lot size was about half an acre. Plaintiffs applied to the city to divide their property and rezone the property, so that they could build a second dwelling. The planning commission recommended approval of the zoning change and subdivision, but the city council denied the request. Plaintiffs then sought mandamus, which the trial court granted. Held, affirmed.

(a) This case, like Hamer, involves discriminatory "spot zoning." (1 C.A.4th 960.) The subject property is virtually surrounded by parcels of lesser size, and the one-acre restriction prevents plaintiffs from developing the property consistent with the surrounding area. Even after the proposed division of plaintiffs' property, the two remaining lots will still be larger than many in the area. (1 C.A.4th 961.)

(b) "The land use restrictions here are as arbitrary and discriminatory as the land use restrictions in Hamer." (1 C.A.4th 962, 963.) The city argues that it needs to prevent "encroaching urbanization." But "the prevention of 'urbanization' ... cannot be a rational basis where 'urbanization' has already taken place." (1 C.A.4th 962.) The city also argues that it may have to grant zoning concessions to others if it grants one here. "The City appears to be afraid it will be forced to treat other landowners in a nondiscriminatory manner if it treats the Rosses in a nondiscriminatory manner. This is not an idea with much persuasive force." (1 C.A.4th 962.) Further, the fact that the smaller lots were preexisting nonconforming uses, that plaintiffs bought the property with the one-acre restriction, and that plaintiffs are seeking a zoning change rather than a variance, fail to distinguish it from Hamer. (1 C.A.4th 962, 963.)

(c) The city also justifies its denial of the request for rezoning on the ground of neighborhood opposition. (1 C.A.4th 964.) Public opinion may reveal a rational basis for action and to that extent is a permissible factor to consider. (1 C.A.4th 965, 966.) But public opinion by itself cannot be a rational basis for discriminatory and arbitrary government action. (1 C.A.4th 964, 967.) (See 73 A.L.R.5th 223 [Determination Whether Zoning or Rezoning of Particular Parcel Constitutes Illegal Spot Zoning]; 39 Proof of Facts 3d 433 [proof necessary to invalidate rezoning action as impermissible spot zoning].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

75 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

b. As Basis for Exception or Variance.

1. Conditional Use Permit.

aa. Nature and Purpose.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1050

[§ 1050] Nature and Purpose.

(1) In General. The statutes and ordinances provide for two kinds of relief to persons whose nonconforming uses ought to be allowed; variances (infra, §1053 et seq.) and conditional use permits. A conditional use permit is an exception for a particular use that promotes the public welfare and will not impair the character of the district. (See Govt.C. 65901; Govt.C. 65589.4 [exemption from requirement of conditional use permit for multifamily residential housing project where specified percentage of units will be made available for low-income households]; Essick v. Los Angeles (1950) 34 C.2d 614, 623, 213 P.2d 492; Garden Grove Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses v. Garden Grove (1959) 176 C.A.2d 136, 140, 1 C.R. 65 [discretion to deny permit upheld]; Shell Oil Co. v. San Francisco (1983) 139 C.A.3d 917, 920, 189 C.R. 276 [standing of lessee to apply]; Smith v. Los Angeles (1989) 211 C.A.3d 188, 197, 259 C.R. 231 [substantial evidence test applies on review of grant or denial of conditional use permit; fact that permit is denied to adult entertainment business does not require different standard]; Goat Hill Tavern v. Costa Mesa (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1519, 1531, 8 C.R.2d 385 [denial of tavern's application to renew conditional use permit for adjoining game room, based on complaints from neighbors, was improper, where evidence failed to distinguish whether noise and property damage in area were due to tavern or other causes]; Wilson v. Laguna Beach (1992) 6 C.A.4th 543, 560, 7 C.R.2d 848, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §825 [owners of single-family dwellings with second units were entitled to mandamus to compel city to process applications for conditional use permits as required by "granny flat" statute (Govt.C. 65852.2(b))]; 89 A.L.R.2d 663 [who may apply]; 25C Am.Jur. P.P. Forms (2001 ed.), Zoning and Planning, §61 et seq.; 16 Am.Jur. Trials 99 [relief from zoning ordinance]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §775 et seq.; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §7.55 et seq. [grounds], §10.46 et seq. [procedure]; on administration, see supra, §1025.)

In Imperial v. McDougal (1977) 19 C.3d 505, 138 C.R. 472, 564 P.2d 14, plaintiff county issued a conditional use permit to defendant's predecessor, authorizing the commercial sale of water from a well on his property, with the limitation that it could be sold for use only within the county. Defendant greatly increased the development, employing as many as 44 tank trucks a day, and sold most of it for use in Mexico. In this action for an injunction, the court held that the increased use was not a violation of the permit, which contained no limitation on the amount that could be taken. But defendant was estopped to challenge the validity of the condition against sale outside the county, because his predecessor had acquiesced in it and had accepted the benefits of the permit. (19 C.3d 510, 511.)

(2) Permit as Property Right. A conditional use permit is a property right that runs with the land. (Imperial v. McDougal, supra, 19 C.3d 510; Malibu Mountains Recreation v. Los Angeles (1998) 67 C.A.4th 359, 368, 79 C.R.2d 25.)

(3) Required Findings. Although variances differ from conditional use permits, granting a conditional use permit is an exercise of quasi-judicial powers, and is subject to the requirement of administrative findings laid down in Topanga Assn. for Scenic Community v. Los Angeles (1974) 11 C.3d 506, 113 C.R. 836, 522 P.2d 12, infra, §1056. (Jacobson v. Los Angeles (1977) 69 C.A.3d 374, 389, 137 C.R. 909 [findings were sufficient].)

(4) Second Unit Housing for Seniors. Local governments may issue a conditional or special use permit for a dwelling unit to be constructed, or attached to a primary residence, on a parcel zoned for a single-family residence, if the unit is to be occupied solely by one or two persons aged 62 or above, and the unit's floor space does not exceed 30% of the existing living area or 1200 square feet. This section does not limit the requirements of Govt.C. 65852.2, or the power of local governments to permit second units. (Govt.C. 65852.1; see supra, §1039.)

(5) Revocation of Permit. When an owner has incurred material expense in reliance on the permit, the owner gains a vested right to continue using the property in accordance with it; and it may be revoked only if the owner breaches the reasonable terms or conditions, or if there is a compelling public necessity. (See O'Hagen v. Board of Zoning Adjustment (1971) 19 C.A.3d 151, 158, 165, 96 C.R. 484 [revocation of permit is improper when injunction against specific conduct protects public interest].) Revocation of the permit is then subject to judicial review under the independent judgment test. (Malibu Mountains Recreation v. Los Angeles, supra, 67 C.A.4th 369.)

In Rezai v. Tustin (1994) 26 C.A.4th 443, 31 C.R.2d 559, defendant city revoked plaintiff property owner's building permit and conditional use permit after he had embarked on substantial construction. The ground for revocation was that several nearby property owners had not received notice of plaintiff's project. After plaintiff and the other property owners worked out a compromise, the city approved a new conditional use permit significantly scaling back the project. Plaintiff brought the present action for damages arising from revocation of the original conditional use and building permits. The trial judge granted defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings. Held, affirmed.

(a) As a general rule, a property owner may not challenge a condition imposed on the granting of a permit after acquiescence in the condition by either specifically agreeing to it or failing to challenge its validity, and accepting the benefits afforded by the permit. An exception to this requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies has been applied where permits are to be obtained in phases as the project progresses, and a new law imposes a fee condition on one of the subsequent permits under circumstances where even the time necessary to challenge the legality of the fee by petition for mandamus is economically impractical. (26 C.A.4th 450.)

(b) Although plaintiff's situation is similar, the exception is inapplicable. Plaintiff did not allege that the time necessary for an administrative challenge was economically impractical. Furthermore, plaintiff is seeking damages and not merely the refund of a fee. Those damages were uncertain at the time of the permit revocation and became irrevocable once the project was built. To allow damages under these circumstances without a decision by way of administrative mandamus would have a chilling effect on planning decisions. (26 C.A.4th 451.) Thus, judgment on the pleadings for defendant on the ground of plaintiff's failure to pursue his administrative remedies was proper. (26 C.A.4th 453.) (On rule of exhaustion of administrative remedies generally, see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §308.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §7.10 et seq.(4) Second Unit Housing for Seniors. Govt.C. 65852.1 became inoperative on January 1, 2007, except that a special or conditional use permit issued before that date remains valid.(5) Revocation of Permit.Exhaustion of administrative remedies:

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §325.

76 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

b. As Basis for Exception or Variance.

1. Conditional Use Permit.

bb. Conditions and Criteria.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1051

[§ 1051] Conditions and Criteria.

(1) Criteria. Conditional use permits can be issued only if the local zoning ordinance "establishes criteria for determining those matters." (Govt.C. 65901.) But specific standards have uniformly been upheld, and "general welfare" standards are not unconstitutionally vague. (See Stoddard v. Edelman (1970) 4 C.A.3d 544, 548, 84 C.R. 443; Van Sicklen v. Browne (1971) 15 C.A.3d 122, 127, 92 C.R. 786 [denial of permit]; Mitcheltree v. Los Angeles (1971) 17 C.A.3d 791, 797, 95 C.R. 76 [grant of permit]; Hawkins v. Marin (1976) 54 C.A.3d 586, 591, 126 C.R. 754 ["general welfare" standard is sufficient]; Smith v. Los Angeles (1989) 211 C.A.3d 188, 201, 259 C.R. 231 [denial of permit for adult entertainment business; county properly considered impact of requested use on neighboring cities]; Smith v. Los Angeles (1994) 24 C.A.4th 990, 996, 1001, 29 C.R.2d 680 [to avoid being unconstitutional prior restraint on expression, ordinance governing conditional use permits for adult entertainment businesses must contain standards that are narrow, objective, and definite]; cf. Hunter v. Whittier (1989) 209 C.A.3d 588, 598, 257 C.R. 559 [ordinance under which only criteria for permit for satellite television antenna were that use be compatible and not unreasonably interfere with uses of surrounding properties, was too broad to satisfy FCC order requiring local regulations of these antennas to have "clearly defined health, safety or aesthetic" objectives].)

(2) Consistency With Lawful General Plan. In Neighborhood Action Group v. Calaveras (1984) 156 C.A.3d 1176, 203 C.R. 401, a conditional use permit was challenged on the ground that the county's general plan did not conform to the mandatory statutory criteria. Held, this kind of plan is ultra vires.

(a) "Although use permits are not explicitly made subject to a general plan meeting the requirements of state law, that condition is necessarily to be implied from the hierarchical relationship of the land use laws. To view them in order: a use permit is struck from the mold of the zoning law (§ 65901); the zoning law must comply with the adopted general plan (§ 65860); the adopted general plan must conform with state law (§§ 65300, 65302). The validity of the permit process derives from compliance with this hierarchy of planning laws. These laws delimit the authority of the permit issuing agency to act and establish the measure of a valid permit. 'Since consistency with the general plan is required, absence of a valid general plan, or valid relevant elements or components thereof, precludes enactment of zoning ordinances, and the like.' " (156 C.A.3d 1184, quoting Resource Defense Fund v. Santa Cruz (1982) 133 C.A.3d 800, 806, 184 C.R. 371.)

(b) "Zoning ordinances are regulations governed by the superior enactments in the hierarchy of planning laws. Thus, the validity of a conditional use permit, which is governed by the zoning regulations, depends (derivatively) on the general plan's conformity with statutory criteria. Where the adopted general plan lacks elements required by state law, relevant to the uses sought, the ordinance fails to provide criteria mandated by such law for the measurement of the propriety of the uses to be authorized by the permit. These criteria are essential to evaluation of the proposed uses and the conditions which should be imposed. Put another way, the scope of authority of the agency to enact a general plan and zoning ordinances and to apply them is governed by the requirements of state law. A permit action taken without compliance with the hierarchy of land use laws is ultra vires as to any defect implicated by the uses sought by the permit." (156 C.A.3d 1184.)

(c) Dictum in Hawkins states that Govt.C. 65860 (supra, §1021) does not require that conditional use permits be reviewed for this consistency. Hawkins reasoned that because use permits issued pursuant to a zoning ordinance must necessarily conform to its requirements, it follows that if the zoning ordinance is kept consistent with the general plan, use permits issued thereunder will also be consistent. "The flaw in the argument is the conditional 'if.' If the general plan is not consistent with state law, the zoning ordinance may fail to provide criteria by which to measure the propriety of the uses sought by the permit. The Hawkins reasoning opens the door to defeat of the purpose of a general plan to provide enforceable standards by which the administering agency must measure the propriety of the permits." (156 C.A.3d 1186.) (See Cadiz Land Co. v. Rail Cycle, L.P. (2000) 83 C.A.4th 74, 114, 115, 99 C.R.2d 378 [designating desert landfill as resource conservation land and changing site to solid waste landfill facility was not inconsistent with general plan that recognized need for landfills, noted that desert area may be ideal for them, and expressly allowed them to be classified as open space land uses].)

(3) Imposition of Conditions. No local government or agency may condition the issuance of a conditional use permit on the following:

(a) Dedication of land for a purpose not reasonably related to the use of the property for which the permit is requested. (Govt.C. 65909(a).)

(b) Posting a bond to guarantee installation of public improvements not reasonably related to the use of the property for which the permit is requested. (Govt.C. 65909(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

77 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

b. As Basis for Exception or Variance.

1. Conditional Use Permit.

cc. Challenge by Nonresident.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1052

[§ 1052] Challenge by Nonresident.

In Scott v. Indian Wells (1972) 6 C.3d 541, 99 C.R. 745, 492 P.2d 1137, defendant city council, following a recommendation of the planning commission, granted a conditional use permit for construction of a large development in a residential area just within the city limits. The project included a golf course and tennis courts, clubhouses, condominiums, an apartment building, commercial shops, and a heliport. The large structures were placed so as not to obstruct the view of members of an adjacent country club outside the city, but they would obstruct the view of other homeowners in adjacent land outside. Plaintiffs brought a class action on behalf of the homeowners for a declaratory judgment annulling the permit. Held, judgment for defendant on demurrer reversed. Treating the declaratory relief complaint as a petition for administrative mandamus to review the council's action, the court answered two questions in favor of plaintiffs. First, whether a nonresident landowner has standing to contest a city's zoning, and second, whether the city owes that landowner any duty to consider his or her views or the effect of a proposed development on his or her property.

(a) In the early days of zoning there were large undeveloped areas at the borders of contiguous towns, but today municipal boundary lines rarely indicate where an urban development ceases. The development of a parcel on a city's edge may substantially affect the value and usability of an adjacent parcel on the other side of the line. To allow zoning with no concern for adjacent nonresident landowners would "make a fetish out of indivisible municipal boundary lines and a mockery of the principles of zoning." (6 C.3d 548, quoting New Jersey case.)

(b) The city "owes adjoining landowners who are not city residents a duty of notice to the extent given similarly situated city residents, a duty to hear their views, and a duty to consider the proposed development with respect to its effect on all neighboring property owners. ... [A]djoining landowners who are not city residents may enforce these duties by appropriate legal proceedings and have standing to challenge zoning decisions of the city which affect their property." (6 C.3d 549.) (See 69 A.L.R.3d 805 [standing of adjacent owner not in zoned territory to attack zoning]; cf. 49 A.L.R.3d 1126 [standing of municipal corporation to attack zoning of land outside its borders].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

78 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

b. As Basis for Exception or Variance.

2. Variance.

aa. Nature and Grounds.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1053

[§ 1053] Nature and Grounds.

A variance allows a nonconforming use on a showing of an individual hardship. (See Essick v. Los Angeles (1950) 34 C.2d 614, 623, 213 P.2d 492; Jackson v. San Mateo (1957) 148 C.A.2d 667, 307 P.2d 451; Minney v. Azusa (1958) 164 C.A.2d 12, 28, 330 P.2d 255; Tustin Heights Assn. v. Board of Supervisors of Orange (1959) 170 C.A.2d 619, 627, 339 P.2d 914; Dunham v. Westminster (1962) 202 C.A.2d 245, 249, 20 C.R. 772 [application for variance as condition to challenge of unconstitutionality of ordinance, under doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies]; Cow Hollow Imp. Club v. Board of Permit App. of San Francisco (1966) 245 C.A.2d 160, 167, 53 C.R. 610 [power to grant and review]; Broadway, Laguna, Vallejo Assn. v. Board of Permit App. (1967) 66 C.2d 767, 773, 59 C.R. 146, 427 P.2d 810 [same]; Moss v. Board of Zoning Adjustment of Los Angeles (1968) 262 C.A.2d 1, 8, 68 C.R. 320 [charter requirement of written findings as prerequisite to granting variance by zoning administrator]; Craik v. Santa Cruz (2000) 81 C.A.4th 880, 890, 890, 96 C.R.2d 538 ["physical" disparity is not precondition for variance; defendant county could reasonably accept that there was disparity among properties based on fact that FEMA and related county regulations in reality only applied to land of real parties and a few other vacant lots]; 89 A.L.R.2d 663 [who may apply]; 38 A.L.R.3d 167 [statute or ordinance requiring notice as prerequisite to granting variance]; 49 A.L.R.3d 492 [imposition of conditions regarding highway and traffic changes]; 52 A.L.R.3d 494 [granting variance after prior denial]; 83 Am.Jur.2d (2003 ed.), Zoning and Planning §749 et seq.; 23 Proof of Facts 3d 563 [hardship necessary for zoning variance]; 72 Proof of Facts 3d 257 [compelling hearing on variance or special permit]; on administration, see supra, §1025.)

The grounds and conditions for a variance are now specified by statute:

(1) A variance from the terms of a zoning ordinance is granted only when, because of special circumstances applicable to the property, including its size, shape, topography, location, or surroundings, strict application of the ordinance deprives the property of privileges enjoyed by other property in the vicinity that is under an identical zoning classification. (Govt.C. 65906.)

(2) A variance is subject to those conditions that will assure that the authorized adjustment does not constitute a grant of special privileges inconsistent with the limitations on other properties in the vicinity and zone in which the property is situated. (Govt.C. 65906.) (See Orinda Assn. v. Board of Supervisors (1986) 182 C.A.3d 1145, 1165, 1167, 227 C.R. 688 [invalid special privilege]; Stolman v. Los Angeles (2003) 114 C.A.4th 916, 924, 929, 8 C.R.3d 178 [zoning administrator erred in granting variance to gasoline station that was nonconforming use to expand services in residential area where station owner failed to show that denial of variance would work unnecessary hardship on him and that he would be deprived of use afforded to other properties in same zone and vicinity, as required by city code; "same zone and vicinity" language required that comparable properties be within reasonably close proximity].)

(3) A variance must not be granted for a property that authorizes a use or activity that is not otherwise expressly authorized by the zone regulation governing the parcel of property. (Govt.C. 65906.) (See Topanga Assn. for Scenic Community v. Los Angeles (1974) 11 C.3d 506, 511, 113 C.R. 836, 522 P.2d 12, infra, §1056 [Govt.C. 65906 permits harmonious local legislation]; for variances from terms of open-space regulation, see supra, §1019.)

Local governments may issue a zoning variance for a dwelling unit to be constructed, or attached to a primary residence, on a parcel zoned for a single-family residence, if the unit is to be occupied solely by one or two persons aged 62 or above, and the unit's floor space does not exceed 30% of the existing living area or 1,200 square feet. This section does not limit the requirements of Govt.C. 65852.2, or the power of local governments to permit second units. (Govt.C. 65852.1; see supra, §1039.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Second unit housing for seniors: Govt.C. 65852.1 became inoperative on January 1, 2007, except that a variance issued before that date remains valid.

79 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

b. As Basis for Exception or Variance.

2. Variance.

bb. Discretion of Governing Body.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1054

[§ 1054] Discretion of Governing Body.

The grant or denial of a variance "rests primarily in the discretion of the body designated by the applicable ordinance or statute; no vested right is affected by either the denial or the grant; where a variance is granted it is presumed that official duty was performed in investigating the matter and that the existence of the necessary facts was found; and the decision of the municipal body to grant or deny a variance will not be disturbed by the courts in the absence of a clear and convincing showing of an abuse of discretion." (Siller v. Board of Supervisors of San Francisco (1962) 58 C.2d 479, 484, 25 C.R. 73, 375 P.2d 41; see San Marino v. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Los Angeles (1960) 180 C.A.2d 657, 673, 4 C.R. 547 [discretion to deny variance upheld]; 75 Proof of Facts 3d 209 [requirement that zoning board consider statutory factors in deciding request for area variance].) (On power of zoning administrator to decide application without hearing, see supra, §1025; on judicial review, see infra, §1056.)

In Zakessian v. Sausalito (1972) 28 C.A.3d 794, 105 C.R. 105, the court rejected the contention that a variance should be denied because the owners were financially able to comply with the ordinance. "It is true that financial hardship alone, at least ordinarily, will not constitute unnecessary hardship. But where the unique condition of one's property causes the financial hardship the rule is otherwise." (28 C.A.3d 802.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

80 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

b. As Basis for Exception or Variance.

2. Variance.

cc. Imposition of Conditions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1055

[§ 1055] Imposition of Conditions.

(1) Reasonable Conditions. No local government or agency may condition the issuance of a variance on the following:

(a) Dedication of land for a purpose not reasonably related to the use of the property for which the variance is requested. (Govt.C. 65909(a).)

(b) Posting a bond to guarantee installation of public improvements not reasonably related to the use of the property for which the variance is requested. (Govt.C. 65909(b).)

In Bringle v. Board of Supervisors of Orange (1960) 54 C.2d 86, 4 C.R. 493, 351 P.2d 765, plaintiff owned four acres fronting on an avenue zoned for agricultural purposes. In 1952, he was granted a 5-year variance for an excavating business. On its expiration, he applied for another, which was granted on condition that he dedicate to the county without compensation an easement 30 feet wide and 132 feet long for a right-of-way to widen the avenue. This proceeding was brought to have the condition declared invalid and to compel issuance of the variance without it. Held, mandamus properly denied. (a) One of the general purposes of a zoning ordinance is to provide for adequate streets and highways, and a street that might be adequate for an agricultural area might be inadequate if part of the area is to be used for another purpose. (b) Plaintiff failed to make an evidentiary showing that the condition was not necessary or not related to his proposed use. (c) The condition was reasonable although it required dedication of a perpetual easement when the variance was for only 5 years. The board could decide that widening should be a permanent improvement, but that anticipated development of the surrounding areas might make it desirable in 5 years to reconsider the permitted variance. (54 C.2d 89.) (On judicial enforcement of conditions, see supra, §1026.)

(2) Waiver of Right To Challenge. In Pfeiffer v. La Mesa (1977) 69 C.A.3d 74, 137 C.R. 804, plaintiff property owners sued defendant city in inverse condemnation. The complaint alleged that the city refused to issue a building permit for improvements unless they complied with invalid conditions (easement and storm drain across their property); that they were required by a lease agreement with the state to construct the improvements or suffer possible cancellation of the lease; that they therefore elected to comply with the conditions "under protest and without waiving their rights to demand compensation," and suffered damages in the amount of the cost of compliance. Held, no cause of action was stated. Under Selby Realty Co. v. San Buenaventura (1973) 10 C.3d 110, 116, 109 C.R. 799, 514 P.2d 111, the proper remedy to attack an invalid condition is a proceeding in administrative mandamus under C.C.P. 1094.5; by failing to avail themselves of this procedure, they waived the right to assert invalidity of the condition. Their unilateral announcement that they reserved the right to seek damages did not make this rule inapplicable; they simply decided that it was to their economic advantage to proceed with the construction rather than to invoke the legal procedure for challenge. (69 C.A.3d 78.) (See Santee v. Superior Court (1991) 228 C.A.3d 713, 718, 279 C.R. 22 [failure to seek administrative mandamus].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

81 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

b. As Basis for Exception or Variance.

2. Variance.

dd. Judicial Review of Findings.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1056

[§ 1056] Judicial Review of Findings.

In Topanga Assn. for Scenic Community v. Los Angeles (1974) 11 C.3d 506, 113 C.R. 836, 522 P.2d 12, a Los Angeles County ordinance zoned an area for light agriculture and single-family residences. T obtained a variance from the County Regional Planning Commission, upheld by the Board of Supervisors, to establish a 93-space mobilehome park. Petitioner, a nonprofit organization of taxpayers and property owners in the area, sought mandamus in the superior court, and appealed from the order of denial. Held, order reversed with directions to issue the writ.

(a) Judicial review of variance decision. (1) Although adoption of zoning regulations is a legislative function, granting a variance is a quasi-judicial act. (11 C.3d 517.) (2) If the judiciary were to review the grant superficially, administrative boards could subvert the decisionmaking structure and, in effect, amend the zoning code in the guise of a variance. (11 C.3d 517.) (3) Meaningful review is also necessary to protect the interests of those in adjacent property. "A zoning scheme, after all, is similar in some respects to a contract; each party foregoes rights to use its land as it wishes in return for the assurance that the use of neighboring property will be similarly restricted, the rationale being that such mutual restriction can enhance total community welfare." (11 C.3d 517.)

(b) Insufficiency of findings. The factual data contained in the Planning Commission's report consists of a showing of the characteristics and qualities of the particular property. It does not show that surrounding properties differ. Hence, it does not meet the requirement of "special circumstances." This language in Govt.C. 65906 (supra, §1053) "emphasizes disparities between properties, not treatment of the subject property's characteristics in the abstract. ... It also contemplates that at best, only a small fraction of any one zone can qualify for a variance." (11 C.3d 520.) So large a parcel as 28 acres is suspect. (11 C.3d 522.)

(c) Conclusion. This case illuminates two important principles. "First, by requiring that administrative findings must support a variance, we emphasize the need for orderly legal process and the desirability of forcing administrative agencies to express their grounds for decision so that reviewing courts can intelligently examine the validity of administrative action. Second, by abrogating an unsupported exception to a zoning plan, we conduct orderly and planned utilization of the environment." (11 C.3d 522.)

A number of other decisions deal with judicial review of variances. (See Carmel-By-The-Sea v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 71 C.A.3d 84, 92, 139 C.R. 214 [findings insufficient; mere recitation of statutory language]; Orinda Assn. v. Board of Supervisors (1986) 182 C.A.3d 1145, 1160, 1167, 227 C.R. 688 [findings insufficient]; Parkmerced Residents Organization v. San Francisco Residential Rent Stabilization & Arbitration Bd. (1989) 210 C.A.3d 1235, 1243, 1244, 258 C.R. 774 [board's factual findings that landlord, by reason of its timely implementation of prior method for determining rent, would lose over $ 300,000 annually if new method was imposed, was sufficient to justify waiver; factual findings followed by conclusion that waiver is based on rule governing hardships were sufficient]; Dore v. Ventura (1994) 23 C.A.4th 320, 327, 328, 28 C.R.2d 299 [county's findings supported denial of planned development permit for construction of commercial building even if they paraphrased language of applicable ordinances; they also incorporated findings from staff reports and from public testimony]; Saad v. Berkeley (1994) 24 C.A.4th 1206, 1216, 30 C.R.2d 95 [flaw in one finding of detriment supporting denial of permit was irrelevant, as two other findings of detriment were supported by substantial evidence, and only one finding of detriment was required for denial]; Craik v. Santa Cruz (2000) 81 C.A.4th 880, 885, 96 C.R.2d 538 [following Topanga Assn.]; for statutory limitation on issues, see Govt.C. 65009(b), supra, §1047.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

82 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

c. As Basis for Compensation.

1. Nature of Problem.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1057

[§ 1057] Nature of Problem.

The theory of Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon (1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322, that a police power regulation may become a taking so as to require compensation (see supra, §980), was applied in Eldridge v. Palo Alto (1976) 57 C.A.3d 613, 129 C.R. 575. Plaintiffs owned unimproved land in the foothills of defendant city. The city adopted ordinances rezoning the property from single-family residential to "permanent open space and conservation lands," on which dwellings were limited to lots of a minimum of 10 acres. Plaintiff B sued for damages in inverse condemnation or for a declaration of unconstitutionality of the ordinance as applied to his property; plaintiff E conceded the validity of the ordinances and sought only damages in inverse condemnation. Held, judgment for defendant on demurrer reversed; each complaint stated a cause of action.

(a) Inverse condemnation where ordinance is oppressive. The first question is whether the sole remedy of a property owner is to invalidate the ordinance on constitutional or other grounds. There is no controlling decision in California, but expressions in Klopping v. Whittier (1972) 8 C.3d 39, 104 C.R. 1, 500 P.2d 1345, infra, §1235, HFH, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 C.3d 508, 125 C.R. 365, 542 P.2d 237, Aaron v. Los Angeles (1974) 40 C.A.3d 471, 115 C.R. 162, infra, §1128, and other decisions indicate approval of the view that a regulation may be so harsh as to constitute a taking of property that requires compensation. (57 C.A.3d 618 et seq.) Lower federal courts have taken the same position. (57 C.A.3d 620.) Hence, "a valid zoning ordinance may nevertheless operate so oppressively as to amount to a taking, thus giving an aggrieved landowner a right to damages in inverse condemnation." (57 C.A.3d 621.)

(b) Oppressive nature of ordinance. The history of the adoption of the ordinance and its provisions (57 C.A.3d 621 et seq.) support the allegation of plaintiffs that they are denied any substantial or reasonable use of their property. Although the court in HFH, Ltd. held that a zoning regulation that merely decreases the market value of property does not call for compensation, the opinion distinguished the situation where the regulation has the substantial effect of depriving the landowner of any reasonable or beneficial use. (57 C.A.3d 624.) Similar statements, following the general principle set forth in Pennsylvania Coal Co., are made in other California cases, e.g., Kissinger v. Los Angeles (1958) 161 C.A.2d 454, 327 P.2d 10, supra, §1048. (57 C.A.3d 626.) Also, open-space legislation (Govt.C. 16140 et seq., 51070 et seq., 65910 et seq.; see supra, §1019), expressly disclaims an intention to permit taking or damaging private property for public use without the payment of compensation. (57 C.A.3d 627; see Govt.C. 65912.)

(c) Unreasonableness is question of fact. Whether a zoning restriction is so unreasonable as to constitute an invasion of property rights under these authorities, is ordinarily a question of fact that cannot be resolved on demurrer. (57 C.A.3d 628.)

(d) Ordinance is valid. The open-space zoning ordinance is a proper exercise of police power and is not subject to constitutional challenge except insofar as it may support an action in inverse condemnation by a particular owner. (57 C.A.3d 631.) (See 28 Hastings L. J. 1569 [Eldridge]; 31 Hastings L. J. 112 [same]; for disapproval of Eldridge view, see infra, §1058.)

Pinheiro v. Marin (1976) 60 C.A.3d 323, 131 C.R. 633, presents the ordinary situation governed by HFH, Ltd. The complaint alleged that an ordinance rezoned property to provide open space, and that the effect was to reduce the market value from $ 960,000 to $ 210,000. Thus, the property admittedly had a remaining beneficial and substantial use, and no action in inverse condemnation would lie. (See Sierra Terreno v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (1978) 79 C.A.3d 439, 442, 144 C.R. 776; Friedman v. Fairfax (1978) 81 C.A.3d 667, 675, 146 C.R. 687; Helix Land Co. v. San Diego (1978) 82 C.A.3d 932, 943, 946, 147 C.R. 683; 22 Ecology L. Q. 89 [criticizing Pennsylvania Coal Co. and arguing that regulatory takings doctrine should be abolished]; 19 A.L.R.4th 756 [local use zoning of wetlands or floodplain as taking without compensation]; 31 Proof of Facts 3d 563 [proof of inverse condemnation from excessive land use regulation]; on regulatory takings generally, see infra, §1153 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

83 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

c. As Basis for Compensation.

2. Agins Case.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1058

[§ 1058] Agins Case.

In Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, plaintiffs acquired five acres of unimproved land in defendant city's ridgeland area for residential development. Defendant prepared a general plan envisaging "open space" in the ridgeland, and adopted a zoning ordinance that limited plaintiff to a maximum of five dwelling units or a minimum of one. Subsequently, the city filed a condemnation action to acquire plaintiffs' property, but within a year abandoned it on payment of costs. Plaintiffs then filed the present action seeking declaratory relief against the allegedly unconstitutional zoning ordinance, and damages in inverse condemnation. Held, the remedy of declaratory relief was appropriate, but no action in inverse condemnation would lie.

(a) Unreasonable regulation as unconstitutional taking. The general principle is stated by Nichols on Eminent Domain: "Not only is an actual physical appropriation, under an attempted exercise of the police power, in practical effect an exercise of the power of eminent domain, but if regulative legislation is so unreasonable or arbitrary as virtually to deprive a person of the complete use and enjoyment of his property, it comes within the purview of the law of eminent domain. Such legislation is an invalid exercise of the police power since it is clearly unreasonable and arbitrary. It is invalid as an exercise of the power of eminent domain since no provision is made for compensation." (24 C.3d 272.)

(b) Declaratory relief and administrative mandamus as remedies. California v. Superior Court (Veta Co.) (1974) 12 C.3d 237, 115 C.R. 497, 524 P.2d 1281, approved the remedy of declaratory relief where a statute controlling development of coastal lands was facially unconstitutional, and further held that constitutionality of the application of the statute to particular land could be reviewed by administrative mandamus. (24 C.3d 272, 273.) The same is true here. "A landowner alleging that a zoning ordinance has deprived him of substantially all use of his land may attempt through declaratory relief or mandamus to invalidate the ordinance as excessive regulation" in violation of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Cal. Const., Art. I, §19. (24 C.3d 273.)

(c) No remedy by inverse condemnation. The statement in Eldridge v. Palo Alto (1976) 57 C.A.3d 613, 129 C.R. 575, supra, §1057, that a valid zoning ordinance may nevertheless operate so oppressively as to give rise to an action for damages in inverse condemnation, is disapproved. (24 C.3d 273.) The suggestion in Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon

(1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322 (see supra, §980) has been misunderstood. The court declared void the exercise of police power limiting the company's right to mine its land; but it did not attempt "to transmute the illegal governmental infringement into an exercise of eminent domain and the possibility of compensation was not even considered." (24 C.3d 274.) In HFH, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 C.3d 508, 125 C.R. 365, 542 P.2d 237 (see supra, §1057), the question of compensation where a zoning regulation forbids substantially all use of land was left open (15 C.3d 518, footnote 16), and it is now decided that the remedy of inverse condemnation is undesirable for a number of policy reasons. These reasons include (1) a lack of flexibility for community planners, (2) the chilling effect the remedy would have on the exercise of regulatory powers "because the expenditure of public funds would be to some extent within the power of the judiciary," and (3) the fiscal chaos that would result if voters inadvertently committed public funds through the exercise of zoning by initiative. (24 C.3d 276.)

(d) No right to declaratory relief in this case. Under HFH, Ltd., an ordinance that results in a mere diminution in the value of property is not per se improper; and, although the question is one of degree and the answer turns on individual facts, "we hold that a zoning ordinance may be unconstitutional and subject to invalidation only when its effect is to deprive the landowner of substantially all reasonable use of his property." (24 C.3d 277.) The ordinance here does not have this effect. It allows plaintiffs to build one to five residences on their property, and the trial judge was justified in finding that there was no unconstitutional interference with the entire use or an impermissible decrease in value. (24 C.3d 277.)

One justice dissented, distinguishing HFH, Ltd., and arguing that many other decisions support the opposing view. (See Furey v. Sacramento (1979) 24 C.3d 862, 871, 874, 157 C.R. 684, 598 P.2d 844 [following Agins]; Rancho La Costa v. San Diego (1980) 111 C.A.3d 54, 62, 168 C.R. 491 [same]; Gregory v. San Juan Capistrano (1983) 142 C.A.3d 72, 88, 191 C.R. 47 [following Agins; ordinance requiring mobilehome park owner to give right of first refusal was unconstitutional taking]; 31 Hastings L. J. 114; 13 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 157; 27 Pacific L. J. 1657 [conjunctive application of Agins disjunctive test].)

In Agins v. Tiburon (1980) 447 U.S. 255, 100 S.Ct. 2138, 65 L.Ed.2d 106, the U.S. Supreme Court affirmed the California decision, holding that, although the ordinances limit development, "they neither prevent the best use of appellants' land, ... nor extinguish a fundamental attribute of ownership." (100 S.Ct. 2142, 65 L.Ed.2d 113.) However, "[b]ecause no taking has occurred, we need not consider whether a State may limit the remedies available to a person whose land has been taken without just compensation." (100 S.Ct. 2143, 65 L.Ed.2d 114.) (See 8 Pepperdine L. Rev. 839; 8 Hastings Const. L. Q. 491, 517; 15 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 741.)

The suggestion in the California Supreme Court decision in Agins, that a compensable taking requires a total deprivation of substantially all reasonable use of the property, was disapproved in Kavanau v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1997) 16 C.4th 761, 774, 66 C.R.2d 672, 941 P.2d 851, infra, §1155.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

84 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

C. Zoning.

8. Individual Hardship.

c. As Basis for Compensation.

3. Subsequent Decisions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1059

[§ 1059] Subsequent Decisions.

In Toso v. Santa Barbara (1980) 101 C.A.3d 934, 162 C.R. 210, the court reexamined the question whether inequitable zoning actions undertaken by a public agency as a prelude to public acquisition may give rise to an action for damages for inverse condemnation, citing the dictum in HFH, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 C.3d 508, footnote 14, 125 C.R. 365, 542 P.2d 237 (see supra, §1057). The opinion holds that Agins v. Tiburon (1980) 447 U.S. 255, 100 S.Ct. 2138, 65 L.Ed.2d 106, supra, §1058, did not eliminate this cause of action (101 C.A.3d 951, 952), but that the precondemnation activities in the present case were not so unreasonable as to warrant damages. "[T]here was no announcement of intent to condemn, nor was there any official act by the city towards acquiring the property. While an absence of a formal resolution of condemnation is not crucial, there must be some official act or official expression of intent to acquire. In the case at bench there were public meetings, negotiations, planning, debates and an advisory ballot proposition calling for acquisition but there was no official act done by the city towards acquiring the property. We have here no more than general planning that is noncompensable." (101 C.A.3d 957.)

In San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. San Diego (1981) 450 U.S. 621, 101 S.Ct. 1287, 67 L.Ed.2d 551, the Court was asked to decide the question left open in Agins--whether the state must provide a monetary remedy to a landowner whose property allegedly has been "taken" by a regulatory ordinance. The Court refused to do so on the ground that the California Court of Appeal in an unpublished opinion had reversed the trial court judgment on the authority of Agins, but had not invalidated either the zoning ordinance or the open-space plan because factual disputes precluded relief. Because the Court of Appeal decision contemplated further trial proceedings, the appeal was dismissed for lack of a final judgment. (101 S.Ct. 1293, 1294, 67 L.Ed.2d 559, 561.) Four justices dissented, arguing the Holmes theory of Pennsylvania Coal Co., and criticizing the California Supreme Court's Agins opinion. (101 S.Ct. 1308, 67 L.Ed.2d 563.) (See Gilliland v. Los Angeles (1981) 126 C.A.3d 610, 615, 179 C.R. 73 [zoning ordinance establishing low density of approved development on property was valid under Agins]; North Sacramento Land Co. v. Sacramento (1983) 140 C.A.3d 576, 189 C.R. 739 [pleading was sufficient for relief under Agins]; Smith v. San Francisco (1990) 225 C.A.3d 38, 45, 275 C.R. 17 [complaint must allege facts showing that regulation deprived them of substantially all value and use of property]; 19 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 685 [San Diego]; 15 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 371 [Uncertain Regulatory Standards]; 15 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 741 [Valuing the Regulatory Taking].)

In Ramona Convent of the Holy Names v. Alhambra (1993) 21 C.A.4th 10, 26 C.R.2d 140, plaintiff operated a Catholic girls' school in defendant city on a parcel of land measuring 19.17 acres. To remedy a deficiency in the amount of open space in the city, defendant changed the zoning and general plan designation of the parcel from multiple family to open space. After an earthquake, plaintiff decided to sell 1.97 acres of the parcel, then used for a softball diamond, to raise money to pay for earthquake repairs. A private developer was given an option to purchase the 1.97-acre site on which it would build senior citizen housing. Defendant denied plaintiff's application to subdivide the parcel, and plaintiff brought the present action, filing a petition for a writ of mandamus and a complaint for inverse condemnation and violation of civil rights. The trial judge denied the petition for writ relief, and the denial was affirmed on appeal, the Court of Appeal finding that because the 1.97-acre parcel would have been too small to be conducive to any of the uses permitted for open space, there was no abuse of discretion in denying the application to divide the parcel. The trial judge granted defendant's motion for summary adjudication on the other claims, finding that the cause of action for inverse condemnation was not ripe because plaintiff had not pursued all available remedies to develop the use of the property commensurate with existing permissible uses and had failed to show that defendant's actions had prevented all beneficial use of the property. Held, affirmed.

(a) Contrary to the trial judge's conclusion, the inverse condemnation claim is ripe for adjudication. Although the application for senior citizen housing has been withdrawn, defendant has made clear that it will permit only specific open-space uses and no others. (21 C.A.4th 20.)

(b) The Court of Appeal's decision denying the petition for writ relief established that the denial of the lot split application was proper. Thus, there is only one undivided 19.17-acre parcel, which continues to be used for school purposes and has not been taken by defendant. (21 C.A.4th 20.)

(c) Even if the 1.97-acre portion is viewed as a discrete area, there has been no compensable taking. Twain Harte Associates, Ltd. v. Tuolumne (1990) 217 C.A.3d 71, 265 C.R. 737, infra, §1157, and Aptos Seascape Corp. v. Santa Cruz (1982) 138 C.A.3d 484, 188 C.R. 191, relied on by plaintiff, are distinguishable. "In each of those cases, the governing entity created different zones within a single parcel and restricted development in part of the property. Here, the zoning of the entire 19.17-acre parcel is uniform." (21 C.A.4th 22.) Furthermore, the denial of the highest and best use of property does not constitute an unconstitutional taking, and the preservation of some open space amidst populated areas is a legitimate exercise of the police power. The core issue is whether defendant "went too far," and it cannot be said that it did; plaintiff continues to be able to use the 1.97-acre portion, even if it cannot resolve its internal financial situation through a sale. (21 C.A.4th 23, 24.) (See Del Oro Hills v. Oceanside (1995) 31 C.A.4th 1060, 1079, 37 C.R.2d 677 [growth control initiative did not deprive developer of all beneficial use]; for discussion of when rent control, development fees, building moratoriums, and other land use regulations become regulatory takings requiring compensation, see infra, §1153 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

85 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

1. Regulation or Prohibition of Inimical Activity.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1060

[§ 1060] Regulation or Prohibition of Inimical Activity.

(1) Dangerous Property or Activity. The state may prohibit or restrict the ownership, use, or possession of certain kinds of property deemed inimical to the public welfare; e.g., opium (In re Yun Quong (1911) 159 C. 508, 511, 114 P. 835), intoxicating liquor (Mugler v. Kansas (1887) 123 U.S. 623, 8 S.Ct. 273, 31 L.Ed. 205), and deadly weapons (People v. Ferguson (1933) 129 C.A. 300, 304, 18 P.2d 741). (See Allied Properties v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1959) 53 C.2d 141, 148, 346 P.2d 737, infra, §1081 [fair trade statute on liquor prices was upheld in part as discouraging excessive purchases]; 22 Hastings Const. L. Q. 441 [constitutional protection against state or local regulation of liquor licensing]; 65 A.L.R.4th 1205 [validity, construction, and application of nonsmoking regulations]; 80 A.L.R.4th 70 [statute, ordinance, or regulation applying to specific dog breeds such as "pit bulls" or "bull terriers"]; on state power to regulate liquor traffic under the Twenty-First Amendment, see infra, §1311; on forfeiture or destruction of drugs, dangerous weapons, or other property used in commission of crime, see 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §202 et seq.)

The state may also prohibit business activities deemed inimical. (See Murphy v. California (1912) 225 U.S. 623, 32 S.Ct. 697, 56 L.Ed. 1229 [public billiard halls]; Sternall v. Strand (1946) 76 C.A.2d 432, 437, 172 P.2d 921 [ordinance prohibiting possession of coin-operated pinball or marble machines].)

(2) Vehicle or Vessel Used in Illegal Activity. Provisions for forfeiture of a vehicle that is not itself dangerous but that is used to facilitate the illegal transportation of dangerous property, such as narcotics, are common. (See Health & Saf.C. 11470 et seq.; 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §209 et seq.; 14 A.L.R.3d 128 [federal statute; forfeiture for violation of liquor laws].) These laws are constitutional. (See Van Oster v. Kansas (1926) 272 U.S. 465, 47 S.Ct. 133, 71 L.Ed. 354; People v. One 1940 Ford V-8 Coupe (1950) 36 C.2d 471, 476, 224 P.2d 677.) It is also constitutional to forfeit the car of an owner who, although without knowledge of the illegal object, consents to another's use of the car. (People v. One 1941 Ford 8 Stake Truck (1945) 26 C.2d 503, 505, 159 P.2d 641; People v. One 1940 Ford V-8 Coupe, supra, 36 C.2d 476; People v. One 1951 Ford Sedan (1954) 122 C.A.2d 680, 685, 265 P.2d 176.) But forfeiture cannot be justified where the car of an innocent owner is taken without his or her consent. (People v. One 1941 Buick Sport Coupe (1946) 28 C.2d 692, 694, 171 P.2d 719.)

In Calero-Toledo v. Pearson Yacht Leasing Co. (1974) 416 U.S. 663, 94 S.Ct. 2080, 40 L.Ed.2d 452, the theory of the vehicle cases was applied to seizure by Puerto Rican officers of a leased pleasure yacht found with marijuana on board. The innocent lessor invoked the doctrine of Fuentes v. Shevin (1972) 407 U.S. 67, 92 S.Ct. 1983, 32 L.Ed.2d 556. The Court, quoting Fuentes, characterized this as one of the exceptional circumstances permitting seizure without a prior hearing: an important governmental purpose was involved, preseizure notice and hearing might frustrate the interests served, and the seizure was by government officers, not self-interested private parties. (94 S.Ct. 2089, 40 L.Ed.2d 466.) (See Bennis v. Michigan (1996) 516 U.S. 442, 116 S.Ct. 994, 134 L.Ed.2d 68, 3 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Punishment, §206 [refusal to recognize "innocent-owner" defense in action for forfeiture of automobile does not violate Due Process Clause; following Van Oster, Calero-Toledo, and related cases].)

A former statute provided for summary forfeiture of a vehicle if its identification numbers were removed or altered. In Hughes v. Neth (1978) 80 C.A.3d 952, 146 C.R. 37, this statute was held to violate due process, and the Legislature responded with an extensive revision of the section, providing for notice and a postseizure hearing. (See Veh.C. 10751.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

86 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

2. Regulation of Nondangerous Activity.

a. General Principles.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1061

[§ 1061] General Principles.

Under the Fourteenth Amendment and Cal. Const., Art. I, §1, everyone has a right to acquire and use property, and to engage in a lawful calling or business, subject to regulations that are necessary for the public welfare. (Angelopoulos v. Bottorff (1926) 76 C.A. 621, 625, 245 P. 447; Whitcomb v. Emerson (1941) 46 C.A.2d 263, 273, 115 P.2d 892; see Bautista v. Jones (1944) 25 C.2d 746, 749, 155 P.2d 343 ["right to work, either in employment or independent business, is fundamental and, no doubt, enjoys the protection of the personal liberty guarantee of the Fourteenth Amendment ... as well as the more specific provisions of our state Constitution"].)

But the state may impose reasonable restrictions or conditions, for the protection of others, on an owner's use of nondangerous property, or on engaging in a legitimate business. (See In re Sidebotham (1938) 12 C.2d 434, 436, 85 P.2d 453 [provision of Real Estate Act requiring subdivider of land to furnish certain information to Real Estate Commissioner]; Simpson v. Los Angeles (1935) 4 C.2d 60, 65, 47 P.2d 474 [closing street to vehicular traffic, restricting owner's right of use]; Clemons v. Los Angeles (1950) 36 C.2d 95, 222 P.2d 439; supra, §1005 et seq. [zoning], infra, §1072 et seq. [regulation of business].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

87 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

2. Regulation of Nondangerous Activity.

b. Invalid Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1062

[§ 1062] Invalid Regulations.

Nondangerous businesses cannot be legislated out of existence. Thus, an ordinance prohibiting the maintenance of a hospital for the treatment of contagious diseases within the city limits was held invalid on the ground that there was no possible danger in its presence. (San Diego Tuberculosis Assn. v. East San Diego (1921) 186 C. 252, 200 P. 393; see Jardine v. Pasadena (1926) 199 C. 64, 248 P. 225.) And it has been said that an owner of property cannot be affirmatively compelled to do certain specified things with property if the owner prefers to abandon it instead of complying with the regulations. (Department of Public Works of Calif. v. San Diego (1932) 122 C.A. 159, 10 P.2d 102; on rule against compelling public utility to operate at loss, see infra, §1105.)

In People v. Goodspeed (1948) 85 C.A.2d Supp. 821, 192 P.2d 130, a statute prohibiting a person from negligently or wilfully draining or permitting the flow of waters from his or her land onto an adjacent public highway was held unconstitutional. The statute not only condemned harmful practices, but covered a multitude of harmless acts, and could subject to prosecution a person who washed his or her car or watered his or her lawn and allowed the excess water to drain into the gutter. Its broad prohibitive form was unnecessary to reach the evil, and this interference with the use of property may be invalid where a less drastic regulation would accomplish the purpose. (85 C.A.2d Supp. 826.)

In Bernstein v. Bush (1947) 29 C.2d 773, 177 P.2d 913, several noncontiguous parcels of property were located over an oil field. Because of their size (each less than one acre) and location, drilling was prohibited by Pub.Res.C. 3600 et seq. (regulating the spacing of oil wells), although the parcels were surrounded by oil-producing land. Held, the statute was a denial of due process to these owners because it did not protect their coequal right with surrounding property owners to recover a fair share of oil from the underlying basin. (29 C.2d 780.) (See Bernstein v. Smutz (1947) 83 C.A.2d 108, 120, 188 P.2d 48; Sindell v. Smutz (1950) 100 C.A.2d 10, 21, 222 P.2d 903.) Subsequently the statutes (Pub.Res.C. 3606 et seq.) were amended in an attempt to protect the rights of overlying owners of small tracts without giving them the unqualified right to drill.

The following have also been held invalid as unwarranted interferences with the right to acquire and use property: A statute preventing a disbarred attorney from appearing in his or her own behalf on an assigned claim (O'Connell v. Judnich (1925) 71 C.A. 386, 388, 235 P. 664); a provision in the former Corporate Securities Act that required an individual to obtain a broker's license before selling personally owned securities (People v. Pace (1925) 73 C.A. 548, 551, 238 P. 1089; People v. Davenport (1937) 21 C.A.2d 292, 294, 69 P.2d 862; see 9 Summary (10th), Corporations, §406).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

88 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

3. Aesthetic Regulations.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1063

[§ 1063] In General.

(1) Earlier Cases. Traditionally it was held that the police power could not be exercised for purely aesthetic objectives. (See Santa Barbara v. Modern Neon Sign Co. (1961) 189 C.A.2d 188, 197, 11 C.R. 57.) But regulations were sustained on other grounds, despite the incidental aesthetic object. Thus, regulations governing size, approach to the street, etc., were sustained where they had some effect in preventing recognized evils such as fire or immorality. (See St. Louis Poster Advertising Co. v. St. Louis (1919) 249 U.S. 269, 39 S.Ct. 274, 63 L.Ed. 599; People v. Norton (1930) 108 C.A. Supp. 767, 771, 288 P. 33.) Further, the height of buildings could be limited. (Welch v. Swasey (1909) 214 U.S. 91, 29 S.Ct. 567, 53 L.Ed. 923; see 8 A.L.R.2d 963 [building height regulations].) And building setback lines are valid zoning regulations. (Gorieb v. Fox (1927) 274 U.S. 603, 47 S.Ct. 675, 71 L.Ed. 1228; Thille v. Board of Public Works of Los Angeles (1927) 82 C.A. 187, 189, 255 P. 294; supra, §1038.)

Ordinances that prohibit throwing advertising handbills and circulars on streets, yards, porches, etc., have been upheld on the ground that they prevent the littering of public places and are merely regulatory, in that it is still possible to deliver advertising matter to mail boxes or to the individuals in person. (See People v. St. John (1930) 108 C.A. Supp. 779, 784, 288 P. 53; Sieroty v. Huntington Park (1931) 111 C.A. 377, 379, 295 P. 564; Pittsford v. Los Angeles (1942) 50 C.A.2d 25, 31, 122 P.2d 535, supra, §324.)

(2) Modern View. There is now a general acceptance of the view that the police power may be used to regulate the physical appearance of the environment. (See Members of City Council of Los Angeles v. Taxpayers for Vincent (1984) 466 U.S. 789, 104 S.Ct. 2118, 2129, 80 L.Ed.2d 772, 787, infra, §1068 [posting signs on public property]; Schroeder v. Municipal Court (1977) 73 C.A.3d 841, 848, 141 C.R. 85 [limitation on height of radio or television antennae in residential zone was valid]; Kucera v. Lizza (1997) 59 C.A.4th 1141, 1149, 69 C.R.2d 582 [ordinance seeking to preserve views and sunlight by regulating obstructing trees and tree growth was valid exercise of police power]; Echevarrieta v. Rancho Palos Verdes (2001) 86 C.A.4th 472, 478, 103 C.R.2d 165 [following Kucera]; 33 San Diego L. Rev. 291 [aesthetic regulation of architectural design of private single-family houses as impingement on First Amendment right of expression]; 21 A.L.R.3d 1222 [aesthetic considerations as affecting validity of zoning ordinance]; 30 A.L.R.5th 549 [validity and construction of zoning regulations relating to illuminated signs]; 29 Proof of Facts 3d 491 [proof of unreasonableness of aesthetic zoning regulation]; 42 Proof of Facts 3d 531 [proof necessary to challenge or enforce zoning and covenant restrictions on placement of television satellite dishes and radio antennas on residential property]; on billboards and other outdoor advertising, see infra, §1066 et seq.)

Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 102, 99 L.Ed. 27, 37, declared: "The concept of the public welfare is broad and inclusive. ... The values it represents are spiritual as well as physical, aesthetic as well as monetary. It is within the power of the legislature to determine that the community should be beautiful as well as healthy, spacious as well as clean, well-balanced as well as carefully patrolled." (75 S.Ct. 102, 99 L.Ed. 37.)

However, an aesthetic regulation must be carefully drawn to avoid arbitrary discrimination. Thus, in Carlin v. Palm Springs (1971) 14 C.A.3d 706, 92 C.R. 535, plaintiff, operator of a small hotel, used a "rate sign" consisting of its fictitious name, "6.50 Hotel." Defendant ordered removal of the sign under an ordinance prohibiting outside rate signs, reciting various objectionable characteristics and classifying them as public nuisances per se. Held, the ordinance was unconstitutional. The city's justification for regulating only rate signs was that these are ugly and deceptive, create an atmosphere of "bargain basement commercialism," and cause adverse reactions from tourists at luxury hotels. But "[a] rate sign is ugly only in the eye of a competitor." (14 C.A.3d 714.) "From an aesthetic standpoint, there is no difference between a sign which reads 'sam's Hotel,' and 'Hotel 6.50,' or between one which reads 'swim suits' and 'swim suits $ 5.88.' " (14 C.A.3d 714.) Where signs permit other types of advertising, a prohibition against advertising an attractive rate discriminates against small hotels to benefit luxury hotels, and cannot stand. (14 C.A.3d 713.)

On the other hand, in Burk v. Municipal Court (1964) 229 C.A.2d 696, 40 C.R. 425, an ordinance prohibited use of a "For Rent" or "For Sale" sign on a home by a realtor (with his or her business address and phone). It allowed these signs by the owner, and also permitted "open house" signs and signs on lots in a new tract. Held, the distinction was reasonable, even though the same aesthetic objections might apply to both. The major object was to prevent advertising of the commercial enterprise of the broker, as distinguished from merely noticing that the property was for sale or rent. (229 C.A.2d 702.)

In Novi v. Pacifica (1985) 169 C.A.3d 678, 215 C.R. 439, defendant city adopted land use ordinances precluding uses that would be detrimental to the "general welfare" and developments that would be "monotonous" in design and external appearance. Plaintiff developer, whose proposed 48-unit condominium project was to consist of eight 4-story buildings, refused to comply with a city planning commission requirement of "reduction of project density" to achieve the "small scale village atmosphere characteristic of Pacifica." Held, the ordinances were not unconstitutionally vague and did not lack objective criteria; hence, the city's denial of a permit for construction of the project was proper. (169 C.A.3d 682, 683.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Modern View. See 33 Ecology L. Q. 203 [aesthetic restrictions as violating symbolic speech].

89 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

3. Aesthetic Regulations.

b. Billboards and Other Outdoor Advertising.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1064

[§ 1064] In General.

(1) Development of Law. An absolute prohibition of billboards was held invalid in Varney & Green v. Williams (1909) 155 C. 318, 100 P. 867. And an attempt to prohibit exterior advertising on streetcars was held invalid in Pacific Railways Advertising Co. v. Oakland (1929) 98 C.A. 165, 170, 173, 276 P. 629, on the ground that this advertising was neither dangerous nor immoral. But the U.S. Supreme Court sustained a state statute that prohibited cigarette advertisements on billboards. (Packer Corp. v. Utah (1932) 285 U.S. 105, 52 S.Ct. 273, 76 L.Ed. 643.)

In National Advertising Co. v. Monterey (1962) 211 C.A.2d 375, 379, 27 C.R. 136, the court upheld a comprehensive zoning ordinance prohibiting construction and maintenance of billboards in certain districts, on the theory that it was a reasonable economic measure designed to protect the "tourist industry" of the community. (See Escondido v. Desert Outdoor Advertising (1973) 8 C.3d 785, 790, 106 C.R. 172, 505 P.2d 1012 [ordinance banning billboards on property adjacent to freeways promoted highway safety as well as enhancing community aesthetic values]; 58 A.L.R.2d 1314 [municipal power relating to billboards and outdoor advertising]; 56 A.L.R.3d 1207 [height of freestanding advertising signs]; 80 A.L.R.3d 687 [prohibition of regulation of advertising sign overhanging street or sidewalk]; 81 A.L.R.3d 564 [prohibition of billboards within specified distance of street or highway].)

(2) Outdoor Advertising Act. The Outdoor Advertising Act (B. & P.C. 5200 et seq.) applies generally to outdoor advertising displays within the view of highways in unincorporated areas, and to advertising displays in incorporated areas that are visible from interstate or primary highways. (B. & P.C. 5271, 5408.1.) The Act substantially conforms to the federal Highway Beautification Act of 1965 (23 U.S.C., §131). (See Metromedia v. San Diego (1980) 26 C.3d 848, 871, 164 C.R. 510, 610 P.2d 407, infra, §1066; People v. Desert Outdoor Advertising (1977) 68 C.A.3d 440, 447, 137 C.R. 221 [valid exercise of police power]; United Outdoor Advertising Co. v. Business, Trans. & Housing Agency (1988) 44 C.3d 242, 246, 242 C.R. 738, 746 P.2d 877 [area zoned for residential and agricultural use and requiring conditional use permit for commercial or industrial use is not zoned primarily for industrial or commercial activities as required under B. & P.C. 5205 for billboard permit]; 15 Pepperdine L. Rev. 711 [United Outdoor Advertising]; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §8.52.)

Permits from the Director of Transportation are required for covered signs (B. & P.C. 5350 et seq.) and the types of permitted signs are regulated (B. & P.C. 5400 et seq.). A permit is required for moving a billboard, which constitutes a new "placing" rather than "customary maintenance," under B. & P.C. 5225. (People v. Ad Way (1992) 8 C.A.4th 309, 314, 315, 11 C.R.2d 407; People v. Ad Way Signs (1993) 14 C.A.4th 187, 196, 17 C.R.2d 496.) (See Traverso v. People (1996) 46 C.A.4th 1197, 1204, 54 C.R.2d 434 [in B. & P.C. 5358, phrase "any other law of the state" does not include local ordinances; thus, it was improper to deny billboard permit because it failed to comply with local zoning ordinance].)

In accordance with federal law, the Act requires compensation pursuant to the eminent domain law for the removal of lawfully erected advertising displays. (B. & P.C. 5412; see Salinas v. Ryan Outdoor Advertising (1987) 189 C.A.3d 416, 425, 234 C.R. 619; Metropolitan Outdoor Advertising Corp. v. Santa Ana (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1401, 1404, 1405, 28 C.R.2d 664 [corporation was not entitled to compensation for removal of billboard; statute was inapplicable to displays erected pursuant to written agreement with government entity providing for removal after fixed period of time].) However, removal of certain types of advertising displays in certain areas without compensation is authorized. (See B. & P.C. 5412.1 [residential areas]; B. & P.C. 5412.2 [incorporated agricultural areas]; B. & P.C. 5412.3 [unincorporated agricultural areas]; B. & P.C. 5412.6 [circumstances constituting compelled removal].)

Although the Legislature has stated its intention to occupy this whole field of regulation (B. & P.C. 5227) and its regulations are said to be exclusive in unincorporated areas (B. & P.C. 5270), much local control is permitted: (a) Counties may enact reasonable land use or zoning regulations (see supra, §1010 et seq.). (B. & P.C. 5227.) (b) The Act must not be construed to permit advertising displays prohibited by local ordinance. (B. & P.C. 5229.) (c) Local governments may not permit advertising displays that violate the Act, but may impose restrictions "equal to or greater" than those imposed by the Act if there is compliance with B. & P.C. 5412. (B. & P.C. 5230.) (d) Local governments may require licenses or permits. (B. & P.C. 5231.) (See Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 C.A.3d 1365, 1386, 1390, 285 C.R. 335 [power of planning agency created by Tahoe Regional Planning Compact to regulate outdoor advertising was not preempted by either federal Highway Beautification Act or state Outdoor Advertising Act; hence, agency could enact ordinance prohibiting outdoor advertising signs without complying with just compensation clause of federal act].)

In Traverso v. People (1993) 6 C.4th 1152, 26 C.R.2d 217, 864 P.2d 488, plaintiff constructed a billboard in 1959. The billboard became nonconforming after the 1967 amendments to the Act, but plaintiff was allowed to maintain it under a grandfather clause in former B. & P.C. 5408(d) (now B. & P.C. 5408(e)). In 1984, the billboard fell down, and the Department of Transportation (Caltrans) gave plaintiff 30 days' notice that its permit would be cancelled unless it informed Caltrans of its repair plans. The permit was subsequently revoked. Two years later, plaintiff, without obtaining approval or a new permit, rebuilt the billboard. Caltrans posted and mailed a notice of violation in accordance with B. & P.C. 5463, which permits removal of an unlawful advertising display after 10 (now 30) days' written notice posted on the structure and mailed to the owner. Approximately 2 months later, Caltrans began to remove the billboard. Plaintiff filed an action challenging the constitutionality of B. & P.C. 5463, but the trial court granted summary judgment to Caltrans. The Court of Appeal, concluding that the statute was unconstitutional on its face for failure to provide an opportunity to be heard, reversed. Held, judgment of the Court of Appeal reversed.

(a) A billboard, even if erected in violation of the Act, constitutes a protectable property interest; so too does a permit to erect a billboard. (6 C.4th 1160, 1161.) Hence, due process requires some form of notice and hearing before removal of a billboard or revocation of a permit under the Act. (6 C.4th 1161, 1163.)

(b) B. & P.C. 5463 requires 10 (now 30) days' notice before revocation of a permit or license or removal of a billboard. This is a short but sufficient notice period, because a billboard owner is usually a sophisticated business entity. (6 C.4th 1164.)

(c) B. & P.C. 5463 does not contain an express right to a hearing. However, if the statutory language permits, a right to a hearing may be inferred when constitutional problems would otherwise arise. (6 C.4th 1164, 1165.) Here, the statute does not prohibit a hearing, and its requirement of notice before revocation or removal indicates that the Legislature intended the right to a hearing. The 10-day period gives the billboard owner sufficient time to investigate and, if appropriate, to contest Caltrans' determination of a violation. (6 C.4th 1166.)

(d) Thus, because B. & P.C. 5463 "(1) provides for 10 days' notice prior to revocation or removal, (2) contemplates a fact-finding determination by Caltrans that a violation of the Act has occurred, and (3) contains no express provision precluding a hearing," the statute contains an implicit right to a hearing, satisfies the requirements of due process, and is valid. (6 C.4th 1167.)

One justice dissented, arguing that the right to a hearing, standing alone, is insufficient; a property owner has a due process right to be given notice of its right to a hearing. (6 C.4th 1168, 1172.) (See 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 276 [Traverso].)

B. & P.C. 5463 has since been amended to increase the notice period to 30 days, and to delete the provision for posting notice on the structure. A copy of the required notice must be sent to the display owner, property owner, or advertiser when no permit has been issued.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Outdoor Advertising Act. See Regency Outdoor Advertising v. Los Angeles (2006) 39 C.4th 507, 524, 46 C.R.3d 742, 139 P.3d 119, 6 Cal. Proc. (5th), Proceedings Without Trial, §84 [Act did not apply to visual impairment of billboards caused by municipal landscaping project on main thoroughfare adding mature palm trees on public property; project did not remove billboards or limit their "customary maintenance or use"]; Viacom Outdoor v. Arcata (2006) 140 C.A.4th 230, 246, 44 C.R.3d 300 [Act did not preempt local ordinance requiring permit to rebuild billboards destroyed by wind].

C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §6.31.B. B. & P.C. 5463: See Pallco Enterprises v. Beam (2005) 132 C.A.4th 1482, 1493, 34 C.R.3d 490 [property owners properly used 30-day notice period of B. & P.C. 5463 to correct offending signs, thus defeating competing sign company's action against them for public nuisance].

90 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

3. Aesthetic Regulations.

b. Billboards and Other Outdoor Advertising.

2. On-Site Advertising.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1065

[§ 1065] On-Site Advertising.

B. & P.C. 5490 et seq. and B. & P.C. 5499.1 govern local control over "on-premises advertising displays." These include a "structure, housing, sign," etc., with a useful life of 15 years or more that advertises the name or business of the property owner or occupant or advertises on-site businesses, services, or goods. (B. & P.C. 5490(b); see 19 Pacific L. J. 501; C.E.B., Zoning Practice §8.52.)

Compensation is required before lawfully erected displays may be removed or abated. (B. & P.C. 5491; see B. & P.C. 5490(a) [lawfully erected]; B. & P.C. 5492 [fair market value]; B. & P.C. 5493 [alternative of actual replacement cost].) The compensation requirement is inapplicable to certain signs, to signs removed pursuant to qualifying ordinances, or to signs within specified areas or districts. (B. & P.C. 5491; see B. & P.C. 5494 et seq.) The right of local governments to regulate additional on-premises signs, modifications, or alterations to existing signs on a change of ownership, and the height or size of on-premises signs is limited. (See B. & P.C. 5498.1, 5498.2, 5499; Denny's v. Agoura Hills (1997) 56 C.A.4th 1312, 1326, 66 C.R.2d 382 [use of term "special" in B. & P.C. 5499, in describing topographic circumstances that would disallow city to enforce ordinance limiting height of pole signs, means "particular" or "individual" topographic circumstance that would make conforming sign inadequate].)

When a local government adopts or amends an ordinance governing existing on-premises advertising displays, illegal and abandoned displays must be inventoried within 120 days of adoption and must be completed in a timely manner. (B. & P.C. 5491.1; see B. & P.C. 5491.2 [fees].) Illegal signs may be declared public nuisances and abated pursuant to the specified procedure. (B. & P.C. 5499.2 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

C.E.B., Zoning Practice has been superseded by C.E.B., Land Use Practice. See C.E.B., 1 Land Use Practice, §6.32.

91 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

3. Aesthetic Regulations.

b. Billboards and Other Outdoor Advertising.

3. Off-Site Advertising.

aa. Invalid Restrictions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1066

[§ 1066] Invalid Restrictions.

In Metromedia v. San Diego (1980) 26 C.3d 848, 164 C.R. 510, 610 P.2d 407, defendant city's ordinance prohibited all off-site advertising billboards, and required removal of existing billboards on expiration of amortization periods ranging from 1 to 4 years. The court upheld the ordinance as a valid exercise of police power (except as preempted by the Outdoor Advertising Act, supra, §1064, requiring compensation for removal of billboards within 660 feet of federal interstate or primary highways). The opinion makes two points:

(a) Prohibition of billboards is a valid exercise of the police power; and the holding in Varney & Green v. Williams (1909) 155 C. 318, 100 P. 867, that aesthetic considerations cannot justify the prohibition, "is unworkable, discordant with modern thought as to the scope of the police power." (26 C.3d 861.) Accordingly, Varney was overruled, and language in several court of appeal decisions was disapproved. (26 C.3d 865, footnote 12.)

(b) Prohibition of billboards is not an abridgement of freedom of speech. (1) Many state and federal decisions, in part relying on the early notion that commercial speech was not protected, rejected First Amendment challenges. (27 C.3d 866.) The present constitutional view is that commercial speech is protected (see supra, §325 et seq.), but the New York Court of Appeals nevertheless concluded that prohibition of off-site billboards did not violate the First Amendment, and dismissal of the appeal by the U.S. Supreme Court settled the federal constitutional issue. (26 C.3d 867.) (2) The same conclusion must be reached under the California Constitution. The ordinance does not suppress the content of an advertiser's message, it promotes significant governmental interests, and it leaves open adequate alternative means of communication. (26 C.3d 868.) (See 69 Cal. L. Rev. 1027 [Metromedia]; 9 Ecology L. Q. 295 [same]; 10 Ecology L. Rev. 125 [same]; 15 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 493 [same].)

In Metromedia v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 101 S.Ct. 2882, 69 L.Ed.2d 800, the Court by a plurality reversed the California judgment on a narrow ground, but the several opinions left the effect of the holding unclear. The plurality (four justices) upheld billboard regulation generally and found the ordinance free from all constitutional challenges except for its discriminatory exemption of on-site billboards carrying commercial messages:

"[O]ur recent commercial speech cases have consistently accorded noncommercial speech a greater degree of protection than commercial speech. San Diego effectively inverts this judgment, by affording a greater degree of protection to commercial than to noncommercial speech. There is a broad exception for on-site commercial advertisements, but there is no similar exception for noncommercial speech. The use of on-site billboards to carry commercial messages related to the commercial use of the premises is freely permitted, but the use of otherwise identical billboards to carry noncommercial messages is generally prohibited. The city does not explain how or why noncommercial billboards located in places where commercial billboards are permitted would be more threatening to safe driving or would detract more from the beauty of the city. Insofar as the city tolerates billboards at all, it cannot choose to limit their content to commercial messages; the city may not conclude that the communication of commercial information concerning goods and services connected with a particular site is of greater value than the communication of noncommercial messages." (101 S.Ct. 2895, 69 L.Ed.2d 818.)

Two justices, concurring in the judgment of reversal, asserted that the plurality's "bifurcated approach itself raises serious First Amendment problems and relies on a distinction between commercial and noncommercial speech unanticipated by our prior cases." (101 S.Ct. 2900, 69 L.Ed.2d 824.) Three justices dissented in separate opinions; one observed that "it is a genuine misfortune to have the court's treatment of the subject be a virtual Tower of Babel, from which no definitive principles can be clearly drawn." (101 S.Ct. 2924, 69 L.Ed.2d 854.) (See 95 Harv. L. Rev. 211 [critical analyses of decision and five opinions].)

On remand, the California Supreme Court in Metromedia v. San Diego (1982) 32 C.3d 180, 185 C.R. 260, 649 P.2d 902, quoted the U.S. Supreme Court opinion on the task of the California court. Because "our judgment is based essentially on the inclusion of noncommercial speech within the prohibitions of the ordinance, the California courts may sustain the ordinance by limiting its reach to commercial speech, assuming the ordinance is susceptible to this treatment." (32 C.3d 184.) However, neither construction nor severability could save the ordinance. "San Diego intended a comprehensive ban on off-site advertising signs, subject only to the exceptions set in section F of the ordinance. Its ordinance, enacted to achieve that goal, has been held facially unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. Although the court said that the ordinance could be saved by severance or a limiting construction, confining its prohibition to commercial signs, such a prohibition would be inconsistent with the language and original intent of the ordinance. It would, moreover, leave the city with an ordinance different than it intended, one less effective in achieving the city's goals, and one which would invite constitutional difficulties in distinguishing between commercial and noncommercial signs." (32 C.3d 191.)

Two justices joined in a dissent, arguing that a construction limiting the ordinance's prohibition to commercial billboards was permissible. (32 C.3d 191.) (See Tahoe Regional Planning Agency v. King (1991) 233 C.A.3d 1365, 1406, 1408, 285 C.R. 335 [where ordinance prohibited off-premises commercial signs, exception for temporary political signs was unconstitutional, but ordinance could be saved by severing exception; following Metromedia and San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 C.A.3d 643, 237 C.R. 815, infra, §1067].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Correction: Page 678, line 4, 10 Ecology L. Rev. 125 should be 10 Ecology L. Q. 125.

92 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

3. Aesthetic Regulations.

b. Billboards and Other Outdoor Advertising.

3. Off-Site Advertising.

bb. Valid Restrictions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1067

[§ 1067] Valid Restrictions.

In San Francisco v. Eller Outdoor Advertising (1987) 192 C.A.3d 643, 237 C.R. 815, the court upheld an ordinance prohibiting off-site signs within specified districts.

(a) "A critical distinction created by the ordinance is that between a 'General Advertising Sign' which directs attention to a 'business, commodity, industry or other activity which is sold, offered, or conducted elsewhere than on the premises upon which such sign is located' ... and a 'Business Sign,' which 'directs attention to a business, commodity, service, industry or other activity which is sold, offered, or conducted, other than incidentally, on the premises upon which such sign is located. ...' The distinction is one that is frequently made in the enactment of local sign ordinances and is commonly referred to as the difference between 'offsite' signs and 'onsite' signs." (192 C.A.3d 650.)

(b) Local sign and billboard legislation has met with mixed reviews by the courts. (192 C.A.3d 656.) But it is recognized that outdoor signs, because of their intrusive nature, may be subjected to governmental regulation to promote aesthetics and traffic safety. "The approach taken in virtually every case where outdoor sign regulations are challenged as impermissible restraints on free speech is for the court to 'strike the proper balance between the right of free expression and legitimate governmental interests.' " (192 C.A.3d 657.)

(c) In Metromedia v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 101 S.Ct. 2882, 69 L.Ed.2d 800, supra, §1066, "a clear majority--seven of the nine justices--expressly concluded that the city's substantial and weighty interests in minimizing unpleasant formats for expression and promoting safety and aesthetics justified an absolute ban on all commercial offsite outdoor signs." Both Metromedia and Members of City Council of Los Angeles v. Taxpayers for Vincent (1984) 466 U.S. 789, 104 S.Ct. 2118, 80 L.Ed.2d 772, infra, §1068, support the prohibition in the ordinance involved here. "San Francisco's indisputable interests in reducing traffic hazards and beautifying a vital area of the City clearly justify a content-neutral ban on offsite signs and billboards. Furthermore, because the prohibition is restricted only to certain sections of town deemed to be of special cultural, historic, or scenic importance, the City's interests clearly outweigh any incidental infringement on First Amendment rights. ... Respondent billboard companies can, and do, maintain numerous general advertising signs throughout other sections of the City which are not affected by the offsite ban. The sign ordinance thus leaves abundant alternative forums for the same communication; it is a legitimate exercise of police power controlling time, place and manner of expression in a limited, constitutionally permissible fashion." (192 C.A.3d 659.)

(d) By permitting all forms of on-site signs, both commercial and noncommercial, the San Francisco ordinance also avoids a major flaw that the Metromedia plurality found in the San Diego ordinance. San Diego permitted only on-site signs referring to commercial goods and services offered on the property, and this resulted in an "inversion" of First Amendment values. "Because no reasonable justification for a regulation impacting more heavily on ideological expression than on commercial expression could be found, the Metromedia court found that the ordinance 'reaches too far into the realm of protected speech' and was therefore unconstitutional on its face." (192 C.A.3d 660.) San Francisco's ordinance does not suffer from this taint. "By definition, a permissible onsite sign is one which directs attention to a 'business, commodity, service, industry or other activity which is sold, offered, or conducted other than incidentally, on the premises.' ... Thus, messages of any kind are permissible as long as they relate to some activity taking place on the property. Unlike San Diego's ordinance, San Francisco's does not require City officials to determine whether an offending sign is 'commercial' or 'noncommercial,' only whether it is 'onsite' or 'offsite.' By making the distinction turn upon a content-neutral factor, the City has maintained equanimity between commercial and noncommercial expression in a limited area of the City. In this respect the ordinance is consistent with the principles articulated in Vincent." (192 C.A.3d 661.)

(e) The citywide exemptions in the San Francisco ordinance designed to lessen the hardship on noncommercial forms of speech violate Metromedia's prohibition against content-based discrimination. "Under Metromedia, the City cannot place itself in the position of evaluating between the strengths of various noncommercial communicative interests." (192 C.A.3d 663.) However, this ordinance differs from that involved in Metromedia: The San Diego ordinance was intended to ban most noncommercial signs, while the San Francisco ordinance was intended to allow most noncommercial signs. (192 C.A.3d 664.) Hence, little violence is done to the legislative purpose to interpret the exceptions in the ordinance "to embrace all categories of noncommercial messages, thereby preserving the ordinance's neutrality and saving it from the constitutional problem raised ... in Metromedia. Given the high degree of tolerance for noncommercial communication exhibited by San Francisco's sign legislation, we believe that, had the board of supervisors foreseen the First Amendment difficulties created by section 603, they would have chosen an interpretation which broadened, rather than narrowed permissible areas of ideological expression." (192 C.A.3d 664.) As so construed, the ordinance is constitutional. (192 C.A.3d 665.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

93 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

3. Aesthetic Regulations.

b. Billboards and Other Outdoor Advertising.

4. Posting Signs on Public Property.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1068

[§ 1068] Posting Signs on Public Property.

In Members of City Council of Los Angeles v. Taxpayers for Vincent (1984) 466 U.S. 789, 104 S.Ct. 2118, 80 L.Ed.2d 772, a Los Angeles Municipal Code provision (§28.04) prohibited posting signs on public property. Vincent was a candidate for election to the city council, and his supporters (Taxpayers) contracted with a political sign service company (COGS) to fabricate and attach signs to utility pole cross-arms. City workers regularly removed signs posted in violation of the Code, whether political or commercial in character. Taxpayers and COGS sought injunctive relief against enforcement on First Amendment grounds; the district court ruled in favor of the city; and the Court of Appeals held that the provision was unconstitutional. Held, reversed.

(a) "It is well settled that the state may legitimately exercise its police powers to advance esthetic values." (104 S.Ct. 2129, 80 L.Ed.2d 787.) The critical inquiries are whether the city's interest in improvement of its appearance is sufficiently substantial to justify the effect on defendants' expression, and whether that effect is no greater than necessary to accomplish the city's purpose. (104 S.Ct. 2129, 80 L.Ed.2d 787.)

(b) In Metromedia v. San Diego (1981) 453 U.S. 490, 101 S.Ct. 2882, 69 L.Ed.2d 800, supra, §1066, the Court concluded that the city's interest in avoiding visual clutter was sufficient to justify a prohibition of billboards, and that conclusion is reaffirmed here. "The problem addressed by this ordinance--the visual assault on the citizens of Los Angeles presented by an accumulation of signs posted on public property--constitutes a significant substantive evil within the City's power to prohibit." (104 S.Ct. 2130, 80 L.Ed.2d 789.)

(c) The incidental restriction on expression is considered justified as a reasonable regulation of the time, place, or manner of expression if it is narrowly tailored to serve that interest. In Metromedia, the plurality opinion declared that billboards by their very nature can be perceived as an aesthetic harm, and the same is true of posted signs. (104 S.Ct. 2130, 2131, 80 L.Ed.2d 789.) The theory of Schneider v. New Jersey (1939) 308 U.S. 147, 60 S.Ct. 146, 84 L.Ed. 155, supra, §350, is inapplicable here. In Schneider an antilittering statute could have addressed the substantive evil without prohibiting expressive activity; here, the substantive evil--visual blight--is not merely a possible by-product of the activity, but is created by the medium of expression itself. Thus, the ordinance curtails no more speech than is necessary to accomplish its purpose. (104 S.Ct. 2132, 80 L.Ed.2d 790.)

(d) The validity of the aesthetic interest in elimination of signs on public property is not compromised by failing to extend the ban to private property. The private citizen's interest in controlling the use of his or her own property justifies the different treatment, and private owners' aesthetic concerns will keep the posting of signs on their property within reasonable bounds. (104 S.Ct. 2132, 80 L.Ed.2d 791.)

(e) Defendants' reliance on the public forum doctrine is misplaced. The First Amendment does not guarantee access to property simply because it is owned or controlled by the Government. Public property that is not by tradition or designation a forum for public communication may be reserved by the state for its intended purposes. (104 S.Ct. 2134, 80 L.Ed.2d 793.)

(f) To create an exception to the ordinance for defendants' political speech and not for other types of speech might create a risk of engaging in constitutionally forbidden content discrimination; and the volume of permissible postings under this kind of a mandated exemption might so limit the ordinance's effect as to defeat its aim of combating visual blight. (104 S.Ct. 2135, 80 L.Ed.2d 794.)

(g) "The character of the environment affects the quality of life and the value of property in both residential and commercial areas. We hold that on this record these interests are sufficiently substantial to justify this content neutral, impartially administered prohibition against the posting of appellee's temporary signs on public property and that such an application of the ordinance does not create an unacceptable threat to the 'profound national commitment to the principle that debate on public issues should be uninhibited, robust, and wide-open.' " (104 S.Ct. 2135, 80 L.Ed.2d 795.)

Three justices dissented. (See 37 Hastings L. J. 439.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

94 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

D. Other Restrictions on Use of Property.

4. Conservation and Prevention of Waste.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1069

[§ 1069] Conservation and Prevention of Waste.

The state has an interest in the preservation of its natural resources, and may regulate their taking and use to prevent waste. Early examples were measures to protect wildlife, such as game birds (see Geer v. Connecticut (1896) 161 U.S. 519, 16 S.Ct. 600, 604, 40 L.Ed. 793, 797, later overruled; see infra, §1299); the California "Fish Reduction Act," prohibiting excessive use of food fish for purposes other than human consumption (see People v. Monterey Fish Products Co. (1925) 195 C. 548, 563, 234 P. 398; Bayside Fish Flour Co. v. Gentry (1936) 297 U.S. 422, 56 S.Ct. 513, 80 L.Ed. 772); and the California constitutional amendment limiting the riparian owner to a reasonable use of water (see Gin S. Chow v. Santa Barbara (1933) 217 C. 673, 700, 22 P.2d 5; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §937).

The most extensive measures have been enacted to prevent wasteful production of oil and gas. The following are illustrative:

(1) Waste of Gas. (See Pub.Res.C. 3300 et seq. [waste of natural gas in operation of oil wells is unlawful]; Bandini Petroleum Co. v. Superior Court (1931) 284 U.S. 8, 52 S.Ct. 103, 106, 76 L.Ed. 136, 144; Stevenot v. Associated Oil Co. (1931) 211 C. 93, 105, 294 P. 717.)

(2) Oil Well Spacing. (See Pub.Res.C. 3600 et seq.; Hunter v. Justice's Court (1950) 36 C.2d 315, 317, 223 P.2d 465; Wotton v. Bush (1953) 41 C.2d 460, 465, 261 P.2d 256.)

(3) Pooling, Unitization, or Proration. (See Pub.Res.C. 3315 et seq.; Long Beach v. Vickers (1961) 55 C.2d 153, 160, 10 C.R. 359, 358 P.2d 687; 37 A.L.R.2d 434 [compulsory drilling or unitization statute requiring owners or lessees of oil and gas lands to develop their holdings as single drilling unit]; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §888.)

In more recent years, protective legislation has greatly increased in volume and scope, covering such subjects as conservation of water, timber, petroleum, natural gas, agricultural land, aquatic resources (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §831 et seq.), and wildlife (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §885 et seq.).

P.C. 653o et seq., prohibiting the importation and sale of products of listed as endangered species, is a valid exercise of the police power. "It is now generally recognized that the destruction or disturbance of vital life cycles or of the balance of a species of wildlife, even though initiated in one part of the world, may have a profound effect upon the health and welfare of people in other distant parts. We have come to appreciate the interdependence of different forms of life. We realize that by killing certain species in one area we may sound our own death knell." (People v. K. Sakai Co. (1976) 56 C.A.3d 531, 535, 128 C.R. 536, quoting federal case.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

95 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

E. Restrictions on Freedom of Contract.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1070

[§ 1070] Restrictions on Freedom of Contract.

One of the liberties protected by the Fourteenth Amendment is freedom of contract. (See Allgeyer v. Louisiana (1897) 165 U.S. 578, 17 S.Ct. 427, 41 L.Ed. 832.) This freedom to make new contracts, protected against unreasonable legislative restraint, should be distinguished from the protection against impairment of the obligation of an existing contract by retrospective legislation. (See infra, §1278.)

Some of the older cases asserted that freedom of contract is the rule, and restraint the exception. But this position has long been abandoned. Many kinds of restrictions on freedom of contract have been upheld in the field of employer-employee relations; e.g., hours of labor, wages in cash, payment on basis of mined and not screened coal, forbidding payment of seamen's wages in advance, workers' compensation, and employers' liability laws. (West Coast Hotel Co. v. Parrish (1937) 300 U.S. 379, 57 S.Ct. 578, 81 L.Ed. 703, infra, §1111; see Day-Brite Lighting v. Missouri (1952) 342 U.S. 421, 72 S.Ct. 405, 407, 96 L.Ed. 469, 472; Ferguson v. Skrupa (1963) 372 U.S. 726, 83 S.Ct. 1028, 10 L.Ed.2d 93, supra, §979; Lockheed Aircraft Corp. v. Superior Court (1946) 28 C.2d 481, 486, 171 P.2d 21; Hersch v. Boston Ins. Co. (1959) 175 C.A.2d 751, 755, 346 P.2d 796 [statute giving judgment creditor of plaintiff lien on cause of action and prohibiting settlement without his consent was valid]; 95 A.L.R.2d 1354 [legislation regulating business of debt adjusting]; 18 A.L.R.3d 944 [requirement that workers on public works be paid prevailing wages].)

The Legislature may, in proper situations, regulate the consideration for a contract, as in usury laws (see 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §455 et seq.) and restrictions on assignments to heir hunters (Burchell v. Strube (1955) 43 C.2d 828, 836, 279 P.2d 1; see 14 Summary (10th), Wills and Probate §723 et seq.).

Legislation also may validly require the inclusion of particular provisions; e.g., a statute requiring an arbitration clause in a standard fire insurance policy is valid because it is a regulation that merely changes the remedy available to the parties. (Hardware Dealers Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Wisconsin v. Glidden Co. (1931) 284 U.S. 151, 52 S.Ct. 69, 76 L.Ed. 214; see California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Maloney (1951) 341 U.S. 105, 71 S.Ct. 601, 95 L.Ed. 788, infra, §1072 [Compulsory Assigned Risk Law, compelling liability insurers to accept share of undesired applicants for automobile liability insurance]; Castleman v. Scudder (1947) 81 C.A.2d 737, 740, 185 P.2d 35 [statute prohibiting business opportunity brokers from claiming fees under contract lacking definite termination date].) (For other illustrations of these statutes, see 4 Summary (10th), Sales, §§235 et seq. [motor vehicles]; 262 [vessels]; 263 et seq. [retail installment sales]; 290 et seq. [home improvement and swimming pool contracts]; 295 et seq. [consumer protection laws]; 355 [fine prints]; 362 et seq. [health and dance services]; 371 [membership camping contracts].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Hess Collection Winery v. Agricultural Lab. Rel. Bd. (2006) 140 C.A.4th 1584, 1600, 45 C.R.3d 609 [upholding statutory scheme mandating arbitration of collective bargaining agreements between agricultural workers and growers].

96 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

F. Regulation of Personal Rights.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1071

[§ 1071] Regulation of Personal Rights.

(1) In General. The rights of free speech, press, and assembly may be subjected to reasonable police power regulations, such as ordinances preventing littering, commercial advertising, or the obstruction of traffic. (See supra, §405 et seq.)

(2) School Attendance. The right to attend private or parochial schools, and to teach foreign languages there, cannot be prohibited by a statute requiring compulsory attendance at public schools. (Meyer v. Nebraska (1923) 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625, 67 L.Ed. 1042 [statute forbidding teaching of any modern language, other than English, to children below eighth grade was void]; Pierce v. Society of Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus & Mary (1925) 268 U.S. 510, 45 S.Ct. 571, 69 L.Ed. 1070 [statute requiring attendance at public school].)

However, the usual statute requiring compulsory attendance at some school, public or private, or instruction under a private tutor possessing prescribed qualifications, is constitutional. (People v. Turner (1953) 121 C.A.2d Supp. 861, 865, 263 P.2d 685 [upholding conviction of parents lacking teaching credentials who insisted on teaching their children themselves at home]; but cf. Wisconsin v. Yoder (1972) 406 U.S. 205, 92 S.Ct. 1526, 32 L.Ed.2d 15, supra, §519 [requiring Amish to send their children to school until age 16 violated free exercise of their religion]; see 19 Hastings Const. L. Q. 963 [removing judicial barriers for parental governance of local schools]; 18 A.L.R.4th 649 [validity of state regulation of curriculum and instruction in private and parochial schools]; 8 A.L.R.5th 875 [validity of state or local regulation requiring private school to report attendance or similar information to government; cases after Wisconsin]; 70 A.L.R.5th 169 [home schooling].)

(3) Curfew. A curfew ordinance prohibiting minors from loitering in a public street or place is valid if reasonable in terms. (See supra, §778.)

(4) Vaccination. Compulsory vaccination statutes are valid. (Jacobson v. Massachusetts (1905) 197 U.S. 11, 25 S.Ct. 358, 49 L.Ed. 643; see 19 Pepperdine L. Rev. 29 [Vaccines and the Law].)

(5) Sterilization. Sexual sterilization of persons afflicted with assumed hereditary insanity or imbecility was upheld in Buck (1927) 274 U.S. 200, 47 S.Ct. 584, 71 L.Ed. 1000. (See 103 Harv. L. Rev. 1201 [legacy of Buck: law, politics and mentally retarded parent].) But statutes providing for sterilization of criminals have generally been held invalid. (See Skinner v. Oklahoma (1942) 316 U.S. 535, 62 S.Ct. 1110, 1113, 1115, 86 L.Ed. 1655, 1658, 1662 [majority opinion relies on equal protection, concurring opinion on due process].) (See 93 Harv. L. Rev. 1296 [involuntary sterilization]; 49 Proof of Facts 3d 101 [proof of qualification for sterilization of person with mental disability]; 2 Tribe, §15-10; 3 Rotunda, §18.27.)

(6) AIDS Testing. In Love v. Superior Court (1990) 226 C.A.3d 736, 276 C.R. 660, petitioners, convicted of violating P.C. 647(b) (soliciting an act of prostitution), were ordered to undergo AIDS counseling and testing pursuant to P.C. 1202.6 (see 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Introduction to Criminal Procedure, §114). Held, the testing requirement is constitutional.

(a) The control of a communicable disease is a valid exercise of the police power; and testing for AIDS may be upheld against a Fourth Amendment challenge under the "special needs" doctrine. (226 C.A.3d 741, discussing Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives' Assn. (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 109 S.Ct. 1402, 103 L.Ed.2d 639, 4 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Illegally Obtained Evidence, §321.) P.C. 1202.6 "addresses the problem of the awareness of members of a high-risk group of their HIV status for their own protection and that of those to whom they could transmit the virus." (226 C.A.3d 743.)

(b) "We have balanced the Fourth Amendment interests of those persons convicted of prostitution against the promotion of the government's goal of preventing the spread of AIDS. With the minimal intrusion of a blood test and the disclosure restrictions, we conclude that the Fourth Amendment balancing must be struck in favor of the testing requirement." (226 C.A.3d 746.)

(7) Mandatory Helmet Law. In a case of first impression, Buhl v. Hannigan (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1612, 1627, 20 C.R.2d 740, upheld the Mandatory Motorcycle Helmet Law (Veh.C. 27802 et seq.) as a proper exercise of the police power, rationally related to the Legislature's express purpose of insuring the safety and welfare of persons traveling on public highways. (See Bianco v. California Highway Patrol (1994) 24 C.A.4th 1113, 1122, 29 C.R.2d 711 [Highway Patrol's authority to determine which helmets are approved, and its bulletin stating that "beanie" helmet failed to meet minimum requirements, were not preempted by federal law]; 72 A.L.R.5th 607 [mandatory helmet laws].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) School Attendance. Although the Legislature has not acted to supersede People v. Turner (1953) 121 C.A.2d Supp. 861, 263 P.2d 685, text, p. 685, it has acted as though home schooling is permitted in California. After discussing the history of home schooling, the court in Jonathan L. v. Superior Court (2008) 165 C.A.4th 1074, 81 C.R.3d 571, concluded that a home school can fall within the private school exception to the general compulsory education law. (165 C.A.4th 1096, 1099.) "This does no violence to the language of the private school exemption, which is ambiguous and therefore capable of the interpretation." (165 C.A.4th 1099.) However, parents do not have an absolute constitutional right to home school their children. Instead, "parents possess a constitutional liberty interest in directing the education of their children, but the right must yield to state interests in certain circumstances," e.g., the compelling state interest in the safety of children. (165 C.A.4th 1101.) (See 96 Cal. L. Rev. 123 [constitutional constraints on homeschooling].)(4) Vaccination. See 121 Harv. L. Rev. 1820 [vaccine law].

(5) Sterilization. See 4 Rotunda 4th, §18.27.

97 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1072

[§ 1072] In General.

(1) Early Doctrine of Public Service Businesses. It has long been recognized that businesses may be subjected to some regulations, such as health measures, statutes preventing certain types of fraud, etc. (See infra, §1073 et seq.) But two important types of regulation were formerly deemed to be unwarranted interferences with property rights as applied to ordinary businesses. They were (a) the regulation of prices or rates, and (b) restrictions on the right to engage in business, as by requiring a certificate of public convenience and necessity. (See infra, §§1080, 1082.) To justify this type of regulation, it was necessary to show that the particular business was "affected with a public interest." The doctrine was given its first significant statement in Munn v. Illinois (1876) 94 U.S. 113, 24 L.Ed. 77, where maximum rates were imposed for grain elevators found to be under monopoly control. And in Brass v. North Dakota (1894) 153 U.S. 391, 14 S.Ct. 857, 38 L.Ed. 757, the principle was extended to include businesses that were not monopolistic. (See Charles Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Relations of Kansas (1923) 262 U.S. 522, 43 S.Ct. 630, 67 L.Ed. 1103 [classifying businesses affected with public interest].)

Under this restricted theory, price control and similar regulations were held improper where, despite proof of evils, the business was deemed private. (See Tyson & Brother--United Theatre Ticket Offices v. Banton (1927) 273 U.S. 418, 47 S.Ct. 426, 71 L.Ed. 718 [ticket-selling business]; Ribnik v. McBride (1928) 277 U.S. 350, 48 S.Ct. 545, 72 L.Ed. 913 [employment agencies]; Williams v. Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana (1929) 278 U.S. 235, 49 S.Ct. 115, 73 L.Ed. 287 [sale of gasoline]; New State Ice Co. v. Liebmann (1932) 285 U.S. 262, 52 S.Ct. 371, 76 L.Ed. 747 [sale of ice].)

(2) No Immunity for Private Businesses. In Nebbia v. New York (1934) 291 U.S. 502, 54 S.Ct. 505, 78 L.Ed. 940, the New York Legislature determined that, as a result of price cutting and unfair trade practices, conditions in the milk industry were deplorable, that the industry was of paramount economic importance, and that the conditions threatened the health and economic welfare of the people. Accordingly, it created a board with the power to fix minimum and maximum retail prices of milk. Appellant sold milk below the minimum price and was convicted. Held, the statute was valid. The milk industry is not a public utility, and there was no showing of monopoly or public franchise; but it may nonetheless be so regulated. The term "affected with a public interest" means no more than "subject to the exercise of police power." There is no closed class or category of these businesses, and the private character of a business does not render it immune from price regulation. Decisions such as Tyson & Brother and Williams v. Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana, supra, must rest on the basis that the requirements of due process were not met because the laws were found arbitrary in their operation and effect. "But there can be no doubt that upon proper occasion and by appropriate measures the state may regulate a business in any of its aspects, including the prices to be charged for the products or commodities it sells." (54 S.Ct. 516, 78 L.Ed. 957.) (See Olsen v. Nebraska (1941) 313 U.S. 236, 61 S.Ct. 862, 85 L.Ed. 1305 [overruling Ribnik and disapproving Tyson & Brother]; infra, §1081.)

California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Maloney (1951) 341 U.S. 105, 71 S.Ct. 601, 95 L.Ed. 788, is an illustration of the modern approach. The Compulsory Assigned Risk Law (Ins.C. 11620 et seq.) supplements the financial responsibility law by requiring all liability insurance companies to participate in an equitable apportionment of policies of applicants classified as poor risks but in good faith entitled to insurance (see 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §15). Plaintiff contended that this violated its freedom to contract and compelled an alteration of its business from a cooperative with a select membership to a general insurance business. The California court upheld the statute in California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Downey (1950) 96 C.A.2d 876, 899, 216 P.2d 882, and the U.S. Supreme Court did likewise. The Court pointed out that insurance, like banking, is a business long subject to regulation in many aspects; that in both fields the state has broad enough power to take over the entire business, leaving no part for private enterprise; and therefore, that the state may hold its hand on condition that local needs are serviced by the business. The situation was similar to that in Noble State Bank v. Haskell (1911) 219 U.S. 104, 31 S.Ct. 186, 55 L.Ed. 112, which sustained a law assessing state banks for a depositors' guaranty fund. "The case in its broadest reach is one in which the state requires in the public interest each member of a business to assume a pro rata share of a burden which modern conditions have made incident to the business." (71 S.Ct. 603, 95 L.Ed. 792.) (See Massingill v. Department of Food & Agriculture (2002) 102 C.A.4th 498, 507, 125 C.R.2d 561 [statute requiring service stations to supply free air and water to customers buying gasoline did not subject air and water vendors or station owners to regulatory takings; air and water vendors could charge station owners directly, and station owners could pass their costs on to gasoline customers].)

Nevertheless, in reaching the conclusion that a regulatory measure is "arbitrary," courts have sometimes used the language of the public service business test. (See State Bd. of Dry Cleaners v. Thrift-D-Lux Cleaners (1953) 40 C.2d 436, 442, 445, 254 P.2d 29, infra, §1082; People v. Asamoto (1955) 131 C.A.2d 22, 30, 279 P.2d 1010, infra, §1082 ["The circumstances of its alleged change from the status of private business and its freedom from regulation into one in which the public have come to have an interest, are always a subject of judicial inquiry"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

98 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

2. Health and Safety.

a. Food, Drugs, and Water.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1073

[§ 1073] Food, Drugs, and Water.

Regulation of the business of supplying food and drugs, to safeguard health and prevent fraud, is a traditional and common exercise of the police power.

(1) Food Sanitation and Labeling. (See Pacific Coast Dairy v. Police Court of San Francisco (1932) 214 C. 668, 673, 8 P.2d 140 [type of milk containers]; In re McNeal (1939) 32 C.A.2d 391, 396, 89 P.2d 1096 [label identifying manufacturer of bread]; Affonso Bros. v. Brock (1938) 29 C.A.2d 26, 32, 84 P.2d 515 [testing and destruction of tubercular cattle]; Natural Milk Producers Assn. v. San Francisco (1942) 20 C.2d 101, 114, 124 P.2d 25 [pasteurization of milk]; Lewis Food Co. v. California Dept. of Public Health (1952) 110 C.A.2d 759, 763, 243 P.2d 802 [statute prohibiting labels on canned dog food giving impression of fitness for human consumption, e.g., "Horse meat stew," "Packed with gravy"]; 19 A.L.R.2d 1013 [regulating sale of horse meat for human consumption]; 70 A.L.R.2d 852 [regulations for protection of vegetation against disease or infection]; 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, §282 et seq.)

In Coffee-Rich v. Fielder (1972) 27 C.A.3d 792, 104 C.R. 252, out-of-state manufacturers of nondairy products resembling milk attacked a number of sections of the Food and Agricultural Code, as violations of the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses and as burdens on interstate commerce (infra, §1300). Regulations on the labeling, listing of ingredients, registration, and records were sustained, but the following were held unconstitutional: (a) prohibiting the sale of products resembling milk products to state prisons and state-supported charitable institutions, despite the wholesome nature of the products (not a reasonable health regulation); (27 C.A.3d 811) and (b) requiring that restaurants post signs or provide menu notices of specified size that "beverages and products which are not milk products are served here" (unreasonable burden). (27 C.A.3d 819.)

(2) Drugs and Medical Supplies. (See In re Gray (1929) 206 C. 497, 499, 274 P. 974 [pharmacy act licensing and regulating sale of drugs]; People v. Ryan (1951) 101 C.A.2d Supp. 927, 931, 226 P.2d 376 [Pure Drugs Act, prohibiting false advertisements of curative effects of drugs]; Williamson v. Lee Optical of Oklahoma (1955) 348 U.S. 483, 75 S.Ct. 461, 99 L.Ed. 563 [statute making it unlawful for optician to fit or duplicate eyeglasses without prescription from ophthalmologist or optometrist]; People v. Woody (1964) 61 C.2d 716, 718, 40 C.R. 69, 394 P.2d 813, supra, §523 [prohibition of peyote is within police power, but is invalid as applied to Indian group using it for religious rites]; Magan Med. Clinic v. California Board of Med. Examiners (1967) 249 C.A.2d 124, 131, 57 C.R. 256 [statute prohibiting doctor-owned pharmacies]; 26 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 39 [civil commitment for drug dependency]; 15 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 801 [controlling genetic diseases]; 12 A.L.R.5th 89 [state laws imposing tax or license fee on possession, sale, etc., of illegal narcotics].)

(3) Water. Water pollution is comprehensively regulated in California. (See Water C. 13000 et seq.; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §891 et seq.)

A significant development in this field has been the fluoridation of the water supply of a community, by adding fluoride to the water, as a means of preventing tooth decay in children. In De Aryan v. Butler (1953) 119 C.A.2d 674, 681, 260 P.2d 98, a San Diego fluoridation measure was upheld, despite strongly conflicting evidence on the merits and dangers of the practice. The constitutionality of this kind of regulation is now regarded as settled. (Beck v. City Council of Beverly Hills (1973) 30 C.A.3d 112, 115, 106 C.R. 163 [American courts "have uniformly held that fluoridation of water is a reasonable and proper exercise of the police power in the interest of public health"].)

(4) Pest Control. (See Churchill v. Parnell (1985) 170 C.A.3d 1094, 1098, 216 C.R. 876 ["state may abate or eradicate any species of insect, animal, plant, bird or fish when necessary to protect the public interest"]; Teresi v. California (1986) 180 C.A.3d 239, 353, 225 C.R. 517 [Mediterranean Fruit Fly Eradication Program, involving quarantine and fumigation of crops]; 17 Pacific L. J. 1301 [State Mandated Pesticide Application].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Water. See Coshov v. Escondido (2005) 132 C.A.4th 687, 709, 711, 34 C.R.3d 19 [right to drinking water free of fluoride is not fundamental right guaranteed by Constitution, and introducing fluoride additive containing arsenic into public water system did not constitute forced medication in violation of right of privacy]; Watsonville v. State Dept. of Health Services (2005) 133 C.A.4th 875, 883, 35 C.R.3d 216 [to extent measure regulating additives to public water supplies applied to fluoridation, it was preempted by state law].

99 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

2. Health and Safety.

b. Air Pollution.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1074

[§ 1074] Air Pollution.

Laws against industrial nuisances, and the zoning of factories and other smoke-producing businesses, are traditional police power measures. (See Northwestern Laundry v. Des Moines (1916) 239 U.S. 486, 36 S.Ct. 206, 60 L.Ed. 396 [smoke abatement law]; Ex parte Hadacheck (1913) 165 C. 416, 419, 132 P. 584; Hadacheck v. Sebastian (1915) 239 U.S. 394, 36 S.Ct. 143, 60 L.Ed. 348 [brick kilns restricted to certain districts]; Huron Portland Cement Co. v. Detroit (1960) 362 U.S. 440, 80 S.Ct. 813, 815, 4 L.Ed.2d 852, 855, infra, §1312 ["Legislation designed to free from pollution the very air that people breathe clearly falls within the exercise of even the most traditional concept of what is compendiously known as the police power"]; 78 A.L.R.2d 1305 [regulation of smoke and other air pollution]; 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §139.)

The modern evil in this field is smog, and legislative efforts at control in California have been continuous for some years. Statutes seek to coordinate state, regional, and local efforts in the field of air pollution control. (See Health & Saf.C. 39000 et seq.; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §898 et seq.; People v. International Steel Corp. (1951) 102 C.A.2d Supp. 935, 937, 226 P.2d 587; People v. Plywood Mfrs. of Calif. (1955) 137 C.A.2d Supp. 859, 865, 291 P.2d 587.) And engine exhaust standards for new and used vehicles have been set by statute. (See Health & Saf.C. 43000; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §901.)

The California Indoor Clean Air Act requires nonsmoking sections in public buildings. (See Health & Saf.C. 118875 et seq.; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §902.) And tobacco smoking in enclosed workplaces is prohibited on a statewide basis. (Lab.C. 6404.5; see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §377; 65 A.L.R.4th 1205 [nonsmoking regulations].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

100 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

2. Health and Safety.

c. Closing and Working Hours.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1075

[§ 1075] Closing and Working Hours.

Ordinances specifying hours of business, and requiring Sunday and holiday closing of butcher shops and meat markets, have been upheld as health measures, on the ground that inspection is facilitated, and that otherwise the quality standards could be evaded at times when inspectors are not on duty. (Dorsa v. Board of Supervisors of Santa Clara (1937) 23 C.A.2d 217, 219, 72 P.2d 912; Justesen's Food Stores v. Tulare (1941) 43 C.A.2d 616, 621, 111 P.2d 424; Lynch Meats of Oakland v. Oakland (1961) 196 C.A.2d 104, 111, 16 C.R. 302.) But no such reasoning justifies closing hours for barbershops (Ganley v. Claeys (1935) 2 C.2d 266, 269, 40 P.2d 817) or for soliciting and delivery of laundry (In re Mark (1936) 6 C.2d 516, 522, 58 P.2d 913). (See Justesen's Food Stores v. Tulare (1938) 12 C.2d 324, 330, 84 P.2d 140 [ordinance that established closing hours for stores selling food, but excepted restaurants, soda fountains, etc., was discriminatory]; 53 A.L.R.3d 942 [ordinance regulating time during which restaurant business may be conducted].)

Comprehensive Sunday closing laws may be justified as health measures in that they provide a day of rest for those who work. But the laws must have some kind of general application; neither local ordinances nor state statutes may single out particular types of business and impose Sunday or other closing regulations. (In re Scaranino (1936) 7 C.2d 309, 310, 60 P.2d 288; In re Boehme (1936) 12 C.A.2d 424, 428, 55 P.2d 559; In re Mark, supra; see 10 A.L.R.4th 246 [Sunday closing laws]; supra, §§553, 711.)

Regulation of the number of hours of labor is a valid exercise of the police power. (See infra, §1111.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

101 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

2. Health and Safety.

d. Fire Protection.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1076

[§ 1076] Fire Protection.

In Queenside Hills Realty Co. v. Saxl (1946) 328 U.S. 80, 66 S.Ct. 850, 90 L.Ed. 1096, a statute required lodging houses without fireproof construction to install automatic sprinkler systems. Appellant contended that his building was already adequately safeguarded by a fire alarm system, watchman service, and other safety arrangements. Held, the regulation was validly applied to appellant. "Protection of the safety of persons is one of the traditional uses of the police power" and the Legislature is free to choose among possible measures of protection from the hazards of fire. (See Ventura v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1948) 85 C.A.2d 529, 534, 193 P.2d 512 [California Fire Liability Law, allowing county to recover expense of fighting fire from person responsible for its start and escape to another's property]; People v. Sevel (1953) 120 C.A.2d Supp. 907, 911, 261 P.2d 359 [ordinance regulating junkyards and auto wrecking establishments, requiring enclosed building or solid fence or wall to protect against fire risks from fumes of unused gasoline in tanks and greasy upholstery of secondhand cars].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

102 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

3. Fraud and Other Improper Practices.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1077

[§ 1077] In General.

Fraud against consumers and unfair competition against other businesses are common subjects of regulation. (See generally 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Property, §177 et seq.) The following are important examples:

(1) Auction and "Action" Sales. (See McKay Jewelers v. Bowron (1942) 19 C.2d 595, 601, 122 P.2d 543 [ordinance prohibiting "crying" or soliciting sale of goods from store opening onto sidewalk]; Mann's Jewelers v. San Diego (1956) 140 C.A.2d 578, 582, 295 P.2d 468 ["action sale"--salesman through public address system gets group of customers into store offering items at fixed prices without competitive bidding]; Hirsch v. San Francisco (1956) 143 C.A.2d 313, 319, 300 P.2d 177 [ordinance regulating sales by public outcry of enumerated articles, e.g., jewelry, leather goods; requiring $ 150 permit, $ 10,000 bond, and showing of good character, etc.].) In Mann's Jewelers, the principal evils at which the regulation was aimed was limited opportunity to examine the goods and reflect on the representations of quality and value, the absence of individual negotiation, the opportunity to defraud, and the attraction of crowds with resulting police problems. (See 53 A.L.R.2d 1433 [jewelry auctions].)

(2) "Blue Sky Laws" Regulating Securities. (See Hall v. Geiger-Jones Co. (1917) 242 U.S. 539, 37 S.Ct. 217, 61 L.Ed. 480; In re Girard (1921) 186 C. 718, 722, 200 P. 593; 9 Summary (10th), Corporations, §401 et seq.)

(3) Business Tie-Ups. In Daniel v. Family Sec. Life Ins. Co. (1949) 336 U.S. 220, 69 S.Ct. 550, 93 L.Ed. 632, a statute prohibited life insurance companies and their agents from operating an undertaking business, and likewise prohibited undertakers from acting as life insurance agents. The law was upheld as a permissible regulation to meet the evil thought to exist in "funeral insurance," a plan under which the beneficiary of the policy, having obtained it from the agent-undertaker, is likely on death of the insured to pay, regardless of cost, for any type of funeral suggested by the undertaker.

Magan Med. Clinic v. California Board of Med. Examiners (1967) 249 C.A.2d 124, 57 C.R. 256, upheld the validity of a statute prohibiting licensed doctors from owning an interest in a pharmacy. The court took note of problems of conflict of interest, and possible fraud or other adverse effects on patients where doctors profit from pharmacies. The decision in Louis K. Liggett Co. v. Baldridge (1928) 278 U.S. 105, 49 S.Ct. 57, 73 L.Ed. 204, was characterized as old and discredited law. (249 C.A.2d 134.)

(4) Container Shapes and Sizes. (See Pacific States Box & Basket Co. v. White (1935) 296 U.S. 176, 56 S.Ct. 159, 80 L.Ed. 138; Mattei v. Hecke (1929) 99 C.A. 747, 753, 279 P. 470 [statute prescribing standard containers for grapes, and requiring that others be marked "Irregular Container," were invalid as not tending to protect public from fraud in sale of grapes].)

(5) Labels and Advertising. (See Gregory v. Hecke (1925) 73 C.A. 268, 279, 238 P. 787 [prohibiting adulteration, false labeling, or misrepresentation in sale of germicides for eradication of plant pests]; In re Bear (1932) 216 C. 536, 539, 15 P.2d 489 [requiring labeling of food prepared with imported egg products]; Lewis Food Co. v. California Dept. of Public Health (1952) 110 C.A.2d 759, 763, 243 P.2d 802, [misleading labels on canned dog food]; Serve Yourself Gasoline Stations Assn. v. Brock (1952) 39 C.2d 813, 818, 249 P.2d 545 [statute requiring gas station signs, such as "Serve Yourself and Save," to set forth in large lettering the total price, tax, and grade of gas]; 3 Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), Advertising §§3, 6 et seq., 14 et seq.)

In Paraco v. Department of Agriculture (1953) 118 C.A.2d 348, 257 P.2d 981, the court upheld a statute requiring the prominent labeling of used lubricating oil as "reclaimed motor oil." On facts pleaded and assumed to be true on demurrer, it appeared that the rectifying process produced oil of quality equal to and indistinguishable from virgin oil; hence, it was argued, the regulation called for misbranding of the product as inferior. It was held, however, that, regardless of merit of the product and the absence of any reasons for choice, people have a right to know what they are getting. (118 C.A.2d 354.)

(6) Surrender of Tips. A statute may require an employer to give conspicuous notice of the fact that tips given to employees are surrendered to the employer. (California Drive-In Restaurant Assn. v. Clark (1943) 22 C.2d 287, 295, 140 P.2d 657 [criticizing and distinguishing In re Farb (1918) 178 C. 592, 599, 174 P. 320].)

(7) Trading Stamps. Both regulation and prohibition of the use of trading stamps or coupons, as an objectionable business practice, have been upheld. (Rast v. Van Deman & Lewis Co. (1916) 240 U.S. 342, 36 S.Ct. 370, 60 L.Ed. 679; but cf. Ex parte Drexel (1905) 147 C. 763, 767, 82 P. 429 [holding regulation invalid].)

(8) "Unfair Practices Acts" Prohibiting Sales Below Cost. (See Wholesale Tobacco Dealers Bureau of Southern Calif. v. National Candy & Tobacco Co. (1938) 11 C.2d 634, 82 P.2d 3; 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §610.)

In re Alexander (1933) 128 C.A. 651, 657, 18 P.2d 410, held unconstitutional an ordinance prohibiting "fake sales" of goods by merchants on the ground that, though the evil existed and the object of the statute was proper, the restrictive provisions were too broad and unreasonably interfered with wholly innocent and legitimate transactions.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

103 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

3. Fraud and Other Improper Practices.

b. Regulation of Franchises.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1078

[§ 1078] Regulation of Franchises.

In New Motor Vehicle Bd. of Calif. v. Orrin W. Fox Co. (1978) 439 U.S. 96, 99 S.Ct. 403, 58 L.Ed.2d 361, the Court considered constitutional challenges to the California Automobile Franchise Act (Veh.C. 3062, 3063). The Act protects the interests of existing retail dealers (franchisees) by prohibiting automobile manufacturers from adding or relocating dealerships in the market areas of existing franchisees, where the effect would be injurious to the existing franchisees and the public interest. A manufacturer seeking to establish a new dealership, or to relocate an existing one, must first give notice of this intention to the California New Motor Vehicle Board and to each of its existing franchisees in the same "line-make" of automobile located within the "relevant market area." If an existing franchisee within the market area protests to the board within 15 (now 20) days, the proposed dealership may not be established until the board holds its hearing (which must be convened within 60 days); and if the board determines that there is good cause for not permitting the dealership, it cannot be established at all. This action arose out of an attempt by General Motors to establish one dealership and to relocate another. Protests were made, but, before the board hearing could be held, General Motors and the dealers seeking to come in filed an action in the federal district court. That Court concluded that the absence of a prior hearing requirement was a denial of due process. Held, reversed.

(a) Procedural due process. Plaintiffs contended that the Act permits a protesting dealer to obtain a summary administrative adjudication equivalent to a temporary injunction. This is unsound. The Act, not the protest and board's notice of it, curtailed the manufacturer's right to franchise at will. The board's notice was not an administrative order because no adjudicative facts had been found. (99 S.Ct. 410, 58 L.Ed.2d 373.)

(b) Substantive due process and police power. Plaintiffs further contended that the manufacturer has a due process protected liberty to pursue a lawful occupation--to franchise at will, without delay. This is likewise unsound. Even if the right to franchise is a protected interest, the state is constitutionally empowered to enact a general scheme of business regulation imposing reasonable restrictions on the exercise of that right. In particular, California (and several other states that have enacted similar laws), may subordinate the franchise rights of automobile manufacturers to protect rights of existing franchisees against unfair or oppressive trade practices. (99 S.Ct. 410, 411, 58 L.Ed.2d 374, citing Nebbia v. New York (1934) 291 U.S. 502, 54 S.Ct. 505, 78 L.Ed. 940, supra, §1072, and other cases recognizing broad power to impose economic regulations.) "Once having enacted a reasonable general scheme of business regulation, California was not required to provide for a prior individualized hearing each and every time the provisions of the Act had the effect of delaying consummation of the business plans of particular individuals." (99 S.Ct. 411, 58 L.Ed.2d 375.)

(c) Sherman Act and state action exemption. Plaintiffs finally contended that the Act, by permitting existing dealers to delay the establishment of new dealerships, gives effect to privately initiated restraints on trade. The answer is that the Act's regulatory scheme is designed to displace unfettered business freedom in the establishment of automobile dealerships, and "state action" immunity (see 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §559) is not lost merely because existing dealers are given notice and an opportunity to be heard before their franchisor establishes a new dealership. "Protests serve only to trigger Board action. They do not mandate significant delay." (99 S.Ct. 412, 58 L.Ed.2d 376.)

One justice dissented, asserting that the statute permits private parties, serving private advantage, to invoke the power of the state to restrain the liberty of new competitors, and hence, is a violation of due process. (See Forty-Niner Truck Plaza v. Union Oil Co. (1997) 58 C.A.4th 1261, 1274, 1275, 68 C.R.2d 532 [statute requiring service station franchisor wanting to sell to make offer to franchisee or to give franchisee right of first refusal, is not overly broad and does not constitute unconstitutional taking of private property for public use without just compensation]; Duarte & Witting v. New Motor Vehicle Bd. (2002) 104 C.A.4th 626, 634, 128 C.R.2d 501 [although Veh.C. 3067 does not mention dismissal of protest as permissible action by board, board has implied authority to dismiss protest for good cause; here, board had good cause because termination of franchise was due to vehicle line being discontinued].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

104 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
 Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

4. Licensing for Regulatory Purposes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1079

[§ 1079] Licensing for Regulatory Purposes.

The cases uniformly uphold licensing of businesses, trades, or professions on conditions deemed necessary in the particular calling, e.g., examination or other proof of qualifications, or character, giving of bond, etc. (See Brazee v. Michigan (1916) 241 U.S. 340, 36 S.Ct. 561, 60 L.Ed. 1034 [employment agencies]; La Tourette v. McMaster (1919) 248 U.S. 465, 39 S.Ct. 160, 63 L.Ed. 362 [insurance brokers]; Dent v. West Virginia (1889) 129 U.S. 114, 9 S.Ct. 231, 32 L.Ed. 623 [practice of medicine]; Hall v. Geiger-Jones Co. (1917) 242 U.S. 539, 37 S.Ct. 217, 61 L.Ed. 480 [sale of securities]; In re Fuller (1940) 15 C.2d 425, 431, 102 P.2d 321 [small loan brokers]; Riley v. Chambers (1919) 181 C. 589, 594, 185 P. 855 [real estate brokers]; In re Holmes (1921) 187 C. 640, 645, 203 P. 398 [secondhand book dealers]; Lewis v. Quinn (1933) 217 C. 410, 412, 19 P.2d 236 [secondhand furniture dealers]; Howard v. California (1948) 85 C.A.2d 361, 364, 193 P.2d 11 [painting contractors]; Gospel Army v. Los Angeles (1945) 27 C.2d 232, 236, 163 P.2d 704 [junk and secondhand dealers]; Moore v. California State Bd. of Accountancy (1992) 2 C.4th 999, 9 C.R.2d 358, 831 P.2d 798, supra, §334 [licensing of public accountants].) (See supra, §629; 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §51 et seq.; 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §485 et seq.; 9 Summary (10th), Corporations, §401 et seq.)

Commentary on this subject is voluminous. (See 7 A.L.R.2d 416 [photography]; 22 A.L.R.2d 816 [plumbers and plumbing]; 34 A.L.R.2d 1326 [watchmakers and watch repairing]; 39 A.L.R.2d 606 [real estate brokers]; 45 A.L.R.2d 1391 [junk dealers]; 54 A.L.R.2d 881 [collection and commercial agencies]; 70 A.L.R.2d 433 [accountants]; 77 A.L.R.2d 1216 [house-to-house solicitors and peddlers]; 81 A.L.R.2d 791 [psychologists]; 83 A.L.R.2d 799 [private garbage or rubbish removal services]; 87 A.L.R.2d 1007 [self-service laundries]; 89 A.L.R.2d 1010 [radio and television repairmen and servicemen]; 89 A.L.R.2d 1338 [funeral directors and embalmers]; 81 A.L.R.3d 1212 [regulating business of tattooing]; 86 A.L.R.3d 475 [licensing of motor vehicle operators]; 86 A.L.R.3d 691 [regulation of private detectives, private investigators, and security agencies]; 53 A.L.R.4th 689 [nursing or rest homes]; 8 A.L.R.5th 825 [physical therapy]; 66 Proof of Facts 3d 541 [damages and emotional distress award for improper revocation of teacher's license].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

105 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

5. Limitations on Right To Do Business.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1080

[§ 1080] Limitations on Right To Do Business.

(1) In General. Exclusive franchises may be given to carriers and other public utilities, and the right to engage in the transportation business may be restricted to a limited group of persons by granting certificates of convenience and necessity to them alone. (See infra, §1098.) Moreover, the power to impose this type of regulation may not be restricted to so-called "businesses affected with a public interest." (See supra, §1072.)

Doyle v. Board of Barber Examiners (1963) 219 C.A.2d 504, 33 C.R. 349, upheld a statute limiting the number of barber apprentices in each shop. Petitioner contended that apprenticeship training requirements were adequate, and that the limitation did not contribute to skill or confer other public benefits, but merely cut down employment opportunities for apprentices. The board answered that the regulation assured personal supervision of apprentices to produce a more competent practitioner, and also prevented exploitation of both the employee and the public by expanded use of low-paid apprentices. "As individuals, we might find the theories supporting the law insubstantial and unacceptable. As a court, pursuing judicially established standards, we may invalidate the statute only if these theories are devoid of any rational connection with public interest objectives as the Legislature may have conceived them. We are not able to say that the law is irrationally conceived, that the Legislature could not have accepted the board's present arguments as the basis for finding that this statute serves a public interest." (219 C.A.2d 517.)

(2) Proration Laws. Another drastic limitation on the free operation of business enterprise is a proration law, whereby the production or marketing of agricultural commodities is restricted to allotted quantities, to prevent waste and secure stability in the markets. (See Agricultural Prorate Com. v. Superior Court (1936) 5 C.2d 550, 582, 55 P.2d 495; Brock v. Superior Court (1937) 9 C.2d 291, 296, 71 P.2d 209.)

But a proration plan designed to benefit some private persons at the expense of others, without furthering a real public interest such as prevention of waste, will fail. In Thompson v. Consolidated Gas Util. Corp. (1937) 300 U.S. 55, 57 S.Ct. 364, 374, 81 L.Ed. 510, 522, a Texas statute authorized proration of production of natural gas from a great reservoir. Certain large owners had their own pipelines and markets; others had no pipelines, and hence, no outlets. An order was made cutting production of the larger owners below the amounts needed to fill existing contracts, with the obvious purpose of compelling them to buy the balance from the other owners. Held, the order, ostensibly to prevent waste, actually operated to take property of the complaining owners for purely private purposes, and was a denial of due process.

(3) Protection for Domestic Partners. Beginning with contracts executed or amended on or after January 1, 2007, no state agency may enter into a contract for the acquisition of goods or services for $ 100,000 or more with a contractor who discriminates in the provision of benefits between employees with spouses and employees with domestic partners. (Pub.Contr.C. 10295.3(a).) For contracts executed on or after July 1, 2004, and before January 1, 2007, a contractor may require an employee to pay for additional benefits that are offered to comply with this section, if the employee elects to have them. (Pub.Contr.C. 10295.3(d)(4).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

106 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

6. Regulation of Prices and Rates.

a. Valid Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1081

[§ 1081] Valid Regulations.

Following Nebbia v. New York (1934) 291 U.S. 502, 54 S.Ct. 505, 78 L.Ed. 940, supra, §1072, which rejected the view that only public service businesses could be subjected to price controls, a number of cases upheld the legislative power to regulate ordinary businesses in this respect. (See Olsen v. Nebraska (1941) 313 U.S. 236, 61 S.Ct. 862, 85 L.Ed. 1305 [maximum fees of employment agency]; Highland Farms Dairy v. Agnew (1937) 300 U.S. 608, 57 S.Ct. 549, 81 L.Ed. 835 [milk industry]; Jersey Maid Milk Products Co. v. Brock (1939) 13 C.2d 620, 636, 91 P.2d 577 [milk]; Townsend v. Yeomans (1937) 301 U.S. 441, 57 S.Ct. 842, 81 L.Ed. 1210 [tobacco warehouses were affected with public interest and subject to regulation of maximum charges]; 21 Hastings Const. L. Q. 635 [constitutional limits on physician price controls]; 21 Hastings Const. L. Q. 669 [health care price controls].)

Statutory regulation of the price of liquor is generally upheld. In Allied Properties v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1959) 53 C.2d 141, 346 P.2d 737, the California compulsory fair-trade statute, fixing minimum prices for retail sales, was sustained. The valid statutory objectives were (a) promoting temperance and discouraging excessive purchases by eliminating bargain sales and advertising of low prices; and (b) preventing price cutting and price wars, as in other fair trade areas. The court thought that the failure to restrict wholesalers was merely another instance of selecting the greater evil for regulation (see supra, §702). It found no unlawful delegation of legislative power in the provision that the price is fixed by each producer or manufacturer, as in ordinary fair trade contracts. (53 C.2d 147.)

The statute was challenged and again upheld in Wilke & Holzheiser v. Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (1966) 65 C.2d 349, 55 C.R. 23, 420 P.2d 735. The court refused to go behind the legislative declaration of objectives, distinguishing economic legislation from legislation affecting basic freedoms. (65 C.2d 359.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

107 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

6. Regulation of Prices and Rates.

b. Invalid Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1082

[§ 1082] Invalid Regulations.

Occasionally a particular subject presents no problem of public health, waste of resources, or other legitimate object of police power regulation, in which case the court may deny the power to regulate prices, closing hours, advertising, and similar matters. (See In re Kazas (1937) 22 C.A.2d 161, 175, 70 P.2d 962 [barbers]; People v. Osborne (1936) 17 C.A.2d Supp. 771, 776, 59 P.2d 1083 [same]; Allen v. California Board of Barber Examiners (1972) 25 C.A.3d 1014, 1018, 102 C.R. 368 [state board's minimum price schedules for barbers were invalid]; 54 A.L.R.3d 916 [minimum price schedules for barbers].)

A conservative position on price regulation for ordinary businesses was taken by a split court, in State Bd. of Dry Cleaners v. Thrift-D-Lux Cleaners (1953) 40 C.2d 436, 254 P.2d 29. The state Dry Cleaners' Act created a board that, after investigation, fixed minimum price schedules for dry cleaning on request of more than 75% of the operators in an area. Defendant charged 69 cents for a man's suit in violation of the $ 1 minimum price. Held, injunction denied; the statute was unconstitutional. No legitimate health or safety objective could be shown; the statute was calculated to eliminate economical practices and ignored the interest of members of the public in a cheaper grade of cleaning; its object was to enhance the economic status of the industry and enlarge the profits of the operators; the price fixing was therefore an unreasonable restriction on the pursuit of private business activities and not a proper exercise of the police power. (40 C.2d 441.)

This position was reaffirmed in People v. Asamoto (1955) 131 C.A.2d 22, 279 P.2d 1010. Legislation on the marketing of agricultural commodities had been previously sustained (see supra, §1080), but in this case a marketing order sought to prohibit price cutting in the sale of bedding flower plants. The court upheld the trial judge's determination that the business was not so essential to the general welfare as to justify regulation of prices and destruction of the incentive of the grower to reduce costs and pass the savings on to the homeowner. (131 C.A.2d 32.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

108 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

6. Regulation of Prices and Rates.

c. Insurance Rates.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1083

[§ 1083] Insurance Rates.

On November 8, 1988, Proposition 103, an initiative measure, was enacted to regulate insurance rates. (See 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §9.) Constitutional challenges to a number of provisions were considered in Calfarm Ins. Co. v. Deukmejian (1989) 48 C.3d 805, 258 C.R. 161, 771 P.2d 1247, including (1) restrictions on rates, (2) restrictions on insurers' right to renew policies (infra, §1291), and (3) creation of a consumer-advocacy corporation (supra, §163). The principal attack was leveled at the rate restriction provision: "Insurance rates are to be immediately reduced to 'at least 20 percent less' than those in effect on November 8, 1987 (approximately the date when the initiative was proposed, and one year prior to its enactment). ... All rate increases require the approval of the Insurance Commissioner, who may not approve rates which are 'excessive, inadequate, unfairly discriminatory, or otherwise in violation of [the initiative].' Prior to November 8, 1989, however, rates may be increased only if the commissioner finds 'that an insurer is substantially threatened with insolvency.'" (48 C.3d 813.) Held, the provision was unconstitutional, but severable.

(a) Constitutional test. "The state and federal Constitutions are concerned not so much with the way the initial rates are set as with whether the rates as finally set are confiscatory. ... Consequently, we focus less on the rate specified in the statute than on the ability of the seller to obtain relief if that rate proves confiscatory. The face of a statute rarely reveals whether the rates it specifies are confiscatory or arbitrary, but necessarily discloses its provision, if any, for rate adjustment. Recognizing that virtually any law which sets prices may prove confiscatory in practice, courts have carefully scrutinized such provisions to ensure that the sellers will have an adequate remedy for relief from confiscatory rates." (48 C.3d 816.)

(b) Insolvency standard. Ins.C. 1861.01(b) limits rate adjustments prior to November 1989, to insurers "substantially threatened with insolvency." Under the definitions of "insolvency," a rate may be confiscatory even though it does not threaten the insurer's solvency. (48 C.3d 818.) The insolvency standard refers to the financial position of the company as a whole, not merely to the regulated lines of insurance. Many insurers do substantial business outside of California, or in lines of insurance within this state that are not regulated by Proposition 103. "If an insurer had substantial net worth, or significant income from sources unregulated by Proposition 103, it might be able to sustain substantial and continuing losses on regulated insurance without danger of insolvency. In such a case the continued solvency of the insurer could not suffice to demonstrate that the regulated rate constitutes a fair return." (48 C.3d 819.) The effect of the statute is to bar safely solvent insurers from obtaining relief from inadequate rates until November

1989. "Temporary rates which might be below a fair and reasonable level might compel insurers to return to their customers surpluses exacted through allegedly excessive past rates. But the concept that rates may be set at less than a fair rate of return in order to compel the return of past surpluses is not one supported by precedent." (48 C.3d 819.)

(c) No temporary rate freeze. The measure cannot be sustained as a temporary "freeze" of seller's rates while administrative machinery is set up. "Here we have a law which mandates not maintenance of a rate set by the seller, but a reduction to at least 20 percent less than former rates. The risk that the rate set by the statute is confiscatory as to some insurers from its inception is high enough to require an adequate method for obtaining individualized relief." (48 C.3d 820.)

(d) No emergency measure. The section cannot be sustained as an "emergency measure" of limited duration. An emergency measure that deprives persons of a fair return must be "a temporary situation of such enormity that all individuals might reasonably be required to make sacrifices for the common weal." Proposition 103 does not meet this requirement. "The asserted rise in insurance rates rendering insurance unavailable or unaffordable to many, is not a temporary problem; it is a long term chronic situation which will not be solved by compelling insurers to sell at less than a fair return for a year. Over the long term the state must permit insurers a fair return; we do not perceive any short term conditions that would require depriving them of a fair return." (48 C.3d 821.) (See 17 Pepperdine L. Rev. 561.)

20th Century Ins. Co. v. Garamendi (1994) 8 C.4th 216, 32 C.R.2d 807, 878 P.2d 566, held that (a) the Insurance Commissioner has the power to adopt regulations to implement the rate rollback provisions of Proposition 103 and to resolve claims that the rates set by the initiative are confiscatory (8 C.4th 280); and (b) upheld the rate regulations, including the ratemaking formula and the establishment of 10% as the lower end of the range of reasonable rates of return, that had been adopted to implement the rate rollback provisions. (8 C.4th 282, 297.) Claims that the ratemaking formula was arbitrary and confiscatory were rejected. (8 C.4th 302.) (See 23 Pepperdine L. Rev. 339.)

California Auto. Assigned Risk Plan v. Garamendi (1991) 232 C.A.3d 904, 283 C.R. 562, held that the rate restriction provisions do not apply to policies issued under the California Automobile Assigned Risk Plan (CAARP; see 2 Summary (10th), Insurance, §15). "Proposition 103 was intended ... to avoid excessive and arbitrary insurance rates by prohibiting companies from raising their rates without the approval of the commissioner. ... The purpose of imposing significant restrictions upon the rates charged by insurance companies, which rates previously had been only minimally regulated, does not apply to assigned-risk insurance policies. The rates charged for assigned-risk insurance were closely regulated before the passage of Proposition 103. In fact, prior to Proposition 103, the regulations promulgated by the commissioner already required CAARP's governing committee to make an annual recommendation for revision of the rates for assigned-risk insurance 'to the end that such rates and added surcharges shall be neither excessive, inadequate or unfairly discriminatory.' " (232 C.A.3d 913.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

109 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

a. Public Utilities Commission.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1084

[§ 1084] Public Utilities Commission.

Public utilities constitute a limited class of public service businesses, specified by statute, usually including carriers, water companies, and gas and electric companies. Their rates and numerous other matters are governed by a regulatory commission. (See 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §1 et seq.) In California, the power to regulate was established by a constitutional enabling provision (former Cal. Const., Art. XII, §§22, 23, now Cal. Const., Art. XII, §1 et seq.), and by the Public Utilities Act of 1911. The governing agency established by the Constitution was formerly called the Railroad Commission, but in 1946, its name was changed to the Public Utilities Commission. (See Cal. Const., Art. XII, §1.) In 1951, the Public Utilities Code was adopted, superseding the former Act. (See Pub.Util.C. 201 et seq.)

The Constitution provides for a Public Utilities Commission of five members, appointed by the Governor (Cal. Const., Art. XII, §1), with the power to "fix rates, establish rules, examine records, issue subpoenas, administer oaths, take testimony, punish for contempt, and prescribe a uniform system of accounts for all public utilities subject to its jurisdiction" (Cal. Const., Art. XII, §6). (See Pub.Util.C. 301 et seq. [organization and function of Commission]; on Constitution, statute, powers, and functions of Commission, see Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Eshleman (1913) 166 C. 640, 650, 137 P. 1119; In re Martinez (1943) 22 C.2d 259, 260, 138 P.2d 10; California Motor Transport Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1947) 30 C.2d 184, 185, 180 P.2d 912; People v. Western Air Lines (1954) 42 C.2d 621, 630, 268 P.2d 723; People v. Duque (2003) 105 C.A.4th 259, 266, 129 C.R.2d 298 [under Pub.Util.C. 303(a), commissioner may not own stock in company that PUC regulates, but statute's forfeiture of office provision, as written, only applies to stock that is acquired involuntarily].) (On power to fix compensation in condemnation of public utility property, see infra, §1174; on public service commissions generally, see 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §143 et seq.)

The Commission must create a division to represent the interests of public utility customers and subscribers in Commission proceedings. The goal of the division is to obtain the lowest possible rates for services consistent with reliable and safe service levels. For revenue and rate design matters, the division must "primarily consider the interests of residential and small commercial customers." (Pub.Util.C. 309.5(a).) The Legislature has authorized various programs for the purpose of reducing energy bills, conserving energy, or both. (See Pub.Util.C. 747.5 [assessment of whether pricing policies promote energy efficiency]; Pub.Util.C. 749 [public utilities must develop programs in cooperation with school districts to reduce energy bills through conservation and improved efficiency].) (See Hillsboro Properties v. Public Util. Com. (2003) 108 C.A.4th 246, 255, 258, 133 C.R.2d 343 [Pub.Util.C. 739.5, which requires utilities to discount their rates to master-meter landlords and requires landlords to charge tenants same rates utilities charge directly-served customers, prevails over city rent control ordinance that resulted in higher rates for submetered tenants of mobilehome park than were paid by other utility customers].)

The Commission must publish an annual work plan access guide describing the scheduled ratemaking proceedings and other decisions to be considered during the year, including information on how members of the public and ratepayers can gain access to the proceedings. (Pub.Util.C. 321.6.)

The Commission must authorize public utilities to engage in programs to encourage economic development. (Pub.Util.C. 740.4.) Reasonable expenses for economic development programs must "be allowed, to the extent of ratepayer benefit, when setting rates to be charged by public utilities electing to initiate these programs." (Pub.Util.C. 740.4(b).) The Commission may not establish discriminatory rates for the purpose of attracting or benefiting specific industries or business entities, except those incentives authorized by the Enterprise Zone Act in Govt.C. 7070 et seq. and 7080 et seq. (Pub.Util.C. 740.4(e).) And the Commission may authorize rate discounts to industries or business entities with facilities located within enterprise zones, recycling market development zones, or economic incentive areas. (Pub.Util.C. 740.4(g).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Work plan access guide: Pub.Util.C. 321.6, as amended in 2006, further requires that the annual work plan include a statement regarding the commission's proposal to reduce energy costs. (Pub.Util.C. 321.6(a).) The commission must produce a complete accounting of its transactions and proceedings for the preceding year with recommendations for reducing energy costs. (Pub.Util.C. 321.6(b).) It must create a report on the number of cases where resolution exceeded prescribed time periods and the days that commissioners presided in hearings. (Pub.Util.C. 321.6(c).) The commission must submit the work plan, accounting, and report to the Governor and Legislature each year by February 1. (Pub.Util.C. 321.6(d).)

110 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

b. Jurisdiction of Commission.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1085

[§ 1085] In General.

All public utilities are subject to regulation by the Commission. (Cal. Const., Art. XII, §3.) The Commission's power of regulation supersedes that of municipalities and other local governments when in conflict with the powers of the Commission, except for granting franchises and enforcement of local police regulations. (Cal. Const., Art. XII, §8.) The authority of the Legislature to confer additional powers on the Commission respecting public utilities is plenary and unlimited by any provision of the Constitution. (Cal. Const., Art. XII, §5.) (See Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Eshleman (1913) 166 C. 640, 658, 137 P. 1119; infra, §1088.)

Several limitations on this broad grant have been recognized:

(1) The "plenary" authority of the Legislature to confer additional powers on the Commission is subject to the limitation that the additional powers must be "cognate and germane to the regulation of public utilities." (Morel v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1938) 11 C.2d 488, 492, 81 P.2d 144; see People v. Western Air Lines (1954) 42 C.2d 621, 634, 268 P.2d 723.)

(2) The regulatory powers cannot be exercised over a utility engaged in interstate or foreign commerce (see infra, §1094), or where the effect is to hamper agencies of the federal Government (Public Util. Com. of Calif. v. United States (1958) 355 U.S. 534, 78 S.Ct. 446, 453, 2 L.Ed.2d 470, 478; see supra, §8 et seq.)

(3) The Commission's jurisdiction extends only to regulation of privately owned utilities; in the absence of express statutory provision, it has no jurisdiction over municipally owned utilities. (Inyo v. Public Util. Com. (1980) 26 C.3d 154, 166, 161 C.R. 172, 604 P.2d 566.) (On Commission's jurisdiction over municipally owned common carriers, see infra, §1093.)

In California Apartment Assn. v. Stockton (2000) 80 C.A.4th 699, 95 C.R.2d 605, plaintiff property owners sought mandamus to compel defendant city to comply with Pub.Util.C. 10009.6, which prohibits a municipality that operates a public utility from recouping tenants' unpaid utility bills from property owners. Defendant had enacted ordinances permitting this recoupment. Held, writ of mandamus granted.

(a) Defendant is a charter city, and the statutory term "municipal corporation" includes charter cities. (80 C.A.4th 703.)

(b) The city had no vested right under its charter to permit recoupment from property owners at the time of the original enactment of Cal. Const., Art. XII, and the city could not derive this power under Cal. Const., Art. XII, §8, by virtue of the plenary authority accorded the Legislature to control a public utility implied from Cal. Const., Art. XII, §5. (80 C.A.4th 712.)

The jurisdiction of the Commission has been raised in many other cases, including the following:

Schell v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1988) 204 C.A.3d 1039, 1045, 1047, 251 C.R. 667 [PUC has exclusive jurisdiction over application of rate schedule to particular user].

Southern Calif. Gas Co. v. Vernon (1995) 41 C.A.4th 209, 215, 217, 48 C.R.2d 661 [PUC has exclusive power to regulate safety of gas pipelines, and city cannot regulate design or construction of proposed pipeline under guise of ensuring pipeline's safety; Pub.Util.C. 2902 recognizes existing municipal power to regulate location of pipelines on or beneath streets but does not grant new powers].

San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Carlsbad (1998) 64 C.A.4th 785, 802, 75 C.R.2d 534 [fact that PUC failed to enact specific regulations governing disposal of utility's dredging spoils did not mean local entity could do so].

Leslie v. Superior Court (1999) 73 C.A.4th 1042, 1049, 87 C.R.2d 313 [State Housing Law and PUC rules and regulations are of equal dignity; thus, where there is no conflict because PUC has not generated rules on road maintenance or grading on utility easements, "PUC is not exempt from statewide standards governing grading and maintenance of roads"; distinguishing Carlsbad].

Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Peevey (2003) 31 C.4th 781, 795, 3 C.R.3d 703, 74 P.3d 795, 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, Supp., §10 [PUC had authority to enter into rate settlement agreement arising out of claim that rates frozen by statute were unconstitutionally confiscatory and violated federal filed-rate rule; agreement allowed postfreeze recovery of energy procurement costs, which is not prohibited by Pub.Util.C. 368].

Utility Consumers' Action Network v. Public Util. Com. of Calif. (2004) 120 C.A.4th 644, 655, 15 C.R.3d 597 [following Peevey; unless inconsistent with state law, PUC has authority to settle lawsuit against it].

Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (2004) 118 C.A.4th 1174, 1195, 13 C.R.3d 630 [PUC had jurisdiction over holding companies to enforce conditions it had imposed pursuant to its statutory authority when public utilities applied to reorganize under holding company structure].

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

The provision in Cal. Const., Art. XII, §5, stating that the Legislature may confer additional powers on the Commission and that this power is plenary and unlimited by any provision in the Constitution, does not preclude the people from using the initiative process to grant additional powers to the Commission. (Independent Energy Producers Assn. v. McPherson (2006) 38 C.4th 1020, 1033, 44 C.R.3d 644, 136 P.3d 178 [numerous decisions have held that language in California Constitution establishing authority of Legislature to legislate in particular area must be interpreted to include right of people to exercise similar legislative authority through initiative process].) Southern Calif. Edison case:

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Administrative Proceedings, §12.

111 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

b. Jurisdiction of Commission.

2. Judicial Powers of Commission.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1086

[§ 1086] Judicial Powers of Commission.

In Consumers Lobby Against Monopolies v. Public Util. Com. (1979) 25 C.3d 891, 160 C.R. 124, 603 P.2d 41, two proceedings were brought before the Commission: (a) a proceeding for reparation, filed by a nonattorney on behalf of a consumer group consisting only of himself, alleging that a utility had shifted costs from commercial ratepayers to general ratepayers, and (b) a ratemaking proceeding in which a public interest group participated. The reparation proceeding was settled with a requirement that the utility provide a large fund to be expended for the public benefit. In the ratemaking proceeding, certain public benefits were gained. Each petitioner sought an award of attorneys' fees and costs, but the Commission decided that it lacked power to make the award. Held, decision annulled in part.

(a) Award is proper in quasi-judicial reparation proceeding.

(1) Although the Commission is not a judicial tribunal in a strict sense, it has some judicial powers, particularly those of an equitable character; e.g., it may issue injunctions in aid of its jurisdiction, direct that a trust fund be created to conserve potential refunds, and reform contracts of public utilities. (25 C.3d 906, 907.)

(2) It has express power to order public utilities that charge unlawful rates to make reparation to ratepayers. If a civil action could be brought for this purpose, the court would have equitable jurisdiction to award attorneys' fees under the common fund theory (see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §215). There are persuasive reasons for holding that the Commission likewise has this jurisdiction. Its procedures largely parallel those of courts, and there are identifiable parties; it acts as a trier of fact; it applies rules of law to the facts; and it renders a decision adjudicating vested interests in which there are clear prevailing and losing parties. Moreover, successful reparation proceedings before the Commission may result in the creation of a common fund. (25 C.3d 907, 908.)

(b) Award to nonattorney is proper in quasi-judicial proceeding. Several cases have held that nonattorneys who appear in pro. per. in judicial proceedings are not entitled to recover attorneys' fees. The principal purpose of this rule is to discourage legal representation by persons not recognized as professionally competent. But nonattorneys may and do appear in proceedings before the Commission, and the inference that they are deemed competent supports the authority to award reasonable fees for their services. (25 C.3d 913, 914.)

(c) Award is improper in quasi-legislative ratemaking proceeding. "The fixing of a rate and the reducing of that rate are prospective in application and quasi-legislative in character." (25 C.3d 909.) There may be a number of interveners in the proceeding, and isolating the contribution of each would further burden the Commission's task of administering the already cumbersome procedure. Hence, the Commission's equitable jurisdiction to award fees in quasi-judicial reparation actions does not extend to its quasi-legislative ratemaking duties. (25 C.3d 909.)

Two concurring and dissenting opinions were filed, each with three justices supporting the views stated. The first opposed the award in reparation cases and the award to nonattorneys (25 C.3d 916); the second saw no objection to an award in ratemaking cases (25 C.3d 917). (See Wise v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1999) 77 C.A.4th 287, 300, 91 C.R.2d 479 [regardless of rule against retroactive ratemaking, PUC in exercise of its equitable jurisdiction must be able to fashion remedy in event of fraud committed by public utility during ratemaking process]; 69 Cal. L. Rev. 969 [Consumers Lobby].)

Where a law provides for enforcement of claims solely in the courts, the Commission has no jurisdiction to fashion a remedy thereunder. (See Greenlining Institute v. Public Util. Com. (2002) 103 C.A.4th 1324, 1328, 1333, 127 C.R.2d 736 [PUC has no jurisdiction to enforce Unfair Competition Law (B. & P.C. 17000 et seq.)].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

The Commission has the authority under Pub.Util.C. 2104 and 2107 to impose fines on public utilities. It is only required to commence an action in superior court to collect those fines if not voluntarily paid. (Pacific Bell Wireless, LLC v. Public Util. Com. (2006) 140 C.A.4th 718, 737, 44 C.R.3d 733.) Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §249.

112 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

b. Jurisdiction of Commission.

3. Power To Obtain Injunction.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1087

[§ 1087] Power To Obtain Injunction.

The Commission has the power to seek injunctive relief against utilities in specified circumstances.

(1) Utilities and Persons Covered. Legislation permitting injunctive relief applies to passenger stage corporations (Pub.Util.C. 1044), household goods carriers (Pub.Util.C. 5259), and their officers, directors, and agents.

(2) Activities Covered. The Commission may seek relief when the executive director determines that a passenger stage corporation, or its officer, etc., "has engaged in, is engaged in, or is about to engage in," acts or practices violating Pub.Util.C. 1001 et seq., or a related order, decision, regulation, direction, or requirement. (Pub.Util.C. 1044.)

In the case of a household goods carrier, relief may be sought when it, or an officer, etc., fails or omits, or is about to fail or omit, to do anything required of it by law, or by an order, decision, rule, direction, or requirement of the Commission, or is doing anything, is about to do anything, or is permitting anything to be done to violate a law or an order, etc., of the Commission. (Pub.Util.C. 5259.)

(3) Relief Available. In the case of a passenger stage corporation, the executive director of the Commission may apply to the superior court for an order enjoining the unlawful acts or practices or for an order directing compliance. On a showing by the executive director that the person or corporation has engaged in or is about to engage in the acts or practices, the court may grant a permanent or temporary injunction, restraining order, or other order, including an order permitting the impoundment of vehicles operating in violation of an injunction, restraining order, or other order. (Pub.Util.C. 1044.) In the case of a household goods carrier, the executive director may seek to have the violations or threatened violations stopped and prevented, either by mandamus or injunction, including an order permitting impoundment of vehicles used for subsequent operations subject to the order. (Pub.Util.C. 5259.)

(4) Venue. In the case of a passenger stage corporation, the statute merely requires an application to the superior court. (Pub.Util.C. 1044.) In the case of a household goods carrier, the action must be brought in the superior court of the county where the cause or part of it arose, or where the corporation complained of has its principal place of business, or where the person complained of resides. (Pub.Util.C. 5259.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

113 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

b. Jurisdiction of Commission.

4. Powers of Other Governmental Agencies.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1088

[§ 1088] Powers of Other Governmental Agencies.

(1) Cities and Counties. The constitutional grant of regulatory power to the Commission precludes the exercise of conflicting power by cities or counties, e.g., in the granting of franchises to operate; but the grant is subject to the proviso that it must not "affect such powers of control over public utilities as relate to the making and enforcement of local, police, sanitary and other regulations, other than the fixing of rates." (See Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Los Angeles (1955) 44 C.2d 272, 280, 282 P.2d 36; Southern Pac. Pipe Lines v. Long Beach (1988) 204 C.A.3d 660, 669, 670, 251 C.R. 411 [city has power to grant franchises to use city streets for oil pipelines, under either Cal. Const., Art. XI, §5 ("home rule" provision; supra, §993), if business is municipal affair, or under Pub.Util.C. 6205 (giving cities power to grant oil franchises), if matter is one of statewide concern].) Thus, where the Legislature has not acted to control taxicab rates, a city may do so. (People v. San Francisco (1979) 92 C.A.3d 913, 924, 155 C.R. 319.)

Some local matters are, however, of statewide concern, and subject to the paramount power vested in the Commission. (See Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. San Francisco (1959) 51 C.2d 766, 768, 336 P.2d 514 [construction and maintenance of telephone lines]; Union City v. Southern Pac. Co. (1968) 261 C.A.2d 277, 279, 67 C.R. 816 [railroad grade crossings]; California Apartment Assn. v. Stockton (2000) 80 C.A.4th 699, 705, 712, 95 C.R.2d 605, supra, §1085 [statute prohibiting municipal corporations that own public utilities from recovering from property owners unpaid amounts owed by tenants, prevails over conflicting ordinances].)

(2) Districts. In Orange County Air Pollution Control Dist. v. Public Util. Com. (1971) 4 C.3d 945, 95 C.R. 17, 484 P.2d 1361, Southern California Edison sought to construct two steam electric generating units in Orange County. It applied to the Commission for a certificate of public convenience and necessity and to the Orange County Air Pollution Control District for a permit. The District, after extensive hearings, denied a permit on the ground of noncompliance with emission control requirements. The Commission, after a hearing in which the District participated, and with knowledge of the District's denial of a permit, granted the certificate and directed that construction begin immediately. The Commission did not contradict the District's findings, but concluded that the District was a local agency whose authority was subordinate to that of the Commission. Held, order annulled; the Commission acted in excess of jurisdiction.

(a) The Commission has authority to promote safe operations of utilities, but a jury may find that its standards do not meet the minimum requirement of reasonable care. (4 C.3d 951.) Although a common carrier must comply with Commission orders on health and sanitation of employees, it must also comply with pertinent orders of the Industrial Welfare Commission or Division of Industrial Safety (now Division of Occupational Safety and Health). (4 C.3d 951.)

(b) The Legislature has given the District a legal status separate from the county, and has indicated that air quality is a matter of statewide importance. Hence, as in industrial health and sanitation, the Commission must share its jurisdiction over utilities with that of the District; and, where the District has found that a proposed or existing facility does not comply with applicable regulations, the Commission may not order the utility to violate the ruling. (4 C.3d 954.) The utility may seek court review of the District's ruling under former Health & Saf.C. 24322 et seq. (now Health & Saf.C. 40864). (4 C.3d 954.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

114 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

c. Jurisdiction of Courts.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1089

[§ 1089] In General.

A public utility that "does, causes to be done, or permits any act, matter, or thing prohibited or declared unlawful," or that omits to do an act, matter, or thing required to be done, either by the Constitution, California law, or an "order or decision of the commission, is liable to the persons or corporations affected thereby for all loss, damages, or injury caused thereby or resulting therefrom. If the court finds that the act or omission was wilful, it may, in addition to the actual damages, award exemplary damages. An action to recover for such loss, damage, or injury may be brought in any court of competent jurisdiction by any corporation or person." Recovery does not "in any manner affect a recovery by the State" of statutory penalties or "the exercise by the commission of its power to punish for contempt." (Pub.Util.C. 2106.)

Under this statute, despite the Commission's exclusive power to regulate, a court may take jurisdiction of a dispute arising under a Commission regulation, acting in aid of the Commission's jurisdiction, or giving relief where the Commission has failed to act. Thus, in Vila v. Tahoe Southside Water Util. (1965) 233 C.A.2d 469, 43 C.R. 654, defendant water utility filed its tariff and the Commission approved it. Under the tariff, defendant was required to offer a "single service connection" to multiple units, and plaintiff, owner of an office building, requested this connection. Defendant refused, plaintiff's building remained vacant for lack of a water supply, and he sued for an injunction and compensatory and exemplary damages. Held, judgment on demurrer reversed. Pub.Util.C. 2106, under which the suit was brought, expressly recognizes the action. While the Commission may enforce its orders and impose fines, it cannot award damages; Pub.Util.C. 2106 is the only statutory authority for an award of damages. The Legislature could not have intended to deprive a prospective user of that remedy by requiring him to go first before the Commission to obtain a reaffirmation of the approved tariff. (233 C.A.2d 477, 480.) (See Product Research Associates v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1971) 16 C.A.3d 651, 656, 660, 94 C.R. 216 [court has jurisdiction to determine judicial question whether tariff validly limits liability of utility for negligence]; 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Courts, §212.)

In San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 C.4th 893, 55 C.R.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669, plaintiff homeowners sued for personal injury and property damage caused by electric and magnetic fields arising from power lines operated by defendant SDG&E, a public utility, on an easement in close proximity to plaintiffs' residence. Defendant's demurrer was overruled, and it sought writ review in the Court of Appeal. That court, holding that plaintiffs failed to state a personal injury cause of action and that the property causes of action were barred by Pub.Util.C. 1759, issued a writ of mandamus directing the trial court to sustain the demurrer. Held, judgment of the Court of Appeal affirmed.

(a) Governing rule.

(1) Under Pub.Util.C. 1759, only the Supreme Court (but now also the Court of Appeal; see infra, §1108), has jurisdiction to review decisions of, or otherwise to interfere with, the PUC in the performance of its duties. This provision must be reconciled with Pub.Util.C. 2106, which authorizes a private action in superior court for damages caused by an unlawful act of a public utility. (13 C.4th 916.)

(2) In Waters v. Pacific Tel. Co. (1974) 12 C.3d 1, 11, 114 C.R. 753, 523 P.2d 1161, infra, §1091, the court reconciled the two statutes by limiting Pub.Util.C. 2106 to situations where an award of damages would not hinder or frustrate the Commission's declared supervisory and regulatory policies. Hence, an action for damages under Pub.Util.C. 2106 is barred by Pub.Util.C. 1759 if an award of damages (a) would directly contravene a specific order or decision of the Commission, or (b) would have the effect of undermining a general supervisory or regulatory policy of the Commission. (13 C.4th 918.)

(3) In applying Waters, the Courts of Appeal have tended to permit private damages actions when the bar raised is a Commission ruling on a single matter that does not involve "policy." But when the relief sought would interfere with a broad and continuing supervisory program of the Commission, the Courts of Appeal have held that Pub.Util.C. 1759 bars the action. (13 C.4th 918, discussing Cellular Plus v. Superior Court (1993) 14 C.A.4th 1224, 18 C.R.2d 308, 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §592, Stepak v. American Tel. & Tel. Co. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 633, 231 C.R. 37, infra, §1090, and Brian T. v. Pacific Bell (1989) 210 C.A.3d 894, 258 C.R. 707, infra, §1091.)

(b) Commission's exercise of authority.

(1) The Commission has broad authority to deal with safety aspects of equipment used by public utilities and equally broad authority over the design and siting of electric power lines. (13 C.4th 923, 924.) Hence, it has the authority to adopt a policy dealing with possible health risks associated with electric and magnetic fields arising from power lines. (13 C.4th 923.)

(2) The Commission has exercised this authority. Beginning in 1989, the Commission took various steps with respect to potential health threats posed by, and possible corrective actions with respect to, power line electric and magnetic fields. (13 C.4th 926.) In 1991, the Commission initiated a broad policy inquiry concerning health effects, and in 1993 it adopted an interim EMF policy for electric utility facilities and power lines. (13 C.4th 929, 930.) That policy generally requires utilities to implement low-cost mitigation measures in new and upgraded projects, but does not require action with respect to existing facilities. (13 C.4th 931, 934.) The interim policy remains in effect while the Commission continues its inquiry. (13 C.4th 934.)

(c) Plaintiff's causes of action.

(1) Trespass. This cause of action must fail. First, electric and magnetic fields arising from power lines are wholly intangible. Second, plaintiffs do not allege any physical damage to their property. Hence, under the rule of Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. (1982) 32 C.3d 229, 185 C.R. 280, 649 P.2d 922, 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §136, the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for trespass. (13 C.4th 935.)

(2) Nuisance. This cause of action is barred. Plaintiffs do not claim that the electric and magnetic fields arising from the power lines caused them actual physical harm. Instead they claim that they feared that the fields would cause them harm. But the Commission has concluded (a) that the available evidence does not support a reasonable belief that the fields pose a substantial risk of physical harm, and (b) that the utilities need take no action until the time when the evidence does support this belief. Hence, to allow recovery on the basis of plaintiffs' fear of harm would interfere with the policy adopted by the Commission. (13 C.4th 937.)

(3) Inverse condemnation. This cause of action also must fail. Here, there was neither physical damage to nor physical invasion of plaintiffs' property. (13 C.4th 940.) To recover for an intangible intrusion that does not cause physical damage, plaintiffs must meet the test of Varjabedian v. Madera (1977) 20 C.3d 285, 142 C.R. 429, 572 P.2d 43, infra, §1152, i.e., the intrusion must result in a "burden on the property that is direct, substantial, and peculiar to the property itself." (13 C.4th 940.) Plaintiffs cannot meet this requirement. They have not alleged any actual physical consequences caused by the electric and magnetic fields. And fear that an intangible intrusion may cause future harm is insufficient to show the direct and substantial burden that is required to satisfy the taking or damaging element of inverse condemnation. (13 C.4th 943.) (See Ford v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1997) 60 C.A.4th 696, 702, 70 C.R.2d 359 [following San Diego Gas; rejecting wrongful death claim of widow of employee who died of brain cancer allegedly caused by EMF exposure]; 24 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1458 [San Diego Gas].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 2 Cal. Proc. (5th), Courts, §211.

115 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

c. Jurisdiction of Courts.

2. Private Right of Action Allowed.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1090

[§ 1090] Private Right of Action Allowed.

In Ventura County Waterworks Dist. No. 12 v. Susana Knolls Mut. Water Co. (1970) 7 C.A.3d 672, 87 C.R. 1, plaintiff, a county waterworks district, sought a declaration of its right to furnish water in an area served by defendants, unregulated mutual water companies. Held, a declaratory judgment was proper; the superior court may exercise equitable jurisdiction, even though it determines the status of an unregulated utility under Pub.Util.C. 2705, until the Commission acts. (7 C.A.3d 679.)

In Empire West v. Southern Calif. Gas Co. (1974) 12 C.3d 805, 117 C.R. 423, 528 P.2d 31, plaintiff, developer of an apartment complex, was given a cost analysis of a central heating and cooling system by defendant. In this action plaintiff alleged that the cost had been misrepresented, and that he relied on defendant's figures in installing a gas system instead of an electric powered system, which would have been substantially less expensive. Defendant contended that the action sought an illegal rebate or preferential rate in violation of Pub.Util.C. 532. Held, a cause of action was stated. The dispute was not over the rate for gas service; the misrepresentation alleged was as to the quantity of gas the project would consume. This brought the case within Pub.Util.C. 2106, permitting damage actions based on the commission of any unlawful act. (12 C.3d 810, 811.) (See Masonite Corp. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1976) 65 C.A.3d 1, 7, 135 C.R. 170 [damages for breach of contract, based on failure to keep accurate meters and overcharging for gas that was not delivered]; Pink Dot v. Teleport Communications Group (2001) 89 C.A.4th 407, 418, 107 C.R.2d 392 [following Empire West; claims against defendant telephone company for fraud in inducement relating to installation of Caller ID services and false representations regarding defendant's experience and reliability, and for intentional interference with plaintiff's economic relations by installing disconnect notice rather than forwarding number when plaintiff discontinued defendant's services, would not "hinder or frustrate" PUC's supervisory or regulatory policies, and thus are permitted under Pub.Util.C. 2106].)

In Stepak v. American Tel. & Tel. Co. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 633, 231 C.R. 37, plaintiff minority shareholder of defendant public utility brought an action for breach of fiduciary duty in connection with a merger of defendant with another utility. Prior to the suit, the PUC had approved the transaction, finding that the merger was fair to the minority shareholders; and after the Commission decision became final and the merger was consummated, defendant's motion to dismiss the action was granted. Held, reversed.

(a) Waters v. Pacific Tel. Co. (1974) 12 C.3d 1, 11, 114 C.R. 753, 523 P.2d 1161, infra, §1091, is distinguishable. No supervisory and regulatory policies were ever formulated by the Commission on the subject of safeguarding minority interests, and a superior court's award of damages or other relief to wronged minority shareholders would not hinder or frustrate declared Commission policy. (186 C.A.3d 640.)

(b) The Commission had no authority to adjudicate the fairness of the transaction to minority shareholders as distinct from the issue whether retention of minority shareholders was in the public interest. (186 C.A.3d 641, citing and discussing Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. of Calif. (1950) 34 C.2d 822, 215 P.2d 441, infra, §1104.) Whether to retain minority shareholders as a voting voice was within the scope of its authority; but having allowed the minority shareholders' influence to disappear in the merger, consideration of the merger's fairness to the disappearing minority was beyond its regulatory powers. (186 C.A.3d 645.)

People v. Pacific Bell (2003) 31 C.4th 1132, 7 C.R.3d 315, 80 P.3d 201, held that Pub.Util.C. 1759, which protects the jurisdiction of the PUC, did not preclude a superior court action by several district attorneys against a public utility for false advertising and unlawful business practices. A decision of the PUC in an action based on similar complaints expressly stated that it did not adjudicate claims under the Unfair Competition Law. (31 C.4th 1143.) District attorneys are authorized by statute to bring actions against public utilities that have violated the law "where the PUC does not possess exclusive regulatory authority over a matter." (31 C.4th 1151.) Further, the superior court action would not interfere with the PUC's performance of its official duties. (31 C.4th 1151.) (See Hartwell Corp. v. Superior Court (2002) 27 C.4th 256, 276, 115 C.R.2d 874, 38 P.3d 1098 [although challenge to adequacy of standards is barred, damage claims against regulated water companies based on theory that water failed to meet federal and state drinking water standards are not preempted by Pub.Util.C. 1759; finding that company violated these standards does not interfere with PUC regulatory policy requiring compliance]; Cundiff v. GTE Calif. (2002) 101 C.A.4th 1395, 1405, 1411, 125 C.R.2d 445 [action for damages challenging manner in which defendants billed plaintiffs for rental of telephones was authorized by Pub.Util.C. 2106 and not precluded by Pub.Util.C. 1759].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Koponen v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (2008) 165 C.A.4th 345, 358, 81 C.R.3d 22 [following Stepak v. American Tel. & Tel. Co. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 633, 231 C.R. 37, text, p. 714, and Hartwell Corp. v. Superior Court (2002) 27 C.4th 256, 115 C.R.2d 874, 38 P.3d 1098, text, p. 715; in action based on defendant utility leasing or licensing rights in easements burdening plaintiffs' property to telecommunication companies, Pub.Util.C. 1759 did not bar plaintiffs' claim for damages incurred as result of unauthorized uses of rights-of-way and did not prevent plaintiffs from seeking to enjoin defendant from invading their property interests by licensing or leasing defendant's facilities; finding that defendant was violating plaintiffs' property rights would not interfere with PUC's declared policy of encouraging joint use of defendant's facilities].

116 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

c. Jurisdiction of Courts.

3. Private Right of Action Rejected.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1091

[§ 1091] Private Right of Action Rejected.

Although the courts may entertain suits for recovery of money due under established rates for transportation, they cannot ignore a prior decision of the Commission relating to transportation rates. "[N]o sensible person viewing the general situation should for a moment contend that there is an area within which the commission and the courts can legitimately reach exactly opposite and conflicting conclusions on a given set of facts. One or the other body must prevail on any given question, and it appears clear that the elimination of discrimination between carriers and the prevention of special benefits to favored shippers through ingenious devices to that end are within the exclusive supervision of the Public Utilities Commission." (Pratt v. Coast Trucking (1964) 228 C.A.2d 139, 149, 39 C.R. 332 [prior determination that Coast Trucking was not prime hauler but was alter ego of shipper].)

In People v. Superior Court (1965) 62 C.2d 515, 42 C.R. 849, 399 P.2d 385, the Commission ordered D Water Co. to terminate an interim rate increase. After affirmance of the order on review, it ordered the lower rates in effect and directed D Co. to formulate and advise the Commission of a plan to make refunds to customers. D Co. did not comply, and brought this action for declaratory relief to determine whether claims for refunds were assignable and whether unclaimed refunds were payable to the state. Held, prohibition granted. The issues raised by the suit were not yet ready for decision because D Co. had not presented its plan, and until it did and the Commission ruled on the plan and those issues, the court was prohibited by Pub.Util.C. 1759 from adjudicating them. (62 C.2d 518.) (See Independent Laundry v. Railroad Com. (1945) 70 C.A.2d 816, 821, 826, 161 P.2d 827 [no jurisdiction of action for declaratory relief with respect to regulation of Commission]; Harmon v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1960) 183 C.A.2d 1, 3, 6 C.R. 542 [Commission has exclusive jurisdiction over conditions under which utilities render their services--here billing for "message units"]; Dollar-A-Day Rent-A-Car Systems v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1972) 26 C.A.3d 454, 462, 102 C.R. 651 [without factual determination by Commission concerning alleged discrimination in display advertising in "Yellow Pages," court lacked jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief and damages].)

In Waters v. Pacific Tel. Co. (1974) 12 C.3d 1, 114 C.R. 753, 523 P.2d 1161, the Commission adopted a policy limiting liability of telephone utilities for acts of ordinary negligence to a specified credit allowance set forth in approved tariff schedules which form a contract with customers. Plaintiff brought this action against defendant telephone company, claiming substantial damages for breach of contract, on allegations of improper maintenance, installation of phones, and handling of calls. Defendant set up its tariff schedule and offered the credit allowance limited to the total charges for the period during which the phone was out of service. Held, the action was barred.

Pub.Util.C. 2106 (supra, §1089) must be construed in harmony with Pub.Util.C. 1759 (infra, §1108), which deprives the superior courts of jurisdiction to review orders of the Commission. So construed, it authorizes only those actions that "would not interfere with or obstruct the commission in carrying out its own policies." (12 C.3d 11.) (See Colich & Sons v. Pacific Bell (1988) 198 C.A.3d 1225, 1235, 1239, 244 C.R. 714 [following Waters; no action for ordinary negligence, but cause of action for gross negligence could be stated]; Los Angeles Cellular Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 C.A.4th 1013, 76 C.R.2d 894 [following Waters; limitation of liability for negligence included in tariff was binding on public].)

In Citizens Util. Co. v. Superior Court (1976) 56 C.A.3d 399, 128 C.R. 582, the Attorney General brought a quo warranto proceeding to oust a privately owned public water utility of its franchise, on the ground that it was furnishing unpotable water to consumers. Held: (a) The proceeding was authorized by C.C.P. 803 (56 C.A.3d 405, 406); but (b) it could not be maintained when the Commission had already assumed jurisdiction over the utility and had acted on a matter germane to the subject of the quo warranto proceeding (56 C.A.3d 409, 410).

In Brian T. v. Pacific Bell (1989) 210 C.A.3d 894, 258 C.R. 707, parents of two minors sought injunctive relief and damages against a telephone company and various suppliers of sexually explicit messages. The complaint alleged that one minor, after listening to these messages on "976" lines, sexually assaulted the second minor. The trial court denied the motion for a preliminary injunction and dismissed the action against the telephone company. Held, affirmed.

(a) Under Waters, the jurisdiction of the superior court is limited to situations where the relief requested would not hinder or frustrate the Commission's policies. (210 C.A.3d 900.)

(b) The Commission has adopted central station blocking to implement the requirement of Pub.Util.C. 2884 (infra, §1102) that customers be allowed to delete access to 976 service. Because the requested injunctive relief would interfere with this decision, the trial court lacked jurisdiction. (1) The request that the telephone company provide devices to prevent access to minors would require the Commission to modify its previous decisions; under Pub.Util.C. 1759, this challenge may only be made by mandamus in the Supreme Court (and now also the Courts of Appeal; see infra, §1108). (210 C.A.3d 900, 901.) (2) The request to restrain violations of P.C. 313.1 (distributing harmful matter to minors) is a disguised attempt to compel adoption of a customer access code rather than using blocking devices. (210 C.A.3d 901.) (3) The request to enjoin violations of P.C. 311.2 (distributing obscene matter) does not conflict with the Commission's jurisdiction but does raise difficult constitutional issues, and there was no abuse of discretion in denying the request. (210 C.A.3d 902, 903.)

(c) On the issue of damages, Sokol v. Public Util. Com. (1966) 65 C.2d 247, 53 C.R. 673, 418 P.2d 265, supra, §683, absolves the telephone company of liability because it acted under compulsion of the Commission's orders. (210 C.A.3d 904, 908.) (See White v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1994) 25 C.A.4th 442, 452, 453, 30 C.R.2d 431, 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §10 [rejecting claim that Pub.Util.C. 2106, in conjunction with Streets and Highways Code provisions requiring public entities to maintain highways in safe condition, creates statutory scheme imposing liability on public utilities to third parties for failure to maintain street lights]; Anaheim v. Pacific Bell Tel. Co. (2004) 119 C.A.4th 838, 845, 14 C.R.3d 725 [distinguishing People v. Pacific Bell (2003) 31 C.4th 1132, 7 C.R.3d 315, 80 P.3d 201, supra, §1090; PUC had exclusive authority of dispute between city and utility over who should pay to put overhead facilities underground].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Anchor Lighting v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (2006) 142 C.A.4th 541, 549, 47 C.R.3d 780 [following Waters v. Pacific Tel. Co. (1974) 12 C.3d 1, 114 C.R. 753, 523 P.2d 1161, text, p. 716; superior court lacked jurisdiction to hear unfair competition action against utility that would interfere with PUC's ratemaking powers and established financing scheme].

117 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

d. Public Utilities Regulated by Commission.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1092

[§ 1092] In General.

Classes of public utilities are set forth in both the Constitution and the statute. The Constitution provides:

"Private corporations and persons that own, operate, control, or manage a line, plant, or system for the transportation of people or property, the transmission of telephone and telegraph messages, or the production, generation, transmission, or furnishing of heat, light, water, power, storage, or wharfage directly or indirectly to or for the public, and common carriers, are public utilities subject to control by the Legislature. The Legislature may prescribe that additional classes of private corporations or other persons are public utilities." (Cal. Const., Art. XII, §3; see People v. Western Air Lines (1954) 42 C.2d 621, 635, 641, 268 P.2d 723 [term "transportation company" includes air carriers].)

The general language of the Constitution is given specific content in the statute. The term "public utility" includes every common carrier, and every toll bridge, pipeline, gas, electrical, telephone, telegraph, water, sewer system, and heat corporation, "where the service is performed for or the commodity delivered to the public or any portion thereof." (Pub.Util.C. 216(a); see Pub.Util.C. 330 et seq. [electrical restructuring]; 28 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1453 [Commission's regulation of telecommunications toll market]; 33 McGeorge L. Rev. 355 [utilities told not to sell their generation assets].)

Statutes formerly required motor carriers to obtain a certificate of public convenience or a permit to operate from the PUC. These statutes were repealed after the adoption of Public Law 103-305 in 1994, which exhibited an intention to "generally preempt the states from regulating any matter related to the price, route, or service of motor carriers of property and air carriers transporting property by motor vehicle." (Stats. 1995, Chap. 915, §1; see 49 U.S.C., §13101 et seq. [motor and water carriers]; 49 U.S.C., §31131 et seq. [commercial motor vehicle safety]; 49 U.S.C., 40101 et seq. [air commerce]; 49 U.S.C., §10701 et seq. [railroads].) Many statutes governing intrastate transportation of passengers by air carriers also have been repealed. However, these carriers may still be required to register with the Commission and to procure adequate liability insurance. (See Pub.Util.C. 3901 et seq. [requiring household goods carriers and interstate motor carriers of passengers to register with PUC in accordance with regulations of Interstate Commerce Commission]; Pub.Util.C. 4000 et seq. [requiring private carriers, i.e., not-for-hire carriers as defined in Veh.C. 408, who transport passengers, to register with Commission and procure liability insurance]; Pub.Util.C. 5503 [requiring adequate liability insurance for commercial air carriers].) (See 87 A.L.R.4th 638 [regulation of incidental provision of transportation services by party not primarily in that business]; on publicly owned transportation systems, see infra, §1093.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Pub.Util.C. 5800 et seq., the Digital Infrastructure and Video Competition Act, was added in 2006. The Act provides for the issuance of state franchises to provide cable and video services that would be administered by the PUC.

118 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

d. Public Utilities Regulated by Commission.

2. Public Transportation Authority.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1093

[§ 1093] Public Transportation Authority.

The view that the Commission has no jurisdiction over a utility operated by a municipality or other public corporation (see Pasadena v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1920) 183 C. 526, 529, 192 P. 25) was repudiated in Los Angeles Metropolitan Transit Authority v. Public Util. Com. (1963) 59 C.2d 863, 31 C.R. 463, 382 P.2d 583. The Los Angeles Metropolitan Transit Authority, a public transportation authority, operated as a common carrier of passengers, baggage, and mail in Los Angeles and three other counties. A 1961 amendment to its statute provided that it should be subject to the jurisdiction of the PUC with respect to safety rules and other regulations. The Authority, relying on statements in Pasadena v. Railroad Com., contended that Cal. Const., Art. XII, §23 (now Cal. Const., Art. XII, §3), only authorizes legislation to give regulatory jurisdiction over private transportation utilities, and sought review of a Commission order directing it to comply. Held, order affirmed. The constitutional provision refers to "every private corporation ... and every common carrier" (now "private corporations ... and common carriers"), and a publicly operated common carrier comes within this express language, interpreted in accordance with today's conditions (which have seen many of these public transportation authorities). Contrary language in Pasadena is disapproved. (59 C.2d 870.) (For contrary result in case dealing with municipally owned utilities, see Inyo v. Public Util. Com. (1980) 26 C.3d 154, 166, 161 C.R. 172, 604 P.2d 566, supra, §1085.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Santa Clara Valley Trans. Authority v. Public Util. Com. of Calif. (2004) 124 C.A.4th 346, 365, 21 C.R.3d 270 [Pub.Util.C. 1201 and 1202, which grant exclusive jurisdiction to PUC over railroad crossings in general, do not apply to local transit district's light rail crossings; PUC jurisdiction over transit district must be clearly provided by statute].

119 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

e. Public Utilities Outside Jurisdiction of Commission.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1094

[§ 1094] In General.

The fact that a business is a public utility does not necessarily mean that it is regulated by the Public Utilities Commission because the Commission has jurisdiction only over the utilities specified and defined in the statute (see supra, §1085). (See Cal. Const., Art. XII, §3 [listed businesses are declared to be public utilities "subject to control by the Legislature"]; In re Martinez (1943) 22 C.2d 259, 261, 138 P.2d 10.) Public utilities are, for this or other reasons, not subject to the Commission's jurisdiction in the following important situations:

(1) Interstate or Foreign Commerce. The PUC lacks jurisdiction where the utility is engaged in interstate or foreign commerce. (Pub.Util.C. 202; see People v. Yahne (1925) 195 C. 683, 686, 235 P. 50; Meyers v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1933) 218 C. 316, 319, 23 P.2d 26.)

(2) Municipal Water Company. A corporation or association organized for the purpose of delivering water to its stockholders or members at cost, and which delivers water to no others except its stockholders or members, the state or a state agency, a specified public agency, or another mutual water company, is not a public utility. (Pub.Util.C. 2705.) If it does deliver water to others, it becomes a public utility. (Pub.Util.C. 2702.)

In Yucaipa Water Co. No. 1 v. Public Util. Com. (1960) 54 C.2d 823, 9 C.R. 239, 357 P.2d 295, the mutual water company supplied water to lessees of shares, and expedited the leasing of shares to anyone who wanted water service. The court held that Pub.Util.C. 2702 controlled, and that the company was a public utility subject to regulation.

This rule was nullified by an amendment to Pub.Util.C. 2705, providing that a mutual water company may perform certain acts without becoming a public utility. These include: (a) delivery of water at cost to lessees of shares under a written lease approved by the company; (b) delivery of water at cost to land leased by a stockholder or member to a stranger under a written lease approved by the company; (c) transfer or exchange of water or water rights to or with another entity pursuant to state or federal law; (d) delivery of water to a stranger whose land is within or adjacent to the service area, under a written contract "in a bona fide water emergency, but for no longer than the existence of such emergency"; (e) delivery of water pursuant to a contract in settlement of litigation or in consideration of a water right, etc.

The Legislature has the power under Cal. Const., Art. XII, §5, to give the Commission regulatory authority over municipally owned utilities selling to outside customers; but no such legislation has been enacted, and neither statutory nor case law authority supports regulation of rates by the Commission. (Inyo v. Public Util. Com. (1980) 26 C.3d 154, 163, 161 C.R. 172, 604 P.2d 566.)

(3) Activity Outside Statutory Classification. In Television Transmission v. Public Util. Com. (1956) 47 C.2d 82, 85, 301 P.2d 862, petitioner operated a "community television antenna," consisting of an antenna at a high elevation to receive and transmit by coaxial cable to subscribers in a particular low area. By agreement, it used power and telephone poles for its wires. The Commission found it to be a telephone corporation, on the theory that, because the statute permits television broadcasts to be carried over telephone lines, any line carrying these broadcasts is a telephone line, and its operator is a telephone corporation. Held, the Commission had no jurisdiction. The community antenna is not operated "in connection with or to facilitate communication by telephone" (Pub.Util.C. 233), and, despite some similarities in television and telephony, their distinct differences are such that only the Legislature can bring petitioner's activity within the Commission's regulatory power. (47 C.2d 85.) (See Pub.Util.C. 767.5 [Commission's power to establish terms of agreement between public utility and cable television corporation concerning use of utility's equipment]; Pub.Util.C. 768.5 [Commission's power to regulate safety aspects of cable television operations]; 61 A.L.R.3d 1150 [community antenna television systems as subject to jurisdiction of public utility commission].)

On the other hand, in Commercial Communications v. Public Util. Com. (1958) 50 C.2d 512, 327 P.2d 513, the Commission took jurisdiction over the public mobile communication service (by radiotelephone) offered by Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. Held, order affirmed. The dissenters contended that the system was analogous to private interoffice or intrabuilding communication systems (50 C.2d 530), and competing private companies argued that Pacific was merely leasing radio equipment. The majority, however, thought that mobile communication was more akin to telephony than to radio broadcasting, pointing out that today a great deal of ordinary toll telephoning takes place over radio. Hence, the mobile communication is a telephone service, and if dedicated to public use is subject to the Commission's jurisdiction.

(4) Winter Sport Activities. The owner or operator of "any recreational conveyance such as a ski lift, ski tow, J-bar, T-bar, chair lift, aerial tramway," or other device is exempted from the definition of "common carrier." (Pub.Util.C. 212(c); see Squaw Valley Ski Corp. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 C.A.4th 1499, 1508, 3 C.R.2d 897 [purpose of statute is to exempt ski lift operators from PUC regulation as common carriers; for purposes of tort liability, ski lift operator is common carrier as defined in C.C. 2168].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

120 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

e. Public Utilities Outside Jurisdiction of Commission.

2. Exceptions Based on Source of Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1095

[§ 1095] Exceptions Based on Source of Power.

(1) Facilities Employing Unusual Technology. A facility that employs "cogeneration technology or produces power from other than a conventional power source" or "landfill gas technology" is excluded from the definition of "public utility." (Pub.Util.C. 216(d).) Facilities employing these technologies, or digester gas technology, are exempted from the definition of "electrical corporation" where the electricity generated is for limited use and not for general sale. (Pub.Util.C. 218(b), (c), (d).) Utilities developing, transmitting, or selling any form of heat derived from geothermal or solar resources or from cogeneration technology are also excluded from the definition of "public utility." (Pub.Util.C. 216(e).) (See Pub.Res.C. 25134 [defining "cogeneration" as "sequential use of energy for the production of electrical and useful thermal energy," sequence being either "thermal use followed by power production or the reverse"].)

(2) Sale of Compressed Natural Gas as Motor Vehicle Fuel. A facility that "sells compressed natural gas at retail to the public for use only as a motor vehicle fuel" is excluded from the definition of "public utility." (Pub.Util.C. 216(f).)

(3) Wholesale Generator. Facilities that are certified by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission as exempt wholesale generators under the federal statute are exempt under the California statute. (Pub.Util.C. 216(g).)

(4) Power Exchange. The ownership, control, operation, or management of an electric plant that is used for or participates in direct transactions to customers or sales into an independent power exchange under Pub.Util.C. 365, or the use or sale of electricity under Pub.Util.C. 218(b)-(d), is exempted. (Pub.Util.C. 216(h).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Facilities Employing Unusual Technology. Pub.Util.C. 218(e), added in 2008, provides an exemption from the definition of "electrical corporation" for independent solar energy producers, as defined in Pub.Util.C. 2868 et seq.

(3) Wholesale Generator. Pub.Util.C. 216(g), as amended in 2008, no longer specifies that facilities be certified as exempt by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

(4) Power Exchange. Pub.Util.C. 216(h), as amended in 2008, further provides an exemption of power plants for sales into markets established and operated by the Independent System Operator or other wholesale electricity market.

121 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

e. Public Utilities Outside Jurisdiction of Commission.

3. Specialized Transportation Vehicles.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1096

[§ 1096] Specialized Transportation Vehicles.

Several specialized types of transportation are outside the scope of the Public Utilities Code. They include:

(1) Vessel Loop Service. Pub.Util.C. 1007 requires a certificate of public convenience and necessity for the operation of a vessel for "transportation" of persons or property for compensation "between points in this State." In Golden Gate Scenic Steamship Lines v. Public Util. Com. (1962) 57 C.2d 373, 19 C.R. 657, 369 P.2d 257, petitioners operated sight-seeing vessels starting at a San Francisco wharf, traveling in a continuous loop around the bay, and returning to the point of origin. The Commission had long exercised unchallenged jurisdiction over this kind of service, but the court, in this first case to raise the issue, held that "transportation" means taking persons or property from one point to another, and "between points" means between two places; hence, the statute did not apply. (57 C.2d 378.) (See St. Helena v. Public Util. Com. (2004) 119 C.A.4th 793, 803, 14 C.R.3d 713 [following Golden Gate Scenic Steamship Lines; Napa Valley Wine Train, which provides round-trip excursion from Napa and is essentially "restaurant on wheels," does not provide "transportation" and is not public utility; fact that Wine Train could provide transportation in future does not entitle it to current public utility status].)

(2) Military Transportation. A vessel operated under contract with a federal agency, with one terminus in a military reservation, is not a common carrier. (Pub.Util.C. 212.)

(3) Medical Transportation Vehicles. These vehicles, including those used to transport developmentally disabled persons for regional centers, are expressly exempted from the regulations governing carriers. (Pub.Util.C. 5353(i).)

(4) Rental Car and Hotel Shuttles. Vehicles used by automobile rental companies, hotels, and other places of lodging, to transport customers to and from the particular facility are exempt. (Pub.Util.C. 5353(k), (l).)

(5) Balloon Chase Vehicles. Transportation of hot air balloon ride passengers in a balloon chase vehicle from the landing site back to the take-off site are exempt, provided that the balloon ride was conducted by a balloonist meeting specified qualifications. (Pub.Util.C. 5353(m).)

(6) Transportation Services for Youth Camps. Transportation services incidental to the operation of qualified youth camps are exempt. (Pub.Util.C. 5353(n).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

122 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

f. Private Utilities.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1097

[§ 1097] Private Utilities.

A person may engage in the business of transportation to serve particular persons by private contract; and, if this is his or her clear intention and practice, the business cannot be classified as a public utility. To be subject to regulation, it must appear that there was an undertaking or "holding out" to serve the public generally or some portion of it. (See Allen v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1918) 179 C. 68, 81, 175 P. 466; Forsyth v. San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. (1929) 208 C. 397, 404, 281 P. 620; California Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 C.2d 478, 490, 334 P.2d 887.)

This view is recognized in the statute. For example, Pub.Util.C. 216(a) adds a qualification to the enumeration of the types of public utilities regulated: "where the service is performed for, or the commodity is delivered to, the public or any portion thereof." (See supra, §1092.)

In 1919, the Auto Stage and Truck Transportation Act gave the Commission the power to regulate the business of carriers operating for compensation over public highways between fixed termini or over a regular route. F operated trucks on special private contract. The California court declared that the right to use the highways was a special privilege that could be withheld from anyone refusing to submit to regulation of his or her business. (Frost v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1925) 197 C. 230, 237, 240 P. 26.) But the U.S. Supreme Court held this to be a violation of due process on the ground that the state could not constitutionally force a private carrier to become a public utility; and, lacking this direct power, it could not accomplish the same result by the imposition of an unconstitutional condition. (Frost & Frost Trucking Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1926) 271 U.S. 583, 46 S.Ct. 605, 70 L.Ed. 1101.) (On doctrine of unconstitutional conditions, see supra, §§812, 813.)

The statute condemned in Frost compelled a private carrier to become a common carrier, with the necessarily incident obligations of dedication of property to public use and service to the public generally. However, the state has some authority to regulate private carriers under its power over the use of its highways. (See Pub.Util.C. 4000 et seq. [requiring private carriers to register with Commission].)

In Richfield Oil Corp. v. Public Util. Com. (1960) 54 C.2d 419, 6 C.R. 548, 354 P.2d 4, the dedication concept was reexamined, historically and analytically, and reaffirmed. Southern California Edison Co. (E Co.) needed a dependable supply of natural gas as boiler fuel for a new steam-electric generating plant in Ventura. Richfield Oil Co. (R Co.) was able and willing to commit itself to deliver this supply. Southern Counties Gas Co. (S Co.), a regulated public utility gas corporation serving that territory, objected; but it offered only an interruptible supply subject to being shut off when its regular domestic customers needed the full supply. The Commission determined that R Co. was a public utility, and entered a cease and desist order. R Co., a private company selling only to selected contract customers, was unwilling to become a regulated public utility gas corporation and refused to apply for or accept a certificate. The court stated the issue thus arising as follows: Assuming that R Co.'s service to E Co. could be constitutionally subjected to regulation, did this single service constitute a dedication to public use under the California Constitution and statutes? The answer was no, and the Commission's orders were annulled.

(a) The dedication test is authoritatively established. S Co. contended that the requirement was based on the view of federal due process discarded in Nebbia v. New York (1934) 291 U.S. 502, 54 S.Ct. 505, 78 L.Ed. 940, supra, §1072, and urged a reinterpretation of the statutes to give them their full constitutionally permissible meaning today. The court thought this argument far from frivolous. "If we were called upon to decide the question for the first time in the light of modern principles of constitutional law, we would have serious doubts that the broad language of the ... Public Utilities Act should be interpreted as including the limitation of dedication that the court found in the constitutional provision." (54 C.2d 428.) However, in an unbroken line of decisions the court has consistently interpreted the statutory definitions of public utilities "as applying only to utilities that have dedicated their property to public use." (54 C.2d 429.) Despite investigations and recommendations by the Commission on the unregulated status of gas producers who sell to regulated public utilities, no legislative change was made. Accordingly, "it must be concluded that the Legislature by its repeated reenactment of the definitions of public utilities without change has accepted and adopted dedication as an implicit limitation on their terms." (54 C.2d 430.)

(b) Important policy considerations make this a legislative and not a judicial problem: (1) Abandonment of the dedication requirement would subject every oil and gas producer selling for use or resale to the public to the Commission's extensive jurisdiction, creating manifold problems in the industry; e.g., in segregating oil production, for the Act does not regulate oil corporations. (2) It would subject to regulation many small producers whose activities are too restricted to merit public concern. (3) Many major oil and gas producers are foreign corporations that cannot lawfully transact public utility business in this state and the Legislature might well have considered that, in rejecting the dedication requirement, it would have rendered unlawful a substantial part of the development of the oil and gas industry in this state. (4) Even if regulation were extended to all oil and gas producers falling within the literal language of the Act, producers who used the gas themselves or sold it for manufacture into chemical products or other uses not specified in the Act would escape regulation. (5) There has been no sufficient misuse of gas or wasteful marketing under the present law to induce the Legislature to change it, and the Legislature can best determine the economic situation. (54 C.2d 431 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

123 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

g. Nature and Extent of Regulation.

1. Permission To Enter Business.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1098

[§ 1098] Permission To Enter Business.

A person or corporation desiring to commence a public utility business must first obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the Commission, which will not be granted where the field is already adequately covered. (Pub.Util.C. 1001 et seq., 1031 et seq.; see Oro Elec. Corp. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1915) 169 C. 466, 471, 147 P. 118; San Diego & Coronado Ferry Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1930) 210 C. 504, 507, 292 P. 640; California Motor Transport Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1947) 30 C.2d 184, 189, 180 P.2d 912.) In reaching a decision to grant or deny a certificate, the Commission should consider the antitrust implication of the contemplated project. (Northern Calif. Power Agency v. Public Util. Com. (1971) 5 C.3d 370, 377, 96 C.R. 18, 486 P.2d 1218; Industrial Communications Systems v. Public Util. Com. (1978) 22 C.3d 572, 581, 150 C.R. 13, 585 P.2d 863.)

An exception to the requirement of a certificate is found in the typical "grandfather clause," which permits utilities already in existence prior to the enactment of the regulatory statute to continue furnishing service to the extent of their prior operations, without making the ordinary showing to obtain a certificate. (See Pub.Util.C. 1031; Motor Transit Co. v. Railroad Com. (1922) 189 C. 573, 584, 209 P. 586; Golden Gate Ferry Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1928) 204 C. 305, 312, 268 P. 355; 4 A.L.R.2d 667 ["grandfather clause" regulating business].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

124 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

g. Nature and Extent of Regulation.

2. Regulation of Rates.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1099

[§ 1099] In General.

(1) Scope of Rate Regulation. The Commission, under various provisions of the Code, comprehensively regulates the rates of utilities within its jurisdiction. (See Pub.Util.C. 451 et seq.; Pub.Util.C. 874 [lower rates for "lifeline telephone service"]; Pub.Util.C. 2777 [exemption of electrical cooperative (corporation transmitting electricity exclusively to stockholders or members at cost) from Commission's rate-regulation authority]; Pub.Util.C. 728.7 [procedure for adjusting subscribers' rates resulting from change in amount paid by long distance telephone corporation to local corporation for use of its facilities]; California Mfrs. Assn. v. Public Util. Com. (1979) 24 C.3d 836, 841, 157 C.R. 676, 598 P.2d 836; Toward Util. Rate Normalization v. Public Util. Com. (1988) 44 C.3d 870, 878, 245 C.R. 8, 750 P.2d 787 [power to grant interim rate increases]; Schell v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1988) 204 C.A.3d 1039, 1045, 1047, 251 C.R. 667 [application of rate schedule to particular user is within exclusive jurisdiction of PUC]; on federal preemption of regulation of certain carriers, see supra, §1092; on rate regulation generally, see 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §60 et seq.)

In the exercise of its ratemaking authority, the Commission may construe a deed conveying real property and easements to a utility, "for the purpose of ascertaining facts relevant to the merits of the application for increased rates." (Camp Meeker Water System v. Public Util. Com. (1990) 51 C.3d 845, 850, 274 C.R. 678, 799 P.2d 758.) (See 18 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1053.)

In establishing rates, the Commission may abrogate private contracts between consumers and the utility. (Sutter Butte Canal Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1929) 279 U.S. 125, 49 S.Ct. 325, 73 L.Ed. 637.)

(2) Rate Adjustments. Neither statutory provisions nor constitutional restrictions prevent the Commission from annually adjusting rates to take into account savings to utilities from use of accelerated depreciation permitted by federal tax law. (Los Angeles v. Public Util. Com. (1975) 15 C.3d 680, 695, 697, 125 C.R. 779, 542 P.2d 1371; see Southern Calif. Gas Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1979) 23 C.3d 470, 153 C.R. 10, 591 P.2d 34 [investment tax credit benefits as justification for reduction of rate of return].)

(3) Retroactive Ratemaking. Retroactive ratemaking is beyond the Commission's powers. In Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1965) 62 C.2d 634, 44 C.R. 1, 401 P.2d 353, the Commission in July 1962, began an investigation of petitioner's rates. After extended hearings, it made a decision in June 1964, ordering a reduction and a retroactive refund to the time of commencement of the investigation (totalling $ 80 million). Held, this unprecedented order was beyond the statutory power of the Commission, and it was unnecessary to consider its constitutionality. Pub.Util.C. 728 only authorizes a determination of rates, after a hearing, to be thereafter in force, and the plain language of the section permits only prospective rate changes. (62 C.2d 654.) (See Los Angeles v. Public Util. Com. (1972) 7 C.3d 311, 357, 102 C.R. 313, 497 P.2d 785 ["Although there may be substantial policy reasons to permit retroactive rate making, there are also substantial reasons to the contrary, and it is for the Legislature to determine whether California should abandon its policy against retroactive rate making"].)

However, the Commission's requirement of billing credit to customers to amortize overcollections generated by a "fuel cost adjustment clause" is not illegal retroactive ratemaking. (Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1978) 20 C.3d 813, 817, 826, 144 C.R. 905, 576 P.2d 945 [distinguishing Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co.].)

(4) Commentary. Several annotations have commented on various aspects of rate regulation. (See 83 A.L.R.3d 963 [advertising costs as part of operating expenses for ratemaking purposes]; 16 A.L.R.4th 454 [amount paid to affiliate for goods or services as includable in utility's rate base and operating expenses]; 29 A.L.R.4th 615 [validity of preferential rates for elderly or low income persons]; 80 A.L.R.4th 280 [propriety of considering capital structure of parent or subsidiary in setting utility's rate return]; 41 A.L.R.5th 783 [public service commission's implied authority to order refund of public utility revenues].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

125 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

g. Nature and Extent of Regulation.

2. Regulation of Rates.

bb. Test of Reasonableness.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1100

[§ 1100] Test of Reasonableness.

A rate that is too low to bring in a reasonable return to the utility is said to be "confiscatory" and a taking of its property without due process. (See 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §133 et seq.) The power of federal commissions to fix rates of interstate utilities is limited by the Fifth Amendment in the same way the power of state commissions is by the Fourteenth. The traditional approach was to see whether the property of the utility devoted to the public use had been given a fair value for the purpose of the rate base. In other words, a return of 6% or 8% on its investment might be deemed fair or confiscatory, depending on whether the investment itself had been given a fair valuation. The factors determining value were held to be the actual cost of the property ("original" or "historical" cost plus the cost of permanent improvements), and reproduction or replacement cost (the cost of replacing the plant, less depreciation). (See Smyth v. Ames (1898) 169 U.S. 466, 18 S.Ct. 418, 434, 42 L.Ed. 819, 849.) Later cases made reproduction cost--usually a higher value--the significant and ordinarily controlling factor. (See McCardle v. Indianapolis Water Co. (1926) 272 U.S. 400, 47 S.Ct. 144, 148, 71 L.Ed. 316, 324; West v. Chesapeake & Potomac Tel. Co. of Baltimore (1935) 295 U.S. 662, 671, 55 S.Ct. 894, 898, 79 L.Ed. 1640, 1647.)

These approaches were repudiated in favor of a prudent investment or "actual legitimate cost" formula in Federal Power Com. v. Hope Natural Gas Co. (1944) 320 U.S. 591, 64 S.Ct. 281, 88 L.Ed. 333. A federal commission used the prudent investment theory instead of reproduction cost in determining value. In upholding the rate, the Supreme Court rejected all formulas as arbitrary and unrealistic, and substituted the loose and general test that the rate, no matter how determined, is valid if not "unjust and unreasonable from the investor or company viewpoint." (64 S.Ct. 288, 88 L.Ed. 345.) (64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §98 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

126 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

g. Nature and Extent of Regulation.

2. Regulation of Rates.

cc. Distribution of Rate Refunds.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1101

[§ 1101] Distribution of Rate Refunds.

In Assembly of Calif. v. Public Util. Com. (1995) 12 C.4th 87, 48 C.R.2d 54, 906 P.2d 1209, Pacific Bell received reimbursement of $ 7.9 million in 1983 from its parent corporation, AT&T, for cellular research expenses. However, Pacific Bell never refunded the money to its ratepayers. In 1993, the PUC ordered Pacific Telesis, then Pacific Bell's parent corporation, to pay $ 7.9 million, with interest at 18% from 1983 to 1993--a total of approximately $ 50 million--into a designated account, but reserved judgment on distribution of the funds. In 1995, the PUC ordered $ 11.6 million ($ 7.9 million in principal, with interest at 3.4%) refunded to current customers, with the balance to be allocated to schools and consumer education. Held, the 1995 order violated Pub.Util.C. 453.5.

(a) Pub.Util.C. 453.5 requires that refunds be paid to current customers, and, when practicable, to prior customers, on an equitable pro rata basis, i.e., in proportion to the amount originally paid. The legislative history makes it clear that the purpose of the statute was to remove the PUC's discretion to determine how utility refunds were to be distributed. (12 C.4th 100.)

(b) The PUC argues that its order is consistent with the statute, which recognizes that refunds may be allocated to customers who actually paid the overcharges. But the 1995 order did not apportion the refund between current and past customers; it ordered the entire amount refunded to current customers. Nothing in Pub.Util.C. 453.5 "suggests that, once having ordered the distribution of a rate refund to a utility's current customers, the Commission may refuse to refund to those customers (who are paid the refund principal) the interest that the Commission has assessed against the utility on the basis of the refund principal." (12 C.4th 101.)

(c) The interest on the refund is part of the refund. Neither Pub.Util.C. 453.5, nor any other statute, authorizes the PUC to order that only a portion of the interest be refunded to the ratepayers, or to use one interest rate to compute the interest that a utility must pay on rate overcharges and a different interest rate to determine the amount to be paid to customers with the refund principal. (12 C.4th 101.)

(d) The PUC argues that the difference between 3.4% and 18% should not be considered interest on the refund. The

PUC could have ordered a refund of $ 7.9 million with 3.4% interest, and then have pursued a separate proceeding against the utility, in which it could have sought to impose a punitive fine for failing to comply with the original reimbursement order. But the PUC did not do so. Having obtained the funds as interest on the $ 7.9 million principal, the PUC cannot later seek to characterize the funds as something other than interest. (12 C.4th 102, 103.)

(e) The PUC also relies on Pub.Util.C. 701, which confers on the PUC the power, in regulating utilities, to do all things necessary and convenient. However, it is settled that Pub.Util.C. 701 does not circumvent express statutory directives and restrictions imposed by the Public Utilities Code. Pub.Util.C. 453.5 clearly mandates that ratepayer refunds be paid to ratepayers, and Pub.Util.C. 701 does not authorize diversion of a portion of the interest component of a refund for an entirely different purpose. (12 C.4th 103, 104.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

127 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

g. Nature and Extent of Regulation.

3. Regulation of Service.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1102

[§ 1102] In General.

(1) Power of Commission. The Commission has authority to determine the kind, character, and adequacy of equipment, practices, and facilities of a utility necessary to meet public needs. (See Pub.Util.C. 761 et seq.; Southern Pac. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1953) 41 C.2d 354, 362, 260 P.2d 70.)

Many other statutes regulate the services provided by public utilities. (See Pub.Util.C. 2884 [telephone corporations must give subscribers option to delete "900 or 976 service"]; Pub.Util.C. 728.3 [requiring 30 days' notice prior to removing public telephone]; Pub.Util.C. 871 et seq. [telephone corporations must provide class of universal telephone service, at reduced rates, necessary to meet minimum residential communications needs]; Pub.Util.C. 882 [Commission must consider ways to ensure provision of advanced telecommunications services as ubiquitously and economically as possible]; Pub.Util.C. 2881 et seq. [provision of telecommunications devices for deaf or hearing-impaired persons]; Pub.Util.C. 2883 [requiring residential access to "911" emergency service]; Pub.Util.C. 2884.2 [jurisdiction of Commission over services to information providers who furnish harmful matter as defined in P.C. 313(a)]; Pub.Util.C. 2884.5 [requiring that access to harmful matter be on subscription basis only]; Pub.Util.C. 2885.6 [cellular telephone carriers must provide information on service quality and customer complaints]; Pub.Util.C. 2896 [telephone corporations must provide specified services to telecommunication customers].)

(2) No Discrimination. A public utility must serve its consumers equally and cannot discriminate between new and old customers. (See Butte County Water Users' Assn. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1921) 185 C. 218, 225, 196 P. 265; 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §33 et seq.) However, although a railroad company cannot discriminate in its operations as a carrier, it may validly contract to give an exclusive right to a taxi company to solicit transportation to and from the depot. (Demeter v. Annenson (1947) 80 C.A.2d 48, 55, 180 P.2d 998.)

Security deposit requirements for residential customers must be based solely on the applicant's creditworthiness. (See Govt.C. 60375.5 [district utilities]; Pub.Util.C. 779.5 [electrical, gas, heat, telephone, or water corporation]; Pub.Util.C. 10009.6 [municipally owned utility]; Pub.Util.C. 12822.6 [municipal utility district]; Pub.Util.C. 16481.6 [public utility district]; 28 Pacific L. J. 939 [discussing Pub.Util.C. 10009.6, 12822.6].)

(3) Termination of Service. The procedure for terminating residential service is specified by statute. (See Pub.Util.C. 779.1 [privately owned utilities]; Pub.Util.C. 10010.1 [municipally owned utilities]; Pub.Util.C. 12823.1 [municipal utility districts]; Pub.Util.C. 16482.1 [public utility districts].) (See Govt.C. 60370 et seq. [district utility must give notice to actual users before terminating residential service for nonpayment by owner].)

In Tovar v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1988) 201 C.A.3d 606, 247 C.R. 281, former residents of a motel sued their landlord and SoCal, a public utility, seeking damages for termination of service. The claim against SoCal was based on noncompliance with Pub.Util.C. 777, which requires 10 days' notice to actual users before a utility may terminate service because of nonpayment by the master customer. SoCal admittedly violated the statute by giving only 4 days' notice, but service was actually terminated the next day at the landlord's direction rather than for delinquent payment. Held, no cause of action was stated. The defective notice was not the cause of any damages that the users suffered because of termination of service. (201 C.A.3d 613, 614.) Their remedy is against the person who directed termination, not against the utility which merely complied with the direction. (201 C.A.3d 614.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

128 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

g. Nature and Extent of Regulation.

3. Regulation of Service.

bb. Adequate Service.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1103

[§ 1103] Adequate Service.

(1) In General. When a utility undertakes to serve a particular locality, it must furnish adequate service; e.g., a water company holding a franchise to serve a city must extend its system to meet the demands of an added population. (Lukrawka v. Spring Valley Water Co. (1915) 169 C. 318, 332, 146 P. 640; see 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §36.)

In Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Eshleman (1913) 166 C. 640, 137 P. 1119, the Commission made an order compelling a company maintaining a statewide telephone system to connect its lines with two companies maintaining local services in their respective counties. The order was invalid as a regulation beyond the scope of the dedication. (166 C. 667.) On the other hand, in Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1930) 209 C. 460, 470, 288 P. 775; Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1931) 283 U.S. 380, 51 S.Ct. 553, 558, 75 L.Ed. 1128, 1139, the Commission had the power to compel railroad companies to construct a union passenger station in Los Angeles. (See Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1953) 346 U.S. 346, 74 S.Ct. 92, 98 L.Ed. 51 [upholding Commission order authorizing grade separation improvements and allocating costs among railroads without relation to benefits accruing to property].)

In Southern Pac. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1953) 41 C.2d 354, 260 P.2d 70, petitioner filed an application to discontinue certain passenger trains. The Commission, investigating on its own motion, eventually ordered the service retained with an experimental direction to furnish modern cars and other improvements in service. Held, the order, based on conflicting evidence, was within the broad power of the Commission to determine matters of public convenience and necessity. (41 C.2d 366.)

(2) Territorial Test Repudiated for Carriers. The cases formerly declared a strict rule that the Commission cannot compel a utility to enter new territory, not embraced in its original dedication to public use. (See Hollywood Chamber of Commerce v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1923) 192 C. 307, 310, 219 P. 983; California Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 C.2d 478, 489, 492, 334 P.2d 887 [distinguishing territorial scope of dedication of railway companies from water, gas, electric power, and similar utilities].)

In Greyhound Lines v. Public Util. Com. (1968) 68 C.2d 406, 67 C.R. 97, 438 P.2d 801, the court reexamined the "rubric of territoriality in utility dedication law which has persisted, and in some cases, outworn its usefulness." (68 C.2d 415.) The Commission, acting under Pub.Util.C. 762, ordered petitioner to extend its commuter bus service in the San Francisco Bay area. Petitioner contended that its dedication did not embrace the new routes. Held, the order was valid; the theory of territoriality as a limit of dedication arose with stationary utilities, and is no longer properly applicable to carriers. The opinion makes two main points:

(a) The long-established rule remains that "the perimeter of commission authority to order service modifications is staked out by the limits of a utility's dedication or devotion of its property to public use." (68 C.2d 411.)

(b) The limitation should be applied no further than logic and precedent require, and not by mechanical formulas; the scope of dedication is determined by the fact that "the utility has dedicated its resources to a particular enterprise, venture or undertaking." (68 C.2d 415.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Pacific Bell Wireless, LLC v. Public Util. Com. (2006) 140 C.A.4th 718, 740, 44 C.R.3d 733 [requirement of Pub.Util.C. 451 that utility provide "adequate, efficient, just, and reasonable service" was sufficient notice to wireless company that it could be liable for reparations for charging early termination fee with no grace period, failing to disclose significant, known network problems, and making misrepresentations about service].

129 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

g. Nature and Extent of Regulation.

4. Other Regulatory Powers.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1104

[§ 1104] Other Regulatory Powers.

(1) In General. The powers of the Commission have been described as falling into two classes: (a) the broad power to regulate the relationship of the utility to the consumer, e.g., services and rates (see supra, §1099 et seq.); and (b) specific powers to regulate the manner in which the utility provides the services in order to safeguard its ability to serve the public efficiently and economically, e.g., approval of the sale or encumbrance of operative property, and the issuance of securities and use of funds realized from them. (See Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. of Calif. (1950) 34 C.2d 822, 827, 215 P.2d 441; Hempy v. Public Util. Com. (1961) 56 C.2d 214, 217, 14 C.R. 436, 363 P.2d 476 [Pub.Util.C. 851; authorization to transfer or encumber utility property]; Pub.Util.C. 2777 [exempting "electrical cooperative" from Commission's authority to regulate transfer or encumbrance of property].)

(2) Contracts of Utility. The California Commission, like others, has the authority to prevent a utility from passing on to consumers any unreasonable costs for materials and services. This is an indirect authority over utility contracts, because excessive payments under these contracts may be disallowed for rate fixing purposes. Where an operating utility makes contracts for excessive payments with a parent or holding company, some state statutes and the federal Act give direct power to disapprove the contract itself. (See Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com., supra, 34 C.2d 826.)

No express grant of power over utility contracts is contained in the California Act, and in Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com., it was held that none could be implied. The petitioner utility contracted to pay 1 percent of its gross receipts for services and materials obtained from its parent, American Tel. & Tel. Co. (owning 87.93% of the stock and dominating the utility). Petitioner conceded the Commission's power to disregard any excessive payment in fixing its rates, but challenged the Commission's order not to pay more than the reasonable cost or value. Held, order annulled. "If the commission is empowered to prescribe the terms of contracts and the practices of utilities and thus substitute its judgment as to what is reasonable for that of the management, it is empowered to undertake the management of all utilities subject to its jurisdiction." (34 C.2d 828.) (See 5 Stanf. L. Rev. 110.)

In General Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1983) 34 C.3d 817, 195 C.R. 695, 670 P.2d 349, an order requiring a telephone company to adopt a competitive bidding procedure for purchase of certain equipment was upheld. The court distinguished Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co., but added that later decisions "have cast serious doubt on the continuing vitality of much of the reasoning" of that case (the "invasion of management" rationale). (34 C.3d 824.)

(3) Liability Insurance. The Commission, in regulating private passenger carriers and commercial air carriers, may require procurement of adequate liability insurance. (Pub.Util.C. 4010 [motor carriers]; Pub.Util.C. 5503 [air carriers]; see Condor Ins. Co. v. Williamsburg Nat. Ins. Co. (1996) 49 C.A.4th 554, 559, 56 C.R.2d 693 [insured under defendant's insurance policy was additional insured under plaintiff's policy, by reason of P.U.C. endorsement to it, and its limit of $ 250,000 was not satisfied by payment of that amount under defendant's policy].)

(4) Solar Energy Development. An electrical or gas corporation desiring to manufacture, lease, sell, or otherwise own or control a solar energy system must submit a description of its proposed program, which it may pursue unless the Commission, within 45 days, orders the corporation to obtain authorization. Prior authorization is required when the utility intends to pass the costs of the system along to the ratepayers. No prior authorization is required where the system is owned or controlled for experimental or demonstration purposes. (Pub.Util.C. 2775.5 [designed to prevent privately owned public utilities from using their status as monopolies to dominate solar energy industry].)

(5) Telephone Directories and Advertising. The Commission has no jurisdiction over classified telephone directories or commercial advertising in them (except for consideration of revenues and expenses in establishing rates for other services). (Pub.Util.C. 728.2(a).) However, subject to specified limitations, the Commission may regulate the commercial advertising if it determines "that any federal action would impair its ability to investigate and consider revenues and expenses with regard to the acceptance and publication of telephone directory advertising for the purpose of establishing rates for other services offered by any telephone corporation." (Pub.Util.C. 728.2(b).)

(6) Insulation Financing Programs. In Southern Calif. Gas Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1979) 24 C.3d 653, 156 C.R. 733, 596 P.2d 1149, the court held that the Home Insulation Assistance and Financing Act, giving the Commission authority to permit insulation financing programs, did not authorize it to institute mandatory programs. (24 C.3d 657.) This decision was nullified by the enactment of Pub.Util.C. 2789 in 1979, providing that the Commission "may permit or require any electrical or gas corporation ... to institute energy conservation programs."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

130 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

h. Right To Abandon Operation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1105

[§ 1105] Right To Abandon Operation.

(1) General Rule. The Commission cannot force a utility to operate at a loss. The utility may withdraw, by dedicating (i.e., abandoning) its property to the public. (Lyon & Hoag v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1920) 183 C. 145, 146, 190 P. 795; Brooks-Scanlon Co. v. Railroad Com. of Louisiana (1920) 251 U.S. 396, 40 S.Ct. 183, 64 L.Ed. 323; cf. Fort Smith Light & Traction Co. v. Bourland (1925) 267 U.S. 330, 45 S.Ct. 249, 69 L.Ed. 631 [streetcar company was compelled to continue operating part of its line, though that part operated at loss]; see 10 A.L.R.2d 1121 [right of utility to discontinue line or branch because it is unprofitable]; 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §§58, 59.)

(2) Distinction: Transfer of Property. A utility cannot transfer its property to a third person without the consent of the Commission. (Pub.Util.C. 851; see Slater v. Shell Oil Co. (1940) 39 C.A.2d 535, 547, 103 P.2d 1043.) And a municipality can dispose of a public utility owned by it only by complying with a special statutory procedure. (See Pub.Util.C. 10051 et seq.; Hughes v. Torrance (1946) 77 C.A.2d 272, 278, 175 P.2d 290.)

The rule against transfer, however, is subject to two qualifications:

(a) Although a sale or other disposition without the Commission's consent is void, an executory contract of sale, made subject to Commission approval, is valid. (Transport Clearings-Bay Area v. Simmonds (1964) 226 C.A.2d 405, 420, 38 C.R. 116.)

(b) Pub.Util.C. 851 requires approval only of a voluntary sale. C.C.P. 1240.610 permits a city to take by eminent domain property already appropriated to public use for a more necessary use, and C.C.P. 1240.650 provides that a city's use is presumed a more necessary public use. (See infra, §§1194, 1195.) These statutes give unrestricted power, and no Commission approval is necessary for the involuntary transfer resulting from a condemnation suit. (People v. Fresno (1967) 254 C.A.2d 76, 81, 62 C.R. 79 [decided under former versions of statutes].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

131 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

i. Procedure Before Commission.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1106

[§ 1106] In General.

(1) Statutes and Rules. The Commission operates under both statutory provisions and its own published Rules of Practice and Procedure adopted pursuant to Pub.Util.C. 1701. (See Pub.Util.C. 454 [authorizing Commission to establish rules governing showing required for proposed rate increases]; Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Peevey (2003) 31 C.4th 781, 804, 3 C.R.3d 703, 74 P.3d 795, 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Administrative Proceedings, Supp., §10 [settlement agreement with PUC that maintained, rather than changed, rates for specified period did not violate Pub.Util.C. 454]; on general law, see 64 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Public Utilities §178 et seq.)

(2) Informal and Formal Procedures. Some matters are handled by the staff on informal application. More serious matters follow the statutory procedure of complaint, service of notice, and formal hearing before the Commission, a commissioner, or an administrative law judge. (Pub.Util.C. 311, 1701.1 et seq.)

The Commission may make a complaint on its own motion. And this procedure must be followed in cases involving the reasonableness of gas, electrical, water, or telephone rates, unless the Commission receives a complaint signed by a specified official of the city where the alleged violation occurred, or by not less than 25 customers of the service. (Pub.Util.C. 1702.)

Copies of the agenda and, on request, agenda item documents, must be made available to the public before commencement of a meeting at which commissioners vote on items on the public agenda. Publication of agenda documents, decisions, resolutions and rulings on the Internet also is mandated (Pub.Util.C. 311.5), as is the submission of informal complaints through electronic means (Pub.Util.C. 311.4). The Commission's website is <http://www.cpuc.ca.gov>.

(3) Expedited Procedure for Small Claims. An expedited procedure is available for complaints against electrical, gas, water, heat, or telephone companies, where the amount claimed is $ 5,000 or less. (a) No attorney may represent a party other than himself or herself. (b) No pleading other than the complaint and answer are necessary. (c) A hearing without a reporter must be held within 30 days after the answer is filed. (d) The parties have the right to file applications for rehearing pursuant to Pub.Util.C. 1731 (infra, §1107), and the rehearing is conducted under the regular procedure. (

Pub.Util.C. 1702.1.)

The statute contains a proviso: "[W]hen the public interest so requires, the commission or presiding officer may at any time prior to the filing of a decision, terminate the expedited complaint procedure and recalendar the matter for hearing under the commission's regular procedure." (Pub.Util.C. 1702.1(a).)

(4) Expedited Emergency Procedures. The Commission must adopt appropriate rules, regulations, or orders, consistent with existing rules and regulations, to establish expedited procedures to be followed in the event of an emergency as determined by the President under 42 U.S.C., §5191. (Pub.Util.C. 325(b); see Pub.Util.C. 325(c) [matters to be considered in developing expedited procedures]; Pub.Util.C. 325(d) [utility may not be required to incur costs under emergency order until arrangements are made for payment of costs]; Pub.Util.C. 325(e) [emergency procedures must preserve right to notice and opportunity to be heard].)

(5) Compensation of Intervening Customers. Public participation in Commission proceedings is encouraged by providing compensation for reasonable costs of participation, including advocate's and expert witness fees. (Pub.Util.C. 1801, 1801.3.) A customer may be awarded compensation if the customer's participation materially supplements, complements, or contributes to the presentation of another party and makes a substantial contribution to the Commission order or decision, and if failure to award compensation would impose a significant hardship. (Pub.Util.C. 1802.5, 1803.) And an intervenor may be awarded the fees and costs of obtaining judicial review following a decision in which the intervenor has substantially contributed. (Pub.Util.C. 1802(a).) (See Pub.Util.C. 1804 [procedure for requesting compensation]; Pub.Util.C. 1806 [computation of award]; Pub.Util.C. 1812 [group representing small agricultural customers is not rendered ineligible because it also represents large agricultural customers]; Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Public Util. Com. of Calif. (2004) 117 C.A.4th 1039, 1052, 12 C.R.3d 441 [advocacy group that participated in PUC ratemaking proceedings was entitled to compensation for work it performed in federal actions initiated by utilities seeking to overturn PUC decisions arising out of those proceedings].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Statutes and Rules.

Peevey case:

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Administrative Proceedings, §12.(5) Compensation of Intervening Customers. See Utility Reform Network v. Public Util. Com. (2008) 166 C.A.4th 522, 535, 82 C.R.3d 791 [although intervening advocacy group initially made substantial contribution to PUC decision, for which it was compensated, Pub.Util.C. 1801 et seq. did not require PUC to award compensation to intervenor for ensuing unsuccessful challenges to PUC's settlement with utility; critical factor is whether intervenor has assisted PUC in carrying out statutory mandate to regulate public utilities in public interest, regardless of whether intervenor's position is for or against that of PUC].

132 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

i. Procedure Before Commission.

2. Hearing and Determination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1107

[§ 1107] Hearing and Determination.

(1) Conduct of Hearing. At a formal hearing, the proceedings are reported and a record is made for purposes of review. (Pub.Util.C. 1706; see infra, §1108.) The "technical rules of evidence need not be applied," and "[n]o informality in any hearing, investigation, or proceeding or in the manner of taking testimony shall invalidate" any action taken. (Pub.Util.C. 1701(a); see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Introduction, §§53, 55.) The Administrative Procedure Act (Govt.C. 11400) does not apply to hearings by the Commission. (Pub.Util.C. 1701(b).)

If a computer model, i.e., a computer program involving a utility's internal or complex functions (Pub.Util.C. 1821), is the basis for evidence presented in a hearing, it must be made available to the Commission and the parties for cross-examination or rebuttal, "subject to applicable rules of evidence." (Pub.Util.C. 1822(a).)

The parties may submit written arguments, but the Commission need not permit oral argument. (See Dyke Water Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1961) 56 C.2d 105, 124, 14 C.R. 310, 363 P.2d 326.)

(2) Administrative Law Judge or Assigned Commissioner. The evidence presented at a hearing must be taken by an administrative law judge or commissioner in accordance with the Commission's rules of practice and procedure. (Pub.Util.C. 311(c); see Pub.Util.C. 309.6 [Commission must adopt procedures on disqualification of administrative law judges due to bias or prejudice similar to those of other state agencies and superior courts, with opportunity for public review and comment].)

The proposed decision, setting forth recommendations, findings, and conclusions, must be filed with the Commission and served on the parties "without undue delay," but in no event later than 90 days after the case was submitted for decision. (Pub.Util.C. 311(d).) In a case initiated by a customer complaint and involving an electrical, gas, telephone, railroad, or water corporation, or a highway carrier, the Commission may specify that no proposed decision need be prepared, unless it finds that such a decision is required in the public interest. (Pub.Util.C. 311(f).)

(3) Commission Decision. Except for decisions filed after an expedited hearing under Pub.Util.C. 1702.1 (supra, §1106), the Commission's decision must contain separately stated findings of fact and conclusions of law. (Pub.Util.C.

1705; see California Motor Transport Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1963) 59 C.2d 270, 28 C.R. 868, 379 P.2d 324; Greyhound Lines v. Public Util. Com. (1967) 65 C.2d 811, 813, 56 C.R. 484, 423 P.2d 556; Southern Pac. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1968) 68 C.2d 243, 65 C.R. 737, 436 P.2d 889.) It takes effect 20 days after service unless the time is extended. (Pub.Util.C. 1705.)

In issuing its decision, the Commission may adopt, modify, or set aside the proposed decision of the administrative law judge or assigned commissioner. (Pub.Util.C. 311(d).)

Any item that appears on the Commission's agenda as an alternate item to a proposed decision must be served on the parties without undue delay and must be subject to public review and comment before it is voted on. The Commission is required to adopt rules providing for the time and manner of review and comment, and the rescheduling of the item on a subsequent public agenda. (Pub.Util.C. 311(e).) A 30-day period for public review and comment is required prior to voting on a Commission decision not subject to Pub.Util.C. 311(e). (Pub.Util.C. 311(g).)

The final decision of the Commission has res judicata effect. (Pub.Util.C. 1709; see People v. Western Air Lines (1954) 42 C.2d 621, 630, 268 P.2d 723; 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §301.) But decisions rendered in expedited hearings under Pub.Util.C. 1702.1 are not binding on the Commission or courts. (Pub.Util.C. 1705.)

(4) Rehearing. The Commission's decision is subject to rehearing (Pub.Util.C. 1731 et seq.), and an application for rehearing is a prerequisite to judicial review (Pub.Util.C. 1731(b), 1756).

(5) Rescission or Amendment of Order. "The commission may at any time, upon notice to the parties, and with opportunity to be heard as provided in the case of complaints, rescind, alter, or amend any order or decision made by it." (Pub.Util.C. 1708.) Pub.Util.C. 1708 is not satisfied by an invitation to comment or submit written objections; a party who requests a hearing is entitled to be heard and to offer evidence. (California Trucking Assn. v. Public Util. Com. (1977) 19 C.3d 240, 244, 137 C.R. 190, 561 P.2d 280.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Commission Decision. Pub.Util.C. 311(e), as amended in 2005, further requires the alternate item to be "accompanied by a digest that clearly explains the substantive revisions to the proposed decision." Res judicata:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §358.

133 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

j. Review of Commission's Orders.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1108

[§ 1108] In General.

(1) Review by Court of Appeal or Supreme Court. A final decision of the Commission is subject to review in California only by a statutory writ of review in the Court of Appeal or Supreme Court. (Pub.Util.C. 1756(a), 1759; see Pub.Util.C. 1756(f) [providing exceptions for some actions involving water corporations]; Pub.Util.C. 1759(b) [mandamus may issue from Supreme Court and Court of Appeal]; Pacific Bell v. Public Util. Com. (2000) 79 C.A.4th 269, 279, 93 C.R.2d 910 [amendment of Pub.Util.C. 1756 to provide for petition to Court of Appeal did not change nature of review]; 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §17.)

A party must seek review within 30 days after denial of the application for rehearing or, if the application was granted, after issuance of the decision on rehearing, or within 120 days after the application is granted if no decision on rehearing has been issued. (Pub.Util.C. 1756(a).) Failure to seek review within the time specified cannot be remedied by filing a petition to reopen, where the review sought is of the basic decision. (Northern Calif. Assn. to Preserve Bodega Head & Harbor v. Public Util. Com. (1964) 61 C.2d 126, 135, 37 C.R. 432, 390 P.2d 200.)

Venue of a petition filed in the Court of Appeal is in the judicial district where the petitioner resides or has its principal place of business in California. (Pub.Util.C. 1756(d).) A party may seek from the Supreme Court an order transferring related actions to a single appellate district. (Pub.Util.C. 1756(e).)

(2) Effect of Denial of Writ. Consumers Lobby Against Monopolies v. Public Util. Com. (1979) 25 C.3d 891, 160 C.R. 124, 603 P.2d 41, summarizes the law on the effect of denial of a petition for a writ without opinion.

(a) Denial is res judicata. Because a petition for writ of review is the sole method of obtaining judicial review of the Commission's decision (infra, §1109), it is the equivalent of an appeal; hence, denial of the petition is a decision on the merits both as to the law and the facts, and is res judicata. (25 C.3d 900, 901, discussing People v. Western Air Lines (1954) 42 C.2d 621, 630, 268 P.2d 723.)

(b) Denial has no stare decisis effect. A case is only authority for a point decided, and the ratio decidendi is ordinarily discovered by examining the court's opinion (see 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §945). Where the decision is without opinion--as in the case of summary denial of a petition for writ of review--it cannot be said that it is a ruling on the substantive grounds presented: (1) The petition must be denied on procedural grounds if prerequisites to the court's jurisdiction are not met. (2) A petitioner may not rely on a ground that he or she did not set forth in the petition for rehearing, and the denial may be on that procedural ground. (3) The petition may be denied for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. (4) The petition may be denied because the issue has been rendered moot by supervening events. (5) The petition may be denied because it prematurely seeks review of an interlocutory ruling rather than a final order or decision of the Commission. (6) The petition may be denied because the petitioner was not a person aggrieved by the Commission's action. (25 C.3d 902, 903, 904.) "It would therefore be sheer speculation for litigants to rely on such decisions as precedents. In addition, such reliance may well prove a trap for the unwary; members of the public who have potentially meritorious petitions for review to present to this court may be dissuaded from doing so by the mere fact that we declined to take an earlier case allegedly raising the same question." (25 C.3d 905.) (See Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (2004) 118 C.A.4th 1174, 1193, 13 C.R.3d 630 [following Consumers Lobby]; 39 Hastings L. J. 1147 [is court's denial of writ of review decision on merits?].)

(3) Required Showing for Stay. A party seeking a stay of a Commission decision must present, by verified petition, specific evidence showing that "immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result" if the decision is not stayed. (Pub.Util.C. 1763.) Of course some injury, loss, or damage is inherent in any adverse decision of the Commission, especially where a certificate of public convenience and necessity has been revoked, but it is not sufficient "merely to present evidence of the asset value of its permits and the revenue a petitioner might lose each day." A petitioner must help the court "to understand the details of its financial situation," such as by advising the court "of its income from all sources and expenses and reserves, how long they will last, and any measures available to cut costs or to increase income," and its prospects for borrowing money to keep the business afloat during the review period. (North Shuttle Service v. California Public Util. Com. (1998) 67 C.A.4th 386, 395, 79 C.R.2d 46.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Review by Court of Appeal or Supreme Court.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Extraordinary Writs, §17.(2) Effect of Denial of Writ.

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Appeal, §509.

134 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

j. Review of Commission's Orders.

2. Exclusive Method.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1109

[§ 1109] Exclusive Method.

In Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1963) 60 C.2d 426, 34 C.R. 673, 386 P.2d 233, S's telephone service was disconnected by petitioner, pursuant to a Commission regulation, for asserted illegal use. The Commission's general decision provided that the exclusive remedy of the aggrieved party was a complaint with the Commission, and that no action at law or equity should accrue against a utility as a result of action taken pursuant to the regulation. S instituted proceedings before the Commission, which found that his phones were not being used for any unlawful service, and ordered resumption; but it also found that petitioner acted on reasonable cause. Then S sued petitioner for damages. Held, prohibition granted to restrain the court from proceeding to trial; Pub.Util.C. 1756 et seq. restrict the power of the courts to review of Commission decisions by the Supreme Court (and now also by the Court of Appeal, supra, §1108). (60 C.2d 429.)

In Pellandini v. Pacific Limestone Products (1966) 245 C.A.2d 774, 54 C.R. 290, plaintiff trucking company made a contract with defendant manufacturer purporting to be a purchase of limestone products. The Commission found it to be a contract for transportation used as a device to undercharge defendant, and ordered plaintiff to sue defendant for the undercharge. The action was brought, and the trial judge decided, contrary to the Commission, that the contract was one of sale. Held, reversed. Defendant contended that it was not a party to the Commission proceeding and would be denied due process if bound by the order. But it had knowledge of the proceeding, and failed either to seek intervention or retroactive rescission of the decision. (245 C.A.2d 778.)

In People v. Ryerson (1966) 241 C.A.2d 115, 50 C.R. 246, the Commission ordered P, a common carrier, to sue A Corp. for undercharges. P sued A Corp., A Corp. cross-complained for reformation of the freight bills, and thereafter the parties stipulated that the bills by mistake did not show the true agreement. Accordingly, pursuant to the stipulation, the court entered judgment that A Corp. owed nothing to P, and that the bills should be reformed. The Commission, in the name of the People, filed this action to vacate the judgment for extrinsic fraud and excess of jurisdiction. Held, judgment for defendant carrier on demurrer reversed. The lower court's decision in effect reviewed and annulled the Commission's order, and was in excess of jurisdiction. (241 C.A.2d 122.) (See Pratt v. Coast Trucking (1964) 228 C.A.2d 139, 149, 39 C.R. 332; Union City v. Southern Pac. Co. (1968) 261 C.A.2d 277, 279, 67 C.R. 816; Dollar-A-Day Rent-A-Car Systems v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1972) 26 C.A.3d 454, 460, 102 C.R. 651.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

135 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

G. Regulation of Business.

7. Public Utilities in California.

j. Review of Commission's Orders.

3. Scope of Review.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1110

[§ 1110] Scope of Review.

(1) In General. In a complaint or enforcement proceeding, or a "ratemaking or licensing decision of specific application that is addressed to particular parties," review may not extend further than to determine whether any of the following occurred:

(a) The Commission acted without, or in excess of, its powers or jurisdiction. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(a)(1); see Pacific Bell v. Public Util. Com. (2000) 79 C.A.4th 269, 282, 93 C.R.2d 910 ["Whether utility may proceed by an advice letter or instead must file a formal application for a particular tariff change is a decision peculiarly within the PUC's expertise and judgment," and not that of Court of Appeal].)

(b) The Commission has not proceeded in the manner required by law. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(a)(2).)

(c) The Commission's decision is not supported by the findings. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(a)(3).)

(d) The findings in the Commission's decision are not supported by substantial evidence in light of the whole record. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(a)(4).)

(e) The Commission's order or decision was procured by fraud or was an abuse of discretion. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(a)(5).)

(f) The Commission's order or decision violates a right of the petitioner under the U.S. or California Constitutions. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(a)(6).)

In a proceeding other than one subject to the standard of review under Pub.Util.C. 1757, review does not extend further than to determine, on the basis of the certified record, whether any of the following occurred:

(a) The Commission's order or decision was an abuse of discretion. (Pub.Util.C. 1757.1(a)(1); see Vernon v. Public Util. Com. of Calif. (2001) 88 C.A.4th 672, 678, 106 C.R.2d 145 [burden was on city as opponent of rail yard expansion to show that expansion was unreasonable, and Commission did not abuse its discretion in failing to require railroad to prepare EIR or otherwise address environmental impact of expansion and measures to mitigate that impact].)

- (b) The Commission has not proceeded in the manner required by law. (Pub.Util.C. 1757.1(a)(2).)
- (c) The Commission acted without, or in excess of, its powers or jurisdiction. (Pub.Util.C. 1757.1(a)(3).)
- (d) The Commission's decision is not supported by the findings. (Pub.Util.C. 1757.1(a)(4).)
- (e) The Commission's order or decision was procured by fraud. (Pub.Util.C. 1757.1(a)(5).)
- (f) The Commission's order or decision violates petitioner's constitutional rights. (Pub.Util.C. 1757.1(a)(6).)

(2) Water Corporations. Pub.Util.C. 1757 does not apply to ratemaking or licensing decisions of water corporations. In reviewing decisions pertaining solely to water corporations, review is limited to determining whether the Commission has regularly pursued its authority, including whether the order or decision violated petitioner's constitutional rights. (Pub.Util.C. 1757.1(b).)

In Ventura County Waterworks Dist. No. 5 v. Public Util. Com. (1964) 61 C.2d 462, 39 C.R. 8, 393 P.2d 168, C Water Co. applied for a certificate to extend its public utility water service to an area served by petitioner district (not subject to the Commission's jurisdiction). In petitioner's hearing under Pub.Util.C. 1005 to protest C Water Co.'s application, the Commission excluded all evidence that petitioner could provide a better service. Held, order annulled. Ordinarily, errors in admission or exclusion of evidence do not constitute a failure to regularly pursue authority, but when they result in an unfair hearing they do. (61 C.2d 464.) (See 38 So. Cal. L. Rev. 144.)

(3) No New Trial or Evidence. No new or additional evidence may be introduced on review by the court. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(a), 1757.1(c).) Further, the court may not hold a trial de novo, or take evidence other than as specified by the California Rules of Court, or exercise its independent judgment on the evidence. (Pub.Util.C. 1757(b).)

(4) Constitutional Right. Notwithstanding Pub.Util.C. 1757 and 1757.1, where the validity of an order or decision is challenged on the ground that petitioner's constitutional rights have been violated, the Court of Appeal or Supreme Court must "exercise independent judgment on the law and the facts," and the Commission's findings material to determination of the constitutional issue are not final. (Pub.Util.C. 1760; see Southern Pac. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1953) 41 C.2d 354, 360, 260 P.2d 70 [this does not mean that court will resolve conflicts in evidence on disputed fact questions].)

(5) Miscellaneous Findings. Findings unsupported by any competent evidence cannot sustain an order. (See Southern Pac. Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1939) 13 C.2d 125, 128, 87 P.2d 1052; California Water & Tel. Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1959) 51 C.2d 478, 494, 334 P.2d 887.) And an order that is based on inconsistent findings on the principal issue involved, leading to an erroneous conclusion of law, will be annulled. (California Portland Cement Co. v. Public Util. Com. (1957) 49 C.2d 171, 176, 315 P.2d 709.) A finding that a business is a public utility may always be examined, because it goes to the basis of the Commission's jurisdiction. (See Allen v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1918) 179 C. 68, 74, 175 P. 466; Samuelson v. Public Util. Com. (1951) 36 C.2d 722, 728, 227 P.2d 256; supra, §1097.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(5) Miscellaneous Findings. An order will be annulled if it is beyond the scope of the issues identified in the preliminary scoping memo for a rulemaking proceeding. (See Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Public Util. Com. (2006) 140 C.A.4th 1085, 1104, 45 C.R.3d 485 [PUC violated own rules and failed to proceed in manner required by law by adopting prevailing wage requirement in energy utility construction projects; issue was beyond scope of preliminary scoping memo in proceeding set to address prohibitions against bid shopping and reverse auctions].)

136 of 136 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XII. POLICE POWER

H. Regulation of Labor Relations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1111

[§ 1111] Regulation of Labor Relations.

Statutory regulation of labor relations is extensively treated in 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment. The constitutionality of most of these laws has been recognized for many years.

(1) Hours of Labor. The power to regulate hours of labor in any business or occupation is unquestioned. (See Sturges & Burn Mfg. Co. v. Beauchamp (1913) 231 U.S. 320, 34 S.Ct. 60, 58 L.Ed. 245 [child labor]; Miller v. Wilson (1915) 236 U.S. 373, 35 S.Ct. 342, 59 L.Ed. 628 [8-hour day for women]; Bunting v. Oregon (1917) 243 U.S. 426, 37 S.Ct. 435, 61 L.Ed. 830 [10-hour day in mills or factories, with increased pay for overtime, not limited to women or children, but extended to all persons]; Radice v. New York (1924) 264 U.S. 292, 44 S.Ct. 325, 68 L.Ed. 690 [working hours for women]; 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §360 et seq.)

(2) Minimum Wages. For many years the Supreme Court refused to apply the principles supporting legislation on hours of labor to establishment of minimum wages, and held these measures to be an unconstitutional interference with liberty of contract. (See Adkins v. Children's Hosp. of the Dist. of Columbia (1923) 261 U.S. 525, 43 S.Ct. 394, 67 L.Ed. 785; Morehead v. New York (1936) 298 U.S. 587, 56 S.Ct. 918, 80 L.Ed. 1347.) These cases were overruled in West Coast Hotel Co. v. Parrish (1937) 300 U.S. 379, 57 S.Ct. 578, 81 L.Ed. 703, 708, which established the validity of minimum wage legislation for women and minors. (See 39 A.L.R.2d 740 [private employment]; 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §382 et seq.)

(3) Payment of Wages. Laws relating to the manner of paying wages, e.g., requiring payment in cash rather than scrip, have been upheld on the theory of the need of workers for ready purchasing power. (Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison (1901) 183 U.S. 13, 22 S.Ct. 1, 46 L.Ed. 55.) Similarly, the California Semi-Monthly Pay Day Law (Lab.C. 204), requiring 2 regular paydays each month, is valid. (In re Moffett (1937) 19 C.A.2d 7, 12, 64 P.2d 1190.) And a statutory requirement that miners be paid on the basis of weight of coal as originally produced in the mine was sustained. (McLean v. Arkansas (1909) 211 U.S. 539, 29 S.Ct. 206, 53 L.Ed. 315.) (See O.G. Sansone Co. v. Department of Trans. (1976) 55 C.A.3d 434, 447, 461, 127 C.R. 799, 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §385 [upholding Lab.C. 1771, requiring payment of prevailing wage to persons employed on public works]; 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §394 et seq.)

(4) Labor Unions and Labor Disputes. The legislative power to protect labor organizations, the unorganized worker, the union member, and the public, is firmly established, and is illustrated by the following types of statutes:

- (a) Protection of right to join labor union. (See 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §546.)
- (b) Prohibition of closed shop. (See 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §§545, 630.)
- (c) Limitations on right to engage in concerted action; e.g., statutes prohibiting jurisdictional strikes or secondary boycotts. (See 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §§632, 640.)
- (5) Workers' Compensation Acts. These statutes, which establish liability without fault on the theory that industry may be required to bear the burden of compensation for industrially caused disability or death, are valid. (See 2 Summary (10th), Workers' Compensation, §5.)
- (6) Freedom From Interference With Political Activities. Statutes protecting or furthering the exercise of the right of suffrage and political association are valid. (See Day-Brite Lighting v. Missouri (1952) 342 U.S. 421, 72 S.Ct. 405, 407, 96 L.Ed. 469, 472 [time off to vote, with pay]; Benane v. International Harvester Co. (1956) 142 C.A.2d Supp. 874, 877, 299 P.2d 750 [same]; Kouff v. Bethlehem-Alameda Shipyard (1949) 90 C.A.2d 322, 202 P.2d 1059 [prohibition against discharge for absence while serving as election officer on election day]; Lockheed Aircraft Corp. v. Superior Court (1946) 28 C.2d 481, 486, 171 P.2d 21 [prohibition against interfering with employees' political activities].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

1 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

1. Nature of Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1112

[§ 1112] Nature of Power.

(1) Sovereign Power. Eminent domain is the right of the people or government to take private property for public use. (See C.C.P. 1240.010, infra, §1175.) It is a sovereign power that cannot be contracted away. (Contributors to Pennsylvania Hosp. v. Philadelphia (1917) 245 U.S. 20, 38 S.Ct. 35, 62 L.Ed. 124.)

Because the power is inherent in sovereignty, the Constitutions describe it indirectly in terms of the guarantee of just compensation. (See People v. Chevalier (1959) 52 C.2d 299, 304, 340 P.2d 598.) And the right to compensation arises in two situations: (a) Where the governmental agency or other authorized person brings a condemnation action to take property. (See infra, §1170 et seq.) (b) Where public works or other governmental activities are undertaken with resulting injury to property, and the owner brings an "inverse condemnation" action to recover damages. (See infra, §1143 et seq.)

(2) Necessity of Compensation. Under the Fifth Amendment to the federal Constitution no private property shall "be taken for public use, without just compensation." And, under the California Constitution, "[p]rivate property may be taken or damaged for public use only when just compensation ... has first been paid to, or into court for, the owner." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §19.) (See Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern Calif. v. Adams (1940) 16 C.2d 676, 680, 107 P.2d 618; Needles v. Griswold (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1881, 1888, 8 C.R.2d 753, infra, §1163 [temporary taking requires compensation]; 23 Ecology L. Q. 577 [ethical approaches to takings and compensation analysis]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §§6 et seq., 112 et seq.)

However, even in the absence of a limitation in the state Constitution, a state cannot take private property for public use without compensation. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. Co. v. Chicago (1897) 166 U.S. 226, 17 S.Ct. 581, 586, 41 L.Ed. 979, 984, held that such a taking would violate the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. (See 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §7.)

(3) Revision of Eminent Domain Law. Pursuant to a recommendation of the Law Revision Commission, the 1975 Legislature enacted a new Eminent Domain Law (C.C.P. 1230.010 et seq.). (See infra, §1170 et seq.) Conforming amendments and repeals were made in many sections of other codes. Other statutes outside the Eminent Domain Law also may apply to the acquisition of land for various public purposes. (See, e.g., C.C. 1001, infra, §1178 [acquisition of appurtenant easement by eminent domain]; Fish & Game C. 1001 [acquisition of land for access roads to coastal waters]; Pub.Res.C. 8030 [limiting state and federal lands in unincorporated areas that may be taken by eminent domain].)

(4) Texts and Commentary. The reported decisions in this field are voluminous, and the substantive law and procedure are extensively covered in textbooks, law notes, and practice works. (See Cal. Civil Practice, 2 Real Property Litigation, §15:1 et seq. [actions involving eminent domain and inverse condemnation]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, Chap. 6; Nichols on Eminent Domain (Rev. 3d ed.); 2 Rotunda, §15.10 et seq.; 2 Tribe, Chap. 9; 24 Ecology L. Q. 57 [Application of Takings Law to the Regulation of Unpatented Mining Claims]; 24 Ecology L. Q. 187 [rise of state takings legislation]; 34 San Diego L. Rev. 193 [identifying elements of land use regulations that present best case for government compensation]; 25 Ecology L. Q. 465 [strategic litigating in land use cases]; 47 A.L.R.3d 1267 [consideration of ecological effects]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain.) (For the Model Eminent Domain Code, see 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 5 et seq.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.226 et seq., 279 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Necessity for Compensation. Cal. Const., Art. I, §19, was amended by Proposition 99 in 2008. (See Supp., infra, §1122.) The provision quoted in the text now provides that private property "may be taken or damaged for a public use and only when just compensation ... has first been paid to, or into court for, the owner." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §19(a)).(4) Texts and Commentary. See 2 Rotunda 4th, §15.10 et seq.; 121 Harv. L. Rev. 1467 [suggesting establishment of land assembly districts]; 45 San Diego L. Rev. 633, 729, 761 [Symposium on meaning of Takings Clause]; 54 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1681 [What Federalism Tells Us About Takings Jurisprudence].Correction: Page 747, subdivision (3), line 8, "Fish & Game C. 1001" should be "Fish & Game C. 1009".

2 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

2. Property That May Be Taken.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1113

[§ 1113] Property That May Be Taken.

(1) General Rule. C.C.P. 1240.110 authorizes the acquisition of any necessary interest in property, except as limited by statute. (See Johnston v. Sonoma County Agricultural Preservation & Open Space Dist. (2002) 100 C.A.4th 973, 986, 123 C.R.2d 226, infra, §1170 [eminent domain law permits condemnation of open-space property]; infra, §1182.)

(2) Limitations. A number of statutory provisions restrict the taking of property used for specified purposes. The following are illustrative:

(a) Property appropriated to a public use may only be taken for a compatible or more necessary public use. (See C.C.P. 1240.510 et seq. [compatible use], infra, §1192; C.C.P. 1240.610 et seq. [more necessary public use], infra, §1194.) (See Pub.Res.C. 5006.2 [property in Aptos Forest may not be taken without specific permission of Legislature]; Pub.Res.C. 5074.3 [limited power to acquire property for recreational trails]; Pub.Res.C. 8030 [certain state and federal lands in unincorporated areas may not be taken by eminent domain].)

(b) An existing golf course may not be taken by a city for golf course purposes. (Govt.C. 37353(c).)

(c) An existing airport controlled by a political subdivision may not be taken without the consent of the political subdivision. (Pub.Util.C. 21632.)

(d) Cemetery land may not be taken for a right of way without consent. (Health & Saf.C. 8134, 8560, 8560.5.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Rule. See Bronco Wine Co. v. Jolly (2005) 129 C.A.4th 988, 1030, 29 C.R.3d 462, Supp., infra, §1153 [federal Certificate of Label Approval (COLA) authorizing bottling and packing of wine for introduction into interstate commerce does not constitute property under Takings Clause; COLA does not confer right to market wines and is simply part of bundle of rights possessed by owner of brand name]; 41 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1897 [condemning conservation easements].

3 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

3. Who May Exercise Power.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1114

[§ 1114] In General.

(1) Statutory Authorization Required. "The power of eminent domain may be exercised to acquire property for a particular use only by a person authorized by statute to exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire such property for that use." (C.C.P. 1240.020, infra, §1177; see Cox Cable San Diego v. Bookspan (1987) 195 C.A.3d 22, 27, 240 C.R. 407, infra, §1127.) Where the power in a particular situation is conferred by statute on one state agency, that agency has the exclusive right to bring the action, and the state itself cannot sue. (People v. Superior Court (1937) 10 C.2d 288, 298, 73 P.2d 1221.)

(2) Illustrations. The codes contain numerous provisions authorizing exercise of the power by various entities. (See C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §6.6 et seq.; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §17 et seq.) The following are illustrative:

(a) The state (Govt.C. 15854).

(b) Cities (Govt.C. 37350.5) and counties (Govt.C. 25350.5). (See infra, §1115.)

(c) School districts (Educ.C. 1047) and nonprofit educational institutions of collegiate grade (Educ.C. 94500). (See University of So. Calif. v. Robbins (1934) 1 C.A.2d 523, 527, 37 P.2d 163.)

(d) Nonprofit hospitals (Health & Saf.C. 127050) and cemeteries (Health & Saf.C. 8501).

(e) Mutual water companies (Pub.Util.C. 2729) and privately owned public utilities (Pub.Res.C. 25528; Pub.Util.C. 610 et seq.). (See San Bernardino Valley Mun. Water Dist. v. Meeks & Daley Water Co. (1964) 226 C.A.2d 216, 222, 38 C.R. 51 [condemnation by municipal water district of water rights of mutual water companies under Municipal Water District Act of 1911]; Unocal Calif. Pipeline Co. v. Conway (1994) 23 C.A.4th 331, 335, 28 C.R.2d 429 [pipeline corporation was public utility with eminent domain power even though its only customer was its parent corporation].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

4 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

3. Who May Exercise Power.

b. Municipal Corporation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1115

[§ 1115] Municipal Corporation.

(1) Legislative Authority. A city's power is not inherent, but exists only by legislative authorization. (See Govt.C. 37350.5; Menlo Park v. Artino (1957) 151 C.A.2d 261, 266, 311 P.2d 135; San Bernardino County Flood Control Dist. v. Superior Court (1969) 269 C.A.2d 514, 518, 75 C.R. 24 [flood control district].) And neither the city's legislative body nor the People by initiative or referendum may abrogate that power. (Alexander v. Mitchell (1953) 119 C.A.2d 816, 821, 260 P.2d 261 [ordinance requiring initiative or referendum on city parking lot projects was invalid].)

(2) Property Outside Corporate Limits. A municipal corporation may condemn property outside its corporate limits. (Cal. Const., Art. XI, §9; C.C.P. 1240.125; see infra, §1181.) (See Sacramento Mun. Util. Dist. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1946) 72 C.A.2d 638, 652, 165 P.2d 741.) In North Sacramento v. Citizens Util. Co. of Calif. (1961) 192 C.A.2d 482, 13 C.R. 538, plaintiff city sued to condemn defendant public utility's water system, only 25% of which was located within its municipal boundaries. Held, judgment of condemnation affirmed. A municipality may have implied power to perform acts outside its boundaries, as in construction of sewers and other public works. Here, the city had express power to condemn a water system within its boundaries and to condemn wells and water on adjacent lands, to provide service to persons both within and without; it therefore had implied power to condemn the portion of the system outside its territorial limits. (192 C.A.2d 484.)

(3) Joint Powers Agency. Cities that individually have the power to acquire property for an airport (see Govt.C. 50490) also have the power to delegate those powers to a joint authority through a Joint Powers Agreement (see Govt.C. 6500 et seq.). (Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Authority v. Hensler (2000) 83 C.A.4th 556, 561, 99 C.R.2d 729.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

5 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

3. Who May Exercise Power.

c. Federal Government Acting for State.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1116

[§ 1116] Federal Government Acting for State.

The Federal-Aid Highways Act (23 U.S.C., §107) authorizes the Secretary of Commerce, on request of a state, to purchase or condemn lands that the state is unable to acquire or to acquire promptly, and to transfer them to the state for the purpose of completing the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways.

In Eden Memorial Park Assn. v. Department of Public Works (1963) 59 C.2d 412, 29 C.R. 790, 380 P.2d 390, the California Department of Public Works sought to condemn 12 acres of plaintiff's cemetery (unused for burials) for this purpose. Plaintiff invoked Health & Saf.C. 8560 and 8560.5, precluding condemnation of cemetery property, and the Court of Appeal prohibited the condemnation. The department then requested federal action, and the United States filed a condemnation suit and obtained an order for immediate possession. While federal court proceedings were pending, plaintiff brought the present action to enjoin the department from constructing the freeway. Held, judgment for defendant affirmed.

Plaintiff's theory, which prevailed in the Court of Appeal, was that federal power should be invoked only where the state lacks power to act because of deficiencies in its condemnation law, and that it was improperly invoked here to override the state's own policy declared in its statutes. (59 C.2d 417.) The court held, however, that the federal statute did not make this distinction, and that California, in Sts. & H.C. 820 and 820.5, expressly assented to the operation of the federal act despite inconsistency of state laws or regulations. (59 C.2d 417, 418, 419.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

6 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

3. Who May Exercise Power.

d. Private Person.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1117

[§ 1117] Private Person.

Clark v. Nash (1905) 198 U.S. 361, 25 S.Ct. 676, 49 L.Ed. 1085, upheld a Utah statute giving private persons the right of eminent domain to secure water for their lands or for mining. The Court thought that in these special circumstances, where mining and agriculture were of great importance, and water was scarce, the declaration of the Legislature should be followed. However, this does not constitute an approval of the broad proposition that private property may be taken by private persons in all cases where the taking may promote the public interest and tend to develop the natural resources of the state.

Under former C.C. 1001, any person could, "without further legislative action, acquire private property for any use specified" in former C.C.P. 1238, by proceeding under the eminent domain statutes. Although this grant appears to be exceedingly broad, it was limited by the necessary public use concept (infra, §1175) and was seldom invoked. (See Pasadena v. Stimson (1891) 91 C. 238, 248, 27 P. 604 [condemnation to connect private buildings with established water system]; Yeshiva Torah Emeth Academy v. University of So. Calif. (1962) 208 C.A.2d 618, 25 C.R. 422 [condemnation by private corporation to operate elementary school was not authorized]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §28.)

In Linggi v. Garovotti (1955) 45 C.2d 20, 286 P.2d 15, plaintiff, an apartment house owner, sought to condemn an easement across defendant's property to connect with an adequate public sewer. Although judgment for defendant on demurrer was reversed, the court declared that a private individual seeking to condemn a single piece of land must make a stronger showing of public necessity than a public or quasi-public entity. Here, plaintiff did allege that his present connection was inadequate and that the new one was necessary to abate an overflow nuisance. But the easement will be denied if the evidence shows that the public authorities have not been asked to enlarge his present public sewer connection, or that the proposed easement is not the most direct or the least injurious method of reaching the new connection. (45 C.2d 27.)

Former C.C. 1001 was repealed in 1975 and replaced with a more limited provision of the same number. The owners of real property are now authorized to exercise the power of eminent domain in two instances:

- (1) To acquire an appurtenant easement to provide utility service to their property (C.C. 1001; see infra, §1178).

(2) To acquire a temporary right to enter property to repair or reconstruct their land or improvements (C.C. 1002; see infra, §1179).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

7 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.
4. Public Use.
a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1118

[§ 1118] In General.

The taking of property must be for a proper public use. (C.C.P. 1240.010, infra, §1175.) (See 53 Hastings L. J. 1245 [public use and original understanding of Takings Clause]; 62 A.L.R.4th 1183 [industrial park as public use]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §42 et seq.)

Former C.C.P. 1238 et seq. specified particular public uses in great detail. (See Alameda v. Meadowlark Dairy Corp. (1964) 227 C.A.2d 80, 84, 38 C.R. 474 [use for exposition or fair is public notwithstanding purpose of providing horse racing and pari-mutuel betting]; Anaheim v. Michel (1968) 259 C.A.2d 835, 839, 66 C.R. 543 [stadium and adjoining parking].) Under the revised Eminent Domain Law, a list of public uses is unnecessary. A statutory authorization to condemn property for a particular use is a legislative declaration that the use is a public use. (C.C.P. 1240.010.) And the codes contain numerous provisions identifying the purposes for which eminent domain is authorized. (See C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §6.4 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 40 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 809 [public use and private use: there is no difference].

8 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

4. Public Use.

b. Airport Purposes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1119

[§ 1119] Airport Purposes.

The Airport Approaches Zoning Law (Govt.C. 50485 et seq.) authorizes local governmental agencies to eliminate airport hazards by the exercise of the police power or under the authority of Pub.Util.C. 21652, 21653. The prevention, removal, and mitigation of airport hazards are public purposes for which property interests may be acquired. (Govt.C. 50485.2.)

A person authorized to exercise the power of eminent domain for airport purposes may, by condemnation or otherwise, do the following:

(1) Acquire property "necessary to permit the safe and efficient operation of the airport" or to prevent, remove, or eliminate airport hazards. (Pub.Util.C. 21652(a)(1).) "Property" is broadly defined to include interests in real or personal property, including air rights, "whether within, beyond, adjacent to, or in the vicinity of" the airport. (Pub.Util.C. 21652(b).) (See Burbank v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Authority (1999) 72 C.A.4th 366, 374, 85 C.R.2d 28 [Pub.Util.C. 21661.6, requiring that acquiring entity submit plan for airport expansion to county board of supervisors or city council and that hearing be conducted prior to approval or disapproval, did not conflict with airport authority's power of eminent domain or give city "veto power"].)

(2) Acquire airspace or an airspace easement above property "necessary to permit imposition on such property of excessive noise, vibration, discomfort, inconvenience, interference with use and enjoyment, and any consequent reduction in market value, due to the operation of aircraft." (Pub.Util.C. 21652(a)(2).) (On inverse condemnation suits based on discomfort and damage by airport noise and vibration, see infra, §1128.)

(3) Provide for the removal or relocation of hazards or facilities and equipment that interfere with expansion or improvement or with safe landings and takeoffs. (Pub.Util.C. 21653.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

9 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

4. Public Use.

c. Review of Legislative Determination.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1120

[§ 1120] Review of Legislative Determination.

The legislative declaration of public uses is subject to judicial review. (See San Mateo v. Coburn (1900) 130 C. 631, 634, 63 P. 78; People v. Olsen (1930) 109 C.A. 523, 531, 293 P. 645; C.C.P. 1250.350, infra, §1206.) However, it is entitled to great weight, and a far broader latitude is allowed than in the exercise of the police power; e.g., condemnation of lands for public parks, and of highways to places of natural scenery, in the interest of public recreation and enjoyment, is generally upheld. (See Rindge Co. v. Los Angeles (1923) 262 U.S. 700, 43 S.Ct. 689, 692, 67 L.Ed. 1186, 1192; University of So. Calif. v. Robbins (1934) 1 C.A.2d 523, 525, 37 P.2d 163; Golden Gate Bridge & Highway Trans. Dist. v. Muzzi (1978) 83 C.A.3d 707, 713, 148 C.R. 197 [plaintiff's statutory power to condemn property necessary for water transportation implicitly includes power to condemn property for environmental mitigation (tidelands to deposit dredged spoils)]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §52.)

In Tennessee Valley Authority v. Welch (1946) 327 U.S. 546, 66 S.Ct. 715, 90 L.Ed. 843, the Tennessee Valley Authority, an agency of the federal Government, acting pursuant to statute, built a dam that flooded a roadway and isolated some 200 families. It appeared that the cost of building a new road and of providing the isolated area with essential services (schools, police protection, etc.) would be prohibitive. Accordingly, a plan was devised under which the Authority was to purchase all the land for inclusion in an adjacent national park. In this proceeding to condemn the lands of six dissenting owners, the Court held that the entire transaction of dam building and the incidental purchase should be viewed as a single integrated effort, and that it was within the power of the Authority to make an adjustment of the respective interests involved which would save money and would benefit an independent governmental agency (the National Park Commission). The opinion repeats the familiar rule that Congress must decide what type of taking is for a public use, and that its decision "is entitled to deference until it is shown to involve an impossibility." (66 S.Ct. 718, 90 L.Ed. 848.) A concurring opinion, after noting the fact that the Court has never overturned a legislative determination of public use, nevertheless warned that "the fact that the nature of the subject matter gives the legislative determination nearly immunity from judicial review does not mean that the power to review is wanting." (66 S.Ct. 720, 90 L.Ed. 851.) (See 20 Cal. L. Rev. 99.)

In People v. Nahabedian (1959) 171 C.A.2d 302, 340 P.2d 1053, the Department of Public Works sued to condemn a parcel of 21/2 lots fronting on a Los Angeles street. The complaint alleged that the public interest and necessity required their taking for "freeway purposes." Defendant, in a defectively phrased answer, challenged this allegation of purpose, alleging that the land was sought for "other purposes," namely, to lease it to a private person for an auto park. The trial judge excluded evidence on this issue on the theory that the purpose of condemnation proceedings was not a matter for judicial determination. Held, reversed; the judge confused necessity (infra, §1124) with public use. The mere declaration of the Legislature is not conclusive regarding the purpose, for the state has no constitutional authority to acquire property of a citizen for a private use. The determination of public purpose cannot be committed to the conclusive determination of an administrative agency of the condemning body. (171 C.A.2d 307.) (See People v. Lagiss (1963) 223 C.A.2d 23, 35, 35 C.R. 554.)

The challenge sanctioned by Nahabedian must be made by proper pleading. In San Mateo v. Bartole (1960) 184 C.A.2d 422, 434, 7 C.R. 569, plaintiff county alleged public use, and defendants merely denied the allegation, making no affirmative averments of fraud, abuse of discretion, or taking for private purposes. Held, judgment on the pleadings for plaintiff on this issue was properly granted. (184 C.A.2d 430.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

10 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

4. Public Use.

d. Change of Use After Judgment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1121

[§ 1121] Change of Use After Judgment.

A final judgment in a condemnation action vests the fee in the condemning agency, and the title cannot be attacked by the former owner on the ground that the contemplated public purpose was not carried out.

In Arechiga v. Housing Authority of Los Angeles (1958) 159 C.A.2d 657, 324 P.2d 973, a Housing Authority sued to condemn property for a low rental housing project, successfully established necessity, received judgment, and deposited the award with the county clerk, but then dropped the project and transferred the land to the city. The owners did not take the money, and brought this action to set aside or enjoin enforcement of the judgment, on the theory that the subsequent abandonment of the public purpose gave them a right of reverter. Held, this right did not exist; property acquired for a particular public purpose may lawfully be diverted to another use. (159 C.A.2d 660.) (See Newport v. Los Angeles (1960) 184 C.A.2d 229, 239, 7 C.R. 497 [following Arechiga]; for similar rule on dedication of public property, see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §253.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

For statute requiring new resolution of necessity for change in public use after property is acquired by eminent domain, see Supp., infra, §1121A.

11 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

4. Public Use.

e. (New) New Resolution for Change of Use.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1121A

[§ 1121A] (New) New Resolution for Change of Use.

C.C.P. 1245.245, added in 2006, provides that property acquired (1) by eminent domain, (2) pursuant to a resolution of public necessity, or (3) subsequent to a written notice that a public entity may take the property by eminent domain, may only be used for the public purpose stated in the resolution unless the governing body adopts another resolution authorizing a different use. The vote to change the use must be by at least two-thirds of all members of the governing body. (C.C.P. 1245.245(a).) Property that is not used for the public purpose stated in the resolution of necessity within 10 years of the adoption of the resolution must be sold unless, by at least a two-thirds vote, a resolution authorizes a new use or reauthorizes the original use. (C.C.P. 1245.245(b).) If the property must be sold, the public entity must offer the former owner from whom the property was acquired the right of first refusal to purchase the property. (C.C.P. 1245.245(f).) If that owner cannot be found or does not choose to purchase the property, or if giving a right of first refusal is not necessary, the property must be sold as surplus property pursuant to Govt.C. 54220 et seq. (C.C.P. 1245.245(g).)

When acquired property that was not used for the public use stated in the resolution is sold as surplus property, the public entity must pay the former owner any financial gain from the sale, with the acquisition price adjusted for inflation. (C.C.P. 1245.245(h).)

On completion of the acquisition of the property or adoption of a resolution of necessity, whichever is later, the public entity must give the former owner written notice of his or her rights under the statute. (C.C.P. 1245.245(i).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

12 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

5. Public Purpose in Private Use.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1122

[§ 1122] In General.

(1) General Principle. The public use concept has been greatly liberalized in decisions upholding the elimination of slums and blighted areas by publicly financed redevelopment or urban renewal programs. The public purpose in the governmental condemnation of the land is obvious. But the property is eventually sold or leased to private persons, so that there is, strictly speaking, no taking for public use. Nevertheless, these programs have been upheld where the public need exists (health, safety, and general welfare menaced by slum) and cannot be satisfied by private enterprise or governmental action under the police power. Thus, the restricted concept of "public use" gives way to a new concept of "public purpose," and the power of eminent domain is properly exercised even though the use after the taking is a private use. (See Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco v. Hayes (1954) 122 C.A.2d 777, 788, 266 P.2d 105 [idea is that taking of property itself, as distinguished from subsequent use of that property, may be required in public interest]; Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 103, 99 L.Ed. 27, 38; 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §827 et seq.)

(2) Slum Clearance and Redevelopment. In Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco v. Hayes, supra, the Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco, created under the Community Redevelopment Law (Health & Saf.C. 33000 et seq.), sought mandamus to compel its chairman to execute a loan and make contracts with the United States for two programs--a slum area and a blighted area. In granting the writ, the court said: "It might be pointed out that as our community life becomes more complex, our cities grow and become overcrowded, and the need to use for the benefit of the public areas which are not adapted to the pressing needs of the public becomes more imperative, a broader concept of what is a public use is necessitated. Fifty years ago no court would have interpreted under the eminent domain statutes, slum clearance even for public housing as a public use, and yet, it is now so recognized. In addition, slum clearance for redevelopment purposes is likewise so recognized. To hold that clearance of blighted areas as characterized by the act and as shown in this case and the redevelopment of such areas as contemplated here are not public uses, is to view present day conditions under the myopic eyes of years now gone." (122 C.A.2d 802.) (See Fellom v. Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco (1958) 157 C.A.2d 243, 246, 320 P.2d 884; 44 A.L.R.2d 1414 [urban redevelopment by private enterprise].)

(3) Parking Facilities. In the cases upholding redevelopment projects, the statutes prescribed a general plan with sufficient controls to assure the ultimate use of the property to carry out the public purpose. It appears that some control retained by the governmental body is essential to the validity of a taking for ultimate transfer to private persons. This issue was presented in San Francisco v. Ross (1955) 44 C.2d 52, 279 P.2d 529, where plaintiff city created a Parking Authority to acquire land for lease to private persons who would build a parking structure according to the city's specifications. Several statutes authorize the formation of parking districts that may acquire property and make the leases, but they provide that rentals and other charges must be fixed by the public agency. The city did not act under these statutes, but sought to condemn under its general power of eminent domain, and to lease without rate regulation. Held, this was not a proper exercise of the power. "The Constitution does not contemplate that the exercise of the power of eminent domain shall secure to private activities the means to carry on a private business whose primary objective and purpose is private gain and not public need. The parking facility contemplated in the present case appears to be narrowed to such an enterprise." (44 C.2d 59.) (See Larsen v. San Francisco (1957) 152 C.A.2d 355, 363, 313 P.2d 959 [distinguishing Ross, and upholding Parking Authority where sufficient controls were provided]; 8 A.L.R.2d 373 [municipal establishment or operation of public off-street parking facilities].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) General Principle. In response to the holding in Kelo v. New London, Connecticut (2005) 545 U.S. 469, 125 S.Ct. 2655, 162 L.Ed.2d 439, infra, this section, California voters adopted Proposition 99 in June, 2008. It amends Cal. Const., Art. I, §19. The Proposition adds the following:

(a) "State and local governments are prohibited from acquiring by eminent domain an owner-occupied residence for the purpose of conveying it to a private person." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §19(b).)

(b) Cal. Const., Art. I, §19(b), is not applicable when the State or local governments exercise the power of eminent domain (1) to protect public health and safety; (2) to prevent serious, repeated criminal activity; (3) to respond to an emergency; or (4) to remedy environmental contamination that poses a threat to public health and safety. (Cal. Const., Art. I, §19(c).)

(c) Cal. Const., Art. I, §19(b), is not applicable when the State or local governments exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire private property for a public work or improvement. (Cal. Const., Art. I, §19(d).)

See 10 A.L.R. Fed 2d 407 [Construction and Application of "Public Use" Restriction in Fifth Amendment's Takings Clause--United States Supreme Court Cases].(4) (New) Economic Development. In Kelo v. New London, Connecticut, supra, defendant city approved a development plan aimed at economic revitalization. The plan, developed over a number of years and approved by various state agencies, involved a 90-acre area consisting of seven parcels to be developed for specified residential, commercial, and recreational uses. Most of the land was acquired through purchase, but when defendant attempted to acquire the remainder by eminent domain, plaintiffs, the owners of 15 properties in parcels 3 and 4A, brought the present action, claiming that the takings violated the "public use" restriction in the Fifth Amendment's Takings Clause. While the action was pending, defendant announced that it planned to lease some of the parcels to private developers in exchange for their agreement to develop the land according to the terms of the development plan. The trial court granted a permanent restraining order prohibiting the taking of the properties in parcel 4A, but denied relief regarding the properties in parcel 3. Both sides then appealed to the Connecticut Supreme Court, which held that all of the takings were valid. Held, affirmed.

(a) The Takings Clause requires that private property be taken for a "public use," which was formerly defined as "use by the public." However, that definition was impractical and difficult to administer. The broader and more natural interpretation of "public use" adopted by the courts is "public purpose." (125 S.Ct. 2662, 162 L.Ed.2d 451.) Thus, a city cannot condemn land for the sole purpose of conferring private benefits on particular private parties, but it may transfer property from one private individual to another if future public use is the purpose of the taking. (125 S.Ct. 2661, 162 L.Ed.2d 450.) Here, although defendant was not planning to open all the condemned land to use by the general public, the takings were part of a carefully considered economic development plan, which was entitled to deference by the courts. (125 S.Ct. 2662, 2663, 162 L.Ed.2d 451, 452.)

(b) To effectuate its plan, defendant "has invoked a state statute that specifically authorizes the use of eminent domain to promote economic development. Given the comprehensive character of the plan, the thorough deliberation that preceded its adoption, and the limited scope of our review, it is appropriate for us ... to resolve the challenges of the individual owners, not on a piecemeal basis, but rather in light of the entire plan. Because that plan unquestionably serves a public purpose, the takings challenged here satisfy the public use requirement of the Fifth Amendment." (125 S.Ct. 2665, 162 L.Ed.2d 454.)

(c) Plaintiffs argued for a bright-line rule that economic development does not constitute a "public use." But promoting economic development is a traditional function of government. Moreover, there is no method of distinguishing economic development from the other public purposes that have been recognized, such as redevelopment of a blighted area (see Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 99 L.Ed. 27, text, §1063), breaking up a land oligopoly that created an artificial barrier to normal functioning of the residential land market (see Hawaii Housing Authority v. Midkiff (1984) 467 U.S. 229, 104 S.Ct. 2321, 81 L.Ed.2d 186, text, §1123), and eliminating a barrier to entry into the pesticide market (see Ruckelshaus v. Monsanto (1984) 467 U.S. 986, 104 S.Ct. 2862, 81 L.Ed.2d 815). (125 S.Ct. 2665, 162 L.Ed.2d 454.)

(d) Plaintiffs contended that using eminent domain for economic development impermissibly blurs the distinction between public and private takings. Although the pursuit of a public purpose will often benefit private parties, the achievement of a public good is not rendered ineffective by the fact that it coincides with the immediate benefiting of private parties. Notably, the private developers here were required by contract to use the property to carry out the development plan. (125 S.Ct. 2666, 162 L.Ed.2d 455.)

(e) A state may place "further restrictions on its exercise of the takings power. Indeed, many States already impose 'public use' requirements that are stricter than the federal baseline." (125 S.Ct. 2668, 162 L.Ed.2d 457.) "[T]he necessity and wisdom of using eminent domain to promote economic development are certainly matters of legitimate public debate. This Court's authority, however, extends only to determining whether the City's proposed condemnations are for a 'public use' within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment to the Federal Constitution." (125 S.Ct. 2668, 162 L.Ed.2d 458.)

Four justices dissented, arguing that "all private property is now vulnerable to being taken and transferred to another private owner, so long as its use might be upgraded ... in the process." To reason, as the majority does, "that the incidental public benefits resulting from the subsequent ordinary use of private property render economic development takings 'for public use' is to wash out any distinction between private and public use of property," and thereby effectively to delete the words "for public use" from the Takings Clause. (125 S.Ct. 2671, 162 L.Ed.2d 461.) (See 43 Cal. Western L. Rev. 363 [Kelo]; 33 Ecology L. Q. 545 [same]; 34 Ecology L. Q. 1 [same]; 34 Ecology L. Q. 443 [Planning as Public Use?]; 119 Harv. L. Rev. 287 [Kelo]; 38 McGeorge L. Rev. 369 [same]; 33 Pepperdine L. Rev. 335 [same]; 46 Santa Clara L. Rev. 767 [Symposium: Kelo, Lingle, and San Remo Hotel: Takings Law Now Belongs to the States]; 40 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1997 [Kelo]; 21 A.L.R.6th 261 [application of Kelo to public use restrictions in federal and state constitutions' takings clauses and eminent domain statutes].)

13 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

5. Public Purpose in Private Use.

b. Correcting Market Failure.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1123

[§ 1123] Correcting Market Failure.

In Hawaii Housing Authority v. Midkiff (1984) 467 U.S. 229, 104 S.Ct. 2321, 81 L.Ed.2d 186, the question was whether the Public Use Clause of the Fifth Amendment (applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment) "prohibits the State of Hawaii from taking, with just compensation, title in real property from lessors and transferring it to lessees in order to reduce the concentration of ownership of fees simple in the State." (104 S.Ct. 2324, 81 L.Ed.2d 191.)

In the mid-1960s, after extensive hearings, the Hawaii Legislature concluded that concentrated land ownership was responsible for skewing the state's residential fee simple market, inflating land prices, and injuring the public tranquility and welfare. The Legislature decided to compel large landowners to break up their estates. To accommodate the needs of both lessors and lessees, the Land Reform Act of 1967 created a mechanism for condemning residential tracts and transferring ownership of the condemned fees simple to existing lessees. Under the Act, tenants living on single-family residential lots within development tracts may apply for condemnation; if the Housing Authority (HHA) finds that acquisition by the state will effectuate the purposes of the Act, it acquires the property at prices set either by condemnation trial or by negotiation between lessors and lessees; and after compensation has been set, HHA may sell the land titles to tenant applicants.

Plaintiff trustees of landholding estates brought an action in the federal district court to enjoin enforcement of a compulsory arbitration order, and challenged the constitutionality of the Act. Held, the Act is constitutional.

(a) "The starting point for our analysis" is the decision in Berman v. Parker (1954) 348 U.S. 26, 75 S.Ct. 98, 99 L.Ed.2d 27, supra, §978, recognizing the broad power of the Legislature to determine "public use." The Court will not substitute its judgment for that of the Legislature "unless the use be palpably without reasonable foundation." (104 S.Ct. 2329, 81 L.Ed.2d 196, 197.) One person's property cannot be taken for the benefit of another private person without a justifying public purpose; "[b]ut where the exercise of the eminent domain power is rationally related to a conceivable public purpose, the Court has never held a compensated taking to be proscribed by the Public Use Clause." (104 S.Ct. 2329, 81 L.Ed.2d 198.)

(b) "The people of Hawaii have attempted, much as the settlers of the original 13 Colonies did, to reduce the perceived social and economic evils of a land oligopoly traceable to their monarchs. The land oligopoly has, according to the Hawaii Legislature, created artificial deterrents to the normal functioning of the State's residential land market and forced thousands of individual homeowners to lease, rather than buy, the land underneath their homes. Regulating oligopoly and the evils associated with it is a classic exercise of a State's police powers." (104 S.Ct. 2330, 81 L.Ed.2d 198.)

(c) The legislative approach to the problem is not irrational. "The Act presumes that when a sufficiently large number of persons declare that they are willing but unable to buy lots at fair prices the land market is malfunctioning. When such a malfunction is signaled, the Act authorizes HHA to condemn lots in the relevant tract. The Act limits the number of lots any one tenant can purchase and authorizes HHA to use public funds to ensure that the market dilution goals will be achieved. This is a comprehensive and rational approach to identifying and correcting market failure." (104 S.Ct. 2330, 81 L.Ed.2d 198.) Whether the statute in fact will accomplish its objectives is not the issue; the constitutional requirement is satisfied if the Legislature rationally could have believed that the objectives would be promoted. (104 S.Ct. 2330, 81 L.Ed.2d 198.)

(d) The fact that the property taken by eminent domain is transferred in the first instance to private beneficiaries does not mean that the taking has only a private purpose; the Act advances the public purposes without the state's taking actual possession or use of the property. "[I]t is only the taking's purpose, and not its mechanics, that must pass scrutiny under the Public Use Clause." (104 S.Ct. 2331, 81 L.Ed.2d 199.)

(e) The fact that a state Legislature and not Congress makes the public use determination does not mean that judicial deference is less appropriate. "Judicial deference is required because, in our system of government, legislatures are better able to assess what public purposes should be advanced by an exercise of the taking power. State legislatures are as capable as Congress of making such determinations within their respective spheres of authority." (104 S.Ct. 2331, 81 L.Ed.2d 200.)

(f) "[N]o purely private taking is involved in these cases. The Hawaii Legislature enacted its Land Reform Act not to benefit a particular class of identifiable individuals but to attack certain perceived evils of concentrated property ownership in Hawaii--a legitimate public purpose. Use of the condemnation power to achieve this purpose is not irrational. Since we assume for purposes of these appeals that the weighty demand of just compensation has been met, the requirements of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments have been satisfied." (104 S.Ct. 2331, 81 L.Ed.2d 200.) (See 98 Harv. L. Rev. 225; 15 Ecology L. Q. 671; 15 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 817; 20 U.S.F. L. Rev. 121.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

14 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

A. In General.

6. Public Necessity.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1124

[§ 1124] Public Necessity.

Under former case law, if the use for which property was taken was public, the question whether the taking was necessary or expedient was exclusively legislative and presented no justiciable issue for a court. (See Los Angeles v. Bartlett (1962) 203 C.A.2d 523, 532, 21 C.R. 776; People v. Lagiss (1963) 223 C.A.2d 23, 33, 35 C.R. 554; Breiner v. Los Angeles (1971) 22 C.A.3d 382, 387, 99 C.R. 180; C.E.B., Condemnation Practice 2d §22 et seq.)

In People v. Chevalier (1959) 52 C.2d 299, 307, 340 P.2d 598, the city of Los Angeles, pursuant to an agreement with the State Highway Commission, sued to condemn an easement over defendants' land to provide access to the state's freeway for landlocked parcels. Defendants' answers alleged fraud, bad faith, and abuse of discretion in that the city acceded to the request of the state agency, disregarding the interests of the city and refusing to hear evidence that these interests would be better served by a different road. Held, the defenses were properly stricken.

"[T]he questions of the necessity for making a given public improvement, the necessity for adopting a particular plan therefor, or the necessity for taking particular property, rather than other property, for the purpose of accomplishing such public improvement, cannot be made justiciable issues even though fraud, bad faith, or abuse of discretion may be alleged in connection with the condemning body's determination of such necessity. To hold otherwise would not only thwart the legislative purpose in making such determinations conclusive but would open the door to endless litigation, and perhaps conflicting determinations on the question of 'necessity' in separate condemnation actions brought to obtain the parcels sought to carry out a single public improvement." (52 C.2d 307.)

Former C.C.P. 1241 codified the principle of conclusive effect for takings by cities, counties, and specified types of local districts, but excluded the conclusive presumption where the property taken was outside the territorial limits of the condemning entity. (See Los Angeles v. Keck (1971) 14 C.A.3d 920, 925, 928, 92 C.R. 599 [where city had previously condemned easement for electrical lines in 250-foot wide strip running through 640-acre farm, there was no evidence of necessity for taking fee simple title to that identical strip for additional lines]; People v. Van Gorden (1964) 226 C.A.2d 634, 636, 38 C.R. 265 [prima facie evidence of necessity for condemnation of land for state parks; former Pub.Res.C. 5006.1].)

Under the revised Eminent Domain Law, a resolution of necessity is required before a proceeding can be commenced. (C.C.P. 1245.220, infra, §1199.) In takings by the state and by local public entities, the resolution is conclusive on the issue of public necessity except where (a) a local entity takes property outside its boundaries, (b) the resolution is affected by a gross abuse of discretion, or (c) the resolution is adopted through bribery. (See infra, §1200.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

15 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN
B. Taking Under Federal Constitution.
1. What Constitutes Taking.
a. Acquisition of Title or Possession.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1125

[§ 1125] Acquisition of Title or Possession.

The typical and traditional method of exercising the power of eminent domain is to acquire the title and possession of property by a condemnation action. (See 99 Harv. L. Rev. 791 [jurisprudential basis for taking]; 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 131 [seizure of solvent national bank under Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 as violation of Takings Clause]; 76 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1003 [Takings Clause as comparative right]; 172 A.L.R. Fed 507 [Award of Costs and Attorney's Fees Under §304 of Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C., §4654)]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §121 et seq.) (On condemnation of leasehold, see infra, §1250; on temporary taking of going business, see infra, §1130; on alternative procedures available to federal Government, see United States v. Dow (1958) 357 U.S. 17, 78 S.Ct. 1039, 1044, 2 L.Ed.2d 1109, 1114; on federal acquisition policies generally, which also apply to federally funded projects, see 42 U.S.C., §4651 et seq.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.226 et seq., 279 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 10 A.L.R. Fed 2d 231 [what constitutes taking of property requiring compensation under Fifth Amendment--United States Supreme Court cases].

16 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

B. Taking Under Federal Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Taking.

b. Damage to Property or Interests.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1126

[§ 1126] In General.

The federal Constitution, unlike that of California (infra, §1132), has no clause concerning damage to property. (See United States v. Willow River Power Co. (1945) 324 U.S. 499, 65 S.Ct. 761, 764, 89 L.Ed. 1101, 1107.) Nevertheless, some kinds of governmental interference with property, which cause destruction of or substantial injury to the property interests of the owner, are held compensable by an increasingly liberal recognition of property interests and a correspondingly liberal expansion of the concept of "taking." (See United States v. General Motors Corp. (1945) 323 U.S. 373, 65 S.Ct. 357, 89 L.Ed. 311, infra, §1271 [compensation for removal, storage, and replacement of equipment on partial taking of leasehold]; United States v. Virginia Elec. & Power Co. (1961) 365 U.S. 624, 81 S.Ct. 784, 787, 5 L.Ed.2d 838, 843 [flowage easement is compensable property interest even though its destruction results from federal power development under navigational servitude]; Breda Costruzioni Ferroviarie S.P.A. v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority (1997) 56 C.A.4th 1433, 1436, 66 C.R.2d 416 [Takings Clause prohibited public entity from retaining interest earned while it held funds as stakeholder pursuant to stop notice]; 112 Harv. L. Rev. 997 [deterrence and distribution in law of takings]; 44 A.L.R.4th 366 [seizure of property for evidence in criminal case as taking]; 7 A.L.R.5th 113 [compensability of loss of visibility of owner's property]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §125 et seq.; on regulatory takings generally, see infra, §1153 et seq.)

In Armstrong v. United States (1960) 364 U.S. 40, 80 S.Ct. 1563, 4 L.Ed.2d 1554, the federal Government had a contract with R Corp. for construction of navy boats. Under the contract, the Government could terminate for default and R would then transfer title and deliver all uncompleted hulls and materials to the United States. Petitioners furnished materials and, under Maine law, had mechanics' liens on the ships. Then R Corp. defaulted and the Government took title. Held, petitioners were entitled to satisfaction of their lien claims.

(a) No laborer's or materialman's lien can be acquired on "public work," but the mere inchoate title the Government had in the event of the prime contractor's default did not constitute this public property immune from liens. R Corp. had title, the liens attached, and they were property protected by the Fifth Amendment. (80 S.Ct. 1566, 4 L.Ed.2d 1557.)

(b) The dissenters argued that there was no taking because the Government did not exercise its power of eminent domain at all, and the lien claims were unenforceable against the Government because of the independent doctrine of sovereign immunity. But the majority held otherwise. The total destruction by the Government of all value in the liens "has every possible element of a Fifth Amendment 'taking' and is not a mere 'consequential incidence' of a valid regulatory measure. Before the liens were destroyed, the lienholders admittedly had compensable property. Immediately afterwards, they had none." (80 S.Ct. 1568, 4 L.Ed.2d 1561.) Because "this acquisition was for a public use, however accomplished, whether with an intent and purpose of extinguishing the liens or not, the Government's action did destroy them and in the circumstances of this case did thereby take the property value of those liens within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment." (80 S.Ct. 1569, 4 L.Ed.2d 1561.)

In Moerman v. California (1993) 17 C.A.4th 452, 21 C.R.2d 329, the state, as part of a program of relocating tule elk to their native ranges, relocated some elk close to a lake near plaintiff's property. Some of the elk came onto plaintiff's ranch and caused damage. Despite the state's efforts to scare the elk off private property, they remained on plaintiff's property almost continuously for several years. Plaintiff sought damages, claiming that the state's actions constituted a taking of his property. Held, the tule elk are neither instrumentalities of nor controlled by the state; hence, there was no physical taking of property. (17 C.A.4th 455.)

"The tule elk are wild animals who roam across private and public property. The state does not own wild animals ... , nor does it control wild animals that have not been reduced to possession. ... The majority of courts that have considered the question of whether the government owes compensation for damage to property caused by protected wildlife have held that the government does not." (17 C.A.4th 457, 458.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.228.1

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Butler v. Palos Verdes Estates (2005) 135 C.A.4th 174, 184, 37 C.R.3d 199 [following Moerman v. California (1993) 17 C.A.4th 452, 21 C.R.2d 329, text, p. 761; city was not liable in inverse condemnation based on presence of pea fowl in park even though city protected and controlled peafowl population; peafowl are feral animals that are not instrumentalities of city as matter of law].

17 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

B. Taking Under Federal Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Taking.

b. Damage to Property or Interests.

2. Insubstantial Permanent Physical Occupation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1127

[§ 1127] Insubstantial Permanent Physical Occupation.

In Loretto v. Teleprompter Manhattan CATV Corp. (1982) 458 U.S. 419, 102 S.Ct. 3164, 73 L.Ed.2d 868, a New York statute provided that a landlord must permit a cable television company to install its cable facilities on the property. Defendant corporation provided CATV service to plaintiff's tenants by dropping a line to the first floor down the front of plaintiff's apartment building. Held, this permanent physical occupation authorized by the statute was a taking, without regard to the public interests it may serve.

(a) Penn Cen. Trans. Co. v. New York (1978) 438 U.S. 104, 98 S.Ct. 2646, 57 L.Ed.2d 631, supra, §981, in its elaborate discussion of the Takings Clause, points out that there is no set formula for determining whether compensation is constitutionally due for a government restriction of property. (102 S.Ct. 3171, 3174, 73 L.Ed.2d 876, 880.) But the cases "clearly establish that permanent occupations of land by such installations as telegraph and telephone lines, rails, and underground pipes or wires are takings even if they occupy only relatively insubstantial amounts of space and do not seriously interfere with the landowner's use of the rest of his land." (102 S.Ct. 3173, 73 L.Ed.2d 878.)

(b) Defendant's cable installation was a taking under the traditional test. "The installation involved a direct physical attachment of plates, boxes, wires, bolts and screws to the building, completely occupying space immediately above and upon the roof and along the building's exterior wall." (102 S.Ct. 3177, 73 L.Ed.2d 884.)

(c) "Our holding today is very narrow. We affirm the traditional rule that a permanent physical occupation of property is a taking. In such a case, the property owner entertains an historically-rooted expectation of compensation, and the character of the invasion is qualitatively more intrusive than perhaps any other category of property regulation. We do not, however, question the equally substantial authority upholding a State's broad power to impose appropriate restrictions upon an owner's use of his property." (102 S.Ct. 3179, 73 L.Ed.2d 886.)

Three justices dissented, describing the decision as "anachronistic." (102 S.Ct. 3180, 73 L.Ed.2d 887.) The cable and boxes occupy a fraction of a cubic foot of space on the building's roof, and the per se rule constructed by the majority "represents an archaic judicial response to a modern social problem." (102 S.Ct. 3186, 73 L.Ed.2d 895.) (See 72 Cal. L. Rev. 569.)

Loretto was applied to an action by a plaintiff seeking a court injunction in Cox Cable San Diego v. Bookspan (1987) 195 C.A.3d 22, 240 C.R. 407. Plaintiff had a cable television system in defendant's apartment complex that was installed under a contract with defendant's predecessor. Defendant disconnected the system and contracted for a system from a different company. Plaintiff's application for a preliminary injunction was denied. Held, affirmed. "The physical invasion of private property is no less an invasion if it is authorized by the courts through the granting of a preliminary injunction than if authorized by the Legislature enacting a statute mandating a right of access to cable companies." (195 C.A.3d 27.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

18 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

B. Taking Under Federal Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Taking.

b. Damage to Property or Interests.

3. Damage From Airplanes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1128

[§ 1128] Damage From Airplanes.

In United States v. Causby (1946) 328 U.S. 256, 66 S.Ct. 1062, 90 L.Ed. 1206, Government military planes, coming in to a nearby airport, flew so low over plaintiff's poultry farm that chickens were frightened and killed, and plaintiffs themselves were so disturbed that the business was ruined. Held, this invasion of the lower airspace was as much the taking of an easement as an invasion of the land itself, and was compensable.

The Causby doctrine was extended in Griggs v. Allegheny (1962) 369 U.S. 84, 82 S.Ct. 531, 7 L.Ed.2d 585, to apply to commercial airliners, and to impose liability on the county that designed and constructed the airport. The county contended that because construction was in conformity with the federal statute (National Airport Plan) and subject to the approval of the Federal Aviation Agency Administrator, it was the U.S. that did the taking. Two dissenting justices agreed, but the majority declared that the county, as promoter, owner, and lessor of the airport, chose the site, determined the length and direction of runways, and the land and navigation easements needed; hence, it "took the air easement in the constitutional sense." (82 S.Ct. 534, 7 L.Ed.2d 589.) (See 22 A.L.R.4th 863 [airport operations or flight of aircraft as constituting taking or damaging of property]; 18 A.L.R.4th 542 [zoning regulations limiting use of property near airport as taking].)

In Sneed v. Riverside (1963) 218 C.A.2d 205, 32 C.R. 318, defendant county adopted an ordinance establishing height limits for structures in the approach area. Plaintiff, a property owner in the area, brought an action in inverse condemnation, contending that the ordinance was not a police power regulation of height limits but the taking of an air easement without compensation. Held, a cause of action was stated under Griggs v. Allegheny. The police power may be exercised to fix height limits where there is no invasion of the airspace above; where that airspace is used by aircraft, payment of compensation for the easement is the more acceptable practice. (218 C.A.2d 209.) (See Peacock v. Sacramento (1969) 271 C.A.2d 845, 77 C.R. 391 [following Sneed].)

In Aaron v. Los Angeles (1974) 40 C.A.3d 471, 115 C.R. 162, the court examined federal and state case law, and upheld recovery for excessive noise resulting from jet flights at a municipal airport. The court held that "the municipal operator of an airport is liable for a taking or damaging of property when the owner of property in the vicinity of the airport can show a measurable reduction in market value resulting from the operation of the airport in such manner that the noise from aircraft using the airport causes a substantial interference with the use and enjoyment of the property, and the interference is sufficiently direct and sufficiently peculiar that the owner, if uncompensated, would pay more than his proper share to the public undertaking. Whether the interference is substantial enough to meet this standard is a mixed question of fact and law for the trial judge to determine. The owner need not prove there were direct overflights of the property. The fact that the federal government controls the flight of aircraft does not relieve the airport owner and operator of liability where the operation of the airport is a substantial cause of the property owner's damage." (40 C.A.3d 493.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

19 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN
B. Taking Under Federal Constitution.
1. What Constitutes Taking.
b. Damage to Property or Interests.
4. Water and Power Projects.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1129

[§ 1129] Water and Power Projects.

In United States v. Dickinson (1947) 331 U.S. 745, 67 S.Ct. 1382, 1385, 91 L.Ed. 1789, 1794, the federal Government built a dam, which raised the level of a river and not only permanently flooded part of plaintiff's land, but also damaged the new bank of the river by erosion. Held, plaintiffs were entitled to compensation for the erosion as well as for the easement gained by flooding. In answer to the Government's contention that the erosion was merely consequential damage, the Court said: "The mere fact that all the United States needs and physically appropriates is the land up to the new level of the river, does not determine what in nature it has taken. If the Government cannot take the acreage it wants without also washing away more, that more becomes part of the taking."

In United States v. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. (1950) 339 U.S. 799, 70 S.Ct. 885, 94 L.Ed. 1277, the Government maintained the Mississippi River continuously at high-water level in a certain area. Defendant's farm land was on a nonnavigable tributary 11/2 miles away, but was damaged by percolation and the raising of the water table so that the land no longer drained. Held: "This case comes within the principle that the destruction of privately owned land by flooding is 'a taking' to the extent of the destruction." (70 S.Ct. 890, 94 L.Ed. 1285.)

In United States v. Gerlach Live Stock Co. (1950) 339 U.S. 725, 70 S.Ct. 955, 94 L.Ed. 1231, the Government, an upstream appropriator, built Friant Dam as part of the California Central Valley Project. The claimants, lower riparian owners, were deprived of irrigation water from the periodic overflow of the San Joaquin River. Held, compensation was properly awarded. Although the riparian owners could not maintain an action to enforce this "prodigal" use of water (because of the California Constitution's provision against waste--see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §937), there is no justification for the Government taking the water and selling it to others without compensation. "Public interest requires appropriation; it does not require expropriation." (70 S.Ct. 969, 94 L.Ed. 1250.)

In Kaiser Aetna v. United States (1979) 444 U.S. 164, 100 S.Ct. 383, 62 L.Ed.2d 332, a Hawaii residential marina was developed by dredging and filling a pond. The Government then declared it to be navigable water and asserted a public right of access. Held, the attempt to create the right "goes so far beyond ordinary regulation or improvement for navigation as to amount to a taking under the logic" of Pennsylvania Coal v. Mahon (1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322. (100 S.Ct. 392, 62 L.Ed.2d 345.) (See 94 Harv. L. Rev. 205.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

20 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

B. Taking Under Federal Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Taking.

c. Temporary Taking of Going Business.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1130

[§ 1130] Temporary Taking of Going Business.

(1) Compensation for Use Value. A far-reaching decision was rendered in Kimball Laundry Co. v. United States (1949) 338 U.S. 1, 69 S.Ct. 1434, 93 L.Ed. 1765. The Government condemned petitioner's laundry for use by the Army, and kept it for 31/2 years. Petitioner, with no means of serving its customers, suspended business during the period. As to the principal item of damages, the Court held that the measure in the case of a temporary taking is not the difference in the value of the fee before and after the taking, but the market rental value. (69 S.Ct. 1438, 93 L.Ed. 1773.) The Court then held that in addition, petitioner was entitled to recover the value of the loss of its trade routes, i.e., its going concern value. (a) Prior cases holding that going concern value cannot be recovered where the fee is taken were approved on the theory that the owner is free to find another location for the business, and that compensation should not depend on his or her good fortune or lack of it. (b) On the other hand, where a private corporation or person operates a public utility, and this is condemned, the property taken is the going concern value, the owner is deprived of it, and this is a compensable taking. (c) The same principle should govern here. By temporarily taking petitioner's plant, the government took the trade routes, and the value of their temporary use must be paid.

The dissent pointed out that the Government was being required to pay for something that it could not and did not use. The U.S. "is being forced to pay not for what it gets but for what the owner loses." (69 S.Ct. 1447, 93 L.Ed. 1781.) (See 7 A.L.R.2d 1297 [compensation for temporary use or occupancy]; on regulatory takings generally, see infra, §1153 et seq.; on requirement of compensation for temporary taking of personal property, see Needles v. Griswold (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1881, 8 C.R.2d 753, infra, §1163.)

(2) Compensation for Losses. In United States v. Pewee Coal Co. (1951) 341 U.S. 114, 71 S.Ct. 670, 95 L.Ed. 809, the Government by Executive Order seized most of the nation's coal mines for some months. The operation of respondent's mine resulted in a loss of $ 2,241.26, mainly attributable to increased wage payments ordered by the War Labor Board. Held, this was a taking, and respondent was entitled to an award of this sum. Ordinarily, under Kimball, fair compensation for temporary possession of a business enterprise is the reasonable value of the property's use. But a different theory was correctly applied here. Like a private person, the Government is entitled to profits and bears losses of a business operation it conducts; hence, when a private business is possessed and operated for public use, there is no reason to impose losses on the owner. It is immaterial that governmental operation resulted in a smaller loss than respondent would have sustained without seizure; the crucial fact is that when the Government took control, respondent was not free to exercise its own business judgment. (See 30 Hastings Const. L. Q. 173 [availability of Fifth Amendment remedy for aviation businesses devastated by restrictions after September 11].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

21 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN
B. Taking Under Federal Constitution.
2. Noncompensable Injury.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1131

[§ 1131] Noncompensable Injury.

(1) Destruction or Injury Under War Power. Property destroyed under the war power is not taken, and compensation is not required. In United States v. Caltex (1952) 344 U.S. 149, 73 S.Ct. 200, 97 L.Ed. 157, the Army, retreating from Manila, destroyed the oil terminal facilities of respondent oil companies to render them useless to the enemy. Held, "this property, due to the fortunes of war, had become a potential weapon of great significance to the invader. It was destroyed, not appropriated for subsequent use." (73 S.Ct. 203, 97 L.Ed. 163.) (See National Bd. of Y.M.C.A. v. United States (1969) 395 U.S. 85, 89 S.Ct. 1511, 23 L.Ed.2d 117 [damage to buildings in Canal Zone caused by rioters after buildings had been occupied by U.S. troops].)

(2) Taking of Land Under Indian Occupancy. If Congress by treaty or otherwise gives an Indian tribe permanent rights in lands, compensation must be made for subsequent taking. But if a mere right of occupancy without title is recognized, the taking is not compensable. (Tee-Hit-Ton Indians v. United States (1955) 348 U.S. 272, 75 S.Ct. 313, 322, 99 L.Ed. 314, 325.)

(3) Injury Under Commerce Power Over Navigable Waters. Just as the state may regulate or destroy property without compensation by a valid exercise of police power (see infra, §1153), so the federal Government may exercise some power under the Commerce Clause without becoming liable for compensation. Thus, the Government has a dominant servitude in a navigable stream within the bed (up to ordinary high-water mark). Hence, Congress may improve the stream in that area in the interest of navigation without liability for damage; it is not taking private property but merely exercising its servitude. (United States v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. R. Co. (1941) 312 U.S. 592, 61 S.Ct. 772, 775, 85 L.Ed. 1064, 1070; United States v. Twin City Power Co. (1956) 350 U.S. 222, 76 S.Ct. 259, 261, 100 L.Ed. 240, 245; United States v. Rands (1967) 389 U.S. 121, 88 S.Ct. 265, 19 L.Ed.2d 329; cf. United States v. Kansas City Life Ins. Co. (1950) 339 U.S. 799, 70 S.Ct. 885, 94 L.Ed. 1277, supra, §1129 [compensation awarded where land damaged was not within river bed and not subject to navigation servitude].)

The practical effect of these cases has, however, been substantially nullified by the enactment of a statutory right to compensation for the fair market value of real property taken in connection with improvements of U.S. rivers, harbors, canals, and waterways based on "all uses to which such real property may reasonably be put, including its highest and best use, any of which uses may be dependent upon access to or utilization of such navigable waters." (33 U.S.C., §595a.)

(4) Taking Under Forfeiture Law. The government is not required to compensate an owner for property acquired by the exercise of an authority other than the power of eminent domain. Hence, where ownership of an automobile was transferred to the state in a forfeiture proceeding instituted after it was used in the commission of a crime, there was no taking for public use and no requirement of compensation. (Bennis v. Michigan (1996) 516 U.S. 442, 116 S.Ct. 994, 1001, 134 L.Ed.2d 68, 78.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

22 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Damage.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1132

[§ 1132] In General.

The scope of compensable injury to property is greatly increased in a number of states, including California, that require compensation not only where property is taken but also where it is damaged. (See Cal. Const., Art. I, §19.) However, the history of the California constitutional provision and the decisions show that it was intended to compensate the owners of property taken for public improvement by the process of eminent domain. The words "or damaged" were added in 1879 to make it clear that compensation is due when, because of a public improvement, adjacent property is damaged, even though it was not taken. (Customer Co. v. Sacramento (1995) 10 C.4th 368, 41 C.R.2d 658, 895 P.2d 900, infra, §1142 [defendant was not liable for damage to plaintiff's store caused by police in attempting to apprehend criminal].) (See Bacich v. Board of Control of Calif. (1943) 23 C.2d 343, 349, 144 P.2d 818; House v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1944) 25 C.2d 384, 388, 153 P.2d 950; Holtz v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1976) 17 C.3d 648, 658, 131 C.R. 646, 552 P.2d 430 [right to lateral support is interest in real property; when public entity causes physical injury to adjacent property by withdrawal of that support, right to recover damages is governed by constitutional provision on eminent domain]; Orme v. California (1978) 83 C.A.3d 178, 184, 147 C.R. 735; Pacific Bell v. San Diego (2000) 81 C.A.4th 596, 607, 96 C.R.2d 897 [requirement that injury be caused by deliberate act in fulfillment of public object "is satisfied by a public improvement that as designed and constructed presents inherent risks of damage to private property, and the inherent risks materialize and cause damage"]; 2 A.L.R.2d 677 [damage by negligence of governmental agents as taking]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §§128, 129; 45 Proof of Facts 3d 519 [Recovery of Damages for Loss of View or Visibility Resulting from Construction of Highway or Other Public Improvement]; on inverse condemnation generally, see infra, §1143 et seq.)

The constitutional provision is self-executing; i.e., it abrogates the immunity of the government from suit to that extent. (See Rose v. California (1942) 19 C.2d 713, 720, 123 P.2d 505.)

A common situation occurs where the diversion of waters in the course of a public improvement causes injury to land or water rights. (See infra, §1146.) Another basis for an action is the impairment of access to a street or highway. (See infra, §1148 et seq.) And local regulations that restrict a landowner's use of his or her property also may be the basis for compensation. (See infra, §1153 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

23 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Damage.

b. Limitations on Right to Compensation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1133

[§ 1133] Limitations on Right to Compensation.

The following general limitations on the right to compensation should be noted:

(a) No recovery without special damage. There can be no recovery for damage that the landowner sustains in common with the public generally; he or she must show some special damage. (Beckham v. Stockton (1944) 64 C.A.2d 487, 502, 149 P.2d 296; Los Angeles v. Geiger (1949) 94 C.A.2d 180, 189, 210 P.2d 717.)

(b) No recovery without damage to property right. The damage must be to the land or some right appurtenant thereto, such as an easement. There is no recovery for mere injury to the business of the owner or occupier. (Oakland v. Pacific Coast Lumber & Mill Co. (1915) 171 C. 392, 398, 153 P. 705.)

(c) No recovery for temporary damage. Ordinarily, mere temporary damage, e.g., inconvenience or interference with the enjoyment of property by reason of the presence of machinery and materials used in the public work, is not compensable. But it has been suggested that compensation might be allowed where there is an actual and substantial temporary invasion of the right of possession of the owner's property during the period of construction. (See Heimann v. Los Angeles (1947) 30 C.2d 746, 755, 185 P.2d 597; People v. Ayon (1960) 54 C.2d 217, 229, 5 C.R. 151, 352 P.2d 519, infra, §1150; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §14.12; 23 A.L.R.4th 674 [damages resulting from temporary conditions incident to public improvements or repairs]; on temporary deprivation of access, see infra, §1149.)

(d) No recovery against private contractor. The landowner's right is against the governmental agency that authorizes the public improvement, not a private contractor who does the work. This obvious point was made in Anderson v. Fay Imp. Co. (1955) 134 C.A.2d 738, 286 P.2d 513, on unusual facts. Defendant private subdividers contracted for street repairs under a governmental permit for a street in front of plaintiffs' land. To gain plaintiffs' agreement to pay for curbs and sewers (thereby eliminating lengthy proceedings for assessment), defendants fraudulently represented that the street would be raised only 21/2 feet. The street as constructed was 5 feet higher and more in places, rendering plaintiffs' garages useless, giving access only by foot, and precluding sewer connections. The trial judge granted damages and a mandatory injunction to restore the street to its original condition. Held, reversed. (a) Plaintiffs were not entitled to removal of a completed and accepted public street built according to the government's approved plans and specifications. (b) They were not entitled to damages for injury to their easement of access from a contractor who constructed the improvement according to these plans and specifications. The governmental agency--a city--was not made a party to the action, but should have been sued on the theory of inverse condemnation. (c) The only liability of the contractor was on the distinct cause of action for damages for fraud. (134 C.A.2d 747.)

(e) No recovery without public use. There can be no recovery in inverse condemnation in the absence of public use. (See Yox v. Whittier (1986) 182 C.A.3d 347, 351, 227 C.R. 311 [damage caused by defects in private drainage system; approval of subdivision map, without dedication to public, did not constitute public use]; Cantu v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1987) 189 C.A.3d 160, 165, 234 C.R. 365 [public utility's extension of gas and electric service to 16 homes under agreement with private road association and without acquisition of easement by legislative action or eminent domain was for private use and did not give rise to inverse condemnation action]; Ullery v. Contra Costa (1988) 202 C.A.3d 562, 570, 248 C.R. 727 [there was no public use where county approved subdivision map but rejected offer of dedication of storm drainage easement and exercised no dominion and control over creek that provided storm drainage]; Barham v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1999) 74 C.A.4th 744, 754, 88 C.R.2d 424 [transmission of electric power through public utility's facilities was for benefit of public, and utility was responsible for injury to property caused by transmission; distinguishing Cantu]; DiMartino v. Orinda (2000) 80 C.A.4th 329, 337, 343, 95 C.R.2d 16 [following Ullery; defendant city was not liable for presence of storm drainpipe under plaintiffs' residence in absence of evidence that defendant substantially participated in planning, construction, or maintenance of drainpipe, or accepted its dedication, or exercised dominion or control over it].)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.228.1

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(a) No recovery without special damage. See Border Business Park v. San Diego (2006) 142 C.A.4th 1538, 1548, 49 C.R.3d 259 [property owner could not establish inverse condemnation where city advertised plans to build airport in area in absence of evidence that airport proposal directly and specially affected owner].

24 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Damage.

c. Compensation Without Tort Liability.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1134

[§ 1134] Compensation Without Tort Liability.

(1) Former Rule of Nonliability. Archer v. Los Angeles (1941) 19 C.2d 19, 24, 119 P.2d 1, held that the constitutional provision did not create a new right, and that recovery was limited to situations in which a common law tort was committed.

(2) Albers Rule of Liability. The Archer rule was substantially limited, and the contrary view of Reardon v. San Francisco (1885) 66 C. 492, 6 P. 317, was revived and reconciled in Albers v. Los Angeles (1965) 62 C.2d 250, 42 C.R. 89, 398 P.2d 129. Defendant county deposited 175,000 cubic yards of dirt on a corner of a road that it was developing. The spot was a prehistoric slide area, and a landslide caused stipulated damage to plaintiffs' property amounting to $ 5.36 million. The trial judge found no negligence or nuisance, but judgment was awarded for this sum. Held, affirmed.

(a) Reconsideration of the rule of nonliability. The issue was how the court should construe the constitutional provision where physical damage is proximately caused to real property, "neither intentionally nor negligently," but as the result of the construction of a public work "deliberately planned and carried out by the public agency." (62 C.2d 262.)

(b) The determinative factors. "First, the damage to this property, if reasonably foreseeable, would have entitled the property owners to compensation. Second, the likelihood of public works not being engaged in because of unseen and unforeseeable possible direct physical damage to real property is remote. Third, the property owners did suffer direct physical damage to their properties as the proximate result of the work as deliberately planned and carried out. Fourth, the cost of such damage can better be absorbed, and with infinitely less hardship, by the taxpayers as a whole than by the owners of the individual parcels damaged. Fifth, ... 'the owner of the damaged property if uncompensated would contribute more than his proper share to the public undertaking.' " (62 C.2d 263.)

(c) Rule for compensation. The court recognized the exceptions stated in Archer and Gray v. Reclamation Dist. No. 1500 (1917) 174 C. 622, 163 P. 1024: "[A]ctual physical injury to real property proximately caused by the improvement as deliberately designed and constructed is compensable ... whether foreseeable or not." (62 C.2d 263.)

(d) There was no estoppel. Plaintiffs had granted the right of way to the county for construction of the road, and the placement of the dirt fill was with their approval. However, this did not imply consent to damage that was not a necessary and reasonable incident to construction of the road. (62 C.2d 266.)

(e) Recovery of mitigation costs. Plaintiffs could recover the expense of an attempt to minimize damages. They spent $ 283,225 in a reasonable attempt in good faith to investigate the cause and to prevent further damage. The trial judge denied recovery of this sum on the ground that these expenditures did not increase the value of their land before the slide commenced, but this expense is to be considered in computing just compensation. "[I]t would seem that the public interest would be served by allowing the possibility of such a recovery; the owner, who is ordinarily in the best position to learn of and guard against danger to his property, would thereby be encouraged to attempt to minimize the loss inflicted on him by the condemnation, rather than simply to sit idly by and watch otherwise avoidable damages accumulate. To the extent that the loss is minimized, of course, the amount of the public entity's liability to the owner is reduced; and adequate protection for the public entity would seem to be provided by the requirements of good faith and reasonableness." (62 C.2d 272.) (See Sheffet v. Los Angeles (1970) 3 C.A.3d 720, 732, 733, 84 C.R. 11.)

In Holtz v. Superior Court (1970) 3 C.3d 296, 90 C.R. 345, 475 P.2d 441, defendant District (BART) excavated Market Street in San Francisco to a depth of 80 feet as part of the planned construction of an underground rapid transit system. Plaintiffs' buildings, located adjacent to the excavation, settled and cracked. Plaintiffs sued in two counts, on theories of inverse condemnation and negligence. The trial judge thought that C.C. 832, on lateral support (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §377), limited liability of public as well as private excavators, and struck out the inverse condemnation count. Held, mandamus granted to compel its reinstatement.

(a) Albers rule controlling. Albers explicitly rejected the notion of equating public with private liability, and emphasized the policy of distributing the loss where the owner of damaged property would otherwise contribute more than his or her proper share to the public undertaking. (3 C.3d 303.) To overcome the fear of an open-ended absolute liability that might impede beneficial public improvements, Albers was limited to actual physical injury, proximately caused by work planned and constructed; but despite the confusing use of the term "proximate cause" in this connection, there is no requirement of foreseeability of the damage. (3 C.3d 302, 303, 304, and footnote 9.)

(b) Gray exception inapplicable. The exception stated in Gray, for damages inflicted in the exercise of the police power, is inapplicable; it applies where the government acts under emergency conditions, e.g., destroying property to prevent the spread of a conflagration. (3 C.3d 305; see infra, §1139.)

(c) Archer exception inapplicable. The exception stated in Archer v. Los Angeles, supra, was developed in the limited area of water law, where a landowner was privileged to protect his or her property from floodwaters. It cannot be applied to resurrect the cases equating public and private liability, disapproved in Albers. Reardon v. San Francisco, supra, involving a sewer excavation, is in point here. (3 C.3d 307, 310.)

(d) Conclusion. "[P]hysical damages proximately resulting from a public improvement must be considered as direct a 'cost' as the property actually condemned or the materials actually utilized in its construction. Indeed, in most instances a public entity may be able to forestall unintended physical damage by initially employing more protective measures in the actual construction of the project; in the instant case, for example, defendant could probably have prevented the damage to plaintiffs' property by expending additional funds in shoring up its excavation. This comment does not imply, however, that defendants would necessarily be negligent in not expending such funds; the likelihood of the damage may have been so remote and the expense of the additional protection so great that it was reasonable (hence, non-negligent) for defendant to forego supplemental measures initially. Nevertheless, since the undertaking of the excavation at this lower cost created some risk, however slight, of damage to plaintiffs' property, it is proper to require the public entity to bear the loss when damage does occur." (3 C.3d 310.) (See Blau v. Los Angeles (1973) 32 C.A.3d 77, 84, 107 C.R. 727 [discussing causation tests of Albers and Holtz]; Ingram v. Redondo Beach (1975) 45 C.A.3d 628, 632, 119 C.R. 688 [same]; Yee v. Sausalito (1983) 141 C.A.3d 917, 190 C.R. 595, infra, §1147; Aetna Life & Cas. Co. v. Los Angeles (1985) 170 C.A.3d 865, 874, 216 C.R. 831 [inverse condemnation judgment was proper where design, construction, and maintenance of high voltage cables allowed intercable contact during windy conditions, resulting in sparks that caused fire]; Pacific Bell v. San Diego (2000) 81 C.A.4th 596, 602, 96 C.R.2d 897 [immunities provided by Tort Claims Act do not insulate public entity from liability for inverse condemnation]; Patel v. Southern Calif. Water Co. (2002) 97 C.A.4th 841, 844, 119 C.R.2d 119 [because enrichment of water company by leasing its land to cell phone companies is not "public use," lessee's crossing of plaintiff's land on water company easement to service and install telecommunications equipment was trespass, not inverse condemnation].)

The characterization of a public agency's deliberate action as negligent does not automatically prevent an action for inverse condemnation. "[T]o prove the type of governmental conduct that will support liability in inverse condemnation it is enough to show that the entity was aware of the risk posed by its public improvement and deliberately chose a course of action--or inaction--in the face of that known risk." (Arreola v. Monterey (2002) 99 C.A.4th 722, 742, 744, 122 C.R.2d 38 [following Pacific Bell; inadequate maintenance of flood control channel for over 20 years].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

25 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN
C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.
1. What Constitutes Damage.
d. Mitigation Damages.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1135

[§ 1135] Mitigation Damages.

In CUNA Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority (2003) 108 C.A.4th 382, 133 C.R.2d 470, the trial court entered judgment in favor of defendant transit authority, in an inverse condemnation action seeking to recover the costs plaintiff incurred in protecting its building from anticipated damage caused by excavation for defendant's metro rail station, because it found that no actual or prospective damage had been proved. Held, reversed and remanded. A property owner is entitled to recover "reasonable costs incurred to mitigate damage to the property that the property owner reasonably and in good faith believed would be caused by a work of public improvement even if post-mitigation events indicate there would have been no damage." Here, the trial court prejudicially erred by requiring plaintiff to show that "but for" plaintiff's repairs, the building would have been damaged. Actual physical damage to the property "is not a prerequisite to an award of mitigation damages." (108 C.A.4th 386.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

26 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Damage.

e. Service Duplication.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1136

[§ 1136] Service Duplication.

The Public Utilities Code provides for compensation of a privately owned public utility when a political subdivision extends the same type of water service to the service area of the utility. (Pub.Util.C. 1501 et seq.) This "constitutes a taking of the property of the private utility for a public purpose to the extent that the private utility is injured by reason of any of its property employed in providing the water service being made inoperative, reduced in value or rendered useless to the private utility for the purpose of providing water service to the service area." (Pub.Util.C. 1503.) If the compensation equals the value of all the property of the utility in the system employed in the service area, the political subdivision may adopt a resolution for the acquisition of that property. (Pub.Util.C. 1504.)

A declaration of purpose includes the legislative finding that, in view of its fixed rates, a private utility faces losses from duplication of service, and is often deterred from extending its facilities to provide necessary water to those in the service area. (Pub.Util.C. 1501.) (See Cucamonga County Water Dist. v. Southwest Water Co. (1971) 22 C.A.3d 245, 256, 99 C.R. 557 [upholding validity of statute against several constitutional challenges]; San Gabriel Valley Water Co. v. Montebello (1978) 84 C.A.3d 757, 148 C.R. 830 [valuation and damages]; Pub.Util.C. 1507 [chapter does not apply to specified reclaimed water uses in Los Angeles County].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

27 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Damage.

f. Violation of Deed Restriction.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1137

[§ 1137] Violation of Deed Restriction.

A covenant in a deed amounting to an equitable servitude is generally regarded as a property right (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §§440, 441); and a majority of the states allow compensation to persons owning land not condemned who suffer damage from condemnation of other land burdened by this kind of restriction. (See Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Bourgerie (1973) 9 C.3d 169, 172, 107 C.R. 76, 507 P.2d 964; Rest., Property §566; 4 A.L.R.3d 1137 [restrictive covenant or right to its enforcement as compensable property right]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §§153, 154.) California formerly denied an award on the theory that the interest is only a contractual right, not a property interest, and that the possible scope of compensation is too great. (See Friesen v. Glendale (1930) 209 C. 524, 531, 288 P. 1080; Lombardy v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. (1968) 266 C.A.2d 599, 604, 72 C.R. 240.)

In Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Bourgerie, supra, Friesen was overruled and the right to an award upheld. A deed of part of a tract of land to defendant grantees contained a provision that an adjoining portion retained by the grantor should not be used for an electric transmission station. Plaintiff public utility brought a condemnation action to acquire the grantor's land for this purpose, and defendants claimed compensation for violation of the restrictive covenant. Held, the covenant was "property" and defendants were entitled to compensation for damage caused by its violation.

(a) Denial of compensation for violation of a deed restriction is inconsistent with the award of compensation for taking an easement (see infra, §1233). "Both easements and building restrictions may be created by agreements between private parties and, therefore, upon condemnation in both situations the financial burden of the condemner is increased solely by virtue of agreements made between private parties. Equally important, the violation of a building restriction could cause far greater damage in monetary value to a property owner than the appropriation of a mere right of way. To establish a substantive distinction by merely labeling one a property interest for which compensation must be made and the other a mere contractual right which may be appropriated by a condemner without any compensation is inequitable and rationally indefensible." (9 C.3d 173.)

(b) The policy objection of increased cost is unpersuasive. Although the cost of condemning property might be increased, this will not significantly burden the power of condemnation. Some takings (e.g., parks or access roads) will result in negligible damage to owners of the restriction; others (e.g., schools or fire stations) will injure only those in close proximity to the improvement. (9 C.3d 174.)

(c) The procedural difficulty (joining many owners of restrictions as necessary parties) can be overcome; e.g., by selective joinder of those whose property is most likely to be damaged. (9 C.3d 174.)

(d) The speculative possibility that landowners might in bad faith enter into restrictive covenants solely to collect compensation cannot justify refusal to allow an award to those who act in good faith, and a court can deal with those guilty of sharp practice. (9 C.3d 175.)

Two justices dissented, arguing that easements and equitable servitudes are distinguishable, that the reasoning of Friesen is sound, and that the decision should be followed in the absence of legislative change. (9 C.3d 175.)

Where the property interest taken is a restrictive covenant or equitable servitude, value is computed in the same way as it is when an easement is taken. "[T]he owner of the land for whose benefit the restrictions were imposed is entitled to compensation for damage to the dominant estate, measured by the diminution in value of that property as a result of the taking." (Redevelopment Agency of Concord v. Tobriner (1984) 153 C.A.3d 367, 375, 200 C.R. 364; see infra, §1233.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

28 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

1. What Constitutes Damage.

g. Compensation to Option Holder.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1138

[§ 1138] Compensation to Option Holder.

It was originally thought that the holder of an option to buy property had only an expectancy, and was not entitled to compensation if the property was taken in eminent domain. (See East Bay Mun. Util. Dist. v. Kieffer (1929) 99 C.A. 240, 248, 278 P. 476; People v. Ocean Shore R. (1949) 90 C.A.2d 464, 469, 203 P.2d 579; Shaeffer v. California (1972) 22 C.A.3d 1017, 1021, 99 C.R. 861.)

In San Diego v. Miller (1975) 13 C.3d 684, 119 C.R. 491, 532 P.2d 139, the court repudiated this theory and held that the optionee has a property right that entitles him or her to a share in the condemnation award, i.e., the excess of the total award above the option purchase price.

(a) The historical rule against compensation of the option holder was based on the fact that the holder had no interest in the land itself, and Kieffer and Ocean Shore followed this test of "property interest-contractual right." (13 C.3d 690.) The trend, however, is to decide compensation issues on considerations of fairness and public policy, rather than on traditional common law concepts of property (see Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Bourgerie (1973) 9 C.3d 169, 107 C.R. 76, 507 P.2d 964, supra, §1137). (13 C.3d 691.)

(b) Under this approach, the condemnor suffers no loss when the option holder's right is recognized, for the total award is unaffected and only its allocation is involved. (13 C.3d 691.) And the optionor has no reasonable expectation of receiving anything more than the price specified in the option. (13 C.3d 692.)

(c) Public policy considerations are important. "Although the option has long been recognized in the marketplace, increased complexity and severity of land use laws and procedures has substantially enhanced the importance of its use. ... The option has become a prevalent method for securing to a potential land buyer the ability to ultimately purchase the land--while affording him the opportunity to undertake and complete the often expensive and lengthy process of determining whether his intended use of the land will be permitted. ... Such efforts by the optionee frequently increase the value of the optioned property, although legal title remains in the optionor. Given this increased importance of this option in the marketplace, frustration of the process appears unwise." (13 C.3d 692.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

29 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

2. Noncompensable Injury.

a. Emergency Exercise of Police Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1139

[§ 1139] Emergency Exercise of Police Power.

When property is destroyed or confiscated or its use is regulated in the valid exercise of the police power, no compensation is required. The scope of this exception, however, is limited to "emergency" situations where there is a public necessity to avert an impending peril. (See House v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1944) 25 C.2d 384, 391, 153 P.2d 950 [holding agency liable; flood control project, improperly constructed drainage system]; Holtz v. Superior Court (1970) 3 C.3d 296, 305, 90 C.R. 345, 475 P.2d 441, supra, §1134 [holding agency liable]; Morshead v. California Regional Water Quality Control Bd. (1975) 45 C.A.3d 442, 450, 119 C.R. 586 [compensation denied]; Brown v. California (1993) 21 C.A.4th 1500, 1504, 1505, 26 C.R.2d 687 [where state entered land to undertake toxic cleanup after owners abandoned it, there was no intended public use so as to support inverse condemnation action by holder of trust deed; state's conduct was legitimate exercise of police power]; Los Osos Valley Associates v. San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 C.A.4th 1670, 1676, 36 C.R.2d 758 [use of groundwater during drought conditions, thereby causing subsidence that leads to harm to plaintiff's buildings, is not type of "emergency" that would make defendant city immune from liability for damages]; Massingill v. Department of Food & Agriculture (2002) 102 C.A.4th 498, 506, 125 C.R.2d 561 [disapproving Brown v. California in nonemergency situations] C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §15.13.) (For federal cases denying compensation, see supra, §1131; on nonemergency exercise of police power as basis for inverse condemnation, see Rose v. Coalina (1987) 190 C.A.3d 1627, 1634, 236 C.R. 124 [demolition of downtown area because of earthquake damage].)

In Farmers Ins. Exchange v. California (1985) 175 C.A.3d 494, 221 C.R. 225, plaintiff insurance companies, having paid numerous claims of policyholders for paint damage to automobiles caused by the state's aerial spraying of fruit fly-infested areas, brought this action to recover the amounts paid. On the cause of action for inverse condemnation, the court held that the police power exception applied and that a demurrer was properly sustained.

(a) Control of the Mediterranean fruit fly infestation proved to be beyond the control of the counties, and the Governor declared a state of emergency pursuant to the Emergency Services Act (Govt.C. 8625 et seq.). The wide-scale aerial spraying with malathion was undertaken pursuant to this statutory authority, and thus constituted an exercise of police power making the damages inflicted noncompensable. (175 C.A.3d 501.)

(b) Plaintiffs contended that the question whether the exercise of the police power was reasonable was one of fact and could not be resolved at the pleading stage. This may be so where it is unclear whether the public agency is exercising a regulatory police power or an eminent domain power constituting a taking. But where there is an obvious public emergency calling for immediate action, the emergency constitutes full justification for the measures taken. And among the types of emergencies justifying action without compensation are "the demolition of all or parts of buildings to prevent the spread of conflagration, or the destruction of diseased animals, of rotten fruit, or infected trees where life or health is jeopardized." (175 C.A.3d 494, citing House v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist., supra.)

(c) Plaintiffs further contended that legislation enacted in 1982, establishing a "Medfly Claims Fund" with a $ 4 million appropriation as the exclusive source of payment for claims arising from the infestation, was a waiver of the immunity provision of the Emergency Services Act. However, the Medfly Claims Fund Act limits compensation for damages to automobiles to $ 689 or 20% of the car's value; and "[w]e do not find it inconsistent that the state assert its right to exercise its police power without incurring unlimited liability for damage caused thereby, and still provide a limited fund for partial reimbursement to those so damaged." (175 C.A.3d 502.)

In Odello Bros. v. Monterey (1998) 63 C.A.4th 778, 73 C.R.2d 903, defendant county declared an emergency and breached a levee protecting plaintiff's farm because of the inadequacy of another levee, which protected a commercial and residential area. In holding that the emergency exception did not shield the county from liability for inverse condemnation, the court looked to factors occurring before the "emergency." The county had prior knowledge of the flood threat. If the county had implemented its flood plan and condemned part of plaintiff's property, then it would have been required to compensate plaintiff for the property taken. The emergency action was necessary due to the inadequacy of the other levee, an inadequacy that was acknowledged as early as 1989 and that had caused flooding just 2 months prior to the flooding necessitating the breach. (63 C.A.4th 791.)

"[I]t would be antithetical to the principles of our Constitution to permit a public entity to burden private property simply because the public entity's inadequate flood control measures threatened other, more populated property. If the emergency exception were applied in these circumstances, the appellants would be required to contribute a disproportionate share of the public undertaking. Such a result would be neither fair nor just, regardless of County's ... declaration of an emergency." (63 C.A.4th 791.)

The removal of structures that protect a plaintiff's property but encroach on public land is a reasonable exercise of the police power, and a consequent decrease in value of plaintiff's property does not give rise to an inverse condemnation action. (Scott v. Del Mar (1997) 58 C.A.4th 1296, 1307, 68 C.R.2d 317.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Thousand Trails v. California Reclamation Dist. No. 17 (2004) 124 C.A.4th 450, 464, 21 C.R.3d 196

[distinguishing Odello Bros. v. Monterey (1998) 63 C.A.4th 778, 73 C.R.2d 903, text, p. 778; cutting levee in one spot to prevent massive flooding elsewhere was legitimate exercise of police power].

30 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

2. Noncompensable Injury.

b. No Property Right.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1140

[§ 1140] No Property Right.

Although technical concepts of property law are not always controlling (see Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Bourgerie (1973) 9 C.3d 169, 175, 107 C.R. 76, 507 P.2d 964, supra, §1137), there are a few situations in which the courts, in denying an award, characterized the asserted interest as speculative or contingent and therefore not a compensable property right. The following are examples:

(1) License terminable at will. (See United States v. Fuller (1973) 409 U.S. 488, 93 S.Ct. 801, 804, 35 L.Ed.2d 16, 22 [government is not required to compensate for value added to condemned land by revocable permit authorizing use of neighboring government land]; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Peterson (1969) 270 C.A.2d 434, 437, 75 C.R. 673 [neighbors "simply acquiesced" in crop dusting]; Belmont County Water Dist. v. California (1976) 65 C.A.3d 13, 19, 135 C.R. 163 [permit that was revocable and conditional].)

A telephone company "franchise" to locate its facilities in a public street is not a grant of a property interest in the street. The franchise is subject to an implied obligation to relocate the facilities to make way for a proper governmental use of the streets, and the utility must do so at its own expense. (Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Redevelopment Agency of Redlands (1977) 75 C.A.3d 957, 963, 142 C.R. 584 [action by company to recover costs on theory of inverse condemnation; judgment for defendant affirmed].)

(2) Contract right in another's easement. (See Hayward v. Mohr (1958) 160 C.A.2d 427, 433, 325 P.2d 209 [defendant granted easement for sewer line, reserving right to make sewer connections for her own land; following Friesen v. Glendale (1930) 209 C. 524, 288 P. 1080, since overruled, in holding that reserved right was not property within constitutional provision].)

(3) Unreasonable use of water. In Joslin v. Marin Mun. Water Dist. (1967) 67 C.2d 132, 60 C.R. 377, 429 P.2d 889, defendant impounded water of a stream for municipal water supply purposes. Plaintiffs, riparian owners about a mile downstream, sued in inverse condemnation, alleging that the stream formerly carried rock, sand, and gravel to their land, which they sold, and that the interference with the flow caused a cessation of the deposits. Held, the injury was not compensable. The use of water to carry and deposit materials did not meet the California constitutional requirement of reasonable use (see 13 Summary (10th), Real Property, §937); consequently, there was no legally recognized property right taken or damaged by defendants. (67 C.2d 143.)

(4) Speculative right. In People v. Hecker (1960) 179 C.A.2d 823, 4 C.R. 334, the state sued to condemn lands lying seaward to the ocean. Held, as against the state, defendant littoral owner had no right of access to the ocean over the tideland parcel taken; hence, the right taken had no compensable value. (179 C.A.2d 842.)

(5) Prior relinquishment of right. In People v. Wilson (1994) 25 C.A.4th 977, 31 C.R.2d 52, the state in 1954 purchased land from defendant's parents for construction of a freeway; the 1954 deed released "any and all abutter's rights." In 1991, the state purchased an additional parcel from defendant for the purpose of widening the freeway and erecting a sound wall, and defendant sought damages for the blockage of travelers' views of his business. Held, the prior relinquishment of abutter's rights included the right to a view; hence, defendant was not entitled to severance damages for the loss of view. (25 C.A.4th 980.)

(6) Right of first refusal. In Campbell v. Alger (1999) 71 C.A.4th 200, 207, 83 C.R.2d 696, 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §178, a case of first impression, coowners of property held a right of first refusal, which arose only if the coowners decided to sell their interests "to a third party after having received a bona fide and written offer for such purchase" or if they made an offer to sell their interest to a third party. Held, condemnation "does not trigger the private right of first refusal." (71 C.A.4th 208.)

(7) Contract regarding development rights. In San Jose Parking v. Superior Court (2003) 110 C.A.4th 1321, 2 C.R.3d 505, the court held that a redevelopment agency, whose condemnation powers were expressly limited to real property, had no power to acquire a parking company's rights in a parking lot. The contract between the parties made clear that it was only a contract regarding development negotiations, and it specifically stated that it did not convey any interest in the property, including any leasehold interest. (110 C.A.4th 1331.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

31 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

2. Noncompensable Injury.

c. Access to Navigable Waters.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1141

[§ 1141] Access to Navigable Waters.

In Colberg v. California (1967) 67 C.2d 408, 62 C.R. 401, 432 P.2d 3, the court refused to apply the rule of the highway cases (see infra, §1148 et seq.) to navigable waterways.

The Stockton Deep Water Ship Channel is a navigable tidal waterway extending from the mouth of the San Joaquin River to the Port of Stockton. The Upper Channel is accessible to oceangoing vessels. Plaintiffs C and S owned land riparian to the channel, on which they operated shipyards for the construction and repair of vessels. The state, with federal permission, proposed to construct twin stationary freeway bridges across the Upper Channel, with a vertical clearance of 45 feet. Higher clearance, to permit large vessels to reach plaintiffs' shipyards, would be prohibitively expensive, and a drawbridge would not be suitable. The proposed bridges would cut off substantial business of plaintiffs' shipyards. Accordingly, they sought a declaration that the construction would be a compensable taking or damaging. Held, judgment for defendant state on the pleadings affirmed.

(a) General principle of compensable damage. Plaintiffs must assert damage to a private right. They cannot claim compensation for damage to the right of navigation which is the same as that suffered by the general public. They want the clearance now given by the Carquinez Bridge, which is 145 feet high; hence, they claim a right in a column of air 135 feet high from their property to the sea. If they had this right, countless riparian owners along the entire channel would have a similar right. (67 C.2d 415, and footnote 8.) Plaintiffs' private right--access of a riparian owner to the waterway--is not impaired. (67 C.2d 416.)

(b) Paramount right of state over navigable waters. The state holds all navigable waterways and lands beneath them as trustee of a public trust for the benefit of the people. (67 C.2d 416.) It has the power to deal with these waters "in any manner consistent with the improvement of commercial intercourse, whether navigational or otherwise." (67 C.2d 419.) The federal paramount power derives from the Commerce Clause and can be exercised only to aid navigation; the California power, though subject to the superior federal power, is wider in scope. (67 C.2d 420.) Hence, just as the property owner's access is burdened with the federal "navigation servitude," so it is burdened with a servitude commensurate with the broader state power. (67 C.2d 420.)

(c) Rejection of highway analogy. The right of access to a land highway derives from the "land service road"

concept. Roads are conceived of as arteries constructed through condemnation of private land for the purpose of serving other land abutting on them, not for public traffic. Navigable waters, however, "constitute a natural resource retained within the public domain for the purpose of serving public traffic in accordance with the greatest common benefit." (67 C.2d 424.)

(d) Conclusion. "We hold that plaintiffs' right of access from their respective riparian properties to the waters of the channel, whatever its scope as against private parties, is burdened with a servitude in favor of the state and that, since there is here no direct physical invasion of, or encroachment upon, said properties by the state, plaintiffs are not entitled to compensation for the abridgement or diminution, if any, of such right of access as a result of the lawful exercise of the state's power to regulate, control and deal with its navigable waters." (67 C.2d 425.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

32 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

C. Taking or Damage Under California Constitution.

2. Noncompensable Injury.

d. Damage Occurring During Arrest.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1142

[§ 1142] Damage Occurring During Arrest.

In Customer Co. v. Sacramento (1995) 10 C.4th 368, 41 C.R.2d 658, 895 P.2d 900, Nash, a robbery suspect who was thought to be armed, went into plaintiff's store. Plainclothes officers staked out the store, intending to arrest Nash when he left. However, the dispatcher was not informed that the operation was a covert one, and marked police vehicles with emergency lights flashing soon arrived, dashing any hope of taking Nash by stealth. Attempts to negotiate failed, and police ultimately fired tear gas into the store, causing severe damage to plaintiff's store and inventory. Plaintiff sued defendant city, both in inverse condemnation and under the Tort Claims Act, for the property damage. The trial judge granted judgment on the pleadings in favor of defendant, and the Court of Appeal affirmed. Held, affirmed.

(a) Cal. Const., Art. I, §19, provides that private property "may be taken or damaged for public use only when just compensation ... has first been paid." A literal interpretation of this language could be used to support plaintiff's position. However, its history and the decisions show that it was intended to compensate the owners of property taken for public improvement by the process of eminent domain, or when, because of a public improvement, adjacent property is damaged, even though it is not taken. (10 C.4th 376, 378.)

(b) "In the present case, of course, the property damage for which Customer seeks to recover bears no relation to a 'public improvement' or 'public work' of any kind. Instead, the damage was caused by actions of public employees having 'no relation to the function' of a public improvement whatsoever. ... [P]roperty damage caused in such a manner never has been understood to give rise to an action for inverse condemnation in California, but rather has been treated as subject to the general tort principles applicable to governmental entities." (10 C.4th 383.)

(c) This is not even a case where private property, such as an automobile, is taken to apprehend a fleeing suspect. That kind of case, like one in eminent domain, involves the taking of private property for a public use and might arguably require just compensation. The present case, however, bears no resemblance to one at eminent domain. (10 C.4th 388.)

(d) Any doubt that an action for inverse condemnation will not lie under these facts is dispelled by consideration of the emergency exception to the rule that just compensation is due. The cases have consistently held that when private property has been taken or damaged by a city's exercise of its police power in an emergency, just compensation is not

due. The dissent would not apply this exception in this case because the government allegedly was a substantial cause of the emergency. However, the government did not cause the situation where an armed and dangerous felon actively fled from the police, nor did the government cause the suspect to enter plaintiff's store and refuse to leave when lawfully ordered to do so by the police. (10 C.4th 385.)

(e) To accept plaintiff's position would be to hold that the adoption of the words "or damaged" in 1879 amounted to an abolition of the then existing doctrine of governmental immunity. "There is absolutely nothing in the history of the constitutional provision to support this conclusion, however, and--from 1879 through the adoption of the Tort Claims Act in 1963--the Legislature and the courts of California uniformly interpreted the 'or damaged' clause as not effecting such a general repeal of the governmental immunity doctrine." (10 C.4th 389, citing the text.)

(f) Adoption of plaintiff's position would lead to inconsistent results. For example, plaintiff would be able to recover for his property damage, but had an employee been in the store, he could not have recovered for any personal injuries he might have received. Hence, inverse condemnation is an inappropriate vehicle for compensating innocent victims of a crime. (10 C.4th 389.)

(g) A plaintiff in an inverse condemnation action is entitled to attorneys' fees, costs, and prejudgment interest. "Allowing Customer to bring an action for inverse condemnation not only would permit Customer to seek recovery of its damages without complying with the requirements of the Tort Claims Act, including its immunity provisions, but would allow Customer as well to seek recovery of its attorney fees and an award of prejudgment interest, neither of which would be available in a negligence action under the Tort Claims Act." The amount of attorney fees and prejudgment interest here far eclipse the amount of Customer's property loss. There is no reason for a plaintiff seeking recovery for property damage to "be permitted to obtain the additional benefit of attorney fees and prejudgment interest by bringing an action for inverse condemnation, while a plaintiff seeking recovery for personal injuries sustained by the same governmental conduct would not be entitled to such remuneration." (10 C.4th 391.)

(h) Property owners in Customer's position may be able to secure reimbursement for all or part of their loss from the public entity under a program established to aid victims of crime, as authorized by Govt. C. 29631, 29632. "It is worth noting that these statutes, and the reimbursement programs they authorize, would be unnecessary if Customer were correct in its assertion that public entities are required by section 19 to compensate property owners for the damage they suffer as the result of efforts by law enforcement officers to enforce the criminal laws." (10 C.4th 393.)

A dissenting justice argued that both the language of Cal. Const., Art. I, §19, and its modern history favor compensating persons who lose property as a result of police work, when the police themselves cause the situation that leads to the loss of property. (10 C.4th 404.) (See 24 Pepperdine L. Rev. 274 [Customer Co.]; 18 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 175 [same]; 34 McGeorge L. Rev. 1 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

33 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

1. In General.

a. Nature of Action.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1143

[§ 1143] Nature of Action.

(1) In General. The term "inverse condemnation" is applied to an action by an owner to recover damages for injury to his or her property from some public works undertaking or other activity by an agency with power to condemn. The designation was coined because the object--compensation for property damaged in connection with a public use--is the same as in a condemnation action. (See Heimann v. Los Angeles (1947) 30 C.2d 746, 753, 185 P.2d 597; Cothran v. San Jose Water Works (1962) 58 C.2d 608, 614, 25 C.R. 569, 375 P.2d 449; Klopping v. Whittier (1972) 8 C.3d 39, 43, 104 C.R. 1, 500 P.2d 1345; Yox v. Whittier (1986) 182 C.A.3d 347, 351, 227 C.R. 311; Baker v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Authority (1985) 39 C.3d 862, 866, 218 C.R. 293, 705 P.2d 866, infra, §1144; Marin Mun. Water Dist. v. Mill Valley (1988) 202 C.A.3d 1161, 1166, 249 C.R. 469 [one public entity may state cause of action for inverse condemnation against another]; Housley v. Poway (1993) 20 C.A.4th 801, 807, 24 C.R.2d 554 [as in eminent domain, fair market value is general measure of damages for inverse condemnation]; Friends of H Street v. Sacramento (1993) 20 C.A.4th 152, 167, 24 C.R.2d 607 [residents complaining of traffic speed and volume on their street could not state cause of action for inverse condemnation; changes in traffic flow do not constitute substantial impairment of right of access]; Customer Co. v. Sacramento (1995) 10 C.4th 368, 41 C.R.2d 658, 895 P.2d 900, supra, §1142; Van Alstyne, California Inverse Condemnation Law; 11 Miller & Starr 3d, §30:1 et seq.; 32 Proof of Facts 3d 405 [inverse condemnation by physical invasion]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, Chaps. 13 et seq.) (On authority of public agencies to insure against potential inverse condemnation claims, see Govt.C. 990(a), 11007.4(b); on inverse condemnation class actions, see 4 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §277.)

C.C.P. 1265.110, providing that a lease terminates when the property is acquired for public use, applies to inverse condemnation actions. (Kong v. Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2002) 108 C.A.4th 1028, 1038, footnote 10, 134 C.R.2d 260.)

(2) Invasion of Property Right. The plaintiff must show an invasion of a property right. A potential user of water does not have this right and cannot base a cause of action for inverse condemnation on a demand that he or she be treated in the same fashion as existing water users in a district. (Hollister Park Inv. Co. v. Goleta County Water Dist. (1978) 82 C.A.3d 290, 293, 147 C.R. 91; see Jordan v. Santa Barbara (1996) 46 C.A.4th 1245, 1257, 54 C.R.2d 340 [risk of water damage is not sufficient].)

(3) Real and Personal Property. In Sutfin v. California (1968) 261 C.A.2d 50, 67 C.R. 665, plaintiff alleged that defendant state, in highway and flood control works, discharged water from a creek onto plaintiff's motor vehicles located on nearby real property. Held, judgment on demurrer reversed; the action lies where the damage is to either real or personal property. (261 C.A.2d 53.) (See Marin Mun. Water Dist. v. Mill Valley, supra, 202 C.A.3d 1166 [inverse condemnation action is available for damage to franchise interest].)

(4) Distinction: Unconstitutional Regulation. In Fresno Police Officers Assn. v. California (1987) 190 C.A.3d 413, 235 C.R. 474, plaintiff public employees alleged that their employment contracts were property interests that the state damaged by refusing to pay interest on salary increases that had been withheld under statutes later declared unconstitutional. Held, "inverse condemnation is an inappropriate and undesirable remedy in cases in which unconstitutional regulation is alleged." (190 C.A.3d 417, quoting Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, supra, §1058.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Red Mountain, LLC v. Fallbrook Public Util. Dist. (2006) 143 C.A.4th 333, 355, 48 C.R.3d 875 [trial court did not err in allowing awards for both eminent domain and inverse condemnation where inverse condemnation award was for diminution in value of land that occurred before eminent domain was sought]; Ventura v. Channel Islands Marina (2008) 159 C.A.4th 615, 618, 624, 71 C.R.3d 762 [inverse condemnation is not proper remedy where wrong that was committed is nothing more than breach of lease]. Cross-Reference: 4 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §290.

(2) Invasion of Property Right. See Regency Outdoor Advertising v. Los Angeles (2006) 39 C.4th 507, 522, 46 C.R.3d 742, 139 P.3d 119, 6 Cal. Proc. (5th), Proceedings Without Trial, §84 [lessee of billboards along main thoroughfare had no property right warranting compensation from impairment of visibility caused by municipal landscaping project adding mature palm trees on public property].

34 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

1. In General.

b. Entity Without Eminent Domain Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1144

[§ 1144] Entity Without Eminent Domain Power.

Some out-of-state and federal cases have taken the position that a public entity lacking the power to condemn cannot be liable in inverse condemnation. (See Baker v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Authority (1985) 39 C.3d 862, 866, 218 C.R. 293, 705 P.2d 866.) This "mechanical view" was rejected in Baker. Defendant airport authority, though a public entity, was not authorized by statute to condemn air space easements. Plaintiff homeowners who lived adjacent to the airport sued for inverse condemnation and nuisance caused by noise, smoke, and vibrations from flights over their homes. The trial court entered judgment for defendant on demurrer, ruling that (a) the nuisance cause of action was barred by the statute of limitations, and (b) inverse condemnation would not lie because defendant had no power to condemn. Held, reversed. The nuisance cause was not barred (see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §553), and the inverse condemnation suit could be maintained.

(a) The authorities denying the right to sue fail to recognize that the term "inverse condemnation" describes "an action grounded not on statutory condemnation power, but on the constitutional proscription against the ... taking or damaging ... of property for public use without just compensation." (39 C.3d 866.) "A landowner whose property has been invaded by a public entity that lacks eminent domain power suffers no less a taking merely because the defendant was not authorized to take." (39 C.3d 866.)

(b) In view of the constitutional basis of inverse condemnation, the plaintiff need not prove statutory authority of the defendant entity to exercise affirmative eminent domain powers. "All that is necessary to show is that the damage resulted from an exercise of governmental power while seeking to promote 'the general interest in its relation to any legitimate object of government.'" (39 C.3d 867.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §602.

35 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

1. In General.

c. Recovery for Loss of Goodwill.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1145

[§ 1145] Recovery for Loss of Goodwill.

Compensation for loss of goodwill is recoverable in inverse condemnation. In enacting C.C.P. 1263.510 (infra, §1245), making loss of goodwill compensable in eminent domain proceedings, the Legislature did not intend for that statute to apply to inverse condemnation proceedings. However, the rules that apply to eminent domain also apply, when appropriate, in inverse condemnation proceedings, and goodwill is therefore compensable in an inverse condemnation action to the same extent as in an eminent domain action. (Chhour v. Community Redevelopment Agency of Buena Park (1996) 46 C.A.4th 273, 278, 282, 53 C.R.2d 585; see Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 C.A.4th 558, 568, 76 C.R.2d 575, infra, §1245 [discussing and distinguishing Chhour].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

36 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

2. Physical Taking or Damage.

a. Flood and Water Damage.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1146

[§ 1146] Flood and Water Damage.

In Belair v. Riverside County Flood Control Dist. (1988) 47 C.3d 550, 253 C.R. 693, 764 P.2d 1070, plaintiffs sued defendant flood control district and the State of California for damages caused when a flood control levee gave way and plaintiffs' lands were flooded.

(a) Under Albers v. Los Angeles (1965) 62 C.2d 250, 42 C.R. 89, 398 P.2d 129, supra, §1134, and Holtz v. Superior Court (1970) 3 C.3d 296, 90 C.R. 345, 475 P.2d 441, supra, §1134, liability in inverse condemnation may exist even though there are concurrent causes of the damage; "proximate cause is established where the public improvement constitutes a substantial concurring cause of the injury, i.e., where the injury occurred in substantial part because the improvement failed to function as it was intended." (47 C.3d 559, 560.)

(b) The water flow at the time of the failure was 25,000 cubic feet per second (cfs), well within the levee's design capacity of 86,000 cfs; thus, the levee failed to function as intended. That the property was subject to flooding prior to construction of the levee is not determinative; plaintiffs had made improvements to their property in reliance on protection provided by the levee, and the failure to provide this protection was a substantial cause of the damages. (47 C.3d 560.)

(c) The exception stated in Archer v. Los Angeles (1941) 19 C.2d 19, 24, 119 P.2d 1, to the rule of strict liability (see supra, §1134) was recognized in both Albers and Holtz. However, Holtz emphasized that public flood control improvements should not have the same immunity as private measures. (47 C.3d 563, 564.) The question presented here is what standard applies in these cases. (47 C.3d 565.) A public agency should not be made an absolute insurer of lands protected by a flood control project, but, in light of the enormous potential for damage, it must at least "act reasonably and non-negligently. ... [T]he fact that a dam bursts or a levee fails is not sufficient, standing alone, to impose liability. However, where the public agency's design, construction or maintenance of a flood control project is shown to have posed an unreasonable risk of harm to the plaintiffs, and such unreasonable design, construction or maintenance constituted a substantial cause of the damages, plaintiffs may recover regardless of the fact that the project's purpose is to contain the 'common enemy' of floodwaters." (47 C.3d 565.)

(d) A number of Court of Appeal decisions appear to impose absolute liability where a public improvement diverts

water from its natural course. (47 C.3d 566.) "It is doubtful, however, whether evidence of an unintended 'diversion' ... would elevate the test of inverse condemnation liability to absolute liability, rather than a reasonableness standard. ... It is sufficient for our purposes here to hold that when a public flood control improvement fails to function as intended, and properties historically subject to flooding are damaged as a proximate result thereof, plaintiffs' recovery in inverse condemnation requires proof that the failure was attributable to some unreasonable conduct on the part of the defendant public entities." (47 C.3d 567.)

In Bunch v. Coachella Valley Water Dist. (1989) 214 C.A.3d 203, 262 C.R. 513, an inverse condemnation action to recover damages to plaintiffs' apartment building substantially caused by failure of defendant district's flood control measures, the trial court entered judgment for plaintiffs without requiring them to prove the unreasonableness of defendant's actions, as required by the subsequently decided Belair decision. Held, reversed; the Belair standard of reasonableness is applicable in all flood control/inverse condemnation cases where unintended physical damage is alleged to have been substantially caused by an unintended failure of flood control facilities.

(a) No estoppel. Defendant is not estopped from relying on the Belair decision by the fact that, in its trial brief, it stated that a rule of strict liability, i.e., liability without regard to reasonableness, applies in this kind of case. Because Belair had not been decided when this matter was before the trial court, it makes no sense to suggest that defendant's brief induced the trial court to disregard the Belair decision. Defendant argued the applicability of Belair to the facts of this case at its earliest opportunity--on appeal. (214 C.A.3d 210.)

(b) Belair is not limited to "common enemy doctrine" cases. Where flood control facilities are designed only to protect against the "common enemy" of floodwaters by improving natural drainage courses or by collecting surface floodwaters and directing them into their natural means of discharge, and where there is no intentional diversion of waters from their natural course, the doctrine confers immunity from liability for any resulting damages. (214 C.A.3d 211.) Although Belair held that the doctrine was inapplicable where there is both substantial causation and unreasonable conduct, the entire tenor of the opinion, as well as specific language, indicate that the unreasonableness requirement is applicable beyond the limited scope of "common enemy" cases. (214 C.A.3d 212.) By focusing on constitutional principles, rather than the common law principles embodied in the doctrine, and basing its analysis on public policy and common sense, in addition to prior case law, Belair signaled "an intention to seek a uniform standard of liability that would apply across the entire spectrum of flood control inverse condemnation cases involving unintended physical damage to property." (214 C.A.3d 213.)

(c) Belair is applicable to "intentional diversion" cases. Belair acknowledged a line of cases imposing a rule of strict liability in "intentional diversion" cases. However, the scope of the rule is unclear, because it is not certain whether the "diversion" referred to relates to diversion from a particular place or to a particular place. For example, a flood control facility that collects waters from two natural watercourses and moves them to yet a third, produces an intentional diversion of waters from the two natural watercourses, but, were the same facility to spring a leak and spread water to an unintended area, it would produce an unintentional diversion of water to a particular location. Belair suggests that its focus was on unintentional diversions of water to a particular place. This analytical framework is logically consistent with an inquiry into both the reasonableness of the agency's conduct and whether the facility failed to function as intended. (214 C.A.3d 214.) Hence, "the appropriate focus in flood control/inverse condemnation cases involving unintended physical damage to property is on whether water is unintentionally diverted to a particular place--without regard to whether the water is intentionally diverted from a particular place." (214 C.A.3d 215.)

(d) Retroactive application. Belair announced a new rule of law that should be applied retroactively. (214 C.A.3d 216.)

Yue v. Auburn (1992) 3 C.A.4th 751, 4 C.R.2d 653, held that when a cause of action in inverse condemnation is based on surface water damage rather than flood water damage, Belair does not apply. The action is governed by the principles set forth in Albers, and recovery may be had for damage caused by a public improvement as deliberately planned and built, without regard to foreseeability. (3 C.A.4th 757, 759.)

A contrary holding was reached in Locklin v. Lafayette (1994) 7 C.4th 327, 27 C.R.2d 613, 867 P.2d 724, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §965, where the court applied the principles of Belair to surface water damage. "[T]he privilege to utilize a natural watercourse for drainage of surface waters from improved public property and to make improvements in or alterations to a natural watercourse for the purpose of improving such drainage is a conditional privilege, not an absolute privilege. ... [T]he public entity is liable only if its conduct posed an unreasonable risk of harm to the plaintiffs, and that unreasonable conduct is a substantial cause of the damage to plaintiff's property. The rule of strict liability generally followed in inverse condemnation ... is not applicable in this context." (7 C.4th 366, 367.) (See 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1352.)

On appeal after remand, the court in Bunch v. Coachella Valley Water Dist. (1997) 15 C.4th 432, 63 C.R.2d 89, 935 P.2d 796, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §969, affirmed that "Belair's reasonableness standard, as endorsed and refined by Locklin's balancing principles ... , should apply to flood control cases, including this one, where the failure of publicly managed flood control facilities causes property damage. ... If the public entity's conduct is unreasonable and a substantial cause of damage, the entity 'is liable for the proportionate amount of damage caused by its actions.' ... This inverse condemnation rule invokes constitutional balancing principles and is not governed by tort concepts of fault or negligence. It requires a balancing of the public need for flood control against the gravity of harm caused by unnecessary damage to private property." (15 C.4th 436, noting in footnote 1 that this case does not decide question whether reasonableness standard applies when flood control measures cause flood damage to land that is not historically subject to flooding.) The court disapproved several pre-Belair cases based on a strict liability standard. (15 C.4th 447, 448.)

Belair and Bunch II were discussed in Akins v. California (1998) 61 C.A.4th 1, 71 C.R.2d 314, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §969, and distinguished on their facts. Those cases involved a situation "where a public entity tries to protect private property owners from a risk created by nature and in doing so may alter the risks created by nature, but the entity's efforts fail. On the other hand is a situation where government appropriates private property in order to protect other property, creating a risk which would not otherwise exist." (61 C.A.4th 33.) An intentional diversion of water that "floods private property not historically subject to flooding subjects flood control agencies to inverse condemnation liability without proof of unreasonable conduct." (61 C.A.4th 33.) (See Odello Bros. v. Monterey (1998) 63 C.A.4th 778, 792, 73 C.R.2d 903, supra, §1139 [applying policies of Belair, Locklin, and Bunch to public entity's deliberate decision to breach levee]; Pacific Bell v. San Diego (2000) 81 C.A.4th 596, 610, 615, 96 C.R.2d 897 [ordinary rules of inverse condemnation strict liability for damages caused by failure of public improvement apply to action for damages caused by break in antiquated municipal water pipeline; distinguishing Belair, Locklin, and Bunch]; Paterno v. California (1999) 74 C.A.4th 68, 87, 87 C.R.2d 754 [to establish taking in case of shoddy maintenance of levee, plaintiff must prove unreasonable plan of maintenance, not just poor execution of maintenance; following Bauer v. Ventura (1955) 45 C.2d 276, 286, 289 P.2d 1]; Arreola v. Monterey (2002) 99 C.A.4th 722, 740, 753, 122 C.R.2d 38, supra, §1134 [distinguishing Paterno, reviewing cases, and applying Locklin reasonableness factors to counties' inadequate maintenance of flood control channel for over 20 years; reasonableness factors did not apply to state, which had duty to avoid blocking floodplain in constructing highway]; Paterno v. California (2003) 113 C.A.4th 998, 1019, 1027, 1033, 6 C.R.3d 854 [on remand after Paterno I, reviewing cases, and applying Locklin; state has inverse liability for foreseeable flood damage resulting from seepage that caused levee to fail where it accepted levee from county that built it, incorporated it into public flood control project, and benefited by cost savings from not correcting known structural defects; however, flood control district, which does not control levee in way that it could cure defects, is not liable]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §14.2 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Thousand Trails v. California Reclamation Dist. No. 17 (2004) 124 C.A.4th 450, 465, 21 C.R.3d 196 [there is no cause of action for inverse condemnation based on risk of future flooding]; California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Palo Alto (2006) 138 C.A.4th 474, 483, 41 C.R.3d 503 [following Belair v. Riverside County Flood Control Dist. (1988) 47 C.3d 550, 253 C.R. 693, 764 P.2d 1070, text, p. 787; city was liable for property damage resulting from sewage backup into private home; once plaintiff established that backup was caused by blockage in city's sewer pipe, burden shifted to city to show that other forces alone caused injury; plaintiff established that public improvement failed to function as it was intended, and did not need to show how and why blockage occurred]; Tilton v. Reclamation Dist. No. 800 (2006) 142 C.A.4th 848, 859, 48 C.R.3d 366 [inadequate maintenance of levee, as opposed to faulty design or construction, is not adequate basis for inverse condemnation claim]; Skoumbas v. Orinda (2008) 165 C.A.4th 783, 794, 81 C.R.3d 242 [following Belair; city need not own entire drainage system to be liable for damages to downhill property caused by outfall of storm water diverted from city road and emanating from city-owned improvement if improvement had substantial cause-and-effect relationship to plaintiff's damage].

37 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

2. Physical Taking or Damage.

b. Land Subsidence.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1147

[§ 1147] Land Subsidence.

In Yee v. Sausalito (1983) 141 C.A.3d 917, 190 C.R. 595, plaintiff alleged that defendant city's storm drainage system ruptured, allowing surface water to seep into subsurface soil adjacent to his property and causing massive soil subsidence; and that the damage resulted from use of the public improvement as deliberately designed, constructed, and maintained. Defendant city contended that this was a tort action for negligent maintenance of a public improvement, and barred for failure to file a claim. Held, a cause of action in inverse condemnation was stated.

(a) Inverse condemnation is the remedy only for that injury to private property as results from a deliberate act carrying with it the purpose of fulfilling a public object. The justification for inverse condemnation liability is that the government, acting in furtherance of public objectives, is taking a calculated risk that private property may be damaged. (141 C.A.3d 920.)

(b) Thus, "the focus of judicial inquiry is not whether the injury was expected or foreseeable, but whether that injury was proximately caused by the use of the public improvement for its intended public purpose." (141 C.A.3d 921.) Defendant, arguing that the system was not designed or constructed in a manner that would intentionally permit underground infiltration of waters, draws an artificial and irrelevant distinction. The gutter of the system was designed to collect and divert water into a storm drain, and the damage occurred when surface water so diverted seeped into the soil of property adjacent to plaintiff's land. (141 C.A.3d 921.) Thus, the injury occurred while the improvement was operating as intended, and not as a result of use for a purpose unrelated to storm damage (e.g., as a catch basin for accumulation of debris). (141 C.A.3d 922.)

(c) "Practically speaking, the city accomplished its intended public purpose of diverting and collecting rain water in an unintended manner and at plaintiff's expense," and plaintiff should not be made to suffer a disproportionate burden for the benefit of the public as a whole. (141 C.A.3d 922.) (See Souza v. Silver Dev. Co. (1985) 164 C.A.3d 165, 170, 210 C.R. 146 [following Yee]; Bunch v. Coachella Valley Water Dist. (1997) 15 C.4th 432, 448, 63 C.R.2d 89, 935 P.2d 796, supra, §1146 [disapproving Yee to extent it imposes rule of strict liability in flood control cases].)

In Wildensten v. East Bay Regional Park Dist. (1991) 231 C.A.3d 976, 283 C.R. 13, the issue was "whether a governmental entity's mere ownership of undeveloped land and refusal to stabilize part of the land which threatens an adjacent landowner's property with landslide supports a claim for inverse condemnation." (231 C.A.3d 979.) Held, it does not.

(a) "To state a cause of action for inverse condemnation, the plaintiff must allege the defendant substantially participated in the planning, approval, construction, or operation of a public project or improvement which proximately caused injury to plaintiff's property. ... In all inverse condemnation cases involving land subsidence to adjacent property, liability has resulted from affirmative actions the entity undertook to further some public project." (231 C.A.3d 980.)

(b) "All the District has done is purchase undeveloped land containing natural landslides and left it undeveloped. It did not undertake any project to improve the land, such as grading or other excavations, which exacerbated the landslide conditions and thus caused harm to Wildensten's adjacent property. The District's mere ownership and 'management' of this undeveloped property could not be the proximate cause of physical injury to Wildensten's property. Such passive ownership of raw land cannot logically be considered a governmental taking." (231 C.A.3d 981.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

38 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

2. Physical Taking or Damage.

c. Impairment of Access to Street or Highway.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1148

[§ 1148] In General.

(1) Theory of Compensable Damage. Recovery is allowed where the property itself is not taken or directly damaged, but the court finds injury from impairment of the judicially developed easement of access (or "ingress and egress"). This private right of the owner to use the street as a means of access to his or her property is considered different from the right to use the street for travel in common with other members of the public, and a substantial impairment of it is therefore compensable. (See Rose v. California (1942) 19 C.2d 713, 719, 123 P.2d 505; People v. Murray (1959) 172 C.A.2d 219, 225, 342 P.2d 485; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §14.11; 43 A.L.R.2d 1072 [abutting owner's relief for loss of access because of limited-access highway or street]; 42 A.L.R.3d 13 [abutting owner's right to damages for limitation of access caused by conversion of conventional road into limited-access highway]; 42 A.L.R.3d 148 [same; measure of damages]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §195 et seq.; 46 Proof of Facts 3d 493 [right to compensation for loss of access caused by highway improvement].)

(2) Grade Change. The basic rule was established early on that an abutting owner must be compensated when a street is graded and lowered so as to make access difficult. (Eachus v. Los Angeles Consol. Elec. Ry. Co. (1894) 103 C. 614, 617, 37 P. 750; McCandless v. Los Angeles (1931) 214 C. 67, 71, 72, 4 P.2d 139; cf. Anderson v. Fay Imp. Co. (1955) 134 C.A.2d 738, 286 P.2d 513, supra, §1133 [private contractor with government permit raised level of road]; see 2 A.L.R.3d 985 [use or improvement of highway as establishing grade necessary to entitle abutting owner to compensation on subsequent change].)

The rule was given an extended application in Clay v. Los Angeles (1971) 21 C.A.3d 577, 98 C.R. 582, where the impairment of access resulted from a prolonged rainstorm that washed out a city street. The injury was clear; plaintiffs could reach their home only on foot over a dangerous, unpaved slope. Their easement of access was still in existence, but was something like "a door opening on a brick wall." (21 C.A.3d 582.) The difficult question, however, was whether plaintiffs were entitled to compensation where the injury was not from affirmative action taken to construct a new public improvement, but from failure to take any action to restore an existing improvement. Held, the city was liable. On acceptance of the dedication of the street, it assumed a statutory duty to maintain it, and this implied the duty to maintain the grade level. (21 C.A.3d 584, 586.) Hence, it was bound either to restore plaintiff's access or to vacate the street and pay compensation for the loss of access. (21 C.A.3d 587.)

(3) Underpass in Highway. In Rose v. California, supra, compensation was awarded where an underpass was built along the center of a highway, not actually preventing direct access, but substantially reducing the area of access. (19 C.2d 727, 728.) (See Goycoolea v. Los Angeles (1962) 207 C.A.2d 729, 733, 24 C.R. 719 [following Rose; narrowing of pavement]; People v. Ricciardi (1943) 23 C.2d 390, 144 P.2d 799, infra, §1149.)

(4) Cul-de-sac. In Bacich v. Board of Control of Calif. (1943) 23 C.2d 343, 144 P.2d 818, the scope of the quasi-easement was extended to include free access along the entire block, to the next intersection, in each direction. Hence, obstruction of one end, creating a "cul-de-sac," was compensable even though free access still existed in the other direction. (23 C.2d 351.) (See Beals v. Los Angeles (1943) 23 C.2d 381, 384, 144 P.2d 839 [closing one end of alley]; Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 C.2d 659, 665, 39 C.R. 903, 394 P.2d 719, infra, §1149.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

39 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

2. Physical Taking or Damage.

c. Impairment of Access to Street or Highway.

2. Direct Access Cut Off.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1149

[§ 1149] Direct Access Cut Off.

(1) In General. The owner's quasi-easement is only for ingress and egress; the owner has no property right in the maintenance of a flow of traffic past his or her land for the business advantage that may result, and the owner suffers no compensable damage where the right of access is merely made less convenient and requires circuitry of travel. (See infra, §§1150, 1151.)

It is easier to state these propositions than to apply them, however, and freeway cases have given rise to serious problems and difficult distinctions. Essentially, the freeway takes the highway frontage away from the abutting owner and substitutes a fenced-off service road. It can reasonably be argued that the only adverse effects are circuitry of travel and diversion of traffic, both noncompensable. However, in People v. Ricciardi (1943) 23 C.2d 390, 144 P.2d 799, a central underpass was made for through traffic, with a 30-foot surface roadway on each side. Held, compensable damage was suffered by reason of (a) the increased distance along the surface roadway defendant would be required to travel to reach the through traffic lane, and (b) the fact that defendant's property was no longer visible to the through traffic. (23 C.2d 399.) (See Blumenstein v. Long Beach (1956) 143 C.A.2d 264, 267, 299 P.2d 347 [applying Ricciardi rule to freeway construction, but reversing judgment for error in admission of evidence].)

In Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 C.2d 659, 39 C.R. 903, 394 P.2d 719, plaintiffs owned and leased property with access to intersecting streets in both directions. Defendant railroad, with approval of the Public Utilities Commission, closed its crossing, thereby depriving plaintiffs of access in one direction. In this action in inverse condemnation, a general demurrer was sustained. Held, reversed. Holding the complaint good against a general demurrer, the court attempted to lay down a test of substantial impairment, as a question of law, with a cul-de-sac only a significant factor, not sufficient by itself.

"In summary, the rule which emerges constitutes one of substantial impairment of the right of access. Although destruction of access to the next intersecting street in one direction constitutes a significant factor in determining whether the landowner is entitled to recovery, it alone cannot justify recovery in the absence of facts which disclose a substantial impairment of access." (61 C.2d 666.) (See Valenta v. Los Angeles (1964) 61 C.2d 669, 672, 39 C.R. 909, 394 P.2d 725 [unincorporated area and rural highways; judgment on demurrer reversed to allow opportunity to plead more than bare allegation of cul-de-sac]; People v. Giumarra Vineyards Corp. (1966) 245 C.A.2d 309, 315, 53 C.R. 902 [road conveyed by railroad to county; defendant abutting owner had compensable right to access when county accepted]; People v. DiTomaso (1967) 248 C.A.2d 741, 758, 57 C.R. 293 [loss of access rights when state abandoned contract to construct road approach to proposed highway was compensable]; People v. Wilson (1994) 25 C.A.4th 977, 982, 31 C.R.2d 52, supra, §1140 [unlike highway, purpose of freeway is to eliminate right of access and related abutter's rights, including right to view property from freeway; hence, property owner was not entitled to severance damages for blockage of view resulting from erection of sound wall as part of freeway widening project].)

(2) Temporary Deprivation of Access. Los Angeles v. Ricards (1973) 10 C.3d 385, 389, 110 C.R. 489, 515 P.2d 585, held that a deprivation of access for 2 years could have entitled the owner to compensation, but only nominal damages were proper because the owner did not intend to use, rent, or sell the property.

Ricards was distinguished in Jones v. People (1978) 22 C.3d 144, 148 C.R. 640, 583 P.2d 165. Defendant Department of Transportation announced plans for a freeway that would cross plaintiffs' undeveloped property and result in substantial impairment of access. The county then refused to allow plaintiffs to subdivide, and plaintiffs recovered judgment for diminution of the market value. After judgment, the state abandoned the freeway project. Held, judgment reversed for determination of damages sustained from the time of disapproval of the subdivision map to the time of abandonment of the project. (22 C.3d 154.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

40 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

2. Physical Taking or Damage.

c. Impairment of Access to Street or Highway.

3. Circuity of Travel and Loss of Traffic.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1150

[§ 1150] Circuity of Travel and Loss of Traffic.

Although greatly weakened in application (see supra, §1149), the principle still remains that improvements that result only in more circuitous and less convenient access, and that divert the main stream of traffic from the owner's business frontage, are not compensable. Thus, in Holman v. California (1950) 97 C.A.2d 237, 217 P.2d 448, a raised dividing strip was placed in the highway, extending across an intersecting street. This made it impossible for motorists coming from one direction to turn into plaintiff's garage and gas station. But access remained, by a short extra drive, in two directions. In denying compensation, the court distinguished prior decisions as follows:

"In all of the foregoing cases in which it was held that compensation must be paid there was either physical injury to an owner's property itself, as in the Reardon case, or a physical impairment of access from the property to the street, whether caused by change of grade, as in the Eachus cases and the Rockridge case, or by physical impairment of the property to the street by the means of the construction of a physical barrier as in the McCandless case, or by removing the property from the through highway and placing it on a side or service road as in the Ricciardi case, or by the creation of a dead end street as in the Bacich case. None of these cases involve the division of a highway into separate roadways by concrete islands or division strips and all are factually different from the case at bar." (97 C.A.2d 241.) (See Beckham v. Stockton (1944) 64 C.A.2d 487, 501, 149 P.2d 296 [route in one direction made more inconvenient at nearest intersection]; Holloway v. Purcell (1950) 35 C.2d 220, 230, 217 P.2d 665 [loss of traffic flow but no impairment of access]; People v. Romano (1971) 18 C.A.3d 63, 73, 94 C.R. 839 [two alternative routes provided by project, one requiring only additional block and no more than 2,400 feet]; Hecton v. People (1976) 58 C.A.3d 653, 657, 130 C.R. 230 [following Holloway].)

Holman was followed in People v. Sayig (1951) 101 C.A.2d 890, 226 P.2d 702, also involving a divided, and hence a one-way highway. "If a property owner is entitled to compensation because a divided highway is constructed in front of his property, then the same result would logically follow when one-way streets are created in cities to control traffic, or even where a double white line is placed in a highway which prohibits traffic from crossing that lane lawfully, and thus permits only one-way traffic in front of the property. The Vehicle Code abounds with other regulations that result in permitting the property owner to proceed only in one direction when emerging from his property." (101 C.A.2d 902.)

Contrary cases such as Bacich v. Board of Control of Calif. (1943) 23 C.2d 343, 144 P.2d 818, supra, §1148, People v. Ricciardi (1943) 23 C.2d 390, 144 P.2d 799, supra, §1149, Holman, and Holloway, are distinguishable. No general rule can be laid down to cover all situations. "The distinctions between these various situations and their impact on the actual value of the property is simply one of degree. Our case falls within the rule of the Holman case." (101 C.A.2d 905.) (See People v. Russell (1957) 48 C.2d 189, 197, 309 P.2d 10 [county road narrowed from 52 to 40 feet to provide parking strip].)

In People v. Ayon (1960) 54 C.2d 217, 5 C.R. 151, 352 P.2d 519, the state condemned a 10-foot strip along the eastern boundary of defendant's supermarket and parking lot to widen a highway on which it fronted. The plan called for a divider strip in the middle of the highway, which would prevent access in one direction. Held, neither impairment of access nor temporary damage during construction was compensable.

(a) Ricciardi, supra, and Blumenstein v. Long Beach (1956) 143 C.A.2d 264, 267, 299 P.2d 347, are distinguishable. In Ricciardi, the highway itself was rerouted, and no direct access to the highway remained; in Blumenstein, the freeway outlet passed directly in front of the property, separating it from traffic by a concrete construction five feet wide. "In each of these cases through traffic continued to travel along the street upon which the owner's property had originally abutted. But after construction of the improvement the properties involved no longer abutted on any through traffic street. As a result of the improvement they were separated from through traffic by a new street which did not carry through traffic in either direction." (54 C.2d 225.) In the instant case, direct access to through traffic in one direction still exists. (54 C.2d 226.)

(b) A temporary injury during construction ordinarily is not compensable. It is often necessary to break up pavement, narrow streets, and make ingress and egress inconvenient, and the resulting annoyance or discomfort is not compensable. On the other hand, temporary injury may be compensable where there is unnecessary and substantial interference or an actual invasion of the right of possession during construction; and this would include additional unnecessary and substantial damage caused by reason of the improvement not being constructed as originally planned. (54 C.2d 228, 229.) However, these damages cannot be recovered until they have occurred; prior to construction, they are purely speculative. If and when they occur, a subsequent action may be brought under an exception to the rule that damages in condemnation actions should be fixed completely at the time of trial. (54 C.2d 229.) (See Rosenthal v. Los Angeles (1961) 193 C.A.2d 29, 34, 13 C.R. 824 [east access terminated, but north access from two streets unimpaired]; 23 A.L.R.4th 674 [damages resulting from temporary conditions incident to public improvements or repairs].)

In Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 C.2d 659, 39 C.R. 903, 394 P.2d 719, supra, §1149, the complaint alleged that the closing required trucks servicing plaintiffs' property to use a different narrow street of access, and that access to plaintiffs' property by fire, police, and other public services would be greatly delayed. The court said that as to the first, there was only injury to the public without special injury to the landowner, and as to the second, the injury was too speculative to be compensable. (61 C.2d 668.)

In San Diego Metropolitan Transit Dev. Bd. v. Price Co. (1995) 37 C.A.4th 1541, 44 C.R.2d 705, plaintiff development board obtained an easement along the east side of defendant's property in conjunction with a rail transit line it was building. Because of the project, access to defendant's property was denied when traveling southbound on the north-south road that abutted the west side of the property. However, access to the property was available from the east-west road that bordered the north side of the property, as well as from the north-south road, if extra distance was traveled. In the condemnation action by plaintiff, the trial judge awarded damages, but excluded evidence of access damages as an element of severance damages. Held, affirmed.

(a) The trial judge determines whether there is a compensable impairment of access as an element of the damages; if so, the amount of the damages is submitted to the jury. The trial judge's finding is upheld if there is any substantial evidence to support it. (37 C.A.4th 1545.)

(b) In California, access impairment damages have been allowed, even though access to the property in question is available from another street. The cases are in hopeless conflict, but the one common thread that has emerged is that the access impairment must be substantial, and, regardless of how the trial judge has decided this matter, there must be substantial evidence to support his finding. (37 C.A.4th 1546, citing Brumer v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority (1995) 36 C.A.4th 1738, 1744, 43 C.R.2d 314.)

(c) Here, the trial judge considered evidence that the access impairment only increased the distance from the property to the southbound lane of the north-south road, and that the highest and best use of the property was the same before and after the impairment; there was no evidence that any particular type of vehicle was denied access to the property, nor was there evidence of a decrease in the number of vehicles to which the property was available. The evidence is sufficient to support the trial judge's determination that the access impairment was not compensable. (37 C.A.4th 1548.)

(d) Whether the impairment occurs through exercise of the police power or the condemnation power, it must be substantial to be compensable; the rule is not, as defendant suggests, that it need be substantial only when it occurs through exercise of the condemnation power. (37 C.A.4th 1549.) (See Brumer v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority, supra, 36 C.A.4th 1744 [construction did not substantially impair plaintiff's access to street, where view of plaintiff's building remained the same, as did parking and vehicular traffic, and where major part of property abutted on another street that was unchanged]; Perrin v. Los Angeles County Trans. Com. (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1807, 1811, 1813, 50 C.R.2d 488 [following Brumer; no substantial impairment where rail line construction, which converted two-way street into one-way street, eliminated parking on one side of street, and prevented pedestrians from entering street, changed but did not eliminate access to plaintiff's property]; Liontos v. County Sanitation Dists. (1998) 61 C.A.4th 726, 729, 72 C.R.2d 107 [distinguishing People v. Ayon; summary judgment for defendants was improper where evidence showed substantial impairment of access to plaintiff's restaurant, and defendants failed to demonstrate that 7-month hiatus in construction, with barriers and heavy equipment left in place, was reasonable and necessary]; Leonard v. People (1998) 62 C.A.4th 1296, 1300, 73 C.R.2d 328 [fact that improved traffic access was deemed offsetting benefit in earlier condemnation action did not require compensation when traffic was later rerouted; following People v. Ayon, and distinguishing Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority v. Continental Dev. Corp. (1997) 16 C.4th 694, 66 C.R.2d 630, 941 P.2d 809, infra, §1243].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

41 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

2. Physical Taking or Damage.

c. Impairment of Access to Street or Highway.

4. Miscellaneous Inconveniences.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1151

[§ 1151] Miscellaneous Inconveniences.

Where the right of access remains in substantial form, a change in the street or highway does not give rise to a right of action for damages. (See Constantine v. Sunnyvale (1949) 91 C.A.2d 278, 283, 204 P.2d 922 [public street and railway grade crossing abandoned, but new street opened]; Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 C.2d 659, 39 C.R. 903, 394 P.2d 719, supra, §1149; People v. Wasserman (1966) 240 C.A.2d 716, 730, 50 C.R. 95 [access after project was one-third mile longer and involved heavy traffic and difficult left-hand turn].)

In People v. Presley (1966) 239 C.A.2d 309, 48 C.R. 672, defendants owned an apartment house on the corner of T and L Streets, and the fee underlying a part of T Street. The state, for a freeway, condemned the fee underlying T Street and the access rights of defendants to T Street. Defendants appealed, contending that the trial judge erroneously refused to include compensation for (a) the increased noise, fumes, and annoyance that would result from the more heavily trafficked freeway, and (b) the loss of street parking privileges on T Street (they now would have parking only on L Street). Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) General principles. To be compensable, the interference with access must be substantial and the right claimed must be reasonable. The decisive question is whether the owner if uncompensated would contribute more than his or her proper share to the public undertaking.

(b) No compensation for loss of parking right. Parking on the street is subject to local regulation, and it is only a privilege that defendants enjoy as members of the public. They had no proprietary right; hence, none was taken when the freeway was created. (239 C.A.2d 315.)

(c) No compensation for noise from increased traffic. This is an inconvenience general to all property owners in the neighborhood, not special to the defendants. (239 C.A.2d 317.) (See Lombardy v. Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. (1968) 266 C.A.2d 599, 603, 72 C.R. 240 [fumes and noise]; 51 A.L.R.3d 860 [traffic noise and vibration]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §14.13.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Border Business Park v. San Diego (2006) 142 C.A.4th 1538, 1555, 49 C.R.3d 259 [rerouting truck traffic to border crossing was not compensable taking of business park in absence of evidence that rerouting caused gridlock that totally impaired access to business park for several hours each day; "gridlock" denotes traffic congestion that prevents traffic from moving in any direction].

42 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

2. Physical Taking or Damage.

d. Nuisance Rendering Property Uninhabitable.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1152

[§ 1152] Nuisance Rendering Property Uninhabitable.

In Varjabedian v. Madera (1977) 20 C.3d 285, 142 C.R. 429, 572 P.2d 43, defendant city operated a sewage treatment plant near plaintiffs' 80-acre vineyard and some 600 feet from their residence. The plant emitted odors that were blown onto plaintiffs' property by prevailing winds, and they sought damages on alternative theories of nuisance and inverse condemnation. Held, judgment for plaintiffs on the nuisance theory upheld (see 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §133 et seq.) and judgment on the pleadings for defendant on the inverse condemnation theory reversed.

(a) Physical damage is not a prerequisite to compensation; damage from invasions of water or other liquid effluents often provides the basis for recovery. And the complaint alleges that the land was made "untenantable for residential purposes"; this depicts a permanent and substantial impairment in the use of the land. (20 C.3d 296, 297.)

(b) Plaintiffs' allegations bring the case within the doctrine of Richards v. Washington Terminal Co. (1914) 233 U.S. 546, 34 S.Ct. 654, 58 L.Ed. 1088, where the plaintiff complained of "inconvenience ... in the occupation of his property" caused by "gases and smoke" forced out of a railroad's tunnel by a fanning system near the house. Although in the instant case there was no device that directed the noxious gases onto plaintiffs' property, the underlying principle of Richards applies. This is particularly so because the California Constitution "protects a somewhat broader range of property values from government destruction than does the analogous federal provision." (20 C.3d 298.) "If a plaintiff can establish that his property has suffered a 'direct and peculiar and substantial' burden as a result of recurring odors produced by a sewage facility--that he has, as in Richards, been in effect 'singled out' to suffer the detrimental environmental effects of the enterprise--then the policy favoring distribution of the resulting loss of market value is strong ... and the likelihood that compensation will impede necessary public construction is relatively slight. In these circumstances, the necessity of breathing noxious sewage fumes may be a burden unfairly and unconstitutionally imposed on the individual landowner." (20 C.3d 298.) (See Harding v. Department of Trans. (1984) 159 C.A.3d 359, 367, 205 C.R. 561 [following Varjabedian]; San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 C.4th 893, 940, 55 C.R.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669, supra, §1089 [applying Varjabedian]; Oliver v. AT&T Wireless Services (1999) 76 C.A.4th 521, 531, 90 C.R.2d 491 [distinguishing Varjabedian; unsightly but legal cellular tower that caused plaintiff's neighboring property to diminish in value could not give rise to inverse condemnation action].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

43 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

a. In General.

1. Valid Exercise of Police Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1153

[§ 1153] Valid Exercise of Police Power.

(1) In General. In Keystone Bituminous Coal Assn. v. DeBenedictis (1987) 480 U.S. 470, 107 S.Ct. 1232, 94 L.Ed.2d 472, the Pennsylvania Legislature enacted the Subsidence Act to prohibit mining that causes subsidence damage to specified surface structures, and authorized revocation of a mining permit for failure to pay for repair of subsidence damage, despite contractual waiver by surface owners of claims to these damages. Held, unlike the earlier statute held invalid in Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon (1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322, this Act was a valid exercise of police power and a permitted impairment of the obligation of contract (see infra, §1289).

(a) The Act does not merely involve a balancing of the private economic interests of coal companies against the private interests of the surface owners; the Legislature found that important public interests were served by minimizing subsidence in certain areas, and the purposes set forth in the statute were genuine, substantial, and legitimate. (107 S.Ct. 1242, 94 L.Ed.2d 488.)

(b) "The Court's hesitance to find a taking when the state merely restrains uses of property that are tantamount to public nuisances is consistent with the notion of 'reciprocity of advantage' that Justice Holmes referred to in Pennsylvania Coal. Under our system of government, one of the state's primary ways of preserving the public weal is restricting the uses individuals can make of their property. While each of us is burdened somewhat by such restrictions, we, in turn, benefit greatly from the restrictions that are placed on others. ... Long ago it was recognized that 'all property in this country is held under the implied obligation that the owner's use of it shall not be injurious to the community,' ... and the Takings Clause did not transform that principle to one that requires compensation whenever the State asserts the power to enforce it." (107 S.Ct. 1245, 94 L.Ed.2d 492.)

(c) Plaintiffs' takings claim fails also because they have not shown any deprivation significant enough to satisfy the heavy burden placed on one alleging a regulatory taking. (107 S.Ct. 1246, 1249, 94 L.Ed.2d 493, 495.) Only about 75% of their underground coal can be profitably mined in any event, and there is no showing that their reasonable "investment-backed expectations" have been materially affected by the additional duty to retain the small percentage necessary to support the surface structures. (107 S.Ct. 1249, 94 L.Ed.2d 497.) (See Golden Cheese Co. of Calif. v. Voss (1991) 230 C.A.3d 727, 737, 739, 281 C.R. 602 [valid regulation of minimum prices to be paid by cheese manufacturers for milk, allegedly destroying cheese company's business]; Buena Park Motel Assn. v. Buena Park (2003) 109 C.A.4th 302, 310, 134 C.R.2d 645 [ordinance limiting number of consecutive days guests can stay at hotels and motels in city substantially advanced city's interest in maintaining sanitary, pest free conditions and did not deprive owners of all economically viable use of property]; NJD, Ltd. v. San Dimas (2003) 110 C.A.4th 1428, 1448, 2 C.R.3d 818 [in regulatory takings context, issue in facial challenge is whether "mere enactment" of statute is at issue; facial challenge presents no concrete controversy regarding application of statute to property at issue; thus, trial court did not err in concluding that plaintiff's proffered evidence concerning application of statute to profitable development of its hillside property was irrelevant]; 22 Ecology L. Q. 89 [criticizing Pennsylvania Coal and arguing that regulatory takings doctrine should be abolished].)

(2) Inclusionary Zoning. In Home Builders Assn. of Northern Calif. v. Napa (2001) 90 C.A.4th 188, 108 C.R.2d 60, the court held that an ordinance requiring all new development in defendant city to incorporate affordable housing or alternatively to provide for the dedication of other property or the payment of a fee, was not facially invalid under the Takings Clauses of the U.S. or California Constitutions. The ordinance provides significant benefits to complying developers and permits application to defendant for a reduction, adjustment, or waiver of its provisions. (90 C.A.4th 194.) Further, the ordinance is not a taking of private property for public use because it substantially advances the legitimate state interest of creating housing for low and moderate income families. (90 C.A.4th 195.) (See 115 Harv. L. Rev. 2058 [Home Builders]; 36 U.S.F. L. Rev. 971 [same].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. In Bronco Wine Co. v. Jolly (2005) 129 C.A.4th 988, 29 C.R.3d 462, the court held that B. & P.C. 25241, prohibiting the use of brand names on wine bottles with "Napa" on the label unless at least 75% of the grapes used were from Napa County, did not effect a compensable taking of a wine producer's brand equity. There was no physical taking of the producer's property, the producer was not barred from using the brands under all circumstances, the producer could use the brands for wine using Napa grapes, and the producer could continue selling value wine under names that are not geographically misleading. The fact that the producer's profits might diminish did not entitle it to just compensation under the Fifth Amendment. (129 C.A.4th 1037.)

See Herzberg v. Plumas (2005) 133 C.A.4th 1, 18, 34 C.R.3d 588 ["fencing out" ordinance requiring landowners in rural area to fence property at their expense if they wish to keep other people's cattle off their land does not constitute unconstitutional taking; ordinance serves legitimate governmental purpose and does not interfere with landowners' reasonable investment-backed expectations in buying property, or limit their best, or any, use of property]; Golden Gate Water Ski Club v. Contra Costa (2008) 165 C.A.4th 249, 267, 80 C.R.3d 876 [landowner that purchased land subject to restriction did not suffer taking when restriction was enforced]; C.E.B., 2 Land Use Practice, Chap. 17.(2) Inclusionary Zoning. See 22 A.L.R.6th 295 [Validity, Construction, and Application of Inclusionary Zoning Ordinances and Programs].

44 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

a. In General.

2. Landlord and Tenant Regulations.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1154

[§ 1154] In General.

In Cwynar v. San Francisco (2001) 90 C.A.4th 637, 109 C.R.2d 233, the court addressed an issue of first impression. Plaintiffs challenged the constitutionality of an ordinance that restricted the ability of landlords to evict tenants to enable the landlord or his or her relatives to move into a rental unit. The trial court sustained defendant city's demurrer without leave to amend. Held, reversed and remanded.

(a) Per se physical taking. For there to be a physical taking, a government-authorized invasion or occupation of the property must be direct and permanent. (90 C.A.4th 653, citing Loretto v. Teleprompter Manhattan CATV Corp. (1982) 458 U.S. 419, 102 S.Ct. 3164, 73 L.Ed.2d 868, supra, §1127.) Here, plaintiffs claimed direct occupation by alleging that the restrictions forced some plaintiffs to permit others to live in units plaintiffs wished to occupy, and that other plaintiffs were precluded from removing tenants from units to enable close family members to move in. (90 C.A.4th 653.) Plaintiffs may be able to satisfy the permanency requirement by showing that the ordinance "effectuates coerced lifetime tenancies which effectively extinguish plaintiffs' right to occupy substantial portions of their property." (90 C.A.4th 655.) Thus, plaintiffs are entitled to the opportunity to prove that the ordinance "is an unconstitutional taking as applied to them by showing that the challenged ordinance has the effect of compelling them to rent property or to refrain in perpetuity from terminating a tenancy." (90 C.A.4th 657, distinguishing Yee v. Escondido, Calif. (1992) 503 U.S. 519, 112 S.Ct. 1522, 118 L.Ed.2d 153, infra, §1155.)

(b) Governmental interest. The record does not establish that the ordinance, as a matter of law, "substantially advances" a legitimate governmental interest. The ordinance is not an ordinary rent control law, nor is it a price and rate regulation. It "restricts an owner's right to use his or her property as a family home." (90 C.A.4th 661.) Thus, the governmental justification should be closely scrutinized. "It is not a straightforward, evenly applied regulation. It directly affects the possessory property rights of an apparently arbitrary category of property owners." (90 C.A.4th 661.)

(c) Balancing test. The complaint implicates several relevant factors supporting plaintiffs' contention that the ordinance "imposes a disproportionate burden on them by essentially requiring them to forfeit their own homes in order to create public housing." (90 C.A.4th 663.) This includes plaintiffs' contention, which defendant does not dispute, that the ordinance does not provide them "any benefits or rights that 'mitigate whatever financial burdens the law has imposed.' " (90 C.A.4th 664, quoting Kavanau v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1997) 16 C.4th 761, 775, 66 C.R.2d 672, 941 P.2d 851, infra, §1155.) Further, plaintiffs claim that "there is no meaningful mechanism in the regulation for adequately considering or attempting to prevent possible unfair hardship to some property owners." (90 C.A.4th 664.) Defendant claims that there is no regulatory taking because (1) the abridgment of plaintiffs' rights are not so complete as to effectuate a per se physical taking, (2) plaintiffs have not been deprived of all economically beneficial use of their properties, and (3) the ordinance "preserves the historic use of plaintiffs' properties as residential properties." (90 C.A.4th 665.) However, these attempts to resist plaintiffs' claim by advancing per se rules are inconsistent with the ad hoc factor-based approach for analyzing regulatory claims. (90 C.A.4th 666.) (See Action Apartment Assn. v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (2001) 94 C.A.4th 587, 604, 608, 618, 114 C.R.2d 412 [landlords' association, challenging rent control requirement that landlords pay tenants 3% interest on security deposits when banks were paying no more than 1.5% interest, adequately pleaded cause of action for regulatory taking; provision did not advance legitimate state interest and association did not need to allege "deep financial hardship"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Small Property Owners of San Francisco v. San Francisco (2006) 141 C.A.4th 1388, 1406, 47 C.R.3d 121 [distinguishing Action Apartment Assn. v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (2001) 94 C.A.4th 587, 114 C.R.2d 412; requiring plaintiff landlords to pay 5% interest on security deposits when liquid bank accounts paid less than 5% did not effect regulatory taking; plaintiffs were not required to keep tenants' funds in liquid bank accounts and plaintiffs failed to show sufficient economic impact from regulation or that it interfered with their investment-backed expectations; regulation was part of broader scheme to adjust benefits and burdens of economic life between tenants and landlords for public good].

45 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

a. In General.

2. Landlord and Tenant Regulations.

bb. Rent Control.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1155

[§ 1155] Rent Control.

In Yee v. Escondido (1990) 224 C.A.3d 1349, 274 C.R. 551, a mobilehome rent control ordinance providing for a rollback of rents was upheld against the claim that it constituted a compensable taking of property without compensation. (For full discussion of California decision, see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §770.)

The California decision was affirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court in Yee v. Escondido, Calif. (1992) 503 U.S. 519, 112 S.Ct. 1522, 118 L.Ed.2d 153. Petitioners (Yees) own mobilehome parks in Escondido, California. Following the enactment of the Mobilehome Residency Law (12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §761 et seq.), the voters of respondent city approved a rent control ordinance restricting rent increases. Petitioners filed a suit in the San Diego Superior Court challenging the constitutionality of the ordinance as a taking of their property without compensation. The trial court sustained a demurrer, the Court of Appeal affirmed, and the California Supreme Court denied review. Petitioners and other park owners petitioned for certiorari, and the Court granted the writ to resolve conflicts between the decision below and two decisions of the federal Courts of Appeals. Held, judgment of California Court of Appeal affirmed.

(a) Most of the Supreme Court cases interpreting the Takings Clause of the Fifth Amendment fall within two distinct classes. First, where the Government authorizes a physical occupation of property or actually takes title, the Clause generally requires compensation. (112 S.Ct. 1526, 118 L.Ed.2d 162, citing Loretto v. Teleprompter Manhattan CATV Corp. (1982) 458 U.S. 419, 102 S.Ct. 3164, 73 L.Ed.2d 868, supra, §1127.) Second, where the Government merely regulates the use of property, compensation is required only if "considerations such as the purpose of the regulation or the extent to which it deprives the owner of the economic use of the property suggest that the regulation has unfairly singled out the property owner to bear a burden that should be borne by the public as a whole." (112 S.Ct. 1526, 118 L.Ed.2d 162, citing Penn Cen. Trans. Co. v. New York (1978) 438 U.S. 104, 98 S.Ct. 2646, 57 L.Ed.2d 631, supra, §981.)

(b) Petitioners argued that there was a physical taking by reason of the unusual economic relationship between park owners and mobilehome owners. Park owners may no longer set rents or decide who their tenants will be; and a reduction in rent for a mobilehome pad causes a corresponding increase in the value of a mobilehome, because the mobilehome owner now owns, in addition to a mobilehome, the right to occupy a pad at a rent below the value that would be set by the free market. And because under the Residency Law the park owner cannot evict a mobilehome owner, the latter is a perpetual tenant who can receive a premium from a purchaser corresponding to the increase in value that the perpetual tenancy assures. As a result, "the rent control ordinance has transferred a discrete interest in land--the right to occupy the land indefinitely at a sub-market rent--from the park owner to the mobile home owner." (112 S.Ct. 1528, 118 L.Ed.2d 165.)

(c) The Government effects a physical taking only where it requires the landowner to submit to the physical occupation of his or her land. The rent control ordinance authorizes no such thing; petitioners' tenants were invited by petitioners, and a park owner who wishes to change the use of his or her land may evict the tenants on 6 or 12 months' notice. (112 S.Ct. 1528, 118 L.Ed.2d 165.) "A different case would be presented were the statute, on its face or as applied, to compel a landowner over objection to rent his property or to refrain in perpetuity from terminating a tenancy." (112 S.Ct. 1529, 118 L.Ed.2d 166.) "[T]he state and local laws at issue here merely regulate petitioners' use of their land by regulating the relationship between landlord and tenant." (112 S.Ct. 1529, 118 L.Ed.2d 166.) With respect to physical takings, the case is similar to Federal Communications Com. v. Florida Power Corp. (1987) 480 U.S. 245, 107 S.Ct. 1107, 94 L.Ed.2d 282. "We explained that 'it is the invitation, not the rent, that makes the difference.' ... The Escondido rent control ordinance, even considered against the backdrop of California's Mobilehome Residency Law, does not authorize an unwanted physical occupation of petitioners' property. It is a regulation of petitioners' use of their property, and thus does not amount to a per se taking." (112 S.Ct. 1531, 118 L.Ed.2d 168.) (See 25 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1259 [Yee]; 26 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1 [same]; 24 Pacific L. J. 1681 [same].)

In Kavanau v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1997) 16 C.4th 761, 66 C.R.2d 672, 941 P.2d 851, plaintiff property owner, who had made substantial capital improvements to an apartment building, appealed denial of his claim that defendant city's 12% limit on rent increases deprived him of a "just and reasonable return" on his investment. The Court of Appeal agreed and directed the superior court to issue a writ of mandamus prohibiting application of the 12% limit to plaintiff. (See Kavanau v. Santa Monica Rent Control Bd. (1993) 19 C.A.4th 730, 736, 23 C.R.2d 724.) Plaintiff then filed a complaint seeking lost rental income and interest for the period in which the 12% limit was in effect, alleging that he had suffered a taking under Cal. Const., Art. I, §19, and the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The superior court sustained defendant's demurrer and the Court of Appeal affirmed, rejecting plaintiff's claim because he never lost all use of his property. (16 C.4th 768.) Held, the available remedy of future rent adjustments precludes a finding of a taking.

(a) A regulation "may effect a taking though, as is true here, it does not involve a physical invasion and leaves the property owner some economically beneficial use of his property." (16 C.4th 774; disapproving Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, supra, §1058, to the extent it holds to the contrary.) When a regulation does not result in a physical invasion and does not deprive the owner of all economic use of the property, a reviewing court should consider three factors: (1) the economic impact of the regulation on the claimant; (2) the extent to which the regulation has interfered with distinct investment-backed expectations; and (3) the character of the governmental action. (16 C.4th 775, citing Penn Cen. Trans. Co., supra.)

(b) However, it is not necessary to decide whether a rent regulation that violates a property owner's right to due process also constitutes a taking. "[A] remedy for the due process violation, if available and adequate, obviates a finding of a taking. ... [T]he benefits a property owner receives in conjunction with a regulation may offset the burdens and thus satisfy the takings clause." (16 C.4th 782.) Here, an adjustment of future rents that takes into consideration past confiscatory rents places the cost of compensating plaintiff roughly on those tenants who benefited from unconstitutionally low rents. (16 C.4th 783, 784.) In measuring the future rent ceiling for a particular apartment, defendant must consider any effect on plaintiff of the temporary enforcement of the confiscatory regulation with respect to that apartment. (16 C.4th 785.)

Two justices joined in a dissent. (16 C.4th 792.) (See Yee v. Mobilehome Park Rental Review Bd. (1998) 62 C.A.4th 1409, 1426, 73 C.R.2d 227 [following Kavanau; plaintiffs' remedy of seeking future rent adjustments from rent control board precluded finding of taking based on lost profits; application of rent control ordinance did not constitute physical invasion of property or cause owner to lose all economically beneficial or productive use of property]; Santa Monica Beach, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1999) 19 C.4th 952, 970, 81 C.R.2d 93, 968 P.2d 993 [following Kavanau and Yee; prevention of excessive and unreasonable rent increases caused by shortage of housing in city is legitimate government interest regardless of whether that goal is identified in rent control law's preamble and whether primary beneficiaries of law are low or merely moderate income tenants]; Montclair Parkowners Assn. v. Montclair (1999) 76 C.A.4th 784, 792, 90 C.R.2d 598 [heightened scrutiny applicable to land dedications does not apply to rent control schemes of mobilehome parks; following Santa Monica Beach]; 88 Cal. L. Rev. 1547 [Santa Monica Beach]; 21 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1019 [Regulatory Takings Law in the 1990's: The Death of Rent Control?]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §15.10.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Hillsboro Properties v. Rohnert Park (2006) 138 C.A.4th 379, 392, 41 C.R.3d 441 [because rate regulation is confiscatory only if it does not allow just and reasonable rate of return on investment, landowner's failure to allege that rent control ordinance that had been held unconstitutional deprived it of fair rate of return defeated any possible right to recovery].

46 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

a. In General.

3. Fee as Condition for Use or Building Permit.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1156

[§ 1156] Fee as Condition for Use or Building Permit.

In Tahoe Keys Property Owners' Assn. v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1459, 28 C.R.2d 734, a property owners' association sued various state agencies, claiming that a mitigation fee charged as a condition for obtaining building permits was unlawful. Plaintiff requested a preliminary injunction preventing defendants from collecting any further fees and from making expenditures from the mitigation fund pending trial. The trial judge denied the request for injunctive relief. Held, affirmed.

(a) Unlike Nollan v. California Coastal Com. (1987) 483 U.S. 825, 107 S.Ct. 3141, 97 L.Ed.2d 677, infra, §1157, this case does not involve a physical taking. "There has been no physical invasion of plaintiff's property nor is there any suggestion that landowners have been deprived of all economically beneficial or productive use of the land." Therefore, plaintiff is not entitled to the heightened scrutiny a physical taking would entail; instead, resolution of plaintiff's challenge requires a careful case-specific factual inquiry. (23 C.A.4th 1478.)

(b) The state's justification for the fee is to ameliorate the effects of pollution from plaintiff's development, and there can therefore be no doubt that justification for the regulation at issue constitutes an important state interest reasonably related to plaintiff's construction. The fee is calculated based on estimates of the quantities of nutrients entering Lake Tahoe as a result of the development and continuing maintenance of plaintiff's subdivisions, and the mitigation fund is specifically dedicated to mitigation of the effects of that source of pollution. "Thus, on the face of the regulation there appears to be a sufficient nexus between the effect of the regulation and the objectives it was supposed to advance to support the regulatory scheme." (23 C.A.4th 1480.)

(c) The other question involved in the case-specific factual inquiry, as indicated in Yee v. Escondido, Calif. (1992) 503 U.S. 519, 112 S.Ct. 1522, 118 L.Ed.2d 153, supra, §1155, is whether the regulation unfairly singles out the property owner to bear a burden that should be borne by the public as a whole. While the public as a whole will benefit from preservation of the lake, plaintiff's members, who are area residents, undoubtedly receive a special benefit. This special benefit, combined with the fact that the government can act to preserve the area only through regulation of landowners such as plaintiff's members, leads to the conclusion that plaintiff and its members are not unfairly singled out. (23 C.A.4th 1480, 1481.) Plaintiff has failed to establish a significant likelihood that it will prevail on the merits after a full trial, and indeed may be prevented from reaching the merits due to the possibility that it will be found to have agreed to imposition of the fee and to have failed to challenge it after it was imposed. The trial judge did not err in denying the request for a preliminary injunction. (23 C.A.4th 1484, 1485.)

In San Remo Hotel v. San Francisco (2002) 27 C.4th 643, 117 C.R.2d 269, 41 P.3d 87, the court considered whether the Nollan/Dolan (infra, §1157) heightened level of means/end scrutiny applied to its review of a conversion fee defendant city required plaintiffs to pay under its hotel conversion and demolition ordinance (HCO) as a condition of obtaining a conditional use permit. Under the HCO, an owner wishing to convert a residential hotel to a tourist hotel must help replace the lost rental units by supplying other units or by paying a statutory fee to a designated housing fund. Held, the housing replacement fee is not subject to heightened scrutiny, and is not unconstitutional on its face or as applied.

(a) There are different levels of takings scrutiny, with the strictest level applied to "requirements that property owners dedicate land as a condition of receiving a development permit" and the most lenient applied to what are essentially legislative determinations "that do not require any physical conveyance of property." (27 C.4th 667, 668, quoting Santa Monica Beach, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1999) 19 C.4th 952, 81 C.R.2d 93, 968 P.2d 993.) Here, unlike the recreational facilities fee in Ehrlich v. Culver City (1996) 12 C.4th 854, 881, 50 C.R.2d 242, 911 P.2d 429, infra, §1157, neither the imposition nor the size of the replacement fee is subject to defendant's discretion. If an applicant chooses to satisfy the replacement housing requirement through payment of a fee, its amount is determined according to a set formula. (27 C.4th 668.) Further, the HCO applies to every residential hotel in the city. (27 C.4th 669.)

(b) Under Govt.C. 66001, development mitigation fees "must bear a reasonable relationship, in both intended use and amount, to the deleterious public impact of the development." (27 C.4th 675.) Thus, even without Nollan/Dolan/Ehrlich scrutiny, mitigation fees are subject to meaningful means/end review. (27 C.4th 671.)

(c) "In Ehrlich, we extended Nollan and Dolan slightly, recognizing an exception to the general rule of deference on distribution of monetary burdens because the ad hoc, discretionary fee imposed in that case bore special potential for government abuse. We continue to believe heightened scrutiny should be limited to such fees. ... Extending Nollan and Dolan generally to all government fees affecting property value or development would open to searching judicial scrutiny the wisdom of myriad government economic regulations, a task the courts have been loath to undertake pursuant to either the takings or due process clause." (27 C.4th 672.)

(d) "Plaintiffs fail to demonstrate from the face of the ordinance that fees assessed under the HCO bear no reasonable relationship to housing loss in the generality or great majority of cases, the minimum showing we have required for a facial challenge to the constitutionality of a statute." (27 C.4th 673.) Further, the mitigation fee is measured by the resulting loss of residential units and is thus reasonably related to the impact of the change in use. (27 C.4th 679.)

Two justices dissented in separate opinions. (27 C.4th 679, 691.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 46 Santa Clara L. Rev. 767 [San Remo Hotel].

47 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

a. In General.

4. Taking Requiring Compensation.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1157

[§ 1157] In General.

In Nollan v. California Coastal Com. (1987) 483 U.S. 825, 107 S.Ct. 3141, 97 L.Ed.2d 677, plaintiffs owned a beachfront lot in Ventura County, with a small bungalow rented to summer vacationers. They sought a permit from defendant Coastal Commission to replace the bungalow with a three-bedroom house for their permanent residence. The Commission granted the permit subject to the condition that they allow the public an easement across their property for lateral access to the beach. They challenged the condition by administrative mandamus; the superior court directed that the condition be struck, but the Court of Appeal reversed on the authority of Grupe v. California Coastal Com. (1985) 166 C.A.3d 148, 212 C.R. 578, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §865. (Nollan v. California Coastal Com. (1986) 177 C.A.3d 719, 223 C.R. 28.) The California Supreme Court denied review, but the U.S. Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeal decision.

(a) If the state had simply required plaintiffs to make an easement across their beachfront available to the public in order to increase public access to the beach, there would clearly have been a taking. (107 S.Ct. 3145, 97 L.Ed.2d 685.) Requiring the easement as a condition for issuing a land use permit has the same effect. (107 S.Ct. 3146, 3147, 97 L.Ed.2d 687.)

(b) If the permit condition served a legitimate police-power purpose, e.g., protecting the public's ability to see the beach by a height limitation, it would be valid. (107 S.Ct. 3147, 3148, 97 L.Ed.2d 688.) The Commission contends that the new house will interfere with "visual access" to the beach, but its argument is without substance; and every other court that has considered the question (except the California courts) has held that this kind of permit condition cannot be treated as a valid exercise of land use power. (107 S.Ct. 3149, 97 L.Ed.2d 691.)

(c) The Commission's final justification for the access requirement is that the condition is part of a comprehensive program to provide continuous public access along the beach. California is free to advance this kind of a program by using the power of eminent domain for this public purpose, "but if it wants an easement across the Nollans' property, it must pay for it." (107 S.Ct. 3150, 97 L.Ed.2d 692.)

Four justices dissented. (See Blue Jeans Equities West v. San Francisco (1992) 3 C.A.4th 164, 166, 171, 4 C.R.2d 114 [Nollan heightened scrutiny test applies to possessory rather than regulatory takings, and hence does not apply to Transit Impact Development Fee ordinance (supra, §627)]; 101 Harv. L. Rev. 240 [Nollan]; 102 Harv. L. Rev. 448; 39 Hastings L. J. 335, 359; 22 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 957; 15 Pepperdine L. Rev. 345; 17 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 627; 20 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1.)

In Twain Harte Associates, Ltd. v. Tuolumne (1990) 217 C.A.3d 71, 265 C.R. 737, the court made these observations:

(a) "Distilled from the many cases which have attempted to apply such a patently nebulous notion are three principles of law relevant to the issues before us: (1) A regulation has 'gone too far' when it is arbitrary or unreasonable; (2) A regulation has 'gone too far' when, as applied to a specific piece of property, it imposes upon the owner such unreasonable economic loss as to amount to a de facto appropriation of property; and (3) An 'as applied' inverse condemnation claim is 'ripe' for presentation to the courts when the landowner has obtained a final decision from the appropriate governmental agency regarding the application of the regulation to the specific property in issue." (217 C.A.3d 83.)

(b) " 'Bright line' precedent is not the prevailing jurisprudential norm in this area of the law. The United States Supreme Court, as it freely admits from time to time, has been unable to arrive at any articulable test to measure when a land use regulation goes so far in its economic consequences to a specific piece of property as to effect a taking. ... Rather, it has examined the 'taking' question by engaging in essentially ad hoc, factual inquiries that have identified several factors--such as the economic impact of the regulation, its interference with reasonable investment backed expectations, and the character of the government action--that have particular significance." (217 C.A.3d 83.)

In Dolan v. Tigard (1994) 512 U.S. 374, 114 S.Ct. 2309, 129 L.Ed.2d 304, a property owner's commercial expansion was conditioned on the owner's dedication of a portion of land for a bicycle path and storm drainage improvement. Held, the conditions were an unconstitutional taking.

(a) Nollan abandoned the reasonable relationship test in favor of a stricter "essential nexus test," under which the Court must determine "whether the 'essential nexus' exists between the 'legitimate state interest' and the permit condition exacted by the city." If the requisite nexus exists, the Court "must then decide the required degree of connection between the exactions and the projected impact of the proposed development." The Court was not required to answer this question in Nollan because the connection there did not meet even the loosest standard. (114 S.Ct. 2317, 129 L.Ed.2d 317.)

(b) Here, the prevention of flooding and the reduction of traffic congestion qualify as legitimate government interests. (114 S.Ct. 2317, 2318, 129 L.Ed.2d 318.) A nexus exists between flood prevention and limiting development within a floodplain, and between providing a bicycle path and easing traffic congestion. (114 S.Ct. 2318, 129 L.Ed.2d 318.) But to satisfy the Fifth Amendment, there must be "rough proportionality" between the condition imposed on the landowner for obtaining a permit and the needs created by the development, i.e., "the city must make some sort of individualized determination that the required dedication is related both in nature and extent to the impact of the proposed development." (114 S.Ct. 2319, 2320, 129 L.Ed.2d 320.) That proportionality is lacking here. (114 S.Ct. 2320, 2321, 129 L.Ed.2d 322.)

Four justices dissented in two opinions. (114 S.Ct. 2322, 2330, 129 L.Ed.2d 323, 333.) (See 108 Harv. L. Rev. 290 [Dolan]; 27 Pacific L. J. 1657 [reexamination of Nollan, Dolan, and Lucas under conjunctive standard]; 36 Santa Clara L. Rev. 515 [Nollan and Dolan: end of municipal land use extortion].)

In Ehrlich v. Culver City (1996) 12 C.4th 854, 50 C.R.2d 242, 911 P.2d 429, the requirement that a developer who planned to replace a private tennis club with a condominium pay an art fee and a $ 280,000 recreational mitigation fee met the Dolan/Nollan "essential nexus" test, but the evidence was insufficient to determine whether the amount of the mitigation fee met the "rough proportionality" test. (12 C.4th 881, 885.) (See Tahoe Keys Property Owners' Assn. v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1459, 1474, 28 C.R.2d 734, supra, §1156 [discussing Nollan; requiring payment of mitigation fee as condition of permit was proper]; San Mateo County Coastal Landowners' Assn. v. San Mateo (1995) 38 C.A.4th 523, 547, 45 C.R.2d 117 [Dolan was not followed where determination to use certain amount of land for agricultural purposes was legislative, instead of judicial]; Santa Monica Beach, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1999) 19 C.4th 952, 967, 81 C.R.2d 93, 968 P.2d 993 [heightened Nollan and Dolan standard of review was inapplicable to action challenging rent control ordinance]; 24 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1139 [Ehrlich].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

In Agins v. Tiburon (1980) 447 U.S. 255, 100 S.Ct. 2138, 2141, 65 L.Ed.2d 106, 112, text, §1058, the Court declared that government regulation of private property effects a taking if it "does not substantially advance legitimate state interests." This language has been repeated in many cases as a regulatory takings test. (See, for example, Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council (1992) 505 U.S. 1003, 112 S.Ct. 2886, 2897, 120 L.Ed.2d 798, 817, text, §1158; Cwynar v. San Francisco (2001) 90 C.A.4th 637, 661, 109 C.R.2d 233, text, §1154.) However, in Lingle v. Chevron U.S.A. (2005) 544 U.S. 528, 125 S.Ct. 2074, 161 L.Ed.2d 876, the Court explained that this test was derived from due process, not regulatory takings, precedents. (125 S.Ct. 2082, 161 L.Ed.2d 889.) It "is not a valid method of discerning whether private property has been 'taken' for purposes of the Fifth Amendment." (125 S.Ct. 2084, 161 L.Ed.2d 890.)

(a) The "substantially advances" test "reveals nothing about the magnitude or character of the burden a particular regulation imposes upon private property rights. Nor does it provide any information about how any regulatory burden is distributed among property owners. In consequence, this test does not help to identify those regulations whose effects are functionally comparable to government appropriation or invasion of private property; it is tethered neither to the text of the Takings Clause nor to the basic justification for allowing regulatory actions to be challenged under the Clause." (125 S.Ct. 2084, 161 L.Ed.2d 890.) "Instead of addressing a challenged regulation's effect on private property, the 'substantially advances' inquiry probes the regulation's underlying validity." But this inquiry is "distinct from the question whether a regulation effects a taking, for the Takings Clause presupposes that the government has acted in pursuit of a valid public purpose." (125 S.Ct. 2084, 161 L.Ed.2d 891.)

(b) This holding, that the "substantially advances" formula is not a valid takings test, does not require the reversal of any prior United States Supreme Court holdings. (125 S.Ct. 2085, 2086, 161 L.Ed.2d 892.) Although many cases recited the formula, none found a compensable taking based on that inquiry. (125 S.Ct. 2086, 161 L.Ed.2d 893.) (See 119 Harv. L. Rev. 297 [Lingle]; 34 Ecology L. Q. 471 [Due Process Land Use Claims After Lingle]; 46 Santa Clara L. Rev. 767 [Lingle].)

See Allegretti & Co. v. Imperial (2006) 138 C.A.4th 1261, 1277, 42 C.R.3d 122 [placing yearly limit on groundwater extractions as condition of county's issuance of permit to drill new well on agricultural land did not effect regulatory taking; county did not physically invade or appropriate property or groundwater and landowner failed to demonstrate adverse economic impact or compensable interference with investment-backed expectations]; Los Altos El Granada Investors v. Capitola (2006) 139 C.A.4th 629, 651, 43 C.R.3d 434 [applying Lingle v. Chevron U.S.A.; reversal was required where trial court applied "substantially advances" due process test in determining takings claim]; State Route 4 Bypass Authority v. Superior Court (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1546, 1555, 1565, 64 C.R.3d 286 [applying test of Dolan v. Tigard (1994) 512 U.S. 374, 114 S.Ct. 2309, 129 L.Ed.2d 304, text, p. 811, in absence of actual development application by owners of properties who were required to dedicate strip of agricultural land for highway bypass project; trial court erred in holding that requiring abutting property owners to dedicate strip of land for project was unconstitutional on equal protection grounds; state and federal laws do not require equality of burden among property owners benefiting from project]; Ocean Harbor House Homeowners Assn. v. California Coastal Com. (2008) 163 C.A.4th 215, 230, 77 C.R.3d 432 [relying on Ehrlich v. Culver City (1996) 12 C.4th 854, 50 C.R.2d 242, 911 P.2d 429, text, p. 812; imposition of mitigation fee by Coastal Commission for loss of beach from planned construction of seawall did not constitute unconstitutional taking where there was nexus between projected impact of seawall and mitigation fee, and mitigation fee was roughly proportional to extent of beach and recreation that would be lost]; Action Apartment

Assn. v. Santa Monica (2008) 166 C.A.4th 456, 470, 82 C.R.3d 722 [two-prong Nollan/Dolan nexus and rough proportionality test applicable in "exaction" cases did not apply to facial challenge to land use regulation; test is applicable only in context of judicial review of individual adjudicative land use decisions, and Lingle did not abrogate this rule]; 10 A.L.R. Fed 2d 231 [what constitutes taking of property requiring compensation under Fifth Amendment--United States Supreme Court cases].

48 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

a. In General.

4. Taking Requiring Compensation.

bb. Lucas Decision.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1158

[§ 1158] Lucas Decision.

In Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council (1992) 505 U.S. 1003, 112 S.Ct. 2886, 120 L.Ed.2d 798, petitioner Lucas, in 1986, paid $ 975,000 for two residential lots on the Isle of Palms in Charleston County, South Carolina, on which he intended to build single-family homes. In 1988, the Legislature enacted the Beachfront Management Act, which had the direct effect of barring him from erecting any permanent habitable structures on his two parcels. He filed an action, contending that the Act effected a taking of his property without just compensation. The trial court agreed, but the state Supreme Court reversed on the ground that the Legislature had found that new construction threatened the public resource (beaches). The U.S. Supreme Court reversed.

(a) Prior to Justice Holmes' exposition in Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon (1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322 (see supra, §§980, 981), it was generally thought that the Takings Clause reached only a direct appropriation of property, or the functional equivalent of a practical ouster of the owner's possession. Justice Holmes recognized that if the uses of private property were subject to unbridled, uncompensated qualification under the police power, the qualification might be extended more and more until private property disappeared. These considerations gave birth in that case to the maxim that, "while property may be regulated to a certain extent, if regulation goes too far it will be recognized as a taking." (112 S.Ct. 2892, 120 L.Ed.2d 812.)

(b) "In 70-odd years of succeeding 'regulatory takings' jurisprudence, we have generally eschewed any 'set formula' for determining how far is too far. ... We have, however, described at least two discrete categories of regulatory action as compensable without case-specific inquiry into the public interest advanced in support of the restraint. The first encompasses regulations that compel the property owner to suffer a physical 'invasion' of his property. In general (at least with regard to permanent invasions), no matter how weighty the public purpose behind it, we have required compensation." (112 S.Ct. 2893, 120 L.Ed.2d 812.)

(c) "The second situation in which we have found categorical treatment appropriate is where regulation denies all economically beneficial or productive use of land." (112 S.Ct. 2893, 120 L.Ed.2d 893, citing Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, supra, §1058, Nollan v. California Coastal Com. (1987) 483 U.S. 825, 107 S.Ct.

3141, 97 L.Ed.2d 677, supra, §1157, and other cases.) "Surely, at least, in the extraordinary circumstances when no productive or economically beneficial use of land is permitted, it is less realistic to indulge our usual assumption that the legislature is simply 'adjusting the benefits and burdens of economic life, ... in a manner that secures an average reciprocity of advantage' to everyone concerned. ... And the functional basis for permitting the government, by regulation, to affect property values without compensation--that 'Government hardly could go on if to some extent values incident to property could not be diminished without paying for every such change in the general law,' ...--does not apply to the relatively rare situations where the government has deprived a landowner of all economically beneficial uses." (112 S.Ct. 2894, 120 L.Ed.2d 814.) In short, "there are good reasons for our frequently expressed belief that when the owner of real property has been called upon to sacrifice all economically beneficial uses in the name of the common good, that is, to leave his property economically idle, he has suffered a taking." (112 S.Ct. 2895, 120 L.Ed.2d 815.)

(d) Many prior opinions have suggested that "harmful or noxious uses" of property may be proscribed by government regulation without compensation. This "harmful or noxious use" analysis was simply the progenitor of contemporary statements that land-use regulation does not effect a taking if it substantially advances legitimate state interests. (112 S.Ct. 2897, 120 L.Ed.2d 817.) When this is understood, it becomes self-evident that noxious-use logic cannot serve as a touchstone to distinguish regulatory "takings" which require compensation from regulatory deprivations that do not. (112 S.Ct. 2899, 120 L.Ed.2d 819.)

(e) "Where the State seeks to sustain regulation that deprives land of all economically beneficial use, we think it may resist compensation only if the logically antecedent inquiry into the nature of the owner's estate shows that the proscribed use interests were not part of his title to begin with. This accords, we think, with our 'takings' jurisprudence, which had traditionally been guided by the understandings of our citizens regarding the content of, and the State's power over, the 'bundle of rights' that they acquire when they obtain title to property. It seems to us that the property owner necessarily expects the uses of his property to be restricted, from time to time, by various measures newly enacted by the State in legitimate exercise of its police powers. ... And in cases of personal property, by reason of the State's traditionally high degree of control over commercial dealings, he ought to be aware of the possibility that new regulation might even render his property economically worthless (at least if the property's only economically productive use is sale or manufacture for sale). ... In the case of land, however, we think the notion pressed by the Council that title is somehow held subject to the 'implied limitation' that the State may subsequently eliminate all economically valuable use is inconsistent with the historical compact recorded in the Takings Clause that has become part of our constitutional culture." (112 S.Ct. 2899, 120 L.Ed.2d 820.)

(f) "On this analysis, the owner of a lakebed, for example, would not be entitled to compensation when he is denied the requisite permit to engage in a landfilling operation that would have the effect of flooding others' land. Nor the corporate owner of a nuclear generating plant, when it is directed to remove all improvements from its land upon discovery that the plant sits astride an earthquake fault. Such regulatory action may well have the effect of eliminating the land's only economically productive use, but it does not proscribe a productive use that was previously permissible under relevant property and nuisance principles. The use of these properties for what are now expressly prohibited purposes was always unlawful, and (subject to other constitutional limitations) it was open to the State at any point to make the implication of those background principles of nuisance and property law explicit." (112 S.Ct. 2900, 120 L.Ed.2d 821.)

(g) "The 'total taking' inquiry we require today will ordinarily entail (as the application of state nuisance law ordinarily entails) analysis of, among other things, the degree of harm to public lands and resources, or adjacent private property, posed by the claimant's proposed activities ... , the social value of the claimant's activities and their suitability to the locality in question ... , and the relative ease with which the alleged harm can be avoided through measures taken by the claimant and the government (or adjacent private landowners) alike. ... The fact that a particular use has long been engaged in by similarly situated owners ordinarily imports a lack of any common-law prohibition (though changed circumstances or new knowledge may make what was previously permissible no longer). ... So also does the fact that other landowners, similarly situated, are permitted to continue the use denied to the claimant." (112 S.Ct. 2901, 120 L.Ed.2d 822.)

(h) On remand, the question to be decided is one of state law. "We emphasize that to win its case South Carolina must do more than proffer the Legislature's declaration that the uses Lucas desires are inconsistent with the public interest, or the conclusory assertion that they violate a common-law maxim such as sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas. ... Instead, as it would be required to do if it sought to restrain Lucas in a common-law action for public nuisance, South Carolina must identify background principles of nuisance and property law that prohibit the uses he now intends in the circumstances in which the property is presently found. Only on this showing can the State fairly claim that, in proscribing all such beneficial uses, the Beachfront Management Act is taking nothing." (112 S.Ct. 2901, 120 L.Ed.2d 822.)

One justice filed a separate opinion, concurring in the judgment. (112 S.Ct. 2902, 120 L.Ed. 823.) Two justices filed separate dissenting opinions. (112 S.Ct. 2904, 2917, 120 L.Ed.2d 825, 842.) One justice filed a statement favoring dismissal of the writ of certiorari as having been granted improvidently. (112 S.Ct. 2925, 120 L.Ed.2d 851.) (See 106 Harv. L. Rev. 269 [Lucas]; 29 Cal. Western L. Rev. 209; 45 Hastings L. J. 1539; 25 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1221; 26 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 943, 955; 22 Ecology L. Q. 413 [analysis of takings law in post-Lucas era]; 23 Ecology L. Q. 509 [analysis of proposed takings legislation]; 23 Ecology L. Q. 577 [ethical approaches to takings and compensation analysis]; 70 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1 [Lucas]; 23 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 177 [same]; 31 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 169 [when does regulation go too far]; 45 Stanf. L. Rev. 1369 [Symposium]; 27 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 186 [Lucas and endangered species protection]; 50 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 641 [Lucas].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

The categorical takings rule of Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council (1992) 505 U.S. 1003, 112 S.Ct. 2886, 120 L.Ed.2d 798, text, p. 812, was applied in Monks v. Rancho Palos Verdes (2008) 167 C.A.4th 263, 84 C.R.3d 75, where defendant city's moratorium on building in an area prone to landslides was held to constitute a permanent taking. (167 C.A.4th 303.) The trial court had held that the moratorium was not a permanent taking because it was conditional and temporary, and that plaintiffs could build if they could convince defendant that the zone had a gross safety factor of 1.5 or greater. But this would have required plaintiffs to go through defendant's administrative process, which the Court of Appeal had previously excused on the grounds of futility in a prior appeal. Defendant had already decided that the zone had a gross safety factor of less than 1.5. (167 C.A.4th 303, 304.) Further, the moratorium was not justified under state nuisance law. (167 C.A.4th 305.) The stability of the area was, at best, uncertain, and defendant failed to show that the construction of homes on plaintiffs' lots would pose a significant risk of harm to persons or property. (167 C.A.4th 306.)

See 35 Ecology L. Q. 1 [Background Principles and the Rule of Law: Fifteen Years After Lucas].

49 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

a. In General.

5. Texts and Law Reviews.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1159

[§ 1159] Texts and Law Reviews.

Commentary on regulatory takings is extensive.

(1) Texts and Practice Works. See 2 Tribe, §15.12; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §15.1 et seq.; 30 Proof of Facts 3d 503 [proof under 42 U.S.C., §1983 of wrongful land use regulation]; 31 Proof of Facts 3d 563 [proof of inverse condemnation from excessive land use regulation]; 51 Proof of Facts 3d 489 [Recovery of Damages for Temporary Conditions Ensuing From Construction or Repair of Public Improvement]; 58 Proof of Facts 3d 81 [Denial of Wetland Permit as Basis for Landowner's Regulatory Taking Claim].

(2) Law Reviews. See 108 Harv. L. Rev. 519 [note on Utah statutes requiring governmental entities to conduct takings impact analysis when proposing regulations]; 109 Harv. L. Rev. 1252 [Colonial Land Use Law and Its Significance for Modern Takings Doctrine]; 115 Harv. L. Rev. 2158 [balancing public good and private rights]; 72 Cal. L. Rev. 569 [economic analysis of regulatory taking]; 77 Cal. L. Rev. 1299 [The Takings Clause]; 78 Cal. L. Rev. 55 [same]; 92 Cal. L. Rev. 609 [constitutional exactions and regulatory formulas]; 29 Cal. Western L. Rev. 209; 22 Ecology L. Q. 89 [arguing that regulatory takings doctrine should be abolished]; 23 Ecology L. Q. 509 [analysis of proposed takings legislation]; 23 Ecology L. Q. 577 [ethical approaches to takings and compensation analysis]; 31 Ecology L. Q. 227 [unjustified preference for land ownership in regulatory takings law]; 55 Hastings L. J. 477 [takings jurisprudence as tool for resolving water disputes in American West]; 30 McGeorge L. Rev. 201 [role of transferable development rights in constitutional takings analysis]; 64 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1393 [The Hidden Structure of Takings Law]; 68 So. Cal. L. Rev. 885 [property rights and takings in context of environmental surveillance]; 21 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1019; 31 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 19 [selected Supreme Court regulatory takings cases]; 49 Stanf. L. Rev. 305 [Endangered Species Act: study in takings and incentives]; 35 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 103 [effect of Supreme Court's takings jurisprudence on local land use decisions]; 43 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 77 [Takings Clause and regulation of environmentally sensitive lands]; 36 U.S.F. L. Rev. 793 ["temporal severance" and exclusion of time in determining value of regulated property].

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Law Reviews. See 34 Ecology L. Q. 307 [takings law today]; 58 Hastings L. J. 729 [institutional context of exactions]; 35 Hastings Const. L. Q. 897 [history of regulatory takings jurisprudence and relationship between state and federal courts]; 45 San Diego L. Rev. 633, 729, 761 [Symposium on Fifth Amendment and regulatory takings]; 27 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 187 [Will Regulations Keep Tahoe Blue? Searching for Stewardship in Property Law and Regulatory Takings Analysis].

50 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

b. Temporary Taking.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1160

[§ 1160] In General.

In First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. Los Angeles (1987) 482 U.S. 304, 107 S.Ct. 2378, 96 L.Ed.2d 250, plaintiff owned Lutherglen, a retreat center in a forest in Los Angeles County. A forest fire created a flood hazard, and in February 1978, a flood destroyed the facility. In January 1979, defendant county adopted an ordinance prohibiting construction of any building in a flood protection area, including the place where Lutherglen had stood. Plaintiff filed a complaint for damages alleging that the ordinance denied all use of Lutherglen. The superior court, relying on Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, supra, §1058, struck the allegation, the Court of Appeal affirmed, and the Supreme Court denied review. The Court of Appeal held that a landowner who claims that property has been "taken" by a regulation may not recover damages for the time before it is finally determined that the regulation constitutes a "taking." Held, reversed. The Just Compensation Clause requires the government to pay for "temporary" regulatory takings.

(a) "While the typical taking occurs when the government acts to condemn property in the exercise of its power of eminent domain, the entire doctrine of inverse condemnation is predicated on the proposition that a taking may occur without such formal proceedings." (107 S.Ct. 2386, 96 L.Ed.2d 265.) And the rule has been established since Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon (1922) 260 U.S. 393, 43 S.Ct. 158, 67 L.Ed. 322, that if a regulation goes too far, it will be recognized as a taking. (107 S.Ct. 2386, 96 L.Ed.2d 265.) The California Supreme Court in Agins "truncated the rule by disallowing damages that occurred prior to the ultimate invalidation of the challenged regulation." (107 S.Ct. 2387, 96 L.Ed.2d 265.)

(b) A governmental body may acquiesce in a judicial declaration that an ordinance has effected an unconstitutional taking; i.e., the landowner cannot insist that a "temporary" taking be deemed a permanent taking. But the issue here is whether abandonment by the Government requires payment of compensation for the period during which regulations deny an owner all use of his land. (107 S.Ct. 2387, 96 L.Ed.2d 265.)

(c) Kimball Laundry Co. v. United States (1949) 338 U.S. 1, 69 S.Ct. 1434, 93 L.Ed. 1765, supra, §1130, and other cases show that these kinds of temporary takings are not different in kind from permanent takings. (107 S.Ct. 2387, 2388, 96 L.Ed.2d 266.) Here, the ordinance became effective in January 1979, and the merits of plaintiff's claim had yet to be determined when the California Supreme Court denied review in October 1985. Invalidation of the ordinance "after this period of time, though converting the taking into a 'temporary' one, is not a sufficient remedy to meet the demands of the Just Compensation Clause." (107 S.Ct. 2388, 96 L.Ed.2d 267.)

(d) "Nothing we say today is intended to abrogate the principle that the decision to exercise the power of eminent domain is a legislative function. ... Once a court determines that a taking has occurred, the government retains the whole range of options already available--amendment of the regulation, withdrawal of the invalidated regulation, or exercise of eminent domain. ... We merely hold that where the government's activities have already worked a taking of all use of property, no subsequent action by the government can relieve it of the duty to provide compensation for the period during which the taking was effective." (107 S.Ct. 2389, 96 L.Ed.2d 267, 268.)

(e) This holding is limited to the facts presented, treating as true the allegation that the ordinance denied plaintiff all use of its property. Questions arising from normal delays in obtaining building permits, changes in zoning ordinances, variances, etc., "are not before us." (107 S.Ct. 2389, 96 L.Ed.2d 268.)

Three justices dissented. (See 101 Harv. L. Rev. 240, 359 [First English]; 102 Harv. L. Rev. 448; 24 Cal. Western L. Rev. 33; 26 Ecology L. J. 1 [federal courts' misguided attempts to avoid preclusion]; 39 Hastings L. J. 335 [First English]; 22 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 957; 19 Pacific L. J. 931; 17 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 627; 20 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 1; 35 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1267; 7 A.L.R.2d 1297 [compensation for temporary use or occupancy]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §15.12.)

In First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. Los Angeles (1989) 210 C.A.3d 1353, 258 C.R. 893, the Court of Appeal, on remand from the U.S. Supreme Court, held that the complaint did not state a cause of action for a regulatory taking. (210 C.A.3d 1372.)

(a) Mugler v. Kansas (1887) 123 U.S. 623, 8 S.Ct. 273, 31 L.Ed. 205, supra, §1060, and later cases have established that prohibitions on the use of property, when imposed for the protection of the public health and safety, are proper exercises of the police power. (210 C.A.3d 1362, 1363.)

(b) Agins indicates that a land use regulation constitutes a taking if it fails to substantially advance a legitimate state interest or if it deprives the property owner of all uses of his land. First English, however, states that a regulation denying all uses is not a taking if it promotes public safety. (210 C.A.3d 1364, 1366.) The ordinance here survives under either test. (210 C.A.3d 1367.)

(c) The public interest is strong. "If there is a hierarchy of interests the police power serves--and both logic and prior cases suggest there is--then the preservation of life must rank at the top of the scale. ... The zoning regulation challenged in the instant case involves this highest of public interests--the prevention of death and injury. Its enactment was prompted by the loss of life in an earlier flood. And its avowed purpose is to prevent the loss of lives in future floods. Moreover, the lives it seeks to save and the injuries it strives to prevent are not only those on other properties but on appellant's property as well." (210 C.A.3d 1370.)

(d) Both the interim and the permanent ordinances prohibited construction of buildings in the flood protection area, encompassing some but not all of the Lutherglen site, but otherwise allowed the site to be used for its normal purpose, i.e., camping. Hence, the county has not prohibited all uses. (210 C.A.3d 1367, 1368, 1369.) "What First English can no longer do is rebuild the bunkhouses and similar permanent living structures which might house the potential victims of a future flood or if carried away by that flood cause death, injury and property damage to other properties further downstream." (210 C.A.3d 1371.)

(e) The ordinance is also justified as an interim moratorium pending a safety study on possible uses of the property. This kind of an interim measure, unless unreasonable in purpose, duration, or scope, does not constitute an unconstitutional temporary taking. (210 C.A.3d 1373; see infra, §1162.)

In Ali v. Los Angeles (1999) 77 C.A.4th 246, 252, 255, 91 C.R.2d 458, the court distinguished Landgate v. California Coastal Com. (1998) 17 C.4th 1006, 1018, 1031, 73 C.R.2d 841, 953 P.2d 1188, infra, §1161. Here, the delay in demolition of a fire-damaged low-income hotel was caused by the erroneous enforcement of an ordinance protecting low-income housing in violation of the Ellis Act. Because the delay temporarily deprived the owner of all use of the property and was not a delay in the development process, there was a temporary regulatory taking requiring compensation under First English.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Correction: Page 818, third full paragraph, line 2, 26 Ecology L. J. 1 should be 26 Ecology L. Q. 1.

51 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

b. Temporary Taking.

2. Delay in Development Process.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1161

[§ 1161] Delay in Development Process.

In Guinnane v. San Francisco (1987) 197 C.A.3d 862, 241 C.R. 787, plaintiffs, real estate developers, brought an inverse condemnation action on the theory that the city's conduct in delaying action on a building permit application was so unreasonable as to amount to a taking. Held, summary judgment for defendant affirmed. Under Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, supra, §1058, and First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. Los Angeles (1987) 482 U.S. 304, 107 S.Ct. 2378, 96 L.Ed.2d 250, supra, §1160, the temporary suspension of land use that occurs during the normal governmental decisionmaking process does not constitute a taking. (197 C.A.3d 870.)

In Littoral Dev. Co. v. San Francisco Bay Conservation & Dev. Com. (1995) 33 C.A.4th 211, 221, 39 C.R.2d 266, the court held that defendant conservation commission's unsuccessful assertion of jurisdiction over a portion of plaintiff's property was facially valid and supported by a plausible, though erroneous, argument. Therefore, it did not constitute a taking, even though it resulted in delay.

Landgate v. California Coastal Com. (1998) 17 C.4th 1006, 1018, 1031, 73 C.R.2d 841, 953 P.2d 1188, adopting the view of Littoral Dev. Co., held that a regulatory mistake resulting in delay is not, by itself, a taking of property. Plaintiff failed to prove that a 2-year development delay was due to anything other than a bona fide dispute over the legality of plaintiff's lot and the Coastal Commission's jurisdictional authority over a lot line adjustment. "Of course ... a governmental agency may not evade the takings clause by fabricating a dispute over the legality of a lot, or by otherwise arbitrarily imposing conditions on development in order to delay or discourage that development. The government's assertion of authority, whether or not erroneous, must advance some legitimate governmental purpose." (17 C.4th 1029.)

Many decisions have followed Landgate. (See Buckley v. California Coastal Com. (1998) 68 C.A.4th 178, 201, 80 C.R.2d 562 [commission's mistaken assertion of jurisdiction over portion of lot did not constitute either permanent or temporary taking]; Breneric Associates v. Del Mar (1998) 69 C.A.4th 166, 176, 81 C.R.2d 324 [agency's denial of discretionary land use permit will be upheld as long as denial "substantially advances legitimate governmental interests and is supported by substantial evidence"]; Calprop Corp. v. San Diego (2000) 77 C.A.4th 582, 596, 91 C.R.2d 792

["[l]iability for delay in processing a development proposal may only be imposed 'when it goes beyond that to be expected as part of the normal permit process,' " quoting Hensler v. Glendale (1994) 8 C.4th 1, 32 C.R.2d 244, 876 P.2d 1043, infra, §1166]; Loewenstein v. Lafayette (2002) 103 C.A.4th 718, 729, 127 C.R.2d 79 [delay of little over 2 years to resolve issue concerning availability of lot line adjustment exception to Subdivision Map Act was not unreasonable in absence of evidence that city intentionally delayed development project]; 28 Pepperdine L. Rev. 415 [The Abnormalcy of Normal Delay].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

52 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

b. Temporary Taking.

3. Building Moratorium.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1162

[§ 1162] Building Moratorium.

Tahoe-Sierra Preservation Council v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency (2002) 535 U.S. 302, 122 S.Ct. 1465, 152 L.Ed.2d 517, held that a 32-month moratorium on development while a regional plan was being formulated did not constitute a per se taking of property requiring compensation under the federal Takings Clause.

(a) The distinction between acquisition of property for public use and regulations prohibiting private uses "makes it inappropriate to treat cases involving physical takings as controlling precedents for the evaluation of a claim that there has been a 'regulatory taking,' and vice versa. ... Land-use regulations are ubiquitous and most of them impact property values in some tangential way--often in completely unanticipated ways. Treating them all as per se takings would transform government regulation into a luxury few governments could afford." (122 S.Ct. 1479, 152 L.Ed.2d 541.)

(b) Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council (1992) 505 U.S. 1003, 112 S.Ct. 2886, 120 L.Ed.2d 798, supra, §1158, stated a categorical rule that compensation is required when a regulation prevents all economically beneficial use of the land. Thus, the starting point in a regulatory takings case should be to ask whether there has been a total taking of the property. If not, the court must apply Penn Cen. Trans. Co. v. New York (1978) 438 U.S. 104, 98 S.Ct. 2646, 57 L.Ed.2d 631. (122 S.Ct. 1483, 152 L.Ed.2d 545.) Penn Cen. requires an analysis of (1) the economic effect of a regulation on the landowner, (2) the extent to which the regulation interferes with reasonable investment-backed expectations, and (3) the character of the government action. (122 S.Ct. 1475, 152 L.Ed.2d 536, footnote 10, citing Palazzolo v. Rhode Island (2001) 533 U.S. 606, 121 S.Ct. 2448, 150 L.Ed.2d 592, infra, §1165.)

(c) Because the temporary prohibition on development here constituted a permanent deprivation, the more fact-specific inquiry of Penn Cen. is in order. (122 S.Ct. 1484, 152 L.Ed.2d 547.) "In rejecting petitioners' per se rule, we do not hold that the temporary nature of a land-use restriction precludes finding that it effects a taking; we simply recognize that it should not be given exclusive significance one way or the other." (122 S.Ct. 1486, 152 L.Ed.2d 549.)

Three justices dissented in two opinions. (122 S.Ct 1490, 1496, 152 L.Ed.2d 553, 561.) (See 116 Harv. L. Rev. 321 [Tahoe-Sierra]; 30 Pepperdine L. Rev 273 [same]; 40 San Diego L. Rev. 1597 [using Penn Central analysis to solve Tahoe-Sierra controversy]; 50 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 641 [criticizing use of investment-backed expectations].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 34 Ecology L. Q. 381 [critique of Tahoe-Sierra's distinction between physical and regulatory takings]; 34 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 351 [Palazzolo and Tahoe-Sierra].

53 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

3. Regulatory Taking.

b. Temporary Taking.

4. Taking During Pendency of Proceedings.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1163

[§ 1163] Taking During Pendency of Proceedings.

In Needles v. Griswold (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1881, 8 C.R.2d 753, defendants were licensees of a city-owned golf course. Plaintiff City, dissatisfied with defendants' operation of the course, terminated the lease and, after obtaining a temporary restraining order, took possession of the course and of defendants' personal property used in operating the course. In a separate proceeding, defendants' motion to compel arbitration was granted. However, the court also granted a preliminary injunction that prohibited defendants from interfering with the city's exclusive control over personal property "necessary" to operate the course, and deferred the question of compensation to the arbitrator. Held, the injunction constituted a taking without just compensation.

(a) A temporary taking that denies the owner all use of his or her property is a taking requiring compensation. (6 C.A.4th 1888, citing First English Evangelical Lutheran Church of Glendale v. Los Angeles, Calif. (1987) 482 U.S. 304, 107 S.Ct. 2378, 96 L.Ed.2d 250, supra, §1160.) This rule applies to a taking of property during the pendency of proceedings, and applies regardless of whether the action is one for condemnation or some other proceeding. (6 C.A.4th 1888, 1889, citing Steinhart v. Superior Court (1902) 137 C. 575, 70 P. 629.)

(b) The federal Constitution does not specify when compensation is to be paid, but Cal. Const., Art. I, §19, requires that compensation be paid or deposited into court before the taking. (6 C.A.4th 1892.) There is no exception for temporary takings; and California courts have long held that compensation must be paid in advance, even when possession rather than title is taken. (6 C.A.4th 1892, 1893.)

(c) This requirement was expressly stated in the revised Constitution of 1879. (6 C.A.4th 1893.) When the Constitution was revised in 1918, prejudgment possession was authorized, but in this case the condemnor must deposit a sum determined by the court to be reasonably adequate to compensate the property owner. Here, the city made no deposit, so this exception to the general rule does not apply. (6 C.A.4th 1894.)

(d) A condemnation action is the only legal procedure provided in California for the taking of private property for public use; this taking may not be accomplished by means of an injunction. Hence, even if a deposit had been made, the injunction here would still be improper. (6 C.A.4th 1894, 1895.) (See 51 Proof of Facts 3d 489 [Recovery of Damages for Temporary Conditions Ensuing From Construction or Repair of Public Improvement]; on statutory action prior to taking or damage, see infra, §1169.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

54 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

4. Procedure.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1164

[§ 1164] In General.

(1) Similar to Condemnation Proceeding. Although the Eminent Domain Law (infra, §1170 et seq.) does not cover inverse condemnation, the general procedural rules governing eminent domain proceedings will be applied when appropriate to an inverse condemnation action. (See Highland Realty Co. v. San Rafael (1956) 46 C.2d 669, 683, 298 P.2d 15 [right to jury trial to ascertain compensation]; Aetna Life & Cas. Co. v. Los Angeles (1985) 170 C.A.3d 865, 877, 216 C.R. 831 [rules of evidence]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, Chap. 13; 17 California Lawyer 58 (November 1997) [Overcoming Takings Claims Hurdles].) (On venue, see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §726; on pleading, see 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §648 et seq.)

In Marshall v. Department of Water & Power (1990) 219 C.A.3d 1124, 268 C.R. 559, the issue was whether a jury trial is required when liability (i.e., inverse taking) is completely a factual question. The court, following the settled case law, held that the only issue calling for a jury is compensation, and that the liability issue is for the judge to determine. (219 C.A.3d 1139, 1140, 1141.) The jury, in reaching its verdict, may consider the credibility of the plaintiff as a witness and disregard evidence that it does not believe. (219 C.A.3d 1147.) Where the award is delayed, the judge may award prejudgment interest on the amount. (219 C.A.3d 1149.) But prejudgment interest on an attorneys' fee award is improper. "The constitutional mandate to make whole a property owner does not translate into a basis for enriching an attorney fee award." (219 C.A.3d 1149.)

(2) No Claim Filing Requirement. Originally, a claim had to be filed with the State Board of Control within 1 year after the cause of action accrued. (See Pierpont Inn v. California (1969) 70 C.2d 282, 294, 74 C.R. 521, 449 P.2d 737; Mosesian v. Fresno (1972) 28 C.A.3d 493, 495, 104 C.R. 655.) In 1976, the requirement was abolished for inverse condemnation actions. (See Govt.C. 905.1.)

(3) Entity's Cross-Complaint Against Third Party for Equitable Indemnity. In San Mateo v. Berney (1988) 199 C.A.3d 1489, 245 C.R. 738, homeowners sued defendant county, alleging that street widening destroyed the lateral support of their property. Defendant cross-complained for equitable indemnity against the real estate developer and others, alleging that the cross-defendants were responsible for negligently planning, developing, supervising, and placing fill on the property. Held, judgment on the pleadings for the developer reversed.

"Although we have found no case which expressly so holds, we see no logical reason which would serve to prevent a public entity subjected to liability for inverse condemnation from seeking indemnification from third parties whose negligent or fraudulent acts were causative factors in the damaging or taking of private property. ... While it is true that a public entity is liable in inverse condemnation for 'any actual physical injury to real property proximately caused by [a public] improvement as deliberately designed and constructed' ... , where, as is here alleged, a third party's fraudulent concealment caused or contributed to the injury, the third party should indemnify the public entity to the extent such conduct has contributed to a damage award against the public entity." (199 C.A.3d 1494.)

(4) Administrative Mandamus Is Precondition. Prior to seeking inverse condemnation damages based on an administrative agency's regulatory taking, the landowner must challenge the agency's action through the mandamus procedure (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §262 et seq.). (Rosco Holdings v. California (1989) 212 C.A.3d 642, 657, 260 C.R. 736 [landowner failed to employ administrative mandamus to challenge conditions imposed by California Coastal Commission on use of its land]; Mola Dev. Corp. v. Seal Beach (1997) 57 C.A.4th 405, 410, 67 C.R.2d 103 [by dismissing mandamus action and electing to proceed exclusively for damages, plaintiff denied defendant city opportunity to respond to adverse judicial ruling by remedying wrong or mitigating damages and, essentially, sought to force city to exercise power of eminent domain].)

(5) Distinction: Trial and Hearing on Mandamus Petition. Takings issues raised by an inverse condemnation action alleging a regulatory taking arising from the Coastal Commission's denial of a development permit must be determined in a court trial. If the administrative mandamus petition is heard first, the doctrine of collateral estoppel may bar relitigation of some of the facts in the subsequent takings trial. If the hearing on the mandamus petition and the trial on the takings issues are held at the same time, the process might be more efficient for both the court and the parties and the res judicata problems would be avoided. (Healing v. California Coastal Com. (1994) 22 C.A.4th 1158, 1176, 1178, 27 C.R.2d 758 [citing Rosco Holdings, supra, as not inconsistent].) (See 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 99 [discussing Healing, and distinctions between administrative mandamus and inverse condemnation actions].)

(6) Proper Defendant. A public entity is a proper defendant in an action for inverse condemnation "if it has the power to control or direct the aspect of the public improvement that is alleged to have caused the injury." This is because "in the exercise of its governmental power the entity either failed to appreciate the probability that the project would result in some damage to private property, or that it took the calculated risk that damage would result." (Arreola v. Monterey (2002) 99 C.A.4th 722, 742, 762, 122 C.R.2d 38, supra, §1134.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Similar to Condemnation Proceeding. See Dina v. People (2007) 151 C.A.4th 1029, 1043, 60 C.R.3d 559 [in inverse condemnation action, trial court did not err in allowing defendant to use motion procedure of C.C.P. 1260.040 (text, §1221) for ruling on liability, which was legal issue affecting determination of compensation].

(2) No Claim Filing Requirement. The State Board of Control has been renamed the California Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board. (4) Administrative Mandamus Is Precondition.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Extraordinary Writs, §263 et seq.

55 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

4. Procedure.

b. Standing and Ripeness.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1165

[§ 1165] Standing and Ripeness.

(1) Insurer's Standing To Join as Co-Plaintiff. In McMahan's of Santa Monica v. Santa Monica (1983) 146 C.A.3d 683, 194 C.R. 582, the court held that an insurer who is subrogated to the rights of a property owner may either maintain an independent action in inverse condemnation to recover for payments made to its insured, or may join in an action by the insured. (146 C.A.3d 690, 691.) To require the insurer to proceed only after the conclusion of the insured's action would require an unnecessary second action. (146 C.A.3d 691.) (See Aetna Life & Cas. Co. v. Los Angeles (1985) 170 C.A.3d 865, 875, 216 C.R. 831 [insured's inverse condemnation right may be assigned to insurer].)

(2) Case Not Ripe for Adjudication. In MacDonald, Sommer & Frates v. Yolo County (1986) 477 U.S. 340, 106 S.Ct. 2561, 91 L.Ed.2d 285, plaintiff's proposed residential subdivision plan was rejected by defendant county's Planning Commission and Board of Supervisors on a number of grounds. Plaintiff brought this action for damages for a taking, alleging that defendants were restricting the property to open-space agricultural use by denying applications for other uses, and thereby were appropriating the "entire economic use" of the property. A demurrer was sustained, and the California Court of Appeal affirmed. Held, the merits of this issue could not be considered.

(a) "It follows from the nature of a regulatory takings claim that an essential prerequisite to its assertion is a final and authoritative determination of the type and intensity of development legally permitted on the subject property. A court cannot determine whether a regulation has gone 'too far' unless it knows how far the regulation goes." (106 S.Ct. 2566, 91 L.Ed.2d 294.) Agins v. Tiburon (1979) 24 C.3d 266, 157 C.R. 372, 598 P.2d 25, supra, §1058, San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. San Diego (1981) 450 U.S. 621, 101 S.Ct. 1287, 67 L.Ed.2d 551, supra, §1059, and Williamson County Regional Planning Com. v. Hamilton Bank of Johnson City (1985) 473 U.S. 172, 105 S.Ct. 3108, 87 L.Ed.2d 126, "uniformly reflect an insistence on knowing the nature and extent of permitted development before adjudicating the constitutionality of the regulations that purport to limit it." (106 S.Ct. 2567, 91 L.Ed.2d 295.)

(b) Plaintiff has submitted one subdivision proposal and has received the board's response, but it has yet to receive the board's final definitive position on how it will apply the regulations to the particular land. And "the holdings of both courts below leave open the possibility that some development will be permitted, and thus again leave us in doubt regarding the antecedent question whether appellant's property has been taken." (106 S.Ct. 2568, 91 L.Ed.2d 296.)

Four justices dissented, asserting that the factual allegations of the complaint did state a takings claim. (See Twain Harte Associates, Ltd. v. Tuolumne (1990) 217 C.A.3d 71, 265 C.R. 737, supra, §1157; 27 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1 [Williamson].)

In Long Beach Equities v. Ventura (1991) 231 C.A.3d 1016, 282 C.R. 877, plaintiff LBE was seeking to build 249 single-family residences on a 250-acre parcel of land. This action was brought seeking damages for inverse condemnation on the theory that the land use regulations of defendant county and defendant city, on their face and as applied, would so greatly delay its development plans as to render them economically infeasible. "LBE states that City and County's actions in rescinding the area plan, forbidding all development in the urban reserve overlay, downzoning the property, imposing a de facto or actual moratorium (on development) and imposing a growth-control plan to preclude large scale residential development has resulted in a de facto taking." The complaint alleged that "these actions deprived the subject property of substantially all its value, renders it unmarketable and forbids substantially all reasonable economic beneficial use of the property, thereby thwarting its reasonable investment-backed expectations." (231 C.A.3d 1028.) Held, judgment for defendants on demurrer affirmed; the suit was not ripe for adjudication.

(a) An action for inverse condemnation will not lie unless the plaintiff shows that the regulation has gone so far that it has accomplished a taking. Hence, the developer "must establish that it has submitted at least one meaningful application for a development project which has been thoroughly rejected, and that it has prosecuted at least one meaningful application for a zoning variance, or something similar, which has been finally denied." (231 C.A.3d 1032.)

(b) "In the instant case, LBE has not submitted an application for annexation to City even though the Guidelines, since 1969, have urged developers who propose projects like this one to do so. LBE did not follow through on its application for a specific plan, nor has LBE alleged that it applied for a zoning change, or sought other favored uses such as senior and affordable housing." (231 C.A.3d 1034.)

(c) "LBE has sued City and County because of disappointed expectations concerning its development plans. LBE states no cause of action even if it has expended substantial sums of infrastructure and preapproval planning, and even though there will be some delay in bringing some development proposal to fruition. These expenditures and delays are the normal incidents of development projects and are not actionable, per se." (231 C.A.3d 1042.) (See Ramona Convent of the Holy Names v. Alhambra (1993) 21 C.A.4th 10, 19, 26 C.R.2d 140, supra, §1059 [case was ripe for adjudication]; Toigo v. Ross (1998) 70 C.A.4th 309, 324, 82 C.R.2d 649 [taking claim was not ripe for adjudication where town had not taken final, definitive position on how it would ultimately apply its land use policies to hypothetical well-designed proposal]; Calprop Corp. v. San Diego (2000) 77 C.A.4th 582, 598, 91 C.R.2d 792 [following Toigo v. Ross; fact that city rejected conditional use permit to operate private landfill did not establish that city would prevent plaintiff from developing its land in economically valuable manner]; Shea Homes Ltd. Partnership v. Alameda (2003) 110 C.A.4th 1246, 1268, 2 C.R.3d 739 [for claim to be ripe, plaintiff must have applied for, and been denied, development rights; county must have had opportunity to exercise its discretion in considering plans for property before plaintiff can challenge zoning restrictions on property].)

(3) Futility Exception. "The futility exception to the ripeness doctrine relieves a developer from submitting 'multiple applications when the manner in which the first application was rejected makes it clear that no project will be approved.' ... When the regulatory authority has 'drawn the line, clearly and emphatically,' as to the permissible use of the property, the developer is not required to submit additional development applications." (Milagra Ridge Partners, Ltd. v. Pacifica (1998) 62 C.A.4th 108, 120, 72 C.R.2d 394 [quoting federal cases; exception was not applicable where general plan did not preclude all development of property and developer was free to propose conforming development; city had demonstrated support for development by approving prior project and general plan amendment that was later rejected by voters]; see Toigo v. Ross, supra, 70 C.A.4th 327 [following Milagra Ridge]; Calprop Corp. v. San Diego, supra, 77 C.A.4th 599 [land use regulators must have been presented with specific development proposal from which final decision as to permissible level of development can be formally adopted or at least inferred under particular circumstances; following Toigo v. Ross].)

(4) Acquisition of Property After Regulation Is Adopted. A landowner is not precluded from challenging the constitutionality of a regulation merely because he or she acquired the property after the regulation was enacted. It would be unfair "to bar a regulatory takings claim because of the post-enactment transfer of ownership where the steps necessary to make the claim ripe were not taken, or could not have been taken, by a previous owner." (Palazzolo v. Rhode Island (2001) 533 U.S. 606, 121 S.Ct. 2448, 2458, 2463, 150 L.Ed.2d 592, 607, 614 [takings claim was ripe given unequivocal nature of wetland regulations and coastal management council's prior denials of plaintiff's applications to fill wetlands].) (See 115 Harv. L. Rev. 447 [Palazzolo]; 29 Ecology L. Q. 137 [same]; 43 Santa Clara L. Rev. 337 [same]; 50 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1259 [same; regulatory takings notice debate].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1a) (New) Standing of Holder of Deed of Trust. The beneficiary of a deed of trust has a sufficient ownership interest in the property to be entitled to recover compensation in inverse condemnation. Normally the compensable interest of the trust deed holder "derives from the owner/mortgagor's recovery," but "an agreement between parties to the trust deed creating the security interest can permit the trust deed holder to recover an inverse condemnation award directly." (D & M Financial Corp. v. Long Beach (2006) 136 C.A.4th 165, 176, 38 C.R.3d 562 [trust deed required that miscellaneous proceeds, which included condemnation award, be applied to reduce secured debt].)

(2) Case Not Ripe for Adjudication. See Charles A. Pratt Const. Co. v. California Coastal Com. (2008) 162 C.A.4th 1068, 1080, 76 C.R.3d 466 [regulatory takings claim was not ripe for adjudication where plaintiff only presented one plan and defendant commission only made one decision, which did not settle question of what development would be allowed or indicate that it would be futile to submit other plans]. (3) Futility Exception. See Alameda v. Superior Court (2005) 133 C.A.4th 558, 569, 34 C.R.3d 895 [following Milagra Ridge Partners, Ltd. v. Pacifica (1998) 62 C.A.4th 108, 72 C.R.2d 394, text, p. 827; exception was not applicable where landowner had not submitted development proposal and county had not had opportunity to explain reach of challenged regulation, which did not restrict all uses of property].

(4) Acquisition of Property After Regulation Is Adopted. See 34 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 351 [Palazzolo]. (5) (New) Case Ripe for Adjudication. In Dunn v. Santa Barbara (2006) 135 C.A.4th 1281, 38 C.R.3d 316, the court held that a takings claim arising out of a request to subdivide a parcel into two buildable lots was ripe for adjudication even though plaintiff had not sought permission to build a home. The county had made it clear that wetland and other environmental regulations effectively limited development of the property to one home, and the county had repeatedly indicated that it would allow one home to be constructed. (135 C.A.4th 1299.)

56 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

4. Procedure.

c. Statute of Limitations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1166

[§ 1166] Statute of Limitations.

The action must be filed within 3 years if the plaintiff's property is damaged (C.C.P. 338(j)), or within 5 years if it is taken (Garden Water Corp. v. Fambrough (1966) 245 C.A.2d 324, 327, 53 C.R. 862 [5-year statute applies to taking of water system]). (See 26 A.L.R.4th 68 [action for compensation for direct appropriation of land without institution of formal proceedings]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §16.4; 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §556.)

Where there is no direct physical invasion of the landowner's property and the fact of taking is not immediately apparent, the 5-year limitations period is tolled until the damage is sufficiently appreciable to a reasonable person. But where the taking is immediately apparent and could be seen by a reasonable person inspecting the property, the period is not tolled. (Otay Water Dist. v. Beckwith (1991) 1 C.A.4th 1041, 1049, 3 C.R.2d 223.) (See Brown v. California (1993) 21 C.A.4th 1500, 1505, 1506, 26 C.R.2d 687 [whether 3-year or 10-year statute was applicable, action by holder of trust deed against state was untimely, because complaint alleged that state entered land more than 10 years earlier]; Kong v. Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2002) 108 C.A.4th 1028, 1047, 134 C.R.2d 260 [5-year statute of limitations began to run when plaintiff sublessee was required to vacate premises, not when defendant acquired title to property].)

In Hensler v. Glendale (1994) 8 C.4th 1, 32 C.R.2d 244, 876 P.2d 1043, the issue was which statute of limitations was applicable to a complaint in inverse condemnation alleging a taking of real property resulting from the adoption, or application to the plaintiff's property, of an ordinance enacted pursuant to the Subdivision Map Act (Govt.C. 66410 et seq.; see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §809). Three years after plaintiff purchased a large tract of land zoned for single-family residential use, the city, under the authority of the Act, enacted an ordinance prohibiting construction on major ridge lines within the city. The city approved construction of 588 residential units on plaintiff's property, but rejected use or encroachment on the ridge lines within the tract. More than 3 years after approval of the development plan, plaintiff brought the present action for inverse condemnation, claiming that the ordinance precluded development of 40% of the tract. The city demurred on the ground that the action was brought beyond the 90-day limitations period of Govt.C. 66499.37. The trial judge sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action, and the Court of Appeal affirmed. Held, the action was untimely.

(a) Plaintiff asserts that, as a matter of federal constitutional right, he can sue for inverse condemnation without first challenging the application of the city's ordinance to his property. He ignores the distinction between takings resulting from physical invasion and those resulting from regulation. Where the alleged taking is a regulatory one, compensation is available only if the regulation "goes too far," and this cannot be determined until an administrative agency applies the ordinance or regulation to the property and a final administrative decision has been reached with regard to the availability of a variance or other means by which to exempt the property from the challenged restriction. "A final administrative decision includes exhaustion of any available review mechanism." (8 C.4th 11, 12.)

(b) "California provides such a process by making available an action for inverse condemnation if, after exhausting administrative remedies to free the property from the limits placed on development and obtaining a judicial determination that just compensation is due, any restrictions for which compensation must otherwise be paid are not lifted. In that action the court determines whether the restriction on development 'goes too far' and will be constitutionally impermissible unless just compensation is paid for the taking brought about by the restriction." (8 C.4th 13.)

(c) Although plaintiff seeks to avoid application of Govt.C. 66499.37 by arguing that he does not challenge the validity of the city ordinance, and is seeking only compensation for the taking effected by it, the gravamen of his cause of action is a claim that an ordinance enacted under the authority of the Subdivision Map Act, or administrative actions taken pursuant to the ordinance, have had the effect of taking his property without compensation. He thus necessarily challenges the validity of either the ordinance or the city's acts pursuant to it. Because he must establish that the ordinance or action is not lawful or constitutionally valid in the absence of compensation, his cause of action comes within the application of Govt.C. 66499.37. The longer limitations periods of C.C.P. 318 and 319 (see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §227) or C.C.P. 338, supra, apply only if no different limitation is prescribed by statute, and in this case Govt.C. 66499.37 provides a different limitation. (8 C.4th 24, 25.)

(d) "We conclude that an action in inverse condemnation, whether or not joined with an action in administrative mandamus ... challenging the ordinance or its application to the plaintiff's property, is governed" by Govt.C. 66499.37 "unless it alleges the existence of a final judgment establishing that there has been a compensable taking of the plaintiff's land." (8 C.4th 6, 7.) (See Serra Canyon Co., Ltd. v. California Coastal Com. (2004) 120 C.A.4th 663, 672, 16 C.R.3d 110 [following Hensler; where prior owner failed to challenge irrevocable offer to dedicate land that was extracted by city as condition for development, subsequent owner who accepted title to property with knowledge that it was burdened by recorded offer to dedicate could not claim that acceptance of offer was taking; federal law making onerous permit conditions unconstitutional did not revive takings claim that was waived by inaction]; 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 99, 1746 [Hensler].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

In Uniwill L.P. v. Los Angeles (2004) 124 C.A.4th 537, 21 C.R.3d 464, plaintiff developer was not precluded from bringing an inverse condemnation action by its failure to challenge defendant city's imposition of conditions on a project within the 90-day limitations period of Govt.C. 66499.37. Generally, a property owner cannot comply with a condition imposed on a building permit and then sue for the cost of compliance. However, here defendant had demanded the granting of an easement, the payment of a fee, and the performance of other costly work after approval of the Tentative Tract Map and after plaintiff's performance of substantial work on the project. Plaintiff chose to comply with the conditions, rather than to stop work and challenge them, as a matter of economic necessity. The action was filed within 5 years of the date of the alleged taking. (124 C.A.4th 543.)

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §605.

57 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

4. Procedure.

d. Interest.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1167

[§ 1167] Interest.

(1) When Interest Begins To Run. Interest ordinarily runs from the date of damage, not merely from the time of judgment. (See Heimann v. Los Angeles (1947) 30 C.2d 746, 758, 185 P.2d 597; Youngblood v. Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. (1961) 56 C.2d 603, 611, 15 C.R. 904, 364 P.2d 840; Holtz v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1976) 17 C.3d 648, 657, 131 C.R. 646, 552 P.2d 430; Smith v. Los Angeles (1989) 214 C.A.3d 266, 290, 262 C.R. 754 [interest was properly awarded from date damage reached level that substantially interfered with owner's use and enjoyment].) However, special circumstances may require that interest run only from the valuation or trial date, e.g., where damages are measured from the trial date and the property has appreciated since the date of the taking. (See Leaf v. San Mateo (1984) 150 C.A.3d 1184, 1192, 198 C.R. 447.)

C.C.P. 1268.310(b), allowing prejudgment interest when property is taken before judgment, includes a constructive taking and thus allows interest based on an inverse condemnation claim. (People v. Gardella Square (1988) 200 C.A.3d 559, 574, 246 C.R. 139, infra, §1258.)

(2) Calculation of Interest. There was formerly some uncertainty about the prejudgment rate of interest in inverse condemnation. (See Imperial Cattle Co. v. Imperial Irr. Dist. (1985) 167 C.A.3d 263, 274, 213 C.R. 622 [interest limited to legal rate]; Aetna Life & Cas. Co. v. Los Angeles (1985) 170 C.A.3d 865, 879, 216 C.R. 831 [interest at prevailing market rate]; Salton Bay Marina v. Imperial Irr. Dist. (1985) 172 C.A.3d 914, 950, 218 C.R. 839 [distinguishing Imperial Cattle Co.; award of market rate based on Moody's Composite Index of Corporate Bond Rates].) However, the 1986 Legislature added C.C.P. 1268.311, providing that interest is computed as prescribed by C.C.P. 1268.350. Thus, interest is calculated semiannually for the first 6 months and the last 6 months of the calendar year. The rate for a 6-month period is the rate calculated by the Controller as the rate of earnings on the Surplus Money Investment Fund for the preceding 6-month period. (C.C.P. 1268.350; see infra, §1259.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Calculation of Interest. C.C.P. 1268.350, as amended in 2006, provides for the quarterly calculation of interest.

58 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

4. Procedure.

e. Costs and Attorneys' Fees.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1168

[§ 1168] Costs and Attorneys' Fees.

(1) Reimbursement Authorized. A property owner who obtains judgment or settlement in an inverse condemnation action is entitled to reimbursement for "reasonable costs, disbursements, and expenses, including reasonable attorney, appraisal, and engineering fees, actually incurred because of that proceeding in the trial court or in any appellate proceeding in which the plaintiff prevails on any issue in that proceeding." (C.C.P. 1036.) (See Heimann v. Los Angeles (1947) 30 C.2d 746, 758, 185 P.2d 597 [right to costs from time of actual taking or damage, not merely from time of judgment]; Frustuck v. Fairfax (1964) 230 C.A.2d 412, 415, 41 C.R. 56 [statute governing litigation expenses on dismissal or defeat of right to take in eminent domain proceeding (infra, §1265), is not applicable to inverse condemnation]; Leaf v. San Mateo (1984) 150 C.A.3d 1184, 1189, 198 C.R. 447 [attorney acting pro se in prosecuting inverse condemnation action is entitled to reasonable value of professional services necessarily rendered]; Aetna Life & Cas. Co. v. Los Angeles (1985) 170 C.A.3d 865, 881, 216 C.R. 831 [20% contingent attorney's fee was unreasonably high in relation to actual amount of award and number of hours worked]; Salton Bay Marina v. Imperial Irr. Dist. (1985) 172 C.A.3d 914, 957, 218 C.R. 839 [award of contingent fee remanded for redetermination; "Legislature contemplated an award of attorney fees based on the amount of time spent on the case and other factors and not based solely on a contingent fee arrangement between attorney and client"]; Ferrell v. San Diego (2001) 90 C.A.4th 537, 543, 108 C.R.2d 681 [use of words "costs, disbursements, and expenses" in C.C.P. 1036 does not mean that statute provides for costs that are not considered to be ordinary costs under C.C.P. 1033.5]; Model Eminent Domain Code, §213, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 26; 11 Miller & Starr 3d, §30:31.)

C.C.P. 1036 authorizes the recovery of the prevailing plaintiff's litigation expenses incurred in enforcing an inverse condemnation judgment under Govt.C. 970 et seq. (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §401). (Downen's v. Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2001) 86 C.A.4th 856, 860, 103 C.R.2d 644 [issue of first impression].) However, a fee award is limited to fees actually incurred; "fees may be reduced because they are unreasonable and pose an unnecessary burden on public funds, but they cannot be increased beyond what was 'actually incurred.'" (Andre v. West Sacramento (2001) 92 C.A.4th 532, 537, 111 C.R.2d 891.)

(2) Action for Taking or Damaging. C.C.P. 1036 formerly applied to an action "brought for the taking of any interest in real property." This provision was deleted in 1995. The statute now applies in "any inverse condemnation proceeding." (C.C.P. 1036.) (On interpretation of "taking" under former version of statute, see Stone v. Los Angeles

(1975) 51 C.A.3d 987, 998, 124 C.R. 822 [no taking of legally recognized interest in property]; Holtz v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1976) 17 C.3d 648, 658, 131 C.R. 646, 552 P.2d 430 [right to lateral support is interest in real property]; Orme v. California (1978) 83 C.A.3d 178, 184, 147 C.R. 735, [damage to crops caused by flooding was taking within meaning of C.C.P. 1036]; Imperial Cattle Co. v. Imperial Irr. Dist. (1985) 167 C.A.3d 263, 276, 213 C.R. 622 [following Orme; fee award was proper for damage caused by temporary flooding of feed lot, including damage to personal property]; Salton Bay Marina v. Imperial Irr. Dist., supra, 172 C.A.3d 952 [following Orme; fee award was proper for flood damage caused by rising level of water in lake].)

(3) Prevailing Defendant. In Smith v. Los Angeles (1989) 214 C.A.3d 266, 262 C.R. 754, an inverse condemnation action involving the destruction of residences in a landslide, the trial judge denied costs to defendant waterworks even though it was the prevailing party. Held, this was error.

(a) Blau v. Los Angeles (1973) 32 C.A.3d 77, 107 C.R. 727, and Drennen v. Ventura (1974) 38 C.A.3d 84, 112 C.R. 907, held that unsuccessful plaintiffs in inverse condemnation actions were constitutionally entitled to be free of costs. (214 C.A.3d 298.) However, "the holdings in Blau and Drennen are unsupported by the authority cited and contrary to the reasoning expressed" in Los Angeles v. Ricards (1973) 10 C.3d 385, 389, 110 C.R. 489, 515 P.2d 585. (214 C.A.3d 298, and footnote 14.)

(b) "The constitutional guarantee of full compensation for property taken or damaged for public use does not apply where a property owner sued a public entity for inverse condemnation but is unable to prove the subject property was taken or damaged by that entity. In such circumstances, the prevailing party's statutory right to costs applies without constitutional limitation." (214 C.A.3d 297.)

Smith was cited with approval in Locklin v. Lafayette (1994) 7 C.4th 327, 27 C.R.2d 613, 867 P.2d 724, 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §965. Successful public entity defendants were entitled to costs even though the plaintiffs brought the inverse condemnation action in good faith. An inverse condemnation plaintiff must establish a compensable taking or damage before Cal. Const., Art. I, §19, "may be invoked to shield the unsuccessful plaintiff from assessment of costs" under C.C.P. 1032. "Nothing in the constitutional provision or our past cases suggests that a governmental entity must bear the expense of all litigation by property owners who in good faith, but without sufficient evidence or legal support, claim damage to their property." (7 C.4th 377.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Reimbursement Authorized. Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Enforcement of Judgment, §430 et seq.

59 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

D. Inverse Condemnation.

4. Procedure.

f. Action Prior to Taking or Damage.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1169

[§ 1169] Action Prior to Taking or Damage.

It was formerly the rule that the property owner's remedy by inverse condemnation did not arise until there was an actual taking or damage. (See Silva v. San Francisco (1948) 87 C.A.2d 784, 787, 198 P.2d 78 [city board of supervisors adopted resolution authorizing condemnation of particular property but had not commenced proceedings; no right of action in inverse condemnation]; cf. Hilltop Properties v. California (1965) 233 C.A.2d 349, 356, 43 C.R. 605 [dictum that action would lie if governmental agency did unequivocal act evidencing intention to open street or similar improvement, and commenced work].)

However, under the Eminent Domain Law, a property owner has a right of action prior to actual taking or damage as follows: If the public entity (1) adopts a resolution establishing the necessity for the taking, and (2) does not bring its proceeding within 6 months, the owner may sue in inverse condemnation. In this action, the judgment may (a) require the taking of the land and award compensation; (b) in addition, or in the alternative, award damages for interference with the owner's rights. (C.C.P. 1245.260, infra, §1202; see Pacific Outdoor Advertising Co. v. Burbank (1978) 86 C.A.3d 5, 14, 149 C.R. 906 [no right of action where there is no unequivocal act or intent to condemn]; Langer v. Redevelopment Agency of Santa Cruz (1999) 71 C.A.4th 998, 1006, 84 C.R.2d 19 [following Pacific Outdoor Advertising; no right of action by tenants where there was no substantial equivalent of condemnation; plans for developing properties were initiated by owner and developer who only sought assistance from agency in acquiring other properties in area]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §13.2.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

60 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

1. In General.

a. Nature, Organization, and Scope.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1170

[§ 1170] Nature, Organization, and Scope.

(1) In General. The Eminent Domain Law (C.C.P. 1230.010 et seq.), modeled after the Model Eminent Domain Code and the Uniform Eminent Domain Code, was enacted in 1975. (See 12 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 1627; 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 5 et seq.) The usual general principles of construction are set forth in C.C.P. 1235.010 et seq., and important definitions are given in C.C.P. 1235.110 et seq. (see infra, §1171). Enactment of the new law was accompanied by extensive conforming legislation, repealing and amending many sections in various codes dealing with condemnation. (For list of conforming revisions, see 12 Cal. Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 1878 et seq.)

(2) Organization. The Eminent Domain Law is set out in Title 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in 12 Chapters:

(a) Chapter 1, General Provisions. (See infra, §§1172, 1174.)

(b) Chapter 2, Principles of Construction; Definitions. (See infra, §1171.)

(c) Chapter 3, The Right To Take. (See infra, §1175 et seq.)

(d) Chapter 4, Precondemnation Activities. (See infra, §1196 et seq.)

(e) Chapter 5, Commencement of Proceeding. (See infra, §1204 et seq.)

(f) Chapter 6, Deposit and Withdrawal of Probable Compensation; Possession Prior to Judgment. (See infra, §1212 et seq.)

(g) Chapter 7, Discovery; Exchange of Valuation Data. (See infra, §1211.)

(h) Chapter 8, Procedures for Determining Right To Take and Compensation. (See infra, §1219 et seq.)

(i) Chapter 9, Compensation. (See infra, §1223 et seq.)

(j) Chapter 10, Divided Interests. (See infra, §1250 et seq.)

(k) Chapter 11, Postjudgment Procedure. (See infra, §1254 et seq.)

(l) Chapter 12, Arbitration of Compensation in Acquisitions of Property for Public Use. (See infra, §1268 et seq.)

(3) Scope. "Except as otherwise specifically provided by statute, the power of eminent domain may be exercised only as provided in this title." (C.C.P. 1230.020.) However, nothing in Title 7 "requires that the power of eminent domain be exercised to acquire property necessary for public use. Whether property necessary for public use is to be acquired by purchase or other means or by eminent domain is a decision left to the discretion of the person authorized to acquire the property." (C.C.P. 1230.030; on acquisition by negotiation, see infra, §1186.)

The Eminent Domain Law is triggered by the threat of condemnation, which means "an unequivocal expression of intent to condemn." When property is conveyed under the threat of condemnation, the conveyance is described as "in lieu of condemnation." (Johnston v. Sonoma County Agricultural Preservation & Open Space Dist. (2002) 100 C.A.4th 973, 987, 123 C.R.2d 226 [Eminent Domain Law applied to conveyance of utility easement over preserved open-space property transferred to city as part of negotiated settlement prior to commencement of condemnation proceedings].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

61 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

1. In General.

b. Definitions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1171

[§ 1171] Definitions.

The Eminent Domain Law contains the usual standard definition section: "Unless the provision or context otherwise requires, these definitions govern the construction of this title." (C.C.P. 1235.110.) A few special definitions apply to particular articles, but the principal definitions, of general application, are as follows:

(1) Final judgment: A "judgment with respect to which all possibility of direct attack by way of appeal, motion for a new trial, or motion" under C.C.P. 663 "to vacate the judgment has been exhausted." (C.C.P. 1235.120.)

(2) Interest: "When used with reference to property, 'interest' includes any right, title, or estate in property." (C.C.P. 1235.125.)

(3) Judgment: The "judgment determining the right to take the property by eminent domain and fixing the amount of compensation to be paid by the plaintiff." (C.C.P. 1235.130.)

(4) Litigation expenses: These include both (a) all expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred in preparing for trial, during trial, and in subsequent judicial proceedings, and (b) reasonable attorneys' and appraisal fees, and fees for the services of other experts, where those fees were reasonably and necessarily incurred to protect the defendant's interests in the proceeding in preparing for trial, during trial, and in subsequent judicial proceedings, whether those fees were incurred for services rendered before or after filing the complaint. (C.C.P. 1235.140; see Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1988) 203 C.A.3d 78, 85, 249 C.R. 606, infra, §1265 [litigation expenses include attorneys' fees on appeal].)

The expenses must be "incurred." Thus, an owner, whether testifying as an expert or otherwise, is not entitled to reimbursement for the time spent in preparing and presenting his or her own testimony. (Madera v. Forrester (1981) 115 C.A.3d 57, 62, 170 C.R. 896.)

(5) Local public entity: A "public entity other than the state." (C.C.P. 1235.150.)

(6) Nonprofit, special use property: This means property that "is operated for a special nonprofit, tax-exempt use such as a school, church, cemetery, hospital, or similar property." It "does not include property owned by a public entity." (C.C.P. 1235.155.)

(7) Person: This "includes any public entity, individual, association, organization, partnership, trust, limited liability company, or corporation." (C.C.P. 1235.160.)

(8) Proceeding: An "eminent domain proceeding under this title." (C.C.P. 1235.165.) (See Law Rev. Com. Comment, pointing out that definition excludes matters before Public Utilities Commission.)

(9) Property: This "includes real and personal property and any interest therein." (C.C.P. 1235.170.) An authorized condemnor may acquire property of any type necessary for public use except where the power is limited by the particular statutory grant. (C.C.P. 1240.110, infra, §1182.)

(10) Property appropriated to public use: This means "property either already in use for a public purpose or set aside for a specific public purpose with the intention of using it for such purpose within a reasonable time." (C.C.P. 1235.180; for principal applications of statute, see C.C.P. 1240.510 et seq., 1240.610 et seq., infra, §1192 et seq.) The Law Revision Commission Comment, citing controlling cases, points out that (a) actual physical use is not required; a formal dedication, or facts indicating a reasonable prospect of use within a reasonable time, is sufficient; (b) property may be appropriated to public use even though it is owned by a private individual or corporation; and (c) conversely, it may be owned by a public entity but not appropriated to public use.

(11) Public entity: This "includes the state, a county, city, district, public authority, public agency, and any other political subdivision in the state." (C.C.P. 1235.190.)

(12) Electric, gas, or water public utility property: This means property appropriated to a public use by a defined public utility. (C.C.P. 1235.193.)

(13) Resolution: This "includes ordinance." (C.C.P. 1235.195.)

(14) State: This means "the State of California" including "the Regents of the University of California." (C.C.P. 1235.200.)

(15) Statute: This means "a constitutional provision or statute, but does not include a charter provision or ordinance." (C.C.P. 1235.210.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

63 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

1. In General.

d. BAJI and CACI Instructions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1173

[§ 1173] BAJI and CACI Instructions.

(1) BAJI Instructions. The eminent domain instructions in BAJI are as follows:

(a) Introductory:

No. 11.70: Power of Eminent Domain.

No. 11.71: Just Compensation.

(b) Fair Market Value:

No. 11.72: Just Compensation--Fair Market Value--Valuation Date.

No. 11.72.3: Land and Improvements To Be Valued as a Whole.

No. 11.72.5: Compensation for Machinery or Equipment.

No. 11.72.7: Compensation for Improvements Removed or Destroyed.

No. 11.72.9: Improvements Made After Service of Summons.

No. 11.73: Fair Market Value--Defined.

No. 11.75: Value of Use to Parties Not Test.

No. 11.77: Exclusion of Increase or Decrease in Value Caused by Extraneous Factors.

No. 11.78: Fair Market Value--Easement.

No. 11.79: Value Depreciation Caused by Cloud of Condemnation.

(c) Expert Witnesses:

No. 11.80: Eminent Domain--Opinion of Witnesses as to Value.

No. 11.81: Eminent Domain--Weighing Expert Opinion--Evidence of Comparable Sales.

No. 11.82: Eminent Domain--Weighing Expert Opinion--Evidence of Matters Relied Upon.

(d) Severance Damages:

No. 11.85: Severance Damages--Fee Being Taken.

No. 11.85.3: Severance Damages--Easement Being Taken.

No. 11.86: Elements Not Included in Severance Damages.

No. 11.87: Loss of Access.

No. 11.88: Diversion of Traffic.

No. 11.89: Inconvenience of Traffic Regulation.

No. 11.90: Freeway Access Excluded.

No. 11.91: Loss of Goodwill.

(e) Special Benefits:

No. 11.95: Benefits.

No. 11.96: Separate Assessment of Elements of Compensation.

(f) Burden of Proof--Costs:

No. 11.98: Eminent Domain--Burden of Proof.

No. 11.99: Eminent Domain--Costs.

(2) CACI Instructions. Jury instructions relating to eminent domain are stated in CACI, No. 3500 et seq., as follows:

No. 3500: Right To Take.

No. 3501: Fair Market Value.

No. 3502: Highest and Best Use.

No. 3503: Change in Zoning or Land Use Restriction.

No. 3504: Project Enhanced Value.

No. 3505: Information Discovered After Date of Valuation.

No. 3506: Effect of Improvements.

No. 3507: Personal Property and Inventory.

No. 3508: Bonus Value of Leasehold Interest.

No. 3509: Precondemnation Damages.

No. 3510: Value of Easement.

No. 3511: Severance Damages.

No. 3512: Severance Damages--Offset for Benefits.

No. 3513: Goodwill.

No. 3514: Burden of Proof.

No. 3515: Valuation Testimony.

No. 3516: View by Jury.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

64 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

1. In General.

e. Jurisdiction of Public Utilities Commission.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1174

[§ 1174] Jurisdiction of Public Utilities Commission.

Nothing in the Eminent Domain Law "affects any other statute granting jurisdiction over any issue in eminent domain proceedings to the Public Utilities Commission." (C.C.P. 1230.060.) This provision recognizes the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission under specific statutory grants. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

The Legislature is constitutionally authorized to enable the Public Utilities Commission "to fix just compensation for utility property taken by eminent domain." (Cal. Const., Art. XII, §5.) Pursuant to this authorization, the Public Utilities Code provides that a political subdivision or public corporation seeking to condemn the property of a public utility may petition the Commission to fix the compensation. (Pub.Util.C. 1401 et seq.) In this proceeding, the Commission acts as a special judicial tribunal. It has powers similar to those of a trial court and its findings are like those of the court or a general verdict of a jury. (See Southern Calif. Edison Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1936) 6 C.2d 737, 741, 749, 59 P.2d 808; Sacramento Mun. Util. Dist. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1946) 72 C.A.2d 638, 648, 165 P.2d 741.)

A governmental subdivision may bring a general eminent domain proceeding under C.C.P. 1230.010 et seq. But when it elects to proceed under Pub.Util.C. 1401 et seq., the Commission fixes the compensation. If the condemnee utility does not accept the amount, the governmental subdivision may then commence an eminent domain proceeding (Pub.Util.C. 1413), and the court is bound by the Commission's determination of compensation (Pub.Util.C. 1416).

In North Sacramento v. Citizens Util. Co. of Calif. (1963) 218 C.A.2d 178, 32 C.R. 308, this happened, and the court entered its interlocutory judgment of condemnation with an award of $ 2,206,000, the amount fixed by the Commission. Defendant utility, appealing, contended that it was entitled to interest on the award from the date of the interlocutory judgment to the date of possession, as in an ordinary condemnation proceeding (infra, §1258). Held, the utility was not entitled to the interest. The statute governing recovery on interest in ordinary condemnation proceedings does not apply to the special proceedings under Pub.Util.C. 1401 et seq. The result is not unjust; during the entire period until the city took possession, the utility continued to receive revenues under rates established to yield a fair return on its investment. (218 C.A.2d 190.) (See Sacramento v. Citizens Util. Co. of Calif. (1965) 239 C.A.2d 109, 113, 48 C.R. 547 [subsequent appeal determining that supplemental award under Pub.Util.C. 1417 should carry interest from date of possession].)

The Public Utilities Act formerly attempted to give the Commission the additional power to fix the compensation to be awarded to private persons where property was condemned for grade crossings. In S.H. Chase Lumber Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1931) 212 C. 691, 706, 300 P. 12, the pertinent section of the Act was held unconstitutional on the ground that this power was beyond the scope of the constitutional enabling provision and was impliedly forbidden by it. (See Great Northern Ry. Co. v. Superior Court (1932) 126 C.A. 575, 580, 14 P.2d 899.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

65 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

a. General Limitations on Exercise of Power.

1. Public Use Limitations.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1175

[§ 1175] In General.

(1) Constitutional Limitation. "The power of eminent domain may be exercised to acquire property only for a public use." (C.C.P. 1240.010, restating the limitation of Cal. Const., Art. I, §19, and U.S. Const., Amend. XIV.) (See Patel v. Southern Calif. Water Co. (2002) 97 C.A.4th 841, 844, 119 C.R.2d 119 [enrichment of water company by leasing its land to cell phone companies is not "public use"]; 32 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 569 [meaningful judicial scrutiny of "public use"]; BAJI, No. 11.70; CACI, No. 3500.)

(2) Legislative Determination. "Where the Legislature provides by statute that a use, purpose, object, or function is one for which the power of eminent domain may be exercised, such action is deemed to be a declaration by the Legislature that such use, purpose, object, or function is a public use." (C.C.P. 1240.010.) This statement avoids the need to provide in each condemnation authorization statute that the taking is one for public use. Judicial review to determine the issue of public use is not precluded by the statement, but under the case law, the legislative declaration will be accepted unless clearly erroneous. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See supra, §1120.)

(3) Statutory Authorizations. The Eminent Domain Law sets forth general limitations on the exercise of the power of eminent domain (see infra, §1177 et seq.) and restrictions governing the right to take in various circumstances, including the following:

(a) C.C.P. 1240.110 et seq. (rights included in grant of authority; see infra, §1182 et seq.).

(b) C.C.P. 1240.210 et seq. (future use; see infra, §1187).

(c) C.C.P. 1240.310 et seq. (substitute condemnation; see infra, §1188 et seq.).

(d) C.C.P. 1240.410 et seq. (excess condemnation; see infra, §1191).

(e) C.C.P. 1240.510 et seq. (compatible use; see infra, §§1192, 1193).

(f) C.C.P. 1240.610 et seq. (more necessary public use; see infra, §§1194, 1195).

Neither the general limitations nor the particular restrictions limit the other limitations and restrictions, each of which "is a separate and distinct authorization." (C.C.P. 1240.160.) Thus, for example, the authority to condemn for a compatible use is independent of the authority to condemn for a more necessary public use. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(4) Nonprofit, Special Use Property. Before initiation of negotiations for the acquisition of nonprofit, special use property, as defined in C.C.P. 1235.155 (supra, §1171), a public entity or public utility must "make every reasonable effort to seek alternative property." (Govt.C. 7267.9(a).) This requirement does not apply to (a) properties acquired by public entities for transportation purposes, including construction, expansion, or improvement of streets, highways, or railways (Govt.C. 7267.9(a)); or (b) actions or proceedings to acquire real property or an interest in real property for water, sewer, electricity, telephone, natural gas, or flood control facilities or rights of way where the acquisitions do not require removal or destruction of existing improvements and do not render the property unfit for the owner's use (Govt.C. 7267.9(b)).

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.226 et seq., 279 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

66 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

a. General Limitations on Exercise of Power.

1. Public Use Limitations.

bb. Condemnation of Sport Franchise.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1176

[§ 1176] Condemnation of Sport Franchise.

In Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1982) 32 C.3d 60, 183 C.R. 673, 646 P.2d 835, defendant was a limited partnership owning a professional football team as a franchise member of the National Football League (NFL). In 1966, defendant and a nonprofit corporation entered into a 5-year licensing agreement for use of the Oakland Coliseum, and renewed the agreement until 1980, when defendant announced its intention to move the football team to Los Angeles. Plaintiff city then brought this action in eminent domain to acquire defendant's property rights, and the trial judge granted summary judgment for defendant. Held, reversed.

(a) Condemnation of intangible property involved. There is no constitutional restriction on the nature of the property that may be taken by the general government under its inherent power; but a municipal corporation can exercise the power only when expressly authorized by law. (32 C.3d 64.) Under Govt.C. 37350.5, a city may acquire "any property," and the eminent domain law defines "property" in the broadest terms (C.C.P. 1235.170). (32 C.3d 65; see supra, §1171.) Although the contractual rights involved in this action have never previously been the subject of condemnation, there is substantial precedent for the condemnation of intangible property, including franchises. (32 C.3d 66, 67, 68.) "Bearing in mind that the Law Revision Commission, after an extensive national study, made its legislative recommendations, including a definition of condemnable property which it characterized as 'the broadest possible,' we conclude that our eminent domain law authorizes the taking of intangible property." (32 C.3d 68.)

(b) Valid public use. Govt.C. 37350.5 authorizes the acquisition of property necessary to carry out municipal powers or functions, and the general statutory scheme affords cities considerable discretion in identifying and implementing public uses. (32 C.3d 69, 70.) No prior case has held that a city can acquire and operate a professional football team; but acquisitions of lands to be used for recreational purposes have been sustained. (32 C.3d 70.) Municipal sports stadiums are common. (32 C.3d 71.) "Is the obvious difference between managing and owning the facility in which the game is played, and managing and owning the team which plays in the facility, legally substantial? To date, respondents have not presented a valid legal basis for concluding that it is, but we do not foreclose the trial court's reaching a different conclusion on a fuller record." (32 C.3d 72.) Further, there is no provision in the present law that precludes condemning an established team. (32 C.3d 73.)

(c) Property Outside Territorial Limits. Defendant contended that the city is barred by C.C.P. 1240.050 from condemning property outside its territorial limits; hence, it cannot acquire the partnership rights here that are not "located" in Oakland. (1) It is questionable whether this statute is relevant to intangible property, which has no permanent situs. (32 C.3d 74.) (2) Assuming its applicability, prima facie the restriction would appear to be met, for Oakland is the principal place of business of the partnership, the designated NFL-authorized site for the team's "home games," and the primary locale of the team's tangible personalty. (32 C.3d 74.) (3) Even the statutory limitation is subject to an exception permitting extraterritorial condemnation when necessary to implement local condemnation. (32 C.3d 75; see infra, §1181.)

(d) Conclusion. The facts and circumstances brought out in a trial on the merits should determine the issue of proper public use, and the city should be given an opportunity to prove its case in accordance with the principles outlined in the opinion. (32 C.3d 75, 76.)

One justice filed a concurring and dissenting opinion and another justice concurred in a substantial portion of that opinion. This opinion points to the "novel" and virtually unlimited power claimed by the city as involving a great potential for abuse. (32 C.3d 77.) (See 74 Cal. L. Rev. 1329; 20 Cal. Western L. Rev. 82; 17 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 963; 30 A.L.R.4th 1226 [public taking of sports or entertainment franchise as taking for public purpose].) (For decision on remand, holding that acquisition of National Football League franchise would violate Commerce Clause, see Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1985) 174 C.A.3d 414, 220 C.R. 153, infra, §1303.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

67 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

a. General Limitations on Exercise of Power.

2. Statutory Authorization Required.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1177

[§ 1177] In General.

"The power of eminent domain may be exercised to acquire property for a particular use only by a person authorized by statute to exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire such property for that use." (C.C.P. 1240.020; see supra, §1114 et seq.) Thus, (1) if the statutory grant is limited to property of a certain type (e.g., "natural, open," areas or "blighted" areas), taking of other property is precluded; and (2) if the statutory grant is limited to an easement, an attempt to take the fee is precluded. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See BAJI, No. 11.70; CACI, No. 3500.)

The former broad delegation of the right of eminent domain to a private person (see supra, §1117) has been eliminated; but special statutes continue the right of some types of private persons to condemn for certain public uses; e.g., privately owned public utilities, mutual water companies, limited dividend housing corporations, nonprofit hospitals, and nonprofit educational institutions of collegiate grade. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (On quasi-public entities, see infra, §1203; on limited condemnation rights of private persons, see infra, §§1178, 1179.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

68 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

a. General Limitations on Exercise of Power.

2. Statutory Authorization Required.

bb. Private Person's Utility Easement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1178

[§ 1178] Private Person's Utility Easement.

The Eminent Domain Law eliminated the broad power of private persons under former C.C. 1001 (see supra, §1117); but in 1976, pursuant to a Law Revision Commission recommendation, new C.C. 1001 was enacted to restore a limited power. "Any owner of real property may acquire by eminent domain an appurtenant easement to provide utility service to the owner's property." (C.C. 1001(b).) "Utility service" is defined as "water, gas, electric, drainage, sewer, or telephone service." (C.C. 1001(a).) (See Law Rev. Com. Comment; 19 A.L.R.4th 1026 [factors determining power company's location of transmission line].)

In lieu of the requirements of C.C.P. 1240.030 regarding a showing of public necessity (see infra, §1180), C.C. 1001 requires that the following be established:

(1) "There is a great necessity for the taking." (C.C. 1001(c)(1).)

(2) "The location of the easement affords the most reasonable service to the property to which it is appurtenant, consistent with the least damage to the burdened property." (C.C. 1001(c)(2).)

(3) "The hardship to the owner of the appurtenant property, if the taking is not permitted, clearly outweighs any hardship to the owner of the burdened property." (C.C. 1001(c)(3).)

The resolution of necessity is governed by C.C.P. 1245.325. (See infra, §1203.)

In L & M Professional Consultants v. Ferreira (1983) 146 C.A.3d 1038, 194 C.R. 695, the local city council consented to private condemnation by plaintiff developer of an appurtenant sewage easement across defendant's property. Defendant petitioned to invalidate the council's resolution of consent and to declare C.C. 1001 and C.C.P. 1245.325 unconstitutional. Held, condemnation judgment for plaintiff affirmed.

(a) Requirement of "great necessity." Under C.C. 1001(c)(1) and C.C.P. 1245.325(b)(1), "great necessity" must exist for private condemnation of a utility easement. "This limitation replaces the usual 'public interest and necessity' requirement ... with a stricter standard applicable only to the private condemnation." (146 C.A.3d 1049.) The term is not unconstitutionally vague. "[D]etermining whether a 'great necessity' exists for the private condemnation of a utility easement does not turn on a comparative evaluation of condemnation and noncondemnation alternatives. 'Great necessity' does not exist when a condemnation alternative is more preferable than a reasonably acceptable noncondemnation alternative. ... 'Great necessity' exists only when a condemnation alternative is the sole reasonably acceptable means for providing utility service to a piece of property." (146 C.A.3d 1050, 1051, noting that this interpretation is consistent with Linggi v. Garovotti (1955) 45 C.2d 20, 286 P.2d 15, supra, §1117.) Here, the noncondemnation alternative suggested by defendant would have violated development and environmental guidelines established by city planners and "would have been inordinately expensive in light of total project development costs." (146 C.A.3d 1050.)

(b) Condemnation for utility easement is public use. The private condemnation statutes do not authorize condemnation of private property for private use (146 C.A.3d 1052), and it is clear that the ordinary taking of private property for a sewage easement is a taking for public use, even though private persons may benefit (146 C.A.3d 1053). C.C. 1001 and C.C.P. 1245.325 "constitute a legislative declaration that the private condemnation of utility easements is for a public use," and do not "abrogate the fundamental public use limitation applicable to all takings by public and quasi-public entities." Thus, a specific requirement of public use in those statutes is unnecessary. (146 C.A.3d 1052.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

69 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

a. General Limitations on Exercise of Power.

2. Statutory Authorization Required.

cc. Private Person's Repair Easement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1179

[§ 1179] Private Person's Repair Easement.

The owner of real property may exercise the power of eminent domain "to acquire a temporary right to enter upon adjacent or nearby property to repair or reconstruct land or improvements." (C.C. 1002(a).) "Adjacent" or "nearby" refers to land that is "contiguous with the property needing repair or reconstruction, or land through which the party granted temporary access must pass to reach adjacent land." (C.C. 1002(d).) C.C. 1002 does not apply to temporary entries on lands used primarily for the commercial production of agricultural commodities and forest products. (C.C. 1002(e).) (See 14 Pacific L. J. 686.)

The entry is conditioned on meeting all the following requirements:

(1) There must be necessity to do the repair or reconstruction work. (C.C. 1002(a)(1).)

(2) There must be a "great necessity" to enter the adjacent or nearby property to do the work because (a) it cannot be done safely otherwise, or its cost would be substantially higher; and (b) the property, without repair or reconstruction, adversely affects the surrounding community. (C.C. 1002(a)(1).)

(3) The right of entry must be exercised so as to provide the least property damage and inconvenience consistent with satisfactory completion of the work. (C.C. 1002(a)(2).)

(4) The hardship of the person seeking the right of entry, if not granted, must clearly outweigh the hardship to the owner or occupant of the adjacent or nearby property. (C.C. 1002(a)(3).)

Entry may be made only after an eminent domain proceeding has been commenced and a court order permitting entry has been issued or judgment has been entered for the plaintiff. (C.C. 1002(b).)

To protect the owner of the condemned property, a deposit of security must be made to the court in an amount sufficient to permit the owner to restore the property to the condition it was in prior to entry (C.C. 1002(b)), and the court may order the person acquiring the right of entry to pay the owner reasonable rent for the use of the land (C.C.

1002(c)).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

70 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

a. General Limitations on Exercise of Power.

3. Public Necessity Required.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1180

[§ 1180] Public Necessity Required.

Three requirements must be satisfied before the power of eminent domain may be exercised to acquire property for a proposed project:

(1) Public Interest and Necessity. "The public interest and necessity require the project." (C.C.P. 1240.030(a).) These involve "all aspects of the public good including but not limited to social, economic, environmental, and esthetic considerations." The necessity of the proposed improvement is subject to judicial review. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See Saratoga v. Hinz (2004) 115 C.A.4th 1202, 1225, 9 C.R.3d 791 [fact that project involving paving and widening private dead-end street and cul-de-sac, so that they could be dedicated to city, did not confer any general benefit to surrounding community did not detract from inherently public nature of project; thus, trial court did not err in finding public interest and necessity even though it found no general benefit from project].)

(2) Plan and Location Compatible With Public Good. The project must be "planned or located in the manner that will be most compatible with the greatest public good and the least private injury." (C.C.P. 1240.030(b).) This limitation--the necessity for adopting a particular plan--involves a comparison between two or more sites; and the condemnor's choice is proper unless another site would involve an equal or greater public good and a lesser private injury. "A lesser public good can never be counterbalanced by a lesser private injury to equal a more proper location. ... Nor can equal public good and equal private injury combine to make the condemnor's choice an improper location." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See SFPP, L.P. v. Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (2004) 121 C.A.4th 452, 469, 17 C.R.3d 96 [referee did not err in considering availability of alternative locations when determining whether project was located in proper manner under C.C.P. 1240.030(b)].)

(3) Particular Property or Interest Necessary. The property sought to be acquired must be necessary for the project. (C.C.P. 1240.030(c).) The evidence must show (a) that the particular property is suitable and desirable for the project, and (b) that it is necessary to take a particular interest in the property. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See San Bernardino County Flood Control Dist. v. Grabowski (1988) 205 C.A.3d 885, 899, 252 C.R. 676 [public interest and necessity was established where project was needed as result of redevelopment, greatest public good and least private injury was shown where site was smallest and least expensive one which would accommodate project, and necessity was shown where site was especially topographically suitable and desirable]; Shell Calif. Pipeline Co. v. Compton (1995) 35 C.A.4th 1116, 1125, 41 C.R.2d 753 [trial judge's finding that public pipeline utility's acquisition of pipeline easement was required for public interest and necessity was supported by evidence that acquisition of easement allowed utility to provide lower priced gasoline and gave it ability to transport by pipeline, instead of by polluting trucks]; 71 Proof of Facts 3d 97 [lack of reasonable necessity for taking property].)

In addition to the requirements of C.C.P. 1240.030, other statutes may set forth additional prerequisites, such as environmental statements and hearings, relocation plans, or consent of various public agencies. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

A public entity must adopt a resolution of public necessity under C.C.P. 1245.210 et seq. (infra, §1199 et seq.) before it may exercise the power of eminent domain. (C.C.P. 1240.040.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

71 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

a. General Limitations on Exercise of Power.

4. Extraterritorial Condemnation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1181

[§ 1181] Extraterritorial Condemnation.

"A local public entity may acquire by eminent domain only property within its territorial limits except where the power to acquire by eminent domain property outside its limits is expressly granted by statute or necessarily implied as an incident of one of its other statutory powers." (C.C.P. 1240.050; see C.C.P. 1240.125 [local public entity may condemn extraterritorially for water, gas, or electric supply purposes, or for airports, drainage, or sewer purposes].) The "necessity" required to justify extraterritorial condemnation is only a reasonable, not an absolute or imperative, necessity. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

In Kenneth Mebane Ranches v. Superior Court (1992) 10 C.A.4th 276, 12 C.R.2d 562, the issue was whether a flood control district had statutory authority to take property outside its boundaries to mitigate the environmental effects of a project constructed within its boundaries. Held, it lacked the power.

(a) "Because the Legislature intended to codify prior law when it enacted section 1240.050, it must have incorporated the prevailing standard applicable to determine when the power of extraterritorial condemnation will be necessarily implied as an incident to a local public entity's other enumerated powers. That standard requires the power of extraterritorial condemnation to be a matter of 'urgency of extreme expediency or necessity,' or 'manifestly desirable,' or 'essential to the declared objects' of the local public entity ... , or indicated by 'clear implication.' " (10 C.A.4th 286.)

(b) "Sound policy reasons exist to construe narrowly a local public entity's power to take land outside its boundaries." (10 C.A.4th 286.) This policy is implemented in C.C.P. 1240.250(b). Under C.C.P. 1245.250(a), "if the property to be taken by eminent domain is located within the boundaries of the condemning entity, the resolution of necessity adopted by the public entity conclusively establishes the necessary findings to the exercise of eminent domain, namely: (a) the public interest and necessity require the project, (b) the project is planned or located in the manner that will be most compatible with the greatest public good and the least private injury, and (c) the property sought to be acquired is necessary for the project." (C.C.P. 1240.030, supra, §1180.) "However, if the property to be taken is not located entirely within the boundaries of local public entity, the resolution of necessity merely creates a presumption that the matters referred to" in C.C.P. 1240.030 are true. This presumption is one affecting the burden of producing evidence. (C.C.P. 1245.250(b); see infra, §1200.) (10 C.A.4th 287.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

72 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

b. Rights Included in Grant of Authority.

1. Necessary Interests in Property.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1182

[§ 1182] Necessary Interests in Property.

Except as limited by statute, a person authorized to acquire property for a particular use by eminent domain may exercise the power "to acquire any interest in property necessary for that use including, but not limited to, submerged lands, rights of any nature in water, subsurface rights, airspace rights, flowage or flooding easements, aircraft noise or operation easements, right of temporary occupancy, public utility facilities and franchises, and franchises to collect tolls on a bridge or highway." (C.C.P. 1240.110(a).) Where a statute only authorizes the acquisition of specified interests in or types of property, C.C.P. 1240.110 does not expand the scope of that authority. (C.C.P. 1240.110(b).) (See Contra Costa Water Dist. v. Vaquero Farms (1997) 58 C.A.4th 883, 893, 68 C.R.2d 272 [windpower rights are substantial rights that may be excluded from condemnation]; on effect of resolution of necessity, see C.C.P. 1245.250, infra, §1200.)

The Law Revision Commission Comment explains the purpose and scope of the statute as follows:

(1) The initial proviso in C.C.P. 1240.110(a) refers to various statutes making certain property exempt from condemnation. (See supra, §1113.)

(2) C.C.P. 1240.110(b) recognizes that the interest authorized to be taken may be limited by the statutory grant.

(3) The authorization to take an interest necessary for a particular use follows case law and supersedes the former provision, which listed the types of interests.

South San Francisco v. Mayer (1998) 67 C.A.4th 1350, 1352, 79 C.R.2d 704, a case of first impression, addressed whether a city, in its condemnation action, must compensate a landowner for the value of the city's preexisting leasehold interest in the property. The lease included a condemnation clause that only provided for reimbursement to plaintiff city for loss of or damage to plaintiff's fixtures or personal property, with the remainder of any award to go to defendant landowner "whether as compensation for reduction in the value of the leasehold, the taking of the fee, or otherwise." In seeking to condemn the property, plaintiff did not condemn its own preexisting leasehold interest. Held, defendant was not entitled to compensation for plaintiff's leasehold interest.

Three strands of eminent domain law support the judgment: "(1) the requirement that property be condemned only for a 'necessary' public purpose, (2) the general notion that a public agency cannot be required to either purchase an interest it already owns or purchase more property than is 'necessary,' and (3) the prohibition against reading a contract as containing any obligation on the part of a public agency to exercise its power of eminent domain in any particular way." (67 C.A.4th 1356.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

73 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

b. Rights Included in Grant of Authority.

2. Property To Make Principal Use Effective.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1183

[§ 1183] Property To Make Principal Use Effective.

Subject to other statutes relating to the acquisition of property, a "person authorized to acquire property for a particular use by eminent domain may exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire property necessary to carry out and make effective the principal purpose involved including but not limited to property to be used for the protection or preservation of the attractiveness, safety, and usefulness of the project." (C.C.P. 1240.120(a).) Subject to applicable procedures governing the disposition of property, a person may acquire property under C.C.P. 1240.120(a) "with the intent to sell, lease, exchange, or otherwise dispose of the property, or an interest therein, subject to such reservations or restrictions as are necessary to protect or preserve the attractiveness, safety, and usefulness of the project." (C.C.P. 1240.120(b).)

The Law Revision Commission Comment describes the dual coverage of C.C.P. 1240.120 as follows:

(1) Protection of a public work or improvement from detrimental uses on adjoining property. "[T]he condemnor has the option either (1) to acquire an easement-like interest in the adjoining property that will preclude the detrimental use or (2) to acquire the fee or some other interest and then--if the condemnor desires--lease, sell, exchange, or otherwise dispose of the property to some other public entity or a private person subject to carefully specified permitted uses."

(2) Preservation or protection of the attractiveness, safety, and usefulness of the improvement. Some former specific grants of authority for this protective condemnation were repealed, and those that remain do not limit the general authority given by C.C.P. 1240.120, except to the extent that they contain restrictions applicable to particular types of projects.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

74 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

b. Rights Included in Grant of Authority.

3. Acquisition of Remainder With Consent.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1184

[§ 1184] Acquisition of Remainder With Consent.

"Whenever a part of a larger parcel of property is to be acquired by a public entity for public use and the remainder, or a portion of the remainder, will be left in such size, shape, or condition as to be of little value to its owner or to give rise to a claim for severance or other damages, the public entity may acquire the remainder, or portion of the remainder, by any means (including eminent domain) expressly consented to by the owner." (C.C.P. 1240.150; see C.C.P. 1240.240, infra, §1187 [acquisition by consent for future use].)

The Law Revision Commission comments as follows: "Where a structure is located partly on property needed for a public use and partly on other property, there are a number of alternatives available to the parties which may be less costly or more convenient than taking only part of the structure and paying severance damages on this basis. In some cases, severance may so destroy a structure that total demolition in one operation is the only economically or practically feasible alternative." Pursuant to C.C.P. 1240.150, "the parties may agree that the public entity will acquire the entire structure and demolish it, leaving the property owner with the remainder in a cleared condition" C.C.P. 1240.150 "also permits the parties to agree that the public entity will purchase the structure to relocate it."

If the parties cannot agree, the court may order acquisition of the entire improvement. (C.C.P. 1263.270.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

75 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

b. Rights Included in Grant of Authority.

4. Joint Exercise of Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1185

[§ 1185] Joint Exercise of Power.

"Two or more public agencies may enter into an agreement for the joint exercise of their respective powers of eminent domain, whether or not possessed in common, for the acquisition of property as a single parcel." (C.C.P. 1240.140(b).)

This provision permits "public agencies," as defined in Govt.C. 6500, to acquire a particular parcel under the Joint Powers Agreements Act (Govt.C. 6500 et seq.). (C.C.P. 1240.140.) The power may be exercised "not only where the particular parcel is needed for a joint project but also where each of the agencies requires a portion of the parcel for its own purposes." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

76 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

b. Rights Included in Grant of Authority.

5. Acquisition by Gift, Purchase, Lease, or Other Means.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1186

[§ 1186] Acquisition by Gift, Purchase, Lease, or Other Means.

(1) Authorized Acquisition Methods. Subject to other statutes relating to the acquisition of property, a public entity authorized to acquire property for a particular use by eminent domain may also acquire the property for that use "by grant, purchase, lease, gift, devise, contract, or other means." (C.C.P. 1240.130.) This section authorizes the acquisition of property or a property interest by negotiation or other means in lieu of condemnation. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See Shell Calif. Pipeline Co. v. Compton (1995) 35 C.A.4th 1116, 1121, 41 C.R.2d 753 [Boughton Act, which applies to franchises generally, and Franchise Act of 1937, which applies to pipelines specifically, provide manner in which entity may obtain franchise, but they do not provide only way that street easement may be acquired; thus, public utility pipeline may still acquire land by eminent domain].)

A property owner also may donate the property or a part of it, an interest in it, or the compensation paid for it, to a public entity. (Govt.C. 7267.7(b).)

(2) Duty of Public Entity To Negotiate. "[T]o encourage and expedite the acquisition of real property by agreements with owners, to avoid litigation and relieve congestion in the courts, to assure consistent treatment for owners in the public programs, and to promote public confidence in public land acquisition practices, public entities shall, to the greatest extent practicable," make every reasonable effort to acquire real property by negotiation. (Govt.C. 7267, 7267.1(a); see 21 A.L.R.4th 765 [sufficiency of required negotiations prior to taking].) (For acquisition policies similar to those stated in Govt.C. 7267 et seq., see Model Eminent Domain Code in 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), pp. 18 et seq., 36, 37.)

(3) Appraisal by Public Entity. Before the initiation of negotiations the public entity must appraise the property, and the owner or his or her representative must be permitted to accompany the appraiser during the inspection. However, the appraisal may be waived in cases involving the sale or donation of property with a low market value. (Govt.C. 7267.1(b).)

(4) Offer and Written Statement. After the appraisal, the public entity must (a) establish the amount it believes to be just compensation; (b) make an offer to acquire the property for that amount, unless the owner cannot be located with reasonable diligence (Govt.C. 7267.2(a)); and (c) provide the owner with "a written statement of, and summary of the basis for," the amount so established (Govt.C. 7267.2(b)). (See People v. Cole (1992) 7 C.A.4th 1281, 1282, 1286, 9 C.R.2d 750 [property owners waived objection to adequacy of written statement by failing to object to statement during administrative proceedings].)

The statement and summary must contain sufficient detail to show the basis for the offer, including the following:

(a) "The date of valuation, highest and best use, and applicable zoning." (Govt.C. 7267.2(b)(1).)

(b) "The principal transaction, reproduction or replacement cost analysis, or capitalization analysis, supporting the determination of value." (Govt.C. 7267.2(b)(2).)

(c) "Where appropriate, the just compensation for the real property acquired and for damages to remaining real property" must be separately stated and must include "the calculations and narrative explanation supporting the compensation, including any offsetting benefits." (Govt.C. 7267.2(b)(3).)

In the case of owner-occupied residential property of one-to-four units, the public entity may satisfy the written statement, summary, or review requirements by providing the owner with a copy of the appraisal on which the offer is based. (Govt.C. 7267.2(c).)

The requirements of Govt.C. 7267.2 are mandatory. (See San Jose v. Great Oaks Water Co. (1987) 192 C.A.3d 1005, 1011, 1012, 237 C.R. 845 [dismissal of condemnation action for failure of plaintiff city to provide written summary of basis for determination of value of property before adoption of resolution of necessity]; C.C.P. 1245.230 [resolution of necessity must contain declaration that the offer required by Govt.C. 7267.2 has been made or that owner cannot be located]; C.C.P. 1250.410(c) [in determining litigation expenses, court must consider offer required to be made under Govt.C. 7267.2]; infra, §1208.)

(5) Minimum Amount of Offer. Ordinarily, the offer may not be less than the public entity's approved appraisal of the fair market value of the property, and an increase or decrease in fair market value before the date of valuation must be disregarded, if caused by the improvement for which the property is acquired or the likelihood that the property would be acquired for the improvement. (Govt.C. 7267.2(a).) However, a public entity may make an offer for less than the amount it believes to be just compensation if (a) the owner offers the property for sale at a specified price, (b) the public entity offers that price, and (c) no federal funds are involved in acquisition, construction, or project development. (Govt.C. 7267.2(d).)

(6) Coercive Action Prohibited. "In no event shall the public entity either advance the time of condemnation, or defer negotiations or condemnation and the deposit of funds in court for the use of the owner, or take any other action coercive in nature, in order to compel an agreement on the price to be paid for the property." (Govt.C. 7267.5.)

(7) Required Offer To Take Entire Property. "If the acquisition of only a portion of a property would leave the remaining portion in such a shape or condition as to constitute an uneconomic remnant, the public entity shall offer to acquire the entire property if the owner so desires." (Govt.C. 7267.7(a).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Offer and Written Statement. Govt.C. 7267.2(a)(2), added in 2007, requires the public entity making the offer to provide the property owner with an informational pamphlet detailing the eminent domain process and the owner's rights under the Eminent Domain Law.

77 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

c. Future Use.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1187

[§ 1187] Future Use.

(1) In General. Under prior case law, a statutory grant of the power of eminent domain carried with it the power to condemn in anticipation of the condemnor's future needs, and several statutes expressly recognize the power in particular entities. However, the issue of reasonable probability of public use within a reasonable time was regarded as part of the issue of necessity, and ordinarily nonjusticiable; i.e., the resolution of necessity was conclusive. (Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1240.220, 1240.230.) The Eminent Domain Law makes a substantial change, by stating a limited power to take for future use and a procedure for determining the issue where the owner contests the taking. (C.C.P. 1240.210 et seq.) If the owner expressly consents, the public entity may take the property for a future use free from the restrictions of C.C.P. 1240.010 et seq. (C.C.P. 1240.240.)

(2) Limited Power To Take. "Any person authorized to acquire property for a particular use by eminent domain may exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire property to be used in the future for that use, but property may be taken for future use only if there is a reasonable probability that its date of use will be within seven years from the date the complaint is filed or within such longer period as is reasonable." (C.C.P. 1240.220(a).)

For this purpose, "the 'date of use' of property taken for public use is the date when the property is devoted to that use or when construction is started on the project for which the property is taken with the intent to complete the project within a reasonable time. In determining the 'date of use,' periods of delay caused by extraordinary litigation or by failure to obtain from any public entity any agreement or permit necessary for construction shall not be included." (C.C.P. 1240.210.)

(3) Probable Use Within 7 Years. The right to take is clear where the date of use will be within 7 years from the date the complaint is filed; i.e., the statute makes this a reasonable time, and the only defense is that there is no reasonable probability that the date of use will be within 7 years. (C.C.P. 1240.220, 1240.230.)

(4) Probable Use Within Longer Reasonable Period. If the date of use will not be within the 7-year period, the taking is authorized only if there is a "reasonable probability" that the use will be within a "reasonable" longer period. "What constitutes a reasonable time depends upon all the circumstances of the particular case: Is there a reasonable probability that funds for the construction of the project will become available? Have plans been drawn and adopted? Is the project a logical extension of existing improvements? Is future growth likely, and should the condemnor anticipate and provide for that growth?" (Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1240.220.)

(5) Pleading and Burden of Proof.

(a) Unless the plaintiff plans a date of use within the 7-year period, "the complaint, and the resolution of necessity if one is required, shall refer specifically to this section and shall state the estimated date of use." (C.C.P. 1240.220(b).) This required information puts the defendant on notice that there is a potential issue of authorization to take. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(b) If the complaint is silent on the date (i.e., the plaintiff contemplates a use within 7 years), the defendant has the burden of proof that there is no reasonable probability of use within the period. (C.C.P. 1240.230(b).) The defendant must plead this defense. (C.C.P. 1250.360(d).) Unless the court finds in defendant's favor on the issue, the defense fails. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1240.230.)

(c) If the complaint states an estimated date of use that is longer than 7 years, or if it is silent on the period and the defendant prevails on the issue (proving no reasonable probability of use within 7 years), the burden shifts to the plaintiff, to prove that there is a reasonable probability of use within a "reasonable" time. (C.C.P. 1240.230(c).)

(6) Property Taken Under Federal Aid Highway Act. The period is enlarged where property is taken under the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1973. "A date of use within 10 years from the date the complaint is filed shall be deemed reasonable." (C.C.P. 1240.250.) The resolution of necessity and the complaint must state that the taking is pursuant to that statute, and must state the estimated date of use. (C.C.P. 1240.250(b).) The provisions on burden of proof are similar to those in C.C.P. 1240.230. (C.C.P. 1240.250(c).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

78 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

d. Substitute Condemnation.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1188

[§ 1188] In General.

(1) Nature and Purpose of Substitute Condemnation. The provisions on substitute condemnation, C.C.P. 1240.310 et seq., operate in the following situation: "The potential condemnor determines that it needs certain property (the 'necessary property') for its use. It agrees to compensate the owner of the necessary property in whole or in part by other property (the 'substitute property') rather than money. It then condemns the 'substitute property' and exchanges it for the 'necessary property.'" (Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1240.310; see C.C.P. 1240.310 [defining "necessary property" and "substitute property"].) These provisions apply to all public entities with the power to condemn. (See C.C.P. 1240.320(a).)

(2) Conditions. The power may be exercised if all of the following conditions are established:

(a) The owner of the necessary property has agreed in writing to the exchange. (C.C.P. 1240.320(a)(1).)

(b) The necessary property is devoted to or held for public use and the substitute property will be devoted to or held for the same public use. (C.C.P. 1240.320(a)(2).)

(c) "The owner of the necessary property is authorized to exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire the substitute property for such use." (C.C.P. 1240.320(a)(3).)

The Law Revision Commission Comment explains the reasons for the two important conditions--agreement by owner, and owner's power to condemn the substitute property: "In this situation, the same end can be reached no matter which party to the exchange exercises the power of condemnation so that the authority provided here is simply a shortcut to an identical result."

(3) Resolution and Complaint. The resolution of necessity and the complaint filed pursuant to the resolution must specifically refer to C.C.P. 1240.320 and must include a statement that the property is necessary for the purpose specified in C.C.P. 1240.320. "The determination in the resolution that the taking of the substitute property is necessary has the effect prescribed" in C.C.P. 1245.250 (see infra, §1200). (C.C.P. 1240.320(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

79 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

d. Substitute Condemnation.

2. To Relocate Public Use.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1189

[§ 1189] To Relocate Public Use.

(1) In General. Under C.C.P. 1240.320 (supra, §1188), the owner of the necessary property relocates the public use on the substitute property. C.C.P. 1240.330 provides for the different situation: Where necessary property is devoted to public use, a "public entity authorized to exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire such property for a particular use may exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire substitute property in its own name, relocate on such substitute property the public use to which necessary property is devoted, and thereafter convey the substitute property to the owner of the necessary property." (C.C.P. 1240.330(a).)

(2) Conditions. Three conditions must be established for this kind of taking:

(a) "The public entity is required by court order or judgment in an eminent domain proceeding, or by agreement with the owner of the necessary property, to relocate the public use to which the necessary property is devoted and thereafter to convey the property upon which the public use has been relocated to the owner of the necessary property." (C.C.P. 1240.330(a)(1).)

(b) "The substitute property is necessary for compliance with the court order or judgment or agreement." (C.C.P. 1240.330(a)(2).)

(c) "The owner of the necessary property will devote the substitute property to the public use being displaced from the necessary property." (C.C.P. 1240.330(a)(3).)

(3) Resolution and Complaint. The resolution of necessity and the complaint filed pursuant to the resolution must specifically refer to C.C.P. 1240.330 and must include a statement that the property is necessary for the purpose specified in C.C.P. 1240.330. "The determination in the resolution that the taking of the substitute property is necessary has the effect prescribed" in C.C.P. 1245.250 (see infra, §1200). (C.C.P. 1240.330(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

80 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

d. Substitute Condemnation.

3. To Provide Utility Service or Access to Road.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1190

[§ 1190] To Provide Utility Service or Access to Road.

When a public entity acquires property for public use and exercises or could have exercised the power of eminent domain to acquire the property for that use, "the public entity may exercise the power of eminent domain to acquire such additional property as appears reasonably necessary and appropriate (after taking into account any hardship to the owner of the additional property) to provide utility service to, or access to a public road from, any property that is not acquired for such public use but which is cut off from utility service or access to a public road as a result of the acquisition by the public entity." (C.C.P. 1240.350(a); see Fresno v. Shelton (1998) 66 C.A.4th 996, 1012, 78 C.A.2d 272 [C.C.P. 1240.350 authorized county to initiate eminent domain proceeding to provide access to part of parcel that would become landlocked even though county had not completed acquisition of other part of parcel].)

The Law Revision Commission Comment explains the purpose and nature of the provision: "Frequently, where property is acquired for an engineering-oriented project (such as a freeway or irrigation canal), parcels not acquired will be deprived of utility service or access to a public road. To restore these parcels to a useful life and, in doing so, to avoid claims of substantial severance damage, a condemnor is authorized to provide substitute utility service or access in connection with the improvement itself. Although the agreement of the owner of the landlocked parcel will generally be obtained, this is not a prerequisite here." In this situation, the "owner is not being compensated for property taken; the condemnor is simply minimizing the damage to property retained by the owner." And this mitigating factor must be considered in determining compensation for the damage to property not acquired (see C.C.P. 1263.450, infra, §1236). However, the authority is discretionary. "Where the condemnor does not choose to avail itself of this authority, an owner of property has no right to force such a physical solution upon it but is limited to the recovery of damages except as provided" in C.C.P. 1240.410(c) (see infra, §1191).

The resolution of necessity and the complaint filed pursuant to the resolution must specifically refer to C.C.P. 1240.350 and must include a statement that the property is necessary for the purpose specified in C.C.P. 1240.350. "The determination in the resolution that the taking of the substitute property is necessary has the effect prescribed" in C.C.P. 1245.250 (see infra, §1200). (C.C.P. 1240.350(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

81 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

e. Excess Condemnation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1191

[§ 1191] Excess Condemnation.

(1) Nature of Power and Test. A remnant is a remainder or portion that will be left in a size, shape, or condition that has little market value. (C.C.P. 1240.410(a).) When acquisition of "part of a larger parcel" will leave a remnant, the public entity may acquire the remnant. (C.C.P. 1240.410(b).) (See 6 A.L.R.3d 297 [right to condemn property in excess of needs]; on condemnation of remnant by Department of Public Works under former Sts. & H.C. 104.1 et seq., see People v. Superior Court (Rodoni) (1968) 68 C.2d 206, 210, 65 C.R. 342, 436 P.2d 342 [upholding authority to condemn 54 acres landlocked by taking of .65 acres for freeway where severance damages might have equalled fair market value].)

The test, derived from People v. Superior Court (Rodoni), is explained at length in the Law Revision Commission Comment: "The 'of little market value' concept is a flexible one; whether the excess property may be taken is to be determined in light of the circumstances of the particular case. Thus, the project may result in the excess property having relatively little market value in situations such as, for example, where (1) it will be totally 'landlocked' and no physical solution will be practical, (2) it will be reduced below the minimum zoning limits for building purposes and it is not reasonably probable that there will be a zoning change, (3) it will be of significant value to only one or few persons (such as adjoining landowners), or (4) it will be landlocked and have primarily a speculative value dependent upon access being provided when adjacent land is developed and the time when the adjacent land will be developed is a matter of speculation. ... The test is the objective one of marketability and market value generally of the excess property."

The Comment refers to two contrasting situations:

(a) "[A] usable and generally salable piece of property is neither a physical nor financial remnant even though its 'highest and best use' has been downgraded by its severance or a serious controversy exists as to its best use and value after severance."

(b) The statute does not authorize a taking of excess property "(1) to avoid the cost and inconvenience of litigating the issue of damages, (2) to preclude the payment of damages, including damages substantial in amount in appropriate cases, (3) to coerce the condemnee to accept whatever price the condemnor offers for the property actually needed for the public project, or (4) to afford the condemnor an opportunity to 'recoup' damages or unrecognized benefits by speculating as to the future market for the property not actually devoted to the public project."

(2) Resolution and Complaint. When property is sought to be acquired pursuant to C.C.P. 1240.410, the resolution of necessity and the complaint filed pursuant to it must specifically refer to that section. It is presumed from the adoption of the resolution that the taking is authorized under C.C.P. 1240.410. This presumption is one "affecting the burden of producing evidence." (C.C.P. 1240.420.) Thus, in the absence of a contest of the issue, the plaintiff is entitled to judgment; but the presumption only places the burden of producing evidence on the defendant, with the ultimate burden of proof on the plaintiff. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (On distinction between the burdens, see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §1 et seq.)

(3) Contest Where Physical Solution Is Available. Property may not be acquired under C.C.P. 1240.410 "if the defendant proves that the public entity has a reasonable, practicable, and economically sound means to prevent the property from becoming a remnant." (C.C.P. 1240.410(c).)

The Law Revision Commission Comment explains: "The condemnee may be able to demonstrate that, given construction of the public improvement in the manner proposed, the public entity is able to provide substitute access or take other steps that would be equitable under the circumstances of the particular case. ... In most cases, some physical solution would be possible; but subdivision (c) requires that the solution also be 'reasonable, practicable, and economically sound.' To be 'economically sound,' the proposed solution must, at a minimum, reduce the overall cost to the condemnor of the taking. Thus, the total of the cost of the solution, the compensation paid for the part taken, and the damages to the remainder must be less than the amount that would be required to be paid if the entire parcel were taken. The court should, moreover, consider questions of maintenance, hardship to third persons, potential dangers, risk of tort liability, and similar matters in determining whether the solution is also 'reasonable and practicable.' If the physical solution might interfere with or impair the public project, it would not be reasonable."

(4) Disposal of Acquired Remnants. "A public entity may sell, lease, exchange, or otherwise dispose of property" taken under the Eminent Domain Law and "may credit the proceeds to the fund or funds available for acquisition of the property being acquired for the public work or improvement." Nothing in this provisions "relieves a public entity from complying with any applicable statutory procedures governing the disposition of property." (C.C.P. 1240.430.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

82 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

f. Property Appropriated to Public Use.

1. Condemnation for Compatible Joint Use.

aa. Nature of Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1192

[§ 1192] Nature of Power.

(1) In General. Property already devoted to public use may be taken for a more necessary public use and the existing use displaced. (See C.C.P. 1240.610, infra, §1194; for definitions, see supra, §1171.) An independent and less drastic authority exists to condemn the property for a compatible joint use by both parties. The property may be taken "if the proposed use will not unreasonably interfere with or impair the continuance of the public use as it then exists or may reasonably be expected to exist in the future." (C.C.P. 1240.510.)

The statute continues, clarifies, and broadens the authority given by former statutes and recognized by case law. It has no effect on the respective rights of the owner of the underlying fee or easement holders to compensation for the additional burdens imposed. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

The complaint and any required resolution of necessity must refer specifically to C.C.P. 1240.510. The burden of proof is allocated as follows: (a) If the defendant objects to the taking, the defendant has the burden of proof that the property is appropriated to public use. (b) If this is established, the plaintiff has the burden of proof that its proposed use satisfies the compatible use requirement. (C.C.P. 1240.520.)

(2) Wildlife Conservation Easements. A governmental agency may not condemn a wildlife conservation easement acquired by a state agency without notice to the easement holder and an opportunity to consult with the governmental agency. C.C.P. 1240.510 et seq. apply to the condemnation proceedings, and the condemning agency must "prove by clear and convincing evidence that its proposed use satisfies the requirements" of those sections. (Fish & Game C. 1348.3.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

83 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

f. Property Appropriated to Public Use.

1. Condemnation for Compatible Joint Use.

bb. Terms and Conditions of Joint Use.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1193

[§ 1193] Terms and Conditions of Joint Use.

(1) Agreement of Parties. The parties may agree on "the terms and conditions upon which the property is taken and the manner and extent of its use by each of the parties." (C.C.P. 1240.530(a).)

(2) Court Determination. If the parties are unable to agree, the court fixes the terms and conditions and the manner and extent of the use of the property by each of the parties. (C.C.P. 1240.530(a).)

(3) Court Determination When Proposed Use Is Contrary to C.C.P. 1240.510. If the court finds that the proposed use would not satisfy the requirement of compatibility (see supra, §1192), the court must determine whether modified terms and conditions will meet the test, and, if it does, it must permit the plaintiff to take under the modified terms and conditions. (C.C.P. 1240.530(b).)

(4) Removal or Relocation. The court may order necessary removal or relocation of structures or improvements if the removal or relocation would not require "significant alteration of the use to which the property is appropriated." Unless otherwise provided by statute, costs and damages that result from the relocation or removal must be paid by the plaintiff. (C.C.P. 1240.530(c).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

84 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

f. Property Appropriated to Public Use.

2. Condemnation for More Necessary Public Use.

aa. Nature of Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1194

[§ 1194] Nature of Power.

(1) Displacement of Existing Use. A person authorized to acquire property for a particular use by eminent domain may exercise the power to acquire "property appropriated to public use if the use for which the property is sought to be taken is a more necessary public use than the use to which the property is appropriated." (C.C.P. 1240.610.) This section allows the condemnor to displace an existing use. (For uses presumed more necessary, see infra, §1195.)

What constitutes a more necessary public use was the subject of a number of decisions under the former eminent domain law. (See Marin v. Superior Court (1960) 53 C.2d 633, 637, 2 C.R. 758, 349 P.2d 526; Woodland School Dist. v. Woodland Cemetery Assn. (1959) 174 C.A.2d 243, 245, 344 P.2d 326 [school district was entitled to condemn cemetery property; question of more necessary public use was one of fact]; People v. Los Angeles (1960) 179 C.A.2d 558, 564, 4 C.R. 531 [state was allowed to condemn city park property for freeway]; Beaumont v. Beaumont Irr. Dist. (1965) 63 C.2d 291, 293, 46 C.R. 465, 405 P.2d 377 [domestic water use as more necessary than irrigation]; San Bernardino County Flood Control Dist. v. Superior Court (1969) 269 C.A.2d 514, 523, 75 C.R. 24; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §103 et seq.; 80 A.L.R.3d 833 [ownership or use by private educational, charitable, or religious organization as public use]; 49 A.L.R.5th 769 [construction and application of rule requiring public use for which property is condemned to be "more necessary" or "higher use" than public use to which property is already appropriated--state takings]; cf. United States v. Carmack (1946) 329 U.S. 230, 67 S.Ct. 252, 257, 91 L.Ed. 209, 217 [federal government condemned city park property as site for post office; power based on Supremacy Clause, supra, §8].)

(2) Complaint and Burden of Proof. The complaint and any required resolution of necessity must refer specifically to C.C.P. 1240.610. The burden of proof is allocated as follows: (a) If the defendant objects to the taking, the defendant has the burden of proof that the property is appropriated to public use. (b) If this is established, the plaintiff has the burden of proof that its proposed use is a more necessary public use. (C.C.P. 1240.620.)

(3) Prior User's Right to Joint Use. "[T]he defendant is entitled to continue the public use to which the property is appropriated if the continuance of such use will not unreasonably interfere with or impair, or require a significant alteration of, the more necessary public use as it is then planned or exists or may reasonably be expected to exist in the future." (C.C.P. 1240.630(a).)

The issue is raised by defendant's objection to the taking on this ground, and, on motion of either party, the court determines whether the defendant is entitled to continue the use. (C.C.P. 1240.630(b).) The test of the right to joint use, and the determination of terms and conditions by agreement or court order (C.C.P. 1240.630(b)), are similar to those in the statute dealing with compatible use (supra, §1193).

(4) Wildlife Conservation Easements. A governmental agency may not condemn a wildlife conservation easement acquired by a state agency without notice to the easement holder and an opportunity to consult with the governmental agency. C.C.P. 1240.610 et seq. apply to the condemnation proceedings, and the condemning agency must "prove by clear and convincing evidence that its proposed use satisfies the requirements" of those sections. (Fish & Game C. 1348.3.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

85 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

2. The Right To Take.

f. Property Appropriated to Public Use.

2. Condemnation for More Necessary Public Use.

bb. Uses Presumed To Be More Necessary.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1195

[§ 1195] Uses Presumed To Be More Necessary.

(1) Use by State. Where property has been appropriated to public use by a person other than the state, its use by the state for the same or any other public use is presumed to be a more necessary use than the use to which the property has already been appropriated. (C.C.P. 1240.640(a).) Where property has been appropriated to public use by the state, its use by the state is presumed to be a more necessary use than the use to which it might be put by another person. (C.C.P. 1240.640(b).) These presumptions affect the burden of proof. (C.C.P. 1240.640(c).) (See 35 A.L.R.3d 1293 [power as between state and political subdivision or between subdivisions].)

(2) Use by Public Entity. C.C.P. 1240.650 is a similar provision on the preferred use of a public entity, but is expressed in conclusive terms rather than as a rebuttable presumption: Where property has been appropriated to public use by a person other than a public entity, its use by a public entity for the same or any other public use is a more necessary use than the use to which the property has already been appropriated. (C.C.P. 1240.650(a).) Where property has been appropriated to public use by a public entity, its use by the public entity is a more necessary use than any use to which it might be put by a person other than a public entity. (C.C.P. 1240.650(b).)

However, where property that has been appropriated to a public use is electric, gas, or water public utility property that the public entity intends to put to the same use, the presumption of a more necessary use established by C.C.P. 1240.650(a) "is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof, unless the acquiring public entity is a sanitary district exercising the powers of a county water district" pursuant to Health & S.C. 6512.7. (C.C.P. 1240.650(c).)

There is also a rebuttable presumption favoring use by a local entity where property has been appropriated to public use by a local public entity. Its use by the local public entity is presumed to be a more necessary use than the use to which the property might be put by another local public entity. This presumption affects the burden of proof. (C.C.P. 1240.660.)

(3) Property Preserved in Natural Condition by Nonprofit Organization. There is a rebuttable presumption that property has been appropriated to the best and most necessary public use where the following are established:

(a) "The property is owned by a nonprofit organization contributions to which are deductible for state and federal income tax purposes under the laws of this state and of the United States and having the primary purpose of preserving areas in their natural condition." (C.C.P. 1240.670(a)(1).)

(b) "The property is open to the public subject to reasonable restrictions and is appropriated, and used exclusively, for the preservation of native plants or native animals including, but not limited to, mammals, birds, and marine life, or biotic communities, or geological or geographical formations of scientific or educational interest." (C.C.P. 1240.670(a)(2).)

(c) The property is irrevocably dedicated to those uses so that, on liquidation, dissolution, or abandonment of or by the owner, the "property will be distributed only to a fund, foundation, or corporation whose property is likewise irrevocably dedicated to such uses, or to a governmental agency holding land for such uses." (C.C.P. 1240.670(a)(3).)

(4) Property Appropriated to Park or Similar Areas. There is a similar presumption where property is appropriated to public use as (a) a state, regional, county, or city park or recreation area; (b) a wildlife or waterfowl management area; (c) an historic site; (d) an ecological reserve. (C.C.P. 1240.680.)

(5) Highway, Road, or Street. A procedure is provided for determining the issue of most necessary public use where the property comes within C.C.P. 1240.670 or C.C.P. 1240.680, and condemnation is sought for highway, road, or street purposes:

(a) When property described in C.C.P. 1240.670 or 1240.680 "is sought to be acquired for state highway purposes, and the property was dedicated or devoted to a use described in those sections prior to the initiation of highway route location studies, an action for declaratory relief may be brought by the public entity or nonprofit organization owning the property in the superior court to determine the question of which public use is the best and most necessary public use for the property." (C.C.P. 1240.690(a).) When this declaratory relief action may not be brought, C.C.P. 1240.670 and 1240.680 do not apply. (C.C.P. 1240.690(d)(2).)

(b) When property described in C.C.P. 1240.680 is sought to be acquired for city or county road, street, or highway purposes, and the "property was dedicated or devoted to regional park or recreational purposes prior to the initiation of road, street, or highway route location studies, an action for declaratory relief may be brought in the superior court by the regional park district which operates the park or recreational area to determine the question of which public use is the best and most necessary public use for such property." (C.C.P. 1240.700(a).) When this declaratory relief action may not be brought, C.C.P. 1240.680 does not apply. (C.C.P. 1240.700(c)(2).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

86 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

a. Preliminary Location, Survey, and Tests.

1. Right To Enter.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1196

[§ 1196] Right To Enter.

A "person authorized to acquire property for a particular use by eminent domain may enter upon property to make photographs, studies, surveys, examinations, tests, soundings, borings, samplings, or appraisals or to engage in similar activities reasonably related to acquisition or use of the property for that use." (C.C.P. 1245.010; see Model Eminent Domain Code, §301, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 30; 29 A.L.R.3d 1104 [right to enter land for preliminary survey or examination].)

If the entry will involve no actual injury to or substantial interference with the owner's possession and use, no permission or court order is required. However, where the entry could cause actionable damage (see C.C.P. 1245.060, infra, §1198), the condemnor, before making entry and undertaking these activities, must secure the written consent of the owner or a court order. (C.C.P. 1245.020; see infra, §1197.)

Although normally the entry for this purpose will precede the commencement of the eminent domain proceeding, the statute does not preclude these studies after commencement. (Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1245.010.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

87 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

a. Preliminary Location, Survey, and Tests.

2. Entry Under Court Order.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1197

[§ 1197] Entry Under Court Order.

The condemnor may petition for an order permitting entry on the property, giving prior notice to the owner as the court deems appropriate. (C.C.P. 1245.030(a).) The court must then "determine the purpose for the entry, the nature and scope of the activities reasonably necessary to accomplish such purpose, and the probable amount of compensation to be paid to the owner for the actual damage to the property and interference with its possession and use." (C.C.P. 1245.030(b).) (See Model Eminent Domain Code, §302 et seq., 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 31 et seq.)

After this determination, the court may issue its order. "The order shall prescribe the purpose for the entry and the nature and scope of the activities to be undertaken and shall require the person seeking to enter to deposit with the court the probable amount of compensation." (C.C.P. 1245.030(c).) (See Los Angeles v. Schweitzer (1962) 200 C.A.2d 448, 452, 19 C.R. 429 [order under predecessor statute was not appealable]; on management of amount deposited, see C.C.P. 1245.050.)

The court, on notice and hearing, may modify the provisions of the order; and if the modification directs an increase in the deposit, a stay of further activities may be ordered. (C.C.P. 1245.040.) The power to modify also extends to a decrease in the amount of the deposit, in which event the excess can be disbursed at once to the depositor. (Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1245.040.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

88 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

a. Preliminary Location, Survey, and Tests.

3. Owner's Action for Damages.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1198

[§ 1198] Owner's Action for Damages.

(1) Right To Recover. If the entry and activities "cause actual damage to or substantial interference with the possession or use of the property," the owner may recover either in a civil action or by an application to the court for payment out of the funds deposited. No claim need be filed. (C.C.P. 1245.060(a); see Model Eminent Domain Code, §305, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 34; 5 Summary (10th), Torts, §224; 15 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 763 [inequitable precondemnation activity].) If an eminent domain proceeding is filed, the defendant's "action" will be a cross-complaint in the proceeding. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(2) Costs and Litigation Expenses. The prevailing claimant is entitled to costs. He or she is also entitled to litigation expenses where (a) the condemnor's entry was unlawful; (b) though the entry was lawful, the activities "were abusive or lacking in due regard for the interests of the owner"; or (c) the condemnor failed to comply with the terms of an order (see supra, §1197). (C.C.P. 1245.060(b).) This provision does not affect the availability of other remedies the owner may have. (C.C.P. 1245.060(d).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

89 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

b. Resolution of Necessity.

1. Requirement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1199

[§ 1199] Requirement.

"A public entity may not commence an eminent domain proceeding until its governing body has adopted a resolution of necessity that meets the requirements of" C.C.P. 1245.210 et seq. (C.C.P. 1245.220.) (See Model Eminent Domain Code, §309, 310, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), pp. 38, 39.) Unless a greater vote is required by statute, charter, or ordinance, a vote of two-thirds of all members of the governing body is sufficient. (C.C.P. 1245.240.)

The term "governing body" is defined for various kinds of public entities. (See C.C.P. 1245.210; Long Beach Community Redevelopment Agency v. Morgan (1993) 14 C.A.4th 1047, 1085, 18 C.R.2d 100.) The contents of the resolution are also specified. (See C.C.P. 1245.230.)

The resolution may be adopted only after notice to the owner and a reasonable opportunity to appear and be heard on the matters set forth in C.C.P. 1245.230. (C.C.P. 1245.235; see Lincoln v. Barringer (2002) 102 C.A.4th 1211, 1224, 126 C.R.2d 178 [C.C.P. 1245.235(b) does not require 15 days' notice of public hearing if city has utilized another procedure to give reasonable written notice and opportunity to appear and be heard, as authorized by C.C.P. 1245.235(d)].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

90 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

b. Resolution of Necessity.

2. Effect of Resolution.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1200

[§ 1200] Effect of Resolution.

(1) Presumptions. Except as otherwise provided by statute, the resolution is conclusive on the issue of public necessity in all takings in the state. (C.C.P. 1245.250(a).) If the taking is by a local public entity, other than a sanitary district exercising the powers of a county water district under Health & Saf.C. 6512.7, and the property is electric, gas, or water public utility property, the resolution creates a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof. (C.C.P. 1245.250(b).) If the taking is by a local public entity of property outside its boundaries, the resolution creates a rebuttable presumption merely affecting the burden of producing evidence. (C.C.P. 1245.250(c).) (See San Bernardino County Flood Control Dist. v. Grabowski (1988) 205 C.A.3d 885, 898, 252 C.R. 676 [once resolution is challenged by contradictory evidence, condemnor has burden to establish by preponderance of evidence that conditions required for condemnation exist]; Santa Cruz County Redevelopment Agency v. Izant (1995) 37 C.A.4th 141, 43 C.R.2d 366, infra, §1220 [despite conclusive effect of resolution on some issues, defendant property owner may still introduce evidence on other issues].)

(2) Exception: Gross Abuse of Discretion. A resolution of necessity does not have the effect prescribed in C.C.P. 1245.250 "to the extent that its adoption or contents were influenced or affected by gross abuse of discretion in the governing body." (C.C.P. 1245.255(b); see Huntington Park Redevelopment Agency v. Duncan (1983) 142 C.A.3d 17, 25, 190 C.R. 744 [gross abuse of discretion is established by showing lack of substantial evidence to support resolution]; Redevelopment Agency of Huntington Park v. Norm's Slauson (1985) 173 C.A.3d 1121, 1127, 219 C.R. 365 [gross abuse of discretion was established by showing that, at time of hearing to determine necessity of taking, condemning agency had, by virtue of contract with developer and issuance of revenue bonds, irrevocably committed itself to taking property, regardless of evidence that might be presented]; Anaheim Redevelopment Agency v. Dusek (1987) 193 C.A.3d 249, 255, 257, 258, 239 C.R. 319 [legislative history of C.C.P. 1245.255 and its standard of review]; Saratoga v. Hinz (2004) 115 C.A.4th 1202, 1226, 9 C.R.3d 791 [Norm's Slauson did not apply in absence of evidence that city had rubberstamped project].) (On review by mandamus, see infra, §1201.)

Once a gross abuse of discretion is established, the resolution of necessity is not entitled to its ordinary conclusive effect. The burden is on the governmental agency to prove the elements for the taking by a preponderance of the evidence. (Redevelopment Agency v. Norm's Slauson, supra, 173 C.A.3d 1128, 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Burden of Proof and Presumptions, §17.)

(3) Exception: Bribery. A resolution of necessity is not sufficient if the defendant establishes by a preponderance of the evidence both (a) that a member of the governing body who voted in favor of the resolution received or agreed to receive a bribe, as defined in P.C. 7(6), involving adoption of the resolution (C.C.P. 1245.270(a)(1).), and (b) that, but for the bribe, the resolution would not have been adopted (C.C.P. 1245.270(a)(2).).

Where the member has been prosecuted for conduct relating to the bribe, proof of conviction is conclusive evidence that the requirement of C.C.P. 1245.270(a)(1) is satisfied, and proof of acquittal or other dismissal of the prosecution is conclusive evidence that the requirement of the statute is not satisfied. Where there is a pending criminal prosecution of the member for the conduct described in C.C.P. 1245.270(a)(1), the court may take action that is just under the circumstances of the case. (C.C.P. 1245.270(b).)

(4) New Resolution Authorized. Neither C.C.P. 1245.255 (gross abuse of discretion) nor C.C.P. 1245.270 (bribery) precludes a public entity from rescinding a resolution and adopting a new one, subject, after commencement of an eminent domain proceeding, to the same consequences as a conditional dismissal under C.C.P. 1260.120 (infra, §1220). (C.C.P. 1245.255(c), 1245.270(c).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

91 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

b. Resolution of Necessity.

3. Judicial Review.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1201

[§ 1201] Judicial Review.

Before commencement of an eminent domain proceeding, the property owner may challenge the resolution by mandamus pursuant to C.C.P. 1085 (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §§6, 72). (C.C.P. 1245.255(a)(1).) Because the resolution is a legislative rather than a quasi-judicial act, the review is by ordinary mandamus, not administrative mandamus. (See 14 Law Rev. Com. Reports, p. 88; Anaheim Redevelopment Agency v. Dusek (1987) 193 C.A.3d 249, 258, 239 C.R. 319 [specific findings are not required].)

If the eminent domain proceeding is commenced while a mandamus petition is pending, the court, on a party's motion, must order the mandamus action dismissed without prejudice, unless it determines that dismissal will not be in the interests of justice. (C.C.P. 1245.255(a)(1).) After commencement of proceedings, judicial review is by objection to the right to take. (C.C.P. 1245.255(a)(2).)

C.C.P. 1245.255(a) does not purport to prescribe the exclusive means of challenge; e.g., declaratory relief and injunction may still be available in appropriate cases. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Extraordinary Writs, §§23, 74.

92 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

b. Resolution of Necessity.

4. Remedies If Proceeding Is Not Promptly Commenced.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1202

[§ 1202] Remedies If Proceeding Is Not Promptly Commenced.

(1) In General. Eminent domain proceedings must be commenced within 6 months after adoption of the resolution of necessity, or, once commenced, must diligently attempt to serve the complaint and summons within 6 months. Sanctions are provided for failure to do so. (C.C.P. 1245.260.) Service by mail under C.C.P. 415.30 (see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §930) constitutes "a diligent attempt at service." (C.C.P. 1245.260(a); see California v. Western Natural Rubber (1991) 235 C.A.3d 1495, 1499, 1501, 1 C.R.2d 495 [single attempt at service by mail under C.C.P. 415.30 is sufficient; public entity is not required to make further attempts during 6-month period].)

(2) Inverse Condemnation Suit by Owner. If the public entity has not commenced or pursued the proceeding within the prescribed time limit, the owner may, by an action in inverse condemnation, "do either or both of the following": (a) Require the public entity to take the property and pay compensation for it; (b) Recover damages from the public entity for "interference with the possession and use of the property resulting from adoption of the resolution." (C.C.P. 1240.260(a).) No claim need be filed, but the action must be brought within 18 months after the date of adoption of the resolution. (C.C.P. 1245.260(b).)

C.C.P. 1245.260 does not affect an owner's fundamental right to bring an inverse condemnation action under Cal. Const., Art. I, §19. (Tilem v. Los Angeles (1983) 142 C.A.3d 694, 703, 191 C.R. 229 [Klopping rule (infra, §1235) requires owner to show either unreasonable delay or other unreasonable conduct].)

(3) Mandamus Proceeding by Owner. In lieu of bringing an action under C.C.P. 1240.260(a), or if the limitations period provided in C.C.P. 1240.260(b) has run, the property owner may obtain a writ of mandamus to compel the public entity, within the time the court deems appropriate, "to rescind the resolution of necessity or to commence an eminent domain proceeding to acquire the property." (C.C.P. 1245.260(f).)

(4) Commencement of Proceeding or Rescission by Public Entity. (a) If the public entity commences a proceeding or rescinds the resolution before the owner commences an action, the owner's right of action is lost. (C.C.P. 1245.260(c).) (b) After the owner has commenced an action, the public entity may rescind and abandon the taking "only under the same circumstances and subject to the same conditions and consequences as abandonment of an eminent domain proceeding." (C.C.P. 1245.260(d).) (On abandonment, see C.C.P. 1268.510, infra, §1264.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General.

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §1015.

93 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

3. Precondemnation Activities.

b. Resolution of Necessity.

5. Consent to Proceeding by Quasi-Public Entity.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1203

[§ 1203] Consent to Proceeding by Quasi-Public Entity.

(1) "Quasi-Public Entity" Defined. For purposes of C.C.P. 1245.310 et seq., a quasi-public entity includes certain collegiate institutions, nonprofit hospitals, cemetery authorities, limited-dividend housing cooperatives, and mutual water companies. (C.C.P. 1245.320.) A property owner seeking a utility easement under C.C. 1001 (supra, §1178) or a repair easement under C.C. 1002 (supra, §1179) is also deemed to be a quasi-public entity. (C.C.P. 1245.325, 1245.326.)

(2) Consent Requirement. Notwithstanding "other requirements imposed by law," including the conditions for exercising the power of eminent domain set forth in C.C.P. 1240.030 (C.C.P. 1245.380; see supra, §1180), an eminent domain proceeding by a quasi-public entity requires the prior consent of the legislative body of the city or county in which the property is located (C.C.P. 1245.330). (See C.C.P. 1245.310 [defining "legislative body"]; C.C.P. 1245.370 [payment by quasi-public entity of costs incurred by legislative body].)

The consent is expressed in a resolution, the content of which is specified in C.C.P. 1245.340. In the case of a property owner's condemnation of a utility or repair easement, however, the resolution of the legislative body must declare that it has found and determined each of the elements required by C.C. 1001 or C.C. 1002, respectively. (C.C.P. 1245.325 [utility easement under C.C. 1001]; C.C.P. 1245.326 [repair easement under C.C. 1002].) The resolution must be approved by a two-thirds vote of all members of the legislative body. (C.C.P. 1245.360.) (See C.C.P. 1245.250 [notice and hearing requirements]; C.C.P. 1245.390 [city or county is not liable for damages caused by acquisition of property or by project for which property is acquired]; L & M Professional Consultants v. Ferreira (1983) 146 C.A.3d 1038, 194 C.R. 695, supra, §1178 [constitutionality of C.C.P. 1245.325].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

94 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

a. Jurisdiction and Venue.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1204

[§ 1204] Jurisdiction and Venue.

(1) Jurisdiction in Superior Court. Except as otherwise provided in C.C.P. 1230.060 (Public Utilities Commission's jurisdiction, supra, §1174) and C.C.P. 1273.010 et seq. (arbitration, infra, §1268), "all eminent domain proceedings shall be commenced and prosecuted in the superior court." (C.C.P. 1250.010; see C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §8.3.)

(2) Venue in County Where Land Is Located. Where the property is all located in one county, the action must be brought in that county; i.e., the venue is jurisdictional. (C.C.P. 1250.020(a).) Where the property is located in more than one county, the plaintiff must bring a single action in any one of the counties. (C.C.P. 1250.020(b).) (See 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §§703, 716, 717; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §8.4.)

(3) Change of Venue. The county in which the proceeding is commenced is the proper county for trial, unless a change of venue is granted. (C.C.P. 1250.030.) Change of venue is governed by the general provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. (C.C.P. 1250.040; on scope and effect of C.C.P. 394, thus incorporated by reference, see Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1250.040; 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §794; on effect of withdrawal of probable compensation on right to change of venue, see infra, §1215.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.228, 281

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Venue in County Where Land Is Located.

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §§781, 793, 794.

(3) Change of Venue.

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §879.

95 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

b. Parties.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1205

[§ 1205] Parties.

(1) Plaintiffs. Each person seeking to take property by eminent domain must be named as a plaintiff (C.C.P. 1250.210), unless the proceeding is brought by a separate legal entity created under a joint powers agreement (Govt.C. 6508). (See 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §645.)

(2) Defendants. All persons who appear of record or are known to have or claim an interest in the property must be joined as defendants. (C.C.P. 1250.220(a).) Unknown parties claiming an interest must also be named, as specified. (C.C.P. 1250.220(c).) (See 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §645.) The holder of a special assessment lien also must be named but a taxing agency whose only interest is a lien for ad valorem taxes need not be. (C.C.P. 1250.250.) (See C.C.P. 1250.220(b) [naming personal representative or heirs and devisees of deceased claimant]; C.C.P. 1250.220(d) [conclusive effect of judgment on persons named and properly served].)

(3) Appearance by Unnamed Claimants. A person who claims a legal or equitable interest in the property may appear. The person does so as a defendant, whether or not named as a defendant in the complaint. (C.C.P. 1250.230; see San Diego v. Miller (1980) 102 C.A.3d 424, 431, 162 C.R. 480.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.228, 281

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Plaintiffs.

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §686.

(2) Defendants.

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §686.

96 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

c. Pleading.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1206

[§ 1206] Pleading.

(1) Complaint. Filing a complaint commences an eminent domain proceeding, and gives the court subject matter jurisdiction. (C.C.P. 1250.110.) The complaint must contain specified substantive allegations. (See C.C.P. 1250.310; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §§8.1, 8.2; 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §644 et seq.) (On signing of pleadings by attorney, see C.C.P. 1250.330, supra, §1172; on amendment of pleadings, see C.C.P. 1250.340, supra, §1172; on stay where another proceeding involving same property is pending, see San Bernardino Valley Mun. Water Dist. v. Gage Canal Co. (1964) 226 C.A.2d 206, 37 C.R. 856, 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §1069.)

"The plaintiff may join in one complaint all property located within the same county which is sought to be acquired for the same project." (C.C.P. 1250.240.)

(2) Answer. The answer must state the nature and extent of the defendant's interest in the property. (C.C.P. 1250.320(a).) If the defendant seeks compensation for the loss of goodwill (see C.C.P. 1263.510, infra, §1245), the answer must state that the defendant claims this compensation, but need not specify the amount claimed. (C.C.P. 1250.320(b).) (See C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §8.25 et seq.; 5 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §1041.)

(3) Objection to Right To Take. A defendant may, by demurrer or answer, object to the plaintiff's right to take, stating the specific ground for objection and the specific facts on which the objection is based. (C.C.P. 1250.350; see San Bernardino County Flood Control Dist. v. Grabowski (1988) 205 C.A.3d 885, 896, 252 C.R. 676 [objection to right to take may be raised by answer only on grounds specified in C.C.P. 1250.350; challenge based on claimed violation of Political Reform Act (supra, §271 et seq.) must be made by compulsory cross-complaint]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §8.25 et seq.) Failure to object constitutes a waiver. (C.C.P. 1250.345.) The statute lists the grounds for objection. (See C.C.P. 1250.360 [where resolution of necessity is conclusive]; C.C.P. 1250.370 [where resolution of necessity is not conclusive].)

(4) Signing or Verification. "Where a party is represented by an attorney, his pleading need not be verified but shall be signed by the attorney for the party. The signature of the attorney constitutes a certificate by him that he has read the pleading and that to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief there is ground to support it. If the pleading is not signed or is signed with intent to defeat the purposes of this section, it may be stricken." (C.C.P. 1250.330.)

(5) Amended or Supplemental Pleadings. The court may allow an amendment or supplement to a pleading on those "terms and conditions as may be just." In the case of the complaint, these "terms and conditions may include a change in the applicable date of valuation for the proceeding and an award of costs and litigation expenses which would not have been incurred had the proceeding as originally commenced been the same as the proceeding following such amendment or supplement." (C.C.P. 1250.340.) The authority to permit these changes is, however, limited as follows: (a) A public entity may add to the property sought to be taken only if it has adopted a resolution of necessity satisfying the requirements of C.C.P. 1245.210 et seq. (supra, §1199) for the property to be added. (C.C.P. 1250.340(b).) (b) Property previously sought to be taken may be deleted only if the plaintiff has followed the procedure for partial abandonment as to that property. (C.C.P. 1250.340(c).)

(6) Disclaimer. A defendant may, at any time, file a disclaimer stating that he or she claims no interest in the property or in compensation that may be awarded. A disclaimer supersedes an answer previously filed. It need not be in a particular form, but must be signed by the defendant. (C.C.P. 1250.325(a).)

A disclaimer ends the defendant's right to participate in the proceeding (C.C.P. 1250.325(b)), and the court may implement it by appropriate orders, including an award of costs and litigation expenses (C.C.P. 1250.325(c)). This provision gives the court authority to facilitate the use of disclaimers in aiding the settlement of claims of relatively slight value. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §§8.23, 8.24; Model Eminent Domain Code, §503, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 53.)

(7) Character of Proceeding. "An action in eminent domain is not an adversary proceeding in the conventional sense, for the condemning entity is not required to assert any prior title or interest in the property. By filing the action the condemner, in effect, serves notice that it is taking title and possession of certain property, and that defendant must assert his title or interest, not to prove a right to possession, but to prove a right to be compensated for the taking. Furthermore, unnamed persons may appear as defendants and answer the complaint by asserting an interest in the property." (San Bernardino Valley Mun. Water Dist. v. Gage Canal Co., supra, 226 C.A.2d 209.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Complaint.

Specified allegations:

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §685 et seq.

San Bernardino Valley Mun. Water Dist. case:

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §1143.

(2) Answer.

Cross-Reference: 5 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §1115.

97 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

d. Process.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1207

[§ 1207] Process.

(1) Form and Contents of Ordinary Summons. The summons normally follows the form and contents of summons in civil actions. (C.C.P. 1250.120(a).) (See 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §896 et seq.; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §8.5.)

(2) Published Summons. The summons need not contain a description of the property; this is in the complaint served with the summons. But a copy of the complaint is not included in a published summons; hence, "[w]here process is served by publication, in addition to the summons, the publication shall describe the property sought to be taken in a manner reasonably calculated to give persons with an interest in the property actual notice of the pending proceeding." (C.C.P. 1250.120(b)); see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §906.) The publication may name only the defendants to be served and describe only the property of these defendants. (C.C.P. 1250.125.)

In service by publication, the court also must order posting of the summons and complaint on the property and recordation of a lis pendens, within 10 days after the order. (C.C.P. 1250.130; on service by publication, see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §949 et seq.)

(3) Failure To Appear After Published Summons. A judgment against the defendant for failure to appear is conclusive only to property described in the publication. (C.C.P. 1250.125(b).) However, a defendant who was served by publication and failed to appear may contest the amount of compensation within 1 year of the judgment and for good cause shown, if the defendant did not receive the offer of compensation because he or she could not be located with reasonable diligence (see supra, §1186). (C.C.P. 1250.125(c).)

(4) Service on Attorney General. Where the state is a defendant, the summons and complaint must be served on the Attorney General. (C.C.P. 1250.140.)

(5) Dismissal for Failure To Serve Summons. The mandatory dismissal statute for failing to serve the summons (C.C.P. 583.250; see 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, §287 et seq.) applies in eminent domain proceedings. (Dresser v. Superior Court (1964) 231 C.A.2d 68, 78, 41 C.R. 473.)

(6) Lis Pendens. Where the service is by publication, a lis pendens must be recorded. (C.C.P. 1250.130.) In other cases, the plaintiff must record the notice "at the time of the commencement of the proceeding," and a copy of the notice must be served with the summons and complaint. (C.C.P. 1250.150.) (See C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §§8.6, 8.7; 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §344.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Form and Contents of Ordinary Summons.

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §981 et seq.

(2) Published Summons.

Cross-References: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §987; 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §1032 et seq.

(5) Dismissal for Failure To Serve Summons.

Cross-Reference: 6 Cal. Proc. (5th), Proceedings Without Trial, §319 et seq. (6) Lis Pendens.

Cross-References: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §371.

98 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

e. Pretrial Settlement Offers.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1208

[§ 1208] In General.

(1) Written Offer and Demand Are Required. At least 20 days prior to the date of trial on issues related to compensation, the plaintiff must file and serve on the defendant its final offer of compensation and the defendant must file and serve on the plaintiff his or her final demand for compensation. (C.C.P. 1250.410(a)); see Santa Clara Valley Water Dist. v. Gross (1988) 200 C.A.3d 1363, 1369, 246 C.R. 580 [conflict of interest provision of Govt.C. 1090 does not excuse property owner who is board member of condemnor from complying with C.C.P. 1250.410]; Model Eminent Domain Code, §708, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 76.) The original, rather than the actual, trial date is the proper one for measuring the statutory period. (See San Leandro v. Highsmith (1981) 123 C.A.3d 146, 154, 176 C.R. 412; Community Redevelopment Agency of Santa Ana v. Matkin (1990) 220 C.A.3d 1087, 1095, 1097, 272 C.R. 1 [where trial date is continued, offer and demand are timely if filed at least 30 (now 20) days before actual trial date, regardless of whether earlier offer or demand was made].) (On permissible lump sum demand for both direct and inverse condemnation actions, see People v. Sunshine Canyon (1979) 94 C.A.3d 599, 602, 156 C.R. 552; on duty of public entity to negotiate and make precondemnation offer, see Govt.C. 7267 et seq., supra, §1186.)

(2) Scope of Offer and Demand. The offer and demand must include all compensation prescribed by statute, including any compensation for loss of goodwill, and must state whether interest and costs are included. (C.C.P. 1250.410(a)); on costs, see infra, §1267; on interest, see infra, §1258.)

(3) Time of Offer and Demand. In People v. Callahan Bros. (1977) 69 C.A.3d 541, 544, 138 C.R. 239, decided under a predecessor statute, it was held that the requirement of filing 30 (now 20) days before trial is mandatory, and the benefits of the statute are not available to a party who files during the trial. "As a means of encouraging negotiations before trial, the Legislature put incentives into the statute. The condemnee who makes a timely final demand and goes to trial only when the offer is unreasonable has the potential of being reimbursed for expenses which he could not otherwise recover; likewise, the condemnor who makes a timely reasonable offer, whether it is accepted by the condemnee or not, may avoid having to pay the condemnee's extraordinary costs. The property owner, by not filing a final demand when he thinks the condemnor's offer is unreasonable, forfeits the possibility of recovering costs; the condemnor, by not filing a final offer, may be liable for the property owner's extraordinary costs where the owner has made a final demand." (69 C.A.3d 544.)

People v. Societa Di Unione E Beneficenza Italiana (1978) 87 C.A.3d 14, 150 C.R. 706, disagreed with the Callahan conclusion. (87 C.A.3d 22, footnote 5.) Neither party complied with the mandatory time limits, and the court held that the trial judge should determine whether the condemnor's final offer, and whether the condemnee's final demand, were reasonable. (87 C.A.3d 22.) (See Community Redevelopment Agency of Santa Ana v. Krause (1984) 162 C.A.3d 860, 865, 209 C.R. 1 [revised demand served 33 days before trial and filed 28 days before trial was in substantial compliance with 30 (now 20) day requirement]; Redevelopment Agency v. Salvation Army (2003) 103 C.A.4th 755, 773, 127 C.R.2d 30 [demand for fees and costs made within 20 days of trial on issue of agency's entitlement, under Polanco Redevelopment Act, to costs expended in removing hazardous substances from property taken was untimely under C.C.P. 1250.410(a); eminent domain action had been settled several months before and this action was not related to recovering just compensation].)

In People v. Patton Mission Properties, Ltd. (1979) 89 C.A.3d 204, 152 C.R. 485, plaintiff made its final offers over 6 months before trial, but defendants waited until 31 days before trial to make their demands, thus giving plaintiff only 1 day to evaluate and respond with revised offers. Held, under these circumstances defendants' demands should not be considered in determining reasonableness of the offers. (89 C.A.3d 212.) The court took note of the assertion of defendants' counsel that it is "common practice" for the parties to wait until the 31st day to make their offers and demands, and added: "Whether it is or is not, such practice does not demonstrate good faith, care and accuracy in determining the amount of the demand or offer. Moreover, since in this case the respondent had made its offer prior to the first trial date, appellant's adherence to such practice was incompatible with that spirit of compromise anticipated by the statute." (89 C.A.3d 213.)

(4) Time of Acceptance. A demand that is not revised, revoked, or superseded by a subsequent demand and that includes no time limitation may be accepted any time before trial commences. (San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Moreland Inv. Co. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 1151, 1157, 231 C.R. 274 [demand accepted 18 months after filing].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Correction: Page 876, line 10 of first full paragraph, the date of Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Salvation Army should be 2002.

99 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

e. Pretrial Settlement Offers.

2. Award of Litigation Expenses.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1209

[§ 1209] Award of Litigation Expenses.

(1) Basis for Award. The defendant may move for an award of litigation expenses within 30 days after entry of the judgment. If the court finds that the plaintiff's offer was unreasonable and the defendant's demand was reasonable viewed in "light of the evidence admitted and the compensation awarded in the proceeding," it must include the defendant's litigation expenses in its award of costs. (C.C.P. 1250.410(b); see C.C.P. 1268.710, infra, §1267.) In determining litigation expenses, the court must consider (a) the plaintiff's offer required by Govt.C. 7267.2 (supra, §1186), (b) deposits plaintiff made pursuant to C.C.P. 1255.010 (infra, §§1212, 1213), and (c) other written offers and demands filed and served before or during trial. (C.C.P. 1250.410(c).) (See Poway Unified School Dist. v. Chow (1995) 39 C.A.4th 1478, 1483, 46 C.R.2d 651 [trial judge had discretion under C.C.P. 473 to permit motion for litigation expenses under C.C.P. 1250.410(b) to be filed 1 day late, where plaintiff was not prejudiced by late filing]; for definition of "litigation expenses," see C.C.P. 1235.140, supra, §1171; on waiver of defendant's protection against assessment of costs and expenses on election of trial de novo after nonbinding arbitration, see infra, §1210.)

(2) Demand Accepted After Trial Commenced. In Coachella Valley County Water Dist. v. Dreyfuss (1979) 91 C.A.3d 949, 154 C.R. 467, after the jury had been impaneled and sworn, plaintiff accepted defendants' final statutory demand. Held, defendants were entitled to litigation expenses. "If the purpose of the statute is to make whole a property owner who has been required to litigate because of the condemnor's unreasonable offer, the right to recover litigation costs should hinge, not on whether the amount of compensation has been determined by a jury verdict or court finding, but on whether the property owner has been unreasonably required to litigate." (91 C.A.3d 957.)

(3) Demand Accepted After Trial Date Is Continued. In People v. Gardella Square (1988) 200 C.A.3d 559, 246 C.R. 139, defendant made a final demand, which plaintiff did not accept. However, after the original trial date was continued, and more than 30 days before the continued date, plaintiff accepted the original demand. Held, under C.C.P. 1250.410, the original, rather than the continued, trial date was the relevant one. However, the reasonableness of the offer and demand must be determined in light of the facts known when they were made. (200 C.A.3d 577, 578.) (See Community Redevelopment Agency of Santa Ana v. Matkin (1990) 220 C.A.3d 1087, 1095, 1097, 272 C.R. 1 [failure to make offer or demand before original trial date does not preclude offer or demand before actual trial date].)

(4) Reasonableness of Offer. A determination that the offer was reasonable, based on the fact that it was closer to the jury's award than was the defendant's final demand, is improper; reasonableness depends not only on the monetary amounts or the percentage of difference, but on the good faith, care, and accuracy in arriving at the offer and demand. (People v. Societa Di Unione E Beneficenza Italiana (1978) 87 C.A.3d 14, 23, 150 C.R. 706 [decided under predecessor statute]; San Diego Metropolitan Transit Dev. Bd. v. Cushman (1997) 53 C.A.4th 918, 62 C.R.2d 121 [great disparity between amount offered and amount awarded was less important than good faith where parties settled most of lawsuit and differed on purely legal issue of whether severance damages were owed]; Moulton Niguel Water Dist. v. Colombo (2003) 111 C.A.4th 1210, 1214, 4 C.R.3d 519 [in determining reasonableness of pretrial offer, trial court must evaluate evidence relating to offer independently, rather than merely comparing jury's award with amount of pretrial offer].)

The offer was reasonable in the following cases: Placer County Water Agency v. Hofman (1985) 165 C.A.3d 890, 898, 211 C.R. 894 [offer was reasonable despite reservation of question of compensation for possible future damage]; Glendale Redevelopment Agency v. Parks (1993) 18 C.A.4th 1409, 1416, 1418, 23 C.R.2d 14 [common thread of cases is deference that reviewing court gives to trial court's decision; where final offer was 89% of award and 92% of final demand, finding of reasonableness was proper].

The offer was unreasonable in the following cases: Community Redevelopment Agency of Santa Ana v. Krause (1984) 162 C.A.3d 860, 866, 209 C.R. 1 [offer equal to 82% of verdict was unreasonable where agency refused to negotiate, ignored defendant's qualified expert, and used noncomparable property for valuation]; People v. Zivelonghi (1986) 183 C.A.3d 187, 192, 228 C.R. 72 [offer reserving right to appeal judgment on size of easement taken was unreasonable as precluding final resolution; distinguishing Hofman]; People v. Andresen (1987) 193 C.A.3d 1144, 1167, 238 C.R. 826 [offer that was less than 10% of final verdict was unreasonable]; Contra Costa v. Pinole Point Properties (1994) 27 C.A.4th 1105, 1115, 33 C.R.2d 38 [defendant's $ 1 million demand was unreasonable where amount actually awarded was $ 200,000]; People v. Yuki (1995) 31 C.A.4th 1754, 1764, 1767, 37 C.R.2d 616 [cases indicate that final offers of 60% or less of award are unreasonable, offers above 85% are reasonable, and offers in middle range can fall within either group, depending on other factors; where final offer was 77% of award, trial court was within its discretion in finding that offer was unreasonable]; Ventura County Flood Control Dist. v. Campbell (1999) 71 C.A.4th 211, 224, 83 C.R.2d 725 [district's unwillingness to consider any value for aggregate it intended to sell after acquiring parcel was unreasonable as attempt to construct flood control project at defendant's expense]; People v. Woodson (2001) 93 C.A.4th 954, 960, 113 C.R.2d 559 [defendant's final offer, based on appraisal of property as mobilehome park, was unreasonable under good faith, care, and accuracy test where zoning ordinance required this use to be terminated].

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Basis for Award. C.C.P. 1250.410(e), added in 2006, defines "litigation expenses" as "the party's reasonable attorney's fees and costs, including reasonable expert witness and appraiser fees."

(New) Presumption of validity: When supported by the evidence, the trial court's factual determination under C.C.P. 1250.410 is entitled to a broad presumption of validity on appeal. (Long Beach Redevelopment Agency v. Morales (2007) 157 C.A.4th 287, 295, 68 C.R.3d 604 [presumption of validity was inappropriate where court mistakenly calculated actual and percentage difference between offer and compensation awarded and improperly focused on conduct of agency's appraiser rather than on conduct of agency in evaluating agency's good faith, care, and accuracy in formulating final offer].)(4) Reasonableness of Offer. See Inglewood Redevelopment Agency v. Aklilu (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1095, 1117, 1118, 64 C.R.3d 519 [for owner to recover litigation expenses under C.C.P. 1250.410(b), trial court must find both that owner's demand was reasonable and that agency's offer was unreasonable; trial court may consider all aspects of bargaining posture assumed by owner prior to trial].

Offer was reasonable: See Escondido Union School Dist. v. Casa Suen os De Oro (2005) 129 C.A.4th 944, 986, 29 C.R.3d 89 [offer was reasonable despite significant difference between amount deposited and final award where crux of parties' disagreement was legal issue of whether manufactured homes were improvements pertaining to realty under C.C.P. 1263.210, rather than amount of offer].

100 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

f. Alternative Dispute Resolution.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1210

[§ 1210] Alternative Dispute Resolution.

The parties may agree to resolve a dispute in an eminent domain proceeding through mediation or arbitration. (C.C.P. 1250.420.) Binding arbitration is subject to C.C.P. 1273.010 et seq. (C.C.P. 1250.420(b); see infra, §1268 et seq.)

Nonbinding arbitration is final unless a party moves the court for a trial within 30 days after service of the arbitrator's decision. If the party then does not obtain a more favorable judgment, that party becomes liable to the other parties for certain nonrefundable costs and fees, absent a showing of substantial economic hardship. (C.C.P. 1250.420(c); on defendant's protection against assessment of costs and fees generally, see supra, §1209.)

The trial date of an eminent domain proceeding may be postponed to enable a party to use alternative dispute resolution procedures when the court is satisfied that (a) the parties are actively engaged in those procedures, (b) they appear to be making progress, and (c) they agree that additional time is desirable. (C.C.P. 1250.430.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

101 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

4. Commencement of Proceeding.

g. Discovery and Exchange of Valuation Data.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1211

[§ 1211] Discovery and Exchange of Valuation Data.

The discovery provisions of the Eminent Domain Law (C.C.P. 1258.010 et seq.) are fully discussed in California Evidence. (See 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §200 et seq.) They supplement and do not replace, restrict, or limit the discovery provisions available in civil actions generally. (On discovery in general, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §1 et seq.)

The provisions of the Eminent Domain Law are primarily concerned with the exchange of lists of expert witnesses and statements of valuation data. (On time for exchange, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §202; on demand and compliance, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §201 et seq.; on failure to comply, see 2 Cal. Evidence (4th), Discovery, §§207, 208.) (See Model Eminent Domain Code, §§701 et seq. [discovery], 1101 et seq. [valuation data], 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), pp. 71 et seq., 108 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

102 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5. Deposit and Possession Before Judgment.

a. Deposit of Probable Compensation.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1212

[§ 1212] In General.

"At any time before entry of judgment, the plaintiff may deposit with the State Treasury the probable amount of compensation, based on an appraisal, that will be awarded in the proceeding. ... The deposit may be made whether or not the plaintiff applies for an order for possession or intends to do so." (C.C.P. 1255.010(a); see Model Eminent Domain Code, §601, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 61; for procedure, see infra, §1213.) The deposit does not affect the plaintiff's rights to appeal from the judgment, to move to abandon, or to move for a new trial. (C.C.P. 1255.080.)

To encourage the plaintiff to make an adequate deposit, the plaintiff is protected from the defendant's use of evidence at trial on the issue of compensation, as follows:

(1) The amount deposited or withdrawn "may not be given in evidence or referred to in the trial." (C.C.P. 1255.060(a).)

(2) An appraisal report, written statement and summary of an appraisal, or other statements made in connection with the deposit or withdrawal may not be considered an admission of a party. (C.C.P. 1255.060(b).)

(3) The person who made the report or statement and summary cannot, over objection, be called as an opinion witness by the other party. (C.C.P. 1255.060(c).)

(4) If the person who prepared the report or other statement is called to testify on compensation, the report or other statement may be used for impeachment. (C.C.P. 1255.060(c).) (See Contra Costa v. Pinole Point Properties (1994) 27 C.A.4th 1105, 1112, 33 C.R.2d 38 [where condemnor made deposit on basis of higher of two appraisals, trial judge properly determined that lower appraisal was made "in connection with" deposit, for purposes of statute's prohibition of impeachment by reference to appraisal report].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

103 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5. Deposit and Possession Before Judgment.

a. Deposit of Probable Compensation.

2. Procedure.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1213

[§ 1213] Procedure.

(1) Appraisal and Statement or Summary. Before making a deposit, the plaintiff must have an expert qualified to express an opinion on the value of the property (a) "make an appraisal of the property," and (b) "prepare a written statement of, or summary of the basis for, the appraisal." (C.C.P. 1255.010(b).) The statement or summary is necessary to enable the plaintiff to comply with the notice requirement (see infra, this section), and may be made either by a member of the condemnor's appraisal staff or by an independent appraiser. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

The statement and summary must contain sufficient detail to show the basis for the appraisal, including the following:

(a) "The date of valuation, highest and best use, and applicable zoning." (C.C.P. 1255.010(b)(A).)

(b) "The principal transactions, reproduction or replacement cost analysis, or capitalization analysis, supporting the appraisal." (C.C.P. 1255.010(b)(B).)

(c) "If the appraisal includes compensation for damages to the remainder, the compensation for the property and for damages to the remainder separately stated, and the calculations and a narrative explanation supporting the compensation, including any offsetting benefits." (C.C.P. 1255.010(b)(C).)

(2) Deposit Without Statutory Compliance. A deposit may be made on order of the court, without an appraisal report or statement and summary, on noticed motion or on ex parte application in an emergency. The plaintiff must present "facts by affidavit showing that (1) good cause exists for permitting an immediate deposit to be made, (2) an adequate appraisal has not been completed and cannot reasonably be prepared before making the deposit, and (3) the amount of the deposit to be made is not less than the probable amount of compensation that the plaintiff, in good faith, estimates will be awarded in the proceeding." In its order, the court must require that the plaintiff comply with C.C.P. 1255.010(b) "within a reasonable time, to be specified in the order, and also that any additional amount of compensation shown by the appraisal required by" the statute be deposited within that time. (C.C.P. 1255.010(c).)

(3) Service of Notice of Deposit. The plaintiff must serve a notice of deposit, stating the date and amount, on all parties who have appeared, and on those who appear thereafter. Proof of service and notice of deposit must be filed with the court. (C.C.P. 1255.020(a).)

The notice must be accompanied by the written statement or summary required by C.C.P. 1255.010. (C.C.P. 1255.020(b).) If the plaintiff has obtained an order deferring completion of the statement or summary, the plaintiff, on making the deposit, must include a copy of all affidavits on which the order was based. (C.C.P. 1255.020(c)(1).) Thereafter, on completion of the written statement or summary, it must be served. (C.C.P. 1255.020(c)(2).)

(4) Increase or Decrease in Amount. At any time after a deposit has been made, the court must, on motion of the plaintiff or of a "party having an interest in the property for which the deposit was made, determine or redetermine whether the amount deposited is the probable amount of compensation that will be awarded in the proceeding." The motion must be supported with sufficient detail to show the basis for the motion. This detail is essentially the same as that required to support an appraisal pursuant to C.C.P. 1255.010. (C.C.P. 1255.030(a).) (On redetermination where prejudgment possession continues after judgment, see People v. Zivelonghi (1986) 181 C.A.3d 1035, 1045, 1046, 226 C.R. 748 [redetermination includes judgment and interest but excludes costs and litigation expenses].)

If the plaintiff has not taken possession and "the court determines that the probable amount of compensation exceeds the amount deposited, the court may order the plaintiff to increase the deposit or may deny possession" until the increase has been made. (C.C.P. 1255.030(b).)

If the plaintiff has taken possession and the court determines that the probable amount of compensation exceeds the amount deposited, the court must order an increase in the deposit. If this is not done within 30 days (or such longer time as the court allowed), the defendant may serve on the plaintiff a notice of election to treat the failure as an abandonment; and, if the plaintiff does not cure its failure within 10 days after receipt of the notice, the court, on motion of the defendant, must enter judgment dismissing the proceeding and awarding the defendant litigation expenses and damages as provided in C.C.P. 1268.610 and 1268.620 (infra, §§1265, 1266). (C.C.P. 1255.030(c).)

After a defendant withdraws any amount deposited (see infra, §1215), the plaintiff's remedy for excessive withdrawal is postponed until the final determination of the award in the proceeding. (C.C.P. 1255.280, infra, §1215.) For this reason, a determination or redetermination that the amount of probable compensation is less than the sum already withdrawn is prohibited. However, nothing prevents the court from determining that probable compensation is greater than the amount withdrawn. (C.C.P. 1255.030(d).)

If the court determines that the amount deposited should be decreased, it may permit the plaintiff to withdraw the excess not already withdrawn by the defendant. (C.C.P. 1255.030(e).)

The plaintiff may increase the amount deposited at any time without a motion. Notice of the increase must be served. (C.C.P. 1255.030(f).) (See San Diego v. Rancho Vista Del Mar (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1046, 1067, 20 C.R.2d 675 [interest may be included in order increasing amount of deposit]; Whittier Redevelopment Agency v. Oceanic Arts (1995) 33 C.A.4th 1052, 1055, 1058, 1060, 39 C.R.2d 396 [under C.C.P. 1255.030, trial judge may order increase in deposit "at any time," including after judgment and pending appeal; agreeing with result in People v. Zivelonghi, supra].)

(5) Deposit in Treasury. The court orders the money deposited in the State Treasury or, on written request of the plaintiff, in the county treasury. (C.C.P. 1255.070.) (See Santa Clara v. Santa Clara (1969) 1 C.A.3d 493, 496, 81 C.R. 643 [county clerk and county treasurer were not liable for loss of interest suffered by reason of deposit in county treasury where court order did not specify place of deposit].)

(6) Investment of Deposit. Prior to entry of judgment and on notice to the other parties, a defendant who has an interest in the property for which a deposit has been made may move the court to have the deposit invested for the benefit of all the defendants. (C.C.P. 1255.075(a).) The court has discretion to grant the motion subject to appropriate terms and conditions. (C.C.P. 1255.075(b).) The court also specifies the manner of investment, which is limited to U.S. Government obligations or interest-bearing accounts in an institution with federally insured accounts (even though the investment, e.g., a certificate of deposit, is not covered by such insurance). (C.C.P. 1255.075(c)); see Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See Redevelopment Agency of Fresno v. Erganian (1989) 211 C.A.3d 166, 173, 259 C.R. 213 [property owner who chooses to leave money on deposit rather than withdraw it is entitled to legal rate rather than market rate of interest].)

The investment has the same consequences as a withdrawal of the deposit (waiver of defenses, right of plaintiff to take possession, cessation of interest). (See infra, §1215.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Increase or Decrease in Amount. See Santa Clarita v. NTS Technical Systems (2006) 137 C.A.4th 264, 271, 40 C.R.3d 244 [date of valuation under early possession statutes is date on which contemnor deposits probable amount of compensation, and subsequent supplemental deposit does not change valuation date].

104 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5. Deposit and Possession Before Judgment.

a. Deposit of Probable Compensation.

3. Deposit on Demand of Homeowner or Lessor.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1214

[§ 1214] Deposit on Demand of Homeowner or Lessor.

(1) Demand of Homeowner. A special procedure is provided for a homeowner's demand of a deposit for the probable amount of compensation, where the property is a dwelling containing not more than two residential units, and the dwelling or one of its units is the defendant's residence. (See C.C.P. 1255.040; Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(a) The defendant serves a notice on the plaintiff, requiring a deposit and specifying the date he or she desires it to be made, which may not be earlier than 30 days after the date of service of the notice. (C.C.P. 1255.040(a).) Service is made as provided by C.C.P. 1255.020(a) (see supra, §1213). (C.C.P. 1255.040(f).)

(b) If the plaintiff makes a timely deposit it may, on an ex parte application, obtain an order authorizing possession 30 days after the date specified by the defendant or a later date requested by the plaintiff. (C.C.P. 1255.040(b).)

(c) If the deposit is not made on the specified date or a later date specified by the court on motion and good cause shown, the compensation awarded the defendant draws legal interest from that date, without offset for rents or other income or the value of continued possession. (C.C.P. 1255.040(c).)

(d) If the proceeding is abandoned, the defendant may recover interest as costs. If, in the proceeding, the court or a jury verdict eventually determines the compensation that would have been awarded, the interest is computed on the amount of that award; otherwise, it is computed on the probable amount of compensation as determined by the court. (C.C.P. 1255.040(d).)

(e) Service of a notice constitutes a waiver by operation of law, conditioned on subsequent deposit by the plaintiff of the probable amount of compensation, of all claims and defenses in favor of the defendant except his or her claim for greater compensation. (C.C.P. 1255.040(e).)

(f) No notice may be served after entry of judgment unless the judgment is reversed, vacated, or set aside and no other judgment has been entered. (C.C.P. 1255.040(g).)

(2) Demand of Lessor. A special procedure is provided by statute for a lessor's demand of a deposit for the probable amount of compensation, where the property to be taken is subject to a leasehold interest. The purpose of this statute is to protect the lessor from the hardship that may result from rental losses during the condemnation proceedings. (See C.C.P. 1255.050; Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

The procedure is the same as that provided in C.C.P. 1255.040 for a homeowner's demand. However, if the plaintiff fails to make the deposit, the interest is subject to an offset of the lessor's net rental profits. (C.C.P. 1255.050.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Demand of Homeowner.(b) C.C.P. 1255.040(b), as amended in 2006, no longer provides for obtaining the order of possession on an ex parte application.

105 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5. Deposit and Possession Before Judgment.

a. Deposit of Probable Compensation.

4. Withdrawal of Deposit.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1215

[§ 1215] Withdrawal of Deposit.

(1) Application. Prior to entry of judgment, a defendant may apply for withdrawal of all or part of the amount deposited. A verified application must set forth the applicant's interest in the property and request a stated amount. (C.C.P. 1255.210.) (On withdrawal of deposit after entry of judgment, see C.C.P. 1268.140, infra, §1256.) The applicant must serve a copy of the application on the plaintiff. (C.C.P. 1255.210.)

(2) Undertaking. If the court determines that an applicant is entitled to withdraw a portion of a deposit claimed by another party or to which another person may be entitled, it may require an undertaking to secure payment of an excess withdrawal. If withdrawal is authorized without personal service of the application on a party, the court may also require the undertaking to indemnify the plaintiff against any liability it may incur under C.C.P. 1255.230 (infra, this section). The amount of the undertaking is fixed by the court, but may not exceed (a) the amount of the excess, if executed by an admitted surety insurer, or (b) twice the amount of the excess, if executed by two or more sufficient sureties. (C.C.P. 1255.240.) If the original deposit is increased under C.C.P. 1255.030 (supra, §1213) and the amount sought to be withdrawn exceeds the amount of the original deposit, an applicant must file an undertaking to secure repayment of any excess withdrawal, with interest. Two or more applicants may jointly file a single undertaking. (C.C.P. 1255.250.)

(3) Objection by Plaintiff: Undertaking Insufficient. Within 20 days after service of the application, the plaintiff may file an objection on the ground that the amount of an undertaking is insufficient, the sureties are insufficient, or an undertaking is required but has not been filed. (C.C.P. 1255.230(b)(2), (3).)

(4) Objection by Plaintiff: Other Persons Have Interests. Within 20 days after service of the application, the plaintiff may file an objection on the ground that other parties are known or believed to have an interest in the property. (C.C.P. 1255.230(b)(1).) The plaintiff must attempt to personally serve them with a 10-day notice to appear or waive their rights. The plaintiff must also file and serve on the applicant a list of parties served and not served, and the applicant may serve those whom the plaintiff has been unable to serve. (C.C.P. 1255.230(c).)

(5) Appearance and Objection by Others. If a party objects to the withdrawal, or if the plaintiff requests, the court holds a hearing and determines the amount, if any, to be withdrawn, and by whom. (C.C.P. 1255.230(d).)

(6) Effect of Withdrawal. (a) Parties properly served have no claim against the plaintiff for compensation to the extent of the amount withdrawn by all applicants. However, the plaintiff remains liable to parties with an interest of record who are not served. (C.C.P. 1255.230(c).) (b) If part of the deposit is withdrawn, the receipt constitutes "a waiver by operation of law of all claims and defenses in favor of the persons receiving such payment except a claim for greater compensation." (C.C.P. 1255.260.) (See Model Eminent Domain Code, §§605, 606, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), pp. 65, 66.)

Defendant condemnee's withdrawal of deposited probable compensation under C.C.P. 1255.260 does not waive his or her right to request a transfer of the proceeding to a neutral county. (Clayton v. Superior Court (1998) 67 C.A.4th 28, 31, 34, 78 C.R.2d 750 [right to have monetary issues litigated in neutral forum is not equivalent of "claim" or "defense" to condemnation action].)

(7) Order. The court orders payment of the amount to which the applicant is entitled. (C.C.P. 1255.220.) Withdrawal may not be ordered until 20 days after service of the application on the plaintiff or until the time for all objections has expired, whichever is later. (C.C.P. 1255.230(a).)

(8) Return of Excess After Judgment. If a party has withdrawn more than the amount to which he or she is entitled as finally determined in the proceeding, the excess is paid to the parties entitled to it, and the court must enter judgment accordingly. (C.C.P. 1255.280(a).) An excess amount paid to one defendant includes legal interest from the date of withdrawal by another defendant, and an excess amount paid to the plaintiff includes interest from the date of withdrawal to the extent the amount is attributable to an increase in the original deposit under C.C.P. 1255.030 (supra, §1213) on motion of the party obligated to pay. (C.C.P. 1255.280(b).) (See 99 A.L.R.2d 886 [condemnor's right to interest on excess deposit].) If the judgment is not paid within 30 days, the court may enter judgment against the sureties, if any. (C.C.P. 1255.280(c).) The court may also grant a stay of execution, up to 1 year, of any excess withdrawal to be paid to the plaintiff. (C.C.P. 1255.280(d).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(6) Effect of Withdrawal. See Mt. San Jacinto Community College Dist. v. Superior Court (2007) 40 C.4th 648, 666, 54 C.R.3d 752, 151 P.3d 1166 [waiver rule of C.C.P. 1255.260 does not impair owner's constitutional right to prompt release of deposited funds or impose unconstitutional choice on owner]; Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Mesdaq (2007) 154 C.A.4th 1111, 1139, 65 C.R.3d 372 [property owner's consent to bank's withdrawal of portion of deposit to pay off loan on property mandated waiver of owner's future right to object to taking].

106 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5. Deposit and Possession Before Judgment.

b. Possession Prior to Judgment.

1. Application and Order.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1216

[§ 1216] Application and Order.

(1) Constitutional Authority. "The Legislature may provide for possession by the condemnor following commencement of eminent domain proceedings upon deposit in court and prompt release to the owner of money determined by the court to be the probable amount of just compensation." (Cal. Const., Art. I, §19.)

A condemnation action is the only legal procedure provided in California for the taking of private property for public use. Hence, even if a deposit is made, the taking may not be accomplished by means of an injunction. (See Needles v. Griswold (1992) 6 C.A.4th 1881, 1894, 1895, 8 C.R.2d 753, supra, §1163.)

(2) Power of Court. "The court in which a proceeding in eminent domain is brought has the power to: (a) Determine the right to possession of the property, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, in accordance with this title. (b) Enforce any of its orders for possession by appropriate process. The plaintiff is entitled to enforcement of an order for possession as a matter of right." (C.C.P. 1230.050.) The "appropriate process" includes writs of possession (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §317 et seq.), and orders for possession under C.C.P. 1255.410 et seq. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (On order for possession after judgment, see infra, §1257.)

(3) Application and Conditions. The plaintiff may apply ex parte for an order for possession at the time of filing the complaint or at any time after filing the complaint but prior to entry of judgment. The two conditions are that the plaintiff (a) is entitled to take the property by eminent domain, and (b) has made a deposit that satisfies C.C.P. 1255.010 et seq. (see supra, §1212). (C.C.P. 1255.410(a).) The plaintiff is also entitled to possession in either of two special situations: (a) Each defendant entitled to possession has expressed in writing his or her "willingness to surrender possession of the property on or after a stated date." (b) Each defendant has withdrawn a portion of the deposit. (C.C.P. 1255.460(a).)

(4) Order. The order must describe the property, which may be by reference to the complaint, and must state the date authorized for possession. (C.C.P. 1255.410(b).) Where possession is by consent or after withdrawal of a deposit, the order must also state that it is made under C.C.P. 1255.460. (C.C.P. 1255.460(b).) Unless the plaintiff requests a later date, the date of authorized possession by consent is the date stated by the defendant, and the date of possession after withdrawal of a deposit is the earliest date on which the plaintiff would be entitled to take possession under C.C.P. 1255.450(c). (C.C.P. 1255.460(b).) (On nonappealability of order, and review by extraordinary writ, see decisions cited in the Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1255.410(a).)

(5) Effect of Order and Possession. The plaintiff, by taking possession, does not waive the right to appeal from the judgment, to move to abandon, or to request a new trial. (C.C.P. 1255.470.) The determination of the right to take by eminent domain--a condition of the order--is preliminary only. "The granting of an order for possession does not prejudice the defendants' right to demur to the complaint or to contest the taking. Conversely, the denial of an order for possession does not require a dismissal of the proceeding and does not prejudice the plaintiff's right to fully litigate the issue if raised by the defendant." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See Morgan Hill v. Alberti (1989) 211 C.A.3d 1435, 1437, 260 C.R. 42 [landowner may seek relief from "quick-take" under C.C.P. 1255.420 or 1255.430 (see infra, §1218), but order itself is not appealable].)

(6) Emergency Situations. "Nothing in this article limits the right of a public entity to exercise its police power in emergency situations." (C.C.P. 1255.480.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Power of Court.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Enforcement of Judgment, §325 et seq.

(3) Application and Conditions. C.C.P. 1255.410(a), as amended in 2006, no longer provides for obtaining the order of possession on an ex parte application.

(3a) (New) Motion. C.C.P. 1255.410 was substantially amended in 2006. The statute now requires that the motion for an order of possession describe the property sought to be taken, which may be by reference to the complaint, and the date after which the plaintiff is seeking to take possession. The motion must include a statement regarding the property owner's right to oppose the order, which includes notice of the 30-day time limit for filing a written opposition. (C.C.P. 1255.410(a)); on serving and filing opposition and response to opposition, see C.C.P. 1255.410(c).) The plaintiff must serve a copy of the motion on the record owner and on any occupants. The plaintiff must set the hearing on the motion not less than 60 days after service for unoccupied property and 90 days after service for an occupied dwelling, farm, or business operation. (C.C.P. 1255.410(b).)

(4) Order. C.C.P. 1255.410(b), as amended in 2006, no longer requires that the order describe the property and state the date authorized for possession; those requirements are stated in C.C.P. 1255.460. The remainder of C.C.P. 1255.460 stated in the text has been deleted.

When the motion is not opposed within 30 days of service, the court must make an order for possession if it finds that (a) the plaintiff is entitled to take the property by eminent domain, and (b) the plaintiff's deposit satisfies statutory requirements. (C.C.P. 1255.410(d)(1).) When the property owner or occupant files a timely opposition to the motion, the court also must consider at the hearing (a) whether there is an overriding need for the plaintiff to possess the property prior to final judgment, and whether the plaintiff will suffer substantial hardship if possession is limited or denied, and (b) whether the plaintiff's hardship from limiting or denying possession outweighs any hardship to the property owner or occupant from granting possession. (C.C.P. 1255.410(d)(2).)

(5) Effect of Order and Possession. C.C.P. 1255.420 and 1255.430 were repealed in 2006.

107 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5. Deposit and Possession Before Judgment.

b. Possession Prior to Judgment.

2. Service of Order.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1217

[§ 1217] Service of Order.

(1) Persons Entitled to Service. The plaintiff must serve a copy of the order on (a) the record owner (defined in C.C.P. 1255.450(a)) and (b) any occupants. (C.C.P. 1255.450(b).)

(2) Manner of Service. Personal service is required with these exceptions: (a) Where the person has previously appeared or been served with summons; service may be made on that person and his or her attorney by mail. (b) Where the person resides out of the state or has departed or cannot with due diligence be found within the state; service may be made by registered or certified mail to the person's last known address. (C.C.P. 1255.450(d).) A single service on or mailing to one of several persons with a common business or residence address is sufficient. (C.C.P. 1255.450(f).) Service may be made with or following service of summons. (C.C.P. 1255.450(b).)

(3) Time of Service. Special time provisions are made for particular situations:

(a) "If the property is lawfully occupied by a person dwelling thereon or by a farm or business operation," not less than 90 days prior to the time possession is to be taken. (C.C.P. 1255.450(b).) (See Govt.C. 7267.3, infra, §1271 [90-days' written notice is required for removal from home, business, or farm].)

(b) In all other cases, not less than 30 days prior to the time possession is to be taken. (C.C.P. 1255.450(b).)

(c) If the order was made after deposit on notice of a homeowner or deposit by a lessor (supra, §1214), or after vacation of the property or withdrawal of the deposit (supra, §1216), not less than 30 days prior to the time possession is taken. (C.C.P. 1255.450(c).)

(4) Lesser Notice Where Urgent Need For Possession. Notwithstanding the time limits for notice prescribed by C.C.P. 1255.450, "if the court finds that the plaintiff has an urgent need for possession of property and that possession will not displace or unreasonably affect any person in actual and lawful possession of the property to be taken or the larger parcel of which it is a part, the court may make an order for possession of such property upon such notice, not less than three days, as the court deems appropriate under the circumstances of the case." (C.C.P. 1255.410(c)); see Israni v. Superior Court (2001) 88 C.A.4th 621, 638, 106 C.R.2d 48, infra, §1218 ["urgent need" contemplates at least temporal or immediate need, and includes substantive component related to nature of public necessity to be served by taking; in determining "urgent need," it is appropriate to use criteria listed in C.C.P. 1255.420 (infra, §1218) relating to substantial hardship from immediate taking].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(3) Time of Service. C.C.P. 1255.450(b), as amended in 2006, requires service of the order of possession for occupied dwellings, farms, and businesses not less than 30 days prior to the time possession is to be taken under the order, and in all other cases, not less than 10 days prior to that time.

(4) Lesser Notice Where Urgent Need for Possession. C.C.P. 1255.410(c) was amended and relettered in 2006 as C.C.P. 1255.410(e). The statute now provides that an emergency order of possession may be granted on ex parte application of specified utilities as appropriate under the circumstances on a finding that there is an urgent need for possession and that it "will not displace or unreasonably affect any person in actual and lawful possession." (C.C.P. 1255.410(e).)

C.C.P. 1255.420 was repealed in 2006.

108 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5. Deposit and Possession Before Judgment.

b. Possession Prior to Judgment.

3. Stay and Vacation of Order.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1218

[§ 1218] Stay and Vacation of Order.

(1) Stay For Hardship. A defendant or occupant may move for relief against an ex parte order for possession on the ground that taking possession at the time specified creates a substantial hardship. The motion for relief must be made not later than 30 days after service of the order for possession. The court may grant relief on dual findings of fact: (a) that the hardship to the defendant or occupant is substantial, and (b) that it is not outweighed by the plaintiff's need for early possession. If relief is granted, it may consist of a stay of the order or the imposition of terms and conditions limiting its operation; e.g., permitting the plaintiff and defendant to have possession of portions of the property or to have joint use. (C.C.P. 1255.420; see Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

Relief may be denied if, on "considering all relevant facts (including the schedule or plan of operation for execution of the public improvement and the situation of the property with respect to such schedule or plan), the court further determines (a) that the plaintiff needs possession of the property within the time specified in the order for possession and (b) that the hardship the plaintiff would suffer as a result of a stay or limitation of the order would be substantial." (C.C.P. 1255.420.)

To justify a stay order, "substantial hardship," as used in C.C.P. 1255.420, requires the hardship to have "a specific relationship to the particular interval between the application" for the possession order "and its proposed effective date." The statute does not "require or allow a determination that a substantial hardship to the property owner may arise out of indirect effects of existing arrangements that do not depend mainly upon the effective date" of the possession order. (Israni v. Superior Court (2001) 88 C.A.4th 621, 642, 106 C.R.2d 48.)

(2) Stay Where Right To Take Is Contested. If the plaintiff has been authorized to take possession of property under C.C.P. 1255.410 "and the defendant has objected to the plaintiff's right to take the property by eminent domain, the court, if it finds there is a reasonable probability the defendant will prevail, shall stay the order for possession until it has ruled on the defendant's objections." (C.C.P. 1255.430.) Because the hearing on the right to take has priority (see C.C.P. 1260.110, infra, §1220), the stay will be necessary only if the objections are not finally resolved by the date of possession. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(3) Vacation Where Conditions Are Not Satisfied. The order for possession is issued ex parte on a showing by the plaintiff alone. (See C.C.P. 1255.410(a), supra, §1216.) If, thereafter, on motion of the defendant or on its own motion, the court determines that the conditions of C.C.P. 1255.410 were not satisfied, it must vacate the order. (C.C.P. 1255.440.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Stay for Hardship. C.C.P. 1255.420 was repealed in 2006.

(2) Stay Where Right To Take Is Contested. C.C.P. 1255.430 was repealed in 2006.(3) Vacation Where Conditions Are Not Satisfied. C.C.P. 1255.410(a), as amended in 2006, no longer provides for obtaining the order of possession on an ex parte application. (See Supp., supra, §1216.)

109 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

5A. (New) Owner's Right to Leaseback.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1218A

[§ 1218A] (New) Owner's Right to Leaseback.

C.C.P. 1263.615, added in 2006, requires a public entity acquiring property in eminent domain to offer a 1-year leaseback agreement to the owner, unless the public entity states in writing that development or public use of the property is scheduled to begin within 2 years. (C.C.P. 1263.615(a).) This offer is subject to the owner's payment of fair market rent and compliance with statutory conditions, including paying a reasonable security deposit and maintaining adequate insurance. (C.C.P. 1263.615(a), (c).)

Subject to the scheduled development or public use of the property, a leaseback agreement may be renewed for additional 1-year terms. The public entity must give notice at least 60 days prior to the lease termination date. The public entity's failure to extend the lease or give the required notice of termination extends the lease for 60-day periods. (C.C.P. 1263.615(d).) A lessee who holds over after expiration of the lease is subject to an unlawful detainer action and for holdover damages. (C.C.P. 1263.615(e).)

A leaseback agreement does not affect the amount of compensation otherwise payable for taking the property. (C.C.P. 1263.615(f).) Additional goodwill does not accrue during the lease period. (C.C.P. 1263.615(c)(5).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

110 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

6. Trial.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1219

[§ 1219] In General.

(1) Trial Preference. For trial setting purposes, proceedings under the Eminent Domain Law "take precedence over all other civil actions" so that they can be "quickly heard and determined." (C.C.P. 1260.010.) (See Swartzman v. Superior Court (1964) 231 C.A.2d 195, 199, 41 C.R. 721 [cause specifically set to give trial date within 1 year, thus establishing valuation as of date of summons]; 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §76 et seq.)

(2) Issues Triable by Court and Jury. The action is triable by a jury unless a jury is waived. (Cal. Const., Art. I, §19.) The only issue for the jury is valuation; all others are tried by the court. (People v. Volz (1972) 25 C.A.3d 480, 487, 102 C.R. 107; see Coachella Valley Water Dist. v. Western Allied Properties (1987) 190 C.A.3d 969, 976, 235 C.R. 725 [evidentiary rulings preventing defendant from introducing evidence of alternative flood control proposals for property taken for flood control channel precluded jury access to all relevant evidence on fair market value of property, thus denying jury trial on issue of just compensation].)

(3) Procedure at Trial. The ordinary rules of practice govern eminent domain proceedings (C.C.P. 1230.040, supra, §1172), except that the defendant commences and concludes the argument (C.C.P. 1260.210(a), infra, §1221). (On expert testimony, and evidence admissible on direct and cross-examination, see Ev.C. 810 et seq.; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §98 et seq.; on jury instructions, see supra, §1173; see generally, C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §9.20 et seq.)

The provisions on deposit of probable compensation (see supra, §1212 et seq.) contain a restriction on trial evidence. The amount deposited or withdrawn may not be given in evidence or referred to at trial on the issue of compensation. (C.C.P. 1255.060, supra, §1212.)

(4) Consolidated Proceedings: Issues of Compatibility and More Necessary Public Use. Where two proceedings to acquire the same property are consolidated under C.C.P. 1048 (see 4 Cal. Proc. (4th), Pleading, §306), C.C.P. 1260.020 sets the following procedure:

(a) First, the court must determine whether the public uses are compatible within the meaning of C.C.P. 1240.510 et seq. (supra, §1192). If so, it must permit the proceeding to continue with the plaintiffs acting jointly, and must

"apportion the obligation to pay any award in proportion to the use, damage, and benefits attributable to each plaintiff." (C.C.P. 1260.020(a).)

(b) If the court determines that the uses are not all compatible, it must further determine which is the more necessary public use within the meaning of C.C.P. 1240.610 et seq. (supra, §1194). It must then (1) permit the plaintiff alleging the more necessary public use, and other plaintiffs alleging compatible uses, to continue the proceeding, and (2) dismiss the proceeding as to the other plaintiffs. (C.C.P. 1260.020(b).)

(5) Issue of Character of Improvements. If the parties are unable to agree on whether particular property is an improvement pertaining to the realty, the issue may be promptly resolved by a hearing on noticed motion. (a) The motion may be made by either party, not later than 30 days before the date specified in an order for possession. (b) It must be heard no sooner than 10 days and no later than 20 days after service of the notice of motion. (c) The court may consider "any relevant evidence, including a view of the premises and property." (C.C.P. 1260.030.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.228, 281

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Trial Preference.

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Trial, §66 et seq.(4) Consolidated Proceedings: Issues of Compatibility and More Necessary Public Use.

Cross-Reference: 4 Cal. Proc. (5th), Pleading, §342.

111 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

6. Trial.

b. Contesting Right To Take.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1220

[§ 1220] Contesting Right To Take.

(1) Prior Hearing and Special Setting. Where objections to the right to take are raised (see C.C.P. 1250.350 et seq., supra, §1206), they must be heard and determined prior to determining compensation, unless the court orders otherwise. (C.C.P. 1260.110(a).) The court may, after a hearing on a party's noticed motion, specially set these objections for trial. (C.C.P. 1260.110(b).) (On special setting under C.R.C., Rule 375, see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Trial, §83.)

(2) Admissible Evidence. In Santa Cruz County Redevelopment Agency v. Izant (1995) 37 C.A.4th 141, 43 C.R.2d 366, plaintiff agency, desiring to acquire an easement over defendant's property, held a hearing, at which defendant introduced a four-page document as evidence. At the conclusion of the hearing, plaintiff adopted a resolution of necessity, and then filed a complaint in eminent domain. At trial, defendant made several objections on various grounds, but was allowed to introduce as evidence only the four-page document that it had produced at the hearing. Held, this was improper.

(a) A resolution of necessity is conclusive proof that (1) public interest and necessity require the project; (2) the project is planned or located in the manner that will be compatible with the greatest public good and the least private injury; and (3) the property sought is necessary for the project. Under C.C.P. 1245.255, the resolution can be judicially reviewed for gross abuse, i.e., whether it is arbitrary, capricious, or entirely lacking in evidentiary support. In other words, review of the resolution's validity is limited to a review of the agency's proceedings, and no new evidence may be admitted. (37 C.A.4th 150.)

(b) However, the property owner may raise objections at trial that do not relate to the validity of the resolution of necessity. The grounds for these objections are specified in C.C.P. 1250.360, and, as the legislative committee comments to this statute make clear, evidence may be introduced on these matters, as well as on other matters not covered in the Eminent Domain Law. (37 C.A.4th 151.)

(c) Here, defendant raised many of the objections specified in the statute, as well as other affirmative defenses. For example, defendant alleged that the stated purpose was not a public use, that the purpose of the taking was for the private benefit of a third party, and that plaintiff did not intend to devote the property to the stated purpose. Defendant was entitled to introduce evidence on these matters. The trial judge took the standard of review associated with a resolution of necessity, and wrongly applied it, in the trial as a whole, to exclude evidence, no matter what the issue. (37 C.A.4th 152.)

(3) Determination That Plaintiff Is Entitled. If the court determines that the plaintiff has the right to take, it must so order. (C.C.P. 1260.120(b).)

(4) Determination That Plaintiff Is Not Entitled: Dismissal or Conditional Dismissal. In the absence of special circumstances, a determination that the plaintiff does not have the right to take the property is followed by immediate dismissal of the proceeding. (C.C.P. 1260.120(c)(1).) But the court has discretion to take the less drastic action of ordering conditional dismissal of the proceeding unless prescribed corrective and remedial action "has been taken within the period prescribed by the court in the order." The order may impose "such limitations and conditions as the court determines to be just under the circumstances of the particular case including the requirement that the plaintiff pay to the defendant all or part of the reasonable litigation expenses necessarily incurred by the defendant because of the plaintiff's failure or omission which constituted the basis of the objection to the right to take." (C.C.P. 1260.120(c)(2).) (See Lincoln v. Barringer (2002) 102 C.A.4th 1211, 1233, 126 C.R.2d 178 [trial court erred in entering unconditional dismissal of condemnation proceeding after finding that plaintiff's second resolution of necessity, for remainder of defendant's property, failed because remainder did not constitute uneconomical remnant under C.C.P. 1240.410; plaintiff should have been allowed to amend complaint to refer to initial resolution of necessity for partial take as permitted by C.C.P. 1260.120].)

"This authority does not permit the court to create a right to acquire where none exists, but it does authorize the court to grant leave to the plaintiff to amend pleadings or take other corrective action that is just in light of all of the circumstances of the case. The court may frame its order in whatever manner may be desirable. ... For example, if the resolution of necessity was not properly adopted, the court may, where appropriate, order that such a resolution be properly adopted within such time as is specified by the court and that, if a proper resolution has not been adopted within the time specified, the proceeding is dismissed. The plaintiff is not required to comply with an order made under paragraph (2), but a failure to comply results in a dismissal of the proceeding as to that property which the court has determined the plaintiff lacks the right to acquire." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(5) Separate Assessment of Elements. As far as practicable, the trier of fact must assess separately each of the following:

(a) Compensation for property taken, as required by C.C.P. 1263.310 et seq. (infra, §1229). (C.C.P. 1260.230(a).)

(b) Where the property is part of a larger parcel, the amount of damage, if any, to the remainder, as required by C.C.P. 1263.410 et seq. (infra, §1236), and the amount of benefit, if any, to the remainder, as required by C.C.P. 1263.410 et seq. (infra, §1243). (C.C.P. 1260.230(b).)

(c) Compensation for the loss of goodwill, if any, as required by C.C.P. 1263.510 et seq. (infra, §1245). (C.C.P. 1260.230(c).) (See BAJI, No. 11.96.) (On right of party to request special interrogatories and obtain special findings, see Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(6) Compensation for Deceased and Unknown Persons. Where unknown or deceased defendants have been joined but have not appeared personally or by a personal representative (see C.C.P. 1250.220, supra, §1205):

(a) The court must determine (1) the extent of their interests in the property taken, or in the remainder if the property is part of a larger parcel; and (2) the compensation to be awarded for those interests. (C.C.P. 1260.240.)

(b) "The court may determine the extent and value of the interests of all such defendants in the aggregate without apportionment between the respective defendants." (C.C.P. 1260.240.)

(c) In the case of deceased persons, the court must determine only the extent and value of the decedent's interest, not those of the separate interests of the heirs and devisees. (C.C.P. 1260.240.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Prior Hearing and Special Setting. C.R.C., Rule 375 is now C.R.C., Rule 3.1335.

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Trial, §73.

112 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

6. Trial.

c. Determining Compensation.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1221

[§ 1221] In General.

(1) Pretrial Motion. Either party may move the court for a ruling on a disputed legal issue affecting the determination of compensation. The motion must be made at least 60 days before trial, and must be heard by the judge assigned for trial of the case. (C.C.P. 1260.040(a); see Law Rev. Com. Comment [C.C.P. 1260.040 does not preclude use of other procedures for same purpose].) The court may postpone the date of final offers and demands, and the trial date, if necessary for the parties to engage in further proceedings in response to its ruling on the motion. (C.C.P. 1260.040(b).)

(2) Order of Proof. The defendant must present his or her "evidence on the issue of compensation first and shall commence and conclude the argument." (C.C.P. 1260.210(a).) (See Model Eminent Domain Code, §903, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 83.)

(3) No Burden of Proof. "Except as otherwise provided by statute, neither the plaintiff nor the defendant has the burden of proof on the issue of compensation." (C.C.P. 1260.210(b).) The Law Revision Commission Comment explains the reason for this law: "Assignment of the burden of proof in the context of an eminent domain proceeding is not appropriate. The trier of fact generally is presented with conflicting opinions of value and supporting data and is required to fix value based on the weight it gives to the opinions and supporting data. ... Absent the production of evidence by one party, the trier of fact will determine compensation solely from the other party's evidence, but neither party should be made to appear to bear some greater burden of persuasion than the other." (See Redevelopment Agency of Pomona v. Thrifty Oil Co. (1992) 4 C.A.4th 469, 475, 5 C.R.2d 687, infra, §1246 [neither party has burden of proof with regard to valuation of good will, but landowner has burden of proof of entitlement to good will]; BAJI, No. 11.98; CACI, No. 3514; Model Eminent Domain Code, §904, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 84.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.228.1

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Pretrial Motion. See Dina v. People (2007) 151 C.A.4th 1029, 1043, 60 C.R.3d 559 [in inverse condemnation action, trial court did not err in allowing defendant to move for ruling on liability under C.C.P. 1260.040; defendant's liability was legal issue affecting determination of compensation].

(3) No Burden of Proof. See Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern Calif. v. Campus Crusade for Christ (2007) 41 C.4th 954, 969, 62 C.R.3d 623, 161 P.3d 1175, Supp., infra, §1231 [in eminent domain action, property owner's burden of proof is one of production, not persuasion].

113 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

6. Trial.

c. Determining Compensation.

2. Valuation of Divided Interests.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1222

[§ 1222] Valuation of Divided Interests.

Where there are divided interests in the property acquired, C.C.P. 1260.220 provides for a two-stage proceeding, at the plaintiff's election:

(1) Ordinarily, the value of each interest and the injury, if any, to the remainder of the interest must be separately assessed and compensation awarded for it. (C.C.P. 1260.220(a).)

(2) "The plaintiff may require that the amount of compensation be first determined as between plaintiff and all defendants claiming an interest in the property. Thereafter, in the same proceeding, the trier of fact shall determine the respective rights of the defendants in and to the amount of compensation awarded and shall apportion the award accordingly." However, this provision does not limit "the right of a defendant to present during the first stage of the proceeding evidence of the value of, or injury to, the property or the defendant's interest in the property; and the right of a defendant to present evidence during the second stage of the proceeding is not affected by the failure to exercise the right to present evidence during the first stage of the proceeding." (C.C.P. 1260.220(b).) (See 94 A.L.R.3d 696 [bifurcated trial].)

Although the valuation issue should be severed from the apportionment issue, the jury should ordinarily try both, and defendants with conflicting interests in the award may also ordinarily insist on the same jury. (Redevelopment Agency of Fresno v. Penzner (1970) 8 C.A.3d 417, 422, 87 C.R. 183 [holding, however, that trial of apportionment issue by judge after discharge of jury was proper in absence of objection]; see People v. Gianni (1972) 29 C.A.3d 151, 156, 105 C.R. 248 [jury trial erroneously denied on theory that lessee had no interest at time of taking; right to jury trial in condemnation proceedings goes only to amount of compensation, but this includes apportionment stage of bifurcated trial].)

In People v. Lynbar (1967) 253 C.A.2d 870, 877, 62 C.R. 320, decided under a predecessor statute, the state brought a proceeding to condemn a parcel of land for freeway purposes. Defendant condemnee's witnesses testified that they arrived at its market value by including as an element a 20-year lease for a service station to Tidewater Oil Company, at a favorable rent, with nearly 18 years left to run. The state appealed from the judgment, contending that inclusion of that element was improper. Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) Statute is procedural. The state contended that the statute adopts the majority "undivided fee rule," that fair market value must be determined as if the property were held in single ownership. Defendant contended that it adopts the minority "aggregate of interests rule." Neither is correct. It is purely a procedural statute, dividing this type of condemnation trial into two parts; it expedites the trial and prevents the total sum being pyramided by multiple jury verdicts arrived at independently, or by expert witnesses accomplishing the same end by separate valuations. (253 C.A.2d 878.)

(b) Principles of valuation. The whole is the total of what the involuntary sellers (condemnees) have to sell, not the undivided fee that the condemnor is seeking to acquire. The statute requires--in the first phase of trial--a valuation of the fee as a whole, but not a valuation of the fee in an undivided state. (253 C.A.2d 879.) In determining market value, the property, with all compensable attributes, must be valued as the condemnor finds it, which includes the Tidewater lease. This value leasehold is one of the things that a buyer and seller would consider in fixing a price. (253 C.A.2d 881.) Hence, to omit the lease in determining just compensation would violate the constitutional mandate. (253 C.A.2d 883.)

(c) Rent in excess of rental value. The state contended that the lessee was paying more than the rental value, and that the condemnor should not suffer for that mistake. But the issue was the fair market value of the parcel taken in the condition in which it was taken, with the long term lease and high rent; a witness could properly use actual rent in lieu of fair rental value (Ev.C. 817, 812). (253 C.A.2d 883.) This is not unfair. Rent above fair rental value will enhance the fair market value; hence, the condemnor should pay more as just compensation. If the actual rent were less than the fair rental value, the fair market value of the land would be reduced, and the condemnor would pay less. "In either event the condemnor pays for what it takes in the condition the parcel was on the date of valuation or condition." (253 C.A.2d 884.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

114 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

a. Right to Compensation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1223

[§ 1223] Right to Compensation.

(1) In General. "The owner of property acquired by eminent domain is entitled to compensation" as provided in C.C.P. 1263.110 et seq. (C.C.P. 1263.110(a).) (See BAJI, Nos. 11.70, 11.71; CACI, No. 3500.) However, these statutes do not affect the rights the owner of property acquired by eminent domain may have under other statutes. (C.C.P. 1263.010(b).) Thus, C.C.P. 1263.110 et seq. do not limit the compensation that may be required by Cal. Const., Art. I, §19 (see supra, §1132). They cover only eminent domain proceedings, leaving the law of inverse condemnation (see supra, §1143) for judicial development. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

"[W]here two or more statutes provide compensation for the same loss, the person entitled to compensation may be paid only once for that loss." (C.C.P. 1263.010(b).) "Thus, for example, a person who suffers a business loss would not be entitled to compensation for that loss under both" C.C.P. 1263.510 (loss of goodwill) and Govt.C. 7262(c) (relocation or in-lieu payment). "This prohibition on double recovery in no way limits compensation under different statutes for separate and distinct losses such as the fair market value of property taken, injury to the remainder, moving expense, court costs, and the like." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(2) Accrual of Right to Compensation. Subject to statutory or judicially declared exceptions, the right to compensation is "deemed to have accrued at the date of filing the complaint." (C.C.P. 1263.020; see Model Eminent Domain Code, §1001, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 88.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

115 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

b. Date of Valuation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1224

[§ 1224] Date of Valuation.

(1) Fixed by Deposit. By making a deposit of probable compensation (see C.C.P. 1255.010 et seq., supra, §1212 et seq.), the plaintiff establishes the valuation date as the time of deposit, unless an earlier date is applicable. (C.C.P. 1263.110(a).) However, if the court orders the amount increased (see supra, §1213) and the additional amount is not deposited, the deposit does not have this effect. (C.C.P. 1263.110(b).) (See BAJI, No. 11.72; CACI, No. 3501; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1003, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 92.)

(2) Fixed by Trial. (a) If the issue of compensation is brought to trial within 1 year after commencement of the proceeding, the date of commencement is the date of valuation. (C.C.P. 1263.120.) (b) If this issue is not brought to trial within 1 year, the date of commencement of the trial is ordinarily the date of valuation; but if the delay is caused by the defendant, the date of commencement of the proceeding governs. (C.C.P. 1263.130.)

Although C.C.P. 1263.120 provides for valuation of property taken on the date of commencement of the action if brought to trial within 1 year, the constitutional requirement of "just compensation" requires the condemnor to pay fair market value. Thus, a trial court should not be constrained to apply C.C.P. 1263.120 when it would be unfair to do so. (Saratoga Fire Protection Dist. v. Hackett (2002) 97 C.A.4th 895, 903, 905, 118 C.R.2d 696 [trial court erred in excluding evidence that property had increased in value by more than one-third during period between commencement of action and time of trial].)

(3) Fixed by New Trial. "[I]f a new trial is ordered by the trial or appellate court and the new trial is not commenced within one year after the commencement of the proceeding, the date of valuation is the date of the commencement of such new trial unless, in the interest of justice, the court ordering the new trial orders a different date of valuation." (C.C.P. 1263.140.) "One of the factors the court might consider in selecting an alternate valuation date under this section is any postjudgment deposit made by the plaintiff." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(4) Fixed by Mistrial. (a) If the retrial is commenced within 1 year after commencement of the proceeding, C.C.P. 1263.120 applies, and the date of commencement of the proceeding governs. (b) If the retrial is not commenced within 1 year after commencement of the proceeding, the date of commencement of the retrial governs. (C.C.P. 1263.150.) This, however, is subject to the power of the court declaring the mistrial to order a different date of valuation "in the interest of justice." (C.C.P. 1263.150.) "Factors the court might consider in determining to grant a date of valuation other than that specified in this section include misconduct of a party and any deposits made by the plaintiff." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(5) Effect of Valuation Date on Risk of Loss. In Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco v. Maxwell (1961) 193 C.A.2d 414, 14 C.R. 170, the action was brought to condemn defendant's three buildings, and summons issued in June, which fixed the valuation date under the predecessor statute. In August, a fire seriously damaged one building, and defendant (according to plaintiff's offer of proof) received $ 17,500 from her insurer. Nevertheless, under the judge's instructions, the jury awarded defendant $ 60,000 as the full market value, without deduction for the damage or the insurance collected. Held, reversed.

(a) Normally, the risk of loss would be on defendant owner, who had both title and possession at the time of destruction. (See 13 Summary (10th), Equity, §175.)

(b) Defendant argued that the predecessor statute, fixing the valuation date as the time of summons, necessarily transferred the risk of loss as of that date to the condemning plaintiff. But the court pointed out that the purpose of the statute was to protect against fluctuations in market value, not to determine the risk of loss. (193 C.A.2d 418.) Hence, the time of valuation is the date of summons, but the property to be valued is the "property to be actually taken," i.e., the property in its condition following the damage. (193 C.A.2d 419.) (See 89 A.L.R.2d 1076 [who bears risk of loss]; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1009, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 100 [risk of loss on defendant until (1) right to use property is substantially limited, (2) plaintiff is authorized to take possession, or (3) title is transferred].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Fixed by Deposit. See Mt. San Jacinto Community College Dist. v. Superior Court (2007) 40 C.4th 648, 666, 54 C.R.3d 752, 151 P.3d 1166 [when deposit of probable compensation is properly made, value of property on date of deposit is fair amount to award owner for taking]; Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Mesdaq (2007) 154 C.A.4th 1111, 1123, 65 C.R.3d 372 [following Mt. San Jacinto Community College Dist.; although property values had risen since date of deposit and there had been delays in concluding proceedings, trial court erred in setting date of trial as valuation date]; Eastern Mun. Water Dist. v. Superior Court (2007) 157 C.A.4th 1245, 1251, 69 C.R.3d 314 [following Mt. San Jacinto Community College Dist.; fact that initial deposit may have been inadequate did not alter valuation date].

116 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

c. Compensation for Improvements to Realty.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1225

[§ 1225] In General.

(1) Improvements Must Be Valued. "Except as otherwise provided by statute, all improvements pertaining to the realty shall be taken into account in determining compensation." (C.C.P. 1263.210(a).) Thus, the improvements are taken and paid for by the condemnor. If they enhance the value over its unimproved condition, the property receives the enhanced value; if they decrease its value, the property suffers the decreased value. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See BAJI, No. 11.72.3; CACI, No. 3506.)

Where an improvement is located partially on property taken and partially on property not taken, the court may, on a party's motion "and a determination that justice so requires, direct the plaintiff to acquire the entire improvement, including the part located on property not taken, together with an easement or other interest reasonably necessary for the demolition, removal, or relocation of the improvement." (C.C.P. 1263.270; see Model Eminent Domain Code, §1011, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 102.)

A finding of compensable "interim use," i.e., the use of improvements until the property is ready for its highest and best use, "will ordinarily require concrete evidence of circumstances that could reasonably cause a buyer of the particular property at issue to view the presence of incompatible improvements as a net economic benefit rather than a net cost." (Emeryville Redevelopment Agency v. Harcross Pigments (2002) 101 C.A.4th 1083, 1110, 1112, 125 C.R.2d 12, infra, §1234 [adopting principle of "consistent use," under which property and improvements must be valued based on same use].)

(2) What Are Improvements Pertaining to Realty. The obvious meaning of buildings, structures, and fixtures is augmented by a special definition. Improvements pertaining to the realty include "machinery or equipment installed for use on property taken by eminent domain, or on the remainder if such property is part of a larger parcel, that cannot be removed without a substantial economic loss or without substantial damage to the property on which it is installed, regardless of the method of installation." (C.C.P. 1263.205(a).)

"In determining whether particular property can be removed 'without a substantial economic loss' within the meaning of this section, the value of the property in place considered as a part of the realty should be compared with its value if it were removed and sold." (C.C.P. 1263.205(b).) (See Los Angeles v. Sabatasso (1970) 3 C.A.3d 973, 981, 83 C.R. 898 [compensation under predecessor statute for trade fixtures on remainder where business could not be continued after taking]; Concrete Service Co. v. California (1972) 29 C.A.3d 664, 667, 105 C.R. 721 [trade fixtures]; Commerce v. National Starch & Chemical Corp. (1981) 118 C.A.3d 1, 13, 173 C.R. 176 [value of fixtures]; San Diego v. Cabrillo Lanes (1992) 10 C.A.4th 576, 582, 12 C.R.2d 613 [discussing statute and Legislative Comment]; BAJI, No. 11.72.5; CACI, No. 3507; 73 A.L.R.3d 1122 [condemnation of billboard or other advertising sign].)

Natural growths are not compensable as improvements, but planted trees and shrubs are proper items to be considered. (People v. Los Angeles (1969) 273 C.A.2d 46, 58, 77 C.R. 875.)

(3) Effect of Leasehold Interest. Difficult problems arise where property is leased and the lessee installs the fixtures. In Redevelopment Agency of Stockton v. Diamond Properties (1969) 271 C.A.2d 315, 76 C.R. 269, defendant, lessee of a meat processing plant, had equipment that the lease permitted defendant to remove on termination. The lease expired and defendant continued to occupy under a month-to-month tenancy. In March, 1964, plaintiff filed a condemnation suit. Subsequently plaintiff agreed with the owner that, if the owner would terminate defendant's lease, plaintiff would purchase the property at an agreed price. The owner gave defendant notice of termination, and in May, 1966, gave plaintiff a grant deed, and the action was dismissed as to the owner. Defendant lessee claimed compensation for its equipment. Held, it was entitled to compensation.

(a) Where the lessee's property consists of fixtures, the lessee is a condemnee as to them and is entitled to compensation as against the condemnor, even though, as between lessor and lessee, the lessee has a right or a duty to remove them. (271 C.A.2d 319.)

(b) The trial judge denied compensation on the theory that because defendant's tenancy was terminated, there was no interference with its right of possession. Defendant's claim, however, was not of a possessory interest, but rather of an interest in the realty itself. If the lessor had owned the equipment, the lessor would have been entitled to its value; and where a tenant owns property meeting the test of the statute, the tenant has a compensable interest in it separate and apart from his or her possessory rights. (271 C.A.2d 319.)

(c) The condemnor's acquisition of the lessor's interest after service of summons did not change its relationship to defendant from that of condemnor to landlord with a right to require the tenant to remove the equipment. (271 C.A.2d 321.) (See Concrete Service Co. v. California (1969) 274 C.A.2d 142, 147, 78 C.R. 923 [purchase of land from lessor does not defeat month-to-month lessee's rights]; California v. Texaco (1972) 25 C.A.3d 514, 518, 101 C.R. 923 [oil pipe licensee is entitled to compensation]; Concrete Service Co. v. California (1972) 29 C.A.3d 664, 668, 105 C.R. 721 [month-to-month lessee is not limited to removal value]; Lanning v. Monterey (1986) 181 C.A.3d 352, 355, 226 C.R. 258 [lessee is entitled to compensation for improvements where sale of property to city was "substantial equivalent" of taking].) (On apportionment under lease, see infra, §1250.)

The rule in Diamond Properties has been codified. The requirement of valuation and payment for improvements by the condemnor applies even though a tenant, as against the owner, has the right to remove the improvements at the expiration of his or her term. (C.C.P. 1263.210(b).)

Diamond Properties, Concrete Service Co., and Lanning, were distinguished in Langer v. Redevelopment Agency of Santa Cruz (1999) 71 C.A.4th 998, 1003, 84 C.R.2d 19. There was no substantial equivalent of condemnation where there was no notice or threat of condemnation or evidence that the redevelopment agency intended to condemn properties that were in a group of parcels already in the developer's control. (71 C.A.4th 1006.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) What Are Improvements Pertaining to Realty. See Escondido Union School Dist. v. Casa Suen os De Oro (2005) 129 C.A.4th 944, 965, 972, 29 C.R.3d 89, citing the text [manufactured homes that were affixed to foundations on valuation date were improvements pertaining to realty under C.C.P. 1263.205 and 1263.210; fact that owner had not yet obtained certificate of occupancy under Health & Saf.C. 18551 did not affect compensability].

117 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

c. Compensation for Improvements to Realty.

2. Improvements Removed or Destroyed.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1226

[§ 1226] Improvements Removed or Destroyed.

(1) When Improvements Are Not Valued. The value of improvements pertaining to realty is not taken into account if the improvements are removed or destroyed "before the earliest of the following times": (a) When the plaintiff takes title. (b) When the plaintiff takes possession. (c) If the defendant moves in compliance with an order of possession, the date specified in the order. However, in this last situation, the defendant may shift the risk of loss to the plaintiff by giving the plaintiff 24 hours' written notice that he or she has moved prior to the specified date. (C.C.P. 1263.230(a).) (See San Diego v. Cabrillo Lanes (1992) 10 C.A.4th 576, 581, 12 C.R.2d 613 [discussing statute]; BAJI, No. 11.72.7.)

Even after the risk of loss shifts to the plaintiff under these provisions, compensation is not awarded for improvements removed or destroyed by the defendant. (C.C.P. 1263.230(b).)

(2) Owner's Election To Remove. C.C.P. 1263.260 permits the owner to remove improvements, thereby converting them into personal property and receiving moving and relocation costs under Govt.C. 7262 (infra, §1272). In that event, no compensation is awarded for the removed property. (See Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

The following procedure is specified: (a) The owner serves a written notice of election on the plaintiff within 60 days after service of summons. (b) If the plaintiff fails to serve written notice of refusal within 30 days thereafter, the owner may remove the improvements. (C.C.P. 1263.260.)

(3) Removal Causing Damage. Where removal or destruction damages the remaining property, a reduction in the value of the property is taken into account in determining compensation. (C.C.P. 1263.230(b).) However, where the "removal will cause damage to the structure in which the improvements are located, the defendant shall cause no more damage to the structure than is reasonably necessary in removing the improvements, and the structure shall be valued as if the removal had caused no damage to the structure." (C.C.P. 1263.260; see BAJI, No. 11.72.7.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

118 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

c. Compensation for Improvements to Realty.

3. Improvements Made After Summons Is Served.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1227

[§ 1227] Improvements Made After Summons Is Served.

If the owner, after being served with summons, voluntarily makes improvements, they ordinarily will not be taken into account in determining compensation. (C.C.P. 1263.240.) (See BAJI, No. 11.72.9; 98 A.L.R.3d 504 [improvements made with knowledge of impending condemnation].) There are, however, several exceptions to this rule:

(1) Where the improvement is one required to be made by a public utility to its utility system. (C.C.P. 1263.240(a); see supra, §1224.)

(2) Where the improvement is made with plaintiff's written consent. (C.C.P. 1263.240(b).) This permits the parties to reach a reasonable solution, and makes clear the authority of the condemnor to enter into the agreement. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(3) Where the improvement is authorized by the court after a noticed hearing and a finding that "the hardship to the defendant of not permitting the improvement outweighs the hardship to the plaintiff of permitting the improvement." (C.C.P. 1263.240(c).) This provision gives the defendant the opportunity to make improvements in good faith and not to enhance the amount of compensation; e.g., "where an improvement is near completion, the date of public use of the property is distant, and the additional work will permit profitable use of the property during the period prior to the time it is actually taken for public use." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) However the court may, at the time it makes an order "authorizing the improvement to be made, limit the extent to which the improvement shall be taken into account in determining compensation." (C.C.P. 1263.240(c).) (See Mt. San Jacinto Community College Dist. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 C.A.4th 98, 105, 11 C.R.3d 465 [taking occurred when summons was filed, and landowner who made improvements after that time without availing itself of procedure set out in C.C.P. 1263.240 could not recover costs of improvements in inverse condemnation action].)

If improvements are necessary to protect the public, even though they are not within one of the foregoing exceptions and are consequently not valued, their cost may be recovered as a separate item of compensation under C.C.P. 1263.620. (See infra, §1249.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Escondido Union School Dist. v. Casa Suen os De Oro (2005) 129 C.A.4th 944, 970, 29 C.R.3d 89, citing the text [in absence of bad faith, cutoff date for work on compensable improvement is date owner is served with complaint and summons, and not earlier time when owner might learn of impending condemnation proceedings].

119 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

d. Compensation for Crops.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1228

[§ 1228] Compensation for Crops.

(1) When Compensation Is Awarded. The defendant is entitled to harvest and market crops planted either before or after service of summons, and to realize the profit from them, up to the time of actual taking of the property. "If the plaintiff takes possession of the property at a time that prevents the defendant from harvesting and marketing the crops, the fair market value of the crops in place at the date the plaintiff is authorized to take possession of the property shall be included in the compensation awarded for the property taken." (C.C.P. 1263.250(a); see 11 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 555.)

(2) How Planting Can Be Prevented. The plaintiff may obtain a court order precluding the defendant from planting crops after service of summons. In that event, "the compensation awarded for the property taken shall include an amount sufficient to compensate for loss caused by the limitation on the defendant's right to use the property." (C.C.P. 1263.250(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

120 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

e. Measure of Compensation for Property Taken.

1. Fair Market Value.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1229

[§ 1229] In General.

The measure of compensation for property taken is its "fair market value." (C.C.P. 1263.310; see McMahan's of Santa Monica v. Santa Monica (1983) 146 C.A.3d 683, 700, 194 C.R. 582 [wholesale value of commercial inventory]; Smith v. Los Angeles (1989) 214 C.A.3d 266, 292, 262 C.R. 754 [where trustee cancelled $ 110,000 indebtedness on home destroyed in landslide, damages were properly reduced by that amount; collateral source rule (6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1631 et seq.) was not applicable]; BAJI, Nos. 11.73 [fair market value defined], 11.75 [value of use to parties is not test]; CACI, No. 3501; 107 Harv. L. Rev. 686 [discussion of nonmarket value losses]; 60 Am.Jur. Trials 447 [landowner's evidence of market value in eminent domain proceeding]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §271 et seq.; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1004(a), 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 94 [fair market value defined]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, Chap. 4.)

This rule is consistent with prior case law holding that, where the fee is taken, the measure of damages is the market value of the property. (See Redevelopment Agency of Long Beach v. First Christian Church (1983) 140 C.A.3d 690, 189 C.R. 749 [church property].) In Daly City v. Smith (1952) 110 C.A.2d 524, 243 P.2d 46, the court explained "fair market value" as follows: "In a condemnation proceeding the measure of damages is the market value of the parcel taken, plus the depreciation in the market value of the area retained, if such depreciation occurs. Market value is the price that would be paid by a willing purchaser from a willing seller purchasing with a full knowledge of all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably adapted. It is hornbook law that it is market value that is involved, and not the value to the owner or to the condemner. For that reason it is generally held that value in terms of money for a particular use is not admissible in such cases." (110 C.A.2d 531.)

In Kimball Laundry Co. v. United States (1949) 338 U.S. 1, 69 S.Ct. 1434, 93 L.Ed. 1765, the Court said: "As opposed to such personal and variant standards as value to the particular owner whose property has been taken, this transferable value has an external validity which makes it a fair measure of the public obligation to compensate the loss. ... [L]oss to the owner of nontransferable values deriving from his unique need for property, or idiosyncratic attachment to it, like loss due to an exercise of the police power is properly treated as part of the burden of common citizenship. ... Because gain to the taker, on the other hand, may be wholly unrelated to the deprivation imposed upon the owner, it must also be rejected as a measure." (69 S.Ct. 1437, 93 L.Ed. 1772.)

In United States v. Petty Motor Co. (1946) 327 U.S. 372, 66 S.Ct. 596, 599, 90 L.Ed. 729, 734, the Court made it clear that just compensation in federal condemnation proceedings "is not the value to the owner for his particular purposes or to the condemnor for some special use," and that "evidence of loss of profits, damage to good will, the expense of relocation and other consequential losses" is rejected.

Neither "retention value" in anticipation of a price rise, nor "scarcity profit" which could be realized from a commodity in short supply due to wartime restrictions is considered; i.e., the normal test of market value applies even though a much higher price could be obtained in a free market. (United States v. Cors (1949) 337 U.S. 325, 69 S.Ct. 1086, 1091, 93 L.Ed. 1392, 1399; United States v. Commodities Trading Corp. (1950) 339 U.S. 121, 70 S.Ct. 547, 550, 94 L.Ed. 707, 713 [government requisitioned pepper; compensation limited to O.P.A. ceiling price].)

In United States v. 564.54 Acres of Land (1979) 441 U.S. 506, 99 S.Ct. 1854, 60 L.Ed.2d 435, the federal Government brought an action to condemn three nonprofit summer camps of respondent church organization, for a public recreational project. The Government offered $ 485,400 as the fair market value; respondent demanded $ 5.8 million as replacement cost, on the ground that new facilities would be subject to financially burdensome regulations from which existing facilities were exempt under grandfather provisions. Held, the fair market value standard applied.

(a) Just compensation under the Fifth Amendment has been considered to require indemnity of the landowner, and this loss is generally measured by the market value of the land. (99 S.Ct. 1857, 60 L.Ed.2d 441.) An exception has been recognized where application of the standard would be impracticable, e.g., where the property is infrequently traded. But that is not the case here; the evidence established a market for these camps. (99 S.Ct. 1858, 60 L.Ed.2d 442.)

(b) Another exception is recognized where the award would impermissibly deviate from the indemnity principle; but that is not the case here. Frequently, property is uniquely adapted to the owner's use, but nontransferable values arising from the owner's unique need are not compensable. To treat respondent differently from private homeowners would amount to a government subsidy for nonprofit organizations. (99 S.Ct. 1859, 60 L.Ed.2d 443.)

(c) It is likewise irrelevant that respondent's camps may have been reasonably necessary to the public welfare. Respondent is under no legal or factual obligation to replace them; it is free to use its resources to serve its own institutional objectives. Hence, awarding replacement costs on the theory that respondent would continue to operate the camps for a public purpose would provide a windfall if substitute facilities were never acquired, or, if acquired, were later sold or converted to another use. (99 S.Ct. 1859, 60 L.Ed.2d 443.) (See 92 Harv. L. Rev. 514.)

In United States v. 50 Acres of Land (1984) 469 U.S. 24, 105 S.Ct. 451, 83 L.Ed.2d 376, the federal Government acquired a municipal landfill for a flood control project. Held, where there was an ascertainable market value, that value, not the cost of a substitute facility, was the proper measure of just compensation, even though defendant municipality was obligated to provide replacement facilities. (105 S.Ct. 457, 83 L.Ed.2d 385.) (See 13 Ecology L. Q. 673; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1004(b)(c), 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 94 [conditions under which fair market value is deemed to be cost of functional replacement of property of public or nonprofit entity].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 59 Stanf. L. Rev. 871 [Taking Compensation Private]; 41 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 239 [measure of just compensation].

121 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

e. Measure of Compensation for Property Taken.

1. Fair Market Value.

bb. Determining Market Value.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1230

[§ 1230] Determining Market Value.

(1) In General. In People v. Ocean Shore R. (1948) 32 C.2d 406, 196 P.2d 570, the court identified the following elements to be considered in determining market value: (a) All uses to which the property is adapted or available. (b) The highest and most profitable use to which the property might be put "in the reasonably near future," to the extent that this probability affects the market value. In other words, the highest use is not a specific measure of value, but a factor in fixing market value. (32 C.2d 425.) (See Sacramento Southern R. Co. v. Heilbron (1909) 156 C. 408, 412, 104 P. 979; People v. Silveira (1965) 236 C.A.2d 604, 611, 46 C.R. 260 [adaptability to subdivision purposes]; Orange County Flood Control Dist. v. Sunny Crest Dairy (1978) 77 C.A.3d 742, 754, 143 C.R. 803; Porterville v. Young (1987) 195 C.A.3d 1260, 1269, 241 C.R. 349 [highest use agricultural, not commercial, where commercial development would require dedication of parcel being condemned]; Ripon v. Sweetin (2002) 100 C.A.4th 887, 899, 122 C.R.2d 802 ["highest and best use," which is simply part of market value, relates to use to which property might be put in reasonably near future; evidence of city's allegedly unreasonable precondemnation activity is not relevant to show "highest and best use" of property].)

In People v. Los Angeles (1963) 220 C.A.2d 345, 33 C.R. 797, the state sued to condemn park property of defendant cities for freeway purposes. The trial judge restricted the experts' opinions to the market value of property used for park purposes. Held, this was error. There is no market value of land that can only be held as a public park and cannot be sold. The correct question is what private buyers would be willing to pay if the land were available for all uses to which it is naturally adapted. (220 C.A.2d 352.)

C.C.P. 1263.320 defines "market value" in accordance with the case law:

(a) Where There Is a Market. "The fair market value of the property taken is the highest price on the date of valuation that would be agreed to by a seller, being willing to sell but under no particular or urgent necessity for so doing, nor obliged to sell, and a buyer, being ready, willing, and able to buy but under no particular necessity for so doing, each dealing with the other with full knowledge of all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably adaptable and available." (C.C.P. 1263.320(a).) (See San Diego County Water Authority v. Mireiter (1993) 18 C.A.4th 1808, 23 C.R.2d 455, infra, §1231; Ventura County Flood Control Dist. v. Campbell (1999) 71 C.A.4th 211, 221, 83 C.R.2d 725 [aggregate was integral part of land and bids for aggregate to be extracted to provide basin for flood control project established existing market for aggregate; following People v. Andresen (1987) 193 C.A.3d 1144, 238 C.R. 826, infra, §1234]; BAJI, No. 11.74 [highest and best use]; CACI, Nos. 3502 [same], 3503 [change in zoning or land use restriction].)

(b) Where There Is No Relevant Market. "The fair market value of property taken for which there is no relevant, comparable market is its value on the date of valuation as determined by any method of valuation that is just and equitable." (C.C.P. 1263.320(b).)

In San Diego v. Rancho Vista Del Mar (1993) 16 C.A.4th 1046, 20 C.R.2d 675, the primary issue was "whether a property owner whose land is condemned for a jail may value his property based on a highest and best use as a private detention facility." In rejecting this position, the court first observed that "there are some special purpose properties such as schools, churches, cemeteries, parks and utilities for which there is no relevant market and therefore these properties may be valued on any basis which is 'just and equitable.'" (16 C.A.4th 1060, citing the Law Rev. Com. Comment to C.C.P. 1263.320(b).) However, not only was the proposed use as a detention facility the same as the county's proposed use of the land, it was also a use that is uniquely governmental; i.e., only the government provides a market for detention facilities. "Whether a detention facility is directly constructed by the government and operated by government employees or is indirectly constructed and operated by the government through a lease payment and a contract with a private company to operate the facility, a detention facility remains a governmental function with no private sector equivalent." (16 C.A.4th 1064.)

(2) Methods of Valuation. Methods of proving market value are specified in the Evidence Code. (See Ev.C. 810 et seq.; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §98 et seq.) "A just and equitable method of determining the value of nonprofit, special use property for which there is no relevant, comparable market" is set forth in Ev.C. 824, subject to the exceptions set forth in Ev.C. 824(c). (C.C.P. 1263.321.)

In Contra Costa Water Dist. v. Bar-C Properties (1992) 5 C.A.4th 652, 657, 7 C.R.2d 91, the court followed prior cases in holding that the "developer's approach," also known as the "economic analysis" or "residual land value" approach, is an improper method for measuring fair market value. Under the developer's approach, the value of undeveloped property is calculated by determining the value of the property if developed, then subtracting the costs of development. The court condemned the method as too speculative and conjectural. (5 C.A.4th 658.) (See People v. Clauser/Wells Partnership (2002) 95 C.A.4th 1066, 1073, 1077, 116 C.R.2d 240 [trial court erred in excluding inventory appraiser's opinion of fair market value of inventory of automobile salvage business that was based on value of inventory as bulk sale, with profit removed; this valuation method was not inconsistent with California law]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §4.64 et seq.)

(3) Commentary. Discussion of this subject has been continuous. (See 68 A.L.R.2d 392 [condemnation of utility plant]; 92 A.L.R.2d 772 [changes in purchasing power of money as affecting compensation]; 9 A.L.R.3d 291 [zoning as factor]; 22 A.L.R.3d 961 [restrictive covenant as factor]; 40 A.L.R.3d 143 [cost of substitute facilities where land already devoted to public use]; 42 A.L.R.3d 1314 [condemnation of cemetery lands]; 51 A.L.R.3d 1050 [condemned property's location near proposed site of building complex as factor]; 35 A.L.R.4th 1263 [measure and elements of compensation for taking public transit system]; 29 A.L.R.5th 36 [measure of damages or compensation in eminent domain as affected by premises being restricted to particular educational, religious, charitable, or noncommercial use]; 4 Proof of Facts, Eminent Domain, Proof 1; 19 Proof of Facts 3d 613 [proof of highest and best use of property]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §275 et seq.; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, Chap. 4.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Sierra View Local Health Care Dist. v. Sierra View Med. Plaza Associates, LP (2005) 126 C.A.4th 478, 487, 490, 24 C.R.3d 210, citing the text [although value of property to condemner cannot be used to calculate value of property to owner, jury may consider condemner's historical use of building as lessee prior to condemnation]; State

Route 4 Bypass Authority v. Superior Court (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1546, 1550, 1567, 64 C.R.3d 286 [applying doctrine of Porterville v. Young (1987) 195 C.A.3d 1260, 241 C.R. 349, to dedication of strip of agricultural land for highway bypass].Correction: Page 907, last paragraph, should read as follows:(2) Methods of Valuation. Methods of proving market value are specified in the Evidence Code. (See Ev.C. 810 et seq.; 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, §98 et seq.) "A just and equitable method of determining the value of nonprofit, special use property for which there is no relevant, comparable market" is set forth in Ev.C. 824, subject to the exceptions set forth in Ev.C. 824(c). (C.C.P. 1263.321.)

122 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

e. Measure of Compensation for Property Taken.

1. Fair Market Value.

cc. Admissible Matters.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1231

[§ 1231] Admissible Matters.

(1) Future Use Through Zoning Change. "Where there is a reasonable probability that zoning restrictions will be altered in the near future, the jury should consider not only those uses currently permitted, but also other uses to which the property could be devoted in the event of such a change." (People v. Donovan (1962) 57 C.2d 346, 352, 19 C.R. 473, 369 P.2d 1; Regents of Univ. of Calif. v. Morris (1968) 266 C.A.2d 616, 626, 72 C.R. 406; see People v. Arthofer (1966) 245 C.A.2d 454, 466, 54 C.R. 878 [rule stated but landowner's burden to show it was not sustained]; San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 C.A.4th 1013, 1041, 130 C.R.2d 108 [trial court did not err in permitting expert to testify on upzonings of property, from lower to higher density, approved after defendant's property was designated as within path of highway project; it was question of fact for jury to determine whether upzonings would have occurred even without project and whether property also stood chance of being rezoned]; 9 A.L.R.3d 291 [zoning as factor in determining damages]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §294; 40 Proof of Facts 3d 395 [proof that probable zoning change will affect market value in eminent domain proceeding].)

However, the probable conditions that will be imposed on the landowner in the rezoning plan must also be considered. In Fresno v. Cloud (1972) 26 C.A.3d 113, 102 C.R. 874, defendants' land was zoned for residential-agricultural use. Plaintiff city condemned portions of it for street-widening purposes. The trial judge admitted evidence of probable rezoning to a higher use, but excluded evidence of the probable requirement of dedication of streets as a condition to the rezoning. Held, the latter ruling was reversible error. "[I]f the landowners do not develop the remaining parcels beyond their presently permitted R-A zoning uses, the owners will have been paid exactly what the frontage strips are worth. If the remaining parcels are developed to the higher uses allowed by the contemplated zoning changes defendants will have been paid for land that they would have had to dedicate gratuitously to the city in order to gain the higher zoning advantages." (26 C.A.3d 123.)

(2) Future Combination With Other Land. Value may also reflect a special or higher use that could result from combining the land with other parcels, provided there is a reasonable probability of the lands being so combined in the near future. But in estimating that probability, the power of effecting the change by eminent domain must be left out. (United States v. Powelson (1943) 319 U.S. 266, 63 S.Ct. 1047, 1052, 87 L.Ed. 1390, 1397; Santa Clara v. Ogata (1966) 240 C.A.2d 262, 268, 49 C.R. 397 [possibility of combining land with other property]; see 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §303; 8 A.L.R.4th 1202 [assemblage or plottage as factor affecting value].)

(3) Information Discovered After Valuation Date. In San Diego County Water Authority v. Mireiter (1993) 18 C.A.4th 1808, 23 C.R.2d 455, the issue was the propriety of considering "information about the condemned property discovered after the valuation date which tended to reduce the property's value." (18 C.A.4th 1811.) Held, this information must be considered. (18 C.A.4th 1818.)

Under C.C.P. 1263.320 (supra, §1230), "fair market value" on the date of valuation is based on "full knowledge of all the uses and purposes for which the property is reasonably adaptable and available." This language reflects "a legislative intent that all information known at the time of trial be considered to the extent relevant to establish the market value on the date of valuation. Thus, while evidence of a change in the condition of the property after the date of valuation may not be admissible ... , information about the condition of the property on the date of valuation which happens to be discovered after that date must be considered. In effect, the parties are presumed to know all relevant information available at the time of trial, even if it could not reasonably have been discovered until after the date of valuation." (18 C.A.4th 1814.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Future Use Through Zoning Change. There is a two-step process when the trial court is presented with a proffer that there is a highest and best use that is not then permitted by current zoning: First, the trial court must determine whether sufficient evidence has been presented to permit the jury to find that there is a reasonable probability of rezoning to permit the higher use in the near future; then, the jury should "be instructed that it may consider the change in use, provided that it first finds a reasonable probability the property could be rezoned in the near future." (Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern Calif. v. Campus Crusade for Christ (2007) 41 C.4th 954, 970, 62 C.R.3d 623, 161 P.3d 1175 [trial court erred in deciding, prior to trial, whether it was convinced that there was reasonable probability of rezoning].)

123 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

e. Measure of Compensation for Property Taken.

1. Fair Market Value.

dd. Inadmissible Matters.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1232

[§ 1232] Inadmissible Matters.

(1) Owner's Plans for Improvement. The property owner's personal plans for improvement are not admissible, because there can be no compensation for disappointed expectations. (People v. La Macchia (1953) 41 C.2d 738, 751, 264 P.2d 15; People v. Johnson (1962) 203 C.A.2d 712, 717, 22 C.R. 149.) However, evidence of a proposed use may be admitted, not to show the loss to the owner of a particular plan, but to show that the plan was feasible and therefore should be considered in fixing market value. (People v. La Macchia, supra; Daly City v. Smith (1952) 110 C.A.2d 524, 532, 243 P.2d 46; San Bernardino County Flood Control Dist. v. Sweet (1967) 255 C.A.2d 889, 899, 63 C.R. 640; see People v. Tanczos (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1215, 1218, 1220, 50 C.R.2d 70, citing the text [city-approved plans to build three rental units on condemned land was admissible, not to establish market value, but to show one of the uses to which property could be put; exclusion of evidence was prejudicial where state argued that land could accommodate only one additional rental unit]; Stockton v. Albert Brocchini Farms (2001) 92 C.A.4th 193, 199, 111 C.R.2d 662 [trial court properly excluded evidence of income that could have been derived from hypothetical landfill operation; storage capacity of property for landfill purposes is not akin to undeveloped natural resources such as mineral deposits]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §§298, 299.)

(2) Use Prohibited by Zoning Law. The attempt to establish a high market value by showing possible special uses will ordinarily fail if these uses are prohibited by an existing zoning law. But where there is a probability of a change in zoning restrictions, that fact may be considered. (See supra, §1231.)

In Long Beach City High School Dist. of Los Angeles v. Stewart (1947) 30 C.2d 763, 185 P.2d 585, the land was sought for a school in a residential zone. In the condemnation suit, defendant owner attempted to introduce evidence of its value for industrial purposes, although there had been no industrial development in the vicinity. Held, the evidence was properly excluded. "The general rule is that present market value must ordinarily be determined by consideration only of the uses for which the land 'is adapted and for which it is available.' The exception to this general rule is that if the land is not presently available for a particular use by reason of a zoning ordinance or other restriction imposed by law, but the evidence tends to show a 'reasonable probability' of a change 'in the near future' in the zoning ordinance or other restriction, then the effect of such probability upon the minds of purchasers generally may be taken into consideration in fixing present market value." (30 C.2d 768.) (See 9 A.L.R.3d 291 [zoning as factor].)

San Diego v. Rancho Penasquitos Partnership (2003) 105 C.A.4th 1013, 130 C.R.2d 108, upheld the trial court's exclusion of evidence of plaintiff city's zoning restriction precluding the upzoning of property to a higher density or the development of defendant's property until plaintiff's highway project was approved. "[W]here the condemning agency and zoning authority are the same, zoning restrictions on property to be condemned that are enacted to freeze or depress land values of property to be condemned should not be considered in the valuation of that property." (105 C.A.4th 1034.)

(3) Restrictions in Conflict With Resolution of Necessity. In San Diego v. Bressi (1986) 184 C.A.3d 112, 229 C.R. 44, plaintiff county condemned an aviation easement over defendant's property bordering an airport. The resolution of necessity on which the taking was based defined "aircraft" as a "contrivance now known or hereafter invented, designed, or used for navigation or flight in air or space." Plaintiff sought to introduce evidence of future airport use less extensive than the easement. Held, evidence of legislative and administrative restrictions that limit the scope of the taking as defined in the resolution of necessity is inadmissible. (184 C.A.3d 124.) The jury must focus on the probability of the occurrence of particular uses under the aviation easement, not on uses that contradict the easement. Thus, "the county may not offer evidence that an airport accommodating jumbo jets will not be built, but may offer evidence of the number of jumbo jets which may use the airport." (184 C.A.3d 123.)

(4) Other Sale to Condemnor. Evidence of the price or other terms and circumstances of an acquisition of property is inadmissible if the acquisition was for a public use for which the property could have been taken by eminent domain. (Ev.C. 822(a)(1); see 1 Cal. Evidence (4th), Opinion Evidence, Supp., §113.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

124 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

e. Measure of Compensation for Property Taken.

1. Fair Market Value.

ee. Value of Easement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1233

[§ 1233] Value of Easement.

(1) In General. An easement is an interest in real property that, when taken or damaged for public use, entitles the holder to compensation. (Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hufford (1957) 49 C.2d 545, 552, 319 P.2d 1033; Los Angeles v. Wright (1951) 107 C.A.2d 235, 241, 236 P.2d 892.) (See C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §4.64 et seq.)

(2) General Rules for Valuation. Ordinarily, the value of an easement is the diminution in market value of the dominant tenement caused by its loss. (Hemmerling v. Tomlev (1967) 67 C.2d 572, 575, 63 C.R. 1, 432 P.2d 697; Redevelopment Agency of Concord v. Tobriner (1984) 153 C.A.3d 367, 375, 200 C.R. 364; see BAJI, No. 11.78; CACI, No. 3510; 23 A.L.R.4th 631 [fear of power line, gas or oil pipeline, or related structure as element of damages in easement condemnation proceeding]; 22 Am.Jur. Trials 743; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §§342, 343.)

When a second easement is sought on land already burdened, the owner of the servient land is entitled to the difference in value of the land before and after the imposition of the second easement; and, if no substantial difference in value is shown, only nominal damages will be awarded. (Gilroy v. Filice (1963) 221 C.A.2d 259, 266, 34 C.R. 368.)

Redevelopment Agency of Concord v. Tobriner (1989) 215 C.A.3d 1087, 264 C.R. 481, involving condemnation of parking lot easements held by owners of property in a shopping center, held that the fact that defendant owners received no compensation did not in itself constitute a violation of either the Fifth Amendment or Cal. Const., Art. I, §19.

(a) "Where the property interest taken is an easement appurtenant to a dominant estate, the amount of reimbursement to which the condemnee is entitled is determined by the diminution, if any, in the value of the dominant estate to which the easement is appurtenant, caused by the loss of the easement." (215 C.A.3d 1099.)

(b) "Only the change in the value of the condemnee's property is relevant, not the effect of the condemnation on the value of the property taken. If the owner of a condemned appurtenant easement suffers no diminution in the value of his or her dominant tenement from the loss of the easement, the pecuniary damages to be awarded the condemnee must be negligible, no matter how much the removal of the easement affects the value of the servient estate over which it lies."

(215 C.A.3d 1100.)

(3) Distinctions. In theory, the easement is much less valuable than the fee and the compensation should be less. But in practice, a distinction is commonly drawn between two broad classes of cases: (a) Where, as in a railroad easement, it wholly excludes the use of the fee, is permanent in nature, and is unlikely to be abandoned, the effect is substantially the same as a taking of the fee; i.e., the owner's remaining interest is of negligible value. In this case, the only available measure is the value of the fee itself. (b) Where, after being burdened by the easement the fee still retains a substantial value, the measure is the decrease in market value of the land due to the imposition of the easement. This is the case, e.g., where the land contains mineral deposits that the fee-owner reserves; or where the easement is for telephone or power lines, permitting use of the land for all purposes consistent with the easement. (See Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hufford, supra, 49 C.2d 551; People v. Southern Pac. Trans. Co. (1978) 84 C.A.3d 315, 324, 148 C.R. 535 [railroad right of way].)

A further distinction has been noted where a city condemns an easement in railroad land for street purposes. (a) If the easement is across the tracks or right of way, only nominal compensation is given. This is because an incident of the public use to which the railroad dedicates that property is the right of the public to construct necessary street crossings, and the opening of this kind of a street ordinarily does not interfere with the use. (b) But where the easement is over a part of the right of way used, or capable of being used, for commercial purposes, the situation is different. The railway company is entitled to the usual damages based on the value of the property taken and the cost of structural changes made necessary. (Long Beach v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1955) 44 C.2d 599, 603, 283 P.2d 1036 [strip had been rented to lumber company, and poles, etc., had to be relocated].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

125 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

e. Measure of Compensation for Property Taken.

2. Changes Due to Imminence of Project.

aa. Project Enhancement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1234

[§ 1234] Project Enhancement.

(1) In General. When a public improvement by condemnation is being planned, the value of the land within the area of probable taking may rise. There has been much debate over whether this enhancement in value due to the condemnation project itself is a proper element to be considered in valuation of the particular parcel ultimately taken. (See 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §301; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §4.3 et seq.; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1005, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 96.)

(2) Woolstenhulme Case. In Merced Irr. Dist. v. Woolstenhulme (1971) 4 C.3d 478, 93 C.R. 833, 483 P.2d 1, the court disapproved declarations in prior California decisions that seemingly ruled out consideration of project enhancement (4 C.3d 495), and laid down the following rules:

(a) Enhancement of value due to speculation that the property will be part of the project cannot be considered. (4 C.3d 491.)

(b) Enhancement of value due to speculation that the particular property will be taken is also excluded. "If a tribunal were required ... to consider an increase in value arising merely from the anticipation of the tribunal's final award, then logically a speculator would in effect be able to set 'just compensation' through his own purchase price." (4 C.3d 492.)

(c) On the other hand, enhancement of value of property adjacent to or near the proposed project, before it becomes probable that the particular land will be condemned, is a proper element. "Purchasers and sellers regularly, and quite reasonably, take into account the benefit that the land can be expected to reap from an imminent public project, and it would be equally unfair and incompatible with the principles underlying our constitutional just compensation provision to exclude such enhanced value. Although the district chooses to characterize compensation for this project enhanced value as a 'windfall' to the landowner, that epithet might equally be applied to the wide variety of other components of market value for which a landowner might not have directly 'paid,' factors such as zoning laws, public services and general neighborhood appearances which, as previously noted, have long been recognized to be legitimate elements of 'just compensation.' " (4 C.3d 495.)

(d) The federal test of "probability of inclusion" is the standard to be used in determining whether a landowner's expectations were reasonable. When the condemned land was probably within the scope of the project from the time the condemnor was committed to it, the enhanced value should not be included. (4 C.3d 497, footnote 10.)

(e) The trial judge must determine the date of "probable inclusion" to rule on the admissibility of evidence of comparable sales, and to properly instruct the jury on which enhanced value is to be included or excluded. (4 C.3d 498, footnote 12.) (See San Luis Obispo v. Bailey (1971) 4 C.3d 518, 523, 93 C.R. 859, 483 P.2d 27 [companion case]; People v. Reardon (1971) 4 C.3d 507, 511, 93 C.R. 852, 483 P.2d 20 [same].)

In People v. Andresen (1987) 193 C.A.3d 1144, 238 C.R. 826, plaintiff Department of Water Resources maintained a reservoir and dam adjacent to defendant's grazing land, a portion of which had been used as a quarry at the time the dam was originally built. When the dam was seriously damaged in a rockslide, plaintiff condemned the land and used rock in the quarry for repairs. Defendant was awarded $ 3.2 million based on enhancement value and use of the property as a quarry. Held, judgment affirmed.

(a) Conditions for compensable enhancement. Under Woolstenhulme, an owner may be compensated for enhancement value "as long as the expectation is for the property itself not to be taken." (193 C.A.3d 1154.)

(b) Application of conditions in this case. (1) Defendant's property was not part of the dam or reservoir. During the original construction of the dam, the quarry had been only one source of building material. (2) Defendant's reasonable expectation that the quarry would be mined to repair the dam was not equivalent to an expectation that the property would be taken in eminent domain; previous use of the quarry to construct the original dam suggests the opposite. (3) Defendant is entitled to enhancement value until the time he received notice that the property would be condemned. (193 C.A.3d 1156.)

(c) Value of property to condemnor. Woolstenhulme holds that value to the condemnor cannot be used to calculate the value to the property owner. (193 C.A.3d 1156.) But this principle does not preclude consideration of the use of the property as a quarry, because an informed buyer could evaluate the proximity of the quarry to the dam before it became apparent that the property would be condemned. The probability that the quarry would be used for future repairs existed as an enhancement figure before the rockslide. (193 C.A.3d 1157.) "The Woolstenhulme bar to enhancement damages for known future uses does not apply unless there is specific knowledge that the property will be, or probably will be, condemned." (193 C.A.3d 1158.)

(3) Statutory Clarification. The Legislature resolved the uncertainty concerning "project enhancement" by providing that fair market value "shall not include any increase or decrease in the value of the property" attributable to (a) the project for which the property is taken, (b) the proceeding in which the property is taken, or (c) the plaintiff's preliminary actions related to taking the property. (C.C.P. 1263.330; see BAJI, No. 11.77; CACI, No. 3504.) The statute is supplemented by an elaborate Law Revision Commission Comment, citing Woolstenhulme favorably and including the following points:

(a) The intention of the statute is to make the rules on appreciation and depreciation the same.

(b) An increase or decrease in the value of the property taken resulting from the use the condemnor is to make of the property is eliminated.

(c) Changes based on conjecture of a favorable or unfavorable award are not a proper element of compensation.

(d) Changes in the value of the property beyond the scope of the project are not excluded.

(e) If the condemnor's proposed use is the highest and best use, the adaptability of the property for that purpose must be shown. (See Los Angeles v. Decker (1977) 18 C.3d 860, 867, 869, 135 C.R. 647, 558 P.2d 545.)

In Emeryville Redevelopment Agency v. Harcros Pigments (2002) 101 C.A.4th 1083, 125 C.R.2d 12, there was no dispute that the highest and best use for the property was mixed commercial, the same as the proposed project in which it would be included. Thus, the trial court erred in admitting evidence of the project. "[E]vidence of specific project plans is inadmissible in the absence of specific facts or points of contention which demonstrably enhance the probative value of the evidence to a point where it outweighs the inherent potential for prejudice. That test is not satisfied merely because the plans 'illustrate' or 'demonstrate' an undisputed potential use for the property." Otherwise, evidence of project plans could always be admissible on that rationale. (101 C.A.4th 1105.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Woolstenhulme Case. "Although a project may not be set in stone before all regulatory requirements (including a final EIR under CEQA) have been satisfied, the owner is nevertheless entitled to be compensated for the fair market value of the property as of the time it became probable it would be acquired for the project. Under this construction, CEQA does not vitiate the Woolstenhulme exception." (San Diego v. Barratt Amer. (2005) 128 C.A.4th 917, 941, 944, 27 C.R.3d 527 [marketplace had every reason to place premium on plaintiff's property, notwithstanding uncertainty inherent in CEQA, where it was aware for nearly 30 years of Central Alignment of proposed freeway project that would take project considerably south of plaintiff's property, and city continued to support that alignment as superior to Northern Alignment ultimately chosen; thus, project enhancement should be considered until time Northern Alignment was selected].)

126 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

e. Measure of Compensation for Property Taken.

2. Changes Due to Imminence of Project.

bb. Condemnation Blight.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1235

[§ 1235] Condemnation Blight.

(1) In General. Although announcement of a public project often enhances neighboring property values (see supra, §1234), the converse may also be true. "For example, publicity that a refuse dump will be located somewhere within a 10-square-mile area may tend to depress the value of all land within the area because of the adverse impact a dump might have on other property in close proximity." (Klopping v. Whittier (1972) 8 C.3d 39, 45, 104 C.R. 1, 500 P.2d 1345.) (See 5 A.L.R.3d 901 [depreciation due to project for which land is condemned as factor]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §4.7.)

(2) Klopping Case. The traditional rule excluded this element from consideration unless the conduct of the condemnor goes so far as to constitute a de facto taking. But in Klopping v. Whittier, supra, the court, disapproving earlier cases (8 C.3d 49), took a different approach. Defendant city initiated condemnation proceedings for a parking district by a resolution of May 11, 1965, and an action filed November 10, 1965. But a lawsuit challenging assessments caused the city to adopt a resolution of postponement and dismissal on July 7, 1966. The dismissal was entered November 16, 1966. Because the resolution announced an intention to reinstate proceedings when the other litigation terminated favorably, plaintiffs, property owners in the proposed area, brought this action for inverse condemnation. Their theory was that the precondemnation publicity caused a decline in market value by rendering it difficult to rent their lands. Held, they were entitled to offer evidence of this fact on the issue of valuation.

(a) Because the city's announcements were directed at plaintiffs' properties, rather than at an undesignated area, the case did not involve typical condemnation blight. Rather, plaintiffs claimed that, because the condemnation cloud hovered over their lands, they were unable to fully use their properties and that this damage, reflected in loss of rental income, was recoverable. (8 C.3d 46.) They did not contend that there had been actual physical invasion or direct legal restraint amounting to a de facto taking; their position was that the decrease in market value caused by the condemnation announcements should be disregarded in valuing the property. (8 C.3d 48.)

(b) Total exclusion of evidence of loss in value resulting from acts of the condemning authority is not justified; but allowance of proof of all loss would be equally improper. It might deter public agencies from announcing sufficiently in advance their intention to condemn. Hence, it may be necessary for the condemnee to bear some incidental loss; but when the condemnor acts unreasonably, by excessively delaying the eminent domain proceeding or by other oppressive conduct, the owner is entitled to compensation. (8 C.3d 49, 51, 52.)

(c) "Accordingly we hold that a condemnee must be provided with an opportunity to demonstrate that (1) the public authority acted improperly either by unreasonably delaying eminent domain action following an announcement of intent to condemn or by other unreasonable conduct prior to condemnation; and (2) as a result of such action the property in question suffered a diminution in market value." (8 C.3d 52.)

(d) This right to damages for unreasonable conduct is independent of the right to recover costs on abandonment of condemnation (see infra, §§1265, 1266); the remedies are distinct and no election is required. (8 C.3d 57.)

The Klopping rule has been extensively invoked and applied. (See Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco v. Del-Camp Inv. (1974) 38 C.A.3d 836, 847, 113 C.R. 762; Walnut Creek v. Leadership Housing Systems (1977) 73 C.A.3d 611, 621, 140 C.R. 690 [rule held inapplicable]; Orange County Flood Control Dist. v. Sunny Crest Dairy (1978) 77 C.A.3d 742, 755, 143 C.R. 803 [market value based on precondemnation use of property for cash and carry dairy, even though, because of precondemnation activity, use as dairy had ceased by valuation date]; Jones v. Los Angeles (1979) 88 C.A.3d 965, 972, 152 C.R. 256 [no recovery unless there is invasion or appropriation that directly affects landowner to his or her injury]; People v. Peninsula Enterprises (1979) 91 C.A.3d 332, 354, 153 C.R. 895 [rule held applicable to precondemnation damages even though there was no formal resolution to condemn]; Los Angeles v. Monahan (1976) 55 C.A.3d 846, 852, 127 C.R. 763 [no unwarranted delay in bringing proceeding]; Taper v. Long Beach (1982) 129 C.A.3d 590, 609, 181 C.R. 169 [Klopping damages are recoverable for loss of market value; however, precondemnation delay did not constitute de facto taking, because property owners failed to establish that deprivation of use and enjoyment of property was permanent]; Fresno v. Shewmake (1982) 129 C.A.3d 907, 911, 181 C.R. 451 [actual loss must be shown]; Redevelopment Agency of Concord v. Contra Costa Theater (1982) 135 C.A.3d 73, 79, 185 C.R. 159 [where property owner also seeks Klopping damages, question of condemnor's liability for precondemnation conduct is for court; issue of amount of damages is submitted to jury only after condemnee has made sufficient showing of liability]; Tilem v. Los Angeles (1983) 142 C.A.3d 694, 703, 191 C.R. 229 [rule held inapplicable]; Cambria Spring Co. v. Pico Rivera (1985) 171 C.A.3d 1080, 1098, 217 C.R. 772 [rule inapplicable; adoption of redevelopment plan did, and sale of bonds did not, amount to announcement of intent to condemn]; Contra Costa Water Dist. v. Vaquero Farms (1997) 58 C.A.4th 883, 895, 68 C.R.2d 272 [no evidence of precondemnation damage]; Ripon v. Sweetin (2002) 100 C.A.4th 887, 897, 122 C.R.2d 802 [determination of threshold question of city's liability for precondemnation conduct is for court, not jury; where defendants stipulated that they were not asking for Klopping precondemnation damages, they were not entitled to consideration, in determining market value, by court or jury, of allegedly unreasonable precondemnation conduct by city].)

(3) Statutory Clarification. The Legislature resolved the uncertainty concerning "condemnation blight" by providing that fair market value "shall not include any increase or decrease in the value of the property" attributable to (a) the project for which the property is taken, (b) the proceeding in which the property is taken, or (c) the plaintiff's preliminary actions related to taking the property. (C.C.P. 1263.330; see BAJI, No. 11.79; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1005, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 96; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §§4.7, 4.8.) The statute is intended to make the rules regarding appreciation and depreciation the same by codifying the rule that valuation should not reflect a decrease in value due to general knowledge of the pendency of the project. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Klopping Case. See Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Mesdaq (2007) 154 C.A.4th 1111, 1136, 65 C.R.3d 372 [trial court erred in awarding precondemnation damages based on redevelopment agency's issuance of cleanup notice under Polanco Act; although property owner incurred professional fees after receipt of notice, there was no evidence that notice depressed fair market value of property].

127 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

1. Right to Compensation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1236

[§ 1236] Right to Compensation.

(1) In General. In some cases, a parcel of land as a unit is worth more than its separate parts. If only a part is taken, payment of the market value of that part may not be adequate compensation for the loss suffered by severing it from the rest. Thus, where the property taken is part of a larger parcel, in addition to compensation for the property taken (supra, §1229), compensation must be awarded for an injury to the remainder. (C.C.P. 1263.410(a).) The term "larger parcel" is left undefined for development by the case law. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (On requirement of offer to take entire parcel where remainder would be "an uneconomic remnant," see Govt.C. 7267.7, supra, §1186.)

(2) Measure of Compensation. The measure of compensation for injury to the remainder is the damage to the remainder (infra, §1237) reduced by the benefit to the remainder (infra, §1243). (C.C.P. 1263.410(b).)

(3) Computing Damage and Benefit. (a) The amount of damage to the remainder and benefit to the remainder must "reflect any delay in the time when the damage or benefit caused by the construction and use of the project in the manner proposed by the plaintiff will actually be realized." (b) The value of the remainder on the date of valuation, excluding prior changes in value as prescribed in C.C.P. 1263.330, must "serve as the base from which the amount of any damage and the amount of any benefit to the remainder shall be determined." (C.C.P. 1263.440; see 88 Cal. L. Rev. 565 [Assessing the Benefits of California's New Valuation Rule for Partial Condemnation].)

(4) Compensation To Reflect Project as Proposed. Compensation for injury to the remainder must be based on the project as proposed. Features of the project that "mitigate the damage or provide benefit to the remainder, including but not limited to easements, crossings, underpasses, access roads, fencing, drainage facilities, and cattle guards, shall be taken into account in determining the compensation for injury to the remainder." (C.C.P. 1263.450.)

"Physical solutions" provided by the plaintiff to minimize damages must be considered; but if the plaintiff has no specific proposal for the manner of construction and use of the project, damages will be assessed on the basis of the most injurious lawful use reasonably possible. (Law Rev. Com. Comment, citing People v. Schultz Co. (1954) 123 C.A.2d 925, 268 P.2d 117, infra, §1242.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

128 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

2. Severance Damages.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1237

[§ 1237] In General.

(1) What Constitutes Damage to Remainder. Damage to the remainder is defined as that caused by either or both of the following: (a) Severance of the remainder from the part taken; (b) construction and use of the project for which the property is taken in the manner proposed by the plaintiff, "whether or not the damage is caused by a portion of the project located on the part taken." (C.C.P. 1263.420.) Damage to the remainder is often called "severance damages." (See People v. Loop (1954) 127 C.A.2d 786, 791, 799, 274 P.2d 885; People v. Hayward Bldg. Materials Co. (1963) 213 C.A.2d 457, 464, 28 C.R. 782; Santa Clara v. Curtner (1966) 245 C.A.2d 730, 736, 54 C.R. 257, citing the text; Placer County Water Agency v. Hofman (1985) 165 C.A.3d 890, 896, 211 C.R. 894 [under C.C.P. 1263.420, expenses to mitigate damages are limited to those related to damage caused by taking; no recovery is allowed for legal and engineering expenses incurred to prevent taking]; BAJI, No. 11.85 [severance damages where fee is taken] and BAJI, No. 11.85.3 [severance damages where easement is taken]; CACI, No. 3511 [severance damages]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §329 et seq.; C.E.B., Condemnation Practice, Chap. 5.)

C.C.P. 1263.420 leaves unaffected the judicially developed rules on specific elements of damages, and does not impair the ability of the court to further develop the law. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(2) Conditions of Recovery. An award of severance damages is made on proof of three kinds of "unity," which establish the fact that the land condemned is part of a larger parcel: (a) unity of title (see infra, §1238), (b) in the ordinary case, contiguity (see infra, §1239), and (c) unity of use (see infra, §1240). (Los Angeles v. Wolfe (1971) 6 C.3d 326, 330, 99 C.R. 21, 491 P.2d 813, infra, §1239, citing the text; San Diego v. Neumann (1993) 6 C.4th 738, 745, 746, 25 C.R.2d 480, 863 P.2d 725, infra, §1240, citing the text.)

(3) Abrogation of Requirement of Proximity. In People v. Symons (1960) 54 C.2d 855, 9 C.R. 363, 357 P.2d 451, defendants owned a residential lot. In another action, property belonging to others immediately adjacent was condemned for a freeway, which terminated the street on which defendants' property fronted. In the present action a portion of defendants' property was taken to make that street into a cul-de-sac and provide a turn-around area. Defendants were awarded the fair market value of the part taken, and compensation for some physical damage to the rest. At the trial, they sought additional damages for loss of privacy, view, and access. Held, the latter elements were noncompensable. "[W]hen a public improvement is made on property adjoining that of one who claims to be damaged by such general factors as change of neighborhood, noise, dust, change of view, diminished access and other factors similar to the damages claimed in the instant case, there can be no recovery where there has been no actual taking or severance of the claimant's property." (54 C.2d 860.) (See People v. Ramos (1969) 1 C.3d 261, 264, 81 C.R. 792, 460 P.2d 992 [limiting Symons rule to situation where right of way is not part of property taken]; People v. Volunteers of America (1971) 21 C.A.3d 111, 119, 98 C.R. 423.)

The holding in Symons was abrogated by C.C.P. 1263.420, extending severance damages to damages caused by the project whether or not the project is located on the property taken. (See 59 A.L.R.3d 488 [compensation for diminution in value of remainder resulting from taking or use of adjoining land of others for same undertaking].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) What Constitutes Damage to Remainder. See Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern Calif. v. Campus Crusade for Christ (2007) 41 C.4th 954, 975, 62 C.R.3d 623, 161 P.3d 1175, Supp., supra, §1231 [mere fact of 7-year delay associated with construction of pipeline through plaintiff's property did not entitle plaintiff to temporary severance damages in absence of evidence of specific loss attributable to delay]; Fremont v. Fisher (2008) 160 C.A.4th 666, 675, 679, 73 C.R.3d 54 [following Metropolitan Water; trial court erred in allowing defendants' expert to testify on temporary severance damages in absence of evidence of actual injury; only evidence presented was that temporary easement substantially impaired hypothetical use of property]; 48 Santa Clara L. Rev. 507 [Metropolitan Water Dist.].

129 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

2. Severance Damages.

bb. Unity of Title.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1238

[§ 1238] Unity of Title.

Severance damages are awarded only when the property taken and the remainder are owned by the same party. (See People v. Los Angeles (1963) 220 C.A.2d 345, 361, 33 C.R. 797 [license to use property condemned was insufficient]; People v. Dickinson (1964) 230 C.A.2d 932, 934, 41 C.R. 427 [separate ownership, although partnership existed]; People v. Nyrin (1967) 256 C.A.2d 288, 295, 63 C.R. 905 [leasehold interest is sufficient]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §5.4; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §338 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

130 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

2. Severance Damages.

cc. Contiguity.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1239

[§ 1239] Contiguity.

(1) General Rule. A landowner is not entitled to severance damages where one or more of several distinct separated parcels of his or her land is taken, even though these separate parcels are being used together in the landowner's business. In other words, the parts that make up a "parcel" must be contiguous, and unity of use is not a substitute for actual contiguity. (See Oakland v. Pacific Coast Lumber & Mill Co. (1915) 171 C. 392, 398, 153 P. 705; People v. Bowers (1964) 226 C.A.2d 463, 465, 38 C.R. 238, citing the text; People v. Fair (1964) 229 C.A.2d 801, 808, 40 C.R. 644; People v. Dickinson (1964) 230 C.A.2d 932, 934, 41 C.R. 427 [easement of way, of undescribed quality, connecting one tract with another, was insufficient to establish element]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §5.5; 59 A.L.R.4th 308 [sufficient contiguity].)

In People v. Ocean Shore R. (1948) 32 C.2d 406, 196 P.2d 570, supra, §1230, the property condemned was part of a disused railroad right of way. The remaining portions of the right of way were in part contiguous and in part separated by a town. The court rejected the owners' contention that, because the whole roadbed was capable of a common use, it should be considered as a single parcel in awarding severance damages. (32 C.2d 424.)

(2) Constructive Contiguity. In People v. Thompson (1954) 43 C.2d 13, 271 P.2d 507, the requirement of physical contiguity was virtually overcome by a conclusion of legal or constructive contiguity. Defendants' 100-acre tract was already crossed by a highway, and the state sought to condemn a strip of two of the parts. Held, for the purpose of awarding severance damages, the already severed tract should be treated as a unit. (a) Because the highway going through defendants' tract permitted unlimited access across it, there was no factual complete separation. (b) By the better view, the prior deed of the highway strip gave the state only an easement; and where an owner's land is merely crossed by an easement, the separated sections are to be considered as actually contiguous and a single parcel. (43 C.2d 23.)

Los Angeles v. Wolfe (1971) 6 C.3d 326, 99 C.R. 21, 491 P.2d 813, followed Thompson. Defendants owned a commercial building, Parcel 3-A, and provided parking facilities to tenants as an obligation under their leases. A zoning ordinance was passed requiring that parking be provided within 750 feet of a commercial building. Defendants' building became a nonconforming use until they bought Parcel 3, not contiguous to the building, but within the 750-foot limit and accessible over public roads. Parcel 3 thus enabled them to comply with the ordinance in furnishing parking for their tenants. Plaintiff city, unaware of the use of Parcel 3 for the benefit of the building on Parcel 3-A, condemned Parcel 3 along with adjacent property for public off-street parking. The parties agreed on the value of the land condemned--Parcel 3, but defendants claimed severance damages to Parcel 3-A. Held, judgment for plaintiff reversed; severance damages were proper.

"Here there was unity of ownership, reasonable physical proximity of the parcels, strong unity of use with lawful means of access, special need for private parking facilities in a congested city area, nonavailability of physically contiguous land, zoning which required that parking be provided but allowed 750 feet as being sufficiently contiguous to comply with such requirement, acquisition of noncontiguous land to provide parking and to obtain a conforming use status, and the loss of such status and loss of needed private parking by the condemnation of lot 3. An 'ordinary' situation within the rule requiring strict contiguity was not presented." (6 C.3d 338.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

131 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

2. Severance Damages.

dd. Unity of Use.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1240

[§ 1240] Unity of Use.

Unity of use is a necessary element in the proof of severance damages; i.e., where the use of the part taken is distinct from that left, there is ordinarily no loss suffered by the severance. (See Stockton v. Marengo (1934) 137 C.A. 760, 767, 31 P.2d 467 [farmland; part taken was leased to operators of gas station]; Menlo Park v. Artino (1957) 151 C.A.2d 261, 270, 311 P.2d 135; People v. International Tel. & Tel. Corp. (1972) 22 C.A.3d 829, 834, 99 C.R. 836; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §338 et seq.; 59 A.L.R.4th 308 [sufficient unity].)

In People v. Thompson (1954) 43 C.2d 13, 271 P.2d 507, supra, §1239, part of the property was used for farming, a swamp was used for signboards, and beach property was not used at all. The court nevertheless held that there was no actual diversity or division of use, and therefore there was no error in treating it as one parcel. (43 C.2d 26.)

In San Diego v. Neumann (1993) 6 C.4th 738, 25 C.R.2d 480, 863 P.2d 725, the question was "whether, and under what circumstances, separate but contiguous legal parcels in common ownership currently devoted to diverse uses may be aggregated to form a 'larger parcel' in order to prove entitlement to severance damages." (6 C.4th 741.) Defendants owned four contiguous parcels; a trailer park was located on two parcels, and various unrelated businesses were located on the other parcels. The city condemned the latter two parcels to broaden a boulevard, and defendants sought severance damages, claiming that the four parcels together were suitable for commercial development as a shopping center, that the two condemned parcels provided a means of direct access from the boulevard to the remaining parcels, and that loss of the access lots through condemnation therefore damaged the value of the remaining parcels. The trial court refused to admit evidence to support this theory, and defendants appealed. The Court of Appeal reversed and remanded with directions to consider whether defendants' property was a single, larger parcel. Held, judgment of the Court of Appeal affirmed.

(a) Under C.C.P. 1263.320 (supra, §1230), the fair market value of property takes into account the highest and most profitable use to which the property might be put in the reasonably near future. (6 C.4th 744.) Defendants contend that highest and best use--including reasonably foreseeable future uses--should be considered in determining whether unity of use exists. Plaintiff argues that only present and existing uses can be considered. (6 C.4th 746.)

(b) Many cases set forth a rule purporting to require that only actual use be considered in determining unity of use. However, these cases generally were addressing issues other than unity of use or prospective use, and the concern of many was simply to avoid awards of speculative severance damages. (6 C.4th 747.)

(c) In People v. Ocean Shore R. (1948) 32 C.2d 406 196 P.2d 570, supra, §§1230, 1239, the court did state that prospective unity of use has no bearing on the allowance of severance damages. However, Ocean Shore cited no authority for that conclusion, the statement was not part of the holding of the case, and the statement has not been relied on since it was made. (6 C.4th 752, 753.)

(d) Thus, "existing California authorities do not preclude us from considering whether severance damages may be awarded based on a prospective integrated use of several parcels. The question, rather, is whether considering the prospective uses to which several parcels of contiguous property might be put furthers our obligation to ensure that a property owner receives just compensation for the government's condemnation of his property, and whether, as has concerned us in the past, such a consideration opens the door to speculative damage awards." (6 C.4th 753.)

(e) "The critical inquiry in any case in which a property owner seeks severance damages premised on a prospective unity of use will therefore be whether the development potential of the separate but contiguous parcels affected their present value. As a matter of economic reality, only those uses that are reasonably probable and reasonably achievable will affect present value. We therefore hold that if the landowner establishes that there is a reasonable probability his contiguous commonly owned lots are or will be available for development or use as an integrated economic unit in the reasonably foreseeable future, all of the separate lots may be considered as a larger parcel for purposes of awarding severance damages." (6 C.4th 756.)

Three justices dissented, arguing that both precedent and policy compel the conclusion that present unity of use is a prerequisite to severance damages. (6 C.4th 758 et seq.) (See 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1489.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

132 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

3. Measure of Damages.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1241

[§ 1241] In General.

Severance damages properly consist of the difference in value of the remaining part before and after the severance and construction of the improvement. (See Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Hufford (1957) 49 C.2d 545, 555, 319 P.2d 1033 [power line easement]; People v. Hayward Bldg. Materials Co. (1963) 213 C.A.2d 457, 464, 28 C.R. 782; Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. v. Reed (1963) 215 C.A.2d 60, 63, 29 C.R. 847; San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Daley (1988) 205 C.A.3d 1334, 1349, 253 C.R. 144 [power line easement; court properly admitted testimony of buyer fears of health hazards from electromagnetic radiation, because these fears would diminish value of property regardless of underlying truth]; BAJI, Nos. 11.87 [loss of access as element of severance damages], 11.90 [freeway access excluded]; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §5.8 et seq.; 51 A.L.R.3d 860 [traffic noise and vibration from highway]; 25 A.L.R.4th 671 [compensation for loss of view]; 104 A.L.R.5th 503 [evidence of electromagnetic fields generated by power lines in action to value land]; 47 Proof of Facts 3d 473 [Public Fear of Electromagnetic Fields as Basis for Recovery of Damages for Property Devaluation Caused by Nearby Power Line]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §331.)

In Fresno v. Hedstrom (1951) 103 C.A.2d 453, 457, 229 P.2d 809, the city condemned 10 acres of a 40-acre farm, depriving the owner of street frontage and damaging the value of the rest of the parcel for subdivision purposes, its highest and best use. Held, award of $ 10,000 for taking and $ 6,000 for severance damages affirmed. (103 C.A.2d 458.)

In People v. Loop (1954) 127 C.A.2d 786, 274 P.2d 885, defendant owned business property consisting of two contiguous lots fronting on a boulevard. The state condemned a triangular part of one lot for traffic to a freeway. Held, it was proper for defendant to appraise the part taken at a higher square foot valuation than the remainder of the property, for a part taken may be a more valuable part. Thus here, it was testified that the best use was for a big garage, and the severance, with reduction of size and a resulting five-sided irregular parcel, would impair the use of the remainder as a functioning unit. (127 C.A.2d 799.) (See People v. Volunteers of America (1971) 21 C.A.3d 111, 122, 128, 98 C.R. 423 [severance damages for proximity to freeway was proper even though only narrow triangular strip no wider than six feet was taken, and freeway was not actually constructed on land taken].)

In Salinas v. Homer (1980) 106 C.A.3d 307, 165 C.R. 65, plaintiff city took fee title to a strip of defendant's residential property for street-widening, including four feet for underground utilities and six inches for the sidewalk. Plaintiff had the right to use the four-foot strip for other purposes, but had no plans to do so. Held, defendant was entitled to compensation for the decrease in market value of the remainder attributable to plaintiff's fee title to the strip. The damage here was not speculative future damage as in People v. Adamson (1953) 118 C.A.2d 714, 722, 258 P.2d 1020, infra, §1242, but an immediate decrease in market value. (106 C.A.3d 312, 313.)

The cost of replacement or restoration of improvements ("cost to cure") may be relevant and admissible on the issue of loss in fair market value, but is not a separate and distinct measure of damages. (See Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. v. Goehring (1970) 13 C.A.3d 58, 65, 91 C.R. 375; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §5.11; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §337.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

133 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

3. Measure of Damages.

bb. Improper Elements.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1242

[§ 1242] Improper Elements.

(1) Speculative or Contingent Damages. There must be some physical disturbance of a property right that naturally tends to and actually does decrease the market value. Thus, the condemnor is not required to pay for injury to an expectant or possible future right. (Los Angeles v. Geiger (1949) 94 C.A.2d 180, 191, 210 P.2d 717 [no award for value of speculative future right of access to boulevard]; see Arnerich v. Almaden Vineyards Corp. (1942) 52 C.A.2d 265, 272, 126 P.2d 121; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Zuckerman (1987) 189 C.A.3d 1113, 1147, 234 C.R. 630 [no award for speculative future use for oil and gas exploration in absence of showing that property was suited for that use]; BAJI, No. 11.86.)

In People v. Adamson (1953) 118 C.A.2d 714, 722, 258 P.2d 1020, property was condemned for highway purposes. Defendant argued that the discretionary right of the public authority to change the point of connection between the highway and freeway was an element to be considered because a change might result in additional damages. Held, this element was speculative and improper. In the event that an injurious change does occur in the future, the owner will have a new remedy in an inverse condemnation suit at that time. (118 C.A.2d 722.)

In People v. Schultz Co. (1954) 123 C.A.2d 925, 268 P.2d 117, 96 feet of a 300-foot frontage were condemned. Defendant sought severance damages on the theory that, until a freeway was constructed, it was left with an isolated landlocked parcel with no legal right of access to the existing highway, except for the People's promise that existing access on a 20-foot strip would be preserved until the freeway was ready. Held, severance damages were properly denied. Although a mere promise by the condemnor cannot be a basis for reduction of damages, here the court expressly reserved the right of access in the judgment. (123 C.A.2d 931.)

(2) Probable Future Dedication. Severance damages based on the property's development potential are not recoverable if it is reasonably probable that development of the property would have been conditioned on dedication of the property taken. (See Contra Costa County Flood Control & Water Conservation Dist. v. Lone Tree Inv. (1992) 7 C.A.4th 930, 937, 9 C.R.2d 326.) However, proof that a conditional dedication is a reasonable probability requires a showing not only that the condition would probably have been imposed, but also that it would have been constitutionally permissible. (See Hollister v. McCullough (1994) 26 C.A.4th 289, 297, 298, 31 C.R.2d 415 [conditional dedication requirement was invalid where it was not reasonably related to proposed use of property, but rather was aimed at promoting general municipal objectives].)

In People v. Curtis (1967) 255 C.A.2d 378, 63 C.R. 138, the state brought an action to condemn a 40-foot strip through defendant's eight-acre tract of vacant land, dividing it roughly in half. The strip would eventually extend a street; and, under local ordinances and established practice, the city would probably require any developer of the area, before obtaining a permit, to dedicate land needed for a full 80-foot street. Defendants argued that they could introduce this probable event into evidence as an element affecting the value of their remaining property in computing severance damages. Held, this evidence was properly excluded. (a) To the extent that dedication is required by the proposed development, the property will be benefited rather than damaged. (b) To the extent that it is necessary for traffic conditions, it is a risk shared by all property owners and is noncompensable. (255 C.A.2d 384.) (c) If the requirement is unreasonable and arbitrary, the city will not be able to force dedication; but the proper proceeding to test the city's power will be one brought after the condition has been imposed. (d) The owner of the remaining property may, however, elect to dedicate; hence, the present owners (defendants) should not be permitted to charge the state for the cost of dedication in the present proceeding. (255 C.A.2d 386.)

(3) Future Assessment Liens. In Baldwin Park v. Stoskus (1972) 8 C.3d 563, 105 C.R. 325, 503 P.2d 1333, defendant's property was condemned for an easement to construct a street and storm drain in a special assessment district. The fair market value of the property taken was stipulated, and there was evidence that the property remaining was enhanced in value, but defendant claimed that the amount of the assessment lien should be an element of severance damages. Held, this position was unsound, and the evidence was properly excluded. The assessment lien was not the direct result of the taking; it was imposed on all property in the district, whether or not any part was taken. (8 C.3d 568.) If defendant's view were followed, some owners--those whose property was condemned--would receive double recovery; i.e., the benefit of the improvement without paying for it. (8 C.3d 570.) Moreover, this rule would severely hamper the special assessment device for financing public improvements. To raise additional sums to replace those awarded as severance damages, the municipality would have to reassess and increase liens on remaining property or pay out of general funds, prejudicing remaining property owners or general taxpayers. (8 C.3d 571.) (See 59 A.L.R.3d 534 [consideration of fact that remaining land will be subject to special assessment in fixing severance damages].)

(4) Rental Value of Remainder. In Orange County Flood Control Dist. v. Sunny Crest Dairy (1978) 77 C.A.3d 742, 143 C.R. 803, a portion of plaintiff's dairy was condemned and plaintiff determined that operation of a dairy on the remainder was not economically justified. The trial court awarded plaintiff "temporary severance damages," the fair rental value of the remainder for the 2 years between the time the dairy operation ceased and the remainder was leased to a mobilehome park. Held, severance damages were improper. There was no temporary taking of the remainder; nothing defendant condemnor did impaired the use of the property for a profitable purpose. Essentially, plaintiff was seeking recovery for a lost business opportunity; and to award the rental value of the remainder in addition to the fair market value of the property taken would amount to double recovery. (77 C.A.3d 762, 763.)

(5) Accelerated Urbanization. In Carlsbad v. Rudvalis (2003) 109 C.A.4th 667, 135 C.R.2d 194, parts of defendant nursery owners' properties were taken for road extensions. The jury awarded defendants severance damages for diminution in value of their business assets arising from accelerated urbanization in the area that shortened the economic life of the nurseries. Held, reversed. Severance damages must be directly and proximately caused by the taking. (109 C.A.4th 681.) Here, the construction and use of the road extensions did not directly impact defendants' planned uses of their properties. (109 C.A.4th 683.) Further, urbanization would occur and defendants' damages would be the same whether the extensions went through defendants' or adjoining properties. (109 C.A.4th 685.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Probable Future Dedication. See State Route 4 Bypass Authority v. Superior Court (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1546, 1566, 64 C.R.3d 286 [distinguishing Hollister v. McCullough (1994) 26 C.A.4th 289, 31 C.R.2d 415, text, p. 927, and discussing its value after Dolan v. Tigard (1994) 512 U.S. 374, 114 S.Ct. 2309, 129 L.Ed.2d 304, text, §1157; dedication requirement need not be specifically and uniquely attributable to development against which it is applied].

134 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

4. Benefit to Remainder.

aa. When Offset Is Proper.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1243

[§ 1243] When Offset Is Proper.

(1) Special Benefits. Where only a portion of a parcel is taken, the remainder will sometimes actually be benefited by the improvement. "Benefit to the remainder is the benefit, if any, caused by the construction and use of the project for which the property is taken in the manner proposed by the plaintiff." (C.C.P. 1263.430; see BAJI, No. 11.95; CACI, No. 3512.) In this event, the benefit to the remainder will be offset against the damage to the remainder, and may result in no award of compensation for injury to the remainder. (C.C.P. 1262.410(b).)

C.C.P. 1263.430 neither abrogates "court-developed rules relating to the offset of benefits" nor impairs "the ability of the courts to continue to develop the law in this area." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (See Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. v. McNulty (1963) 59 C.2d 333, 338, 29 C.R. 13, 379 P.2d 493; Oro Loma Sanitary Dist. v. Valley (1948) 86 C.A.2d 875, 880, 195 P.2d 913; People v. Al G. Smith Co. (1948) 86 C.A.2d 308, 311, 194 P.2d 750 [same rule applies where property is damaged instead of taken]; People v. Bond (1964) 231 C.A.2d 435, 438, 41 C.R. 900; 88 Cal. L. Rev. 565 [Assessing the Benefits of California's New Valuation Rule for Partial Condemnation]; 13 A.L.R.3d 1149 [benefits from alterations to highway]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §371 et seq.)

In Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority v. Continental Dev. Corp. (1997) 16 C.4th 694, 66 C.R.2d 630, 941 P.2d 809, plaintiff county transportation authority sought to offset the benefits of a light rail project, for which it was taking a strip of defendant landowner's property, against defendant's severance damages. Defendant claimed that the benefits of the project were not "special" to the land sought to be taken, and thus, could not be offset against severance damages. Held, the offset is authorized.

(a) Historical derivation of rule. Former law prohibiting the offset of severance damages was a response to the practice of railroads taking property without compensating the owners, on the mere promise that the railroad would bring future economic growth. However, current law entitles an owner to the fair market value of property taken, without setoff; thus, because "no taking per se may go uncompensated, irrespective of any benefit to the remaining property, the sharp practices of the 19th century railroad corporations have no close analogue." (16 C.4th 711.)

(b) Proof limited to property taken. Although defendant urges that special damages, like offset benefits, must be "special" to the affected property, a "landowner seeking severance damages need only prove the value of his or her property has been impaired, not that other members of the public are not similarly affected." (16 C.4th 712.) Similarly, the Eminent Domain Law "contains no requirement the landowner prove his or her severance damages are of a type not shared by neighboring landowners." (16 C.4th 713.)

(c) Contribution of fair share. The policy underlying just compensation is to ensure that neither the landowner nor the public contributes more than their proper share to the public undertaking. (16 C.4th 715.) To distribute the cost of the project across the community with perfect equality is impossible because the rail project will benefit other property owners whose land is not being taken. Therefore, if defendant is subjected to setoff of general benefits, it will lose an expectation of gain that other property owners are allowed to keep. On the other hand, if defendant is permitted both severance damages and the enhancement in value due to the rail project, one could say defendant thereby pays less than its proper share of the project costs. Because there is no mechanism by which to ensure an absolutely fair distribution of costs and benefits across the entire community, "[w]e must instead search for the rule of greatest relative fairness, or at least unfairness." (16 C.4th 716.)

(d) Permitting offset is more fair. "A rule permitting offset of all reasonably certain, immediate and nonspeculative benefits has the virtue of treating benefits and severance damages evenhandedly." (16 C.4th 717.) Defendant was entitled to, and did, present evidence that the effects of the rail operation on perceptions of view, light, and noise from its building would lower expected future rents. The increase in rental value that plaintiff sought to prove "appears to be no more speculative or uncertain, and no less immediate, than the decrease in rental value that Continental was permitted to prove." (16 C.4th 718.)

(e) No statute prohibits offset. Permitting the offset does not run afoul of C.C.P. 1263.420 or C.C.P. 1263.430, "neither of which, in considering damages and benefits to the remainder property, distinguishes between special and general." (16 C.4th 718.)

Two justices separately dissented to the part of the majority's opinion creating a new "setoff" rule. (16 C.4th 722, 736.)

(2) Concentration of Traffic as Benefit. The special benefit need not be a result of physical alteration in the character of the land. In People v. Giumarra Farms (1971) 22 C.A.3d 98, 99 C.R. 272, the state constructed a freeway across defendant's land. No new physical access to the remaining property was afforded, and before the improvement defendant could move freely in all directions. However, by virtue of the construction, his land was located on two quadrants of a freeway interchange; though currently restricted to agricultural uses, rezoning for a higher use could be expected; and portions of the land were suitable for service, rest, and food facilities. "In short, the property has become a magnet for traffic related commercial activity with measurable financial value and profit to defendant." (22 C.A.3d 105.) The trier of fact could therefore find that the property was enhanced in value by the unique combination of access and traffic conferred by the improvement. (22 C.A.3d 106.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

135 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

f. Injury to Remainder.

4. Benefit to Remainder.

bb. When Offset Is Improper.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1244

[§ 1244] When Offset Is Improper.

(1) No Offset for Separate Parcels. In People v. Fair (1964) 229 C.A.2d 801, 40 C.R. 644, defendants owned land on the west and east sides of a highway, and the state owned the highway in fee. Portions of both parcels were condemned. Severance damages were awarded for the taking on the west side, and special benefits were found accruing to the property on the east side. But the trial judge refused to offset the benefits against the severance damages, on the ground that the two pieces of land were not parts of one larger parcel. Held, affirmed. Unlike People v. Thompson (1954) 43 C.2d 13, 271 P.2d 507, supra, §1239, where the full fee was owned by the defendant, here the intervening fee title was in the state, and defendants had no direct access to the highway. Hence, there were two noncontiguous parcels, and the "larger parcel" condition was not met. (229 C.A.2d 808.)

(2) No Offset Against Award for Taking. In California, the offset for benefits is allowed only against the damage to the remainder and compensation for loss of goodwill. (On compensation for loss of goodwill, see C.C.P. 1263.510, infra, §1245.) An excess of benefit to the remainder over damage to the remainder may not be deducted from the compensation for the property taken or other compensation required by the Eminent Domain Law. (C.C.P. 1263.410(b).) (See Contra Costa County Water Dist. v. Zuckerman Const. Co. (1966) 240 C.A.2d 908, 910, 50 C.R. 224; People v. Corporation of President of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (1970) 13 C.A.3d 371, 379, 91 C.R. 532.)

(3) Offset of General Benefits. Although there is conflicting authority on the point, California formerly held that only special benefits resulting from the construction of the improvement and peculiar to the land in question could be set off; general benefits, consisting of an increase in the value of the land common to the community generally, could not be. (See Sacramento & San Joaquin Drainage Dist. v. W.P. Roduner Cattle & Farming Co. (1968) 268 C.A.2d 199, 204, 73 C.R. 733 [offset of only $ 2,000 was proper where special benefit from drainage project for which land was taken was that defendant's property would no longer be subject to flooding, and there was evidence that it would have cost only about $ 2,000 to build suitable levee to protect it]; People v. Giumarra Farms (1971) 22 C.A.3d 98, 103, 99 C.R. 272 [discussing whether existence of special benefits is question of law or fact, and observing that later decisions treat it as jury question].) However, in Los Angeles County Metropolitan Trans. Authority v. Continental Dev. Corp.

(1997) 16 C.4th 694, 66 C.R.2d 630, 941 P.2d 809, supra, §1243, the court permitted the setoff of general benefits of a light rail project against severance damages.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

136 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

g. Compensation for Loss of Goodwill.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1245

[§ 1245] In General.

(1) Former Law. Originally, speculative profits derived from a business conducted on the property taken were not considered in determining market value. (See People v. Dunn (1956) 46 C.2d 639, 297 P.2d 964 [stating rule, but holding that income from lease was proper element]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §306.) An unsuccessful attempt was made to declare a constitutional right to compensation. (See Community Redevelopment Agency of Los Angeles v. Abrams (1975) 15 C.3d 813, 831, 126 C.R. 473, 543 P.2d 905 [elaborate opinion examining case law and views of commentators]; 81 A.L.R.3d 198 [note on Abrams].)

(2) Statutory Rule. C.C.P. 1263.510 changed the rule. It provides that the "owner of a business conducted on the property taken, or on the remainder if such property is part of a larger parcel, shall be compensated for loss of goodwill if the owner proves" the conditions for compensation. (C.C.P. 1263.510(a); see Redevelopment Agency of Concord v. International House of Pancakes (1992) 9 C.A.4th 1343, 1349, 12 C.R.2d 358 [discussing statute]; BAJI, No. 11.91; CACI, No. 3513; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1016, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 106.) C.C.P. 1263.510 does not affect "compensation for inverse condemnation claims for temporary interference with or interruption of business." (C.C.P. 1263.530; see supra, §1130.)

(3) Conditions for Compensation. The owner must prove all of the following:

(a) "The loss is caused by the taking of the property or the injury to the remainder." (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(1).)

(b) "The loss cannot reasonably be prevented by a relocation of the business or by taking steps and adopting procedures that a reasonably prudent person would take and adopt in preserving the goodwill." (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(2).)

(c) "Compensation for the loss will not be included in payments" for relocation assistance under Govt.C. 7262 (see infra, §1272). (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(3); see Redevelopment Agency of Emeryville v. Arvey Corp. (1992) 3 C.A.4th 1357, 5 C.R.2d 161 [C.C.P. 1263.510 excludes payment for expenses that are payable as relocation assistance under Govt.C. 7262, even if those expenses have not actually been recovered].)

(d) "Compensation for the loss will not be duplicated in the compensation otherwise awarded to the owner." (C.C.P. 1263.510(a)(4).) (See Unocal Calif. Pipeline Co. v. Conway (1994) 23 C.A.4th 331, 335, 336, 28 C.R.2d 429 [in eminent domain proceeding by pipeline corporation seeking subsurface easement, defendant ranch could recover for loss of goodwill even though it was not forced to relocate]; People v. Leslie (1997) 55 C.A.4th 918, 923, 64 C.R.2d 252 [combined loss of goodwill suffered by two interdependent businesses was proper measure of damages even though businesses were treated separately for tax purposes]; San Diego Metropolitan Transit Dev. Bd. v. Handlery Hotel (1999) 73 C.A.4th 517, 537, 538, 86 C.R.2d 473 [when golf course operator's long-term lease expired, so did its business of operating golf course, and interim lease extensions pending condemnation did not transmute its status to that of business owner for purpose of loss of goodwill].)

Emeryville Redevelopment Agency v. Harcross Pigments (2002) 101 C.A.4th 1083, 125 C.R.2d 12, held that a landowner may not present evidence of loss of goodwill to the jury until the trial court has favorably resolved disputes on the presence of the required conditions for compensation. Thus, there could be no compensation for loss of goodwill where the loss was not caused by the taking, but by the transition of the property to a higher and better use, which was being compensated, and with which the continued operation of defendant's business was incompatible. (101 C.A.4th 1119.)

(4) What Constitutes Goodwill. "Goodwill" is defined as "the benefits that accrue to a business as a result of its location, reputation for dependability, skill or quality, and any other circumstances resulting in probable retention of old or acquisition of new patronage." (C.C.P. 1263.510(b).)

Goodwill under C.C.P. 1263.510 is not limited to loss of patronage but extends to loss of the benefits of the location that is condemned. In People v. Muller (1984) 36 C.3d 263, 203 C.R. 772, 681 P.2d 1340, defendant's business property was condemned and the business was relocated nearby. Patronage of the business remained the same, but the rent for replacement facilities was substantially higher. Held, defendant was entitled to compensation for the loss of the benefit of low rent at the original location. Characterizing defendant's lost profitability as goodwill is consistent with the definition of goodwill in other contexts. (36 C.3d 271.) Further, the "excess income method" of quantifying the loss is reasonable. (36 C.3d 272.)

(5) Costs of Mitigating Anticipated Lost Goodwill. A plaintiff may not recover Klopping damages based on the purchase of relocation property in anticipation of condemnation where there has been no formal action to acquire the existing site and where the condemning authority has done nothing to interfere with the profitable operation of plaintiff's business. (Barthelemy v. Orange County Flood Control Dist. (1998) 65 C.A.4th 558, 572, 76 C.R.2d 575 [applying Klopping v. Whittier (1972) 8 C.3d 39, 104 C.R. 1, 500 P.2d 1345, supra, §1235, and distinguishing People v. Muller, supra].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Statutory Rule. Entering into a leaseback agreement is not a factor in determining goodwill, and no additional goodwill accumulates during the leaseback period. (C.C.P. 1263.510(c), added in 2006; see Supp., supra, §1218A.)

(3) Conditions for Compensation. It is for the trial court to decide whether the qualifying conditions stated in C.C.P. 1263.510(a) for compensation for loss of goodwill have been met. If the court finds that the statutory conditions exist, then the issue of valuing the goodwill is for the jury. (Santa Clarita v. NTS Technical Systems (2006) 137 C.A.4th 264, 270, 40 C.R.3d 244.)(4) What Constitutes Goodwill. See Inglewood Redevelopment Agency v. Aklilu (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1095, 1108, 64 C.R.3d 519 [following People v. Muller (1984) 36 C.3d 263, 203 C.R. 772, 681 P.2d 1340, text, p. 933; "cost to create" valuation satisfied definition of goodwill where tenant had ideal location for future profitability but sustained several yearly losses in anticipation of completion of shopping center across street].

137 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

g. Compensation for Loss of Goodwill.

2. Valuation and Proof of Loss.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1246

[§ 1246] Valuation and Proof of Loss.

(1) In General. The owner has the burden of proving the existence of conditions that entitle him or her to compensation for lost goodwill (supra, §1245), but the owner does not have the burden of proof on the amount of the loss. The general rule of C.C.P. 1260.210 (supra, §1221) governs the burden of proof. (Redevelopment Agency of Cathedral City v. Metropolitan Theatres Corp. (1989) 215 C.A.3d 808, 811, 263 C.R. 637; see People v. Salami (1991) 2 C.A.4th 37, 45, 46, 2 C.R.2d 833 [trial court erred in instructing jury that owner had burden on proving value of loss; stipulation relieved owner of requirement that he prove foundational elements, but it did not address amount of loss].)

(2) Method of Valuation. There is no exclusive method for determining the value of lost goodwill. (Community Dev. Com. of National City v. Asaro (1989) 212 C.A.3d 1297, 1305, 261 C.R. 231 [market analysis is among acceptable methods]; San Diego v. Sobke (1998) 65 C.A.4th 379, 398, 76 C.R.2d 9 [although there is no set methodology for valuing goodwill, trial court properly excluded expert's evidence of loss that was based on increased expenses without establishing existence of actual pre-taking goodwill and comparing its value with post-taking goodwill].)

In Redevelopment Agency of Pomona v. Thrifty Oil Co. (1992) 4 C.A.4th 469, 5 C.R.2d 687, the owner's expert testified that the value of lost goodwill was $ 125,000. Prior to trial, the city's expert had appraised lost goodwill at $ 80,000. However, at trial the city claimed that no goodwill was shown and did not present expert evidence on the issue. The jury awarded $ 67,500 for lost good will. Held, affirmed.

(a) On the issue of entitlement to goodwill, the landowner has the burden of proof under C.C.P. 1263.510. Once entitlement is shown, neither party has the burden of proof of valuation. (4 C.A.4th 475.)

(b) The owner argues that the jury was limited to the valuation of its expert, because that was the only valuation before it. However, a jury may evaluate the credibility of witnesses. By arguing that the owner had not met its burden of proving entitlement, the city was establishing a floor of $ 0. When the governmental entity believes that there is no goodwill, it is not required to present expert evaluation evidence. (4 C.A.4th 476.)

(3) Evidence To Prove Loss. The general rules of evidence apply. (Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1263.510.)

And the inspection of the owner's tax returns is authorized. (See C.C.P. 1263.520.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Attisha (2005) 128 C.A.4th 357, 372, 27 C.R.3d 126 [distinguishing San Diego Metropolitan Transit Dev. Bd. v. Handlery Hotel (1999) 73 C.A.4th 517, 86 C.R.2d 473, text, §1245; trial court abused its discretion in striking testimony of business lessee's witness on valuation of goodwill; lessees had property interest by operating store under valid lease with 7 years remaining on date of valuation, and there was evidence that lessees had reasonable expectation that lease would be renewed].

(2) Method of Valuation. See Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Attisha, supra, 128 C.A.4th 374 [trial court erred in excluding valuation expert's testimony on ground that he used comparable sales outside city in "cash flow multiplier" method, where there was lack of comparable sales in city and data used was reliable for goodwill comparables]; Inglewood Redevelopment Agency v. Aklilu (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1095, 1109, 64 C.R.3d 519 [trial court did not err in admitting appraiser's testimony valuing loss of goodwill based on "cost to create" approach; because value of goodwill was zero under excess profits test, but location was excellent for future profits, appraiser used total of yearly losses sustained while shopping center across street was being constructed as cost of goodwill]; Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Mesdaq (2007) 154 C.A.4th 1111, 1130, 65 C.R.3d 372 [trial court erred in permitting speculative testimony on value of goodwill that was based on hypothetical business that could have existed had owner better utilized premises].

138 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

h. Personal Property of Destroyed Business.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1247

[§ 1247] Personal Property of Destroyed Business.

A number of cases hold that the value of business equipment, stock in trade, and other items of personal property not permanently affixed to the condemned property is not a proper element of damages, even if the severed personal property is rendered essentially valueless. (See Los Angeles v. Allen's Grocery Co. (1968) 265 C.A.2d 274, 279, 71 C.R. 88; Community Redevelopment Agency of Los Angeles v. Abrams (1975) 15 C.3d 813, 834, 126 C.R. 473, 543 P.2d 905.)

Abrams was distinguished and a different rule was stated in Baldwin Park Redevelopment Agency v. Irving (1984) 156 C.A.3d 428, 202 C.R. 792. Plaintiff redevelopment agency condemned property used for an automobile parts and wrecking yard. Because a suitable alternate location could not be found, the inventory of the business (vehicles in various stages of disrepair) was sold for scrap, at about one-sixth of the replacement value. Held, defendant was entitled to compensation for the loss of value in the inventory.

(a) Neither the constitutional requirement of "just compensation" nor the Eminent Domain Law distinguishes between real and personal property for purposes of compensation and, "if the state takes or damages personal property in the exercise of its power of eminent domain, it is obligated to pay just compensation to the owner." (156 C.A.3d 435.)

(b) "Where the removal or relocation of either tangible or intangible personal property, under the circumstances of the particular case, is made impossible by the condemnatory act itself, then the owner's just compensation should not be limited by an arbitrary notion that in eminent domain any particular form of recognized property right is noncompensable." (156 C.A.3d 436.) In Abrams, it was the personal circumstances of the condemnee (age and physical condition), not the condemnatory act itself, that brought about the devaluation. "Here, the inability to relocate was the result of the nature of the business and the lack of any appropriately zoned property within a reasonably accessible area. Hence the act of condemnation of the only available location directly caused the loss." (156 C.A.3d 437.) (See San Diego v. Cabrillo Lanes (1992) 10 C.A.4th 576, 584, 585, 12 C.R.2d 613; Carlsbad v. Rudvalis (2003) 109 C.A.4th 667, 687, 690, 135 C.R.2d 194, supra, §1242 [distinguishing Baldwin Park; jury erred in awarding damages for economic loss to defendants' movable personal property where there was no evidence that city's road project "in and of itself" destroyed value of defendants' assets].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Redevelopment Agency of San Diego v. Attisha (2005) 128 C.A.4th 357, 381, 27 C.R.3d 126 [distinguishing Baldwin Park Redevelopment Agency v. Irving (1984) 156 C.A.3d 428, 202 C.R. 792, text, p. 935; inventory was not compensable element of condemnation where it was not perishable and owners failed to conduct liquidation sale or otherwise market it in reasonable manner].

139 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

i. Mitigation Work by Condemnor.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1248

[§ 1248] Mitigation Work by Condemnor.

The public entity and the owner may agree to certain action by the public entity that will reduce the owner's compensation. The agreement may provide that the entity will do either of the following:

(1) Relocate a structure if the "relocation is likely to reduce the amount of compensation otherwise payable to the owner by an amount equal to or greater than the cost of such relocation." (C.C.P. 1263.610(a).)

(2) Carry out work for the owner on property not taken, including work on a structure, "if the performance of the work is likely to reduce the amount of compensation otherwise payable to the owner by an amount equal to or greater than the cost of the work." (C.C.P. 1263.610(b).)

Carrying out work for the owner is intended to have broad application. "It would include any physical or structural operation whatsoever. Thus, it would cover such things as screening off roads or canals or soundproofing buildings adjacent to highways as well as constructing rights of way, fences, driveways, sidewalks, retaining walls, and drainage or utility connections." (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

140 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

7. Compensation.

j. Protective Work by Owner.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1249

[§ 1249] Protective Work by Owner.

(1) Compensation for Expenses. C.C.P. 1263.620 deals with the owner who has an improvement under construction or is engaged in installing machinery or equipment at the time of service of summons. If the owner ceases the construction or installation, he or she is entitled to compensation for "expenses reasonably incurred for work necessary" either: (a) to protect against the "risk of injury to persons or other property created by the uncompleted improvement," or (b) to "protect the partially installed machinery or equipment from damage, deterioration, or vandalism." (C.C.P. 1263.620(a).)

(2) Notice to Plaintiff. The compensation is recoverable only if prior notice is given to the plaintiff, except in an emergency. (C.C.P. 1263.620(b).) The plaintiff may object to the necessity or reasonableness of the expenses, and this fact should be taken into consideration in determining the amount of compensation. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(3) Agreement for Work or Compensation. The plaintiff may agree with the owner: (a) that the plaintiff will perform the necessary work, or (b) on "the amount of compensation payable under this section." (C.C.P. 1263.620(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

141 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

8. Divided Interests.

a. Leases.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1250

[§ 1250] Leases.

(1) Termination of Lease. In the absence of a contrary provision in the lease (C.C.P. 1265.160), taking all the leased property terminates the lease. (C.C.P. 1265.110.) This rule applies where the taking is by eminent domain or its "substantial equivalent," not where the public agency is merely the purchaser of the underlying fee. (Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. v. Richmond Redevelopment Agency (1986) 178 C.A.3d 435, 442, 443, 223 C.R. 728; see Kong v. Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2002) 108 C.A.4th 1028, 1038, footnote 10, 134 C.R.2d 260 [C.C.P. 1265.110 applies to inverse condemnation proceedings].)

Where only part of the property is taken, the lease is ordinarily terminated as to that part, and remains in force as to the remainder, with a pro rata abatement of rent. (C.C.P. 1265.120.) However, on a party's petition, the court may terminate the lease if it determines that "an essential part of the property" is taken or that the remainder "is no longer suitable for the purposes of the lease." (C.C.P. 1265.130.)

(2) Time of Termination. The termination or partial termination date is fixed at (a) the time title is taken by the condemnor, or (b) the time the condemnor is authorized to take possession, whichever is earlier. (C.C.P. 1265.140.)

(3) Rights and Remedies of Parties. The law does not affect the right of a lessee to compensation for the taking of the leasehold interest, or for the taking of other property in which the lessee has an interest. (C.C.P. 1265.150.) The statutory rules on termination do not apply where the lease contains contrary provisions. (C.C.P. 1265.160; see C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §10.7 et seq.)

Vista v. Fielder (1996) 13 C.4th 612, 54 C.R.2d 861, 919 P.2d 151, raised the following question: "Under the Eminent Domain Law, does a provision of a lease that declares that the lease terminates if all the property subject thereto is acquired for public use deprive the lessee of any right he may have to compensation for the taking of his leasehold or other property?" (13 C.4th 616.) The answer was "no." The Eminent Domain Law itself declares the generally applicable rules that the lease terminates if all the property subject to it is acquired for public use, and that termination does not affect any right of the lessee to compensation. These rules may be displaced by a provision of a lease to the contrary. But a provision declaring that the lease terminates if all the property is acquired for public use is not to the contrary of either of the two rules. It is essentially a restatement of the first. (13 C.4th 618.)

(4) Right to Compensation. When leased property is taken and the lessee is deprived of some valuable part of the leasehold estate, the lessee is entitled to compensation. In nearly all cases, the fee is condemned, a single amount is determined for the total value of the divided estates, and thereafter, in the same proceeding, an apportionment of the award between the lessor and lessee is made. (See C.C.P. 1260.220, supra, §1222; New Haven Unified School Dist. v. Taco Bell Corp. (1994) 24 C.A.4th 1473, 1482, 1483, 30 C.R.2d 469 [provision waiving lessee's right to recover "bonus value" in event of condemnation constituted waiver of right to recover value of below market rental]; South San Francisco v. Mayer (1998) 67 C.A.4th 1350, 1356, 79 C.R.2d 704, supra, §1182; San Diego Metropolitan Transit Dev. Bd. v. Handlery Hotel (1999) 73 C.A.4th 517, 533, 86 C.R.2d 473 ["where precondemnation conduct does not interrupt or affect a commercial lessee's enjoyment of its leasehold and that interest expires naturally giving rise to no compensable real property interest, no derivative compensable personal property interest remains ... because once the leasehold is terminated, so is the business"]; Kong v. Hawaiian Gardens, supra, 108 C.A.4th 1039 [in inverse condemnation action, trial court erred in sustaining defendant's demurrer without leave to amend based on fact that plaintiff's maximum term of occupancy under original sublease had expired before defendant exercised right to possession; defendant and lessor had executed lease agreement extending lessor's right to use property until needed and plaintiff continued to occupy premises as lessor's sublessee]; 22 A.L.R.5th 327 [validity, construction, and effect of statute or lease provision expressly governing rights and compensation of lessee on condemnation of leased property]; 56 Proof of Facts 3d 419 [lessee's recovery of compensation].) (On right of holder of unexpired leasehold interest to compensation when land is condemned by U.S., see Alamo Land & Cattle Co. v. Arizona (1976) 424 U.S. 295, 96 S.Ct. 910, 916, 47 L.Ed.2d 1, 8.)

(5) Valuation. The basic theory of the lessee's compensation is the same as that governing the taking of fee interests. The lessee is entitled to receive the market value of the unexpired term of the leasehold, consisting of the difference between the lease rental and the rental value, i.e., any excess that the lease might bring in on a sale. (See Kishlar v. Southern Pac. R. Co. (1901) 134 C. 636, 639, 66 P. 848; 58 A.L.R.3d 566 [goodwill or going concern value as element of compensation]; 17 A.L.R.4th 337 [measure and elements of lessee's compensation]; 26 Am.Jur.2d (2004 ed.), Eminent Domain §367 et seq.; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §10.3.) (On method of valuation, see California v. Whitlow (1966) 243 C.A.2d 490, 497, 52 C.R. 336; People v. Lynbar (1967) 253 C.A.2d 870, 879, 62 C.R. 320, supra, §1222; Los Angeles v. American Savings & Loan Assn. (1972) 26 C.A.3d 7, 12, 102 C.R. 439; on oil lessee's right to use surface for development of oil and gas resources as compensable, see Costa Mesa Union School Dist. of Orange v. Security First Nat. Bank (1967) 254 C.A.2d 4, 12, 62 C.R. 113.)

(6) Trade Fixtures. The lessee may also be entitled to compensation for the value of trade fixtures that, as between the lessor and the lessee, were removable by the lessee. For purposes of determining what land is taken, they are regarded as real property and their value is included in the award (see supra, §1225); but as between the lessor and lessee, the lessee is either entitled to their value as part of the award or may have their cost considered in determining the value of the leasehold. (See Almota Farmers Elevator & Warehouse Co. v. United States (1973) 409 U.S. 470, 93 S.Ct. 791, 794, 35 L.Ed.2d 1, 7 [lessee owning improvements with useful life beyond term of lease was entitled to what would be paid in open market by buyer with reasonable expectation that lease would be renewed, not merely salvage value of improvements]; People v. Klopstock (1944) 24 C.2d 897, 903, 151 P.2d 641.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(4) Right to Compensation. See 96 Am.Jur. Trials 211 [Condemnation of Leasehold Interests].

142 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

8. Divided Interests.

b. Encumbrances.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1251

[§ 1251] Encumbrances.

(1) Deduction of Amount of Indebtedness. Where the property to be taken is encumbered by a lien (broadly defined to include a security interest, arising from contract, statute, common law, or equity; see C.C.P. 1265.210), the plaintiff may elect to have the lien continue and the amount not due deducted from the judgment. The plaintiff's liability for taxes, however, cannot be deducted. (C.C.P. 1265.220.)

(2) Partial Taking and Allocation of Award Between Encumbrancer and Owner. Where there is only a partial taking, the lienholder is entitled to share in the award only to the extent of impairment of the security, and the lien will continue on the part of the property not taken. (C.C.P. 1265.225(a); see 15 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 227 [Valuation of Mortgagee's Interest on Partial Condemnation]; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1014, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 105; on what constitutes impairment of security, see infra, §1252.) This rule applies regardless of a contrary agreement at the time the indebtedness is created. However, the lienholder and owner may, after commencement of the eminent domain proceeding, agree on apportionment of the award. (C.C.P. 1265.225(b).)

The amount payable to the lienholder cannot include a prepayment penalty. (C.C.P. 1265.240.)

(3) Partial Taking and Allocation Between Senior and Junior Encumbrancers. C.C.P. 1265.230 provides for the special situation arising "where there is a partial taking of property encumbered by a lien and the part taken or some portion of it is also encumbered by a junior lien that extends to only a portion of the property encumbered by the senior lien." (C.C.P. 1265.230(a).) The method of allocation is set forth in C.C.P. 1265.230(c), (d), (e), and is summarized in the Law Revision Commission Comment as follows:

The allocation procedure of C.C.P. 1265.230 "is designed to allow adjustment of the portion of the condemnation award available to the lienholders so that both the senior and junior lienholders will retain security interests proportionate to those existing before the taking. If the amount is not sufficient to pay both in full, it will be initially allocated to pay the full amount of the senior lien with any balance to the junior. At that time, the court will determine the adequacy of the remaining property to secure the junior lien. If it determines that the junior lienholder's security is disproportionately low, the court may make adjustments as to the initial allocation to place the junior in the same relative position as before the taking. The adjustment, made by reducing the allocation to the senior and adding to that of the junior, is permissible only if it preserves the proportional security of the senior lienholder."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

143 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

8. Divided Interests.

c. Partial Taking and Impairment of Security.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1252

[§ 1252] Partial Taking and Impairment of Security.

In People v. Redwood Baseline, Ltd. (1978) 84 C.A.3d 662, 149 C.R. 11, there was a partial taking of property subject to first and second deeds of trust. The owner claimed the entire award; the trial judge found that the security of the trust deed holders had been impaired and apportioned the award. Held, affirmed, in an elaborate opinion discussing all the theories of impairment and apportionment.

(a) The owner urged application of the debt equivalency rule, that impairment is the reduction in the value of the property below the amount of the debt secured. But the significant consideration in applying the rule is whether the security transaction is to terminate (as by foreclosure). (84 C.A.3d 677.) In that situation, the lienholder is fully protected if the value of the property is at least equal to the amount of the debt. (84 C.A.3d 684.) But where, as here, the transaction will continue, application of the rule would be inequitable and inconsistent with the essential bargain and reasonable expectations of the parties. The lienholder bargains for and expects a margin of security over and above the amount of the debt, and both debtor and creditor generally expect the margin of security to increase with time, e.g., where payments of principal and interest are made periodically. (84 C.A.3d 683.)

(b) The original ratio rule (security to debt ratio) is more equitable, but does not truly reflect the real bargain of the parties that the lienholder will have the security of the entire property even if it has increased in value. (84 C.A.3d 685.)

(c) Under the pre-take ratio rule, urged by the lienholders, the security would be deemed impaired if the debt ratio is less than that existing immediately prior to the taking. This rule is favored by most of the commentators, is prescribed by C.C.P. 1265.230 for allocating the award between junior and senior encumbrancers (see supra, §1251), and would achieve an equitable result in many, but not all cases. (84 C.A.3d 686.)

(d) Two other rules have been suggested: (1) comparing the market value of the secured debt before and after the partial condemnation, and (2) equating impairment with the reduction in value of the property below the margin of safety (the conservative lender rule). (84 C.A.3d 687.)

(e) Each rule may be appropriate in a given situation, and the question should "be determined in light of the circumstances of the particular case considering all of the relevant factors." These include, among others: "whether the debt and security transaction resulted from a sale or a loan; whether or not a deficiency judgment is legally permissible; the terms for repayment; the interest rate charged compared with the prevailing interest rate in similar transactions; the original, pretake and posttake security to debt ratios; the length of time the transaction has been in effect; the amount of the debtor's equity and the amount actually invested by the debtor in the property constituting the security; the payment record of the debtor prior to the partial condemnation; the length of time the transaction is to continue in force after the partial condemnation; whether or not the partial condemnation necessitates repair to or reconstruction of the property; the amount of the annual taxes and assessments against the property; whether the debt is currently paid or is in default; facts bearing on the likelihood of default by the debtor; the nature of the security property; whether or not the security property is likely to be readily salable; and whether or not it is likely it can be sold at a foreclosure sale for a price approximating its fair market value." (84 C.A.3d 688.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

144 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

8. Divided Interests.

d. Future Interests.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1253

[§ 1253] Future Interests.

(1) Use Restriction Coupled With Right to Possession on Violation. Early cases denied compensation to the holder of a power of termination so remote as to lack substantial value. (See Romero v. Department of Public Works (1941) 17 C.2d 189, 194, 109 P.2d 662; People v. Fresno (1962) 210 C.A.2d 500, 516, 26 C.R. 853 [noting Restatement view that compensation is authorized where condition or event is probable at time of condemnation]; Rest., Property §53, Comment c.)

Contrary to the implication of Romero, compensation for contingent future interests based on violation of a use restriction is available as follows:

(a) "If violation of the use restriction was otherwise reasonably imminent, the owner of the contingent future interest is entitled to compensation for its value, if any." (C.C.P. 1265.410(a)(1).)

(b) "If violation of the use restriction was not otherwise reasonably imminent but the benefit of the use restriction was appurtenant to other property, the owner of the contingent future interest is entitled to compensation to the extent that the failure to comply with the use restriction damages the dominant premises to which the restriction was appurtenant and of which he was the owner." (C.C.P. 1265.410(a)(2).)

When the contingent future interest is not compensable under this provision, but the use restriction is that the property be devoted to a particular charitable or public use, the compensation must be devoted "to the same or similar use coupled with the same contingent future interest." (C.C.P. 1265.410(b).)

In Palm Springs v. Living Desert Reserve (1999) 70 C.A.4th 613, 82 C.R.2d 859, plaintiff city wanted to build a golf course on donated property it had accepted 3 years earlier on the express condition that it be used in perpetuity as a desert wildlife preserve. When it could not come to terms with defendant, the holder of the reversionary interest, plaintiff sought to take the property by eminent domain. The trial judge held that defendant's reversionary interest was not compensable. Held, reversed.

(a) Under C.C.P. 1265.410(a), "the owner of the contingent future interest is entitled to compensation for its value"

if "violation of the use restriction was otherwise reasonably imminent." (70 C.A.4th 624.) The reasonable imminence of a violation is to be determined objectively, i.e., whether reasonably prudent persons impartially looking at the circumstances would consider it to be reasonable. Thus, the fact that the city did not want to violate the restriction and lose its fee was irrelevant. (70 C.A.4th 625.)

(b) As used in the statute, "otherwise" in "otherwise reasonably imminent" "refers to the exclusion of consideration of the eminent domain proceedings." (70 C.A.4th 625.) Without this exclusion, the owner of the present interest would suffer an unfair forfeiture. However, here the condemnee and the grantee were one and the same, and condemnation of the future interest would not divest plaintiff of its present interest in the property and thus, would not prevent it from continuing to use the property in conformance with the use restriction. "That it did not plan to do so was not a decision forced upon it by the condemnation, but rather was its own voluntary choice, for which it should be held accountable." (70 C.A.4th 626, 627.)

(2) Property Subject to Life Tenancy. When the property is subject to a life tenancy, the life tenant or other person having an interest in the property may petition for the court to order any of the following:

(a) "[A]pportionment and distribution of the award based on the value of the interest of life tenant and remainderman." (C.C.P. 1265.420(a).)

(b) Compensation for the purchase of "comparable property to be held subject to the life tenancy." (C.C.P. 1265.420(b).)

(c) "[C]ompensation to be held in trust and invested and the income (and, to the extent the instrument that created the life tenancy permits, principal) to be distributed to the life tenant for the remainder of the tenancy." (C.C.P. 1265.420(c).)

(d) Other equitable arrangements. (C.C.P. 1265.420(d).) (See Model Eminent Domain Code, §1015, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 106.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

145 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

a. Payment and Final Order.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1254

[§ 1254] Payment and Final Order.

(1) Payment of Judgment. The plaintiff must pay the full amount required by the judgment within (a) 30 days after final judgment, or (b) 30 days after the conclusion of other court proceedings (including a federal court proceeding) challenging the judgment or the condemnation proceedings, whichever is later. (C.C.P. 1268.010(a).) (See C.C.P. 1235.120, supra, §1171 [defining "final judgment"]; Arechiga v. Housing Authority of Los Angeles (1960) 183 C.A.2d 835, 842, 7 C.R. 338; F & L Farm Co. v. City Council of Lindsay (1998) 65 C.A.4th 1345, 1355, 77 C.R.2d 360 [city could not avoid paying inverse condemnation judgment by claiming that constitutional debt and tax limitations prevented its imposition of taxes and assessments to raise money to pay judgment]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §10.25; 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §1.) Payment must be made either directly to the defendant (with credit for amounts previously withdrawn), or by deposit with the court under C.C.P. 1268.110 (infra, §1255). (C.C.P. 1268.010(b).)

At the request of the property owner, however, the public entity may enter into an agreement specifying the manner of payment of compensation. Payment may be made over a period of up to 10 years, with interest no greater than that authorized in connection with the issuance of bonds. (C.C.P. 1263.015; see Community Redevelopment Agency of Hawthorne v. Force Electronics (1997) 55 C.A.4th 622, 632, 64 C.R.2d 209, 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, Supp., §401 [defendant has right to be paid within 30 days of judgment or have property returned; Govt.C. 970.6, providing for installment payments, is available only at defendant's option]; C.E.B., 2 Condemnation Practice 2d, §10.26.)

(2) Defendant's Remedies for Nonpayment. If the plaintiff fails to pay the full amount within the time required, the defendant may elect either to (a) execute on the judgment, or (b) make a noticed motion for dismissal of the proceeding, without first resorting to execution. (C.C.P. 1268.020(a), (b), (c).) However, the second remedy is available only after service on the plaintiff, by registered or certified mail, of a written notice of failure to pay, and plaintiff's subsequent failure to pay for 20 days after such notice. (C.C.P. 1268.020(b).)

If the plaintiff is a public entity, enforcement is pursuant to Govt.C. 810 et seq. (C.C.P. 1268.020(a)(1); see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §§53, 400 et seq.)

(3) Final Order of Condemnation. On a party's application, the court must make a final order of condemnation if it finds that (a) the judgment is a final judgment, and (b) the full amount has been paid or satisfied. (C.C.P. 1268.030(a).) The order must describe the property taken and identify the judgment authorizing the taking. (C.C.P. 1268.030(b).) The party on whose application the order was made must serve notice of the order on all other parties affected. (C.C.P. 1268.030(c).)

An affected party may record the order in the county where the property is located, and serve notice of recordation on all other parties affected. (C.C.P. 1268.030(c).) "Title to the property vests in the plaintiff upon the date of recordation." (C.C.P. 1268.030(c).)

Vesting of title by recordation of the order ordinarily gives the condemnor the right to possession at that time. But an exception was recognized in Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco v. Superior Court (1970) 13 C.A.3d 561, 568, 91 C.R. 886. The taking by petitioner, a redevelopment agency, was subject to the controlling federal statute and regulation specifying that possession can be had only on giving a 90-day notice.

(4) Effect of Sale Pending Final Order. Compensation is awarded to the person who owned the property at the time it was taken. Thus, if property is sold prior to divestment of title by the award, and the deed is silent on the matter, the money goes to the purchaser. (Security Co. v. Rice (1932) 215 C. 263, 266, 9 P.2d 817; Brick v. Cazaux (1937) 9 C.2d 549, 554, 71 P.2d 588.)

Ordinarily, the time of taking is the time of the final decree, but an exception was formerly recognized where the condemnor exercised the right to take immediate possession (supra, §1216). It was held that the subsequent divestment of title merely confirmed the prior taking and that the time of physical possession determined the right to compensation. The result was that where the property was sold pending the action, the original owner got the money. (People v. Joerger (1936) 12 C.A.2d 665, 671, 55 P.2d 1269; Long Beach v. Aistrup (1958) 164 C.A.2d 41, 48, 330 P.2d 282 [same rule applied to a county's lien for general taxes attaching after immediate possession taken]; United States v. Dow (1958) 357 U.S. 17, 78 S.Ct. 1039, 1045, 2 L.Ed.2d 1109, 1115 [same rule applies to condemnation by U.S.].) However, the law now states a uniform rule whether or not possession was previously taken: title vests on recordation. (C.C.P. 1268.030(c).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Payment of Judgment.

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §1. Community Redevelopment Agency of Hawthorne case:

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Enforcement of Judgment, §431.

(2) Defendant's Remedies for Nonpayment.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Enforcement of Judgment, §§61, 429 et seq.

146 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

b. Deposit and Withdrawal of Award.

1. Deposit After Judgment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1255

[§ 1255] Deposit After Judgment.

(1) Right To Deposit. The plaintiff may, at any time after entry of judgment, deposit in court for the persons entitled the full amount of the award plus interest then due, less amounts previously paid or deposited before judgment under C.C.P. 1255.010 (supra, §1212). (C.C.P. 1268.110(a).) The deposit may be made notwithstanding pendency of an appeal, motion for new trial, or motion to vacate or set aside the judgment; but it cannot be made after the judgment has been reversed, vacated, or set aside. (C.C.P. 1268.110(b).) (On deposit in state or county treasury, and investment of money, see C.C.P. 1268.150, similar to C.C.P. 1255.070, supra, §1213.)

By making a deposit, "the plaintiff does not waive the right to appeal from the judgment, the right to move to abandon, or the right to request a new trial." (C.C.P. 1268.170.)

(2) Service of Notice. Notice of the deposit, with the date and amount, must be served on the parties who have interests in the property. Service must be made in the manner required for service of an order for possession (C.C.P. 1268.220, infra, §1257), and service of an order for possession is a sufficient compliance. The parties are entitled to notice as follows: (a) If the deposit is made prior to apportionment of the award, all parties who have appeared in the proceeding. (b) If it is made after apportionment of the award, all parties determined by the order of apportionment to have an interest in the money deposited. (C.C.P. 1268.120.)

(3) Increase or Decrease in Amount. (a) The court, on a defendant's motion, may order the deposit of an additional amount that "the court determines to be necessary to secure payment of any further compensation, costs, or interest that may be recovered in the proceeding." (b) Thereafter, on a party's motion, the court may order an increase or decrease in the additional amount. (c) A defendant may withdraw all or part of the amount deposited "only if it is determined that he is entitled to recover such amount in the proceeding." (C.C.P. 1268.130.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

147 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

b. Deposit and Withdrawal of Award.

2. Withdrawal of Deposit.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1256

[§ 1256] Withdrawal of Deposit.

(1) Application for Withdrawal and Effect. On a court order, a defendant with an interest may be paid from the deposit. The defendant applies for the order, filing either a satisfaction of the judgment or a receipt for the money, which constitutes "a waiver by operation of law of all claims and defenses except a claim for greater compensation." (C.C.P. 1268.140(a).) (See People v. Gutierrez (1962) 207 C.A.2d 759, 24 C.R. 781 [owner retained right to move for new trial on amount of damages after withdrawal of full amount of judgment]; San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. v. Fremont Meadows (1971) 20 C.A.3d 797, 805, 97 C.R. 898 [owner was entitled to appeal, notwithstanding withdrawal of amount of judgment]; Regents of Univ. of Calif. v. Morris (1968) 266 C.A.2d 616, 634, 72 C.R. 406 [receipt constituted waiver of questions regarding right of condemnation, including constitutionality]; San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Moreland Inv. Co. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 1151, 1156, 231 C.R. 274 [stipulated order for withdrawal of deposit treated as receipt under C.C.P. 1268.140(a)(2); right to appeal was preserved].)

In People v. Neider (1961) 55 C.2d 832, 13 C.R. 196, 361 P.2d 916, plaintiff paid the money into court. Defendant drew it out, and then took an appeal from that part of the judgment fixing the award. Plaintiff contended that, because it made no attempt to invoke the predecessor statute by express notice of the deposit, the statutory protection of defendant's right to appeal was inapplicable, and the general rule of waiver by acceptance of benefits applied (see 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §212). Held, the appeal was good; his right could not be frustrated by the condemnor's failure to expressly invoke the statute in depositing the sum awarded. (55 C.2d 837.)

(2) Conditions. The following procedure is provided:

(a) If the award has not been apportioned, the applicant must give notice to all other defendants who have appeared and who have an interest; if it has been apportioned, the applicant must give "notice to the other defendants as the court may require." (C.C.P. 1268.140(b).)

(b) On objection to the withdrawal by a party to the proceeding, the court has discretion to require the filing of an undertaking on the conditions prescribed in C.C.P. 1255.240 for withdrawal prior to judgment (see supra, §1215). (C.C.P. 1268.140(c).)

(c) If the judgment has been reversed, vacated, or set aside, withdrawal may be made only pursuant to C.C.P. 1255.210 et seq. (supra, §1215). (C.C.P. 1268.110(c), 1268.140(d).)

(3) Repayment of Excess Withdrawal. (a) An excess amount withdrawn must be paid to the parties entitled to it, and the court must enter judgment accordingly. (b) The judgment includes interest only where the amount withdrawn by one defendant is to be paid to another defendant. (c) If the judgment is not paid within 30 days after entry, the court may, on motion, enter judgment against the sureties, if any. (d) The court may, in its discretion and with security that it deems appropriate, grant a party obligated to pay the plaintiff a stay of execution, which must not exceed 1 year following entry of the judgment under this section. (C.C.P. 1268.160; see Downey v. Johnson (1978) 79 C.A.3d 970, 973, 145 C.R. 298.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Application for Withdrawal and Effect.

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Appeal, §67.

148 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

c. Possession After Judgment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1257

[§ 1257] Possession After Judgment.

(1) Power of Court. "The court in which a proceeding in eminent domain is brought has the power to: (a) Determine the right to possession of the property, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, in accordance with this title. (b) Enforce any of its orders for possession by appropriate process. The plaintiff is entitled to enforcement of an order for possession as a matter of right." (C.C.P. 1230.050.) The "appropriate process" includes writs of possession (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §317 et seq.) and orders for possession under 1268.210 et seq. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.) (On order for possession before judgment, see supra, §1216.)

(2) Application. If the plaintiff is not in possession, he or she may, at any time after entry of judgment, apply ex parte for an order for possession, which must be granted on a showing that the judgment determines that the plaintiff is entitled to take and has made the deposit required by C.C.P. 1255.010 (supra, §1212) or C.C.P. 1268.110 (supra, §1255). (C.C.P. 1268.210(a).) (See People v. Loop (1958) 161 C.A.2d 466, 473, 326 P.2d 902; Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Superior Court (1973) 33 C.A.3d 321, 325, 109 C.R. 10 [on proper showing, order is mandatory].) If the judgment is reversed, vacated, or set aside, the plaintiff may obtain possession only pursuant to C.C.P. 1255.410 (supra, §1216). (C.C.P. 1267.210(c).)

(3) Order. The order must state the date of authorization to take possession, and if a deposit is made, the fact, date, and amount of the deposit. (C.C.P. 1268.210(b).)

(4) Service of Order. The plaintiff must serve a copy of the order on each defendant and his or her attorney either personally or by mail; but a single service or mailing to one of several persons with a common business or residence address is sufficient. (C.C.P. 1268.220(a), (b).) The time of service is specified: (a) If the property is "lawfully occupied by a person dwelling thereon or by a farm or business operation," at least 30 days prior to the date possession is to be taken. (b) In other cases, at least 10 days prior to that date. (C.C.P. 1268.220(a).)

The plaintiff, by taking possession, does not waive the right to appeal from the judgment, to move to abandon, or to request a new trial. (C.C.P. 1268.230, similar to C.C.P. 1255.470, supra, §1216.) Nothing in the article limits the exercise of police power in emergency situations. (C.C.P. 1268.240, similar to C.C.P. 1255.480, supra, §1216.) (See 40 A.L.R.3d 203 [payment of award in court as affecting condemnor's right to appeal].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Power of Court.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Enforcement of Judgment, §325.

149 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

d. Interest.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1258

[§ 1258] In General.

(1) Right to Interest. Interest, including interest accrued due to prejudgment possession by the plaintiff, and any offset against interest, must be assessed by the court. (C.C.P. 1268.340; see Bellflower City School Dist. v. Skaggs (1959) 52 C.2d 278, 281, 339 P.2d 848; Redevelopment Agency of San Francisco v. Goodman (1975) 53 C.A.3d 424, 430, 125 C.R. 818; 36 A.L.R.2d 337 [interest on damages for period before judgment for injuring or detaining property]; 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §272 et seq. [interest on judgment].)

A property owner is not entitled to interest on a condemnation award where, after judgment, the proceeding is abandoned, the action is dismissed, and the award is not paid. (Santa Clarita Water Co. v. Lyons (1984) 161 C.A.3d 450, 460, 207 C.R. 698; People v. Union Pac. Land Resources Corp. (1986) 179 C.A.3d 307, 315, 316, 224 C.R. 487 [following Lyons; there is no right to interest where proceeding is abandoned in absence of taking possession]; see 92 A.L.R.2d 355 [liability on abandonment for interest on award or judgment].)

(2) Time When Interest Begins To Run. Interest commences to accrue from the earliest of three dates: (a) the date of entry of the judgment; (b) the date the plaintiff takes possession; or (c) the date after which the plaintiff is authorized to take possession, as stated in the order of possession. (C.C.P. 1268.310; see Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern Calif. v. Adams (1940) 16 C.2d 676, 680, 107 P.2d 618 [time of taking possession]; People v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (2000) 22 C.4th 791, 798, 803, 94 C.R.2d 609, 996 P.2d 711 [declining to apply C.C.P. 1268.310 where, under unique facts of case, application would defeat purpose behind statute and go far beyond legislative intent; instead, interest would run from date condemnee asked state to begin condemnation proceedings and asserted its statutory right to compensation]; Riverside County Flood Control & Water Conservation Dist. v. Halman (1968) 262 C.A.2d 510, 517, 69 C.R. 1 [date of entry of judgment]; People v. Williams (1973) 30 C.A.3d 980, 982, 106 C.R. 795 [date of possession specified in entry agreement].)

If property is taken or damaged prior to judgment, the constitutional requirement of "just compensation" requires an award of interest for the delayed payment. To meet this constitutional command, the language "takes possession of the property" in C.C.P. 1268.310(b) must be construed to include a constructive taking and to allow interest based on an inverse condemnation claim. (People v. Gardella Square (1988) 200 C.A.3d 559, 571, 574, 246 C.R. 139, citing Redevelopment Agency of Burbank v. Gilmore (1985) 38 C.3d 790, 214 C.R. 904, 700 P.2d 794.)

(3) Time When Interest Ceases To Run. Interest ceases to accrue on the earliest of three dates: (a) regarding amounts deposited before judgment, the date of withdrawal; (b) regarding amounts deposited after judgment, the date of deposit; (c) regarding amounts paid to a person entitled to payment, the date of payment. (C.C.P. 1268.320.)

(4) Offsets Against Interest. (a) If the defendant continues in actual possession after the date interest begins to accrue, the value of that possession is offset against the interest. The value is presumed to be the rate of interest calculated under C.C.P. 1268.350 (infra, §1259) on the compensation awarded. (C.C.P. 1268.330(a).) (See Placer County Water Agency v. Hofman (1985) 165 C.A.3d 890, 903, 211 C.R. 894 [there is no offset where easement is taken; owner cannot remain in actual possession of easement once it is taken].) (b) If the defendant receives income from the property after the date interest begins to accrue, the net income is offset against the interest. (C.C.P. 1268.330(b).) (See People v. Giumarra Vineyards Corp. (1966) 245 C.A.2d 309, 321, 53 C.R. 902; Stockton v. Albert Brocchini Farms (2001) 92 C.A.4th 193, 203, 111 C.R.2d 662 [trial court erred in limiting plaintiff's offset rights to defendant's actual return on land (here, less than zero); limiting offset would allow defendant beneficial use of asset while tying plaintiff's right to offset to defendant's ability to make profit from it].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Right to Interest.

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §326 et seq.(4) Offsets Against Interest. See Inglewood Redevelopment Agency v. Aklilu (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1095, 1121, 64 C.R.3d 519 [trial court did not err in failing to hold hearing on offset of rent against interest because offset was mandatory, trial court had already received evidence related to fair market rent of property, and there was no factual dispute].

150 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

d. Interest.

2. Market Rate of Interest.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1259

[§ 1259] Market Rate of Interest.

(1) In General. As originally enacted, C.C.P. 1268.310 provided for "legal interest" on the amount of compensation. The statutory maximum was held unconstitutional in Redevelopment Agency of Burbank v. Gilmore (1985) 38 C.3d 790, 214 C.R. 904, 700 P.2d 794. Plaintiff redevelopment agency condemned defendants' property and took prejudgment possession under C.C.P. 1255.410 et seq. (supra, §1216), after depositing the probable amount of compensation under C.C.P. 1255.010 et seq. (supra, §1212). Defendants withdrew the deposited amount. The value of the property determined at trial substantially exceeded the amount deposited, and the judgment awarded defendants the difference between the final assessed value and the deposit, together with interest at the legal rate (then 7%). Held, the constitutional requirement of "just compensation" required computation of interest at the prevailing market rate.

(a) Statutory interest ceiling is constitutionally inadequate. Where private property is taken for public use, the constitutional requirement of just compensation means that the owner must be put in the same financial position he or she would be in if the property had not been taken. If the property is taken and used before payment, the owner is entitled to the full equivalent of the value of the use "at the time of the taking paid contemporaneously with the taking." Interest at "a proper rate" is fair reimbursement for the deferred payment. (38 C.3d 797, quoting Seaboard Air Line Ry. Co. v. United States (1923) 261 U.S. 299, 43 S.Ct. 354, 67 L.Ed. 664, and Phelps v. United States (1927) 274 U.S. 341, 47 S.Ct. 611, 71 L.Ed. 1083.) A statutory interest ceiling cannot prevail "where it falls short of constitutional 'just compensation' under the standard of Seaboard and Phelps." (38 C.3d 797.) Under the Eminent Domain Law, a property owner is permanently deprived of all property rights when a condemnor deposits probable compensation and obtains possession. A constitutional taking occurs at that time, and "just compensation" is the monetary equivalent of the value of the property paid at that time. (38 C.3d 801.)

(b) Computation of market rate of interest. Constitutionally acceptable interest on a delayed payment "should bear the same relationship to rates the condemnee could have achieved by investing the funds if they had been paid at the time of the taking." Interest is frequently calculated at the rate that would be earned by a "reasonably prudent person" investing to produce "a reasonable return while maintaining safety of principal." (38 C.3d 803.) "Absent specific statutory guidance, ... the 'prudent investor' principle is a sound basis for calculation of interest as just compensation. This doctrine seems best suited to give the condemnee the 'full and perfect' monetary equivalent of a timely cash payment for his property." (38 C.3d 804.) Determining the proper rate of interest is primarily a task for trial courts on a case-by-case basis, examining "the rates prevailing during the period a condemnation payment was delayed for all forms of money-market obligations, governmental and private, which prudent depositors and investors normally purchase for income purposes, and whose terms or maturities fall within the period of delay." (38 C.3d 806.) (See Redevelopment Agency of Fresno v. Erganian (1989) 211 C.A.3d 166, 170, 173, 259 C.R. 213 [distinguishing Redevelopment Agency of Burbank; property owner who has right to withdraw deposit under C.C.P. 1255.075 (supra, §1213), but chooses not to do so, is entitled to legal rate rather than market rate of interest].)

(2) Statutory Provisions. Interest is computed as prescribed by C.C.P. 1268.350 (C.C.P. 1268.310), which provides that (a) interest is calculated semiannually for the first 6 months and the last 6 months of the calendar year; and (b) the rate is the "apportionment rate" calculated by the Controller as the rate of earnings on the Surplus Money Investment Fund for the preceding 6-month period. (C.C.P. 1268.350.) Interest payable for one 6-month period is compounded, drawing interest in each succeeding period. (C.C.P. 1268.360.) (See Smith v. Los Angeles (1989) 214 C.A.3d 266, 294, 262 C.R. 754 [fact that C.C.P. 1268.350 was not applicable to period in question (prior to January 1, 1987) did not preclude trial judge from relying on statutory standard as reliable measure of rate of return]; Glendale Redevelopment Agency v. Parks (1993) 18 C.A.4th 1409, 1418, 1420, 23 C.R.2d 14 [C.C.P. 1268.350 is constitutional].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Statutory Provisions. C.C.P. 1268.350 and 1268.360, as amended in 2006, provide for the quarterly calculation of interest.

151 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

e. Ad Valorem Property Taxes.

1. Liability, Proration, and Payment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1260

[§ 1260] Liability, Proration, and Payment.

(1) Liability. As between the plaintiff and the defendant, the plaintiff is liable for ad valorem taxes, penalties, and costs prorated from and including the date of apportionment as determined by Rev.C. 5082. (C.C.P. 1268.410.) If the defendant pays an amount for which the plaintiff is liable, that amount must be repaid to the defendant. (C.C.P. 1268.430.) (On taxing authority as party, see C.C.P. 1250.250, supra, §1205; on liability of owner for taxes accruing prior to final order of condemnation, see Ontario v. Kelber (1973) 35 C.A.3d 751, 755, 111 C.R. 222.)

(2) Order To Certify Information. The court by order gives the tax collector or auditor, where both are elected officials, the legal description of the property, and directs the tax collector or auditor to certify to the court specified information. (C.C.P. 1260.250(a).) The order must be made on or before the earliest of the following dates: (a) date of order for possession; (b) date set for trial; (c) date of entry of judgment. (C.C.P. 1260.250(b).)

(3) Information To Be Certified. The court order directs the tax collector or auditor to promptly certify the following information:

(a) "The current assessed value of the property together with its assessed identification number." (C.C.P. 1260.250(c)(1).)

(b) All unpaid taxes on the property, and penalties and costs that have accrued on it "while on the secured roll, levied for prior tax years that constitute a lien on the property." (C.C.P. 1260.250(c)(2).)

(c) All unpaid taxes on the property, and penalties and costs that have accrued on it "while on the secured roll, levied for the current tax year that constitute a lien on the property prorated to, but not including, the date of apportionment determined" pursuant to Rev.C. 5082 "or the date of trial, whichever is earlier. If the amount of the current taxes is not ascertainable at the time of proration, the amount shall be estimated and computed based on the assessed value for the current assessment year and the tax rate levied on the property for the immediately prior tax year." (C.C.P. 1260.250(c)(3).)

(d) "The actual or estimated amount of taxes on the property that are or will become a lien on the property in the next succeeding tax year prorated to, but not including, the date of apportionment determined" pursuant to Rev.C. 5082 "or the date of trial, whichever is earlier. Any estimated amount of taxes shall be computed based on the assessed value of the property for the current assessment year and the tax rate levied on the property for the current tax year." (C.C.P. 1260.250(c)(4).)

(e) "The amount of the taxes, penalties, and costs allocable to one day of the current tax year, and where applicable, the amount allocable to one day of the next succeeding tax year," which is referred to as the "daily prorate." (C.C.P. 1260.250(c)(5).)

(f) The total of C.C.P. 1260.250(c)(2), 1260.250(c)(3), and 1260.250(c)(4). (C.C.P. 1260.250(c)(6).)

If the property does not have a separate valuation on the assessment roll, the information required is for the larger parcel of which the property is a part. (C.C.P. 1260.250(d).)

(4) Order for Payment. (a) The judgment must separately state the amount certified and order that it be paid to the tax collector from the award. (b) If the amount is prorated to the date of trial the order must state an additional amount for the period between the commencement of trial and the date of apportionment. (C.C.P. 1260.250(e).) The date of apportionment is the date (1) of conveyance to the public entity, or of recording the final order of condemnation, (2) of actual possession, or (3) after which the entity may take possession, whichever is earliest. (Rev.C. 5082.)

(5) When Payment Is Not Ordered. The board of supervisors may transfer unpaid taxes, penalties, and costs to the unsecured roll (Rev.C. 5087), and in that event the court makes no award of taxes in the judgment. (C.C.P. 1260.250(f).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

152 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

e. Ad Valorem Property Taxes.

2. Exempt Property.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1261

[§ 1261] Exempt Property.

(1) Moratorium on Collection of Taxes. When the property to be acquired by the United States, the state, or a county, city, school district, or other public entity will become exempt under federal or state law, taxes are not collectible. (C.C.P. 1268.420(a); see Rev.C. 5081.) However, if the action is later dismissed, in whole or in part, the amount of unpaid taxes, penalties, and costs for which the plaintiff would have been liable under C.C.P. 1268.410 (see supra, §1260), is awarded to the defendant, and paid to the tax collector from the award. (C.C.P. 1268.420(b).)

(2) Refund of Taxes. If taxes have been collected on exempt property, the amount that would have been subject to cancellation under Rev.C. 5081 et seq. (see infra, §1262) is refunded. (C.C.P. 1268.440(a).) The public entity is deemed to be the person who paid the taxes if it reimbursed the defendant under C.C.P. 1268.430 (supra, §1260). (C.C.P. 1268.440(b).) These provisions apply to taxes paid on either the secured or unsecured roll. (C.C.P. 1268.440(c).)

(3) Separate Valuation. When the property acquired does not have a separate valuation on the roll (see supra, §1260), a party may, after taxes are subject to cancellation, apply for a separate valuation. (C.C.P. 1268.450.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

153 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

e. Ad Valorem Property Taxes.

3. Cancellation of Taxes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1262

[§ 1262] Cancellation of Taxes.

(1) Existing Liens on Property That Becomes Exempt. When exempt property (see Rev.C. 5081) is acquired by negotiated purchase or eminent domain, a lien for prior taxes is extinguished on acquisition and the lien "immediately transfers to the proceeds constituting the purchase price." (Rev.C. 5083.)

(2) Delinquent Taxes. Delinquent taxes, penalties, and costs for prior tax years are not cancelled when the property becomes exempt. They are paid through escrow or from the award; or, if unpaid for any reason, they are transferred to the unsecured roll and are collectible from the former owner or the public entity that acquired the property. (Rev.C. 5084.)

(3) Property Acquired Prior to Fiscal Year. If exempt property is acquired by negotiated purchase, gift, devise, or eminent domain between the lien date and the commencement of the fiscal year for which taxes are a lien on the property, the taxes for that fiscal year are cancelled and are not collectible from either the former owner or the acquiring public entity. (Rev.C. 5085.)

(4) Property Acquired After Commencement of Fiscal Year. If exempt property is acquired after the commencement of the fiscal year by negotiated purchase, gift, devise, or eminent domain, the portion of current taxes, penalties, and costs allocable to the part of the fiscal year that ends on the day before the date of apportionment (see Rev.C. 5082, supra, §1260) is collected in the same manner as delinquent taxes, and the balance is cancelled. (Rev.C. 5086.) A county may also provide for transfer of the allocable portion of unpaid current taxes to the unsecured roll, to be collected from the former owner. (Rev.C. 5087; see Rev.C. 5090 [transfer and collection].)

(5) Nominal Amounts. If the amount of taxes to be transferred to the unsecured roll is less than $ 20, the county may prescribe that the tax must be cancelled. (Rev.C. 5089.)

(6) Notice of Proposed Acquisition. When a public entity proposes to acquire property that will be exempt, it must notify the appropriate taxing authorities, within a reasonable time after the initial budgeting of funds for the proposed acquisition, of the approximate extent of the project and the estimated time of completion of all necessary acquisitions.

(Rev.C. 5091; see Rev.C. 5082.1 [duties of public entities on acquisition].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

154 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

f. Special Assessment Liens.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1263

[§ 1263] Special Assessment Liens.

(1) Joinder of Lienholder as Defendant. The holder of a lien securing a special assessment, or a bond representing the special assessment, must be named as a defendant, regardless of the nature of the special assessment and the manner of its collection. (C.C.P. 1250.250(b).)

(2) Certification of Information Instead of Answer. The holder of the lien may, instead of an answer, certify to the court, within 30 days after service of summons and complaint on the holder, all of the following information:

- (a) "A complete description of the lien." (C.C.P. 1250.250(b)(1).)
- (b) "A description of the property encumbered by the lien." (C.C.P. 1250.250(b)(2).)
- (c) "The amount remaining due on the lien as of the date of the certificate." (C.C.P. 1250.250(b)(3).)
- (d) The date on which each installment payable is due and its amount. (C.C.P. 1250.250(b)(4).)

A copy of the certification must be sent by first-class mail to all parties at the time it is provided to the court. Filing the certificate or answer is a general appearance. (C.C.P. 1250.250(c).)

(3) Payment Where Fixed Lien Special Assessment. A "fixed lien special assessment" is a nonrecurring assessment levied by a public entity in a fixed amount "for the capital expenditure for a specific improvement, whether collectible in a lump sum or in installments." (C.C.P. 1265.250(a)(1).) The amount must be paid to the lienholder from the award, or withheld from the award for payment pursuant to C.C.P. 1265.220 (see supra, §1251). (C.C.P. 1265.250(b)(1).) If there is a partial taking, the amount must be paid from the award; or at the option of the lienholder, the applicable statutory procedure, if any, for segregation and apportionment may be invoked. (C.C.P. 1265.250(b)(2).)

(4) Payment Where Special Annual Assessment. A "special annual assessment" is a recurring assessment levied "annually in an indeterminate amount by a local public entity, whether for the capital expenditure for a specific improvement or for other purposes." (C.C.P. 1265.250(a)(2).) The amount prorated to, but not including, the date of apportionment (see Rev.C. 5082), must be paid to the lienholder from the award. As between the plaintiff and the defendant, the plaintiff is liable for the amount prorated from and including the date of apportionment. (C.C.P. 1265.250(c)(1).) If there is a partial taking, the amount of the lien, reduced by the amount for which the plaintiff is liable, must be paid to the lienholder from the award. As between the plaintiff and the defendant, the plaintiff is liable for the amount "allocable to the part taken for the current assessment year, determined to the extent practicable in the same manner and by the same method as the amount of the assessment on the property for the current assessment year was determined, prorated from and including the date of apportionment" determined pursuant to Rev.C. 5082. (C.C.P. 1265.250(c)(2).)

The Government Code deals with special assessment liens where the property is acquired by negotiated purchase and sale, gift, or devise, as follows:

(a) If property is so acquired, except to the extent that the lien is paid out of escrow or is otherwise apportioned under applicable statutory procedure, the lien continues to encumber the property acquired and is enforceable against the public entity. It is payable in the manner and to the extent provided in C.C.P. 1265.250. (Govt.C. 53938.5.)

(b) If the property is part of a larger parcel, and there is no applicable statutory procedure for segregation and apportionment, a party to the transaction may, within 1 year after its completion, apply to the superior court of the county where all or part of the property is located, "and the court may segregate and apportion the lien among the parties." (Govt.C. 53939.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

155 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

g. Abandonment and Dismissal.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1264

[§ 1264] Abandonment and Dismissal.

(1) In General. After filing the complaint, but before the expiration of 30 days after final judgment, the plaintiff may abandon, in whole or in part, by serving on the defendant and filing a written notice of abandonment. (C.C.P. 1268.510(a).) Unless a motion to set the abandonment aside is granted (see infra, this section), the court, on a party's motion, must enter judgment "wholly or partially dismissing the proceeding." (C.C.P. 1268.510(c).) (See Community Dev. Com. v. Shuffler (1988) 198 C.A.3d 450, 458, 243 C.R. 719; Lincoln v. Barringer (2002) 102 C.A.4th 1211, 1229, 126 C.R.2d 178 [city did not abandon initial resolution of necessity for partial taking by later pursuing second resolution of necessity for remainder of property; second resolution had failed because remainder did not constitute uneconomical remnant under C.C.P. 1240.410, as asserted by city]; 5 A.L.R.2d 724 [condemnor's waiver, surrender, or limitation of rights after award]; 27 Am.Jur.2d (1996 ed.), Eminent Domain §567 et seq.; for form of request for dismissal, see Judicial Council Form No. 982(a)(5); on predecessor statute, see Torrance Unified School Dist. of Los Angeles v. Alway (1956) 145 C.A.2d 596, 600, 302 P.2d 881; Southern Public Util. Dist. v. Silva (1956) 47 C.2d 163, 165, 301 P.2d 841 [extension of time to pay award after final judgment does not extend time to abandon]; on award of costs and attorneys' fees to defendant, see infra, §1265; on denial of interest on unpaid award following abandonment, see supra, §1258.)

(2) Estoppel. Estoppel to abandon where the landowner materially changed his or her position was judicially recognized in Times-Mirror Co. v. Superior Court (1935) 3 C.2d 309, 44 P.2d 547, and is the basis for the statutory remedy. Under the Eminent Domain Law, the court may, on motion made within 30 days after filing of the notice, set the abandonment aside if it determines (a) that the position of the moving party has been substantially changed to his or her detriment in justifiable reliance on the proceeding, and (b) that the party cannot be restored to substantially the same position he or she was in before commencement of the proceeding. (C.C.P. 1268.510(b).) (See Torrance v. Superior Court (1976) 16 C.3d 195, 206, 127 C.R. 609, 545 P.2d 1313 [predecessor statute was designed to be applied in broad range of circumstances not limited to those involving immediate possession by condemnor; moving party met statutory test]; Redevelopment Agency of Pomona v. Heller (1988) 200 C.A.3d 517, 519, 522, 246 C.R. 160 [where defendant did not move to set abandonment aside within 30 days provided by C.C.P. 1268.510(b), damages for precondemnation delay under Klopping v. Whittier (1972) 8 C.3d 39, 104 C.R. 1, 500 P.2d 1345, supra, §1235, could be pursued only in separate action for inverse condemnation]; Los Angeles Unified School Dist. v. Trump Wilshire Associates (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1682, 1688, 50 C.R.2d 229 [claim of justifiable reliance was rejected, where property owner simply put its plans for long-term development on hold pending condemnation litigation]; Los Angeles Unified School Dist. v. Wilshire Center Marketplace (2001) 89 C.A.4th 1413, 1420, 108 C.R.2d 691 [defendant's pending inverse condemnation action did not estop plaintiff school district from enforcing judgment it had obtained after abandoning eminent domain action, which ordered return of amount plaintiff had deposited as probable compensation].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

156 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

h. Expenses and Damages on Dismissal or Defeat of Right To Condemn.

1. Litigation Expenses.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1265

[§ 1265] Litigation Expenses.

(1) In General. The defendant may recover litigation expenses when (a) the proceeding is wholly or partially dismissed for any reason, or (b) there is a final judgment that the plaintiff does not have the right to take the property. (C.C.P. 1268.610(a)); for definition of "litigation expenses," see C.C.P. 1235.140, supra, §1171.) They are claimed by a cost bill as in a civil action (see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §135 et seq.); and if the proceeding is dismissed on motion of the plaintiff, the cost bill must be filed within 30 days after notice of entry of judgment. (C.C.P. 1268.610(d).) (See 92 A.L.R.2d 355 [liability on abandonment for interest on award or judgment]; 68 A.L.R.3d 610 [what constitutes abandonment for purposes of liability for defendant's expenses]; Model Eminent Domain Code, §1303, 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 136.)

Where there is (a) a partial dismissal, or (b) a judgment that the plaintiff cannot acquire a portion of the property, or (c) a dismissal of one or more plaintiffs under C.C.P. 1260.020 (supra, §1219), the award is limited to "only those litigation expenses, or portion thereof, that would not have been incurred had the property sought to be acquired following the dismissal or judgment been the property originally sought to be acquired." (C.C.P. 1268.610(b).) And where (a) the plaintiff files a notice of abandonment or request for dismissal of a particular defendant, and (b) the court determines that the defendant did not have an interest in the property sought to be acquired, the court must award only those litigation expenses that defendant incurred up to that time. (C.C.P. 1268.610(c).)

In California v. Meyer (1985) 174 C.A.3d 1061, 220 C.R. 884, defendant property owner sought damages for unreasonable condemnation delay for the first time in a memorandum of costs for litigation expenses following abandonment. Held, delay damages were properly disallowed. Recovery of damages for unreasonable condemnation activities is authorized by Klopping v. Whittier (1972) 8 C.3d 39, 104 C.R. 1, 500 P.2d 1345, supra, §1235, either by answer in an eminent domain proceeding or by a separate action for inverse condemnation. (174 C.A.3d 1071.) "Nevertheless, it does not follow that the statutory procedure for obtaining litigation expenses was designed to be the vehicle for a full-blown lawsuit with a threshold determination of liability for unreasonable precondemnation conduct to be determined by the court and a right to jury trial on the amount of damages." (174 C.A.3d 1072.)

(2) Right to Attorneys' Fees. "Litigation expenses" include reasonable attorneys' fees incurred to protect the defendant's interest whether before or after the complaint is filed. (C.C.P. 1235.140(b); see supra, §1171.)

(3) Amount of Award. The amount of the award is discretionary with the trial court. (See California v. Westover Co. (1956) 140 C.A.2d 447, 449, 295 P.2d 96 [$ 150,000 fee affirmed]; Port San Luis Harbor Dist. v. Port San Luis Trans. Co. (1963) 213 C.A.2d 689, 694, 29 C.R. 136 [$ 125,000 fee affirmed]; Excelsior Union High School Dist. of Los Angeles v. Lautrup (1969) 269 C.A.2d 434, 442, 74 C.R. 835 [$ 77,265 fee affirmed]; California v. Meyer, supra, 174 C.A.3d 1073 [court is not required to use "lodestar multiplier" in determining fees]; People v. Yuki (1995) 31 C.A.4th 1754, 1767, 1771, 1775, 37 C.R.2d 616 [in determining reasonable attorneys' fees, court may consider contingent fee agreement but may not determine award solely by reference to that agreement; fee award was excessive where it was based on contingent fee agreement that included surcharge resulting in fee equal to 72% of net recovery]; on determination of reasonable fees generally, see 1 Cal. Proc. (4th), Attorneys, §225 et seq.)

In Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1988) 203 C.A.3d 78, 249 C.R. 606, defendant sought attorneys' fees after successfully defending plaintiff city's condemnation action. (See Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1982) 32 C.3d 60, 183 C.R. 673, 646 P.2d 835, supra, §1176; Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1985) 174 C.A.3d 414, 220 C.R. 153, infra, §1303.) The trial court determined a fee of approximately $ 850,000 based on hourly rates, then raised the fee to $ 2 million to account for the extraordinary novelty and complexity of the issues, the need for defendant's counsel to act quickly throughout the litigation, the deferral of his fees, and the critical importance to the Raiders of the litigation and its result. Held, affirmed.

(a) While hourly rates and hours devoted to the case are the starting point of a fee award, "numerous other factors must also be considered, including the novelty and difficulty of the issues presented, the quality of counsel's services, the time limitations imposed by the litigation, the amount at stake, and the result obtained by counsel." (203 C.A.3d 83.)

(b) Plaintiff's argument that the court improperly used a multiplier is flawed for two reasons. First, the increase was not based on a multiplier, but rather was tied to specific factors. Second, California v. Meyer did not prohibit the use of multipliers; it simply refused to hold that they must be used. (203 C.A.3d 84.)

(c) The amount of the award is left to the trial judge's discretion, and the increase here was not clearly wrong. (203 C.A.3d 85.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See Temple City Redevelopment Agency v. Bayside Drive Ltd. Partnership (2007) 146 C.A.4th 1555, 1560, 53 C.R.3d 728 [C.C.P. 1268.610, permitting recovery of defendant's litigation expenses when condemnation action is dismissed "for any reason," applied where action was dismissed when defendant sold property while condemnation action was pending].

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §139 et seq.(3) Amount of Award.

Cross-Reference: 1 Cal. Proc. (5th), Attorneys, §199 et seq.

157 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

h. Expenses and Damages on Dismissal or Defeat of Right To Condemn.

2. Damages Caused by Dispossession.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1266

[§ 1266] Damages Caused by Dispossession.

Recovery of damages and possession is allowed if, "after the defendant moves from property in compliance with an order or agreement for possession or in reasonable contemplation of its taking by the plaintiff, the proceeding is dismissed with regard to that property for any reason or there is a final judgment that the plaintiff cannot acquire that property." On this showing, the court must (a) order "the plaintiff to deliver possession of the property to the persons entitled to it," and (b) make just provision "for the payment of all damages proximately caused by the proceeding and its abandonment as to that property." (C.C.P. 1268.620; see Los Angeles Unified School Dist. v. Trump Wilshire Associates (1996) 42 C.A.4th 1682, 1692, 50 C.R.2d 229 [C.C.P. 1268.620 requires that property owner be physically dispossessed; mere fact that development plans were disrupted during pendency of action is insufficient].)

The Law Revision Commission Comment points out that recovery could be had for damages for temporary interference with the operation of a business, even though they might not have been compensable if the proceeding had not been abandoned.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

158 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

9. Postjudgment Procedure.

i. Costs.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1267

[§ 1267] Costs.

(1) Trial Court Costs. The defendant is allowed costs, including the cost of determining the apportionment of an award under C.C.P. 1260.220(b) (divided interests in the property; see supra, §1222). However, the cost of determining an issue of title between two or more defendants is borne by the defendants in the proportion the court directs. (C.C.P. 1268.710.) (On inclusion of litigation expenses where defendant's pretrial demand was reasonable and plaintiff's offer was not, see C.C.P. 1250.410(b), supra, §1209.)

(2) Costs on Appeal. Unless the court orders otherwise, the defendant is allowed costs on appeal, whether or not the defendant is the prevailing party. (C.C.P. 1268.720; see Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Zuckerman (1987) 189 C.A.3d 1113, 1147, 234 C.R. 630 [defendant is entitled to costs on appeal even though plaintiff is prevailing party]; Poway Unified School Dist. v. Chow (1995) 39 C.A.4th 1478, 1485, 46 C.R.2d 651 [defendant is entitled to litigation expenses incurred on appeal]; 50 A.L.R.2d 1386 [liability for costs on appeal]; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §805.) However, C.C.P. 1268.720 does not apply to an appeal involving issues between defendants. (C.C.P. 1268.720.)

(3) Items Recoverable. Because the statute does not specify the items of recoverable costs, they are basically the same as those in ordinary civil actions, i.e., they are governed by C.C.P. 1033.5 (see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §114 et seq.). (People v. Bowman (1959) 173 C.A.2d 416, 418, 343 P.2d 267 [decided under predecessor statutes].)

Expert witness fees are specifically recoverable as "litigation expenses" on dismissal of the proceeding or a judgment denying acquisition. (See C.C.P. 1268.610(a), supra, §1265; C.C.P. 1235.140 [defining "litigation expenses"], supra, §1171.) However, except for expert witnesses ordered by the court (see C.C.P. 1033.5(a)), expert witness fees are not recoverable after a judgment awarding a sum for the taking. (Los Angeles v. Ortiz (1971) 6 C.3d 141, 144, 98 C.R. 454, 490 P.2d 1142 [decided under predecessor statutes; noting that C.C.P. 998, allowing award of expert's fees if settlement offer is rejected, expressly excludes condemnation]; see 7 Cal. Proc. (4th), Judgment, §121.)

In Downey v. Gonzales (1968) 262 C.A.2d 563, 69 C.R. 34, defendants, multiple condemnees, devised an ingenious method of getting a more substantial award of costs. The city brought this proceeding to condemn land against 28 owners of 15 parcels; analyzed, the actions amounted to 13 condemnation cases joined for convenience, with the joinder not objected to by defendants. The trial judge allowed as costs one witness fee for each day the witness testified.

Defendants asked for the fees for each defendant who used the witness. Held, they were entitled to separate fees for each separate litigated cause, because the defendant could not call the witness as his without obligating himself to pay the statutory fee. This gave them a recovery of 13 times the actual fee paid the witness. (262 C.A.2d 568.)

The dissenting justice argued that fees are allowed for attending court, not for testifying. Hence, whether the witness came in one or 13 capacities he was there only once and entitled to only one fee; no authority supports the majority's statement that each defendant who subpoenaed him would be obligated to pay a fee; and clearly, multiple allowance for mileage is unjustified--"At the very least he should be forced to form a car pool with himself." (262 C.A.2d 573.) He concluded that if the "harsh and possibly unconstitutional rule" denying recovery of an expert's fees is to be reexamined, it should be done openly.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Costs on Appeal.

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Appeal, §956.

(3) Items Recoverable.

C.C.P. 1033.5:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §117 et seq.

Expert witness fees:

Cross-Reference: 7 Cal. Proc. (5th), Judgment, §124.

159 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

10. Arbitration.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1268

[§ 1268] In General.

(1) Purpose of Enactment. The expenses of condemnation proceedings, and the burden on the courts of jury trials in these cases, have led to various proposals for arbitration as an alternative. In 1970, pursuant to a recommendation of the California Law Revision Commission, statutory authority was provided. (See Law Rev. Com. 1969 Report, p. 127 et seq.; 2 Pacific L. J. 252.) Those provisions were restated without substantive change in the Eminent Domain Law as C.C.P. 1273.010 et seq. (See Model Eminent Domain Code, §1501 et seq., 13 (Part I) U.L.A. (Master Ed.), p. 147 et seq.; on nonbinding arbitration of dispute in eminent domain proceeding, see supra, §1210.)

(2) The Arbitration Agreement. "Any person authorized to acquire property for public use may enter into an agreement to arbitrate a controversy as to the compensation to be made in connection with the acquisition of the property." (C.C.P. 1273.010(a).) Where property to be taken is already appropriated to a public use, the public entity that owns or controls the property may agree to arbitrate the compensation to be paid. (C.C.P. 1273.010(b).)

The agreement, or a memorandum of it, may be acknowledged and recorded in the manner of a conveyance of real property; it then gives constructive notice to subsequent purchasers and encumbrancers for 2 years after recording or rerecording. (C.C.P. 1273.050.) This provision is calculated to make filing an eminent domain proceeding, solely to obtain the effect of a lis pendens, unnecessary. (Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(3) Scope of Arbitration. The "controversy," as defined in the general arbitration law (C.C.P. 1280(c)), covers questions of law and fact. (Law Rev. Com. Comment on C.C.P. 1273.030.) And the term "compensation" covers "any amounts that may be assessed or awarded in a condemnation proceeding," including compensation for injury to the remainder and compensation for loss of goodwill. (Law Rev. Com. Comment to C.C.P. 1273.010.)

(4) Parties. The statute contains nothing comparable to the requirement in condemnation actions of naming all persons having an interest in the property as defendants. "The chapter assumes that prudence on the part of the acquiring agency will assure that it agrees to arbitrate with the person who owns the interest it seeks to acquire. Also, the interests of persons other than parties to the arbitration would be unaffected by the arbitration agreement or the carrying out of that agreement. In short, unlike the in rem character of an eminent domain proceeding, an arbitration operates only as a contract and conveyance between the parties to the particular agreement." (Law Rev. Com. Comment to C.C.P.

1273.010.)

(5) Acquirer's Lack of Power Is Immaterial. The agreement may be enforced notwithstanding the fact that "the party acquiring the property pursuant to the agreement lacks the power or capacity to take the property by eminent domain proceedings." (C.C.P. 1273.030(d).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

160 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

10. Arbitration.

b. Effect and Enforcement of Agreement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1269

[§ 1269] Effect and Enforcement of Agreement.

(1) Effect on Eminent Domain Proceeding. The agreement to arbitrate does not preclude an eminent domain proceeding, and may be made even if an eminent domain proceeding has already been commenced. (C.C.P. 1273.030(b).) The effect of the agreement where a proceeding has been commenced is as follows:

(a) A petition or response relating to the arbitration must be filed and determined in the eminent domain proceeding. (C.C.P. 1273.030(b).)

(b) On motion of a party to the eminent domain proceeding, the court must stay the determination of compensation until the petition for an order to arbitrate is determined, and if arbitration is ordered, until arbitration is had. (C.C.P. 1273.030(c).)

(2) Procedure. The procedural provisions of the general arbitration law (C.C.P. 1280 et seq.) govern except for minor specific provisions in the eminent domain chapter. (C.C.P. 1273.030(a).) The important differences are:

(a) The venue provisions of the general arbitration law do not apply; the petition must be filed, as in condemnation actions, in the superior court of the county where the property is located. (C.C.P. 1273.030(e).)

(b) If the arbitration is conducted during pendency of an eminent domain proceeding, the condemnor's power to take possession prior to judgment is not impaired. (C.C.P. 1273.030(c).)

(3) Expenses and Fees. (a) The party acquiring the property must pay the ordinary expenses and the fees of the arbitrator, just as that party would pay costs of the condemnee in a condemnation action. (b) The party acquiring is not, however, liable for attorneys' fees or expert witness fees or other expenses incurred by other parties for their own benefit, unless the agreement so provides. (C.C.P. 1273.020.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

161 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

E. Statutory Eminent Domain Law.

10. Arbitration.

c. Abandonment of Acquisition.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1270

[§ 1270] Abandonment of Acquisition.

(1) Right To Abandon. (a) Unless the agreement prohibits abandonment, the party acquiring the property may abandon the acquisition, the arbitration proceeding, or an eminent domain proceeding. This may be done at any time, but not later than the time for filing and serving a petition or response to vacate an arbitration award (100 days after service of the award or 10 days after service of a petition to confirm it). (C.C.P. 1273.040(a).) (b) The agreement may, however, "specify the terms and conditions" of the abandonment, except for expenses and fees. (C.C.P. 1273.040(a) and Law Rev. Com. Comment.)

(2) Expenses and Fees. On abandonment, the property owner may recover the following items:

(a) All expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred: (1) in preparing for the arbitration proceeding and for judicial proceedings in connection with the acquisition, (2) during the arbitration proceeding and during judicial proceedings in connection with the acquisition, and (3) in subsequent judicial proceedings in connection with the acquisition. (C.C.P. 1273.040(b).)

(b) Reasonable attorneys' and appraisal fees, and fees for the services of other experts where the fees were reasonably and necessarily incurred to protect the owner's interests in connection with the acquisition. (C.C.P. 1273.040(b).)

The right of the property owner to recover fees and expenses cannot be modified in the arbitration agreement (Law Rev. Com. Comment to C.C.P. 1273.040(b)); but unless the agreement provides otherwise, the amount is determined by arbitration in accordance with the agreement. (C.C.P. 1273.040(b).)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

162 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN
F. Removal and Relocation Costs.
1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1271

[§ 1271] In General.

(1) No Constitutional Right. The traditional rule has been that compensation is given "for the property, and not to the owner"; i.e., the owner is entitled only to the market value of the property, and cannot obtain additional compensation for the expense of moving personal property from the condemned premises or relocating the business or home elsewhere. (See Los Gatos v. Sund (1965) 234 C.A.2d 24, 27, 44 C.R. 181; United States v. Petty Motor Co. (1946) 327 U.S. 372, 66 S.Ct. 596, 600, 90 L.Ed. 729, 735 [condemnation of entire leasehold; lessee's costs of removal or relocation were "personal to the lessee"]; United States v. Westinghouse Elec. & Mfg. Co. (1950) 339 U.S. 261, 70 S.Ct. 644, 646, 94 L.Ed. 816, 820 [same].)

A distinction was made in United States v. General Motors Corp. (1945) 323 U.S. 373, 65 S.Ct. 357, 360, 89 L.Ed. 311, 319, where only a part of the leasehold was taken (condemnation by federal government of 1 year of 20-year lease of warehouse stocked with auto parts). The remainder of the lease might have been of little value if the lessee had to bear the multiple costs of moving out and back at the time of condemnation and also at the time of expiration of the term. Hence, in determining the market value of this peculiar kind of temporary taking, the cost of removal and storage of the auto parts, and the destruction or depreciation of fixtures and permanent equipment, were included in the award.

(2) Statutory Development. The rule denying compensation for removal and relocation costs was frequently criticized as harsh and unfair, and a number of statutes were adopted in California to give relief to the owner in particular kinds of condemnation. (See 3 Pacific L. J. 116.) In 1971, Congress enacted the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act (42 U.S.C., §4601 et seq.). This statute applies to all federal projects and all state projects that are federally assisted. (42 U.S.C., §§4630, 4655.) The 1971 California Legislature then repealed its special statutes and adopted a general act patterned after the federal law. (Govt.C. 7260 et seq.; see Mountain View v. Superior Court (1975) 54 C.A.3d 72, 77, 126 C.R. 358, infra, §1276; C.E.B., 1 Condemnation Practice 2d, §7.17 et seq.)

(3) Enlarged Scope of Act. The California Act goes beyond relocation assistance by borrowing additional federal statutes dealing with a number of related subjects:

(a) Encouraging property acquisition by negotiation and agreement, to avoid litigation. (Govt.C. 7267 et seq.; see supra, §1186.)

(b) Requiring 90 days' written notice before requiring a person to move from a dwelling, business, or farm operation. (Govt.C. 7267.3; see Los Angeles v. Decker (1976) 61 C.A.3d 444, 446, 132 C.R. 188, infra, §1275.)

(c) Limiting rental where the owner or tenant is permitted to occupy the property for a short period to a maximum of "the fair rental value of the property to a short-term occupier." (Govt.C. 7267.4.)

(d) Prohibiting coercive action by public entity to compel agreement on price. (Govt.C. 7267.5; see supra, §1186.)

(e) Requiring institution of condemnation proceeding to avoid necessity of owner bringing inverse condemnation suit. (Govt.C. 7267.6.)

(4) Application to Quasi-Public Entities. If a resolution has been adopted consenting to the acquisition of property by a quasi-public entity (see supra, §1203), and property has been acquired by purchase, eminent domain, or otherwise, the quasi-public entity must also provide relocation assistance and payments. (Govt.C. 7276.)

(5) Application to Acquisition Other Than by Condemnation. A condemnation action is not essential to the recovery of relocation benefits; the statute applies to acquisitions of property by any means. (Superior Strut & Hanger Co. v. Port of Oakland (1977) 72 C.A.3d 987, 994, 140 C.R. 515 [displacement of tenant by notice terminating tenancy].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

163 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

F. Removal and Relocation Costs.

2. Authorized Payments and Assistance.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1272

[§ 1272] Authorized Payments and Assistance.

(1) Relocation Advisory Assistance. A public entity must provide relocation advisory assistance to a person, business, or farm operation displaced by the taking of property. (Govt.C. 7261(a).)

(2) Relocation Payments. The public entity must compensate a displaced person for the following:

(a) The expense of moving himself or herself, and his or her family, business, or farm operation, including moving personal property. (Govt.C. 7262(a)(1).)

(b) The loss of tangible personal property as a result of moving or discontinuing a business or farm operation, not to exceed the cost that would have been required to relocate that property. (Govt.C. 7262(a)(2).)

(c) Actual and reasonable expenses in searching for a replacement business or farm, not to exceed $ 1,000. (Govt.C. 7262(a)(3).)

(d) Actual and reasonable expenses, not to exceed $ 10,000, to reestablish a displaced farm, nonprofit organization, or small business at a new site. (Govt.C. 7262(a)(4).) (See Govt.C. 7262.5 [tenants in multifamily rental projects who are displaced for 1 year or less are not eligible for permanent housing assistance benefits if specified criteria are satisfied].)

A number of decisions discuss relocation payments. (See Parking Authority v. Nicovich (1973) 32 C.A.3d 420, 425, 108 C.R. 137; Cavanaugh v. California (1978) 85 C.A.3d 354, 358, 149 C.R. 453 [postacquisition tenants as displaced persons]; Mitakis v. Department of General Services (1983) 149 C.A.3d 684, 688, 197 C.R. 142 [displaced property owner is entitled to in-lieu moving expenses under Govt.C. 7262(c) for cost of relocating residential rental business, even though replacement property was purchased before business was discontinued and title passed to state]; Peter Kiewit Sons' Co. v. Richmond Redevelopment Agency (1986) 178 C.A.3d 435, 445, 223 C.R. 728 [tenant who remained in possession of property purchased by public entity beyond termination of lease was tenant at sufferance and was not entitled to relocation assistance]; Redevelopment Agency of Emeryville v. Arvey Corp. (1992) 3 C.A.4th 1357, 1362, 1364, 5 C.R.2d 161 [expenses that are payable as relocation assistance under Govt.C. 7262 may not be included in award for goodwill, even if those expenses have not actually been recovered]; Kong v. Hawaiian Gardens Redevelopment Agency (2002) 101 C.A.4th 1317, 1329, 125 C.R.2d 1 [distinguishing Peter Kiewit Sons' Co.; sublessee was entitled to relocation benefits where property was acquired under threat of condemnation, which resulted in termination of original master lease and sublease, even though sublessee was able to stay on premises for another 6 years under new sublease until property was ready for development].)

Relocation payments are not considered income or resources for purposes of income tax or public assistance. (Govt.C. 7269.) They are also given a limited exemption from execution. (C.C.P. 704.720(b); see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Enforcement of Judgment, §209.)

Govt.C. 7262, specifies a number of minimum and maximum amounts, and is supplemented by Govt.C. 7263 (payment to dwelling owner to purchase another dwelling); Govt.C. 7264 (payment to cover additional rent or downpayment on purchase of another dwelling); Govt.C. 7264.5 (use of project funds to provide replacement housing); Govt.C. 7265 (payment to owner of property contiguous to land taken for airport purposes); Govt.C. 7265.3 (payment to person paying increased rent or moving or discontinuing business because of rehabilitation or demolition program or enforcement of building, housing, or health codes); Govt.C. 7265.4 (reimbursement for expenses such as recording fees and transfer taxes incidental to conveying condemned property to public entity).

The Legislature intended to establish minimum requirements, and Govt.C. 7260 et seq. is not to be construed to limit other authority a public entity may have to make other payments, or to provide for payments exceeding the maximum amounts specified. (Govt.C. 7272.3.) (See United Auto. Workers v. Department of Trans. (1993) 20 C.A.4th 1462, 1471, 1473, 25 C.R.2d 290 [Caltrans regulation not allowing payment of costs for renovation of replacement premises was invalid; although project at issue was federally funded and federal law does not provide for these payments, federally allowed payments are simply minimum state must provide].)

(3) Rules and Regulations. Public entities must adopt rules and regulations to implement payments and administer relocation assistance, in conformity with rules and regulations of the Department of Housing and Community Development and applicable federal law. (Govt.C. 7267.8.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Relocation Payments.Exemption from execution:

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Enforcement of Judgment, §218.

164 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

F. Removal and Relocation Costs.

3. Displaced Person.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1273

[§ 1273] Displaced Person.

A "displaced person" is a person who moves from real property as the result of (a) written notice of the intent to acquire, (b) the acquisition of the property by a public entity (or one acting on behalf of a public entity) for public use, or (c) as a direct result of rehabilitation, demolition, or other displacing activity of real property where the person is a residential tenant or conducts a business or farm operation, if the displacement is permanent. (Govt.C. 7260(c).) For purposes of Govt.C. 7261, 7262 (supra, §1272), the term also includes a person who moves as a result of acquisition, rehabilitation, etc., of other real property on which the person conducts a business or farm operation. (Govt.C. 7260(c)(1).) This definition is to be construed so that persons displaced as a result of public action receive benefits in cases where they are displaced by an owner participation agreement or the acquisition is carried out by a private person for a public use, where the public entity is otherwise empowered to acquire the property to carry out that use. (Govt.C. 7260(c)(2).)

Except for certain occupants of low-income public housing projects, "displaced person" does not include (a) one who was not a lawful tenant or occupant, (b) one whose right of possession arose after the public entity acquired the property, (c) one who occupied the property for the purpose of obtaining relocation assistance, and (d) where the property is acquired for a public program or project, one who occupies the property for a period subject to termination when the property is needed for the program or project. (Govt.C. 7260(c)(2).)

The concept was given an elaborate examination in McKeon v. Hastings College (1986) 185 C.A.3d 877, 230 C.R. 176. Defendant, a public entity, acquired residential hotels and apartments adjacent to its campus in anticipation of expansion, and began efforts to resettle displaced tenants, including (1) renovation of two residential hotels in which displaced tenants were offered substitute subsidized housing, (2) appointment of a community housing committee, and (3) employment of a relocation counselor. Plaintiffs, former tenants and an unincorporated community association, sought declaratory and injunctive relief, alleging that defendant's relocation plan did not provide the full measure of benefits required by the Relocation Assistance Act. Held, both the individual plaintiffs and the association have standing.

(a) The individual plaintiffs were residents who moved because of defendant's expansion plan. Thus, they were "displaced persons" within the meaning of Govt.C. 7260(c), and were presumptively eligible for benefits. Because each alleged a specific loss of benefits by reason of past or prospective actions by defendant, thereby asserting a cognizable and remediable claim for redress, they have standing. Defendant's argument that individual plaintiffs were not entitled to replacement housing because they had secured new habitation incorrectly conditions benefits on remaining homeless, in conflict with the legislative intent of the Act. (185 C.A.3d 891.)

(b) Plaintiff association represents low-income persons with housing problems and includes some members who had been tenants in the buildings acquired by defendant. Participation by this kind of association has become common in public interest litigation such as this. (185 C.A.3d 892.) Plaintiff association is pursuing more than privately held rights; it is acting in the public interest, and therefore has standing. (185 C.A.3d 893.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

165 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

F. Removal and Relocation Costs.

4. Comparable Replacement Housing.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1274

[§ 1274] Comparable Replacement Housing.

"Comparable replacement housing" means a sufficient number of "decent, safe and sanitary dwellings" in "areas not generally less desirable" with regard to public utilities and public and commercial facilities, at rents or prices within the financial means of displaced families and individuals, and reasonably accessible to their places of employment. (Govt.C. 7261(c)(3).) A person may not be required to move from his or her dwelling because of acquisition by a public entity unless comparable replacement housing is available. (Govt.C. 7264.5(b).) If comparable replacement housing is not available and cannot otherwise be made available, the public entity must use funds authorized for the project for which the property is acquired to provide that housing. (Govt.C. 7264.5(a).) (See Garcia v. Anthony (1989) 211 C.A.3d 467, 474, 259 C.R. 393 [90-day residency requirement for relocation payments under Govt.C. 7264 (see supra, §1272) does not apply to use of project funds to provide housing under Govt.C. 7264.5].)

In McKeon v. Hastings College (1986) 185 C.A.3d 877, 230 C.R. 176, supra, §1273, the trial judge granted an injunction requiring defendant, which had acquired residential hotels as part of a campus expansion, to provide 375 units of comparable replacement housing. Held, reversed. Plaintiffs, displaced tenants, failed to prove entitlement to comparable replacement housing.

(a) Relocation benefits, including replacement housing, do not accrue to the general public, but to identifiable displaced persons. Here, no individual plaintiff has shown that he required alternative housing or that he would move to alternative housing provided by defendant. (185 C.A.3d 896.) The overwhelming majority of the displaced tenants were transient occupants, generally staying in one location for a short period and frequently becoming tenants on multiple occasions, "probably uninterested in establishing a more stable domicile." (185 C.A.3d 898.) Benefit to the public at large is not a valid basis for the judgment and is inconsistent with the Act, which requires a causal connection between the acquisition of the property and the displacement. (185 C.A.3d 899.)

(b) The burden of proving what caused displaced tenants to move did not shift to defendant, as it did in Haft v. Lone Palm Hotel (1970) 3 C.3d 756, 91 C.R. 745, 478 P.2d 465, 6 Summary (10th), Torts, §1195, because there is no claim that defendant committed a tort. (185 C.A.3d 901.) Although defendant was at fault in improperly conducting a survey of tenants, its conduct was "far less egregious than that of the defendants in Haft." The absence of evidence of causation (1) was attributable in approximately equal parts to plaintiffs and defendant, (2) was not a direct and foreseeable result of defendant's failure to survey, and (3) was not linked to a substantial probability that defendant's omission contributed to the harm allegedly suffered. (185 C.A.3d 902.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

166 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN
F. Removal and Relocation Costs.
5. Review.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1275

[§ 1275] Review.

(1) Administrative Remedy. A "person aggrieved" by a determination concerning eligibility for or the amount of relocation assistance is entitled to review by the public entity or by a relocation appeals board, if one has been established and authorized to hear the appeals. (Govt.C. 7266.) (See Superior Strut & Hanger Co. v. Port of Oakland (1977) 72 C.A.3d 987, 1000, 140 C.R. 515.)

In Los Angeles v. Decker (1976) 61 C.A.3d 444, 132 C.R. 188, plaintiff city gave the 90-day notice to vacate under Govt.C. 7267.3, but defendant failed to vacate the property. Plaintiff brought unlawful detainer, obtained a default judgment, and had execution issued. Defendant's motion to recall and quash the writ was denied, and she appealed. Held, affirmed; as a "displaced person" she was required to pursue the administrative remedies provided by the statute and city regulations. She was entitled to make a claim for benefits, to have the agents of the city determine the type and amount of benefits for which she qualified, and to have the determination reviewed by the Relocation Assistance Program Director, and thereafter to have a hearing before the Board of Public Works. (61 C.A.3d 452.) Having failed to take the appropriate action, she was not entitled to belatedly interpose her claims in opposition to execution. (61 C.A.3d 449.) (See Baiza v. Southgate Recreation & Park Dist. (1976) 59 C.A.3d 669, 673, 130 C.R. 836 [failure to file claim].)

(2) Judicial Remedy. The judicial remedy of a party denied relocation benefits, who has exhausted his or her administrative remedies, is by administrative mandamus under C.C.P. 1094.5 (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §262 et seq.). (Mountain View v. Superior Court (1975) 54 C.A.3d 72, 81, 126 C.R. 358, infra, §1276.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Judicial Remedy.

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Extraordinary Writs, §263 et seq.

167 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN

F. Removal and Relocation Costs.

6. Cross-Complaint in Condemnation Action.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1276

[§ 1276] Cross-Complaint in Condemnation Action.

The distinct nature of the condemnee's claims for compensation and relocation benefits, and the interrelation between the Eminent Domain Law and the Relocation Assistance Law, were explored in Mountain View v. Superior Court (1975) 54 C.A.3d 72, 126 C.R. 358. Plaintiff city brought an action to condemn business property leased by B. B filed an answer alleging that the value of his leasehold interest was $ 15,000, the value of his fixtures was $ 35,000, and that his in-lieu moving expenses under Govt.C. 7262(c) were $ 10,000. The city's demurrer was overruled and it sought mandamus. Held, writ granted, with directions.

(a) The Legislature did not integrate the Relocation Assistance Law and the Eminent Domain Law; it followed the recommendation of the Law Revision Commission that they should not be combined, and the only mention in the Eminent Domain Law is designed to prevent double recovery (C.C.P. 1263.010(b), supra, §1223). (54 C.A.3d 78.)

(b) The just compensation to which a condemnee is entitled (54 C.A.3d 79, citing the text) does not include moving expenses (54 C.A.3d 79; see supra, §1271). These are recoverable only under the Relocation Assistance Law. (54 C.A.3d 80.)

(c) The Relocation Assistance Law does not expressly provide a judicial remedy for a person denied benefits; but it does provide a fact-finding process to determine the claimant's eligibility and to fix the amounts. (54 C.A.3d 80.) B's pleading alleges that the benefits claimed were denied him after a hearing before the city's governing body; hence, his judicial remedy is administrative mandamus under C.C.P. 1094.5 (see 8 Cal. Proc. (4th), Extraordinary Writs, §262 et seq.). (54 C.A.3d 81.)

(d) The procedures to claim compensation and relocation benefits are distinct: (1) The defendant condemnee is entitled to compensation consisting of money damages assessed by a jury. (2) The petitioner in an administrative mandamus proceeding is not entitled to a jury. (54 C.A.3d 81.)

(e) It therefore follows that: (1) The condemnee cannot allege the amount of relocation benefits in his answer in the condemnation action, and cannot prove them in the trial of that action. (2) He can, however, assert his claim for these benefits by a cross-complaint. Although ordinarily a cross-complaint may not be filed in a condemnation action (C.C.P. 428.10(a)), it may be filed if the cause of action arises out of the same transaction (C.C.P. 428.10(b)). (54 C.A.3d 83.)

Here, the cause of action seeking relief in administrative mandamus clearly arises out of the transaction of condemnation of the property, and B should be granted leave to file the cross-complaint, following which the administrative mandamus hearing must be severed from the trial of the condemnation action. (54 C.A.3d 84.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 8 Cal. Proc. (5th), Extraordinary Writs, §263 et seq.

168 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIII. EMINENT DOMAIN
F. Removal and Relocation Costs.
7. Inverse Condemnation Action.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1277

[§ 1277] Inverse Condemnation Action.

In Beaty v. Imperial Irr. Dist. (1986) 186 C.A.3d 897, 231 C.R. 128, plaintiff brought an inverse condemnation action alleging that defendant district caused flooding that amounted to a taking of plaintiff's land. While the action was pending, plaintiff vacated the property and sought relocation assistance. Held, the statutes were applicable.

(a) Inverse condemnees may be "displaced persons." Under Govt.C. 7260(c), defining "displaced person" (see supra, §1273), relocation assistance benefits are triggered when a person is "displaced" due to "acquisition" of private property for public use. The definition is broad enough to include inverse condemnees who are forced to move from their property because a public entity has taken possession for a public use without first providing just compensation. The statutes are neither expressly nor by implication limited to planned, intentional takings such as negotiated purchases and direct condemnation. (186 C.A.3d 905, 906.) The intent not to exclude inverse condemnees is shown by California's rejection of the "narrow federal language limiting relocation assistance to persons displaced as a result of planned government programs and projects" in favor of broad language that "could include inverse condemnees." (186 C.A.3d 911, 914.)

(b) Displacement of condemnee and acquisition of property interest is required. There are two kinds of inverse condemnation actions: (1) those that are a substitute for a direct condemnation action (the government has intentionally taken or damaged a property interest without prior payment), and (2) those that are essentially a special kind of tort liability applicable only to the government (the damage is neither intentional nor immediate). (186 C.A.3d 904.) Because only some inverse condemnees are displaced and only some inverse condemnation actions result in the acquisition of property by a public entity, the relocation statutes are applicable only to those that are a substitute for direct condemnation. (186 C.A.3d 905.)

(c) Final judgment in inverse condemnation is required. "Once there has been a final judgment in an inverse condemnation action establishing just compensation and a permanent acquisition by the public entity, no practical distinction remains between the two actions; whether by judgment in inverse condemnation or by an eminent domain proceeding, the result is the same: an acquisition by the public entity for public use and the displacement of persons. Given the policy underlying the relocation assistance provisions--equitable treatment of persons displaced by public acquisition for public use so they do not bear a disproportionate burden on behalf of the public as a whole--we see no rational basis for denying relocation assistance to persons forced to bring an inverse action because the public entity failed or refused to proceed by way of negotiated purchase or eminent domain. Therefore, in order to avoid an unconstitutional denial of equal protection, we conclude those inverse condemnees who are similarly situated to direct condemnees (i.e., those whose action is a substitute for a direct condemnation action) are entitled to relocation assistance benefits." (186 C.A.3d 920.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

169 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
A. Nature of Protection.
1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1278

[§ 1278] In General.

U.S. Const., Art. I, §10, provides that no state shall pass a "law impairing the obligation of contracts." The California Constitution has a similar provision. (Cal. Const., Art. I, §9.) These laws come within the classification of invalid retrospective legislation (supra, §623). (See United States Trust Co. of New York v. New Jersey (1977) 431 U.S. 1, 97 S.Ct. 1505, 1514, 52 L.Ed.2d 92, 105; Allied Structural Steel Co. v. Spannaus (1978) 438 U.S. 234, 98 S.Ct. 2716, 2730, 57 L.Ed.2d 727, 734; Davis v. Industrial Acc. Com. (1926) 198 C. 631, 637, 246 P. 1046; Union Oil Co. v. Moesch (1979) 88 C.A.3d 72, 77, 151 C.R. 517, citing the text; Walsh v. Board of Administration (1992) 4 C.A.4th 682, 696, 6 C.R.2d 118; California Assn. for Safety Education v. Brown (1994) 30 C.A.4th 1264, 1284, 36 C.R.2d 404 [because statute providing for appropriation of money from special fund to reimburse schools for drivers training was subject to another statute limiting money to amount appropriated in state budget, it did not constitute contractual obligation subject to impairment prohibition]; White v. Davis (2003) 30 C.4th 528, 564, 574, 133 C.R.2d 684, 68 P.3d 74 [although public employee has right under state law to compensation for work performed during budget impasse, employee has no right to receive compensation until there is available appropriation; however, California is required to comply with federal Fair Labor Standards Act, which requires timely payment of minimum and overtime wages covered by Act]; 97 Harv. L. Rev. 1414; 81 Cal. L. Rev. 433 [contracts in modern Supreme Court]; 60 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1; 44 Stanf. L. Rev. 1373 [nature of doctrine and current application]; 2 Rotunda, §15.8; 2 Tribe, §9-8 et seq.; 16B Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §708 et seq.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.113 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 2 Rotunda 4th, §15.8.

170 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS A. Nature of Protection. 2. Distinctions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1279

[§ 1279] Distinctions.

(1) No Limitation on Federal Court. The restriction is on the states; the federal Government is not so limited. Federal legislation cannot therefore be attacked on this ground, although a similar challenge may be made for violation of due process or failure to compensate for property taken for public use. (Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank v. Radford (1935) 295 U.S. 555, 55 S.Ct. 854, 863, 79 L.Ed. 1593, 1604; Kuehner v. Irving Trust Co. (1937) 299 U.S. 445, 57 S.Ct. 298, 301, 81 L.Ed. 340, 346; see supra, §§623 et seq., 1112.)

(2) No Limitation on Courts. The Legislature alone is restricted. Court decisions that, under the doctrine of stare decisis, may affect the obligations of contracts of nonparties, do not violate the Constitution. (See Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co. (1923) 261 U.S. 114, 43 S.Ct. 288, 67 L.Ed. 556; Tidal Oil Co. v. Flanagan (1924) 263 U.S. 444, 44 S.Ct. 197, 199, 68 L.Ed. 382, 385; 9 Cal. Proc. (4th), Appeal, §978; 44 Stanf. L. Rev. 1373 [discussing "nearly forgotten issue" of judicial impairments].)

(3) No Claim by Municipal Corporation. A municipal corporation cannot attack a state law on the ground that the law impairs the obligation of its contracts. (Trenton v. New Jersey (1923) 262 U.S. 182, 43 S.Ct. 534, 537, 67 L.Ed. 937, 941; California v. Marin Mun. Water Dist. (1941) 17 C.2d 699, 705, 111 P.2d 651; Mallon v. Long Beach (1955) 44 C.2d 199, 209, 282 P.2d 481.)

(4) Intent To Incorporate Changes in Law. Where the language of a contract clearly indicates that it was the intention of the parties to incorporate subsequent changes in the law, these changes are not an unconstitutional impairment of the obligation of the contract. (Torrance v. Work. Comp. App. Bd. (1982) 32 C.3d 371, 378, 379, 185 C.R. 645, 650 P.2d 1162; Hermosa Beach Stop Oil Coalition v. Hermosa Beach (2001) 86 C.A.4th 534, 556, 564, 103 C.R.2d 447 [initiative banning oil exploration did not substantially impair contract between city and oil company permitting oil drilling on city property; initiative was valid exercise of city's police power and contract required oil company to comply with applicable laws].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) No Limitation on Courts. Colony Hill v. Ghamaty (2006) 143 C.A.4th 1156, 1170, 50 C.R.3d 247, held that an injunction preventing plaintiff from renting out rooms in his home in violation of the homeowner association's covenants, conditions, and restrictions did not violate Cal. Const., Art. I, §9, prohibiting laws that impair the obligation of contracts. However, although the court found no substantial impairment of plaintiff's contractual rights here, it cited Bradley v. Superior Court (1957) 48 C.2d 509, 519, 310 P.2d 634, which stated, under former Cal. Const., Art. I, §§1, 16, that neither the Legislature nor the courts may impair the obligation of a valid contract.

Cross-Reference: 9 Cal. Proc. (5th), Appeal, §542.

171 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS B. What Constitutes Contract. 1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1280

[§ 1280] In General.

The protection extends not only to ordinary private contracts (see infra, §1288), but to unusual types like corporate charters (infra, §1281), and to public contracts of various types (infra, §1282 et seq.). (See 40 Stanf. L. Rev. 203 [government settlement by agreement or consent decree]; 16B Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §712 et seq.)

The following, however, are considered noncontractual and not within the protection of the constitutional provision:

(1) Marriage. Marriage is a status, not a contract. (Maynard v. Hill (1888) 125 U.S. 190, 8 S.Ct. 723, 31 L.Ed. 654; In re Marriage of Walton (1972) 28 C.A.3d 108, 112, 104 C.R. 472, citing the text.)

(2) Public Office. A public office involving performance of governmental functions, as distinguished from a public employment, is not a contract. (Higginbotham v. Baton Rouge (1939) 306 U.S. 535, 59 S.Ct. 705, 83 L.Ed. 968.)

(3) Municipal Charter. A municipal charter is merely a delegation of power by the state and may be modified without violating the Constitution. (Tulare v. Dinuba (1922) 188 C. 664, 669, 206 P. 983.)

(4) Taxpayer Status. The statutory relationship between a taxpayer and the state is not a contract; hence, changes in procedure for collection of unpaid taxes do not violate the contract clause. (Mercury Herald Co. v. Moore (1943) 22 C.2d 269, 272, 138 P.2d 673.) The same is true of the relationship between an assessment district and taxpayers. (See Consolidated Fire Protection Dist. of Los Angeles v. Howard Jarvis Taxpayers' Assn. (1998) 63 C.A.4th 211, 224, 73 C.R.2d 586 [fire district assessment did not create contract between district and taxpayer, but was just ordinance, which is presumed not to create private contractual or vested rights, and which may be repealed through initiative process].)

(5) Teachers. An annuity to teachers is not a contract; hence, amendments may be made reducing the amounts. (Dodge v. Board of Education of Chicago (1937) 302 U.S. 74, 58 S.Ct. 98, 100, 82 L.Ed. 57, 62.) In Phelps v. Board of Education of West New York (1937) 300 U.S. 319, 57 S.Ct. 483, 81 L.Ed. 674, the same conclusion was reached regarding the power to reduce salaries of teachers under the tenure law. (See Taylor v. Board of Education of San Diego (1939) 31 C.A.2d 734, 744, 89 P.2d 148.) But in Indiana v. Brand (1938) 303 U.S. 95, 58 S.Ct. 443, 448, 82 L.Ed. 685, 693, the Teacher's Tenure Law of Indiana was construed to create a contract, and a statutory change to permit termination of a tenured teacher's employment impaired its obligation.

(6) Taxi Permit. A permit or license to operate a taxicab, issued by a city pursuant to its police power, is not a contract. (O'Connor v. Superior Court (1979) 90 C.A.3d 107, 113, 153 C.R. 306.)

(7) Judgment or Decree Regarding Benefits. A consent decree or stipulated judgment regarding welfare benefits is not a contract. (See Mendly v. Los Angeles (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1193, 1206, 28 C.R.2d 822, infra, §1292; Welfare Rights v. Frank (1994) 25 C.A.4th 415, 423, 30 C.R.2d 716 [consent decree mandating future compliance with statutory obligation does not invest parties to decree with contractual right to demand continued performance in event underlying statutory obligation is changed].)

The United States Supreme Court will determine for itself the question of the existence of a contract, its effect and meaning, and whether its obligation has been impaired. (Coombes v. Getz (1932) 285 U.S. 434, 52 S.Ct. 435, 76 L.Ed. 866.) But it will lean toward agreement with the state court. In Hale v. Iowa State Bd. of Assessment & Review (1937) 302 U.S. 95, 58 S.Ct. 102, 82 L.Ed. 72, bonds of the state and subdivisions provided that they were "exempt" from taxation. Later, a state income tax law was passed, and the income from these bonds was taxed. Held, the tax was valid. The Iowa court could reasonably construe this particular exemption provision of the contract as limited to a property tax on the bond in proportion to its value, and as not applicable to an excise or income tax on the net yield from all sources.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

172 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
B. What Constitutes Contract.
2. Corporate Charter.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1281

[§ 1281] Corporate Charter.

(1) Nature of Doctrine. A corporate charter was held to be a contract and therefore within the protection of the Contract Clause in the celebrated case of Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward (1819) 17 U.S. 518, 4 Wheat. 518, 4 L.Ed. 629, 656. In 1769, the English crown granted a charter to the corporation. In 1816, the New Hampshire Legislature passed several acts amending the charter. Acting under these statutes, Woodward obtained possession of the records, seal, and other corporate property, and the trustees brought an action to recover them. Held, the statutes were unconstitutional; the charter was a contract to which the donors, the trustees, and the crown were the original parties.

(2) Reserved Power. Following the decision in Trustees of Dartmouth College, the states generally made provision for a reserved power to amend or repeal corporate charters. (See Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Jenkins (1936) 297 U.S. 629, 56 S.Ct. 611, 613, 80 L.Ed. 943, 947; Cal. Const., Art. XX, §5; 9 Summary (10th), Corporations, §2.) Thus, a shareholder contracts with the knowledge that the Legislature may authorize changes in the stock structure, such as increase or decrease of common or preferred shares, even though this denies or modifies voting privileges and changes the potential control of the corporation. (Heller Inv. Co. v. Southern Title & Trust Co. (1936) 17 C.A.2d 202, 211, 61 P.2d 807; see In re Mayellen Apartments (1955) 134 C.A.2d 298, 304, 285 P.2d 943 [statutes on judicial supervision of voluntary dissolution are part of contract and subject to reserved power].)

(3) Due Process as Limitation on Reserved Power. Although, under the reserved power, the Legislature avoids the inhibitions of the Contract Clause in making changes in the interrelations of the state, corporations, and shareholders, it must still act within the limits of the Due Process Clause, and therefore cannot impair vested rights of third persons. (See Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R. Co. v. Wisconsin (1914) 238 U.S. 491, 35 S.Ct. 869, 59 L.Ed. 1423.)

In Coombes v. Franklin (1931) 213 C. 164, 1 P.2d 992, 4 P.2d 157, a creditor of a corporation sued one of the directors, to recover, under the former California constitutional provision, money misappropriated by officers of the corporation during the director's term of office. Pending appeal, the provision was repealed. The California court dismissed the appeal under the rule that a right dependent solely on a statute abates on the repeal of the statute in the absence of a saving clause, reasoning that the liability, though contractual, was contingent, being entered into in contemplation of the possibility of alteration or repeal under the reserved power. (213 C. 166.) But the United States Supreme Court reversed the decision, holding that the cause of action was a property right that vested prior to the repeal, and that to abate the action would violate both the Contract and the Due Process Clauses. (Coombes v. Getz

(1932) 285 U.S. 434, 52 S.Ct. 435, 436, 76 L.Ed. 866, 871.)

In Schroeter v. Bartlett Syndicate Bldg. Corp. (1936) 8 C.2d 12, 63 P.2d 824, a statute taking away the power of assessment from existing corporations unless their articles originally or by amendment conferred the power, was upheld. The legislative change here concerned only interrelations of the corporation and stockholders, and made no attempt (as in Coombes v. Getz) to destroy the right of a third party creditor that had vested prior to the statutory repeal. (8 C.2d 16.)

In Rainey v. Michel (1936) 6 C.2d 259, 57 P.2d 932, stock in a banking corporation was acquired by defendant, and later, in 1931, a statute was amended to impose a special stockholders' liability. Held: (a) The statute could validly impose the liability, because defendant's contract with the corporation was subject to the reserved power. (b) But, prior to the time the stock was acquired, the creditors had no rights against defendant; and to impose on the defendant a liability not existing when the debt was incurred would be a denial of due process as to him. The proper interpretation of the statute, to avoid unconstitutionality, was that it did not purport to impose that liability. (6 C.2d 279.) (See Stockholders of Peoples Banking Co. of Smithsburg, Maryland v. Sterling (1937) 300 U.S. 175, 57 S.Ct. 386, 390, 81 L.Ed. 586, 591.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.125 et seq.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

173 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
B. What Constitutes Contract.
3. Public Franchise or Grant.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1282

[§ 1282] Public Franchise or Grant.

An accepted franchise or other grant is a contract within the meaning of the Contract Clause. (See Russell v. Sebastian (1914) 233 U.S. 195, 34 S.Ct. 517, 519, 58 L.Ed. 912, 921; Fletcher v. Peck (1810) 10 U.S. 87, 3 L.Ed. 162; Wood v. Lovett (1941) 313 U.S. 362, 61 S.Ct. 983, 986, 85 L.Ed. 1404, 1407 [deed by state to purchaser of land at sale for delinquent taxes is contract, and existing statute giving rights or immunities to purchaser is part of obligation]; 60 So. Cal. L. Rev. 29.) And a continuing offer, by statute, to telephone and telegraph companies, of a franchise to use streets and highways, may become a binding contract when lines are constructed and maintained. (See Los Angeles v. Southern Calif. Tel. Co. (1948) 32 C.2d 378, 384, 196 P.2d 773; Petaluma v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1955) 44 C.2d 284, 288, 282 P.2d 43.)

However, a grant by a state will be strictly construed in favor of the public and against the grantee. (See The Proprietors of the Charles River Bridge v. The Proprietors of the Warren Bridge (1837) 36 U.S. 420, 9 L.Ed. 773, 823; Southern Calif. Gas Co. v. Los Angeles (1958) 50 C.2d 713, 719, 329 P.2d 289; Orange v. Santa Margarita Water Dist. (1996) 44 C.A.4th 189, 191, 193, 52 C.R.2d 8 [rule applies only to agreements between privately owned public utilities and public agencies, not to agreements between two public agencies; in disputes between public agencies, facilities "prior in time" are "prior in right"]; 60 So. Cal. L. Rev. 35.) And the grant to a public utility of a franchise in a public street is subject to an implied obligation to relocate its facilities at its own expense when necessary for a proper governmental use of the street. (Southern Calif. Gas Co. v. Los Angeles, supra, 50 C.2d 716 [construction of sewer]; Los Angeles County Flood Control Dist. v. Southern Calif. Edison Co. (1958) 51 C.2d 331, 334, 333 P.2d 1 [construction of storm drains]; Livermore v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1997) 51 C.A.4th 1410, 1412, 1417, 59 C.R.2d 852 [utility must pay cost of relocating utility poles to accommodate municipal street-widening project partly financed by assessment district funds and partly by fee imposed on development throughout city; fact that private development aggravated need for expansion was not dispositive].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Anderson v. Time Warner Telecom of Calif. (2005) 129 C.A.4th 411, 415, 28 C.R.3d 289 [under Pub.Util.C. 7901, telephone corporation has right to use county road easements for installation of fiber optic network]; Pasadena Metro Blue Line Const. Authority v. Pacific Bell Tel. Co. (2006) 140 C.A.4th 658, 665, 44 C.R.3d 556 [construction authority that stepped in to complete light rail project involving relocation of utility lines, like its predecessor, was obligated by Pub.Util.C. 30631 to pay relocation costs].

174 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
B. What Constitutes Contract.
4. Bond of Public District.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1283

[§ 1283] Bond of Public District.

Where a street improvement or similar district is formed to construct a public improvement, with funds derived from the issuance and sale of bonds secured by special assessments on the lands in the district, two contractual relationships arise: (a) between the state or its agency (the district) and the bondholders; and (b) between the bondholders and the property owners whose lands are subject to the assessments. Hence, subsequent legislation that materially changes either the rights of the existing bondholders or those of the landowners is unconstitutional. (See Los Angeles v. Rockhold (1935) 3 C.2d 192, 210, 44 P.2d 340; Sutter Basin Corp. v. Brown (1953) 40 C.2d 235, 241, 253 P.2d 649; Schuhart v. Pinguelo (1991) 230 C.A.3d 1599, 1604, 282 C.R. 144; infra, §1082; on citizen's right to sue school or community college district for misuse of bond funds under Educ.C. 15264 et seq., see Educ.C. 15284; on local tax and bond accountability generally, see Govt.C. 50075.1 et seq. and 53410 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

175 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS

B. What Constitutes Contract.

5. Public Pension System.

a. Contractual Theory.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1284

[§ 1284] Contractual Theory.

The early rule treated a public pension as a gratuity. The prospective pensioner (employee) had no vested right, and the pension could be substantially modified or wholly abolished by statutory change. Under the modern view, a pension is a part of the compensation for services rendered. Hence, on acceptance of employment, a "vested contractual right" arises, and the governing body cannot abrogate or substantially impair it. (See Wallace v. Fresno (1954) 42 C.2d 180, 183, 265 P.2d 884; Miller v. California (1977) 18 C.3d 808, 816, 135 C.R. 386, 557 P.2d 970; Frank v. Board of Administration of Public Employees' Retirement System (1976) 56 C.A.3d 236, 242, 128 C.R. 378; Bonelli v. California (1977) 71 C.A.3d 459, 466, 139 C.R. 486; Valdes v. Cory (1983) 139 C.A.3d 773, 783, 784, 189 C.R. 212; Association of Blue Collar Workers v. Wills (1986) 187 C.A.3d 780, 786, 791, 232 C.R. 174; 78 A.L.R.2d 1197 [retroactive change in rate of employee's contribution to public pension fund].) However, because an early retirement incentive program is not a vested pension right, a less favorable program could be substituted at the time of a second offer to designated employees. (Creighton v. Regents of Univ. of Calif. (1997) 58 C.A.4th 237, 243, 68 C.R.2d 125.)

In Kern v. Long Beach (1947) 29 C.2d 848, 179 P.2d 799, the charter of defendant city had established a pension plan under which certain employees might retire after 20 years of service. When plaintiff lacked 32 days of the 20-year period, the provision was repealed. On completion of the period, plaintiff sought mandamus to compel payment of the pension. Held, the repeal was ineffective as to him. (29 C.2d 855.)

The contract need not be express. In California Teachers Assn. v. Cory (1984) 155 C.A.3d 494, 506, 202 C.R. 611, a statute required the transfer of money owed as state contributions to the Teachers' Retirement Fund. Held, the statute implied a legislative intent to grant private rights of contract.

(a) "[T]hree quarters of a century of cases ... have implied contractual obligations from the particular texts and contexts of the statutes at issue. Once an implied contract of the state is demonstrated it is of equal dignity with an express contract for purposes of the prohibitions against impairment." (155 C.A.3d 504.)

(b) "In California law, a legislative intent to grant contractual rights can be implied from a statute if it contains an unambiguous element of exchange of consideration by a private party for consideration offered by the state." (155 C.A.3d 505.) And "a statute offering pension rights in return for employee services expresses an element of exchange and thereby implies these rights will be private rights in the nature of the contract." (155 C.A.3d 506.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

176 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS

B. What Constitutes Contract.

5. Public Pension System.

b. Valid Modifications.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1285

[§ 1285] Valid Modifications.

The pension systems of governmental agencies must be flexible and capable of change to meet new conditions, and it would be disastrous if the right, both as to the amount and conditions, became irrevocably fixed for an employee on entering employment. (See Maffei v. Sacramento County Employees' Retirement System (2002) 103 C.A.4th 993, 997, 127 C.R.2d 279 [plaintiff, who opted for deferred retirement as member of county retirement system when she resigned employment with county, and who took job as teacher in public school where she became member of State Teachers' Retirement System, would be entitled to benefit of reciprocity legislation (Govt.C. 31840.8) enacted after she left county job and while she was employed as teacher]; Medina v. Board of Retirement Los Angeles Employees Retirement Assn. (2003) 112 C.A.4th 864, 871, 5 C.R.3d 634 [vested rights doctrine did not apply to give plaintiffs, who were former public safety officers, pension benefits of safety members when their classification as safety members was mistakenly continued after they became assistant district attorneys; contract clause does not apply in case of invalid or unenforceable contracts]; Sappington v. Orange Unified School Dist. (2004) 119 C.A.4th 949, 953, 14 C.R.3d 764 [school district retirees had no vested right to receive free PPO health coverage forever].)

Accordingly, the courts have held that the vested right is to a substantial and reasonable pension, which the governing body may not repeal, but may modify regarding the amount, terms, and conditions. This loose but practical doctrine is stated in Kern v. Long Beach (1947) 29 C.2d 848, 855, 179 P.2d 799, supra, §1284, as follows: "[A]n employee may acquire a vested contractual right to a pension but ... this right is not rigidly fixed by the specific terms of the legislation in effect during any particular period in which he serves. ... There is no inconsistency therefore in holding that he has a vested right to a pension but that the amount, terms and conditions of the benefits may be altered." (29 C.2d 855.) (See Wallace v. Fresno (1954) 42 C.2d 180, 183, 265 P.2d 884, infra, §1286; 7 A.L.R.2d 692 [reduction of benefits of public officer or employee because of independent income]; for illustrations of valid modifications, see Allen v. Board of Administration (1983) 34 C.3d 114, 119, 192 C.R. 762, 665 P.2d. 534; International Assn. of Firefighters v. San Diego (1983) 34 C.3d 292, 300, 193 C.R. 871, 667 P.2d 675; Lyon v. Flournoy (1969) 271 C.A.2d 774, 787, 76 C.R. 869; Ruster v. Ruster (1974) 40 C.A.3d 379, 382, 114 C.R. 812; Claypool v. Wilson (1992) 4 C.A.4th 646, 661, 665, 666, 6 C.R.2d 77.)

Modification of employees' rights may consist of the total destruction of the interests of dependents. In Packer v. Board of Retirement of Los Angeles Peace Officers' Retirement System (1950) 35 C.2d 212, 214, 218, 217 P.2d 660, the modification eliminated the widow's pension under certain circumstances. Held, this was valid. Although the pension right is community property (see 11 Summary (10th), Community Property, §58 et seq.), the widow's interest is not a separate right in her but merely part of her husband's benefits. Hence, it may be cut off if the total change in the husband's pension rights does not exceed the permissible bounds of modification. The court expressly rejected the theory that the widow had a vested right similar to that of a beneficiary of a life insurance policy with no reservation of power to effect a change. (35 C.2d 215.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See California Assn. of Professional Scientists v. Schwarzenegger (2006) 137 C.A.4th 371, 383, 40 C.R.3d 354

[alternative retirement program for new hires].

177 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS

B. What Constitutes Contract.

5. Public Pension System.

c. Invalid Modifications.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1286

[§ 1286] Invalid Modifications.

In Wallace v. Fresno (1954) 42 C.2d 180, 265 P.2d 884, petitioner, a police officer, acquired a vested pension right. But subsequently, before he was eligible to retire, the pension ordinance was amended to provide for termination of a pension on conviction of a felony. After retirement and receipt of the pension for some time, petitioner was convicted of preparing a fraudulent income tax return, and termination was ordered. Held, the ordinance could not be thus retroactively applied.

The court seemingly laid down a test of valid modifications. They may be made "for the purpose of keeping the pension system flexible to permit adjustments in accord with changing conditions and at the same time maintain the integrity of the system and carry out its beneficent policy." (42 C.2d 184.) The amendment here did not meet the test. It did not appear to have a "material relation to the theory of the pension system or to its successful operation. Rather, the change was designed to benefit the city and ... to meet the objections of taxpayers. ... A city has no more right to adopt an amendment which does not come within the purposes of the rule permitting modifications than a private insurance carrier would have to change an annuity policy by making a unilateral amendment under which the insured's interest might be terminated upon his conviction of a felony." (42 C.2d 185.) (For cases holding amendments invalid, see Betts v. Board of Administration of Public Employees' Retirement System (1978) 21 C.3d 859, 866, 148 C.R. 158, 582 P.2d 614; Frank v. Board of Administration of Public Employees' Retirement System (1976) 56 C.A.3d 236, 245, 128 C.R. 378; Valdes v. Cory (1983) 139 C.A.3d 773, 791, 189 C.R. 212 [state failed to meet burden of demonstrating that impairment was warranted by emergency serving to protect basic interest of society]; Pasadena Police Officers Assn. v. Pasadena (1983) 147 C.A.3d 695, 701, 703, 704, 195 C.R. 339 [changes in pension plan that result in disadvantage to employees should be accompanied by comparable new advantages]; United Firefighters of Los Angeles v. Los Angeles (1989) 210 C.A.3d 1095, 1102, 259 C.R. 65 [following Pasadena Police Officers Assn.; amendment placing cap on cost-of-living adjustments]; Board of Administration of the Public Employees' Retirement System v. Wilson (1997) 52 C.A.4th 1109, 1135, 1153, 61 C.R.2d 207 ["in arrears" pension financing unconstitutionally impaired contractual right to actuarially sound retirement system and failed to provide comparable new advantages for its adverse effect].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Teachers' Retirement Bd. v. Genest (2007) 154 C.A.4th 1012, 1031, 1033, 65 C.R.3d 326 [state's reduction of funding for Teachers' Retirement Fund violated Contract Clauses of state and federal Constitutions; state was contractually obligated to make specific annual contribution into supplemental benefit account regardless of actuarial soundness].

178 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
C. What Constitutes Impairment.
1. Valid Changes in Remedy or Procedure.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1287

[§ 1287] Valid Changes in Remedy or Procedure.

Parties to a contract have no vested right in the particular remedies or methods of procedure existing at the time of their agreement. The Legislature can neither take away all remedies, nor so substantially restrict the remedies as practically to destroy the right; but an ordinary change in procedure that alters the remedy for breach of a contract is valid, though retroactively applied to existing contracts. (See Oshkosh Waterworks Co. v. Oshkosh (1903) 187 U.S. 437, 23 S.Ct. 234, 47 L.Ed. 249; National Collection Agency v. Fabila (1979) 93 C.A.3d Supp. 1, 5, 155 C.R. 356; Danekas v. San Francisco Residential Rent Stabilization & Arbitration Bd. (2001) 95 C.A.4th 638, 651, 115 C.R.2d 694 [rent control provision governing tenant's right to sublet when one of multiple tenants departs promotes legitimate and significant public purpose, and is moderate and restrained]; Severns v. Union Pac. R. Co. (2002) 101 C.A.4th 1209, 1222, 125 C.R.2d 100, quoting the text [requirement of Marketable Record Title Act that plaintiff record intent to preserve future interest within 5 years of its effective date was reasonable procedural addition addressed to legitimate state interest of relieving title and marketability problems created by powers of termination]; 16B Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §726 et seq.; on legislation shortening period of statute of limitations, see 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, §432.)

In Simons Brick Co. v. Eagle Indem. Co. (1930) 110 C.A. 676, 294 P. 1075, the obligation of a bond to pay materialmen who had contracted with a school district was made expressly conditional on filing a verified claim with the district, as provided by statute. Thereafter, the statute was amended to permit suit without the filing. Held, the amendment was applicable. The obligation of defendant surety remained the same, and elimination of the preliminary notice to the obligor was a mere change in remedy. (110 C.A. 684.)

In Richmond Mortg. & Loan Corp. v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. (1937) 300 U.S. 124, 57 S.Ct. 338, 81 L.Ed. 552, state law provided two remedies for creditors under trust deeds: (a) foreclosure in equity, subject to the court's power to set aside an unfair sale, or (b) a trustee's sale by authorization in the contract. After execution of a trust deed, a statute was enacted to provide that, in the event of a trustee's sale and purchase thereunder, the debtor could defeat a deficiency judgment in whole or in part by showing that the price paid was less than the true value of the property. Held, this law could be retroactively applied to the prior deed of trust. The traditional remedy of foreclosure, with its equitable restrictions, was adequate; hence, the Legislature might wholly abolish the remedy of trustee's sale, or subject it to the same equitable restrictions, without impairing the obligation of the contract. (See Gelfert v. National City Bank of New York (1941) 313 U.S. 221, 61 S.Ct. 898, 85 L.Ed. 1299, infra, §1290.)

In Security-First Nat. Bank of Los Angeles v. Sartori (1939) 34 C.A.2d 408, 93 P.2d 863, former C.C. 2957, requiring rerecording of a chattel mortgage after 4 years, was held applicable to a preexisting mortgage on the ground that the statute merely required the mortgagee to give notice of the continued existence of the mortgage and imposed no unreasonable burden. (34 C.A.2d 413.)

In Coast Bank v. Holmes (1971) 19 C.A.3d 581, 97 C.R. 30, C.C. 1717, allowing an award of attorneys' fees to the prevailing party in an action on a contract whenever the contract provides for fees for either party, was held applicable to an action on a previously executed note. Litigation expenses are special damages, and there is no vested right to a particular measure of damages. (19 C.A.3d 596.)

In San Diego White Truck Co. v. Swift (1979) 96 C.A.3d 88, 157 C.R. 745, the question was whether the statutory dwelling house exemption from execution applied to an obligation incurred prior to its effective date. The statute did not create a new exemption but rather a new and essentially automatic method of obtaining an exemption without the formalities associated with filing homesteads. (96 C.A.3d 91.) "The retroactive application of the dwelling house exemption has a minimal effect, for the rights of creditors in California have always been subject to the homestead. Any reliance by a creditor on the debtor's failure to seek the benefits of that statute is questionable. Commerce is not disrupted when the only change in the law is the Legislature's reasonable action in removing gamesmanship from an exemption statute to assure its proper application." (96 C.A.3d 94.)

Changes that increase the remedy of the creditor are valid, if they do not enlarge the obligation of the debtor. (See Bernheimer v. Converse (1907) 206 U.S. 516, 27 S.Ct. 755, 760, 51 L.Ed. 1163, 1174; Funkhouser v. J.B. Preston Co. (1933) 290 U.S. 163, 54 S.Ct. 134, 78 L.Ed. 243; Stockholders of Peoples Banking Co. of Smithsburg, Maryland v. Sterling (1937) 300 U.S. 175, 57 S.Ct. 386, 390, 81 L.Ed. 586, 591 [stockholders' liability, remedy given to receiver]; Faitoute Iron & Steel Co. v. Asbury Park (1942) 316 U.S. 502, 62 S.Ct. 1129, 1135, 86 L.Ed. 1629, 1637.) Hence, the 1933 amendment to C.C.P. 725a, giving the creditor under a deed of trust the remedy of foreclosure for breach in addition to his or her existing right of sale, was validly applied to existing deeds of trust. (Lincoln v. Superior Court (1934) 2 C.2d 127, 129, 39 P.2d 405.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §459.

179 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
C. What Constitutes Impairment.
2. Invalid Changes in Obligation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1288

[§ 1288] Invalid Changes in Obligation.

The following are examples of changes that violate the Contract Clause:

(1) Statutes changing nature of creditor's security. In Los Angeles v. Rockhold (1935) 3 C.2d 192, 44 P.2d 340, street assessment bonds had been issued that were payable by an ad valorem tax levied against all property owners in the district. Subsequently, a refunding statute was passed that attempted to cancel the old bonds and substitute others, each of which was to be secured by a specific lien on a particular parcel of land. Held, this was a material change in the obligation, both as to bondholders and landowners, and was invalid. (3 C.2d 204.) (See W.B. Worthen Co. v. Kavanaugh (1935) 295 U.S. 56, 55 S.Ct. 555, 79 L.Ed. 1298; Islais Co. v. Matheson (1935) 3 C.2d 657, 663, 45 P.2d 326; Shouse v. Quinley (1935) 3 C.2d 357, 360, 45 P.2d 701; Sutter Basin Corp. v. Brown (1953) 40 C.2d 235, 242, 253 P.2d 649.)

(2) Statutes cutting down creditor's rights by granting exemptions to debtor. In Worthen Co. v. Thomas (1934) 292 U.S. 426, 54 S.Ct. 816, 78 L.Ed. 1344, a statute exempting insurance money from liability to creditors was held unconstitutional regarding a creditor's lien on those funds that attached prior to the statute.

A statute creating a new exemption from execution (motor vehicle of a certain value) was inapplicable to a creditor's claim based on a pre-existing contract, even though the creditor had acquired no specific lien at that time. (Medical Finance Assn. v. Wood (1936) 20 C.A.2d Supp. 749, 751, 63 P.2d 1219; Smith v. Hume (1937) 29 C.A.2d Supp. 747, 749, 74 P.2d 566.)

In re Rauer's Collection Co. (1948) 87 C.A.2d 248, 196 P.2d 803, approved these cases and reached the same conclusion on somewhat similar facts. In 1939, a debtor incurred a contractual obligation and declared a homestead on his property; the statutory exemption at that time was $ 5,000. In 1946, when a judgment was obtained against him on the obligation, the exemption had increased to $ 6,000. Held, the exemption statute at the time the obligation was incurred was controlling; to hold the increased exemption retroactive would impair the obligation of the contract. (87 C.A.2d 253.)

(3) Statutes depriving creditor of part of claim. Retroactive statutes prohibiting or unreasonably restricting deficiency judgments have been held invalid. (Brown v. Fardon (1936) 5 C.2d 226, 231, 54 P.2d 712; Hales v. Snowden (1937) 19 C.A.2d 366, 370, 65 P.2d 847 [C.C.P. 580b]; see 4 Summary (10th), Security Transactions in Real Property, §207.)

(4) Statute depriving purchaser under tax sale of statutory protections existing at time of deed. In Wood v. Lovett (1941) 313 U.S. 362, 61 S.Ct. 983, 85 L.Ed. 1404, a state law in the nature of a curative act provided that tax sales should not be set aside by courts for certain irregularities. Held, this was part of the contract with the purchaser at the sale who received a tax deed from the state (the deed was the contract), and the attempted repeal of the statute to remove the protection impaired the obligation of that contract (the tax deed from the state and the existing law governing the sale and its effect). (61 S.Ct. 986, 85 L.Ed. 1407.)

(5) Statute retroactively altering pension agreement between private employer and employees, enlarging obligation of employer. (See Allied Structural Steel Co. v. Spannaus (1978) 438 U.S. 234, 98 S.Ct. 2716, 2723, 2725, 57 L.Ed.2d 727, 738, 740; 92 Harv. L. Rev. 86.)

(6) Statute nullifying wage agreement of public agency and employees. Sonoma County Organization of Public Employees v. Sonoma (1979) 23 C.3d 296, 152 C.R. 903, 591 P.2d 1, deals with the legislative attempt to mitigate the effects of the limitations in taxing power imposed by Proposition 13 (see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §125 et seq.). Govt.C. 16280, enacted in 1978, prohibited distribution of state surplus or loan funds to local public agencies granting a cost-of-living wage or salary increase that exceeded the cost-of-living increase provided for state employees, and declared null and void agreements by local agencies to pay the prohibited increase. A number of local public agencies that had made these agreements refused to authorize the additional wages, and petitioner, a labor organization representing the employees, sought mandamus to compel payment. Held, writ granted.

(a) The statute by its express terms impaired the obligation of the agreements, and the issue was whether this impairment was a valid exercise of the police power under the tests laid down by Home Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Blaisdell (1934) 290 U.S. 398, 54 S.Ct. 231, 240, 78 L.Ed. 413, 429, and subsequent cases (see infra, §1289 et seq.). (23 C.3d 305.)

(b) Applying the tests: (1) The statute did not merely postpone contractual benefits or alter enforcement remedies; the right to a wage increase for the fiscal year was taken away, and this was a severe, permanent, and immediate impairment of contractual rights. (23 C.3d 309.) (2) The statutory declaration of a fiscal emergency was not binding on the court. And the governmental agencies had not met the burden of establishing that the emergency existed, because five-sevenths of their lost revenues were replaced by state funds, and the net loss was only 6%. (23 C.3d 310, 311.) (See 68 Cal. L. Rev. 829.)

(7) Statute impairing spouse's contractual rights under settlement agreement on dissolution of marriage. (See In re Marriage of Guthrie (1987) 191 C.A.3d 654, 661, 662, 236 C.R. 583 [former statute authorizing modification of family home award was invalid if retroactively applied to award previously made on stipulation of parties; impairment of contract and violation of due process].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

180 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
C. What Constitutes Impairment.
3. Valid Impairment Under Police Power.
a. Emergency Legislation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1289

[§ 1289] Emergency Legislation.

During the economic depression following 1929, police power legislation was enacted in many states for the relief of debtors, and particularly mortgage debtors. The statutes usually provided for (1) a moratorium on foreclosures and sales, for a limited period, to prevent sacrifice of property at prices far below actual value, and to give the debtor an opportunity to pay; (2) extension of the period of redemption giving the mortgagor more time to redeem; (3) a fair sale price, prohibiting sales below fair value; or (4) a limitation on deficiency judgments. (See 47 Harv. L. Rev. 660; 21 Cal. L. Rev. 471; 22 Cal. L. Rev. 170.)

Federal and state decisions on similar legislation enacted during previous financial depressions were almost unanimous in condemning such legislation as violative of the Contract Clause. (See Barnitz v. Beverly (1896) 163 U.S. 118, 16 S.Ct. 1042, 41 L.Ed. 93; Bronson v. Kinzie (1843) 42 U.S. 311, 11 L.Ed. 143.) But in Home Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Blaisdell (1934) 290 U.S. 398, 54 S.Ct. 231, 78 L.Ed. 413, the Court considered the provision of the Minnesota Mortgage Moratorium Law, which authorized the lower court to extend the period of redemption from foreclosure sales "for such additional time as the court may deem just and equitable." The statute was enacted as an emergency measure, to remain in effect only during the emergency, and in no event beyond May 1, 1935. Held, the provision was valid. (a) The Contract Clause is not an absolute prohibition; contracts are made subject to the state's police power; and, in an emergency, this reserved power may be exercised directly to prevent the strict enforcement of the contract to safeguard the public interest. (b) The exercise of the power must be of a character appropriate to the emergency and reasonable in its conditions; and the Minnesota law, being reasonable, temporary, and limited to the emergency, did not violate either the Contract or the Due Process Clause. (54 S.Ct. 240, 78 L.Ed. 429.) (See State Bonded Audit Bureau v. Pomona Mut. Bldg. & Loan Assn. (1940) 37 C.A.2d Supp. 765, 769, 98 P.2d 829; Board of Administration of the Public Employees' Retirement System v. Wilson (1997) 52 C.A.4th 1109, 1161, 61 C.R.2d 207 [necessity defense in action challenging constitutionality of "in arrears" financing of public pension system failed where state cited no evidence of actuarial input, effort to deal narrowly with exigencies of fiscal emergency, or consideration of other less drastic alternatives].)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.117

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

181 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
C. What Constitutes Impairment.
3. Valid Impairment Under Police Power.
b. Non-Emergency Legislation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1290

[§ 1290] Non-Emergency Legislation.

In cases subsequent to Home Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Blaisdell (1934) 290 U.S. 398, 54 S.Ct. 231, 78 L.Ed. 413, supra, §1289, the Supreme Court gave effect to the limitations expressed in the opinion by holding invalid legislation that was not restricted to the emergency or was unreasonable in its conditions. (See Worthen Co. v. Thomas (1934) 292 U.S. 426, 54 S.Ct. 816, 78 L.Ed. 1344; W.B. Worthen Co. v. Kavanaugh (1935) 295 U.S. 56, 55 S.Ct. 555, 79 L.Ed. 1298.) California followed this same view, holding unconstitutional the retroactive application of the former statute restricting deficiency judgments after sale under a deed of trust. (Brown v. Ferdon (1936) 5 C.2d 226, 235, 54 P.2d 712.) (See Shouse v. Quinley (1935) 3 C.2d 357, 362, 45 P.2d 701; Treigle v. Acme Homestead Assn. (1936) 297 U.S. 189, 56 S.Ct. 408, 80 L.Ed. 575 [statute modifying withdrawal rights of stockholders of building and loan associations was not limited to emergency; invalid].)

But in Gelfert v. National City Bank of New York (1941) 313 U.S. 221, 61 S.Ct. 898, 85 L.Ed. 1299, a statute prohibited deficiency judgments on mortgage foreclosures unless the fair value of the property, determined by the court, was deducted from the debt; and the statute was unrestricted in operation and not based on or confined to an emergency. Held, it was valid (though the decision was limited to the situation where the mortgagee buys). The mortgagee's contractual right is only to receive payment in full; there is no constitutional claim to the benefits of a forced judicial sale at a price below the fair value of the property. The Legislature is merely acting uniformly in the field in which equity courts have long acted. (61 S.Ct. 903, 85 L.Ed. 1305.) (See Castleman v. Scudder (1947) 81 C.A.2d 737, 740, 185 P.2d 35, supra, §629 ["into all contracts is superimposed the higher authority of the state which must be presumed to be known by all, and every contract is made in subordination of that authority and must yield to that control"].)

In El Paso v. Simmons (1965) 379 U.S. 497, 85 S.Ct. 577, 13 L.Ed.2d 446, Texas school lands were sold in 1910 on long-term contracts providing for forfeiture on default in interest, with an indefinite right to reinstatement by the purchaser on paying back interest. In 1941, the statute was amended to limit the right of reinstatement to a period of 5 years from the date of forfeiture. Held, the amendment was validly applied to lands sold under the original statute. This history of the school land situation revealed the need for reform, to eliminate litigation and clouds on title. "The measure taken to induce defaulting purchasers to comply with their contracts, requiring payment of interest in arrears within five years, was a mild one indeed, hardly burdensome to the purchaser who wanted to adhere to his contract of purchase, but nonetheless an important one to the State's interest." (85 S.Ct. 588, 13 L.Ed.2d 459.)

The factors to be considered in determining the issue of unconstitutional impairment of contract are "the nature, importance and urgency of the interest to be served by the challenged legislation; and whether the legislation was appropriately tailored and limited to the situation necessitating its enactment." (Donlan v. Weaver (1981) 118 C.A.3d 675, 682, 173 C.R. 566 [impairment was small; interest of state was substantial and significant].) (See Energy Reserves Group v. Kansas Power & Light Co. (1983) 459 U.S. 400, 103 S.Ct. 697, 704, 74 L.Ed.2d 569, 581; Keystone Bituminous Coal Assn. v. DeBenedictis (1987) 480 U.S. 470, 107 S.Ct. 1232, 1251, 1252, 94 L.Ed.2d 472, 499, 500; Interstate Marina Dev. Co. v. Los Angeles (1984) 155 C.A.3d 435, 446, 202 C.R. 377; In re Marriage of Potter (1986) 179 C.A.3d 73, 82, 83, 224 C.R. 312; United States v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1986) 182 C.A.3d 82, 147, 227 C.R. 161.)

Retrospective application of amendments to the Fair Employment and Housing Act that declare unlawful preexisting restrictive covenants that discriminate against the disabled do not result in an unconstitutional impairment of contract. (Hall v. Butte Home Health (1997) 60 C.A.4th 308, 317, 70 C.R.2d 246.)

West's Key Number Digest, Constitutional Law k.117-

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

182 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
C. What Constitutes Impairment.
3. Valid Impairment Under Police Power.
c. Insurance Contracts.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1291

[§ 1291] Insurance Contracts.

Proposition 103, an initiative measure enacted in 1988 to regulate insurers (see supra, §1083), contained the following provision: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a notice of cancellation or non-renewal of a policy for automobile insurance shall be effective only if it is based on one or more of the following reasons: (1) nonpayment of premiums, (2) fraud or material misrepresentation affecting the policy or insured; (3) a substantial increase in the hazard insured against." (See Ins.C. 1861.03(c).)

In Calfarm Ins. Co. v. Deukmejian (1989) 48 C.3d 805, 258, C.R. 161, 771 P.2d 1247, supra, §1083, the court construed this provision as applicable to existing as well as future policies, and rejected the contention that this application would violate the Contract Clause.

(a) Decisions of the United States Supreme Court and the courts of a number of states make it clear that the police power may justify some impairment of existing contracts. (48 C.3d 828, 829.) The impairment in the present case is relatively moderate and restrained. The insurer may still refuse to renew policies for nonpayment of premium, fraud, misrepresentation, or substantial increase in the hazard insured against; and when it renews pursuant to Proposition 103, it is guaranteed fair and reasonable rates. (48 C.3d 830.) Moreover, insurance is a highly regulated industry affected with a public interest, and insurers were well aware of the possibility that initiatives or ordinary legislation might be enacted that would affect existing policies. (48 C.3d 830, 831.) Proposition 103 does not prevent an insurer from discontinuing its California business. (48 C.3d 831.)

(b) The public interest justifies the impairment. "[T]he drafters and the voters were evidently concerned that the enactment of Proposition 103 might cause some insurers not to renew some or all of their existing policies, an action which would undermine Proposition 103's goal of making insurance 'available' for all Californians. Indeed if many insurers refused to renew the state could face a crisis in which many of its residents would be unable to obtain insurance and thus could not legally drive, and others would be forced to accept inadequate protection. We conclude that the public interest in averting this danger, when measured against the relatively low degree of impairment of contract rights involved, is sufficient to justify Proposition 103's nonrenewal provision, and accordingly that this provision can be applied to existing policies without violating the state or federal Constitutions." (48 C.3d 831.)

In Travelers Indem. Co. v. Gillespie (1990) 50 C.3d 82, 266 C.R. 117, 785 P.2d 500, the issue was whether notices of nonrenewal of policies, not based on the grounds listed in Ins.C. 1861.03, were rendered ineffective by that section when the notices were sent by insurers who were withdrawing from the California market. Held, the mandatory renewal provision did not apply.

"Because insurers have the right to discontinue their business activities in this state, and because nonrenewal of existing automobile policies is a logical and integral part of the orderly winding up of a withdrawing insurer's affairs, we have determined that Proposition 103's mandatory renewal provision does not apply to an insurer who has commenced the process of withdrawing as an insurer in this state by complying with statutory application requirements, including surrender of its certificate of authority for cancellation." (50 C.3d 103.) (See Dairyland Ins. Co. v. Gillespie (1990) 223 C.A.3d 1229, 1232, 1235, 273 C.R. 80 [Travelers exemption from mandatory renewal provision applies only after insurer has begun statutory withdrawal procedure; exemption does not apply to nonrenewal notices mailed in anticipation of withdrawal]; AIU Ins. Co. v. Gillespie (1990) 222 C.A.3d 1155, 1163, 272 C.R. 334 [restrictions on nonrenewal applied where insurer mailed notices of nonrenewal before election in which Proposition 103 was adopted, but policies did not expire until after election]; 20th Century Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 C.A.4th 1247, 1269, 109 C.R.2d 611, 6 Cal. Proc. (4th), Proceedings Without Trial, Supp., §49 [C.C.P. 340.9, reviving for 1 year certain barred claims for damage attributable to 1994 Northridge earthquake, did not impair defendant insurer's contract rights; insurance industry is regulated and statute was adopted to alleviate significant problems caused by insurers' conduct]; Hellinger v. Farmers Group (2001) 91 C.A.4th 1049, 1061, 111 C.R.2d 268 [same; relying on Calfarm Ins. Co.]; 18 Pepperdine L. Rev. 796 [Travelers].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
20th Century Ins. Co. case:

Cross-Reference: 6 Cal. Proc. (5th), Proceedings Without Trial, §52.

183 of 183 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XIV. OBLIGATION OF CONTRACTS
C. What Constitutes Impairment.
3. Valid Impairment Under Police Power.
d. Stipulated Judgment for Welfare Benefits.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1292

[§ 1292] Stipulated Judgment for Welfare Benefits.

In Mendly v. Los Angeles (1994) 23 C.A.4th 1193, 28 C.R.2d 822, general assistance recipients brought an action on behalf of themselves and others similarly situated in which they challenged the amount of the county's general relief grant. Plaintiffs and the county entered into a stipulated judgment under which the grant amount was set at a higher level for 5 years and plaintiffs waived their rights to receive retroactive general relief benefits. One paragraph of the judgment provided that, if the Legislature abolished all obligations under Welf.C. 17000, or took control of or otherwise assumed the county's obligations under that statute, the terms of the judgment would automatically expire. The Legislature subsequently enacted Welf.C. 17000.5, setting forth a formula for determining a sufficient standard of aid, and Assembly Bill No. 2883, declaring that it was the Legislature's intent to abrogate court-ordered stipulated judgments providing for grant levels higher than the statutory amount. Plaintiffs then filed a motion to enforce the judgment and for a permanent injunction. The trial judge denied the motion. Held, affirmed.

(a) For purposes of the state and federal Contract Clauses, the stipulated judgment entered into by plaintiffs was not a contract. Plaintiffs assert that their claim for retroactive benefits was part of the consideration for the agreement, and that to abrogate the judgment robs them of their valuable claim as if it never existed. But the judgment clearly provides that the claim for retroactive benefits is waived, and nothing in the judgment indicates that some portion of the future grant level includes a portion reflecting retroactive benefits. (23 C.A.4th 1205.)

(b) The setting of general relief grant levels involves an exercise of the state's police power. Thus, the stipulated judgment must be interpreted as being based on and authorized by the statutory underpinnings for benefits as those laws existed at the time. Plaintiffs cannot reasonably be said to have a protectible interest in the laws regarding grant levels remaining unchanged, and the judgment itself acknowledges as much. (23 C.A.4th 1209.)

(c) Even assuming that the judgment does create a contract, however, there has been no unconstitutional impairment. This is so because the judgment provides for its automatic expiration in the event the Legislature takes control of or otherwise assumes the county's general assistance obligations. The enactment of Welf.C. 17000.5 and Assembly Bill No. 2883 were events in which the Legislature took control of the county's general relief obligations. (23 C.A.4th 1209.)

(d) A substantial legislative impairment of contract is constitutional only if it is reasonable and necessary to serve a legitimate public purpose. But even assuming that an impairment occurred, plaintiffs have failed to address the issues of reasonableness and necessity. Thus, "they have not established the impairment was unconstitutional under the contract clause." (23 C.A.4th 1211.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

1 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS
A. Nature of Federal Powers.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1293

[§ 1293] Nature of Federal Powers.

Although the federal government is one of granted powers, and in a sense is limited to the exercise of express powers, the Constitution also provides that Congress has the power to "make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof." (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8.)

The Necessary and Proper Clause was given a liberal interpretation in McCulloch v. Maryland (1819) 17 U.S. 316, 4 L.Ed. 579, where it was held that Congress had the power to establish a national bank. The court declared that the term "necessary" was not restrictive, and that any convenient and appropriate means to carry out the powers of Congress would be constitutional. Subsequent cases expressed the same view. (See Legal Tender Cases (1870) 12 Wall. 457, 20 L.Ed. 287; James Everard's Breweries v. Day (1924) 265 U.S. 545, 44 S.Ct. 628, 68 L.Ed. 1174; United States v. Classic (1941) 313 U.S. 299, 61 S.Ct. 1031, 85 L.Ed. 1368; United States v. Oregon (1961) 366 U.S. 643, 81 S.Ct. 1278, 1281, 6 L.Ed.2d 575, 579, supra, §2; 36 U.C. Davis L. Rev 407 [McCulloch and Fourteenth Amendment]; 44 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 745 [Necessary and Proper Clause]; 1 Rotunda, §3.1 et seq.; 16A Am.Jur.2d (1998 ed.), Constitutional Law §235.)

The Constitution also grants Congress broad general powers to legislate with respect to Indian tribes. (United States v. Lara (2004) 541 U.S. 193, 124 S.Ct. 1628, 1633, 158 L.Ed.2d 420, 428 [Congress had power to lift restrictions on Indian tribes' criminal jurisdiction over nonmember Indians].)

All of the great substantive powers of Congress are paramount and superior to both state legislation and private contracts. (Norman v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. (1935) 294 U.S. 240, 55 S.Ct. 407, 79 L.Ed. 885.) But they are nevertheless subject to the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and other provisions of the Bill of Rights. (See Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank v. Radford (1935) 295 U.S. 555, 55 S.Ct. 854, 79 L.Ed. 1593; cf. Railway Employees' Dept. v. Hanson (1956) 351 U.S. 225, 76 S.Ct. 714, 100 L.Ed. 1112, infra, §1318 [upholding Railway Labor Act against attacks based on First and Fifth Amendments].)

The federal taxing power is considered in another chapter (9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §105 et seq.). The other major powers are covered here (infra, §1294 et seq.).

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 Rotunda 4th, §3.1 et seq.; 93 Cal. L. Rev. 847 [tribal criminal jurisdiction after United States v. Lara].

2 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

1. What Constitutes Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1294

[§ 1294] In General.

The federal Constitution gives Congress the power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes." (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8.) This is known as the Commerce Clause.

In Gibbons v. Ogden (1824) 22 U.S. 1, 6 L.Ed. 23, commerce was broadly defined as commercial intercourse in all its branches, including navigation, but not restricted to buying and selling. Subsequent cases have enlarged on this definition, so that today a greatly expanded scope of the federal commerce power is recognized. For example, in United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Assn. (1944) 322 U.S. 533, 64 S.Ct. 1162, 88 L.Ed. 1440, the Court said: "Not only, then, may transactions be commerce though noncommercial; they may be commerce though illegal and sporadic, and though they do not utilize common carriers or concern the flow of anything more tangible than electrons and information." (See Heart of Atlanta Motel v. United States (1964) 379 U.S. 241, 85 S.Ct. 348, 356, 13 L.Ed.2d 258, 266, supra, §850; Cotton Petroleum Corp. v. New Mexico (1989) 490 U.S. 163, 109 S.Ct. 1698, 1715, 1716, 104 L.Ed.2d 209, 236, 237 [distinction between Interstate Commerce and Indian Commerce Clauses]; 31 San Diego L. Rev. 555 [economics of federalism and proper scope of federal commerce power]; 37 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 605 [Ninth Circuit's dangerous expansion of Commerce Clause]; 1 Rotunda, Chap. 4; 2 Rotunda, Chap. 11; 2 Tribe, Chap. 6; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §§1 et seq., 39 et seq.) (On regulation of foreign commerce, see 1 Rotunda, §4.2; 2 Tribe, §6-21; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §5.)

However, exercise of the commerce power is not unlimited. In United States v. Lopez (1995) 514 U.S. 549, 115 S.Ct. 1624, 131 L.Ed.2d 626, involving a federal statute prohibiting the possession of firearms near schools, the Court identified three categories of activities that Congress can regulate under the Commerce Clause: "First, Congress may regulate the use of the channels of interstate commerce. ... Second, Congress is empowered to regulate and protect the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce, even though the threat may come only from intrastate activities. ... Finally, Congress' commerce authority includes the power to regulate those activities having a substantial relation to interstate commerce." (115 S.Ct. 1629, 131 L.Ed.2d 637.) (See 88 Cal. L. Rev. 1575 [federal prosecution of state-legalized medical marijuana use after Lopez]; 24 Hastings Const. L. Q. 785 [Lopez]; 23 Lincoln L. Rev. 27 [same]; 23 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1363 [same]; 28 Pepperdine L. Rev. 547 [same]; 48 Stanf. L. Rev. 1431 [same].)

Lopez has been applied or distinguished in other cases. (See United States v. Morrison (2000) 529 U.S. 598, 120 S.Ct. 1740, 1749, 146 L.Ed.2d 658, 671 [applying Lopez; Congress acted beyond scope of its powers in enacting civil remedy provision of Violence Against Women Act; prohibited acts do not substantially affect interstate commerce]; Kilroy v. Superior Court (1997) 54 C.A.4th 793, 808, 63 C.R.2d 390 [distinguishing Lopez; Full Faith and Credit for Child Support Orders Act, which vests continuing exclusive jurisdiction over child support in issuing court, is valid regulation of interstate commerce; support payments between parents in different states substantially affect interstate commerce]; Harding v. Harding (2002) 99 C.A.4th 626, 633, 121 C.R.2d 450 [same]; 90 Cal. L. Rev. 1675 [Lopez and Morrison]; 91 Cal. L. Rev. 1331 [same]; 43 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1399 [Morrison]; 32 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 549 [discussing federal case challenging prosecution under Child Support Recovery Act as exceeding Congress' authority under Commerce Clause]; 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 571 [Lopez and Morrison]; 31 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 625 [Violence Against Women Act after Lopez; reconsidering congressional power under Fourteenth Amendment].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 Rotunda 4th, Chap. 4; 2 Rotunda 4th, Chap. 11; 1 Rotunda 4th, §4.2 [foreign commerce]; 54 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1847 [Commerce Clause and myth of dual federalism].

3 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

1. What Constitutes Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

b. Transportation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1295

[§ 1295] Transportation.

(1) Commercial Transportation. The transportation of goods or passengers, by railroad, ship, or other means, is a traditional example of interstate commerce. (See Kirmeyer v. Kansas (1915) 236 U.S. 568, 35 S.Ct. 419, 59 L.Ed. 721 [peddler carrying goods in his wagon between states]; on interstate character of transportation between two points within state which enters another state en route, see Central Greyhound Lines of New York v. Mealey (1948) 334 U.S. 653, 68 S.Ct. 1260, 1262, 92 L.Ed. 1633, 1637.) The flow of oil or gas into and through a state by pipelines is another established form. (See Pennsylvania Gas Co. v. Public Service Com., Second Dist., of New York (1920) 252 U.S. 23, 40 S.Ct. 279, 64 L.Ed. 434; Interstate Natural Gas Co. v. Federal Power Com. (1947) 331 U.S. 682, 67 S.Ct. 1482, 1486, 91 L.Ed. 1742, 1746; Federal Power Com. v. East Ohio Gas Co. (1950) 338 U.S. 464, 70 S.Ct. 266, 268, 94 L.Ed. 268, 275; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §68 et seq.)

(2) Noncommercial Transportation. The transportation need not be for commercial purposes; any carrying across the state line is enough. (Covington & Cincinnati Bridge Co. v. Kentucky (1894) 154 U.S. 204, 14 S.Ct. 1087, 38 L.Ed. 962; Edwards v. California (1941) 314 U.S. 160, 62 S.Ct. 164, 167, 86 L.Ed. 119, 125 [bringing nonresident person into state]; Cleveland v. United States (1946) 329 U.S. 14, 67 S.Ct. 13, 91 L.Ed. 12 [transportation by Mormon of plural wives in violation of Mann Act]; see 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §68 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

4 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

1. What Constitutes Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

c. Interstate Activity Without Transportation.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1296

[§ 1296] Interstate Activity Without Transportation.

(1) Communications and Electricity. Transportation, i.e., physical movement of persons or goods, is not essential; telegraph and telephone communication across state lines comes within the modern definition of interstate commerce. (See Western Union Tel. Co. v. Speight (1920) 254 U.S. 17, 41 S.Ct. 11, 65 L.Ed. 104.) The same is true of the transmission of electric power. (See American Power & Light Co. v. Securities & Exchange Com. (1946) 329 U.S. 90, 67 S.Ct. 133, 138, 91 L.Ed. 103, 111; 26 Ecology L. Q. 243 [Dormant Commerce Clause threat to market-based environmental regulation: electricity deregulation].)

(2) Public Utility Holding Companies. Certain public utility holding companies have been held to be engaged in interstate commerce on two grounds: (a) Their control over a multi-state network of operating subsidiary corporations necessitates continuous and substantial use of the mails and instrumentalities of interstate commerce for business communications; and (b) their operating subsidiaries transmit electric energy across state lines. (American Power & Light Co. v. Securities & Exchange Com., supra; North Amer. Co. v. Securities & Exchange Com. (1946) 327 U.S. 686, 66 S.Ct. 785, 791, 90 L.Ed. 945, 953 ["In view of North American's very substantial stock interest and its domination as to the affairs of its subsidiaries, as well as its latent power to exercise even more affirmative influence, it cannot hide behind the facade of a mere investor. Their acts are its acts in the sense that what is interstate as to them is interstate as to North American"].)

(3) Correspondence Schools. A correspondence school, with headquarters in one state and students in other states, is engaged in interstate commerce. (International Textbook Co. v. Pigg (1910) 217 U.S. 91, 30 S.Ct. 481, 484, 54 L.Ed. 678, 685; National Schools v. Los Angeles (1955) 135 C.A.2d 311, 317, 287 P.2d 151; see 92 A.L.R.2d 522 [regulation of correspondence schools].)

(4) Newspapers and Advertising. "There can be little doubt today that the immediate dissemination of news gathered from throughout the nation or the world by agencies specially organized for that purpose is a part of interstate commerce. ... The same is true of national advertising originating throughout the nation and offering products for sale on a national scale." (Lorain Journal Co. v. United States (1951) 342 U.S. 143, 72 S.Ct. 181, 185, 96 L.Ed. 162, 170; see Associated Press v. United States (1945) 326 U.S. 1, 65 S.Ct. 1416, 89 L.Ed. 2013; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §81.)

(5) Insurance. In United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Assn. (1944) 322 U.S. 533, 64 S.Ct. 1162, 1170, 88 L.Ed. 1440, 1454, the Court, overruling prior cases, held that the business of selling insurance, involving negotiation and movement of persons, paper, and money across state lines, was interstate commerce, and therefore that the Sherman Antitrust Act applied to these activities. Traffic in intangibles is commerce; under a practical test, though the insurance contract itself is not, the entire transaction of its negotiation and issuance is commerce; and "a nationwide business is not deprived of its interstate character merely because it is built upon sales contracts which are local in nature." (64 S.Ct. 1170, 88 L.Ed. 1454.) (See Federal Trade Com. v. Travelers Health Assn. (1960) 362 U.S. 293, 80 S.Ct. 717, 4 L.Ed.2d 724, infra, §1310; on legislative change that gave states regulatory power, see infra, §1309.)

(6) Athletic and Theatrical Exhibitions. The interstate character of organized sports, including football and boxing, and of nationwide theatrical enterprises, has been clearly established by cases dealing with Sherman Act regulation. (See United States v. International Boxing Club (1955) 348 U.S. 236, 75 S.Ct. 259, 99 L.Ed. 290; United States v. Shubert (1955) 348 U.S. 222, 75 S.Ct. 277, 99 L.Ed. 279; 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §556.)

(7) Broadcasting. Radio and television broadcasting across state lines is interstate commerce. (See Fisher's Blend Station v. Tax Com. (1936) 297 U.S. 650, 56 S.Ct. 608, 80 L.Ed. 956 [radio]; United States v. Midwest Video Corp. (1972) 406 U.S. 649, 92 S.Ct. 1860, 32 L.Ed.2d 390 [television]; People v. Eller Telecasting Co. (1970) 13 C.A.3d 296, 300, 91 C.R. 468 [injunction by Imperial County district attorney against advertising illegal only in California was unconstitutional burden on commerce].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

5 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

1. What Constitutes Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

d. Local Activity as Part of Interstate Movement.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1297

[§ 1297] Local Activity as Part of Interstate Movement.

(1) In General. Coe v. Errol (1886) 116 U.S. 517, 6 S.Ct. 475, 29 L.Ed. 715, pointed out that goods in a "flow" of interstate commerce do not lose their character by temporary stoppage within a state, where they are later to continue their interstate journey and there is practical continuity of movement.

This principle was applied in a number of later decisions. Thus, where goods were shipped to consignees in Los Angeles from outside the state, and were unloaded at the docks, a motor carrier engaged in picking up the goods and delivering them to the consignees within the city was held to be operating in interstate commerce. (Meyers v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1933) 218 C. 316, 318, 23 P.2d 26; 22 Cal. L. Rev. 547.) (See Puget Sound Stevedoring Co. v. Tax Com. of Washington (1937) 302 U.S. 90, 58 S.Ct. 72, 82 L.Ed. 68 [stevedoring business, i.e., loading and discharging cargoes of vessels engaged in interstate and foreign commerce, is part of this commerce]; Joseph v. Carter & Weekes Stevedoring Co. (1947) 330 U.S. 422, 67 S.Ct. 815, 91 L.Ed. 993 [following Puget Sound]; Lorain Journal Co. v. United States (1951) 342 U.S. 143, 72 S.Ct. 181, 185, 96 L.Ed. 162, 170 [local distribution of news and advertisements transmitted in interstate commerce].)

(2) Natural Gas Transactions. Cases decided subsequent to the federal Natural Gas Act (see infra, §1309) have clarified the rules relating to transportation of natural gas:

(a) Interstate Sale for Local Resale. The transportation of gas into a state pursuant to a sale to a local distributor or wholesaler, for resale to consumers, has always been considered an interstate transaction, free from state regulation; and it is now regulated by the Federal Power Commission under the Natural Gas Act. (See infra, §1309.)

(b) Interstate Sale for Local Use. It was formerly thought that where gas was transported into a state pursuant to a sale to a local consumer, there was a local activity subject to taxation and regulation. The theory was that the decrease in pressure, when the gas leaves the main transmission line to enter a branch line running to the local user, is like the breaking of a load of commodities in bulk, and that the interstate movement comes to an end. This theory is now repudiated. "Those merely mechanical considerations are no longer effective, if ever they were exclusively, to determine for regulatory purposes the interstate or intrastate character of the continuous movement and resulting sales. ... Variations in main pressure are not the criterion." Accordingly, sales for local use, whether domestic or industrial, are in interstate commerce, but are subject to state regulation by congressional permission under the Natural Gas Act. (Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. v. Public Service Com. of Indiana (1948) 332 U.S. 507, 68 S.Ct. 190, 193, 92 L.Ed. 128, 135, infra, §1309.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

6 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

a. Prohibitory Legislation.

1. General Principle.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1298

[§ 1298] General Principle.

Except under the Twenty-First Amendment (infra, §1311), a state has no power to erect barriers against interstate commerce. Thus, it cannot prohibit the sale or shipment of products to or from other states. (West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. (1911) 221 U.S. 229, 31 S.Ct. 564, 55 L.Ed. 716; Foster-Fountain Packing Co. v. Haydel (1928) 278 U.S. 1, 49 S.Ct. 1, 3, 73 L.Ed. 147, 153.) Nor can it make criminal the act of bringing an indigent nonresident into the state. (Edwards v. California (1941) 314 U.S. 160, 62 S.Ct. 164, 166, 86 L.Ed. 119, 125.)

In Philadelphia v. New Jersey (1978) 437 U.S. 617, 98 S.Ct. 2531, 57 L.Ed.2d 475, the Court invalidated a New Jersey law prohibiting the importation of most "solid or liquid waste" collected outside its territorial limits. The purpose--to conserve the state's landfill space--was improper; "where simple economic protectionism is effected by state legislation, a virtually per se rule of invalidity has been erected." (98 S.Ct. 2535, 57 L.Ed.2d 481.) In "previous cases the scarce natural resource was itself the article of commerce, whereas here the scarce resource and the article of commerce are distinct. But the difference is without consequence. In both instances, the State has overtly moved to slow or freeze the flow of commerce for protectionist reasons." (98 S.Ct. 2538, 57 L.Ed.2d 484.) (See Wyoming v. Oklahoma (1992) 502 U.S. 437, 112 S.Ct. 789, 117 L.Ed.2d 1, infra, §1301 [discussing Philadelphia]; People v. Prevost (1998) 60 C.A.4th 1382, 1397, 71 C.R.2d 487 [1984 Cable Act does not conflict with state law prohibiting unauthorized reception of cable signals, which includes manufacture or distribution of equipment to be used for unauthorized reception]; 92 Harv. L. Rev. 57 [Philadelphia]; 74 Cal. L. Rev. 1203 [same]; 8 Ecology L. Q. 371 [same]; 39 Santa Clara L. Rev. 373 [constitutionality of selective purchasing laws]; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §25 et seq.; for restrictions on waste disposal, see infra, §1302.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

7 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

a. Prohibitory Legislation.

2. Export of Natural Resources.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1299

[§ 1299] Export of Natural Resources.

(1) Former Rule. It was originally held that a state may validly conserve its common property in fish and game for the benefit of its own citizens. (See Geer v. Connecticut (1896) 161 U.S. 519, 16 S.Ct. 600, 40 L.Ed. 793; In re Florence (1930) 107 C.A. 607, 613, 290 P. 652.)

However, the Geer rule was strictly limited in purpose and scope. In Foster-Fountain Packing Co. v. Haydel (1928) 278 U.S. 1, 49 S.Ct. 1, 73 L.Ed. 147, a Louisiana statute prohibited the exporting of raw shrimp, but permitted the taking and canning of shrimp within the state and shipment of the canned product anywhere. Held, this was invalid. The real object was not to conserve the shrimp, but to secure the profitable canning business for the state. By permitting export of the canned product, the state released its hold and could no longer prevent free shipment of any shrimp.

Foster-Fountain was followed in Toomer v. Witsell (1948) 334 U.S. 385, 68 S.Ct. 1156, 1166, 92 L.Ed. 1460, 1474. A South Carolina statute required all fishermen who caught shrimp in the marginal waters (3-mile belt) of the state to dock at a port within the state, and unload and pack their catch before shipping it to another state. Held, "assuming" that South Carolina had the power to confine the consumption of free-swimming fish to its own boundaries, it could not permit their shipment to other states and at the same time impose conditions burdening interstate commerce. (See H.P. Hood & Sons v. Du Mond (1949) 336 U.S. 525, 69 S.Ct. 657, 667, 93 L.Ed. 865, 876, infra, §1315; People v. Marine Products Co. (1947) 77 C.A.2d Supp. 929, 931, 177 P.2d 67 [statute making it unlawful to possess or sell spiny lobsters cooked outside the state was unconstitutional discrimination against legitimate object of interstate commerce].)

(2) Repudiation of Geer Rule. In Hughes v. Oklahoma (1979) 441 U.S. 322, 99 S.Ct. 1727, 60 L.Ed.2d 250, an Oklahoma statute, assertedly directed at conserving the minnow resources of the state, allowed free and unrestricted sale of the fish to residents or nonresidents, thereby permitting exportation by nonresident purchasers; but it prohibited transportation from the state for sale outside the state. The Oklahoma court, relying on Geer, sustained the statute. Held, reversed; the Geer holding is no longer acceptable.

(a) Erosion of Geer by subsequent cases. West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. (1911) 221 U.S. 229, 31 S.Ct. 564, 55 L.Ed. 716, Foster-Fountain, Toomer, and other cases departed from Geer's formalistic ownership analysis, and the present case, essentially on all fours with Geer, calls for a different approach. "We now conclude that challenges under the Commerce Clause to state regulations of wild animals should be considered according to the same general rule applied to state regulations of other natural resources, and therefore expressly overrule Geer. We thus bring our analytical framework into conformity with practical realities. Overruling Geer also eliminates the anomaly, created by the decisions distinguishing Geer, that statutes imposing the most extreme burdens on interstate commerce (essentially total embargoes) were the most immune from challenge. At the same time, the general rule we adopt in this case makes ample allowance for preserving, in ways not inconsistent with the Commerce Clause, the legitimate state concerns for conservation and protection of wild animals underlying the 19th century legal fiction of state ownership." (99 S.Ct. 1736, 60 L.Ed.2d 261.)

(b) Discrimination against interstate commerce. Applying the general rules articulated in cases governing other types of commerce, the statute is clearly discriminatory. And the state's assertion of an interest in maintaining the ecological balance in state waters is not a justification. "The fiction of state ownership may no longer be used to force those outside the State to bear the full costs of 'conserving' the wild animals within its borders when equally effective nondiscriminatory conservation measures are available." (99 S.Ct. 1737, 60 L.Ed.2d 263.) Oklahoma places no limit on the number of minnows that can be taken by licensed dealers, nor does it limit the manner in which they may be disposed of within the state. Thus, it has chosen the most discriminatory means even though nondiscriminatory alternatives would seem likely to fulfill the legitimate local purpose more effectively. (99 S.Ct. 1737, 60 L.Ed.2d 263.)

Two justices dissented, observing that many other cases have upheld regulations designed to conserve natural resources of a state. (99 S.Ct. 1738, 60 L.Ed.2d 264.)

In Sporhase v. Nebraska (1982) 458 U.S. 941, 102 S.Ct. 3456, 73 L.Ed.2d 1254, the Court held unconstitutional a Nebraska statutory restriction on the withdrawal of ground water from Nebraska wells for use in an adjoining state. Ground water, like other natural resources, is an article of commerce. (102 S.Ct. 3462, 73 L.Ed.2d 1264.) "Neither the fact that Congress has chosen not to create a federal water law to govern water rights involved in federal projects, nor the fact that Congress has been willing to let the States settle their differences over water rights through mutual agreement, constitutes persuasive evidence that Congress consented to the unilateral imposition of unreasonable burdens on commerce." (102 S.Ct. 3466, 73 L.Ed.2d 1268.) (See 87 Cal. L. Rev. 1545 [interstate marketing of Indian water rights: impact of Commerce Clause]; 11 Hastings Const. L. Q. 283 [Sporhase].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

8 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

b. Unreasonable Burdens.

1. In General; Dormant Commerce Clause.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1300

[§ 1300] In General; Dormant Commerce Clause.

For the same reason that a state cannot prohibit interstate commerce (supra, §1298), a state cannot impose an unreasonable burden on it. (See South-Cen. Timber Dev. Co. v. Wunnicke (1984) 467 U.S. 82, 104 S.Ct. 2237, 2240, 81 L.Ed.2d 71, 76, infra, §1313 [Commerce Clause has long been recognized as self-executing limitation on power of states to enact laws imposing substantial burdens on interstate commerce]; New Energy Co. of Indiana v. Limbach (1988) 486 U.S. 269, 108 S.Ct. 1803, 1807, 100 L.Ed.2d 302, 308.) This implicit or "dormant" limitation on the authority of the states to enact legislation affecting interstate commerce is sometimes referred to as the Dormant Commerce Clause. It precludes state regulation in certain areas "even absent congressional action." (Ferguson v. Friendfinders (2002) 94 C.A.4th 1255, 1261, 115 C.R.2d 258; see Miller v. Arkansas (1956) 352 U.S. 187, 77 S.Ct. 257, 1 L.Ed.2d 231 [state cannot require state license for federal contractor bidding on work for United States]; Healy v. The Ben Institute (1989) 491 U.S. 324, 326, footnote 1, 109 S.Ct. 2491, 2494, 105 L.Ed.2d 275, 281; People v. Hsu (2000) 82 C.A.4th 976, 983, 99 C.R.2d 184; 110 Harv. L. Rev. 1537 [Functional Analysis, Subsidies, and the Dormant Commerce Clause]; 26 Ecology L. Q. 243 [Dormant Commerce Clause threat to market-based environmental regulation: electricity deregulation]; 34 San Diego L. Rev. 571 [Targeting State Protectionism Instead of Interstate Discrimination Under the Dormant Commerce Clause]; 73 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1423 [Who Controls the Internet? States' Rights and the Dormant Commerce Clause]; 2 Tribe, Chap. 6; 2 Rotunda, Chap. 11.)

Thus, a state cannot fix rates or otherwise regulate interstate carriers that cross state borders, or even those carriers operating entirely within the borders of the state, where they carry goods in the flow of interstate commerce and hence, constitute local links in the chain of commerce. (Buck v. Kuykendall (1925) 267 U.S. 307, 45 S.Ct. 324, 69 L.Ed. 623; Meyers v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1933) 218 C. 316, 318, 23 P.2d 26; see Morgan v. Virginia (1946) 328 U.S. 373, 66 S.Ct. 1050, 90 L.Ed. 1317 [required segregation in carrier]; Southern Pac. Co. v. Arizona (1945) 325 U.S. 761, 65 S.Ct. 1515, 89 L.Ed. 1915, infra, §1312; Bibb v. Navajo Freight Lines (1959) 359 U.S. 520, 79 S.Ct. 962, 3 L.Ed.2d 1003 [Illinois statute requiring special mudguards for trucks]; Raymond Motor Trans. v. Rice (1978) 434 U.S. 429, 98 S.Ct. 787, 795, 54 L.Ed.2d 664, 675 [Wisconsin statute prohibiting large trucks on highways]; Kassel v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. (1981) 450 U.S. 662, 101 S.Ct. 1309, 1316, 67 L.Ed.2d 580, 589 [similar Iowa statute]; Dennis v. Higgins (1991) 498 U.S. 439, 111 S.Ct. 865, 112 L.Ed.2d 969, supra, §820 [retaliatory taxes and fees]; People v. Fink (1985) 168 C.A.3d Supp. 15, 21, 215 C.R. 236 [statute prohibiting tinting of window of vehicle was unconstitutional]; 95 Harv. L. Rev. 93 [Kassel]; 21 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 581 [federal district court case holding that Commerce Clause did not restrict city's oil pipeline franchise fee].)

In Bendix Autolite Corp. v. Midwesco Enterprises (1988) 486 U.S. 888, 108 S.Ct. 2218, 100 L.Ed.2d 896, a state statute denying a statute of limitations defense to a foreign corporation not "present" in the state was held unconstitutional.

(a) Ohio's unique statute placed a 4-year limitation period on actions for breach of contract or fraud, but tolled the statute for the period when a foreign corporation defendant had not appointed an agent for service of process. "The Ohio statutory scheme thus forces a foreign corporation to choose between exposure to the general jurisdiction of Ohio courts or forfeiture of the limitations defense, remaining subject to suit in Ohio in perpetuity. Requiring a foreign corporation to appoint an agent for service in all cases and to defend itself with reference to all transactions, including those in which it did not have the minimum contacts necessary for supporting personal jurisdiction, is a significant burden." (108 S.Ct. 2221, 100 L.Ed.2d 903.)

(b) Under Chase Sec. Corp. v. Donaldson (1945) 325 U.S. 304, 65 S.Ct. 1137, 89 L.Ed. 1628, supra, §632, the statute of limitations defense is not a fundamental right. However, it is an integral part of the legal system, and "[t]he state may not withdraw such defenses on conditions repugnant to the Commerce Clause." (108 S.Ct. 2221, 100 L.Ed.2d 903.) The Ohio statute is tolled only for those foreign corporations that do not subject themselves to the general jurisdiction of Ohio courts, thus imposing a greater burden on out-of-state companies than it does on Ohio companies. (108 S.Ct. 2222, 100 L.Ed.2d 904.) (See Filet Menu v. Cheng (1999) 71 C.A.4th 1276, 1283, 84 C.R.2d 384, 3 Cal. Proc. (4th), Actions, Supp., §650A [following Bendix Autolite; C.C.P. 351, providing for tolling of statute of limitations while party is out of California, "impermissibly burdens interstate commerce with respect to residents who travel in the course of interstate commerce"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Bronco Wine Co. v. Jolly (2005) 129 C.A.4th 988, 1015, 29 C.R.3d 462 [Pub.Util.C. 25241, prohibiting use of brand name on wine bottle with "Napa" on label unless at least 75% of grapes used came from Napa County, does not violate Dormant Commerce Clause; statute regulates intrastate activities, and indirect and incidental effect on interstate commerce is outweighed by state's interest in protecting both California wine consumers from misleading labels and integrity, reputation, and value of premier wine industry in Napa County]; Excelsior College v. Board of Registered Nursing (2006) 136 C.A.4th 1218, 1235, 39 C.R.3d 618 [requiring nursing program of plaintiff out-of-state college to comply with California's minimum standards did not violate Dormant Commerce Clause; although plaintiff's program would not be as attractive as in-state schools for students seeking licensure in California, California has right to regulate nursing within state for protection of citizens regardless of incidental impact on interstate commerce, and plaintiff could have structured its program to satisfy California's requirements]; People v. PuriTec (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1524, 1534, 1536, 64 C.R.3d 270 [statutes prohibiting sellers of water treatment devices from making health benefit claims about devices when they have not been certified by state did not violate dormant Commerce Clause; seller was not forced to exclude California consumers from website, but could provide warning that devices have not been certified in compliance with California law; statutes did not have practical effect of directly controlling commerce wholly outside California, and burden imposed on interstate commerce was not clearly excessive in relation to putative local benefits]; 2 Rotunda 4th, Chap. 11; 38 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 1505 [Eminent Domain, Municipalization, and the Dormant Commerce Clause]; 53 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 153 [Why Congress May Not "Overrule" the Dormant Commerce Clause]; 42 U.S.F. L. Rev. 185 [can California curb greenhouse gas emissions from out-of-state, coal-fired power plants without violating Dormant Commerce Clause?]. Filet Menu case:

Cross-Reference: 3 Cal. Proc. (5th), Actions, §712. Correction: Page 1001, line 13, "Healy v. The Ben Institute" should read "Healy v. The Beer Institute".

9 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

b. Unreasonable Burdens.

2. Legislation Protecting Local Industry.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1301

[§ 1301] Legislation Protecting Local Industry.

A state cannot impose protectionist price restrictions or other economic standards on those engaged in interstate trade. In Baldwin v. G.A.F. Seelig (1935) 294 U.S. 511, 55 S.Ct. 497, 501, 79 L.Ed. 1032, 1039, a New York statute sought to prevent the sale by dealers of milk imported from another state, if the price paid to producers in the other state was below the minimum established for producers in New York. This was unconstitutional. In Polar Ice Cream & Creamery Co. v. Andrews (1964) 375 U.S. 361, 84 S.Ct. 378, 11 L.Ed.2d 389, a Florida statute compelled a distributor having sources in a number of states to take milk from Pensacola producers at a fixed minimum price. Held, it was unconstitutional. "The principles of Baldwin are as sound today as they were when announced. They justify, indeed require, invalidation as a burden on interstate commerce of that part of the Florida regulatory scheme which reserves to its local producers a substantial share of the Florida milk market." (84 S.Ct. 386, 11 L.Ed.2d 398.) (See 74 Cal. L. Rev. 1203 [State Discriminations Against Interstate Commerce]; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §31 et seq.)

In Wyoming v. Oklahoma (1992) 502 U.S. 437, 112 S.Ct. 789, 117 L.Ed.2d 1, plaintiff State of Wyoming imposed a severance tax on the privilege of severing or extracting coal from land within its boundaries. The Oklahoma Legislature required coal-fired electric generating plants producing power for sale in Oklahoma to burn a mixture containing at least 10% of Oklahoma-mined coal. As a result, Wyoming lost severance taxes in substantial sums. Wyoming then obtained leave to file a complaint in the Supreme Court under its original jurisdiction (U.S. Const., Art. III, §2; see 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Jurisdiction, §60), seeking a declaration that the Oklahoma Act violated the Commerce Clause. Held, the Act was invalid.

(a) The Commerce Clause limits the power of states to discriminate against interstate commerce. This "negative aspect" of the Clause prohibits economic protectionism, i.e., regulatory measures designed to benefit in-state economic interests by burdening out-of-state competitors. "When a state statute clearly discriminates against interstate commerce, it will be struck down, ... unless the discrimination is demonstrably justified by a valid factor unrelated to economic protectionism. ... Indeed, when the state statute amounts to simple economic protectionism, a 'virtually per se rule of invalidity' has applied." (112 S.Ct. 800, 117 L.Ed.2d 22.)

(b) The Oklahoma Act, on its face and in practical effect, discriminates against interstate commerce. It purports to exclude coal mined in other states based solely on its origin. (112 S.Ct. 800, 117 L.Ed.2d 23.) Oklahoma argues that the Act sets aside only a "small portion" of the coal market, and thus does not place an overall burden on out-of-state coal producers. However, the "volume of commerce affected measures only the extent of the discrimination; it is of no relevance to the determination whether a State has discriminated against interstate commerce." (112 S.Ct. 801, 117 L.Ed.2d 23.) The burden was therefore on Oklahoma to justify the discrimination both in terms of the local benefits flowing from the statute and the unavailability of nondiscriminatory alternatives adequate to preserve the local interests. Oklahoma has not met that burden. (112 S.Ct. 801, 117 L.Ed.2d 24.)

Two dissenting opinions of three justices were filed. The first points out that the coal companies with sales allegedly affected by the law chose not to litigate, and that this is the first time that the Court recognized a state's standing to bring a negative Commerce Clause action on the basis of its consequential loss of tax revenue. "That is a major step, and I think it is wrong." (112 S.Ct. 804, 117 L.Ed.2d 27.) (See Pacific Merchant Shipping Assn. v. Voss (1995) 12 C.4th 503, 514, 48 C.R.2d 582, 907 P.2d 430 [state scheme imposing inspection fee on foreign commerce, while paying inspection fee for interstate commerce out of general fund, discriminated against foreign commerce in violation of "negative Commerce Clause"]; Children's Hosp. & Med. Center v. Bonta' (2002) 97 C.A.4th 740, 762, 768, 118 C.R.2d 629 [state scheme that reimbursed Medi-Cal costs of out-of-state hospitals at lower rate than in-state hospitals and that deprived out-of-state hospitals of procedural rights available to in-state hospitals to challenge adequacy of compensation obviously discriminated against out-of-state hospitals and came within "negative sweep" of Commerce Clause]; 24 Pepperdine L. Rev. 732 [Pacific Merchant]; on state taxes unduly burdening commerce, see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §66 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 2 Cal. Proc. (5th), Jurisdiction, §59.

10 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

b. Unreasonable Burdens.

3. Restrictions on Waste Disposal.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1302

[§ 1302] Restrictions on Waste Disposal.

In Fort Gratiot Sanitary Landfill v. Michigan Dept. of Natural Resources (1992) 504 U.S. 353, 112 S.Ct. 2019, 119 L.Ed.2d 139, a Michigan law prohibited private landfill operators from accepting solid waste that originated outside the county in which their facilities were located. Held, following Philadelphia v. New Jersey (1978) 437 U.S. 617, 98 S.Ct. 2531, 57 L.Ed.2d 475, supra, §1298, the Michigan law was unconstitutional. (112 S.Ct. 2023, 119 L.Ed.2d 146.) "[A] State (or one of its political subdivisions) may not avoid the strictures of the Commerce Clause by curtailing the movement of articles of commerce through subdivisions of the State, rather than through the State itself." (112 S.Ct. 2024, 119 L.Ed.2d 148.) Two justices dissented. (112 S.Ct. 2028, 119 L.Ed.2d 152.)

In Chemical Waste Management v. Hunt (1992) 504 U.S. 334, 112 S.Ct. 2009, 119 L.Ed.2d 121, petitioner maintained a large hazardous waste disposal facility in Alabama. Much of the tonnage was shipped in from other states. An Alabama statute imposed a "base fee" of $ 25.60 per ton on all waste disposed of at commercial facilities, and an "additional fee" of $ 72.00 per ton for waste generated outside of Alabama. Held, the additional fee was unconstitutional.

(a) The additional fee facially and in practical effect discriminates, and the burden is on the State to show that it serves legitimate local purposes. (112 S.Ct. 2014, 119 L.Ed.2d 132.) "But only rhetoric, and not explanation, emerges as to why Alabama targets only interstate waste to meet these goals. ... [T]here is absolutely no evidence before this Court that waste generated outside Alabama is more dangerous than waste generated in Alabama." (112 S.Ct. 2014, 119 L.Ed.2d 133.)

(b) Ultimately, the State's concern focuses on the volume of waste entering the facility. However, less discriminatory alternatives are available to alleviate this concern; e.g., a generally applicable per-ton additional fee on all hazardous waste disposed of within Alabama. (112 S.Ct. 2015, 119 L.Ed.2d 134.) The additional fee is "an obvious effort to saddle those outside the State with most of the burden of slowing the flow of waste" into the facility. (112 S.Ct. 2016, 119 L.Ed.2d 135.) This effort is impermissible. (112 S.Ct. 2016, 119 L.Ed.2d 135.)

One justice dissented, for the reasons set forth in his dissent in Fort Gratiot Sanitary Landfill. (112 S.Ct. 2017, 119

L.Ed.2d 136.) (See Oregon Waste Systems v. Department of Environmental Quality of Oregon (1994) 511 U.S. 93, 114 S.Ct. 1345, 1355, 128 L.Ed.2d 13, 27 [surcharge on disposal of solid waste discriminated against interstate commerce, where waste generated in other states was subject to fee almost three times greater than fee for waste generated within state]; C & A Carbone v. Clarkstown, New York (1994) 511 U.S. 383, 114 S.Ct. 1677, 1681, 128 L.Ed.2d 399, 407 [ordinance requiring all solid waste to be processed at local facility violated Commerce Clause]; Waste Management of Alameda County v. Biagini Waste Reduction Systems (1998) 63 C.A.4th 1488, 1499, 74 C.R.2d 676 [distinguishing Clarkstown; ordinance granting exclusive franchise for collection and disposal of solid waste within city did not directly regulate interstate commerce and did not violate Commerce Clause; it imposed same restrictions on local and out-of-state concerns]; 108 Harv. L. Rev. 149 [Clarkstown]; 20 Ecology L. Q. 817 [hazardous waste in interstate commerce; critical analysis of Fort Gratiot and Chemical Waste Management]; 70 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1239 [interstate garbage wars].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See United Haulers Assn. v. Oneida-Herkimer Solid Waste Management Authority (2007) 550 U.S. 330, 127 S.Ct. 1786, 1795, 1796, 167 L.Ed.2d 655, 667, 668 [distinguishing C & A Carbone v. Clarkstown, New York (1994) 511 U.S. 383, 114 S.Ct. 1677, 128 L.Ed.2d 399; trash disposal is typically local government function; hence, local flow control ordinances that required private trash haulers to have trash processed at public facilities and that treated all private companies equally did not discriminate against interstate commerce for purposes of dormant Commerce Clause].

11 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

b. Unreasonable Burdens.

4. Condemnation of Sports Franchise.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1303

[§ 1303] Condemnation of Sports Franchise.

In Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1985) 174 C.A.3d 414, 220 C.R. 153, defendant, owner of a professional football team as a franchise member of the National Football League, decided to move its team from Oakland to Los Angeles. In an effort to keep the team in Oakland, plaintiff city brought a condemnation action to acquire defendant's property rights. The trial judge granted summary judgment for defendant, but the Supreme Court reversed, holding that the power of eminent domain could be exercised to acquire a sports franchise, and that the issue of public use should be tried on the merits. (Oakland v. Oakland Raiders (1982) 32 C.3d 60, 183 C.R. 673, 646 P.2d 835, supra, §1176.) On retrial, the judge ruled in favor of the defendant on three grounds: no public use, violation of federal antitrust law, and violation of the Commerce Clause. The appellate court affirmed on the Commerce Clause ground, and did not reach the issues of public use and antitrust.

(a) Plaintiff pointed out that the exercise of eminent domain power has never been held to constitute an interference with interstate commerce. However, this lack of case law "serves merely to point out that eminent domain cases have traditionally concerned real property, rarely implicating commerce clause considerations which deal primarily with products in the flow of interstate commerce. Whether the commerce clause precludes taking by eminent domain of intangible property, however, is a novel question posed, it seems, for the first time in this case." (174 C.A.3d 419.)

(b) In Partee v. San Diego Chargers Football Co. (1983) 34 C.3d 378, 194 C.R. 367, 668 P.2d 674, the court held that application of our state antitrust act (Cartwright Act) to an NFL league franchise would be an unreasonable burden on interstate commerce. The same would be true of condemnation of this kind of franchise. "An involuntarily acquired franchise could, at local government's pleasure, be permanently indentured to the local entity. The League's interests would be subordinated to, or at least compromised by, the new owner's allegiance to the local public interest in matters such as lease agreements, ticket prices, concessions, stadium amenities, scheduling conflicts, etc. As the trial court found, it must also be anticipated that a single precedent of eminent domain acquisition would pervade the entire League, and even the threat of its exercise elsewhere would seriously disrupt the balance of economic bargaining on stadium leases throughout the nation." (174 C.A.3d 420.)

(c) In Partee, the court held that the state's legitimate interest in enforcing its antitrust laws was outweighed by the burden on interstate commerce. In the present case, plaintiff does not seek to further public health or safety, or even, as in Partee, to promote fair economic competition. It seeks to promote public recreation and social welfare, and to secure economic benefits, including utilization of the stadium in which the Raiders played. As in Partee, the burden that would be imposed on interstate commerce outweighs the local interest. (174 C.A.3d 421, 422.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

12 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

1. Local Phases of Commerce.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1304

[§ 1304] Local Phases of Commerce.

The early case of Cooley v. Board of Wardens of Port of Philadelphia (1851) 53 U.S. 299, 13 L.Ed. 996, made a distinction between national phases of commerce such as actual interstate transportation, which call for uniformity of regulation throughout the nation, and local phases, which do not. As developed and applied in subsequent cases, the rules are as follows: (a) If the state law is in direct conflict with federal law it is void, for Congress has occupied the field. (b) If the subject is one of national scope, the state law is void even though there is no conflicting federal statute, because "the Constitution itself occupies the field," the federal power is exclusive, and the absence of congressional action indicates an intention that this activity must be free from regulation. (c) But as to local phases, the state may act during the silence or inactivity of Congress, i.e., in the absence of federal regulation; and even where there is a federal statute, state regulation outside its scope and not in direct conflict with it may be valid, for Congress need not occupy the whole field. (See Kelly v. Washington (1937) 302 U.S. 1, 58 S.Ct. 87, 92, 82 L.Ed. 3, 10; Cloverleaf Butter Co. v. Patterson (1942) 315 U.S. 148, 62 S.Ct. 491, 495, 86 L.Ed. 754, 762; Southern Pac. Co. v. Arizona (1945) 325 U.S. 761, 65 S.Ct. 1515, 1519, 89 L.Ed. 1915, 1923.)

The Cooley doctrine was reaffirmed and restated as a broad rule of congressional policy and intent, rather than a mechanical rule of thumb, in California v. Zook (1949) 336 U.S. 725, 69 S.Ct. 841, 93 L.Ed. 1005, infra, §1308: "Whether as inference from congressional silence, or as a negative implication from the grant of power itself, when Congress has not specifically acted we have accepted the Cooley case's broad delineation of the areas of state and national power over interstate commerce. ... Absent congressional action, the familiar test is that of uniformity versus locality: if a case falls within an area in commerce thought to demand a uniform national rule, State action is struck down. If the activity is one of predominantly local interest, State action is sustained. More accurately, the question is whether the State interest is outweighed by a national interest in the unhampered operation of interstate commerce." (69 S.Ct. 842, 93 L.Ed. 1008.) (See Bob-Lo Excursion Co. v. Michigan (1948) 333 U.S. 28, 68 S.Ct. 358, 363, 92 L.Ed. 455, 463, infra, §1306; Jones v. Union Pac. R. Co. (2000) 79 C.A.4th 1053, 1066, 94 C.R.2d 661 [harassment of property owners by railroad's employees in needlessly blowing horns and whistles, idling train engines in front of plaintiffs' home for hours on end, at all hours of day and night, is not protected by Commerce Clause, and railroad's liability for consequential harm does not unduly burden interstate commerce]; Ferguson v. Friendfinders (2002) 94 C.A.4th 1255, 1262, 115 C.R.2d 258 [statute regulating unsolicited e-mail advertisements sent to California residents by service providers who do business in California via equipment located in California does not violate Dormant Commerce Clause; statute does not discriminate against or regulate interstate commerce, and burdens imposed on interstate commerce do not outweigh benefits to state residents]; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §29 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

13 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

2. Local Activities of Interstate Salespersons.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1305

[§ 1305] Local Activities of Interstate Salespersons.

In Eli Lilly & Co. v. Sav-On-Drugs (1961) 366 U.S. 276, 81 S.Ct. 1316, 6 L.Ed.2d 288, plaintiff, an Indiana corporation, brought an action in New Jersey for violation of the Fair Trade Act. Defendant moved to dismiss on the ground that plaintiff was a foreign corporation transacting business in New Jersey without complying with the filing requirements. Plaintiff, relying on the "drummer" cases (see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §88), contended that it was engaged solely in interstate business, because its salespersons were merely promoting interstate sales. Held, dismissal affirmed. Plaintiff's 18 "detailmen," working in a New Jersey office with a district manager, traveling throughout the state promoting sales not only with interstate customers but with local retail buyers, constituted an interstate activity. "The fact that the business of 'inducing' interstate sales, as engaged in by Lilly, is primarily a promotional and service business which does not include a systematic solicitation of orders goes only to the nature of the intrastate business Lilly is carrying on, not to the question of whether it is carrying on an intrastate business." (81 S.Ct. 1320, 6 L.Ed.2d 293.)

Four justices dissented, stating that the activity was sufficient for an apportioned tax (see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §96 et seq.), or for plaintiff to have been subjected to the jurisdiction of the state courts (see 2 Cal. Proc. (4th), Jurisdiction, §159), but that different tests determine whether an interstate business can be subjected to a state licensing system. "Here the dominant activity is nothing more than advertising and public relations. These are the minimum activities in which every 'drummer' for an out-of-state concern engages." (81 S.Ct. 1325, 6 L.Ed.2d 299.) (See People v. Mobin (1965) 237 C.A.2d 115, 118, 46 C.R. 605 [ordinance regulating door-to-door solicitation by salespersons selling product sent by mail from out-of-state; upholding small license fee that was reasonably related to expense of investigation].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Cross-Reference: 2 Cal. Proc. (5th), Jurisdiction, §167.

14 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
 Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

3. Localized Foreign Commerce.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1306

[§ 1306] Localized Foreign Commerce.

The theory that the state may legislate concerning interstate or foreign commerce of a peculiarly local nature was given an unusual application in Bob-Lo Excursion Co. v. Michigan (1948) 333 U.S. 28, 68 S.Ct. 358, 92 L.Ed. 455. Appellant owned an island in the Detroit River across the Canadian border, which it maintained as a recreation center for patrons transported by boat to and from Detroit. It refused to carry a black passenger, and was convicted under the Michigan Civil Rights Act, forbidding racial discrimination in public conveyances. Held, the application of the statute to appellant was valid. (a) The transportation was clearly in foreign commerce. (b) However, it was highly localized; there was no ordinary means of access from Canada; all persons transported came from Detroit; and the situation fell within the doctrine of Cooley v. Board of Wardens of Port of Philadelphia (1851) 53 U.S. 299, 13 L.Ed. 996, supra, §1304. "It is difficult to imagine what national interest or policy, whether of securing uniformity in regulating commerce, affecting relations with foreign nations, or otherwise, could reasonably be found to be adversely affected by applying Michigan's statute to these facts or to outweigh her interest in doing so." (68 S.Ct. 364, 92 L.Ed. 464.) (See Colorado Anti-Discrimination Com. v. Continental Air Lines (1963) 372 U.S. 714, 83 S.Ct. 1022, 1025, 1026, 10 L.Ed.2d 84, 89, 90 [upholding state employment discrimination statute; hiring employee is localized matter]; People v. Buck (1950) 101 C.A.2d Supp. 912, 917, 226 P.2d 87 [upholding San Diego County's licensing of taxi drivers operating across Mexican border]; Buck v. California (1952) 343 U.S. 99, 72 S.Ct. 502, 504, 96 L.Ed. 775, 780 [affirming People v. Buck].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

15 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

3a. (New) Interstate Reach of California Law.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1306A

[§ 1306A] (New) Interstate Reach of California Law.

In RLH Industries v. SBC Communications (2005) 133 C.A.4th 1277, 35 C.R.3d 469, plaintiff raised an issue of first impression by alleging that defendant's Midwest subsidiary violated California antitrust law by requiring its local telephone customers to lease their high-voltage protection (HVP) services from defendant rather than buying their own. Plaintiff is a California company that makes HVP devices. The trial court granted summary judgment to defendant. Held, reversed.

(a) Defendant relied on Healy v. The Beer Institute (1989) 491 U.S. 324, 109 S.Ct. 2491, 105 L.Ed.2d 275, text, §1311, regarding the "extraterritorial effects of state economic regulation." (133 C.A.4th 1288.) However, Healy was concerned with state laws controlling retail prices in other states. It was not concerned with the extraterritorial application of state antitrust laws. (133 C.A.4th 1289.) Thus, Healy does not necessarily bar "state antitrust and unfair competition laws from reaching anticompetitive conduct occurring in other states, regardless of its effects on local residents." (133 C.A.4th 1290.)

(b) The primary concern of the Commerce Clause "is not geographic, but practical. It focuses on the balance between the state law's benefits to local commerce and its burdens upon interstate commerce, not simply on the location of the challenged conduct." (133 C.A.4th 1290.) Here, defendant did not attempt to balance "the benefits of applying California law to their alleged out-of-state tying arrangements against the burden that condemning the tying arrangements under California law--which appears to be consistent with federal law ...--would impose on interstate commerce." Thus, the Commerce Clause "does not necessarily prohibit state antitrust and unfair competition law from reaching out-of-state anticompetitive practices injuring state residents." (133 C.A.4th 1291.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

16 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

4. Congressional Silence.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1307

[§ 1307] In General.

Under the rules stated above (supra, §1304 et seq.), where Congress has not acted, the state may regulate the local phases of commerce, such as harbor improvement and regulation, and bridges over navigable rivers. (Bowman v. Chicago & Northwestern Ry. Co. (1888) 125 U.S. 465, 8 S.Ct. 689, 31 L.Ed. 700; Wilmington Trans. Co. v. Railroad Com. of Calif. (1915) 236 U.S. 151, 35 S.Ct. 276, 59 L.Ed. 508 [California Railroad Commission is allowed to fix rates of carriers plying on high seas between San Pedro and Catalina]; Townsend v. Yeomans (1937) 301 U.S. 441, 57 S.Ct. 842, 847, 81 L.Ed. 1210, 1219 [regulation of rates of tobacco warehouse where tobacco was destined for interstate shipment]; California v. Thompson (1941) 313 U.S. 109, 61 S.Ct. 930, 85 L.Ed. 1219; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §25 et seq.)

Even where federal laws do exist, if they do not fully occupy the field, the state may act on the unregulated phases. (Kelly v. Washington (1937) 302 U.S. 1, 58 S.Ct. 87, 91, 82 L.Ed. 3, 9; South Carolina State Highway Dept. v. Barnwell Bros. (1938) 303 U.S. 177, 58 S.Ct. 510, 516, 82 L.Ed.2d 734, 741 [upholding state weight limitation on trucks where Federal Motor Carrier Act did not deal with subject]; H.P. Welch Co. v. New Hampshire (1939) 306 U.S. 79, 59 S.Ct. 438, 440, 83 L.Ed. 500, 504 [state regulation was valid after passage of federal Act before its effective date]; Maurer v. Hamilton (1940) 309 U.S. 598, 60 S.Ct. 726, 734, 84 L.Ed. 969, 980; Parker v. Brown (1943) 317 U.S. 341, 63 S.Ct. 307, 87 L.Ed. 315.)

But in Cloverleaf Butter Co. v. Patterson (1942) 315 U.S. 148, 62 S.Ct. 491, 497, 86 L.Ed. 754, 764, a federal statute regulated interstate commerce in reprocessed butter. A state statute dealing with the same subject, and authorizing seizure of defective material intended for use in the product and interstate shipment, was held void. The intent of the federal statute was to exclude any state regulation of the subject. (See Hill v. Florida (1945) 325 U.S. 538, 65 S.Ct. 1373, 1374, 89 L.Ed. 1782, 1784 [state statute regulating business agents of labor unions was in conflict with basic policy of Wagner Act]; Jones v. Rath Packing Co. (1977) 430 U.S. 519, 97 S.Ct. 1305, 51 L.Ed.2d 604 [federal law preempted different state weight-labeling requirements].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

17 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

4. Congressional Silence.

bb. Coincidence of Federal and State Statutes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1308

[§ 1308] Coincidence of Federal and State Statutes.

Where an activity involving interstate commerce is regulated by a state statute, and a federal statute thereafter imposes the same type of regulation on the same activity, does this "coincidence" of state and federal statutes mean that Congress has "occupied the field" and that the state law is nullified? The two chief arguments for this result are that (a) the coincidence of the statutory regulations necessarily discloses a congressional intent to cover the field and provide a uniform rule instead of divergent state laws; and (b) the simultaneous operation of both state and federal regulations in the criminal field would permit double punishment for the same act.

Nevertheless, the view that coincidence has the same effect as direct conflict was expressly rejected in California v. Zook (1949) 336 U.S. 725, 69 S.Ct. 841, 93 L.Ed. 1005. Defendants operated a travel bureau arranging "share-expense" transportation in private automobiles for a commission. California and federal law prohibited the sale of this kind of transportation in interstate commerce except in carriers having permits from the Interstate Commerce Commission. Defendants were convicted in the Los Angeles municipal court for violation of the California statute; the Appellate Department reversed the conviction on the ground that the federal legislation has superseded the California law as to interstate commerce; the U.S. Supreme Court held, however, that the California statute was valid.

(a) There is no mechanical rule that coincidence or identity has the same effect as actual conflict of state and federal laws; coincidence, with its possibility of double punishment, is an important factor indicating a congressional intent to exclude the state law, but is not conclusive. Otherwise many state statutes, e.g., those dealing with acts of extortion or robbery in interstate commerce, would be set aside "to satisfy a congressional purpose which could be only the product of this Court's imagination." (69 S.Ct. 845, 93 L.Ed. 1011.)

(b) Where Congress does not expressly declare an intention to displace local laws, and there is no direct conflict in the two statutes, the purpose to supersede must clearly appear. Looking at the whole case, "the factors indicating exclusion of state laws are of no consequence in the light of the small number of local regulations and the state's normal power to enforce safety and good-faith requirements for the use of its own highways. ... So far as casual, occasional, or reciprocal transportation of passengers for hire is concerned, the State may punish as it has in the present case for the safety and welfare of its inhabitants; the nation may punish for the safety and welfare of interstate commerce. There is no conflict." (69 S.Ct. 848, 93 L.Ed. 1014.) (See De Veau v. Braisted (1960) 363 U.S. 144, 80 S.Ct. 1146, 4 L.Ed.2d 1109, supra, §66 [no incompatibility found].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

18 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

5. Express Congressional Authority.

aa. Rule and Illustrations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1309

[§ 1309] Rule and Illustrations.

(1) General Principles. Although in theory the Constitution gives Congress the sole power over interstate commerce, it is now established that Congress may limit its own power by express permission to a state to make regulations in the field of interstate commerce. The subject was fully expounded in Prudential Ins. Co. v. Benjamin (1946) 328 U.S. 408, 66 S.Ct. 1142, 90 L.Ed. 1342. As a result of the decision in United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Assn. (1944) 322 U.S. 533, 64 S.Ct. 1162, 1170, 88 L.Ed. 1440, 1454, supra, §1296, holding that the business of selling insurance is interstate commerce, it was widely asserted that numerous state regulations and state taxes were invalid as unreasonable burdens on interstate commerce. To meet this situation, Congress enacted the McCarran Act (15 U.S.C., §1011 et seq.) which provided that the business of insurance should be subject to state regulation and taxation. Nevertheless, Prudential, a foreign insurance corporation doing insurance business in South Carolina, objected that a state tax assessed on foreign insurance corporations and not on domestic insurers was an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce. Held, the tax was valid.

(a) The Commerce Clause is an express affirmative grant of power to Congress and also an implied limitation on state power; but the trend of decision has been both to broaden the affirmative power of Congress and to sustain state regulatory and taxing measures formerly regarded as in conflict with the implied limitation. The contention that the Commerce Clause of its own force forbids discriminatory state action, and that Congress cannot impose these regulations either by affirmative action or by action with the state, is unsound, because the Commerce Clause is a grant of power, and in no sense a limitation on the power. (66 S.Ct. 1158, 90 L.Ed. 1363.)

(b) Here, both Congress and the state have acted in complete coordination, and the tax is an "exercise of all the power of government residing in our scheme." (66 S.Ct. 1158, 90 L.Ed. 1363.) Although federal and state powers were separated for great reasons of policy and history, Congress and the states "were not forbidden to cooperate or by doing so to achieve legislative consequences, particularly in the great fields of regulating commerce and taxation, which, to some extent at least, neither could accomplish in isolated exertion." (66 S.Ct. 1160, 90 L.Ed. 1365.)

(2) Illustrations. In State Bd. of Ins. v. Todd Shipyards Corp. (1962) 370 U.S. 451, 82 S.Ct. 1380, 8 L.Ed.2d 620,

defendant did business in Texas and insured its Texas property. But the insurance company was a New York corporation and the policies were issued, premiums paid, and losses adjusted outside the state. Held, a Texas tax on the premiums was invalid. The purpose of the McCarran Act was to give the states the power they formerly had before Southeastern Underwriters, and Congress assumed that the limitations of prior decisions would remain. Hence, as in other cases in which the court refrained from disturbing a status quo, these cases were followed and the tax was held invalid for lack of sufficient contacts with Texas to satisfy due process.

In Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. v. Public Service Com. of Indiana (1948) 332 U.S. 507, 68 S.Ct. 190, 92 L.Ed. 128, plaintiff transported natural gas from Texas and Kansas fields into Indiana pursuant to direct sales to large industrial consumers. After first declaring that the sales were interstate commerce (see supra, §1297), the Court held that they were nevertheless subject to regulation of rates and service by the Indiana Public Service Commission.

(a) Under the provisions of the federal Natural Gas Act, Congress regulates transportation in interstate commerce, sales in interstate commerce for resale, and companies engaged in transportation or sale. The Act deliberately omits reference to direct sales for consumptive use, whether by domestic or industrial users, and this omission unmistakably discloses an intent to allow the continuance of that regulation by the states. (68 S.Ct. 196, 92 L.Ed. 135.)

(b) Even if Congress had remained silent, the vital interests of the states would have justified the regulation. The action of Congress recognizes these interests by providing a comprehensive and complementary scheme of federal and state regulation. (68 S.Ct. 199, 92 L.Ed. 141.) (See Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. v. Michigan Public Service Com. (1951) 341 U.S. 329, 71 S.Ct. 777, 780, 95 L.Ed. 993, 999 [same holding]; Robertson v. California (1946) 328 U.S. 440, 66 S.Ct. 1160, 1165, 90 L.Ed. 1366, 1374 [interest of California in protecting public from evils of uncontrolled insurance solicitation justified licensing of interstate insurance business even before enactment of McCarran Act]; Wilburn Boat Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1955) 348 U.S. 310, 75 S.Ct. 368, 374, 99 L.Ed. 337, 346 [in absence of federal legislation, states may regulate marine insurance].)

In Speegle v. Board of Fire Underwriters of the Pac. (1946) 29 C.2d 34, 49, 172 P.2d 867, 1 Summary (10th), Contracts, §596, the court, following Prudential, held that, by virtue of the McCarran Act, the California antitrust law (Cartwright Act) could be invoked against an association of insurance companies engaged in interstate commerce. (See Northwest Cen. Pipeline Corp. v. State Corp. Com. of Kansas (1989) 489 U.S. 493, 109 S.Ct. 1262, 1281, 1282, 103 L.Ed.2d 509, 537, 538 [Natural Gas Act reserves to states power to regulate production, and Congress must have contemplated some effect on interstate commerce; hence, evenhanded regulation of production is valid where effect on interstate commerce is incidental]; People v. Wilmschurst (1999) 68 C.A.4th 1332, 1345, 81 C.R.2d 221 [exemption provision of Clean Air Act demonstrates express congressional intent "to allow California to forge emissions standards at variance with the rest of the United States"].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Illustrations. See County Sanitation Dist. No. 2 of Los Angeles v. Kern (2005) 127 C.A.4th 1544, 1609, 27 C.R.3d 28 [as long as federal regulatory standards are met, Clean Water Act authorizes some local control over use and disposal of sewage sludge, and ordinance requiring heightened treatment standards for sewage sludge used on county land reflects local determination of manner of use or disposal and does not discriminate against sewage sludge originating outside county or state].

19 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

5. Express Congressional Authority.

bb. Distinctions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1310

[§ 1310] Distinctions.

(1) Due Process. The McCarran Act removed the barrier of the Commerce Clause from state regulation, but statutes still remain subject to challenge under the Due Process Clause. Hence, decisions prior to the McCarran Act must still be considered in determining whether the state has the requisite authority over the activities. (See People v. United Nat. Life Ins. Co. (1967) 66 C.2d 577, 589, 58 C.R. 599, 427 P.2d 199.)

In United Nat. Life, the Insurance Commissioner sued three out-of-state life insurance companies to enjoin them from carrying on business without a certificate of authority under Ins. C 700. The companies were soliciting and negotiating policies and collecting premiums from California residents entirely by mail, without offices, agents, or other representatives in the state. Held, Ins.C. 700 is constitutional and applicable.

(a) Earlier cases were concerned with the place of making the insurance contracts. Today the emphasis is on contacts with the regulating state and the interest of the state in the transactions. (66 C.2d 592.)

(b) The presence of agents in the regulating state is not essential; other contacts are sufficient. Here, the insureds were residents; solicitation actually took place in California where advertising material and forms were received; California residents completed applications here; premiums were paid from California funds or bank accounts; claims would be investigated here and litigation commenced here; and if defendants should fail to perform, California might be called on to provide assistance for the beneficiaries. (66 C.2d 593.)

(c) The long continued administrative construction of Ins.C. 700 as inapplicable to mail business was based on a misapprehension of constitutional authority and is not persuasive. (66 C.2d 597.)

(d) Doing business illegally without a certificate would not affect the validity of policies issued by the insurers. (66 C.2d 600.)

(2) Federal Power. The McCarran Act did not entirely displace federal authority. In Federal Trade Com. v.

Travelers Health Assn. (1960) 362 U.S. 293, 80 S.Ct. 717, 4 L.Ed.2d 724, Travelers, licensed only in Nebraska and Virginia, did a mail order business in every state, operating from Nebraska. The Nebraska statute generally prohibited unfair practices by a person domiciled in the state, in the conduct of the business of insurance "in any other state, territory, possession, province, country, or district." Held, nevertheless, the Federal Trade Commission had jurisdiction to issue a cease-and-desist order to prohibit false representations in Travelers' circular letters. The intention of the McCarran Act was to displace federal law only where there was state regulation "by the state in which the deception is practiced and has its impact." (80 S.Ct. 721, 4 L.Ed.2d 728.)

(3) No Clear Congressional Consent. In South-Cen. Timber Dev. Co. v. Wunnicke (1984) 467 U.S. 82, 104 S.Ct. 2237, 81 L.Ed.2d 71, infra, §1313, an Alaska statute required that timber taken from state lands be processed within the state prior to export. The state contended that the requirement had been authorized by Congress because Congress had endorsed this policy with respect to federal lands. Held, this fact did not justify the inference that Congress intended to authorize a similar policy with respect to state lands. (104 S.Ct. 2243, 81 L.Ed.2d 77.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

20 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

c. State Regulatory Powers Generally.

6. Direct Burdens Under Twenty-First Amendment.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1311

[§ 1311] Direct Burdens Under Twenty-First Amendment.

(1) In General. Section 2 of the Twenty-First Amendment provides: "The transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited." Under this provision, a state may impose a direct burden on interstate commerce in liquor. (State Bd. of Equalization of Calif. v. Young's Market Co. (1936) 299 U.S. 59, 57 S.Ct. 77, 81 L.Ed. 38 [state may impose license fee on importation of liquor]; Ziffirin v. Reeves (1939) 308 U.S. 132, 60 S.Ct. 163, 84 L.Ed. 128; California v. LaRue (1972) 409 U.S. 109, 93 S.Ct. 390, 34 L.Ed.2d 342, supra, §453.)

In Carter v. Virginia (1944) 321 U.S. 131, 64 S.Ct. 464, 468, 88 L.Ed. 605, 611, a statute provided that, where liquor was transported through Virginia to another state, the carrier had to post bond and conform to certain regulations designed to assure delivery only to a consignee legally entitled to receive it. Though the law obviously burdened interstate commerce, it was upheld as a reasonable police measure to protect the state of transit (Virginia) from illegal diversion and sale of the liquor there. As indicated in concurring opinions, it is doubtful whether such a substantial interference could be justified in the transportation of ordinary commodities. (Cf. Von Hamm-Young Co. v. San Francisco (1947) 29 C.2d 798, 808, 178 P.2d 745 [although Amendment may permit regulation of interstate commerce to prevent evasion of local laws, it does not permit taxation of property in transit].)

The Twenty-First Amendment did not "repeal" the Commerce Clause in connection with regulating liquor so as to leave Congress with no power over interstate or foreign commerce in it; "each must be considered in the light of the other." (Hostetter v. Idlewild Bon Voyage Liquor Corp. (1964) 377 U.S. 324, 84 S.Ct. 1293, 1298, 12 L.Ed.2d 350, 356.) In Hostetter, Idlewild Corp. sold tax-free liquor at Kennedy Airport in New York, solely to international travelers for delivery at their foreign destinations. New York sought to prohibit the business as unlicensable under its law. Held, the Amendment merely gave unlimited power to prevent importation for use within the state, and did not authorize prohibition of export. (See Rice v. Alcoholic Bev. Control App. Bd. (1978) 21 C.3d 431, 448, 146 C.R. 585, 579 P.2d 476 [liquor price maintenance law is unconstitutional]; Bacchus Imports, Ltd. v. Dias (1984) 468 U.S. 263, 104 S.Ct. 3049, 3058, 82 L.Ed.2d 200, 209 [discriminatory tax is violative of Commerce Clause]; 324 Liquor Corp. v. Duffy (1987) 479 U.S. 335, 107 S.Ct. 720, 729, 93 L.Ed.2d 667, 677 [New York statute requiring liquor retailers to charge at least 112% of wholesaler's posted bottle price violates Sherman Act]; 79 Cal. L. Rev. 161 [The Twenty-First Amendment and State Control Over Intoxicating Liquor: Accommodating the Federal Interest]; 13 Hastings Const. L. Q. 361 [Bacchus]; 20 A.L.R.4th 600 [validity, construction, and effect of laws prohibiting or regulating advertising of intoxicating liquors]; 116 A.L.R.5th 149 [interplay between Twenty-First Amendment and Commerce Clause concerning state regulation of liquors].)

(2) Affirmation Statutes. In Joseph E. Seagram & Sons v. Hostetter (1966) 384 U.S. 35, 86 S.Ct. 1254, 1259, 16 L.Ed.2d 336, 342, the Court upheld a New York statute requiring liquor brand owners, their agents, or "related persons" to affirm that their filed prices for sales to wholesalers and retailers in New York were no higher than the lowest price charged anywhere else in the U.S. during the preceding month.

Seagram was distinguished in Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. v. New York State Liquor Authority (1986) 476 U.S. 573, 106 S.Ct. 2080, 2085, 90 L.Ed.2d 552, 561. The Court held that the extraterritorial effect of a New York "affirmation law" constituted an unconstitutional burden on interstate commerce (106 S.Ct. 2086, 90 L.Ed.2d 562), and was not justified by the Twenty-First Amendment. The Amendment gives New York only the authority to control sales of liquor in New York; the statute had the effect of regulating sales of liquor to be consumed in other states. (106 S.Ct. 2088, 90 L.Ed.2d 563.) It might also interfere with the ability of other states to exercise their own authority under the Amendment. "Once a distiller has posted prices in New York, it is not free to lower them in another State, even in response to a regulatory directive by that State, without risking forfeiture of its license in New York. New York law, therefore may force other States either to abandon regulatory goals or to deprive their citizens of the opportunity to purchase brands of liquor that are sold in New York." (106 S.Ct. 2088, 90 L.Ed.2d 564.)

In Healy v. Beer Institute (1989) 491 U.S. 324, 109 S.Ct. 2491, 105 L.Ed.2d 275, the Court struck down a Connecticut beer-price affirmation statute. "In the interest of removing any lingering uncertainty about the constitutional validity of affirmation statutes and of avoiding further litigation on the subject of liquor-price affirmation, we recognize today what was all but determined in Brown-Forman: to the extent that Seagram held that retrospective affirmation statutes do not facially violate the Commerce Clause, it is no longer good law. Retrospective affirmation statutes, like other affirmation statutes, have the inherent practical extraterritorial effect of regulating liquor prices in other States. By tying maximum future prices in one State to the lowest prices in other States as determined at a specified time in the past, retrospective affirmation laws control pricing decisions in nonaffirmation States by requiring that those decisions reflect not only local market conditions, but also market conditions in the affirmation States--market conditions that would be irrelevant absent the binding force of the affirmation statutes. Every pricing decision made in a nonaffirmation State will reflect the certain knowledge that the price chosen will become in the future the maximum permissible price in the State requiring affirmation. For the reasons noted today in Brown-Forman, this extraterritorial effect violates the Commerce Clause." (109 S.Ct. 2502, 105 L.Ed.2d 292.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. State Bd. of Equalization of Calif. v. Young's Market Co. (1936) 299 U.S. 59, 57 S.Ct. 77, 81 L.Ed. 38, text, p. 1015, was distinguished in Granholm v. Heald (2005) 544 U.S. 460, 125 S.Ct. 1885, 161 L.Ed.2d 796, which invalidated direct-shipment laws in Michigan and New York. Both states regulate the sale and distribution of alcoholic beverages, including wine, through a three-tier system requiring producers to sell to wholesalers, who sell to retailers, who sell to the public. Michigan allows in-state wineries with a state license to sell directly to consumers, but bans all direct sales by out-of-state wineries. New York does not ban direct shipments altogether, but requires out-of-state wineries to establish a distribution operation in New York before being allowed to make direct shipments.

(a) Under the Twenty-First Amendment, a state has nearly complete control over the sales and distribution of alcoholic beverages. Hence, a state may ban the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages altogether, or it may assume direct control of liquor distribution through state-run outlets or channel sales through a three-tier system. (125 S.Ct. 1905, 161 L.Ed.2d 819.) But it cannot enact a law that favors in-state producers. This kind of law violates the Commerce Clause and is not saved by the Twenty-First Amendment. (125 S.Ct. 1905, 161 L.Ed.2d 820.)

(b) The state regimes here did not advance legitimate local purposes "that cannot be adequately served by reasonable nondiscrimination alternatives." There is little evidence that the direct shipment of wine will increase alcohol consumption by minors, and even if there were substantial evidence, "this would not justify regulations limiting only out-of-state direct shipments." (125 S.Ct. 1905, 161 L.Ed.2d 820.) Banning direct shipments of wine by out-of-state producers also does not facilitate the states' tax collection efforts. Michigan already collects taxes directly from out-of-state wineries on imports shipped to in-state wholesalers. And New York could require out-of-state wineries to procure a permit, as it does for in-state wineries, to protect itself against lost revenue. Further, the states have not shown that tax evasion by out-of-state wineries poses a unique threat that justifies their discriminatory regimes. (125 S.Ct. 1906, 161 L.Ed.2d 821.)

Four justices dissented in two opinions. (125 S.Ct. 1907, 1909, 161 L.Ed.2d 822, 825.) Both opinions would uphold the Young's Market view that the Twenty-First Amendment must be interpreted broadly to allow comprehensive state regulation of alcoholic beverages, even if that regulation places a direct burden on interstate commerce. (125 S.Ct. 1908, 1920, 161 L.Ed.2d 823, 836.) (See 119 Harv. L. Rev. 307 [Granholm]; 52 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 899 [new approach to wine wars]; 32 Western State L. Rev. 63 [direct shipping of wine to customers].) Correction: Page 1017, line 4, "Healy v. Beer Institute" should read "Healy v. The Beer Institute".

21 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

d. Police Power Regulations.

1. Health and Safety Measures.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1312

[§ 1312] Health and Safety Measures.

The states may enact regulatory laws dealing with local aspects of interstate commerce, if they do not unreasonably burden the commerce. (See 98 A.L.R.5th 167 [validity of state statutes and administrative regulations regulating Internet communications under Commerce Clause]; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §96.) Illustrations are numerous in the field of health and similar protective measures:

New York, New Haven & Hartford R. Co. v. New York (1897) 165 U.S. 628, 17 S.Ct. 418, 41 L.Ed. 853 [sustaining state legislation requiring heating equipment for passenger cars].

Plumley v. Massachusetts (1894) 155 U.S. 461, 15 S.Ct. 154, 39 L.Ed. 223 [labeling of oleomargarine colored to look like butter].

In re Bear (1932) 216 C. 536, 540, 15 P.2d 489 [labeling of imported egg products].

Bourjois v. Chapman (1937) 301 U.S. 183, 57 S.Ct. 691, 81 L.Ed. 1027 [statute requiring registration of cosmetics sold within state, and payment of inspection fees].

California v. Thompson (1941) 313 U.S. 109, 61 S.Ct. 930, 85 L.Ed. 1219 [California statute regulating, by license and bond, transportation agents who sell or negotiate for interstate transportation].

Robertson v. California (1946) 328 U.S. 440, 66 S.Ct. 1160, 1165, 90 L.Ed. 1366, 1374 [following Thompson].

People v. Buck (1950) 101 C.A.2d Supp. 912, 914, 226 P.2d 87 [San Diego ordinance denying taxi driver's license to person of bad moral character was upheld as to defendant operating cabs from Mexico through San Diego].

Buck v. California (1952) 343 U.S. 99, 72 S.Ct. 502, 504, 96 L.Ed. 775, 780 [same; affirming People v. Buck].

Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen & Enginemen v. Chicago, Rock Island & Pac. R. Co. (1968) 393 U.S. 129, 89 S.Ct. 323, 327, 21 L.Ed.2d 289, 295 [upholding Arkansas "full-crew" law, specifying minimum number of employees in train crew].

CTS Corp. v. Dynamics Corp. of America (1987) 481 U.S. 69, 107 S.Ct. 1637, 1648, 95 L.Ed.2d 67, 82 [upholding state statute regulating acquisition of control shares in corporation by imposing condition of approval by majority of preexisting disinterested shareholders].

Hatch v. Superior Court (2000) 80 C.A.4th 170, 194, 197, 94 C.R.2d 453 [P.C. 288.2, prohibiting sending defined material over Internet to minors for purpose of seducing them and requiring at least an attempt in California, does not unduly burden interstate commerce; statute does not criminalize "access" or require differing versions of communications in different jurisdictions].

People v. Hsu (2000) 82 C.A.4th. 976, 985, 99 C.R.2d 184 [same].

In Huron Portland Cement Co. v. Detroit (1960) 362 U.S. 440, 80 S.Ct. 813, 4 L.Ed.2d 852, appellant, a Michigan corporation, operated vessels on the Great Lakes in interstate commerce between states. Its ships had boilers that conformed in all respects to federal specifications and were inspected and licensed by federal authorities, under congressional regulations. But for lack of conformity to the requirements of Detroit's smoke-abatement ordinance, appellant was criminally prosecuted and convicted. Held, the ordinance was valid. The federal boiler inspection is designed solely to insure the seagoing safety of a vessel from the perils of maritime navigation. The purpose of Detroit's law--elimination of air pollution to protect health and enhance cleanliness of the local community--was different. Thus, there was no overlap of federal and local law, and no federal preemption. (80 S.Ct. 815, 4 L.Ed.2d 855; see dissent, criticizing criminal conviction for using very equipment that federal government authorizes.)

Florida Lime & Avocado Growers v. Paul (1963) 373 U.S. 132, 83 S.Ct. 1210, 10 L.Ed.2d 248, involved a California statute prohibiting the sale of avocados containing less than 8% oil. The theory of the law was that the oil content is a test of maturity, and that the regulation was necessary to prevent deception of consumers. Florida avocados, certified under a marketing order of the Secretary of Agriculture acting under federal statutory authority, were excluded from the California market if they did not reach that oil content. An action was brought by Florida growers to enjoin enforcement of the California statute, and judgment went against plaintiffs. Held, reversed for determination of the facts relating to the commerce issue.

(a) Federal preemption was not shown. Although the federal and California standards are different, the test is whether they can both be enforced without impairing federal superintendence, and compliance with both is possible here. Nor does the subject matter call for exclusive federal supervision. Foodstuffs for the market have always been deemed a matter of peculiarly local concern. While, under Cloverleaf Butter Co. v. Patterson (1942) 315 U.S. 148, 62 S.Ct. 491, 497, 86 L.Ed. 754, 764, supra, §1307, Florida might not be entitled to prevent exportation of federally certified fruit by imposing a higher standard, nothing in that case forbids California regulation of marketing: "Congressional regulation of one end of the stream of commerce does not, ipso facto, oust all state regulation at the other end." (83 S.Ct. 1219, 10 L.Ed.2d 258.) (See dissent of 4 justices, arguing that the federal law was irreconcilable.)

(b) On the issue of burden or discrimination, the record was insufficient and a retrial was necessary. (83 S.Ct. 1222, 10 L.Ed.2d 262.)

The limits on this type of state power were discussed in Southern Pac. Co. v. Arizona (1945) 325 U.S. 761, 65 S.Ct. 1515, 1521, 89 L.Ed. 1915, 1925, holding invalid the Arizona Train Limit Law, prohibiting trains of more than 14 passenger cars or 70 freight cars. The possible safety advantages were outweighed by the interference with efficiency and economy of interstate transportation, because the law required breaking up and reorganizing trains at the state border. The confusion that could result from numerous conflicting state laws necessarily made this a subject for national regulation alone.

Even where the ostensible object is health, an arbitrary restriction on importation will be nullified. (Dean Milk Co. v. Madison (1951) 340 U.S. 349, 71 S.Ct. 295, 297, 95 L.Ed. 329, 333.) (See Hunt v. Washington State Apple Advertising Com. (1977) 432 U.S. 333, 97 S.Ct. 2434, 53 L.Ed.2d 383 [statute requiring containers of apples sold in state to exhibit federal grading categories or no grading categories, and prohibiting sister-state grading categories, was unconstitutional burden].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See People v. PuriTec (2007) 153 C.A.4th 1524, 1534, 1536, 64 C.R.3d 270 [prohibiting sellers of water treatment devices from making health benefit claims about devices when they have not been certified by state Department of Public Health].

22 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

d. Police Power Regulations.

2. State as Market Participant.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1313

[§ 1313] State as Market Participant.

A statute providing a subsidy for local businesses was sustained in Hughes v. Alexandria Scrap Corp. (1976) 426 U.S. 794, 96 S.Ct. 2488, 49 L.Ed.2d 220. The Maryland Legislature, after a study of the aesthetic problem of abandoned automobiles, adopted the following plan to speed up the "scrap cycle": (1) A "stick," consisting of a requirement that Maryland wreckers must obtain a license and pay a recurring fine for old vehicles retained for over 1 year. (2) A "carrot," consisting of a bounty paid by the state for destroying vehicles formerly titled in Maryland; a licensed wrecker shares the bounty with the processor. (3) Documentation requirements, to give clear title to the wreckers, were eliminated where the vehicle was a "hulk"--over 8 years old and inoperable. However, under a 1974 amendment, a scrap processor with a plant outside of Maryland had to produce full documentation to receive the bounty on a hulk, while Maryland processors were required only to submit a simple indemnity agreement. The amendment was challenged by a processor located outside of Maryland whose business in bounty-eligible hulks had greatly declined. Held, the statute as amended was valid.

(a) The common thread in prior cases holding statutes invalid is that "the State interfered with the natural functioning of the interstate market either through prohibition or through burdensome regulation." But Maryland has not done either; it has itself entered into the market to bid up the price; and the impact on the interstate flow of hulks is due to the fact that it has made it more lucrative for unlicensed suppliers to dispose of their hulks in Maryland rather than take them outside the state. (96 S.Ct. 2496, 49 L.Ed.2d 229.)

(b) This presents a new issue. "[U]ntil today the Court has not been asked to hold that the entry by the State itself into the market as a purchaser, in effect, of a potential article of interstate commerce creates a burden upon that commerce if the State restricts its trade to its own citizens or businesses within the State." (96 S.Ct. 2497, 49 L.Ed.2d 231.)

(c) The Maryland statute does not violate the Commerce Clause. It does not impose a forbidden trade barrier; the hulks remain in the state "in response to market forces, including that exerted by money from the State." The Commerce Clause does not forbid a state, in the absence of congressional action, "from participating in the market and exercising the right to favor its own citizens over others." (96 S.Ct. 2497, 49 L.Ed.2d 231.)

Three justices dissented, contending that the opinion repudiates established principles and ignores the reasoning of many cases. (96 S.Ct. 2501 et seq., 49 L.Ed.2d 236 et seq.) (See Reeves v. Stake (1980) 447 U.S. 429, 100 S.Ct. 2271, 2277, 65 L.Ed.2d 244, 251 [in time of shortage, state may confine sale of cement it produces solely to its residents; "[t]he basic distinction drawn in Alexandria Scrap between States as market participants and States as market regulators makes good sense and sound law"]; White v. Massachusetts Council of Const. Employers (1983) 460 U.S. 204, 103 S.Ct. 1042, 1044, 75 L.Ed.2d 1, 6 [following Alexandria Scrap and Reeves]; 97 Harv. L. Rev. 70 [White case]; 21 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 59 [reviewing cases].)

These cases were distinguished in South-Cen. Timber Dev. Co. v. Wunnicke (1984) 467 U.S. 82, 104 S.Ct. 2237, 81 L.Ed.2d 71. An Alaska statute imposed a "primary manufacture" requirement for timber taken from state lands. The timber had to be processed within the state prior to export. Held, the state could not use the market-participant doctrine to justify regulation of the timber-processing market in which it was not a participant.

(a) "The limit of the market-participation doctrine must be that it allows a State to impose burdens on commerce within the market in which it is a participant, but allows it to go no further. The State may not impose conditions, whether by statute, regulation, or contract, that have a substantial regulatory effect outside of that particular market. Unless the 'market' is relatively narrowly defined, the doctrine has the potential of swallowing up the rule that States may not impose substantial burdens on interstate commerce even if they act with the permissible state purpose of fostering local industry." (104 S.Ct. 2245, 81 L.Ed.2d 83.)

(b) "There are sound reasons for distinguishing between a State's preferring its own residents in the initial disposition of goods when it is a market participant and a State's attachment of restrictions on dispositions subsequent to the goods coming to rest in private hands. ... We reject the contention that a State's action as a market regulator may be upheld against Commerce Clause challenge on the ground that the State could achieve the same end as a market participant. We therefore find it unimportant for present purposes that the State could support its processing industry by selling only to Alaska processors, by vertical integration, or by direct subsidy." (104 S.Ct. 2246, 81 L.Ed.2d 83.)

(c) "Instead of merely choosing its own trading partners, the State is attempting to govern the private, separate economic relationships of its trading partners; that is, it restricts the post-purchase activity of the purchaser, rather than merely the purchasing activity. In contrast to the situation in White, this restriction on private economic activity takes place after the completion of the parties' direct commercial obligations, rather than during the course of an ongoing commercial relationship in which the city retained a continuing proprietary interest in the subject of the contract." (104 S.Ct. 2246, 81 L.Ed.2d 84.) (See 21 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 595 [South-Cen. Timber]; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §§37, 46.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

23 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

d. Police Power Regulations.

3. Economic Restrictions on Imports.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1314

[§ 1314] Economic Restrictions on Imports.

(1) Restrictions Invalid. While impure or unsanitary commodities such as milk may be excluded, a statute that conditions the importation of milk on the maintenance of price standards or other economic factors in another state is an unreasonable burden on commerce and is invalid. (Baldwin v. G.A.F. Seelig (1935) 294 U.S. 511, 55 S.Ct. 497, 501, 79 L.Ed. 1032, 1039; see Dean Milk Co. v. Madison (1951) 340 U.S. 349, 71 S.Ct. 295, 297, 95 L.Ed. 329, 333 [requirement of local processing of milk was invalid where applied to out-of-state producers]; Exxon Corp. v. Governor of Maryland (1978) 437 U.S. 117, 98 S.Ct. 2207, 2214, 57 L.Ed.2d 91, 102; Minnesota v. Clover Leaf Creamery Co. (1981) 449 U.S. 456, 101 S.Ct. 715, 728, 66 L.Ed.2d 659, 675; West Lynn Creamery v. Healy (1994) 512 U.S. 186, 114 S.Ct. 2205, 2211, 129 L.Ed.2d 157, 166 [Massachusetts assessment imposed on milk sold by dealers to in-state retailers was invalid, where two-thirds of dealers were from out of state and entire assessment was distributed to Massachusetts dairy farmers]; Chrysler Corp. v. New Motor Vehicle Bd. (1979) 89 C.A.3d 1034, 1042, 153 C.R. 135; 10 Ecology L. Rev. 113 [Minnesota v. Clover Leaf Creamery].)

In Great Atlantic & Pac. Tea Co. v. Cottrell (1976) 424 U.S. 366, 96 S.Ct. 923, 47 L.Ed.2d 55, Mississippi's statute regulating milk production and sale provided that milk from another state could be sold in Mississippi only if that state accepted Grade A milk produced in Mississippi on a reciprocal basis. Plaintiff processed milk in Louisiana for its Mississippi retail outlets, but was denied a permit to distribute the milk to the outlets because Louisiana had not made a reciprocal agreement. Held, the statute was an unconstitutional burden on commerce. Under the tests laid down in Dean Milk Co. v. Madison, supra, Mississippi failed to show a local interest of substantial importance justifying the regulation that in practical effect excluded wholesome milk produced outside the state. (96 S.Ct. 930, 47 L.Ed.2d 63.) The Court rejected a two-pronged argument that the reciprocity requirement was in effect a free trade provision, advancing the identical national interest served by the Commerce Clause.

(a) While mutually beneficial objectives may be promoted by voluntary reciprocity agreements, "Mississippi may not use the threat of economic isolation as a weapon to force sister States to enter into even a desirable reciprocity agreement." (96 S.Ct. 931, 47 L.Ed.2d 65.)

(b) Even if Louisiana has refused reciprocity in bad faith, i.e., has erected unconstitutional economic barriers under the guise of health and inspection regulations, Mississippi has a remedy by suit to challenge Louisiana's actions. And if Louisiana is legitimately exercising its local powers in the interests of health, i.e., is refusing reciprocity and consequently the admission of milk deemed of insufficient quality, Mississippi cannot force its own judgments as to an adequate level of milk sanitation on Louisiana at the pain of an absolute ban on the interstate flow of commerce in milk. (96 S.Ct. 932, 47 L.Ed.2d 65.)

(2) Restrictions Valid. A statute regulating milk prices was validly applied to an interstate shipment where otherwise uniform and effective operation of the statute would have been impossible. (Milk Control Bd. of Pennsylvania v. Eisenberg Farm Products (1939) 306 U.S. 346, 59 S.Ct. 528, 83 L.Ed. 752.)

In Maine v. Taylor (1986) 477 U.S. 131, 106 S.Ct. 2240, 91 L.Ed.2d 110, a Maine statute prohibited the importation of live baitfish, on evidence that Maine's population of wild fish would be placed at risk by parasites prevalent in out-of-state baitfish, and that nonnative species inadvertently included in shipments of live baitfish could disturb Maine's aquatic ecology. "As long as a State does not needlessly obstruct interstate trade or attempt to 'place itself in a position of economic isolation,' ... it retains broad regulatory authority to protect the health and safety of its citizens and the integrity of its natural resources. The evidence in this case amply supports the District Court's findings that Maine's ban on the importation of live baitfish serves legitimate local purposes that could not adequately be served by available nondiscriminatory alternatives." (106 S.Ct. 2455, 91 L.Ed.2d 129.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

Correction: Page 1022, last full line of first paragraph, 10 Ecology L. Rev. 113 should be 10 Ecology L. Q. 113.

24 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

d. Police Power Regulations.

4. Economic Restrictions on Exports.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1315

[§ 1315] Economic Restrictions on Exports.

The doctrine of Baldwin v. G.A.F. Seelig (1935) 294 U.S. 511, 55 S.Ct. 497, 79 L.Ed. 1032, supra, §1314, was followed in a different factual pattern in H.P. Hood & Sons v. Du Mond (1949) 336 U.S. 525, 69 S.Ct. 657, 93 L.Ed. 865. New York's statutes provided for licensing of dealers purchasing milk for resale, and regulated prices to be paid to producers. Issuance of a license was conditioned on a showing that it "will not tend to a destructive competition in a market already adequately served." Petitioner, operating as a licensed dealer in full compliance with price and other regulations, was denied a license to acquire additional purchasing facilities, despite the fact that all of its purchases were made for interstate shipment to Massachusetts consumers. Held, denial of the additional license was an invalid restriction on interstate commerce.

(a) In Milk Control Bd. of Pennsylvania v. Eisenberg Farm Products (1939) 306 U.S. 346, 59 S.Ct. 528, 83 L.Ed. 752, supra, §1314, regulation of prices to be paid to milk producers was upheld under "the power of the State to shelter its people from menaces to their health or safety and from fraud, even when these dangers emanate from interstate commerce." (69 S.Ct. 662, 93 L.Ed. 870.)

(b) On the other hand, in Baldwin v. G.A.F. Seelig, supra, restrictions designed for the economic advantage of the state were an unreasonable burden on commerce. Baldwin dealt with restrictions on importation and sale of milk, designated to exclude foreign milk from the New York market; the instant case deals with restrictions on purchase and exportation of local milk to out-of-state consumers; but both cases are controlled by the same principle, because the object of each regulation was the protection of local economic interests. (69 S.Ct. 663, 93 L.Ed. 871.)

(c) The doctrine that the states are not separable economic units, and that one state cannot set up embargoes or economic barriers against competition of another state, is usually invoked in cases where the discrimination is against importation of commodities into the state. That it applies equally to restrictions on exports is established by West v. Kansas Natural Gas Co. (1911) 221 U.S. 229, 31 S.Ct. 564, 55 L.Ed. 716, supra, §1298, Foster-Fountain Packing Co. v. Haydel (1928) 278 U.S. 1, 49 S.Ct. 1, 73 L.Ed. 147, supra, §1299, and Toomer v. Witsell (1948) 334 U.S. 385, 68 S.Ct. 1156, 1166, 92 L.Ed. 1460, 1474, supra, §1299. "We need only consider the consequences if each of the few states that produce copper, lead, high-grade iron ore, timber, cotton, oil or gas should decree that industries located in that state shall have priority. ... Or suppose that the field of discrimination and retaliation be industry. May Michigan provide that automobiles cannot be taken out of that State until local dealers' demands are fully met? ... Could Ohio then pounce upon the rubber-tire industry, on which she has substantial grip, to retaliate for Michigan's auto monopoly?" (69 S.Ct. 665, 93 L.Ed. 874.)

Du Mond was distinguished in Cities Service Gas Co. v. Peerless Oil & Gas Co. (1950) 340 U.S. 179, 71 S.Ct. 215, 95 L.Ed. 190, holding that the interest of Oklahoma in preventing waste of natural gas outweighed the national interest so as to authorize state fixing of minimum prices for gas produced. Unlike the regulation in Du Mond, there was no embargo and no discrimination against interstate commerce, because the regulation applied to all gas taken from the field whether for interstate or intrastate sale. (71 S.Ct. 220, 95 L.Ed. 203.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

25 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

2. State Power and Interstate Commerce.

d. Police Power Regulations.

5. Use of Highways.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1316

[§ 1316] Use of Highways.

It has been held that a state may regulate the use of its highways, and may impose a reasonable fee as a condition of granting a license or permit to use them, provided that the amount of the fee is necessary to reimburse the state for local facilities furnished or to cover the expense of enforcing the regulations. (Ingels v. Morf (1937) 300 U.S. 290, 57 S.Ct. 439, 81 L.Ed. 653 [fees under California Caravan Act of 1935 were excessive]; South Carolina State Highway Dept. v. Barnwell Bros. (1938) 303 U.S. 177, 58 S.Ct. 510, 82 L.Ed. 734 [upholding prohibition of motor trucks of excessive width and weight loads]; Clark v. Paul Gray (1939) 306 U.S. 583, 59 S.Ct. 744, 83 L.Ed. 1001 [upholding California Caravan Act of 1937, where there was no showing that fees were excessive]; Lord v. Henderson (1951) 105 C.A.2d 426, 432, 234 P.2d 197 [same]; Motor Trading Co. v. Ingels (1941) 43 C.A.2d 20, 25, 110 P.2d 132 [statute requiring license, bond, etc., from those bringing in secondhand cars for resale was invalid].)

As the Court observed in Railway Express Agency v. New York (1949) 336 U.S. 106, 69 S.Ct. 463, 466, 93 L.Ed. 533, 539: "Where traffic control and the use of highways are involved and where there is no conflicting federal regulation, great leeway is allowed local authorities, even though the local regulation materially interferes with interstate commerce."

Prior to the enactment of the federal Motor Carrier Act subjecting those carriers to regulation, it was indicated that a state, to conserve its highways and prevent traffic congestion, might require an interstate motor carrier to obtain a certificate of public convenience and necessity before being allowed to operate. (Bradley v. Public Util. Com. (1933) 289 U.S. 92, 53 S.Ct. 577, 77 L.Ed. 1053.) Since the federal Act took effect, the states lack power to deny permission to operate, and cannot indirectly exercise this power by suspending a license as punishment for violation of valid state regulations such as weight load limits. (Castle v. Hayes Freight Lines (1954) 348 U.S. 61, 75 S.Ct. 191, 193, 99 L.Ed. 68, 73; see supra, §1092.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

26 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

3. Federal Power Over Commerce.

a. Regulation of Interstate Commerce.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1317

[§ 1317] In General.

The federal power over interstate commerce has the same content and scope as the state police power over intrastate commerce. It authorizes appropriate legislation to protect or advance interstate commerce, and embraces a wide range of regulations. (See Kentucky Whip & Collar Co. v. Illinois Cen. R. Co. (1937) 299 U.S. 334, 57 S.Ct. 277, 81 L.Ed. 270, infra, §1320; United States v. Carolene Products Co. (1938) 304 U.S. 144, 58 S.Ct. 778, 82 L.Ed. 1234; United States v. Darby (1941) 312 U.S. 100, 61 S.Ct. 451, 85 L.Ed. 609, infra, §1321; Federal Power Com. v. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America (1942) 315 U.S. 575, 62 S.Ct 736, 741, 86 L.Ed. 1037, 1047 ["authority of Congress to regulate the prices of commodities in interstate commerce is at least as great under the Fifth Amendment as is that of the states under the Fourteenth to regulate the prices of commodities in intrastate commerce"]; Railway Employes' Dept. v. Hanson (1956) 351 U.S. 225, 76 S.Ct. 714, 719, 100 L.Ed. 1112, 1131, infra, §1318; 41 San Diego L. Rev. 405 [cabining the Commerce Clause]; 1 Rotunda, Chap. 4; 15A Am.Jur.2d (2000 ed.), Commerce §§18 et seq., 93.)

Thus, Congress has validly prohibited the interstate transportation of lottery tickets, impure food and drugs, obscene literature, and women for prostitution or other immoral purposes. (Hipolite Egg Co. v. United States (1911) 220 U.S. 45, 31 S.Ct. 364, 55 L.Ed. 364; Hoke v. United States (1913) 227 U.S. 308, 33 S.Ct. 281, 57 L.Ed. 523.) (See 13 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 531 [A Constitutional Analysis of Federal Drug Marketing Regulations and Food and Drug Administration Implementation].)

The regulation of interstate carriers is another important illustration of the power. (See Dayton-Goose Creek Ry. Co. v. United States (1924) 263 U.S. 456, 44 S.Ct. 169, 68 L.Ed. 388.) In Railroad Retirement Bd. v. Alton R. Co. (1935) 295 U.S. 330, 55 S.Ct. 758, 768, 79 L.Ed. 1468, 1483, a federal statute applying to interstate carriers provided for a fund to be maintained by contributions of employers and employees, and compulsory retirement of employees on pensions at certain ages. It was held invalid, partly on the ground that the promotion of social security of employees is not a regulation of commerce and, hence, is not justified under the commerce power. This reasoning would seem to be no longer effective in light of cases upholding more drastic regulation of the employment relationship even in the field of intrastate activity. (See infra, §§1318, 1321.)

The broad scope of the power is emphasized in cases dealing with the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935. The legislation was directed at the pyramided structure, involving interposed subholding companies between the holding company and the operating companies, with different classes of stock having unequal voting rights, resulting in domination of the whole system by a small group of holders of common stock at the top of the pyramid. To attack this evil of irresponsible management and unsound capital structure, with its injurious effects on the ordinary investor and the operating utility customer, Congress provided that the Securities and Exchange Commission should take necessary steps against the improper stock structures. In American Power & Light Co. v. Securities & Exchange Com. (1946) 329 U.S. 90, 67 S.Ct. 133, 139, 91 L.Ed. 103, 112, the Court reviewed the types of regulations of corporate organization and management upheld as within the federal commerce power, and concluded: "[W]e affirm once more the constitutional authority ... to undertake to solve national problems directly and realistically, giving due recognition to the scope of state power. That follows from the fact that the federal commerce power is as broad as the economic needs of the nation." (67 S.Ct. 141, 91 L.Ed. 115.) (See North Amer. Co. v. Securities & Exchange Com. (1946) 327 U.S. 686, 66 S.Ct. 785, 796, 90 L.Ed. 945, 959.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 1 Rotunda 4th, Chap. 4.

27 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

3. Federal Power Over Commerce.

a. Regulation of Interstate Commerce.

2. Labor Relations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1318

[§ 1318] Labor Relations.

Originally, the U.S. Supreme Court denied the federal power to promote labor peace in interstate commerce by protecting union organization and membership. (See Adair v. United States (1908) 208 U.S. 161, 28 S.Ct. 277, 282, 52 L.Ed. 436, 445 [statute outlawing yellow-dog contract by making it criminal to refuse employment in interstate railroad because of union membership was invalid].) Subsequent decisions departed from this position and sustained various types of statutes regulating employer and employee relationships and union activities. (See Santa Cruz Fruit Packing Co. v. N.L.R.B. (1938) 303 U.S. 453, 58 S.Ct. 656, 659, 82 L.Ed. 954, 959 [federal power can extend to regulating labor relations to prevent strikes]; for particular statutes and their interpretation and application, see 3 Summary (10th), Agency and Employment, §531 et seq.)

A definitive decision to this effect was made in Railway Employees' Dept. v. Hanson (1956) 351 U.S. 225, 76 S.Ct. 714, 100 L.Ed. 1112. The federal Railway Labor Act, as amended in 1951, authorized carriers and labor unions, notwithstanding state laws, to enter into agreements requiring union membership of all employees, provided that membership was not denied or terminated for improper reasons. This kind of agreement was made with Union Pacific R. R. Co., and was challenged by Nebraska employees as a violation of the "right to work" guarantee of the Nebraska Constitution, stating that no person shall be denied employment because of membership or nonmembership in a labor organization. Held, the power of Congress over interstate commerce is like the police power of the state in its scope and latitude in choosing methods of carrying out its objectives; industrial peace in interstate commerce is a legitimate objective, and the policy choice of the union shop as a stabilizing force is an allowable one. Though the right to work may be included within the due process guarantee, union organizations may enhance and strengthen that right. "To require, rather than to induce, the beneficiaries of trade unionism to contribute to its costs may not be the wisest course. But Congress might well believe that it would help insure the right to work in and along the arteries of interstate commerce." (76 S.Ct. 720, 100 L.Ed. 1132.)

The court did not overlook the contention that the statute forced employees into ideological and political associations in violation of the First Amendment freedoms. But Congress has explicitly precluded the imposition of conditions on union membership other than dues, etc. "If other conditions are in fact imposed, or if the exaction of dues, initiation fees, or assessments is used as a cover for forcing ideological conformity or other action in contravention of the First Amendment, this judgment will not prejudice the decision in that case." (76 S.Ct. 721, 100 L.Ed. 1134.)

Hanson was followed in California v. Taylor (1957) 353 U.S. 553, 77 S.Ct. 1037, 1 L.Ed.2d 1034, holding that our State Belt Line Railroad, although publicly owned and operated, was subject to the Railway Labor Act provisions on collective bargaining, and that these supersede conflicting state civil service laws. (77 S.Ct. 1044, 1 L.Ed.2d 1042.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

28 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

3. Federal Power Over Commerce.

b. Regulation of Intrastate Activity.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1319

[§ 1319] In General.

Congress may regulate intrastate commerce or other local activities that interfere with interstate commerce, when necessary to make effective the regulation of interstate commerce. "[T]he power of Congress to promote interstate commerce also includes the power to regulate the local incidents thereof, including local activities in both the States of origin and destination, which might have a substantial and harmful effect upon that commerce." (Heart of Atlanta Motel v. United States (1964) 379 U.S. 241, 85 S.Ct. 348, 358, 13 L.Ed.2d 258, 269 [upholding provision of federal Civil Rights Act on public accommodations].) A number of decisions are illustrative:

Southern R. Co. v. United States (1911) 222 U.S. 20, 32 S.Ct. 2, 56 L.Ed. 72 [federal safety regulation may be made applicable to cars used in intrastate commerce by interstate railroad].

Houston, East & West Texas Ry. v. United States (1914) 234 U.S. 342, 34 S.Ct. 833, 58 L.Ed. 1341 [Interstate Commerce Commission could prohibit local rates for intrastate carriers that were much lower than interstate rates].

Stafford v. Wallace (1922) 258 U.S. 495, 42 S.Ct. 397, 66 L.Ed. 735 [goods in flow of interstate commerce; shipment of livestock to meat packing plants, with the meat to be subsequently shipped out; regulation of stockyards is valid].

Brooks v. United States (1925) 267 U.S. 432, 45 S.Ct. 345, 69 L.Ed. 699 [upholding National Motor Vehicle Theft Act provision punishing local act of knowingly receiving or concealing stolen motor vehicle that has been moving in interstate commerce as necessary to prevent interstate transportation of stolen vehicles].

United States v. Wrightwood Dairy Co. (1942) 315 U.S. 110, 62 S.Ct. 523, 527, 86 L.Ed. 726, 733 [Secretary of Agriculture, under federal statute, could regulate prices of milk marketed wholly in intrastate commerce, but competing with price-regulated milk shipped interstate].

Perez v. United States (1971) 402 U.S. 146, 91 S.Ct. 1357, 1361, 28 L.Ed.2d 686, 692 [upholding Title II of Consumer Credit Protection Act, as applied to loan sharks: "Extortionate credit transactions, though purely intrastate, may in the judgment of Congress affect interstate commerce"].

Hodel v. Virginia Surface Mining & Reclamation Assn. (1981) 452 U.S. 264, 101 S.Ct. 2352, 2360, 2362, 69 L.Ed.2d 1, 16, 20 [upholding Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, designed to protect environment from adverse effects of surface coal mining operations]; 10 Ecology L. Q. 69 [Hodel].

However, in United States v. Lopez (1995) 514 U.S. 549, 115 S.Ct. 1624, 1630, 131 L.Ed.2d 626, 638, supra, §1294, the Court invalidated the Gun-Free School Zones Act of 1990 (18 U.S.C., §922(q)(1)(A)), which prohibits knowing possession of a firearm at a place known to be a school zone. The statute is beyond Congress's power to enact. It is a criminal law that, at best, tenuously, and not substantially, affects interstate commerce. (See 88 Cal. L. Rev. 1575 [federal prosecution of state-legalized medical marijuana use after Lopez]; 36 Santa Clara L. Rev. 151 [validity under Commerce Clause of Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act]; 31 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 625 [Violence Against Women Act after Lopez; reconsidering congressional power under Fourteenth Amendment].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Gonzales v. Raich (2005) 545 U.S. 1, 125 S.Ct. 2195, 2201, 2211, 162 L.Ed.2d 1, 14, 26, 2 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against Public Peace and Welfare, Supp., §70 [Congress' power to regulate controlled substances encompasses markets where drugs are produced and consumed; thus, Congress may prohibit local cultivation and use of marijuana for medicinal purposes in California even though that cultivation and use complies with California law]; Gonzales v. Oregon (2006) 546 U.S. 243, 126 S.Ct. 904, 163 L.Ed.2d 748, 1 Cal. Crim. Law (3d), Crimes Against the Person, Supp., §101 [federal Controlled Substances Act does not authorize U.S. Attorney General to prohibit states from allowing doctors to prescribe regulated drugs for physician-assisted suicide]; 31 Ecology L. Q. 459 [Commerce Clause challenges to Endangered Species Act]; 119 Harv. L. Rev. 169 [Gonzales v. Raich]; 41 San Diego L. Rev. 1873 [medical marijuana and revival of federalism].

29 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

3. Federal Power Over Commerce.

b. Regulation of Intrastate Activity.

2. Regulation of Local Production.

aa. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1320

[§ 1320] In General.

(1) Early Cases Limiting Federal Power. The authority of Congress to regulate local production was formerly denied in the celebrated decision of Hammer v. Dagenhart (1918) 247 U.S. 251, 38 S.Ct. 529, 62 L.Ed. 1101. Here, the attempt by Congress to prohibit interstate shipment of goods manufactured by child labor was held void, on the theory that Congress could not prohibit commerce where the goods themselves were not harmful, and that the real object of the statute was to control local production.

In A.L.A. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States (1935) 295 U.S. 495, 55 S.Ct. 837, 850, 79 L.Ed. 1570, 1588, petitioners, whose business was carried on wholly within the State of New York, were convicted of violating the Live Poultry Code, adopted under the National Industrial Recovery Act of 1933. The statute provided for the regulation of industry under codes of fair competition approved by and subject to modification by the President, during the period of an emergency. Violation of a code provision in transactions "in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce" was made criminal. Codes were adopted extensively regulating production, prices, hours of labor, wages, and trade practices. Held, the Act was unconstitutional; it went beyond the commerce power in its regulation of local activities. The Court declared that the indirect effect of depressed production on interstate commerce does not give Congress the power to regulate production. (See Carter v. Carter Coal Co. (1936) 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855, 869, 80 L.Ed. 1160, 1185 [holding Bituminous Coal Conservation Act invalid]; on abandonment of Schechter, see infra, §1322.)

(2) Enforcement of Local State Policy. In Kentucky Whip & Collar Co. v. Illinois Cen. R. Co. (1937) 299 U.S. 334, 57 S.Ct. 277, 81 L.Ed. 270, a federal statute made it unlawful knowingly to transport, in interstate or foreign commerce, goods made by convicted labor, where the destination was a state that prohibits or restricts their sale or possession. Plain labeling of the goods was also required. Held, the act was valid.

(a) Congress may exercise its regulatory power within the field of interstate commerce to forbid or punish the use of interstate commerce as an agency to promote immorality, dishonesty, or the spread of evil or harm from one state to another. The evil may be something inherent in the subject, e.g., diseased or noxious articles; or in the purpose, e.g., lottery tickets. The prohibition may be designed to give effect to national policy, e.g., prohibiting interstate carriers from transporting commodities owned by them; or to prevent frustration of valid state laws protecting person and property, e.g., motor vehicle thefts, kidnapping. (57 S.Ct. 280, 81 L.Ed. 273.)

(b) Though the product itself is harmless, the state may lawfully prohibit intrastate commerce in convict-made goods to protect its free labor from this competition; and, as in the case of intoxicating liquors, Congress may properly act to prevent interstate commerce from being used to impede carrying out the state policy. (57 S.Ct. 281, 81 L.Ed. 275.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

30 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

3. Federal Power Over Commerce.

b. Regulation of Intrastate Activity.

2. Regulation of Local Production.

bb. Labor Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1321

[§ 1321] Labor Regulations.

(1) National Labor Relations Act. The rule of A.L.A. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States (1935) 295 U.S. 495, 55 S.Ct. 837, 79 L.Ed. 1570, supra, §1320, was substantially modified in N.L.R.B. v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. (1937) 301 U.S. 1, 57 S.Ct. 615, 81 L.Ed. 893. The National Labor Relations Act of 1935 declares that commerce has been injured by denial of the right of employees to organize and bargain collectively, and establishes the right, prohibits unfair labor practices, makes rules as to representation of employees for purposes of collective bargaining, and creates the National Labor Relations Board, giving it the power to investigate and prevent unfair practices, making its findings of fact conclusive where supported by evidence, and providing for review in the courts. Defendant Pennsylvania corporation and its subsidiaries owned and operated mines, railroads, steamships, warehouses, and fabricating shops in many states, and drew raw materials from these various sources into Pennsylvania plants for manufacture and subsequent distribution throughout the country. Held, the statute was constitutional, and validly applied to defendant.

Defendant relied chiefly on the holdings of Schechter and Carter v. Carter Coal Co. (1936) 298 U.S. 238, 56 S.Ct. 855, 80 L.Ed. 1160, that manufacturing is not commerce. The board relied largely on the "flow of commerce" theory (supra, §1297), arguing that the raw materials moved to the steel mills, and through them as steel products, in a continuous "stream," the plant being a focal point. But the court left this aspect of the question undetermined, and rested its decision on the federal power to control local activities for protection of interstate commerce. Though activities may be intrastate when separately considered, if they have such a close and substantial relation to interstate commerce that their control is essential or appropriate to protect that commerce from burdens and obstructions, Congress can control them. Where industries are, like defendant's, organized on a national scale, making their relation to interstate commerce the dominant factor in their activities, stoppage of manufacturing operations would have a serious and direct effect on commerce; and Congress may regulate their labor relations to protect interstate commerce from the paralyzing consequences of industrial war. "[O]f what avail is it to protect the facility of transportation, if interstate commerce is throttled with respect to the commodities to be transported!" (57 S.Ct. 627, 81 L.Ed. 915.)

(2) Fair Labor Standards Act. United States v. Darby (1941) 312 U.S. 100, 61 S.Ct. 451, 85 L.Ed. 609, upheld the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. The Act prohibits shipment in interstate commerce of goods produced by employees working in violation of its wage and hour regulations, and prohibits employment of workers in the production of goods "for interstate commerce" in violation of these provisions. The object was to exclude from interstate commerce goods produced under improper labor conditions, and to prevent the use of commerce to perpetuate substandard labor conditions by means of competition. Held: (a) The federal power over commerce is plenary and complete, equal to that of the state over intrastate commerce, and Congress, following its own conception of public policy, may exclude anything from commerce where its use might be conceived to be injurious. (b) Congress may regulate intrastate commerce when it so affects interstate commerce that it makes the regulation an appropriate means to a legitimate end. (c) Hammer v. Dagenhart (1918) 247 U.S. 251, 38 S.Ct. 529, 62 L.Ed. 1101, supra, §1320, was overruled, and Carter v. Carter Coal Co. was declared to have been limited by Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. (See Garcia v. San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority (1985) 469 U.S. 528, 105 S.Ct. 1005, 83 L.Ed.2d 1016 [federal minimum wage and overtime provisions were applicable to employees of local transit system].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

31 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

B. The Commerce Power.

3. Federal Power Over Commerce.

b. Regulation of Intrastate Activity.

2. Regulation of Local Production.

cc. Farming.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1322

[§ 1322] Farming.

The already weakened theory of A.L.A. Schechter Poultry Corp. v. United States (1935) 295 U.S. 495, 55 S.Ct. 837, 79 L.Ed. 1570, supra, §1320, was finally abandoned in Wickard v. Filburn (1942) 317 U.S. 111, 63 S.Ct. 82, 87 L.Ed. 122. The Court there upheld the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, fixing marketing quotas for wheat, as applied to an individual farmer who grew wheat purely for local consumption, but whose excessive production was considered a danger to the scheme of regulation. Recognizing that this was the first case to uphold federal regulation of strictly "local" activities, the Court repudiated the distinction between "direct" and "indirect" effects of intrastate activity, declaring that "no form of state activity can constitutionally thwart the regulatory power." Hence, it was immaterial that the activity was local and not commerce; whatever its nature, it can be reached by Congress "if it exerts a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce." (63 S.Ct. 89, 87 L.Ed. 135.)

This principle was reaffirmed in Mandeville Island Farms v. American Crystal Sugar Co. (1948) 334 U.S. 219, 68 S.Ct. 996, 92 L.Ed. 1328. Defendant sugar refiners, controlling the supply of sugar beet seed, were able to compel sugar beet farmers to enter into uniform contracts to grow and sell the beets at fixed prices. In this action by California farmers for treble damages under the Sherman Act, defendant refiners argued that, although the manufacturer and sale of the sugar involved interstate commerce, the severable and distinct growing and sale of the beets took place entirely within California, and was therefore not subject to federal control. Held, the statute was validly applied. The modern approach draws no sharp line where interstate commerce ends and intrastate commerce begins. The location of the line makes no difference if the forbidden effects flow across it to injure interstate commerce or defeat congressional policy regarding it. "The artificial and mechanical separation of 'production' and 'manufacturing' from 'commerce,' without regard to their economic continuity, the effects of the former two upon the latter, and the varying methods by which the several processes are organized, related and carried on in different industries or indeed within a single industry, no longer suffices to put either production or manufacturing and refining processes beyond reach of Congress' authority." (68 S.Ct. 1002, 92 L.Ed. 1336.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

32 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XV. FEDERAL POWERS C. War Power. 1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1323

[§ 1323] In General.

(1) Constitutional Provision. Congress has the power to (a) "provide for the common Defense," (b) "declare War," (c) "raise and support Armies," (d) "provide and maintain a Navy," (e) "make Rules for the Government and Regulation of the land and naval forces," and (f) call for the Militia to "suppress insurrections and repel invasions." (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8; see Ex parte Quirin (1942) 317 U.S. 1, 63 S.Ct. 1, 10, 87 L.Ed. 3, 11; Perpich v. Department of Defense (1990) 496 U.S. 334, 110 S.Ct. 2418, 110 L.Ed.2d 312 [under "Militia Clause" of U.S. Const., Art. I, §8, Congress can authorize members of National Guard to be ordered to active duty for purpose of training outside U.S.]; 26 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1291 [growing use of American military in civilian law enforcement operations]; 1 Rotunda, §§6.9, 6.10; 78 Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), War §12 et seq.)

(2) Authority of President and Congress. The President is "Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy" and has the authority to make treaties and appoint ambassadors. (U.S. Const., Art. II, §2; see 1 Tribe, §4-7; on treaties, see infra, §1338 et seq.; on power in foreign affairs, see infra, §1337.)

(3) War Powers Resolution. The War Powers Resolution (50 U.S.C., §1541 et seq.) requires the President to consult with Congress before committing troops to hostile situations abroad and requires that troops be withdrawn within 60 days unless Congress authorizes longer involvement. (See 102 Harv. L. Rev. 637; 34 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1 [War Powers Resolution and Kosovo]; 37 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 321 [Presidential Declarations of War]; 1 Rotunda, §6.12.)

In Hamdi v. Rumsfeld (2004) 542 U.S. 507, 124 S.Ct. 2633, 159 L.Ed.2d 578, the Court held that the United States has the authority, under the congressional resolution authorizing the use of force after September 11, 2001, to detain citizens who qualify as "enemy combatants." However, these citizens must be given a meaningful opportunity to contest the factual basis for detention before a neutral decisionmaker. (124 S.Ct. 2639, 2648, 159 L. Ed.2d 591, 601.)

(4) Commentary. The responsibilities of the President and Congress relating to war powers have been the subject of extensive commentary. (See 81 Harv. L. Rev. 1771 [allocation of power, between President and Congress, to control use of combat forces in foreign affairs]; 84 Cal. L. Rev. 167 [The Continuation of Politics by Other Means: The Original Understanding of War Powers]; 13 Hastings Const. L. Q. 233 [congressional authority to regulate use of nuclear weapons]; 14 Hastings Const. L. Q. 683 [covert war and presidential power]; 27 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 185 [The War Power and a Career-Minded Congress: Making the Case for Legislative Reform, Congressional Term Limits, and Renewed Respect for the Intent of the Framers]; 56 Stanf. L. Rev. 605 [Accommodating Emergencies]; 56 Stanf. L. Rev. 755 [liability rules and mass detentions]; 51 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1619 [Losing Liberties: Applying a Foreign Intelligence Model to Domestic Law Enforcement]; Am.Jur.2d, New Topic Service, Terrorism §1 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) Constitutional Provision. See 1 Rotunda 4th, §§6.9, 6.10.(3) War Powers Resolution. See 16 A.L.R. Fed 2d 333 [construction and application of resolution].

(4) Commentary. See 118 Harv. L. Rev. 406 [Hamdi v. Rumsfeld]; 118 Harv. L. Rev. 2047 [Congressional Authorization and the War on Terrorism]; 119 Harv. L. Rev. 1815 [Recapturing the War Power]; 56 Hastings L. J. 441 [Hamdi v. Rumsfeld]; 45 Santa Clara L. Rev. 99 [rethinking War Powers Resolution]; 81 So. Cal. L. Rev. 477 [commander in chief power]; 38 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 79 [Hamdi v. Rumsfeld]; 53 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 29 [The Security Constitution]; 54 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1559 [internal legal constraints on executive power]; 54 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1815 [challenges to civilian control of military]; 22 A.L.R. Fed 2d 1 [jurisdiction of federal court to grant writ of habeas corpus in proceeding concerning U.S. citizen detained by U.S. military].

33 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

2. Economic Regulations.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1324

[§ 1324] Economic Regulations.

In Ashwander v. Tennessee Valley Authority (1936) 297 U.S. 288, 56 S.Ct. 466, 473, 80 L.Ed. 688, 700, the Court upheld the right, under the National Defense Act of 1916, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, a federal agency, to construct a dam across a navigable stream to generate power, to produce nitrates and other products for munitions of war, and to sell surplus power generated there in peacetime. Price and rent controls during World War II were sustained under the Emergency Price Control Act. (See Yakus v. United States (1944) 321 U.S. 414, 64 S.Ct. 660, 88 L.Ed. 834; Bowles v. Willingham (1944) 321 U.S. 503, 64 S.Ct. 641, 88 L.Ed. 892; 1 Rotunda, §6.11.)

The federal wartime Renegotiation Act, authorizing the recovery by the Government of excessive profits made under war contracts, was upheld in Lichter v. United States (1948) 334 U.S. 742, 68 S.Ct. 1294, 92 L.Ed. 1694. The Court declared that the "mobilization of property" was as essential as the mobilization of manpower under the Selective Service Act, and that both were grounded on the constitutional authority of Congress to raise and support armies and the Necessary and Proper Clause. (On continuance of war power after cessation of actual hostilities, see Ludecke v. Watkins (1948) 335 U.S. 160, 68 S.Ct. 1429, 92 L.Ed. 1881, infra, §1326.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See 1 Rotunda 4th, §6.11.

34 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

3. Restrictions on Speech and Press.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1325

[§ 1325] Restrictions on Speech and Press.

In Greer v. Spock (1976) 424 U.S. 828, 96 S.Ct. 1211, 47 L.Ed.2d 505, the Commanding Officer of Fort Dix Military Reservation, a basic combat training area in New Jersey, issued regulations prohibiting speeches or demonstrations of a partisan political nature, and requiring advance approval of distribution or posting of newspapers, magazines, circulars, or other publications. Respondents, candidates for federal office, challenged the regulation on the theory that, because members of the public were freely permitted to visit the Reservation, it became a "public forum" for purposes of the First Amendment. Held, this theory was historically and constitutionally false, and the regulations were valid.

(a) The military has a special constitutional function, and "it is consequently the business of a military installation like Fort Dix to train soldiers, not to provide a public forum." The respondents therefore had no generalized constitutional right to make political speeches or distribute leaflets at Fort Dix. (96 S.Ct. 1217, 47 L.Ed.2d 514.)

(b) The regulation prohibiting speeches was not unconstitutionally applied here. Members of the Armed Forces stationed at the Reservation were wholly free as individuals to attend political rallies, out of uniform and off base. The policy of keeping official military activities free of entanglement with partisan politics was objectively and even-handedly applied. This "policy is wholly consistent with the American constitutional tradition of a politically neutral military establishment under civilian control." (96 S.Ct. 1218, 47 L.Ed.2d 515.)

(c) The regulation restricting distribution of publications was likewise not unconstitutionally applied. The commander, under official guidelines, can only disapprove those that he finds constitute a clear danger to military loyalty, discipline, or morale; and the Constitution does not disable a military commander from acting to avert the danger. Because respondents did not submit any material for review, no issue of unconstitutional application arose. (96 S.Ct. 1218, 47 L.Ed.2d 515.) (See Brown v. Glines (1980) 444 U.S. 348, 100 S.Ct. 594, 62 L.Ed.2d 540 [regulation requiring Air Force members to obtain approval from base commander before distributing petitions within military base was upheld, on authority of Greer]; United States v. Albertini (1985) 472 U.S. 675, 105 S.Ct. 2897, 86 L.Ed.2d 536 [upholding federal statute barring civilian from reentering military base after being barred by commanding officer].)

Commentary on media restrictions during wartime is extensive. (See 19 Hastings Const. L. Q. 1037 [constitutionality of Desert Storm media restrictions]; 25 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 1073 [press censorship and access restrictions during Persian Gulf War]; 23 Pacific L. J. 315 [constitutional analysis of press access to military operations in Grenada, Panama, and Persian Gulf]; 44 Stanf. L. Rev. 675 [constitutionality of press restrictions in Persian Gulf War]; 28 U.S.F. L. Rev. 919 [analysis of Supreme Court cases and proposal for reform of military regulations governing media coverage of combat operations].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

35 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS
C. War Power.
4. Enemy Aliens.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1326

[§ 1326] Enemy Aliens.

(1) Seizure of Property. The power to seize property of enemy aliens during wartime has long been established. (See United States v. Chemical Foundation (1926) 272 U.S. 1, 47 S.Ct. 1, 5, 71 L.Ed. 131, 141 [no constitutional prohibition against confiscation of enemy properties]; Cummings v. Deutsche Bank und Discontogesellschaft (1937) 300 U.S. 115, 57 S.Ct. 359, 81 L.Ed. 545; Schilling v. Rogers (1960) 363 U.S. 666, 80 S.Ct. 1288, 4 L.Ed.2d 1478 [denying judicial review of determination of Director of Alien Property that petitioner was ineligible for return of property]; Estate of Hogemann (1965) 63 C.2d 131, 136, 45 C.R. 149, 403 P.2d 405 [seizure of California estate by U.S. Attorney General pursuant to Trading With the Enemy Act and executive orders vesting interests of German legatees]; 78 Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), War §36 et seq.)

(2) Removal or Restraint of Persons. The relatively unlimited scope of the war power in this field over persons is made clear in Ludecke v. Watkins (1948) 335 U.S. 160, 68 S.Ct. 1429, 92 L.Ed. 1881. The Alien Enemy Act of 1798 (50 U.S.C., §21) gives the President, during wartime, the authority to restrain or remove natives of a hostile government. In 1945, the President ordered the removal of alien enemies "who shall be deemed by the Attorney General to be dangerous to the public peace and safety," and, pursuant to this order, petitioner was ordered deported. In upholding the denial of habeas corpus by the district court, the majority (5-4) laid down the following propositions: (a) The statute gave unrestricted power to the President, not subject to judicial review, regardless of the fact that he exercised the power through the Attorney General. (b) The power of the President under the statute did not terminate with the cessation of actual hostilities, because no treaty, legislation, or presidential proclamation had officially declared the end of the war. Whether the war had ended was a political question, and whether alien enemies were still dangerous involved political judgment "for which judges have neither technical competence nor official responsibility." (68 S.Ct. 1434, 92 L.Ed. 1889.) (c) The same considerations supporting this interpretation of the statute establish its validity under the war power. "The Act is almost as old as the Constitution, and it would savor of doctrinaire audacity now to find the statute offensive to some emanation of the Bill of Rights. ... The fact that hearings are utilized by the Executive to secure an informed basis for the exercise of summary power does not argue the right of courts to retry such hearings, nor bespeak denial of due process to withhold such power from the courts." (68 S.Ct. 1434, 92 L.Ed. 1889.)

The chief significance of Ludecke is its apparent holding that the Fourteenth Amendment, though applicable generally to "persons," may not be invoked by an enemy alien to secure procedural due process where the proceeding against him or her is within the constitutional and statutory war power of the President. (See 54 Stanf. L. Rev. 953 [Enemy Aliens]; 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 1419 [mandatory detention under Patriot Act].)

In Rasul v. Bush (2004) 542 U.S. 466, 124 S.Ct. 2686, 159 L.Ed.2d 548, the Court held that the habeas corpus statute confers jurisdiction on the district court to review the legality of Executive detention of aliens at Guantanamo Bay Naval Base. (124 S.Ct. 2696, 159 L.Ed.2d 560.) (See 192 A.L.R. Fed 595 [Jurisdiction of Federal Court To Grant Writ of Habeas Corpus in Proceeding Concerning Alien Detainees Held Outside the United States].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Removal or Restraint of Persons. See 118 Harv. L. Rev. 396 [Rasul v. Bush]; 6 A.L.R. Fed 2d 185 [Rights of Alien Detainees Held Outside the United States as to Their Treatment and Conditions of Detainment].

On authorization to hold citizen combatants, see Hamdi v. Rumsfeld (2004) 542 U.S. 507, 124 S.Ct. 2633, 159 L.Ed.2d 578, text, §1323; on trial of enemy alien by military commission, see Hamdan v. Rumsfeld (2006) 548 U.S. 557, 126 S.Ct. 2749, 165 L.Ed.2d 723, Supp., infra, §1328.

In Boumediene v. Bush (2008) 553 U.S. ___, 128 S.Ct. 2229, 171 L.Ed.2d 41, 94, the Court held that certain procedures for review of the status of Guantanamo detainees set forth in the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005 were not an adequate and effective substitute for habeas corpus. Hence, §7 of the Military Commissions Act of 2006, 28 U.S.C., §2241(e), which strips jurisdiction from federal courts to hear applications for habeas corpus from detainees, is unconstitutional. The detainees have the constitutional privilege of habeas corpus, which may not be withdrawn except in conformity with the Suspension Clause, U.S. Const., Art. I, §9, cl. 2. (128 S.Ct. 2274, 2277, 171 L.Ed.2d 94, 97.)

Three justices concurred (128 S.Ct. 2277, 171 L.Ed.2d 97), and four justices joined in two dissenting opinions (128 S.Ct. 2279, 2293, 171 L.Ed.2d 99, 115).

36 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

5. American Citizens of Japanese Descent.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1327

[§ 1327] American Citizens of Japanese Descent.

During the war with Japan, certain military orders were issued not only against aliens but also affecting American citizens of Japanese descent. In Hirabayashi v. United States (1943) 320 U.S. 81, 63 S.Ct. 1375, 1382, 87 L.Ed. 1774, 1782, a curfew order affecting Japanese persons, and designed to prevent espionage and sabotage, was held a valid war measure, because this racial group might reasonably be deemed to include sympathizers with the enemy cause and could therefore constitute a menace to public safety. In Korematsu v. United States (1944) 323 U.S. 214, 65 S.Ct. 193, 194, 89 L.Ed. 194, 199, an order excluding these persons from certain military zones on the Pacific Coast was upheld on the same grounds. (Cf. Ex parte Mitsuye Endo (1944) 323 U.S. 283, 65 S.Ct. 208, 218, 89 L.Ed. 243, 255 [holding that exclusion order and statutes could not be interpreted to authorize detention in relocation center of citizen of Japanese ancestry whose loyalty was conceded]; 116 Harv. L. Rev. 1933 [Endo].) (See 3 Rotunda, §18.8; 51 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 933 [review of cases and lessons of history]; 78 Am.Jur.2d (2002 ed.), War §§32, 33.)

These decisions have been criticized, and a federal district court vacated the conviction in Korematsu, concluding that the decision had been based on suppression of evidence and mistaken assumptions. (See 1 Cal. Western L. Rev. 1, 8; 26 Santa Clara L. Rev. 1; 21 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 979.)

The Civil Liberties Act of 1988 (a) acknowledges and apologizes for "the fundamental injustice" of wartime evacuation, relocation, and internment of citizens and permanent resident aliens, (b) establishes a public education fund, and (c) authorizes restitution of $ 20,000 to each living individual of Japanese ancestry deprived of liberty or property as a result of evacuation, relocation, or internment. (See 21 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 979, 1029.)

Section 2 of the Act states: "Congress recognizes that, as described by the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, a grave injustice was done to both citizens and permanent resident aliens of Japanese ancestry by the evacuation, relocation, and internment of civilians during World War II. As the Commission documents, these actions were carried out without adequate security reasons, and without any acts of espionage or sabotage documented by the Commission, and were motivated largely by racial prejudice, wartime hysteria, and a failure of political leadership. The excluded individuals of Japanese ancestry suffered enormous damages, both material and intangible, and there were incalculable losses in education and job training, all of which resulted in significant human suffering for which appropriate compensation has not been made. For these fundamental violations of the basic civil liberties and constitutional rights of these individuals of Japanese ancestry, the Congress apologizes on behalf of the Nation."

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 3 Rotunda 4th, §18.8; 27 Thomas Jefferson L. Rev. 255 [Korematsu].

37 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

6. Martial Rule and Military Commissions.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1328

[§ 1328] Martial Rule and Military Commissions.

The law of martial rule, and the jurisdiction of military commissions, have been the subject of considerable discussion since World War II. (See 48 Cal. L. Rev. 1 [Peacetime Martial Law in Guam]; 33 Golden Gate L. Rev. 207 [unequal treatment of U.S. citizens after September 11, 2001]; 42 So. Cal. L. Rev. 546 [Martial Law]; 76 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1371 [Detentions, Military Commissions, Terrorism, and Domestic Case Precedent]; 185 A.L.R. Fed 475 [Designation as Unlawful or Enemy Combatant].)

Jurisdiction of military commissions over enemy belligerents is clear. (See Ex parte Quirin (1942) 317 U.S. 1, 63 S.Ct. 1, 87 L.Ed. 3 [German citizens charged with spying and violation of laws of war]; In re Yamashita (1946) 327 U.S. 1, 66 S.Ct. 340, 344, 90 L.Ed. 499, 505 [captured Japanese generals charged with violation of laws of war]; Hirota v. MacArthur (1948) 338 U.S. 197, 69 S.Ct. 197, 93 L.Ed. 1902 [International Military Tribunal for Far East; decisions not subject to review by U.S. Supreme Court]; Johnson v. Eisentrager (1950) 339 U.S. 763, 70 S.Ct. 936, 945, 94 L.Ed. 1255, 1267 [German nationals charged with military activity against U.S. in China after German surrender; no right to habeas corpus]; cf. Rasul v. Bush (2004) 542 U.S. 466, 124 S.Ct. 2686, 2693, 159 L.Ed.2d 548, 557 [distinguishing Eisentrager; district court had jurisdiction to hear alien detainees' habeas corpus challenges to detention at Guantanamo Bay Naval Base].)

On the other hand, it was early declared that a military commission has no jurisdiction over resident civilian citizens in areas in which the courts are functioning. In Ex parte Milligan (1866) 71 U.S. 2, 18 L.Ed. 281, 296, petitioner, who had never been in the military service of the United States, was arrested, charged with conspiracy against the Government, tried before a military commission, and sentenced to hang. During the period of his detention, the federal grand jury in that territory met and adjourned without indicting him. Held, the commission had no jurisdiction to try him. Martial law may properly be applied on the scene of active military operations in cases of actual foreign invasion or civil war when the courts are closed, but can never exist where the courts are open and in the unobstructed exercise of their jurisdiction. (See Duncan v. Kahanamoku (1946) 327 U.S. 304, 66 S.Ct. 606, 90 L.Ed. 688 [Hawaiian Organic Act did not authorize military courts under declaration of martial law to take over trial of all offenses by civilians in Hawaii].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 118 Harv. L. Rev. 1962 [Secret Evidence in the War on Terror].

In a remarkably fractured decision, five justices in Hamdan v. Rumsfeld (2006) 548 U.S. 557, 126 S.Ct. 2749, 165 L.Ed.2d 723, agreed that the military commission convened to try plaintiff, a Yemeni national being held as an enemy combatant at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, lacked the power to proceed because its structure and procedures violated both the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) (text, §1330) and the Geneva Conventions. The Commission Order governing the procedures applicable in plaintiff's trial provided that he could be excluded from "closed" parts of the proceedings and could be convicted based on evidence that he had never seen or heard. Further, evidence could be admitted against him that did not comply with admissibility and relevancy rules normally applicable in criminal trials or court-martial proceedings.

(a) The President determined that the dangers to the United States from international terrorism makes it impracticable to apply in military commissions the normal rules of law and evidence applicable in criminal cases in district courts. However, this determination "is insufficient to justify variances from the procedures governing courts-martial ... and requires a different showing of impracticability." The UCMJ demands that the rules applied in courts-martial also "apply to military commissions unless impracticable." The President has not "made a similar official determination that it is impracticable to apply the rules for courts-martial." (126 S.Ct. 2791, 165 L.Ed.2d 772.) Even if the President made this determination, nothing in the record here "demonstrates that it would be impracticable to apply court-martial rules in this case." (126 S.Ct. 2791, 2792, 165 L.Ed.2d 773.)

(b) The Geneva Conventions are "part of the law of war ... [a]nd compliance with the law of war is the condition upon which the authority" for military commissions set forth in Article 21 of the UCMJ is granted. (126 S.Ct. 2794, 165 L.Ed.2d 775.) The Government asserts that the Geneva Conventions do not apply because plaintiff was captured as an al Qaeda operative and the Conventions only apply when war has been declared or there is an armed conflict between signatory nations. However, Article 3 of the Conventions is applicable to plaintiff. It applies to conflicts "not of an international character occurring in the territory" of one of the signatory parties, and requires sentencing "by a regularly constituted court affording all the judicial guarantees which are recognized as indispensable by civilized peoples." As used in this article, the phrase "not of an international character" means that the conflict is not between nations. (126 S.Ct. 2795, 165 L.Ed.2d 776, 777.)

38 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

7. Courts-Martial and Uniform Code.

a. American Military Court System.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1329

[§ 1329] American Military Court System.

Like state law, military law is a jurisprudence that exists separate and apart from the law that governs in the federal judicial establishment. (Burns v. Wilson (1953) 346 U.S. 137, 73 S.Ct. 1045, 1047, 97 L.Ed. 1508, 1513; see 103 Harv. L. Rev. 1909 [Military Justice and Article III]; 28 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 481 [Courts-Martial: Time To Play Taps?]; 53A Am.Jur.2d (1996 ed.), Military and Civil Defense §250 et seq.)

In Parker v. Levy (1974) 417 U.S. 733, 94 S.Ct. 2547, 41 L.Ed.2d 439, an army captain was convicted in a court-martial of violating several articles of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, including Art. 133, conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman, and Art. 134, disorders and neglects to the prejudice of good order and discipline. The evidence showed that on a number of occasions he criticized the Vietnam War, characterized Special Forces personnel as "liars and thieves and killers of peasants," and urged black people to refuse to fight. On habeas corpus in the federal district court, he challenged the constitutionality of the articles for uncertainty and overbreadth. Held, the articles were valid and the conviction was proper.

(a) The military is "a specialized society separate from civilian society" and military law is a separate jurisprudence. (94 S.Ct. 2555, 2556, 41 L.Ed.2d 450, 451.)

(b) The differences between the two systems continue under the Uniform Code. "While a civilian criminal code carves out a relatively small segment of potential conduct and declares it criminal, the Uniform Code of Military Justice essays more varied regulation of a much larger segment of the activities of the more tightly knit military community." (94 S.Ct. 2558, 41 L.Ed.2d 454.)

(c) The challenged articles have been construed by military authorities and the Court of Military Appeals (now the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces; see infra, §1330) to partially narrow their broad scope, and there is a substantial range of conduct to which both articles apply without vagueness or imprecision. (94 S.Ct. 2560, 2561, 41 L.Ed.2d 456, 457.) Hence, "[w]hile there may lurk at the fringes of the Articles, even in the light of their narrowing construction by the United States Court of Military Appeals, some possibility that conduct which would be ultimately held to be protected by the First Amendment could be included within their prohibition, we deem this insufficient to invalidate either of them at the behest of appellee." (94 S.Ct. 2564, 41 L.Ed.2d 460.) (See Secretary of Navy v. Avrech (1974) 418

U.S. 676, 94 S.Ct. 3039, 41 L.Ed.2d 1033; 58 So. Cal. L. Rev. 871 [Military Dissent].)

In Weiss v. United States (1994) 510 U.S. 163, 114 S.Ct. 752, 127 L.Ed.2d 1, the court rejected a challenge to the method of appointing military judges. Under the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), infra, §1330, military judges must be commissioned officers and members of a federal or state bar. They are selected by the Judge Advocate General of their branch of the armed forces and perform judicial duties only when so assigned; they do not serve for fixed terms. Weiss and Hernandez, Marines convicted of offenses under the UCMJ, argued that the method of appointment violates the Appointments Clause (see supra, §172) and that the lack of a fixed term violates the Due Process Clause. Held, neither provision is violated.

(a) All the military judges involved were already commissioned military officers when they were assigned to serve as judges. Thus, they had already been appointed under the Appointments Clause. (114 S.Ct. 757, 127 L.Ed.2d 11.) Congress has not required a separate appointment as judge, and the Appointments Clause itself does not require a second appointment before a military officer may serve as a judge. (114 S.Ct. 760, 127 L.Ed.2d 14.)

(b) Middendorf v. Henry (1976) 425 U.S. 25, 96 S.Ct. 1281, 47 L.Ed.2d 556, infra, §1334, provides the appropriate standard for evaluating a due process claim in the military context. Hence, the question is whether the factors favoring a fixed term of office are so extraordinarily weighty that they overcome the balance struck by Congress. (114 S.Ct. 761, 127 L.Ed.2d 15.)

(c) An impartial judge is a necessary component of a fair trial. However, there is no claim that the judges here were biased. A fixed term of office has never been a part of the military justice system, and the UCMJ and corresponding regulations provide safeguards that insulate military judges from the effects of command influence and ensure impartiality. (114 S.Ct. 761, 762, 127 L.Ed.2d 16, 17.) Hence, petitioners have failed to demonstrate that the factors favoring a fixed term of office are so extraordinarily weighty that they overcome the balance achieved by Congress. (114 S.Ct. 763, 127 L.Ed.2d 18.) (See Ryder v. United States (1995) 515 U.S. 177, 115 S.Ct. 2031, 2034, 2036, 132 L.Ed.2d 136, 141, 144 [after Court of Military Appeals agreed with defendant that civilian judges on Coast Guard Court of Military Review had been appointed in violation of Appointments Clause, actions of those judges could not be upheld under de facto officer doctrine].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 53 Am.Jur.2d (2006 ed.), Military and Civil Defense §212 et seq.

39 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

7. Courts-Martial and Uniform Code.

b. Uniform Code of Military Justice.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1330

[§ 1330] Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) (10 U.S.C., §801 et seq.), effective in 1951, modernized the military justice procedure and created a high reviewing tribunal, now called the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces in 1994. (See 10 U.S.C., §867.) Rigorous provisions in the Code "guarantee a trial as free as possible from command influence, the right to prompt arraignment, the right to counsel of the accused's own choosing, and the right to secure witnesses and prepare an adequate defense." It establishes "a hierarchy within the military establishment to review the convictions of courts-martial, to ferret out irregularities in the trial, and to enforce the procedural safeguards which Congress determined to guarantee to those in the Nation's armed services. And finally Congress has provided a special post-conviction remedy within the military establishment, apart from ordinary appellate review, whereby one convicted by a court-martial, can attack collaterally the judgment under which he stands convicted." (Burns v. Wilson (1953) 346 U.S. 137, 73 S.Ct. 1045, 1048, 97 L.Ed. 1508, 1514; on three tiers of military courts under UCMJ, see Ryder v. United States (1995) 515 U.S. 177, 115 S.Ct. 2031, 2037, 132 L.Ed.2d 136, 146.) (See 81 Harv. L. Rev. 1697 [contemptuous words against President or other civilian authority]; 82 Harv. L. Rev. 483 [suspension of statute of limitations for absence without leave in time of war]; 22 Hastings L. J. 201 [Courts-Martial Practice: A View From the Top]; 22 Hastings L. J. 213 [Judicialization of Military Courts]; 22 Hastings L. J. 259 [Prejudicial and Discreditable Military Conduct]; 22 Hastings L. J. 291 [Disciplinary Discharges--Restricting the Commander's Discretion]; 33 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1189 [Military Free Speech]; 53A Am.Jur.2d (1996 ed.), Military and Civil Defense §252.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 53 Am.Jur.2d (2006 ed.), Military and Civil Defense §214.

40 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

7. Courts-Martial and Uniform Code.

c. Status of Forces Agreements.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1331

[§ 1331] Status of Forces Agreements.

The Status of Forces Agreements with some foreign nations (NATO countries and Japan) recognize the primary jurisdiction of their courts over offenses committed by members of the American armed forces, other than offenses against the United States or its personnel, or arising out of an act or omission in the performance of official duty. The agreements also provide that either nation may, in cases where it is deemed important, request a waiver of the other's primary jurisdiction.

The validity of the agreements was upheld in Wilson v. Girard (1957) 354 U.S. 524, 77 S.Ct. 1409, 1 L.Ed.2d 1544. Girard, an American soldier, fired an empty cartridge case from a grenade launcher in the direction of trespassing Japanese civilians, killing a woman. He was indicted by the Japanese authorities, and the United States waived whatever jurisdiction it may have. Held, there was no constitutional objection to this procedure.

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

41 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

7. Courts-Martial and Uniform Code.

d. No Jurisdiction Over Civilians.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1332

[§ 1332] No Jurisdiction Over Civilians.

Earlier cases (see supra, §1328) "recognized and manifested the deeply rooted and ancient opposition in this country to the extension of military control over civilians. In each instance an effort to expand the jurisdiction of military courts to civilians was repulsed." (Reid v. Covert (1957) 354 U.S. 1, 77 S.Ct. 1222, 1239, 1 L.Ed.2d 1148, 1172.) (See 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 1999 [Treaties, International Law, and Constitutional Rights].)

(1) Discharged Service Members. The Uniform Code of Military Justice (supra, §1330) provided that a person under military jurisdiction who committed a serious offense (punishable by 5 years' imprisonment) remained subject to that jurisdiction despite termination of his or her military status if the person could not be tried in an American civilian court. This provision was held unconstitutional in United States v. Quarles (1955) 350 United States 11, 76 S.Ct. 1, 100 L.Ed. 8. Toth was honorably discharged from the Air Force in Korea, and returned to the United States. Five months later he was arrested by military authorities, charged with murder allegedly committed in Korea, and taken to Korea to stand trial before a court-martial. Held, the military court had no jurisdiction. The Court envisaged serious dangers (over 3,000,000 veterans who might be thus brought under military jurisdiction), and a simple solution to the problem (confer this jurisdiction on the federal district court). No constitutional power was found to justify this attempt to discard the Article III type of federal court in favor of the military tribunal. "Determining the scope of the constitutional power of Congress to authorize trial by court-martial presents another instance calling for limitation to 'the least possible power adequate to the end proposed.' We hold that Congress cannot subject civilians like Toth to trial by court-martial. They, like other civilians, are entitled to have the benefit of safeguards afforded those tried in the regular courts authorized by Article III of the Constitution." (76 S.Ct. 8, 100 L.Ed. 17.)

(2) Persons Accompanying Armed Forces in Foreign Country. The Code (see 10 U.S.C., §802(a)(11)) was made applicable to offenses committed by persons accompanying the armed services abroad if that jurisdiction is authorized by agreement with the foreign nation. In cases arising in Japan and Great Britain, both involving murders of American servicemen by their wives, the defendants were tried by court-martial and convicted. The United States Supreme Court first upheld the constitutionality of the Code provision and affirmed the convictions. (Kinsella v. Krueger (1956) 351 U.S. 470, 76 S.Ct. 886, 100 L.Ed. 1342; Reid v. Covert (1956) 351 U.S. 487, 76 S.Ct. 880, 100 L.Ed. 1352.) But on rehearing of the two consolidated cases, the Court rendered a new opinion in Reid v. Covert (1957) 354 U.S. 1, 77 S.Ct. 1222, 1 L.Ed.2d 1157, in which it took a contrary position. The Court held that the Bill of Rights is fully applicable to American citizens while outside the continental limits of the United States (77 S.Ct. 1226, 1 L.Ed.2d 1158); that no treaty with a foreign nation can authorize action contrary to the Constitution (77 S.Ct. 1230, 1 L.Ed.2d 1163); that the military power under U.S. Const., Art. I, §8, cl. 14, does not extend to persons who are not members of the "land and naval forces" (77 S.Ct. 1233, 1 L.Ed.2d 1165); and that Quarles was controlling (77 S.Ct. 1238, 1 L.Ed.2d 1171).

In Kinsella v. United States (1960) 361 U.S. 234, 80 S.Ct. 297, 4 L.Ed.2d 268, the Reid doctrine was applied to the conviction of a soldier's wife in Germany for involuntary manslaughter. The Court declared that military jurisdiction depends on the status of the accused rather than the nature of the offense, and concluded that there was no practical necessity or constitutional justification for expanding the military power to permit prosecution of civilians for any offenses, capital or noncapital. (80 S.Ct. 304, 4 L.Ed.2d 277.)

(3) Distinction: Reservists. Reservists who voluntarily accept written orders for inactive training duty are subject to military jurisdiction. (See 10 U.S.C., §802(a)(3); 7 Cal. Western L. Rev. 238; 7 U.S.F. L. Rev. 57; 73 Harv. L. Rev. 1626 [reservist subject to military jurisdiction for offense committed while on active duty].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

42 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

7. Courts-Martial and Uniform Code.

e. Jurisdiction Over Non-Service-Connected Crimes.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1333

[§ 1333] Jurisdiction Over Non-Service-Connected Crimes.

(1) Former Law. In O'Callahan v. Parker (1969) 395 U.S. 258, 89 S.Ct. 1683, 23 L.Ed.2d 291, petitioner was an army sergeant stationed in Hawaii. While on leave, in civilian clothes, he assaulted and attempted to rape a girl. The police delivered him to the military, and he was tried by court-martial. His sentence was 10 years' imprisonment, forfeiture of pay and allowances, and dishonorable discharge. The Court of Military Appeals (now the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces; see supra, §1330) affirmed. On habeas corpus, held, the trial was invalid. The prior holdings that courts-martial have no jurisdiction over nonsoldiers (supra, §1332) do not imply that they have unlimited jurisdiction over soldiers. (89 S.Ct. 1688 et seq., 23 L.Ed.2d 299 et seq.) To be under military jurisdiction, the crime must be service-connected. (89 S.Ct. 1690, 23 L.Ed.2d 301.) Here, it was not. Petitioner was on leave, not on a military post or enclave, not in performance of military duties; and the victim was not performing these duties. It was peacetime; the situs was not under military control; the civil courts were open. There was no flouting of military authority, security of a military post, or integrity of military property. (89 S.Ct. 1691, 23 L.Ed.2d. 302.)

Three justices dissented. (89 S.Ct. 1692, 23 L.Ed.2d 303.) (See Relford v. Commandant, United States Disciplinary Barracks (1971) 401 U.S. 355, 91 S.Ct. 649, 651, 28 L.Ed.2d 102, 104, footnote 1 [citing numerous comments on O'Callahan, and leaving open issue of its retroactivity]; Gosa v. Mayden (1973) 413 U.S. 665, 93 S.Ct. 2926, 2939, 37 L.Ed.2d 873, 892 [O'Callahan decision is prospective only].)

(2) O'Callahan Overruled. In Solorio v. United States (1987) 483 U.S. 435, 107 S.Ct. 2924, 97 L.Ed.2d 364, petitioner, on active duty in the Coast Guard, sexually abused daughters of fellow Coast Guardsmen. He was tried by court-martial, and the Court of Military Appeals upheld jurisdiction on the ground that the offenses were service-connected. The Supreme Court affirmed the decision, but also abandoned the service-connection test, and overruled O'Callahan.

(a) "In an unbroken line of decisions from 1866 to 1960, this Court interpreted the Constitution as conditioning the proper exercise of court-martial jurisdiction over an offense on one factor: the military status of the accused. ... This view was premised on what the Court described as 'the natural meaning' of Art. I, §8, cl. 14, as well as the Fifth Amendment's exception for 'cases arising in the land or naval forces.' " (107 S.Ct. 2926, 97 L.Ed.2d 370.) "Implicit in the military status test" was the principle that the scope of court-martial jurisdiction over offenses committed by servicemen was a matter reserved for Congress. (107 S.Ct. 2927, 97 L.Ed.2d 371.)

(b) The constitutional grant of power to Congress to regulate the armed forces appears in the same section as do the provisions granting Congress authority to regulate commerce, to coin money, and to declare war. "On its face there is no indication that the grant of power in clause 14 was any less plenary than the grants of other authority to Congress in the same section." (107 S.Ct. 2928, 97 L.Ed.2d 372.) The historical foundation for the O'Callahan Court's holding is insufficient. "[T]here is overwhelming force to Justice Harlan's reasoning that the plain language of the Constitution, as interpreted by numerous decisions of this Court preceding O'Callahan, should be controlling on the subject of court-martial jurisdiction." (107 S.Ct. 2931, 97 L.Ed.2d 376.) "We therefore hold that the requirements of the Constitution are not violated where, as here, a court-martial is convened to try a serviceman who was a member of the armed services at the time of the offense charged." (107 S.Ct. 2933, 97 L.Ed.2d 378.)

One justice, concurring in the judgment, saw no reason to reexamine the O'Callahan holding. Three other justices, dissenting, asserted that O'Callahan was correct and workable, and that the majority "disregards constitutional language and principles of stare decisis in its singleminded determination to subject members of our armed forces to the unrestrained control of the military in the area of criminal justice." (107 S.Ct. 2934, 97 L.Ed.2d 379.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

43 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

7. Courts-Martial and Uniform Code.

f. Procedure in Courts-Martial.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1334

[§ 1334] Procedure in Courts-Martial.

(1) In General. There has been a great deal of court-martial litigation since the adoption of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), supra, §1330, and a considerable volume of judicial precedent has accumulated in opinions of the Court of Military Appeals, now called the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces (see 10 U.S.C., §867). (See 20 Cal. Western L. Rev. 9 [Two-Thirds Verdict]; 33 Hastings L. J. 727 [Military Triers of Fact: A Needless Deprivation of Constitutional Protections?]; 8 Hastings Const. L. Q. 617 [military justice system and right to trial by jury]; 19 San Diego L. Rev. 839 [Nonjudicial Punishment Under Article 15 of the Uniform Code]; 30 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 366 [Death Penalty in Military Courts: Constitutionally Imposed?].) The following may be consulted on significant procedural problems:

- (a) Insanity and the McNaghten test. (See Whelchel v. McDonald (1950) 340 U.S. 122, 71 S.Ct. 146, 95 L.Ed. 141.)
- (b) Law officer member. (See Hiatt v. Brown (1950) 339 U.S. 103, 70 S.Ct. 495, 94 L.Ed. 691.)
- (c) Right to move for new trial. (See Gusik v. Schilder (1950) 340 U.S. 128, 71 S.Ct. 149, 95 L.Ed. 146.)
- (d) Review of sentence by board of review. (See Jackson v. Taylor (1957) 353 U.S. 569, 77 S.Ct. 1027, 1 L.Ed.2d 1045.)
- (e) Right to counsel. (See In re Palacio (1965) 238 C.A.2d 545, 548, 48 C.R. 50 [under Uniform Code and Cal. Mil. & Vet.C.].)
- (f) Review by Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces. (See United States v. Augenblick (1969) 393 U.S. 348, 89 S.Ct. 528, 21 L.Ed.2d 537 [availability of this review precluded collateral attack by action to recover back pay in court of claims, where challenge was not on constitutional questions but only as to asserted violation of rules of evidence]; Noyd v. Bond (1969) 395 U.S. 683, 89 S.Ct. 1876, 23 L.Ed.2d 631 [exhaustion of military remedy before seeking relief in civil court]; Ryder v. United States (1995) 515 U.S. 177, 115 S.Ct. 2031, 2038, 132 L.Ed.2d 136, 146 [difference between Court of Military Appeals and intermediate courts of military review].)

(2) Summary Court-Martial. The UCMJ provides four methods of handling offenses: general, special, and summary courts-martial, and disciplinary punishment administered by the commanding officer. General and special courts-martial are like judicial proceedings, with the right to counsel guaranteed. Disciplinary punishment is administrative in nature, with no counsel provided. Summary court-martial is an informal proceeding conducted by a single commissioned officer, acting as judge, factfinder, prosecutor, and defense counsel, to exercise justice promptly for relatively minor offenses. Jurisdiction is confined to noncommissioned officers and enlisted personnel, and the accused must consent to the trial or the case will be dismissed or referred to a special or general court-martial. (See Middendorf v. Henry (1976) 425 U.S. 25, 96 S.Ct. 1281, 47 L.Ed.2d 556.)

In Middendorf, the Court held that there was no right to counsel in these proceedings: (a) In view of the maximum punishment--30 days' confinement at hard labor--and the procedural differences between the nonadversary summary court-martial and a criminal trial, the summary court-martial was not a "criminal prosecution" within the meaning of the Sixth Amendment. (96 S.Ct. 1287, 47 L.Ed.2d 566.) (b) Contrary to the holding of a divided Court of Military Appeals (96 S.Ct. 1291, 47 L.Ed.2d 569), due process did not require counsel in this proceeding where Congress did not provide for it. Introduction of counsel would turn a brief, informal hearing into an attenuated proceeding, which would be a burden on the armed forces. Where the accused feels that he or she needs a formal, counseled proceeding, the accused may simply refuse consent; and the fact that by exercising this option the accused subjects himself or herself to greater possible penalties is not constitutionally decisive; these choices are a necessary part of the criminal justice system. (96 S.Ct. 1294, 47 L.Ed.2d 571.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

44 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

C. War Power.

7. Courts-Martial and Uniform Code.

g. Judicial Review.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1335

[§ 1335] Judicial Review.

(1) Collateral Attack by Habeas Corpus. The federal courts have only limited appellate jurisdiction over courts-martial; the final appeal is to the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces. If, however, the military proceedings are challenged on "jurisdictional" grounds, e.g., denial of due process or other infringement of a constitutional right, a collateral attack on the decision by writ of habeas corpus is proper, and is recognized by the Uniform Code of Military Justice. (See Hiatt v. Brown (1950) 339 U.S. 103, 70 S.Ct. 495, 94 L.Ed. 691; Gusik v. Schilder (1950) 340 U.S. 128, 71 S.Ct. 149, 95 L.Ed. 146 [necessity of exhausting remedy of motion for new trial]; Burns v. Wilson (1953) 346 U.S. 137, 73 S.Ct. 1045, 97 L.Ed. 1508; Parisi v. Davidson (1972) 405 U.S. 34, 92 S.Ct. 815, 821, 31 L.Ed.2d 17, 26 [district court may entertain attack based on conscientious objector status despite pending court-martial]; 95 A.L.R. Fed 472 [modern cases on review of court-martial convictions].)

A petition to enjoin court-martial proceedings has also been recognized. (See Schlesinger v. Councilman (1975) 420 U.S. 738, 95 S.Ct. 1300, 1308, 43 L.Ed.2d 591, 601, 602.)

The tendency has been to restrict review to cases involving serious challenges of denial of fundamental rights, and not to reexamine the evidence unless the military courts have failed to consider the issues. The military courts have the same responsibility as federal courts to protect constitutional rights, and Congress has made their decisions final. Moreover, "the inquiry, the scope of matters open for review, has always been more narrow than in civil cases. ... Thus the law which governs a civil court in the exercise of its jurisdiction over military habeas corpus applications cannot simply be assimilated to the law which governs the exercise of that power in other instances. It is sui generis; it must be so, because of the peculiar relationship between the civil and military law." (Burns v. Wilson, supra, 73 S.Ct. 1047, 97 L.Ed. 1513.) (See Whelchel v. McDonald (1950) 340 U.S. 122, 71 S.Ct. 146, 95 L.Ed. 141.)

(2) Certiorari. The Uniform Code of Military Justice creates a category of cases directly reviewable by the Supreme Court on certiorari. (See 28 U.S.C., §1259.) As outlined in 10 U.S.C., §867(a), the following cases are reviewed by the Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces: (a) cases in which the sentence extends to death, (b) cases that the Judge Advocate General orders sent to the court for review, and (c) cases in which the court grants review on petition of the accused and a showing of good cause. In addition, cases in which the Court of Appeals for Military Justice granted relief may be reviewed by the Supreme Court by writ of certiorari. (28 U.S.C., §1259.) (See 1 Rotunda,

§6.13.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(2) Certiorari. See 1 Rotunda 4th, §6.13.

45 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS
C. War Power.
8. Selective Service.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1336

[§ 1336] Selective Service.

Congress has implied power to provide for compulsory military service in time of war. (Arver v. United States (1918) 245 U.S. 366, 38 S.Ct. 159, 62 L.Ed. 349; see 53 Am.Jur.2d (1996 ed.), Military and Civil Defense §73 et seq.) Occasional broad challenges to the constitutionality of the draft have been made, but most of the cases have dealt with narrower constitutional issues and statutory interpretation. The following have been the principal problem areas:

(1) Conscientious Objectors. (See United States v. Seeger (1965) 380 U.S. 163, 85 S.Ct. 850, 13 L.Ed.2d 733 [interpreting statutory requirement of objection based on "religious training and belief," and holding that each of three parties, though deviating from normal religious beliefs, met criterion]; Welsh v. United States (1970) 398 U.S. 333, 90 S.Ct. 1792, 26 L.Ed.2d 308 [defendant was entitled to status even if beliefs were not based on religious training]; on selective conscientious objection, see Sicurella v. United States (1955) 348 U.S. 385, 75 S.Ct. 403, 99 L.Ed. 436 [beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses are not selective in fact]; Gillette v. United States (1971) 401 U.S. 437, 91 S.Ct. 828, 28 L.Ed.2d 168 [status sought on basis of opposition to particular war was properly denied]; on right to ministerial deferment, see Dickinson v. United States (1953) 346 U.S. 389, 74 S.Ct. 152, 98 L.Ed. 132 [Jehovah's Witnesses]; on refusal to admit conscientious objector to bar, see In re Summers (1945) 325 U.S. 561, 65 S.Ct. 1307, 1312, 89 L.Ed. 1795, 1801; on denial of veterans' educational benefits to conscientious objector who performed required alternative civilian service, see Johnson v. Robison (1974) 415 U.S. 361, 94 S.Ct. 1160, 39 L.Ed.2d 389.)

(2) Failure To Register. (See Toussie v. United States (1970) 397 U.S. 112, 90 S.Ct. 858, 25 L.Ed.2d 156 [failure to register is not continuing act for purposes of statute of limitations].)

(3) Preinduction Review. (See Breen v. Selective Service Local Bd. No. 16, Bridgeport, Connecticut (1970) 396 U.S. 460, 90 S.Ct. 661, 24 L.Ed.2d 653 [bona fide student deferment, delinquency reclassification; preinduction review was proper]; Fein v. Selective Service System Local Bd. No. 7, Yonkers, New York (1972) 405 U.S. 365, 92 S.Ct. 1062, 31 L.Ed.2d 298 [denial of claim of conscientious objection was not subject to preinduction review].)

(4) Regulations Against War Protestors. (See Oestereich v. Selective Service System Local Bd. No. 11, Cheyenne, Wyoming (1968) 393 U.S. 233, 89 S.Ct. 414, 21 L.Ed.2d 402 [theological student cannot be deprived of status because he returned draft card to express dissent from Vietnam war]; Gutknecht v. United States (1970) 396 U.S. 295, 90 S.Ct. 506, 24 L.Ed.2d 532 [accelerated induction of one seeking conscientious objector status as "delinquent" for war protest was improper]; on burning draft cards, see supra, §473.)

(5) Administrative Procedure. (See McKart v. United States (1969) 395 U.S. 185, 89 S.Ct. 1657, 23 L.Ed.2d 194 [claim of deferment as sole surviving son may be asserted as defense in criminal action despite failure to exhaust administrative remedies; status is available even after death of parents]; Mulloy v. United States (1970) 398 U.S. 410, 90 S.Ct. 1766, 26 L.Ed.2d 362 [refusal to reopen classification to consider conscientious objector exemption claim was improper denial of administrative appeal]; Ehlert v. United States (1971) 402 U.S. 99, 91 S.Ct. 1319, 28 L.Ed.2d 625 [refusal to reopen to consider conscientious objector claim after induction notice was proper]; Clay v. United States (1971) 403 U.S. 698, 91 S.Ct. 2068, 29 L.Ed.2d 810 [conviction would be reversed where record was not clear that claim of conscientious objection was denied on valid basis]; Musser v. United States (1973) 414 U.S. 31, 94 S.Ct. 196, 38 L.Ed.2d 190 [following Ehlert]; 33 Hastings L. J. 871 [judicial review of draft classification].)

(6) Required Registration of Males and Not Females. The gender-based distinction is based on military judgment accepted by Congress in light of the fact that women, by statute, are not eligible for combat duty; hence, it is not a denial of equal protection to men. (Rostker v. Goldberg (1981) 453 U.S. 57, 101 S.Ct. 2646, 69 L.Ed.2d 478.) (See 95 Harv. L. Rev. 161.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 53 Am.Jur.2d (2006 ed.), Military and Civil Defense §64 et seq.

46 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

D. Power in Foreign Affairs.

1. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1337

[§ 1337] In General.

The scope of federal power is much greater in the foreign area than in the domestic area, and the doctrine that only granted powers exist does not apply in this field. In United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corp. (1936) 299 U.S. 304, 57 S.Ct. 216, 81 L.Ed. 255, a statute gave the President the power to prohibit or restrict the sale of munitions to certain countries at war. Held, assuming that this delegation was too broad to be sustained if applied to internal affairs, it was nevertheless valid.

(a) The powers of external sovereignty, including making of war, peace, treaties, and maintaining diplomatic relations with other nations, would have vested in the U.S. as necessary concomitants of nationality even if never mentioned in the Constitution; and other powers not mentioned there, such as the power to acquire territory by discovery, to expel undesirable aliens, and to make international agreements other than treaties, also exist. (57 S.Ct. 220, 81 L.Ed. 261.)

(b) The practical exercise of the power over external affairs requires a degree of discretion and freedom in the President much greater than that in domestic affairs, and a long current of legislative practice confirms the validity of the delegation here. (57 S.Ct. 221, 81 L.Ed. 262.) (On power to impose conditions on retention of citizenship acquired by birth abroad, see Rogers v. Bellei (1971) 401 U.S. 815, 91 S.Ct. 1060, 28 L.Ed.2d 499, supra, §196; on President's power to restrict travel to Cuba, see Regan v. Wald (1984) 468 U.S. 222, 104 S.Ct. 3026, 82 L.Ed.2d 171 [following Zemel v. Rusk (1965) 381 U.S. 1, 85 S.Ct. 1271, 14 L.Ed.2d 179, supra, §404].)

In Bethlehem Steel Corp. v. Board of Commrs. of Dept. of Water & Power of Los Angeles (1969) 276 C.A.2d 221, 90 C.R. 800, the California Buy American Act (requiring contracts for public works construction, or purchase of materials for public use, to be awarded only to persons who agree to use or supply materials produced in the U.S.) was held unconstitutional. The statute, placing an embargo on foreign products, usurped the federal power to control foreign trade. (276 C.A.2d 225.) The federal Act is distinguishable. It serves as an equalizer in considering foreign bids, not as a complete embargo. (276 C.A.2d 227, footnote 8.) (See Zschernig v. Miller (1968) 389 U.S. 429, 88 S.Ct. 664, 670, 19 L.Ed.2d 683, 692, infra, §1340; American Ins. Assn. v. Garamendi (2003) 539 U.S. 396, 123 S.Ct. 2374, 2390, 156 L.Ed.2d 376, 399 [state statute seeking to resolve Holocaust-era insurance claims by U.S. residents by requiring domestic insurers doing business in California to disclose information about policies it, or any company related to it, sold in Europe between 1920 and 1945, interferes with federal executive's conduct of foreign relations, and is preempted]; 117 Harv. L. Rev. 226 [Garamendi]; 107 A.L.R.5th 673 [state "buy American" acts].)

Commentary on the foreign affairs power is extensive. (See Rest.3d, Foreign Relations Law of the United States [covering jurisdiction, recognition, international agreements, and responsibility of states for injuries to aliens]; 75 Cal. L. Rev. 405 [powers of President and Congress]; 64 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1549 [Understanding Dynamic Obligations: Arms Control Agreements]; 17 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 659 [Challenging "Covert" Paramilitary Operations in Nicaragua Under the Neutrality Act]; 24 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 841 [Cutting the President Off From Tin Cup Diplomacy]; 38 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1533 [arms control agreements as congressional-executive agreements]; 1 Rotunda, §6.1 et seq.; 1 Tribe, §4-4 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Steinberg v. International Com. on Holocaust Era Ins. Claims (2005) 133 C.A.4th 689, 699, 34 C.R.3d 944 [following American Ins. Assn. v. Garamendi (2003) 539 U.S. 396, 123 S.Ct. 2374, 156 L.Ed.2d 376; state statute providing that California residents may bring actions in California courts on Holocaust era insurance policies is preempted by foreign policy concerns; to have preemptive effect, specific interest need not be expressly set forth in official agreement, as long as that interest is reflected in official agreements and statements by officials of executive branch]; 1 Rotunda 4th, §6.1 et seq.; 94 Cal. L. Rev. 175 [inflation of executive's foreign affairs powers, 1951-1954]; 119 Harv. L. Rev. 1877 [Foreign Affairs Preemption and State Regulation of Greenhouse Gas Emissions].

47 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

D. Power in Foreign Affairs.

2. Treaties.

a. In General.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1338

[§ 1338] In General.

(1) In General. The President has the power, "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur." (U.S. Const., Art. II, §2.) (On extradition treaties, see Valentine v. United States (1936) 299 U.S. 5, 57 S.Ct. 100, 81 L.Ed. 5; on jurisdiction of Mexican Claims Commission, created by treaty between United States and Mexico, see Luckhardt v. Mooradian (1949) 92 C.A.2d 501, 509, 207 P.2d 579; for commentary on treaties generally, see infra, §1342.)

(2) United Nations Charter and Conventions. One of the contentions made against the former California Alien Land Act (invalidated on other grounds, supra, §722) was that its provisions were in conflict with the United Nations Charter statements of fundamental freedoms without distinction as to race. But in Sei Fujii v. California (1952) 38 C.2d 718, 242 P.2d 617, the court held that the Charter declarations were not self-executing provisions imposing legal obligations on member nations or creating rights in private persons. "The humane and enlightened objectives of the United Nations Charter are, of course, entitled to respectful consideration by the courts and legislatures of every member nation, since that document expresses the universal desire of thinking men for peace and for equality of rights and opportunities. The charter represents a moral commitment of foremost importance, and we must not permit the spirit of our pledge to be compromised or disparaged in either our domestic or foreign affairs. We are satisfied, however, that the charter provisions relied on by plaintiff were not intended to supersede existing domestic legislation, and we cannot hold that they operate to invalidate the Alien Land Law." (38 C.2d 724.) (See Sale v. Haitian Centers Council (1993) 509 U.S. 155, 113 S.Ct. 2549, 125 L.Ed.2d 128 [neither Immigration and Nationality Act nor United Nations Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees limits President's power to order repatriation of undocumented aliens intercepted on high seas; Convention was not intended to have extraterritorial effect]; 108 Harv. L. Rev. 513 [waiver under Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act]; 61 Cal. L. Rev. 110 [domestic status of human rights clauses of U.N. Charter]; 19 Santa Clara L. Rev. 195 [individual enforcement of obligations arising under U.N. Charter]; Rest.3d, Foreign Relations of the United States §202.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. On applicability of Geneva Conventions to trial of enemy alien, see Hamdan v. Rumsfeld (2006) 548 U.S. 557, 126 S.Ct. 2749, 165 L.Ed.2d 723, Supp., supra, §1328.

48 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

D. Power in Foreign Affairs.

2. Treaties.

b. Warsaw Convention.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1339

[§ 1339] Warsaw Convention.

The Convention for Unification of Certain Rules Relating to International Transportation by Air (the Warsaw Convention) was adopted by the United States in 1934. (See 49 Stats. 3000 et seq.) It provides uniform rules for international air travel and limits potential liability for international air carriers.

Article 28(1) of the Convention states:

"An action for damages must be brought, at the option of the plaintiff, in the territory of one of the High Contracting Parties, either before the court of the domicile of the carrier or of his principle place of business, or where he has a place of business through which the contract has been made, or before the court at the place of destination."

In P.T. Airfast Services, Indonesia v. Superior Court (1983) 139 C.A.3d 162, 188 C.R. 628, a wrongful death action arising from an airplane crash in Southeast Asia, defendant carrier sought to quash service of summons. Plaintiff, conceding the absence of minimum contacts between defendant and California, asserted jurisdiction under Article 28(1) of the Convention, contending that California was decedent's final destination. In finding no basis for jurisdiction under the Convention, the court discussed two conflicting interpretations of Article 28: (a) The view that, by engaging in international flights, a carrier consents to personal jurisdiction in one of the forums set forth in Article 28(1). (b) The view that the Convention provides only treaty jurisdiction. Even though a country may be a proper country in which to bring an action under Article 28, "questions of subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction over the defendant still must be resolved by reference to the domestic laws of the jurisdiction of the particular court" in which the action is brought. (139 C.A.3d 167.) (See Eastern Airlines v. Floyd (1991) 499 U.S. 530, 111 S.Ct. 1489, 113 L.Ed.2d 569 [Article 17, setting forth conditions under which international air carrier can be held liable for injuries to passengers, does not allow recovery for infliction of emotional distress unaccompanied by physical injury]; Aquino v. Asiana Airlines (2003) 105 C.A.4th 1272, 1280, 130 C.R.2d 223 [Warsaw Convention did not preempt claims relating to airline's refusal to let elderly plaintiffs board ticketed flight; plaintiffs merely tried to check in and never began operations of embarking]; 6 A.L.R.3d 1272 [construction and validity of Article 28(1)]; 8 Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), Aviation §§190, 191.)

In Miceli v. MGM Grand Air (1996) 51 C.A.4th 702, 59 C.R.2d 311, a case of first impression, plaintiff was injured on an international charter flight arranged through his employer, when the plane hit turbulent weather. Defendant air carrier filed a motion for summary adjudication based on its defense that plaintiff's damages were limited to $ 75,000 by the Warsaw Convention. The trial court granted the motion and entered judgment for that amount. Held, reversed and remanded.

(a) The Warsaw Convention applies to all international flights, including charter flights. However, Article 3 of the Convention requires a carrier to deliver a "passenger ticket" containing a statement that transportation is subject to the liability limitations established by the Convention. (51 C.A.4th 706.) Article 3(2) of the Convention provides that a carrier that accepts a passenger without a ticket having been delivered is not entitled to avail itself of the limited liability provisions of the Convention. (51 C.A.4th 707.)

(b) Here, plaintiff was never issued a ticket, and therefore had no notice of the liability limitations. (51 C.A.4th 707.) The charter contract between the air carrier and the charterer was not a "passenger ticket" for all who boarded the aircraft. (51 C.A.4th 709.)

In El Al Israel Airlines, Ltd. v. Tsui Yuan Tseng (1999) 525 U.S. 155, 119 S.Ct. 662, 670, 142 L.Ed.2d 576, 588, another case of first impression, plaintiff claimed damages for emotional trauma from being subjected to a personal search by airline security before boarding her flight. The trial judge dismissed the claim, concluding that it was governed by the Warsaw Convention and was not compensable because plaintiff sustained no bodily injury. The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that "national law was intended to provide the passenger's remedy where the Convention did not expressly apply." Held, reversed.

(a) Under Article 24 of the Convention, cases covered by Article 17 may only be brought subject to the conditions and limitations set out in the Convention. (119 S.Ct. 671, 142 L.Ed.2d 589.) Article 17 provides for airline liability for a passenger's injury or death if the accident that caused the damage took place on board the aircraft or in the course of the operations of embarking or disembarking. (119 S.Ct. 668, 142 L.Ed.2d 586.) Under United States government and defendant airline interpretation, Article 24 precludes "a passenger from asserting any air transit personal injury claims under local law, including claims that failed to satisfy Article 17's liability conditions, notably, because the injury did not result from an 'accident' ... , or because the 'accident' did not result in physical injury or physical manifestation of injury." (119 S.Ct. 671, 142 L.Ed.2d 590.) A reasonable interpretation of an international treaty by the Executive Branch is ordinarily entitled to respect. "We conclude that the Government's construction of Article 24 is most faithful to the Convention's text, purpose, and overall structure." (119 S.Ct. 671, 142 L.Ed.2d 590.)

(b) The purpose of the Warsaw Convention is to provide uniformity in the rules governing the liability of international air carriers. "Given the Convention's comprehensive scheme of liability rules and its textual emphasis on uniformity, we would be hard put to conclude that the delegates at Warsaw meant to subject air carriers to the distinct, nonuniform liability rules of the individual signatory nations." (119 S.Ct. 672, 142 L.Ed.2d 590.)

(c) An amended version of Article 24, effective March 4, 1999, clarifies the Convention's rule of exclusivity: " 'In the carriage of passengers and baggage, any action for damages, however founded, can only be brought subject to the conditions and limitations set out in this Convention.' " (119 S.Ct. 674, 142 L.Ed.2d 593.)

One justice dissented, stating that "a treaty, like an Act of Congress, should not be construed to preempt state law unless its intent to do so is clear." (119 S.Ct. 677, 142 L.Ed.2d 598.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Doe v. United Air Lines (2008) 160 C.A.4th 1500, 1512, 1514, 73 C.R.3d 541 [Warsaw Convention did not cover sexual assault on plane in absence of evidence of physical injury; injuries relating to mental distress do not constitute "bodily injury" under Convention]; 8A Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), Aviation, §§190, 191.

49 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

D. Power in Foreign Affairs.

2. Treaties.

c. Supremacy Over State Law.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1340

[§ 1340] Supremacy Over State Law.

Treaties are the "supreme law of the land." (U.S. Const., Art. VI.) But, unless self-executing, new treaty provisions do not supersede existing local law. (Sei Fujii v. California (1952) 38 C.2d 718, 721, 242 P.2d 617; for illustrations of state statutes upheld against contention that they invaded treaty-making power, see Clark v. Allen (1947) 331 U.S. 503, 67 S.Ct. 1431, 1438, 91 L.Ed 1633, 1645 [former statute making right of nonresident alien to inherit in California dependent on reciprocal inheritance rights being given U.S. citizens]; Estate of Knutzen (1948) 31 C.2d 573, 577, 191 P.2d 747 [same]; Palermo v. Stockton Theatres (1948) 32 C.2d 53, 64, 195 P.2d 1; 116 Harv. L. Rev. 2654 [discussing whether U.S. states are beyond reach of law of nations]; 1 Rotunda, §§6.5, 6.6; 1 Tribe, §4-6; Rest.3d, Foreign Relations Law of the United States §111; on state taxation of Indians and Indian tribes, see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §2.)

Zschernig v. Miller (1968) 389 U.S. 429, 88 S.Ct. 664, 19 L.Ed.2d 683, involved an Oregon reciprocal inheritance statute. An alien heir could inherit only by proof that he or she would receive the benefits of the property without confiscation by his or her country's government. Pursuant to this statute, Oregon held that the alien claimant, a resident of East Germany, could not take personal property. Held, reversed. The statute affected international relations, and impaired the effective exercise of the nation's foreign policy by the federal Government. (88 S.Ct. 670, 19 L.Ed.2d 692.) (See 82 Harv. L. Rev. 238 [commenting on unclear theory of Zschernig, and suggesting that it casts doubt on validity of all reciprocity statutes].)

Mitsubishi Materials Corp. v. Superior Court (2003) 113 C.A.4th 55, 6 C.R.3d 159, held that the 1951 peace treaty between the United States and Japan that formally ended World War II expressly preempted C.C.P. 354.6, which would otherwise allow surviving American prisoners of war to sue Japanese companies for whom they were forced to perform slave labor during the war. "[O]nly the federal government has the power to make war and peace with foreign nations, and that power specifically includes the authority to make peace treaties" that govern the rights of American nationals to sue foreign nationals in a state court. (113 C.A.4th 76, 77.) (See Taiheiyo Cement Corp. v. Superior Court (2004) 117 C.A.4th 380, 390, 12 C.R.3d 32 [following Mitsubishi Materials Corp. and American Ins. Assn. v. Garamendi (2003) 539 U.S. 396, 123 S.Ct. 2374, 2390, 156 L.Ed.2d 376, 399].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Medellin v. Texas (2008) 554 U.S. ___, 128 S.Ct. 1346, 1358, 1367, 170 L.Ed.2d 190, 212, 221 [judgment of International Court of Justice based on violations of Vienna Convention was not directly enforceable as domestic law in state court; Protocol on which judgment was based was bare grant of jurisdiction, was not self-executing, and did not provide enforcement mechanism; hence, judgment did not constitute binding federal law that preempted state restrictions on filing successive habeas petitions]; 1 Rotunda 4th, §§6.5, 6.6.

50 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

D. Power in Foreign Affairs.

2. Treaties.

d. Limitations on Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1341

[§ 1341] Limitations on Power.

The Constitution places no express restrictions on the treaty power, and it seems not to be limited either by the scope of the power of Congress to legislate or by rights of the states. (De Geofroy v. Riggs (1890) 133 U.S. 258, 10 S.Ct. 295, 33 L.Ed. 642; In re Terui (1921) 187 C. 20, 24, 200 P. 954.) For example, the federal Government in 1913 passed legislation regulating the killing of migratory birds flying between the United States and Canada, which was held unconstitutional. Then a treaty was entered into with Great Britain, by the terms of which each nation agreed to enact these laws, and the subsequent legislation by Congress was upheld against a challenge based on the Tenth Amendment (reserved power of states). (Missouri v. Holland (1920) 252 U.S. 416, 40 S.Ct. 382, 64 L.Ed. 641.)

But in De Geofroy, the Court suggested that a treaty can neither authorize what the Constitution forbids, nor change the character of the national or state government, nor cede a portion of the territory of a state without its consent. And in Reid v. Covert (1957) 354 U.S. 1, 77 S.Ct. 1222, 1230, 1 L.Ed.2d 1148, 1163, the De Geofroy dictum was reaffirmed in the most positive terms. The Uniform Code of Military Justice attempted to give court-martial jurisdiction over civilians (supra, §1332) pursuant to executive agreements with Great Britain and Japan. The Government sought to sustain the Code provision against the contention that it denied the constitutional right to a jury trial, on the ground that it was legislation necessary and proper to carry out obligations of the United States under these international agreements. The court, referring to the "supreme law of the land" clause, said:

"There is nothing in this language which intimates that treaties and laws enacted pursuant to them do not have to comply with the provisions of the Constitution. ... It would be manifestly contrary to the objectives of those who created the Constitution, as well as those who were responsible for the Bill of Rights--let alone alien to our entire constitutional history and tradition--to construe Article VI as permitting the United States to exercise power under an international agreement without observing constitutional prohibitions. In effect, such construction would permit amendment of that document in a manner not sanctioned by Article V. The prohibitions of the Constitution were designed to apply to all branches of the National Government and they cannot be nullified by the Executive or by the Executive and the Senate combined." (See Rest.3d, Foreign Relations Law of the United States §115.)

It is also settled that a federal statute is equal in dignity to a treaty, and that a subsequent statute may nullify a treaty to the extent of a conflict. (Whitney v. Robertson (1888) 124 U.S. 190, 8 S.Ct. 456, 31 L.Ed. 386; see Reid, supra, 77

S.Ct. 1231, 1 L.Ed.2d 1164; South Dakota v. Bourland (1993) 508 U.S. 679, 113 S.Ct. 2309, 124 L.Ed.2d 606 [Congress had power to abrogate Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe's power to regulate hunting and fishing by non-Indians]; Kirmse v. Hotel Nikko of San Francisco (1996) 51 C.A.4th 311, 59 C.A.2d 96 [Japanese Friendship, Commerce, and Navigation Treaty does not apply to domestic subsidiary of Japanese corporation]; 100 Harv. L. Rev. 853; 101 Harv. L. Rev. 511, 524; 28 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 675 [Bourland]; 31 Stanf. L. Rev. 947 [application of civil rights to foreign employers operating under commercial treaties]; Rest.3d, Foreign Relations Law of the United States §115.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

See Haluck v. Ricoh Electronics (2007) 151 C.A.4th 994, 1009, 60 C.R.3d 542 [following Kirmse v. Hotel Nikko of San Francisco (1996) 51 C.A.4th 311, 59 C.R.2d 96, text, p. 1057; treaty with Japan governing right of Japanese and American companies to hire specified employees of choice while operating in other's country did not bar employment discrimination action against U.S. company, which was wholly owned subsidiary of New Jersey corporation, which was wholly owned subsidiary of Japanese corporation].

51 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

D. Power in Foreign Affairs.

2. Treaties.

e. Texts and Law Reviews.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1342

[§ 1342] Texts and Law Reviews.

(1) In General. Commentary on treaties and the treaty power is extensive. (See 104 Harv. L. Rev. 1269 [Judicial Enforcement of International Law Against the Federal and State Governments]; 106 Harv. L. Rev. 1792 [European nationalism and modernist renewal of international law]; 107 Harv. L. Rev. 1099 [maintaining accountability in international regulation]; 108 Harv. L. Rev. 1715 [developing countries and multilateral trade agreements; law and promise of development]; 114 Harv. L. Rev. 2478 [Restructuring the Modern Treaty Power]; 78 Cal. L. Rev. 449 [human rights violations in international law]; 92 Cal. L. Rev. 1729 [ensuring U.S. compliance with Vienna Convention on Consular Relations]; 46 Hastings L. J. 909 [procedure for international tribunal in former Yugoslavia]; 22 Hastings Const. L. Q. 607 [exposure of human rights abuses as help or hindrance to reconciliation]; 23 Hastings Const. L. Q. 727 [discussing proposed U.S. reservations to Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) and their effect on human rights]; 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1089 [safeguarding sustainable development through application of environmental impact statement requirements to international trade agreements]; 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 1557 [delegations of authority to international institutions]; 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 1697 [delegations of legislative, executive, and judicial authority]; 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 1999 [Treaties, International Law, and Constitutional Rights]; 55 Stanf. L. Rev. 2061 ["unsigning" treaties]; 20 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 913 [interpretation of treaties]; 35 Stanf. L. Rev. 259 ["Yellow Rain" and the Treaties Regulating Chemical and Biological Warfare]; 41 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 953 [Revivalist Canons and Treaty Interpretation]; 42 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 575 [discussing lunar mining under moon treaty]; 13 U.S.F. L. Rev. 1 [impact of Income Tax Treaty between U.S. and United Kingdom]; 17 U.S.F. L. Rev. 1 [Conference on International Human Rights Law in State and Federal Courts]; 17 U.S.F. L. Rev. 71 [The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act and International Human Rights Agreements: How They Co-Exist]; Rest.3d, Foreign Relations of the United States §301 et seq.; 1 Rotunda, §6.4 et seq.; 1 Tribe, §§4.5, 4.6; 74 Am.Jur.2d (2001 ed.), Treaties §1 et seq.)

(2) North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Many commentators have written on NAFTA. (See 108 Harv. L. Rev. 804 [discussing constitutionality of NAFTA]; 21 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1313 [resolution of private commercial disputes under NAFTA]; 31 San Diego L. Rev. 1025 [NAFTA and the Environmental Side Agreement: Fusing Economic Development and Ecological Responsibility]; 27 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 791 [symposium on NAFTA and its effect on human rights].)

(3) Indian Rights. Commentary on Indian law and treaties also has been extensive. (See 107 Harv. L. Rev. 381 [Marshalling Past and Present Colonialism, Constitutionalism, and Interpretation in Federal Indian Law]; 63 Cal. L. Rev. 601 [judicial review of Indian Treaty abrogation]; 78 Cal. L. Rev. 1137 [federal Indian law]; 84 Cal. L. Rev. 1573 [new subjectivism of Supreme Court in Indian law]; 68 So. Cal. L. Rev. 1075 [state minimum environmental standards on Native American reservation]; 23 Southwestern U. L. Rev. 331 [arguing that effective legal redress for Native American land claims requires reinstatement of treaty status and recognition of Indian tribes as independent nations]; 25 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 85 [federal laws and Indian tribes]; 43 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 547 [Native American treaty rights to scarce natural resources]; 41 Am.Jur.2d (1995 ed.), Indians §55 et seq.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 1 Rotunda 4th, §6.4 et seq.; 94 Cal. L. Rev. 531 [United States Supreme Court inaction or activism by International Court of Justice in international law]; 95 Cal. L. Rev. 75 [Disability Human Rights]; 118 Harv. L. Rev. 1868 [Executing the Treaty Power]; 45 Santa Clara L. Rev. 937 [Vienna Convention on consular relations].

52 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law

XV. FEDERAL POWERS

D. Power in Foreign Affairs.

3. International Compacts.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1343

[§ 1343] International Compacts.

Treaties require the consent of the Senate. But international compacts, such as protocols, postal conventions, and commercial agreements under the Tariff Act, are negotiated by the Executive without senatorial consent. A compact is an exercise of federal power over external affairs and has the same supremacy as a treaty over state laws and policy. (United States v. Belmont (1937) 301 U.S. 324, 57 S.Ct. 758, 760, 81 L.Ed. 1134, 1139 [agreement settling claims between U.S. and Soviet Union]; see Rest.3d, Foreign Relations Law of the United States §§111, 303.)

In United States v. Pink (1942) 315 U.S. 203, 62 S.Ct. 552, 86 L.Ed. 796, the Russian Soviet Government nationalized certain property, and by agreement between its foreign Commissar and the President of the United States (without formal treaty or Senate action), the United States undertook to collect Russian Government claims to property in America, including the New York assets of a Russian insurance company. The New York court decided that under its law and policy, local creditors were entitled to payment. Held, the compact prevailed over the state policy. "Power over external affairs is ... vested in the national government exclusively. It need not be so exercised as to conform to state laws or state policies whether they be expressed in constitutions, statutes, or judicial decrees. And the policies of the States become wholly irrelevant to judicial inquiry, when the United States, acting within its constitutional sphere, seeks enforcement of its foreign policy in the courts." (62 S.Ct. 567, 86 L.Ed. 819.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

53 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law XV. FEDERAL POWERS E. Other Federal Powers. 1. Fiscal Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1344

[§ 1344] Fiscal Power.

(1) In General. Congress has a variety of fiscal powers, including the power to (a) coin money and regulate its value, and regulate the value of foreign coin, (b) borrow on the credit of the United States, (c) impose and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, and (d) provide for the general welfare. (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8.) (See 1 Rotunda, Chap. 5; 107 Harv. L. Rev. 1419 [arguing that Spending Clause should be reevaluated in interests of federalism and to insure political accountability]; 53A Am.Jur.2d (1996 ed.), Money §26; 63C Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), Public Funds §58 et seq.; 77 Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), United States §12; on conditional federal spending, see South Dakota v. Dole (1987) 483 U.S. 203, 107 S.Ct. 2793, 2796, 2797, 97 L.Ed.2d 171, 178, 179 [federal statute reducing highway funds to states with drinking age under 21 was valid exercise of Congressional spending power]; 15 Hastings Const. L. Q. 649 [Dole]; 39 Stanf. L. Rev. 1103; on federal taxing power, see 9 Summary (10th), Taxation, §105 et seq.; 33-34B Am.Jur.2d, Federal Taxation.)

(2) Appropriations Clause. "No Money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by Law." (U.S. Const., Art. I, §9; see 19 Hastings Const. L. Q. 457 [Limitations on the Use of Appropriations Riders by Congress to Effectuate Substantive Policy Changes]; 63C Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), Public Funds §48 et seq.)

(3) Gold Standard. In 1933 and 1934, Congress enacted legislation (a) prohibiting gold hoarding, and requiring delivery of gold to the Treasury and payment for it in currency; (b) prohibiting removal of gold from the United States except as permitted by the Treasury; (c) prohibiting gold clauses in contracts, and making obligations, including those existing, payable in legal tender; and (d) devaluing the dollar. In Norman v. Baltimore & Ohio R. Co. (1935) 294 U.S. 240, 55 S.Ct. 407, 79 L.Ed. 885, plaintiff, holder of a bond issued in 1930 and payable in "gold coin ... of the present standard" sued on a $ 22.50 coupon, claiming $ 38.10 in the devalued currency, and attacking the validity of the legislation nullifying the gold clauses. Held, the legislation was valid. (a) Congress has express constitutional power to coin and regulate the value of money (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8), and has broad authority over finance, derived from the aggregate of other powers including taxing, borrowing, commerce, etc. (b) Private contracts are made subject to the paramount federal powers, and, where they interfere with those powers, Congress may declare them void. (c) Congress having determined that the stability of our currency was threatened by weakening of the gold reserves, these contracts clearly interfered with the federal monetary power.

But in Perry v. United States (1934) 294 U.S. 330, 55 S.Ct. 432, 79 L.Ed. 912, plaintiff sued on a United States bond with a gold clause, contending that to give him the face value in devalued currency instead of the equivalent of the gold coin was to take his property without due process. The court denied recovery on the ground of failure to establish actual damage; but held (a) that although Congress had the power to nullify private contracts, it could not repudiate its own promises; and (b) that although the United States cannot be sued without its consent, this infirmity of procedure does not affect the binding character of the obligation. (See Guaranty Trust Co. v. Henwood (1939) 307 U.S. 247, 59 S.Ct. 847, 853, 83 L.Ed. 1266, 1276; Henderson v. Mann Theatres Corp. (1976) 65 C.A.3d 397, 406, 135 C.R. 266 [gold clause in contract must be construed as contract for payment of money].)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

(1) In General. See 1 Rotunda 4th, Chap. 5; 53A Am.Jur.2d (2006 ed.), Money §24; 77 Am.Jur.2d (2006 ed.), United States §10.

54 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS
E. Other Federal Powers.
2. Bankruptcy Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1345

[§ 1345] Bankruptcy Power.

Congress has the power to establish "uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States." (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8.) The Contract Clause is not a limitation on the bankruptcy power, but the Due Process Clause does apply. (Kuehner v. Irving Trust Co. (1937) 299 U.S. 445, 57 S.Ct. 298, 301, 81 L.Ed. 340, 346.) (See 96 Harv. L. Rev. 973 [impairment of secured creditors' rights in reorganization: study of relationship between Fifth Amendment and Bankruptcy Clause]; on uniformity requirement, see Railway Labor Executives Assn. v. Gibbons (1982) 455 U.S. 457, 102 S.Ct. 1169, 1176, 71 L.Ed.2d 335, 346; 96 Harv. L. Rev. 71.)

In Louisville Joint Stock Land Bank v. Radford (1935) 295 U.S. 555, 55 S.Ct. 854, 79 L.Ed. 1593, the court considered the Frazier-Lemke Act of 1934, which amended the Bankruptcy Act to permit farmers whose mortgages were in default to become bankrupt and thereafter, without assent of the mortgagee, retain possession of the property at a reasonable rental, and purchase it in 5 years at an appraised value that might be less than the amount of the loan. The Act applied solely to existing mortgages, not to future ones. Held, it was unconstitutional. (a) Valid legislation for relief of mortgage debtors has been concerned with remedies, e.g., moratory and stay laws; abridgment of the substantive right to full payment of the debt is a taking without due process. (b) The federal bankruptcy power, given by the Constitution, authorizes the discharge of personal obligations of the debtor, but not the destruction of the property interest of the mortgagee. (55 S.Ct. 863, 79 L.Ed. 1604.) (Cf. Wright v. Vinton Branch of Mountain Trust Bank of Roanoke, Virginia (1937) 300 U.S. 440, 57 S.Ct. 556, 81 L.Ed. 736 [upholding revised statute].)

A 1934 amendment to the Bankruptcy Act provided for relief of debtors that were political subdivisions of a state. The plan involved a scaling down of the indebtedness where approved by the court and two-thirds of the creditors. In Ashton v. Cameron County Water Imp. Dist. (1936) 298 U.S. 513, 56 S.Ct. 892, 80 L.Ed. 1309, the Act was held void on the theory that the same rule that prevents federal taxation of state governmental agencies prohibits the application of the bankruptcy power to them. But in United States v. Bekins (1938) 304 U.S. 27, 58 S.Ct. 811, 82 L.Ed. 1137, a revised statute providing for composition of indebtedness was upheld where its operation was dependent on the state's consent. "[I]t is of the essence of sovereignty to be able to make contracts and give consents bearing upon the exertion of governmental power." (58 S.Ct. 815, 82 L.Ed. 1144.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]

55 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS
E. Other Federal Powers.
3. Property Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1346

[§ 1346] Property Power.

The Property Clause of the Constitution provides that Congress has the power "to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States." (U.S. Const., Art. IV, §3; on federal rights in tidelands, see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §209; on federal water rights, see 12 Summary (10th), Real Property, §922 et seq.) Under this unlimited grant, "Congress exercises the powers both of a proprietor and of a legislature over the public domain." (Kleppe v. New Mexico (1976) 426 U.S. 529, 96 S.Ct. 2285, 2292, 49 L.Ed.2d 34, 44.) (See 15 Ecology L. Q. 375, 439 [Public Lands Federalism: Judicial Theory and Administrative Reality]; 28 Hastings Const. L. Q. 167 [Congress' Property Clause Power To Prohibit Taking Endangered Species]; 30 Loyola L.A. L. Rev. 275 [Law West of the Pecos: The Growth of the Wise-Use Movement and the Challenge to Federal Public Land-Use Policy]; 63C Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), Public Lands §7 et seq.; 77 Am.Jur.2d (1997 ed.), United States §32 et seq.)

In Kleppe, the Court upheld the validity of the Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act of 1971, protecting unbranded and unclaimed horses and burros on United States public lands against a state's claim of rights under its estray law. The state contended that federal power was limited to regulation and disposition of the lands, and did not extend to wildlife on the lands, and that the states traditionally have trustee powers over wild animals (see supra, §612). The Court held, however, that these state powers were subject to the paramount power of the federal Government, and that the Property Clause, broadly construed, gives Congress the power to protect wildlife notwithstanding the state law. (96 S.Ct. 2295, 49 L.Ed.2d 45.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]
See 77 Am.Jur.2d (2006 ed.), United States §30 et seq.

56 of 56 DOCUMENTS

Witkin Summary of California Law, Tenth Edition
Copyright (c) 2010 By B.E. Witlin Article Sixth Testamentary Trust

CHAPTER X - Constitutional Law

Witkin Summary of California Law
XV. FEDERAL POWERS
E. Other Federal Powers.
4. Postal Power.

8 Witkin Sum. Cal. Law Const Law § 1347

[§ 1347] Postal Power.

Congress has the power to establish "Post Offices and post Roads." (U.S. Const., Art. I, §8.) To assure prompt, reliable, and efficient services to postal patrons in all areas, Congress enacted the Private Express Statutes, establishing the United States Postal Service as a monopoly (39 U.S.C., §403) and prohibiting others from carrying letters over postal routes (18 U.S.C., §1694). (See Regents of Univ. of Calif. v. Public Employees Relations Bd. (1988) 485 U.S. 589, 108 S.Ct. 1404, 1408, 99 L.Ed.2d 664, 669; 41 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1035 [discussing dispute between United States Postal Service and Postal Rate Commission].)

The constitutional power was held to support a postal service regulation prohibiting the deposit of unstamped "mailable matter" in a letter box approved by the service. The regulation was designed to prevent the practice of private concerns delivering circulars or statements through private messengers, causing loss of postal revenue and practical difficulties in delivery of mail; and there was no violation of the First Amendment, because the regulation was not directed at the content of the message, and a letter box is not analogous to a street or park. (United States Postal Service v. Council of Greenburgh Civic Assn. (1981) 453 U.S. 114, 101 S.Ct. 2676, 2687, 69 L.Ed.2d 517, 532.)

The "letters-of-the-carrier" exception (18 U.S.C., §1694) was construed in Regents of Univ. of Calif., supra. A public employees' union sought to distribute organizational literature to the university's custodial employees through the university's internal mail system. The union relied on the provision excepting from its prohibition letters that relate "to the current business of the carrier." The California Court of Appeal held that the communications from the union related to the current business of the University and therefore came within the exception. (182 C.A.3d 78, 80.) The United States Supreme Court reversed.

(a) "The alleged 'business' in this case is not close enough to appellant's affairs to be the natural subject of letters concerning appellant's 'current business.' " (108 S.Ct. 1410, 99 L.Ed.2d 672.)

(b) There is also no basis for applying the "private-hands exception" of 18 U.S.C., §1696(c) (exempting "conveyance or transmission of letters or packets by private hands without compensation"). "By delivering the Union's letters, appellant would perform a service for its employees that they would otherwise pay for themselves, through their union dues. This service would become part of the package of monetary and nonmonetary benefits that appellant provides its employees in exchange for their services. ... [C]arriage of the Union's letters pursuant to such an exchange of benefits necessarily means that the carriage is not 'without compensation.' " (108 S.Ct. 1412, 99 L.Ed.2d 676.)

SUPPLEMENT: [This section is current through the latest supplement]